GOVERNOR AND LEGISLATURE OF 1913 INAUGURATED

EUGENE N. FOSS

DAVID I. WALSH

(Special To The Daily Ledger)

Boston, Jan. 1, 1913.—Gov. Eugene N. Foss, Lieut. Gov. David I. Walsh and the members of the legislature for 1913 were inducted into office to-day in the presence of a distinguished gathering. Gov. Foss read his inaugural address to the joint convention. The senate organized by the re-election of Hon. Levi H. Greenwood as president and the house organized by the re-election of Grafton D. Cushing as speaker.

REP. WILLIAM J. LESLIE, Secretary of Republican Legislative Caucus.

At noon the legislature adjourned for luncheon and this afternoon took up the routine business when the list of committee appointments will be announced.

At the caucus of representatives—elect prior to the convention of the house Reprensentative William J. Leslie of Quincy was given the signal honor of being unanimously chosen secretary of the caucus.

The names of Grafton D. Cushing for speaker, Thomas F. Pedric for sargent at arms and all the officers of 1912 were placed in nomination by the caucus and subsequently elected.

DISTRICT COURT.

George N. Miller was arraigned for violation of auto laws at Milton. Plea of nolo accepted and $20 costs imposed.

Patrick Murphy of Wollaston on complaint of his wife for non-support was ordered to pay $5 weekly to Probation Officer Fahey to be turned over to his children.

Joseph Burke, Thomas Curry and John McIntosh were fined $25 for assault on Peter Restelli at South Quincy. Continuance granted to Jan. 17. John Reynolds was discharged on a similar complaint.

SCOTTISH BALL WELL ATTENDED

Danced Old Year Out and New Year In at Music Hall

The biggest New Year's Eve event in the city was the 32nd annual concert and ball of the Clan McGregor, No. 5, Order of Scottish Clans. A concert was in order until 10.30 and dancing was enjoyed until three o'clock. The occasion was marked by one of the largest attendances yet appearing at the Scotch times.

A most impressive sight was the greetings extended as the hour struck midnight and many ushered in the New Year by clasping the hand of friends and neighbors.

The grand march was led by Chief and Mrs. Alfred O. Diack who was followed by Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Nicol and 125 couples. Plaids were worn by members of the local and visiting clans; MacKenzie of Boston, Stewart of Charlestown, Ramsey of Roxbury, MacLeod of Hyde Park, and MacDonald of Brockton. Walter Lamb of the Caledonian Club was a prominent guest.

A well rendered concert program entertained the older members and friends the first part of the evening. The selections were distinctly popular Scotch songs and were sung by Scottish people. All the artists were given fine applause.

Those who appeared were:—James Singer, Miss Margaret K. Alexander, John E. Daniel, Harry MacLean, Miss Mary Ogilvie, Reid & Holmes the last named in instrumental selections.

On the dance order cover was a likeness of Chief A. Diack encircled by the McGregor plaid. Music was furnished by Provosts orchestra.

The floor was in charge of Charles G. Nicol and Alex W. Russell was assistant director. The aids were M. A. McDonald, Angus Martin, T. Howard Johnston and Walter S. Nicol. Chief A. O. Diack and Tanist G. S. Murray composed the reception commitee.

The committee of arrangements consisted of Chief A. O. Diack, D. T. Drummond, M. A. McDonald, C. Nichol, Alex Black, James M. Birnie, George S. Murray, Alex W. Russell, Angus D. Martin, Walter Murray, J. Sinclair, Thomas Johnson and J. F. Reid.

The amusement committee consisted of Chief Alfred O. Diack, George S. Murray, Walter Murray, Alex T. Black, Charles Nicol, Thomas Johnson, Alex W. Russell, James M. Birnie, John Sinclair, Angus D Martin, Malcolm A. MacDonald, David T. Drummand, James F. Reid.

BOYNTON STILL IN SUSPENSION

Park and Downs Church Extended Period Indefinitely

The suspension period of Chester A. Boynton of Revere as a member of the Park and Downs' Congregational church has been still further extended. July 6 the standing committee voted to suspend Mr. Boynton until Jan. 1 because it was charged he had broken faith with the society by filing suit against the pastor Rev. William B. Ayers. At a recent meeting of the standing committee it was voted to further continue the suspension to have expired on the new year. No definite limit was set.

QUINCY MAN APPRAISER.

Thomas I. Winsor and James Wooley of Boston and Joseph M. Lewis of Quincy have been named by the United States district court to appraise the steam tugs Elsie and Ethel of the Naumkeag Towing Company of Salem, as a result of the suit for $40,000 brought by the Coastwise Steamship Company for damages done to that company's ship Coastwise, Dec. 9, while in tow of the tugs in Salem harbor.

PEACEFUL END COUNCIL 1912

Dock Matter Over to 1913---New Committee Recommended

ODDS AND ENDS CLEANED UP

The City Council of 1912 passed away at 8.16 Tuesday evening. The last meeting of the year was marked with peacefulness. There was no display of fireworks and everybody seemed imbued with the spirit of the new year. Before adjourning bouquets, in the way of rising votes of thanks were extended to President Hobbs, Clerk Magee, City Messenger Tirrell, City Auditor Fairbanks and to the press.

The absent members were Councilmen Abele, Bailey, Ford and Mahoney.

The communication of George H. Brown, Esq., in relation to the school committee bill was placed on file and is as follows:

Quincy, Dec. 18,1912.

City Council,
Gentlemen:

My attention has been called to an article in the Quincy Ledger of yesterday reporting the action taken at your last meeting in reference to my bill for services in connection with the Wollaston schoolhouse matter.

I did not present or intend to have this bill presented to the city, nor did I know it had been so presented until the City Solicitor informed me of that fact. I immediately requested Mr. John L. Miller, Chairman of the School Committee, to whom I had presented it, to withdraw it from the city, and supposed my request had been complied with until I saw the article above mentioned.

I desire to express my regret that this bill should have been presented to the city without my knowledge or consent.

Yours truly,
George H. Brown.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Welcome 1913!

The King is dead, long live the King!

How long will the average person be able to hold fast to those good New Year resolutions?

The Quincy welcoming party to the New Year was noticable for its quietude.

That party of 105 probationers in the court Tuesday have a great chance to make good for the balance of the year.

The leap year girl had her last chance last night. It is to be hoped she made the most of it.

This dragging of base ball all along through the winter season is like gentle fall, slumbering in the lap of winter.

The dynamiters had their train de-luxe like all magnates.

The water wagon brigade is said to be the largest in history.

The redistricting of the state lost Quincy a chance to figure the coming examination to fill a vacancy at West Point.

Gen. Jones will deliver her message to Gov. Sulzer today.

The new legislators on Beacon hill have a chance to make a record for themselves this year. What with the improvement of the port of Boston, the many interests which will centre there, the Greater Boston district should share in the promised prosperity.

Striking matches on your trousers will become a lost art as the manufacture of such is prohibited from this date.

Another educator says that American children are woefully ignorant of the history of the world and its geography. May be so, but there are few who do not know the Panama canal and the significance of the Monroe Doctrine.

It was a favorite pastime of many people last night to ring up and bid their friends a happy and prosperous New Year.

Police Commissioner Waldo is quoted as saying "I am not sure of anyone at police headquarters." It took him quite a long time to be convinced, but better late than never.

Do the letter carriers like their new jobs? Ask them.

That moving picture scene Custer's last battle arouses tremendous enthusiasm and patriotism at the Kincaide theatre.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson is seeking an odorless skunk. He has not been alone in his search.

The "Beer salary" and "champagne appetite brigade," passed in review in Boston last night and many this morning are trying to figure out if it was worth the price.

Scientific accounting is no doubt all right, but common sense business methods even in state and municipal affairs are better.

And again a welcome to 1913.

ON THE FIRING LINE.

The eyes of the world have been focussed on London the past weeks, watching the movements of the diplomats who are to decide the map of Europe, incidentally bringing peace to the belligerents in the eastern part of the continent. While the peace workers are haggling over terms, little thought is given to the poor sufferers, on one side or the other who are still on the firing and in danger from starvation and disease. A prompt settlement of terms between the states at war would bring relief to thousands aye millions.

Again the crafty Turk, as in so many instances sees an escape from an awkward position. The peace terms offered by the allies were not acceptable to the Turks. The counter proposals of the Turks, were more those of the victor than vanquished and of course out of the question. The Turk then calmly puts it up to the powers. He knows the game.

The powers of Europe own Turkey body and soul, that is by loans, but they are not prepared for the terrible battle which the disintegration would develop. The money powers cannot afford to see Turkey stripped of everything. That might mean financial loss to them. So the poor little victors will have to be satisfied with only a portion of the fruits of their victory. The money powers can stop the war at once. They might have stopped it even before it was inaugurated. Was it selfish desire for greater gain which allowed them to have the allies go so far and then stop. At this distance the war appears useless. The ends reached might have been secured without bloodshed but that would not mean gain to the money wolves, who if this summing up is correct have a great deal to answer for.

POMEROY PERSISTENT.

Jesse Pomeroy, imprisoned 36 years for murder and cruelty is reported persistent in his effort to effect his release, as the 12th failure the present week proved. The prison officials claim that he must have aid from within the prison to accomplish as much as he has in those several attempts. Likewise it might be asked how under the sun in a prison whose corridors are presumed to be patrolled all the time, night and day, did the remarkable prisoner secure the time to work unmolested upon the inch iron bars of his cell?

His last break for liberty is remarkable in many instances. The tools which were found in his cell, small pieces of tin, hardly as long as his finger could scarcely be devised to cut through inch steel bars. It is to be presumed that Pomeroy received the tools from some other prisoner, and after the task was accomplished, the tools were restored to the original trustee to relieve him of any burden. The work in which Pomeroy engaged must have consumed weeks if not months. The bars must have been severed and the plans of his escape fully matured while he was so glibly talking with Gov. and Mrs. Foss Christmas day. This was a deceit which naturally stamps the character of the man. One newspaper commenting upon the break of Pomeroy, innocently but solemnly asserts he must be possessed of a mania for escape. Most any one in the same fix might be forgiven for harboring such a mania. Another paper says he is persistent because this is the 12th time that he has undertaken what is manifestly a hopeless task. In view of what Pomeroy has already accomplished it is manifestly a hopeless task with a person of his nerve and ingenuity.

THE NEW YEAR.

All hail the New Year. May it be as abundant in the distribution of its favors as its immediate predecessor. That is in the favors which proved tangible. Not of course the many unpleasant things which were the development of 1912 and of this kind there certainly was an abundance. To mention them would only bring up unpleasant recollections which it is now the desire of everyone to leave behind in the bottomless pit of forgetfulness and to go on with the new, with brighter and better aims for the future, an effort at improvement, a desire to march onward and upward, with as much elimination of the past as is compatible with nature and inclination.

The entrance of the New Year always means many new pledges lightly made and even more lightly broken. It means burrowing into an unknown future, in which everything new is before and the experience behind. Can the understanding of the latter prepare us for a solution of the problems of the former. They should in a measure. It would not be absolutely acceptable to assert that they fill the cup to overflowing, but they provide a basis for calculation. If their is a failure to accept this, then the New Year will already have sounded its notes of approaching quicksands. They should be avoided. Live up to the pledges as far as possible. However, it should be borne in mind that a bad pledge is better broken than kept.

HEPTASOPHS NEW RECORD

Canty and Team Distinguished Themselves Last Night

SCORES OF OTHER GAMES

New records were made by the Heptasophs league bowlers at the regular match Tuesday evening at the Coliseum alleys. Three regular men were among the missing and but four men rolled on team David C. Team E. used a dummy score.

Canty of Team A reached 303 for the best three string total to date and his team set 1313 as the highest team total. Stevens of E rolled 110 for high single.

Team A defeated B by 100 points: E beat F by 57 pins and C beat D by 76 pins. The general individual averages have increased gradually and show a development.

A postponed match between the Pipefitters and Patternmakers of the Fore River League resulted in four easy points for the Pipefitters. Bliss was high all round man with 109 single and 321 for best total.

STURGIS HUNT IS STILL GAME

R. M. Harmon of the Shipyard Takes a Jump

GOOD GAINS BY SEVERAL

A Happy New Year to all the candidates in the free Washington trip contest. The Contest Editor wishes each and every one might win either the first or the second prize. Both are worth striving for. The winner of first place has the privilege of taking a companion to Washington, D. C. during Inauguration week, all expenses paid by the Daily Ledger. They will go on one of Marsters personally conducted tours and will have no anxiety as to trains, hotels and details. Tickets will also be included for the Inauguration ceremonies, the Inauguration parade and the Inauguration ball, and for several side trips. The second prize in the contest will be a diamond ring, guaranteed by one of Quincy's local jewelers and a beauty.

HUNT'S GAIN.

Today Sturgis Hunt has closed up by 2003 the gap which separated him from the leader, and is very confident of success in the final spurt.

Miss Morrissett and Mrs. Marnock made large gains today, the former 480 and the latter 345.

R. M. Harmon of Edison street moved up today from No 50 to No. 19, and is now the leading shipyard candidate.

Paul Blackmur, Jr., has also moved up among the leaders, yesterday he was No. 72, but today he is one ahead of Mr. Harmon, No. 18.

Mr. Bowditch gains 95 today and has a total of 1915. Gains were also made by Sam Prout, Jr., Alice O'Neil, Helen King, Etta Kenney and L. D. Duncan, Jr.

As announced Monday, all candidates with less than 50 votes are omitted today. This includes a new candidate, Samuel Kadets of Pride of Quincy lodge, who starts with 10 votes. His name, and those of other candidates, will appear in the list when their totals reach 50 votes.

It is not necessary to fill out the coupons in full, now that the candidates are nominated and well known, but every coupon should have the family name at least. All coupons marked "Williams" will be counted for Fred D. Williams, and all coupons marked "MacKay" will be counted for A. R. MacKay, and so on down the list. The Contest Editor would suggest, however, that one coupon each day be filled out in full and put on top. Candidates will find rubber stamps very convenient.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

Tomorrow all candidates with less than 50 votes will be dropped from the printed list, but their record will be kept just the same.

TWO MORE PRIZES.

Two prizes will be awarded Monday, Jan. 6, a first and a second prize for the largest gain in total during the week ending at 9 A. M. on that date. The prizes will not be vote certificates but very acceptable prizes to the winners. Get busy.

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

|---|---|
| Fred D. Williams, drug clerk | 28405 |
| Sturgis Hunt, Y. M. C. A. | 16425 |
| A. R. MacKay, Heptasophs | 8290 |

PIN-MONEY PATHWAYS.

How Varous Girls Succeeded in Making Money.

I know girls working witih glue and scissors who are clearing sixty dollars a month, even in dull seasons, working in odd moments in their homes, and in the busy holiday season frequently these busy girls double their receipts.

The girl who can take orders for birthday cakes, Boston beans and brown bread, beat biscuit, cottage cheese, grape juice, salted almonds, caramels, marrons glaces, date cream, fudge, doughnuts, popcorn balls, jellies, jumbles and kisses, preserved figs and candied ginger, can easily work up a nice little trade. The point is to make these things a little bit richer, a little bit more delicate in flavoring than anyone else can make them.

If you are successful with flowers then fern bowls, hanging baskets and potted plants, special care of flower gardens and selling seeds and slips of your best plants, are good ways to make your knack with growing things practical. If you are handy with paints and brushes, dinner and menu and tally cards are always popular, and it will pay you to take a few lessons in painting on silk and satin. Planning children's parties, Coaching backward children, kindergarten classes in the woods are all pleasant and profitable occupations. Plaiting raffia baskets of all shapes and sizes is a very successful trade if the baskets are well woven and the colors and designs attractive.

A little gift-shop is a nice thing to work toward. They are so popular now, and, while it may take several years to realize the dream of a gift-shop, the effort to establish one in your neighborhood will repay you, and by way of advice I warn you to calculate carefully upon the tastes and needs of your prospective clients.Make the things of which they are in need, and your pin-money battle is half won.—Christian Herald.

MRS. GREEN'S "DON'TS.

Mrs. Hetty Green, "the richest woman in the world," who was seventy-eight years old Nov. 21, has dictated a series of "don't" for girls. They were: "Don't envy. Don't overdress. Don't fail to go to church. Don't eat anything but good, wholesome food. Don't cheat in your business dealings. Don't forget to be charitable. Don't forget to take a lot of exercise. Don't forget to obey the laws of God."

PROMPT WORK OF MOTORMAN

Saved Electric Car Passengers From Falling Tree

Passengers on a Quincy bound Wollaston electric had a narrow escape Monday afternoon when the huge tree, corner South Central and Newport avenue fell across the car track.

The car was rapidly approaching the path of the fallen tree and only the quick work of the motorman in applying the brakes prevented an accident. Traffic was held up for some time. The tree had rotted at the base of the trunk.

CHRISTMAS TREE OF DAY NURSERY

Little Folks Had Good Time With Songs and Eats

The annual Christmas party for the Quincy Day Nursery was held on Saturday and was a decided success. Thirty-eight children were present, many of the mothers, and several ladies interested in the work were present. The children looked well and happy, and marched in singing a Christmas song. Then they gave a program of songs and recitations carefully planned by Mrs. Barker, the matron, and thoroughly enjoyed by the children themselves as well as the audience. At the conclusion of the entertainment the children were seated at their little tables where they sweetly sang a blessing, and more of their songs, led by Miss McDonald, the matron's assistant. Then they were bountifully served with ice cream and cake, furnished by friends of the Nursery.

After they had eaten all they could, they returned to the parlor for the Christmas tree, a very handsome one, presented by the Universalist church. Before the children received their gifts, Mrs. Doble the president of the association, was presented with a beautiful bunch of pinks, the gift of the children.

Then each child received two pairs of stocking, a box of candy and an orange, each girl a doll, and each boy a toy, and all were sent home happy and satisfied.

NEW YEAR'S PARTY.

The New Year's party of the Cochato club at Braintree Tuesday evening was attended by about 50 couples. Dancing was enjoyed from early evening until midnight. Refreshments were served and everyone had a good time. The members missed the presence of president George O. Wales who is confined to his home with illness.

WATCH NIGHT SERVICES.

Watch night services were held in Wollaston at the Methodist and Park and Downs churches.

At the Methodist church Rev. F. H. Morgan, Rev. Wenthworth F. Stewart, D. D. of Boston and Mrs. F. H. Morgan were the speakers. The meeting began shortly after eight and refreshments were served during the evening.

At the Park and Downs church the service commenced at eleven. A service of praise and consecration was conducted by the pastor, Rev. William B. Ayers.

NORWEGIANS HOLD FESTIVAL

Axel Peterson as Santa Distribu'ed the Gifts

The Quincy Norwegian Society held a Christmas tree festival in Electa and Protection halls Tuesday evening. A large number of presents were distributed by Axel Anderson who acted as Santa Claus. A tree was set in the centre of Protection hall and was heavily laden with gifts.

An entertainment, dancing and refreshments helped pass the evening. Quartette selections were rendered by Martin Fredericson, Axel Anderson, Henry Johnson and Oscar Anderson.

The merry party broke up at 11.45 o'clock. Music was furnished by the Colonial orchestra. The committee was Oscar Anderson, Axel Anderson, Martin Fredericson and Henry Johnson.

MANY HAPPY YOUNGSTERS.

The kindergarten and primary departments connected with the Sunday school of Bethany church held a Christmas tree festival in the vestry Tuesday afternoon, and a delightful time was enjoyed by the large number of children present. Some of the little ones recited pieces and carols were sung which were excellently rendered. Each child received a gift and a bag of candy.

POSTPONED BUT GOOD.

A Dutch supper, postponed from Monday was held Tuesday evening in the Park and Downs church vestry by the A. S. club, a girls' organization of that church. A tempting Dutch menu was served and at each plate was a souvenir Dutch baby. The members of the club acted as waitresses. They were: Sabra Ryder, Ruth Coldwell, Anna Howe, Doris Bisset, Rachel Turner, Helen Turner, Elsie Olfene and Alice Harris. Miss Fannie Fraser is president.

NOT SO VERY SILENT.

New Years was welcomed in at the Wollaston Yacht club with a dance held by the "Silent Five," Misses May Knapp, Mertie Goodspeed, Marion Phillips Fannie Wood and Helen Todd.

The matrons were: Mrs. L. K. Phillips, Mrs. S. S. Knapp and Mrs. B. T. Wood.

DANCED OUT AND IN.

The members of the Wollaston Tennis club danced out the old year at a leap year party held in Brasee hall, Tuesday night.

The affair was in charge of the entertainment committee: G. Ernest Carr, Roy C. Baker, George E. Brown, E. Tyler Brigham, E. F. DeNormandie.

WINDOL ASSOCIATES DANCE

The Windol Associates held a dance at Alpha hall Tuesday evening which was well attended and proved highly enjoyable. Dancing was enjoyed until midnight, music being furnished by Moore's orchestra. There was a large attendance. Lloyd L. Lewis was floor director and Thomas Djerf was his assistant. The chief of aid was Daniel DiBono. Other aids were George DiBono, Thomas Buckley and Walter Ogie.

Cayuga Nation Wins Suit Against State of New York

Albany, Jan. 1.—The right of the Cayuga Nation of Indians to an adjustment of its claim of $247,609 against the state, now 117 years old, was upheld by the court of appeals by a vote of 4 to 2. The court holds that the state land board must try to effect a settlement.

The claim was for profits realized by the state from the sale of lands acquired from the Indians in 1796.

MRS. BISHOP ASKS DIVORCE

Members of Exclusive Society Said to Be Involved In Scandal

New York, Jan. 1.—Mrs. James C. Bishop, noted society leader and niece of the late General Hancock, filed suit for divorce against James C. Bishop of the banking firm of Redmond & Co. and prominent in financial circles.

Mrs. Bishop demands custody of their five children. Two corespondents are named. Their names are not revealed, but they are said to be members of exclusive society.

ROAD OFFICERS HELD TO BLAME

Arrests In Connection With the Westport Disaster

MANSLAUGHTER IS CHARGED

Three Heads of the New Haven Taken On Bench Warrants Naming Them as Having Caused Death of "Jane Doe"—Culpable Carlessness Is Alleged to Have Been Shown

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 1.—Vice President Henry J. Horn, General Manager Benjamin R. Pollock and Charles N. Woodward, superintendent of the Shore Line division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, were arrested on bench warrants here, charged with manslaughter in having caused the death of one "Jane Doe," a passenger on an express train wrecked in Westport, Conn., on Oct. 3, 1912.

The warrants, sworn out by State Attorney Judson of Fairfield county, charge the men named in them with having caused the death of "one Jane Doe" by "wilfully and feloniously" choking, suffocating and burning her, in a railroad car at Westport on the date mentioned.

It is further charged that the accident was due to the excessive speed at which the train was being run; that Horn, Pollock and Woodward, as officers of the railroad charged with keeping the tracks and other equipment in proper condition to insure the safety of passengers, "well knowing their duty in that regard, but being wholly unmindful and disregarding the same, feloniously, wilfully and with force and arms, with gross and culpable negligence did then and there wholly omit and neglect to keep the tracks of the said railroad in proper condition and repair for safe travel; and wholly omitted and neglected to furnish and provide a sufficient number of brakemen on said train so running on said track of said railroad for the safety and preservation of the passengers riding upon said train; and wholly omitted and neglected to furnish and supply a sufficiency of proper implements for the protection of the lives of said passengers, and did wholly omit and neglect to use and exercise every care and precaution in their power to prevent accident and the injury and death of any passengers on said train; neglected to employ competent and careful engineers and neglected to provide and maintain cross-overs of sufficient length to permit engines and trains to pass from one track to another in safety."

There are four counts in the warrants, the fourth charging specifically that the cross-over in use on the line at the point of the accident was too short and that as a result of this and the speed at which the train was running, it was derailed and wrecked when it attempted to pass from the inner to the outer track.

The train wrecked at Westport on Oct. 3 was the second section of the Springfield express bound for New York. Besides the engine crew five persons lost their lives.

CAUGHT BY A FLOOD

Nine Miners Entombed, but Yet Alive, In Pennsylvania Mine

Tamaqua, Pa., Jan. 1.—Nine mine workers are entombed in a flooded working in the East Leigh colliery, near here.

Rescuers are digging away a mass of culm and rock which is blocking the gangway leading to the imprisoned men. Rappings from the interior of the mine show that some, if not all, of the imprisoned miners are still alive.

The men were caught in the rush of water when they accidentally broke through the wall of an abandoned working. It will require a day's work to reach the entombed men.

ISMAY TO STEP OUT

Resignation of White Star Line Head to Take Effect June 30

London, Jan. 1.—The long expected resignation of J. Bruce Ismay from his position as chairman and managing director of the White Star line is announced. It will take effect June 30.

Harold A. Sanderson, first vice president of the International Mercantile Marine company and a director of the White Star line, will succeed Ismay.

A WOMAN COMPTROLLER

Miss Townsend Gets Atlantic City Job at $1500 a Year

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 1.—It is believed a precedent is established in municipal affairs of the country by the appointment of a woman as city comptroller here.

Miss Bessie Townsend, 24 years old, received the appointment at a salary of $1500 a year. She will have care of over $3,000,000 and the sale of all the city's bonds. Her signature will be necessary for every cent paid out by the city.

WORKED THREE YEARS ON BARS

Pomeroy Wonderfully Patient In His Endeavors to Escape

SAYS HE HAD NO ACCOMPLICE

No Trace of Tools Which He Used During Long Task—Refuses to Disclose How They Were Done Away With—Stricter Watch Now Kept Upon the Famous Prisoner

Boston, Jan. 1.—Jesse Pomeroy yesterday afternoon talked for the first time of his attempted escape, when he told Warden Bridges no one was in league with him and he alone planned and carried out every detail in connection with it.

He said he had been at work on the bars for three years, and as he did not have to sleep during the night most of it was carried on during that time.

A thorough search of his cell and surroundings by Bridges and the officers has failed to locate any trace of the tools with which he accomplished the work. He told the warden he had done away with these a long time ago, but in what manner he refused to tell.

Pomeroy broke his silence after his afternoon stroll in the yard back of Cherry Hill which has been set apart for his special benefit. The stroll appeared to have worked a wonderful change on the prisoner and he was more free in his talk than at any other time since he entered the institution or at least after any of his other escapades.

Ever since he was caught, he has maintained a strict silence in regard to the affair and no amount of questioning could produce any information that might help the officers.

He lay on his cot the greater part of yesterday and it was not until after dinner that he arose and told the officer that he was very anxious to take a walk. His step was short and quick but he kept his eyes on the ground all the time.

A stricter watch was kept on him yesterday and after his entrance into the cell he was stripped of his clothing, a proceeding that he did not take kindly to at first.

Nothing was found. It was while sitting on the side of his cot, while his clothing was being searched, that he talked with the warden.

Pomeroy will not be deprived of seeing his mother when she calls the next time, for it appears useless to punish him. His only ambition is to escape and he plans continually to accomplish this.

Pomeroy is now in his 53d year. His hair is quite gray and is beginning to thin out. Nevertheless he is in fairly good health and calls for the doctor seldom.

Officer Brassil, who discovered Pomeroy in the corridor, has several scars on his left hand, received in the tussle with Pomeroy when he was taking the screwdriver away from him.

QUINCY HIGH GETTING IN LINE

For Fast Basket Ball Against Strong Teams

The Quincy High school basket ball season opens with Thayer academy Friday afternoon at the local gym. It will be an elimination game for Quincy since Coach LaRose will probably form two squads.

A more auspicious season never strated at the high school as far as candidates go, and 30 men are now out. Their knowledge is rudimentary and most of that has been gained through the persistent efforts of Coach LaRose.

Estey has returned to school after a short absence and is a promising candidate. He has played with the Y. M. C. A. team and understands the game. Dick Crane and Larkin, Safford and Jenkins are all earnest players. The working out of the combination is uncertain.

The spirit of the men is fine and if the team develops it will be because of that. No hope is held out for an "All Star" aggregation but this season's experience will mean a crackerjack quintet next year.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

The engagement of Miss Gertrude Reardon and Lawrence W. Lyons has been announced. Miss Reardon is the daughter of Mrs. Catherine Reardon of Common street and is a teacher at the Lincoln school. She was born in Quincy and a graduate of the Willard and Quincy High schools. She prepared for teaching at Bridgewater Normal school.

Mr. Lyons is clerk of the East Norfolk district court, having succeeded the late John P. S. Churchill. He is a graduate of the Quincy schools and Harvard Law school. He is past grand knight of the Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus, and is one of the prominent young men of Quincy.

COLLINS HELD FOR MURDER

Brother of Accused Man and Widow of Victim Are Also Held

Somerville, Mass., Jan. 1.—Michael J. Collins was held without bail for the grand jury in the district police court on a charge of murder. John Collins, a brother, and Christina McLaughlin, widow of Joseph W. McLaughlin, the murdered man, and sister of Collins, were held in $300 each, being unable to furnish bail.

Collins is charged with having inflicted fatal wounds with a razor on McLaughlin on Christmas morning at the latter's home. Collins was calling at the home of McLaughlin and was ordered from the house, whereupon he attacked and slashed McLaughlin with a razor.

Secretary—Mrs. Jennie Pratt.
Arrangement committee —Mrs. Thomas Pratt, Mrs. Fred Dunstan and Mrs. Arthur Collins.

CHARTERS OF OTHER CITIES

Two Plans Usually Submitted to Voters For Consideration

Editor Daily Ledger:

I am inclined to agree with the Ledger that

"For forms of government let fools contest:
That which is best administered is best."

Some twenty years ago Charles Francis Adams in referring to our then new charter in his address in commemoration of one hundredth anniversary of the incorporation of Quincy said, "It is good to frame charters and constitutions; it is well to devise ingenious political expedients; it is refreshing to observe the working of nicely balanced paper adjustments:— but, by themselves and of themselves, it is most improbable that in the present or any other respect these will ever work out the political salvation of the community which depends upon them. The Quincy charter, I will also add, however excellent it may be in theory, will in coming years not work out the municipal salvation of Quincy. Of that much at least we can even now feel assured. Something else is necessary; and that something is men,—and, moreover, the very best men this or any other town or city now can or ever will supply."

The change from town to city government was agitated in Wollaston in 1884, in November I believe. A citizens meeting was held and a committee was appointed to consider and report on the subject. Over four years after on the 5th of January, 1889 the city government went into operation with a mayor and council of twenty-three members.

At the time our charter was adopted, large councils or a legislative body of two branches was the customary city charter plan throughout the state. After several years trial of this cumbersome legislative machinery eleven cities have applied to the General Court from the year 1908 to 1912 for revisions of their city charters. These eleven cities presented to their voters 15 charter plans,—that is for illustration. Salem had two complete charters, drafted and presented to its voters to choose from. These plans, were headed "Part I" and provided for a council of seven all elected at large, a two years term and salary of $200 each and none party designations; "Part II," which was adopted by the voters, provided for a mayor, four councillors elected at large, each receiving a three year term and salary of $2000., and none party designation on the ballot.

Chelsea also gave its voters two charter plans to choose from. "Part I" calling for a mayor with a two year term and four aldermen; the four aldermen to be elected at large for two year terms on a none party ballot, each receiving $1000 per year. "Part II" was for a council of nine one from each ward (five wards) and four at large on a none party ticket, and a salary of $500 per year.

Lynn came under the two plan charter movements. "Part I" providing for a Mayor, and four Commissioners elected at large on a none party ticket each for a two year term. The commissioners to each receive a salary of $3000 per year. But "Part II" gave the people a council of eleven members, four to be elected at large and one from each ward,—seven wards. Each council to be paid $500. per year. All elected on a none party ticket for a two year term.

Lawrence also fell into line, with a two plan charter. "Part I", nine councilmen, three elected at large and one from each of six wards for a two year term at a salary of $600 per year on a party ticket. "Part II" for a mayor; four aldermen to be elected at large for a two year term on a none party ticket at a salary of $2500 per year.

But in connection with each one of these cities which have offered their voters a choice of charters there is a "Part III" upon which I have not touched, and that is that at the election each voter is required to vote primarily for illustration on the following question: "Shall the present charter of the city of —— be repealed?" and secondarily on the following question: If the present charter of the city of —— is repealed, shall the new charter of the city be, "Plan 1, which establishes a city government consisting of a mayor and council of nine members," or "Plan 2 which establishes a government by commission, the city government consisting of a council of five members?"

If a majority of the ballots cast are for the repeal of the present charter, the plan receiving the larger number of votes on the secondary question (plans 1 or 2) is adopted as the charter.

That is the form in which these four cities presented the charter revision to its voters,—gave them a choice and with great success.

Out of the 15 charter proposition which have been before the voters of eleven cities the past five years but one advocated a council of over eleven members; ten advocated noneparty designation and five retained the party form; thirteen paid their councilmen salaries from $200 up; eleven gave the councilmen two year terms and ten their mayor two year terms.

The plan to amend our city charter which for several months has been under earnest discussion by a considerable number of our citizens who take a business interest in the city's affairs, is one of extreme simplicity in comparison with what other cities have undertaken and carried through. Worcester, for example, in 1910 went before the general court at eight different times and had eight separate acts passed amending its city charter. Newton in the same year had four separate amendments put through.

For several years ex-Mayor Shea and City Solicitor McAnarney have bravely fought to have the General Court place the Quincy city election on a non-partisan basis, but without success. City after city has had its charter amended upon this plan. That amendment is one of three which is now being considered in relation to the amending of the charter. The two others are to bring our council down to a size conforming with modern city charter ideas with a membership of nine who can comfortably sit around a long table and discuss the city's business in a business like and rational way, give the members a three year term of office and a small stipend, say, five dollars for each council meeting which they attend, the total amount not to exceed $150. per year, three members to be elected at large and one from each ward; the mayor to have a two year term.

In the conferences which have been held there has been an honest difference of opinion as to the desirability of electing any of the councilmen from wards and also if it would not be better to retain the party designation.

This has brought forward the form of amendment adopted by Salem, Boston, Lawrence, Lynn and Chelsea, giving to the voters the primary question "Shall the present charter of the city of Quincy, be amended?" and secondarily on the following question If the present charter of the city of Quincy is amended shall it be by—

"Plan 1, which provides for a council of nine members" etc, or

"Plan 2, which provides for a council of six members," etc. If a majority of the votes cast are for amending the city charter the plan receiving the larger number of votes on the secondary question will be adopted as the amendments to the charter.

Representative Piper has worked out a plan for a council of six which many desire to see embodied in Plan 2.

Provision is made for the mailing of a copy of the act to each voter three weeks before the election at which the proposed amendments are to be voted upon.

James S. Whiting.

CITY COUNCIL

THE DOCK QUESTION.

A communication from Chairman William T. Shea of the special committee on the public dock question, as follows was referred to the next City Council.

Report of the committee on the municipal dock to the mayor and city council of 1912.

Gentlemen:—

This Committee was appointed by His Honor the Mayor and the City Council of 1912 to consider the advisability of building a Municipal Dock for the City of Quincy, and to make recommendations for the location of a site for said dock.

The Committee organized November 23, 1912 with Hon. William T. Shea as Chairman and Charles W. Bailey as Secretary. The only data available at the time of the organization of this Committee was the Report of the Commissioner of Water Fronts, Waterways, and Navigation, which recommended the leasing of a site for five or ten years, and stated that the State of Massachusetts had appropriated twenty-five thousand dollars for the deepening and improvement of the channel of Quincy Town River, contingent on the City of Quincy building a Municipal Dock.

This Committee has held four meetings. It advertised for suggestions and plans for locations, and two plans for a location have been submitted for its consideration. It held two public hearings, which were well attended. The Committee also inspected Quincy Town River from its confluence with Weymouth Fore River to the head of navigation, and begs to report as follows:

It is the opinion of this Committee, in the limited time at our disposal, that the question of the advisability and location of a Municipal Dock for the City of Quincy is a matter of so large a scope and involves so many interests, that is should not be decided by the City Council of 1912, but should be referred to the incoming City Council of 1913. with the recommendation of this Committee that His Honor the Mayor and the City Council of 1913 immediately appoint a similar Committee on the Municipal Dock to continue the study and investigation of the subject. and report back to the City Council of 1913 at as early a date as is consistent with a proper consideration of so important a matter.

Respectfully submitted,
Wm. T. Shea, Chairman for the Committee.

PETITIONS

Petitions of the New England Telephone Co. for attachments on Merrymount road and Baxter avenue were granted.

Councilman Cunningham presented a petition for street lights at Squantum and later an order for the following lights which was referred to the Executive:— Huckings avenue and Bellevue road; Bayside road and Orchard street; Brunswick street and New Street; Gladstone street and New street; Bellvue road and Ocean street; Bellevue road and Green street; East Squantum and Aberdeen road; East Squantum and Ocean street; Bayside road and Border street; Dorchester street between Pratt road and East Squantum street; Dorchester street at end of car line; Pratt road; Huckings avenue; Bay street; Bellevue road and Wedgewood street.

Petition of Charles H. Johnson for an auctioneers license was granted and his bond approved.

LICENSE GRANTED.

The Committee on Licenses reported an order granting Sunday Fruit license to James C. M. Sharp, East Howard street. Granted.

TRANSFERS AUTHORIZED.

Councilman Studley offered the following transfer orders which were adopted.

Transferring $65.55 from receipts from sale of wire, old tires, etc., of the police department to Police Miscellaneous. $80.33 from balance of Ballou street to Repairs of Public Buildings, $273 from Wollaston school furnishings to Repair of Public Buildings; $299.20 from balance of Hill street to Repair of Public Buildings.

ORDERS.

Councilman Sodergren offered an order for lights on Riverbank road, Bebee road and Oakwood road. Referred to Executive.

On motion of Councilman Boyd the order authorizing the Mayor to petition the legislature for a bath house on Wollaston beach was taken from the table and adopted.

On motion of councilman Ericson the order for widening Sea street was taken from the table and rejected by a vote of 12 yes and 4 no as follows: Yes:— Beeman, Boyd, Carruthers, Craig. Devaney, Ericson, Gauthier, Gilliatt, Richards, J. R. S. Ross, Sodergren, Studley—12. No—Barker. Cunningham, Murray, Thompson:—4.

On motion of Councilman Ericson the order for changing the grade of Elm avenue was taken from the table and rejected by a vote of 13 yes and 5 no as follows: Yes—Beeman, Boyd Carruthers. Craig, Devaney, Ericson, Gauthier, Gilliatt, Richards, C. A. Ross J. R. S. Ross, Sandberg, Studley—13 No—Barker, Cunningham, Murray, Sodergren, Thompson—5.

Councilman Cunningham moved reference be withdrawn on the order changing the street railway location on Elm avenue. Motion lost.

On motion of Councilman Gilliatt, the petition to remove the old building off Beale street was recalled from the Committee and referred to the next Council.

In the calendar the order increasing the salary of the City Engineer from $1600 to $1800 was passed to be ordained.

The order appropriating $1200 for contageous diseases of the Board of Health was passed to be ordained, Councilman Cunningham voting no.

The order making a transfer of $399.43 to pay of men of the police department was passed to be ordained.

The order amending the ordinance concerning call men of the fire department was passed.

When the vote was taken on this order there seemed to be a misunderstanding on the part of several of the Councilmen as to what they were voting for. The President ruled that after a roll call had been commenced that proceedings could not be stopped for argument. The order however passed by a vote of 13 yes and 5 no as follows:— Yes,— Barker, Beeman, Boyd, Carruthers, Craig. Devaney, Cautheir, Gilliatt, Murray, C. A. Ross, J. R. S. Ross, Sandberg, Thompson, 13 No,—Cunningham, Ericson, Richards, Sodergren, Studley. 5

Councilman C. A. Ross moved a rising vote of thanks to President Hobbs for the able and impartial manner in which he had presided over the Council during the past year. The motion was unanimously adopted.

In replying President Hobbs said that he wished to thank the members for their vote, and also to thank them for their courteous manner throughout the year. He hoped that each would feel that the work of the year had not been misspent and he felt sure that the Council had accomplished considerable. Many things have been accomplished that will reflect credit on the Council in future years. During the years that he had been a member of the Council he had found that members have always given their best effort. They had not always agreed but he believed that every man was honest in his opinion as he was in his. He had acted as he thought proper. At times he had perhaps spoken sharp words but they were intended to impress the members that he was right in his ruling. He had nothing but the best of feeling toward all members and he wished all a happy and proseperous New Year.

Councilman Cunningham moved and a rising vote of thanks was extended to the City Messenger who had held the position for 24 years and was about to be elected for the 25th year.

City Messenger Tirrell responded briefly.

Councilman Sandberg then moved a rising vote of thanks to Clerk of the Council which was adopted.

In responding Clerk George T. Magee gave a few statistics relative to the work of the Council of 1912.

He stated that during the year the Council had been in session 38 hours and 55 minutes. Thirty-six meetings had been held making an average of 1 hour and 7 minutes for each meeting. The average attendance at the meetings had been 20 plus.

The longest meeting was held April 15, and was 4 hours and 9 minutes, and the shortest meeting Feb. 12, of four minutes.

During the year 142 communications had been received, and 107 petitions, and 778 orders acted upon., 300 of which were granting minor licenses.

Three members of the council had a clean record for attendance, having been present at every meeting, Councilmen Barker, Gauthier and John R. S. Ross.

On motion of Councilman Richards a rising vote of thanks was extended to City Auditor Fairbanks.

In reply the City Auditor said that he had worked hard during the past year and that if his efforts had been of value he felt well repaid.

On motion of Councilman Studley a rising vote of thanks was extended to the members of the press. No one responded for the pencil pushers however. and at 8.16 the Council adjourned sine die.

SWALLOWED VEIL PIN

Durgin Girl Died After Coughing It Up

Miss Lillian F. Durgin, aged 15 years, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neri Durgin, died of hemorrhage at the home of her parents, on Merrimack street, Bradford, her case being one of the most peculiar that local physicians ever heard of.

Last Tuesday Miss Durgin had a veil pin, with a white head and about two inches long, in her mouth and in running she swallowed it. She suffered no apparent ill effects until last Thursday evening, when in a violent coughing fit, she coughed up the pin and seemed to have recovered.

She had since been under the care of a physician, and although having twice had slight hemorrages, she seemed to be in good health.

It is supposed that the pin while in the throat had penetrated an artery and that the hemorrhages resulted from that.

ANNUAL BANQUET OF MANET CLUB

The annual banquet of the Manet club was held at the Hibernian lodge rooms, Franklin street, Tuesday evening and 50 covers were laid. Guests were present from Dorchester, Brockton, Braintree and Weymouth.

The menu consister of crab, chicken and potato salad, roast turkey with all the "fixins," escalloped oysters, frozen pudding, ice cream, coffee, tea, milk and cigars.

Music was furnished by DeNeils orchestra of Weymouth. John Quinn and Harry Crocker of Brockton gave a continuous half hour entertainment while the boys divided their attention between the performers and the eatables.

President Leo Howley was toastmaster and James M. Cantfill was the principal speaker. He was followed by club members who were optimistic in outlining the future. A musical entertainment was provided in which each individual took part. The party saw the old year out and welcomed 1913 with three cheers and a tiger.

WATCH NIGHT SERVICES.

Watch-night services were held at the Wollaston Methodist church Tuesday evening. Rev. F. H. Morgan, Dr. Wentworth F. Stewart and Mrs. F. H. Morgan were the speakers. There was a large attendance.

Rev. Paul Hallin led in prayer and preached an appropriate sermon at the Watch-Night service at the Swedish Baptist church. A social hour was enjoyer from 9 until 10 P. M. All joined in the Welcome hymn at the old year passed.

The church bells of the Swedish Lutheran church ushered in the new year while the members of the Luther League united in a silent prayer of Thanksgiving. During the evening a social was enjoyed consisting of a splendid concert program and appropriate speaking.

AT CATHOLIC CHURCHES.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

Of Acceptance of Change From Town to City Government

TO BE FITTINGLY OBSERVED

A movement is on foot for the city to celebrate this year the twenty-fifth anniversary of the acceptance of a city form of government. Plans for the celebration have not taken definite shape as yet but it is probable that Mayor Stone will forward a communication to the new City Council next week recommending that the city take official notice of its silver anniversary.

The act incorporating the City of Quincy was passed by the legislature of 1888 and approved by the Governor May 17, that year and at a special Town Meeting held June 11, 1888 the act was accepted the vote being as follows:—

|---|---|
| Whole number of ballots | 1,266 |
| In favor of accepting charter | 812 |
| Against accepting charter | 454 |

The first Mayor and City Council under the new charter were elected in December 1888 and assumed office the first Monday in January 1889. They were as follows:

Mayor—Charles H. Porter.

President of City Council, Herbert M. Federhen.

Councilmen-at-Large —Herbert T. Whitman, Thaddeus H. Newcomb, John C. Kapples, William B. Glover, Levi Stearns.

WARD COUNCILMEN.

Ward One—George A. Barker, Frank B. Foster, Joseph C. Morse.

Ward Two—Herbert M. Federhen, John R. Graham, John Shaw.

Ward Three—Frederick L. Jones, James Thompson, Thomas Curtis.

Ward Four—William T. Shea, James F. Burke, Patrick F. Lacy.

Ward Five—Joseph W. Lovett, Henry O. Fairbanks, George F. Pinkham.

Ward Six—Roger H. Wilde, Elijah G. Hall, James Burr.

SOME OFFICIALS.

City Clerk—Christopher A. Spear.

Commissioner of Public Works—John P. Prichard.

City Treasurer—Horace B. Spear.

Tax Collector—Bryant N. Adams.

City Solicitor—Willam G. A. Pattee.

Deputy Manager of Police—George O. Langley.

Chief Engineer Fire Department—Walter H. Ripley.

Overseer of the Poor—George H. Field.

Principal Assessor—Benjamin F. Curtis.

Assistant Assessors—Elias A. Perkins, John Federhen, 3d. William S. Williams, Francis E. Kimball, Israel Waterhouse, Frederick C. Pope.

City Messenger—Harry W. Tirrell.

City Auditor—John O. Hall.

City Physician—Dr. Samuel M. Donovan.

Inspector of Milk—Dr. John F. Welch.

Many of these who held office under the first year of the city government have passed to the great beyond. There are however, a number who are still living and taking an active interest in city affairs.

Just when the celebration will be held has not as yet been decided upon but it has been suggested that it be on the anniversary of the acceptance of the act.

While this will be the 25th anniversary of the actual incorporation of the city under the legislative act, still it will only mean the 24th year of the operation of that form of government as the city council did not enter upon their duties until 1889.

CAROLERS ENTERTAINED.

Tuesday evening, people in the neighborhood of Walker Charlesworth's home were pleasantly surprised on hearing the sweet strains of harmony of the English Carolers once more. They announced their arrival by singing appropriate selections, in the open air. After which they were invited to a delightful repast, prepared by Mrs. Charlesworth. Following the supper many beautiful carols in keeping with the season were rendered.

ELECTRIC CAR ON FIRE.

A fire in the motor box of the car which leaves Weymouth Landing at 7.15 P. M. broke out at Elm and Hancock streets Tuesday evening and was extinguished by the men from the central station. Many passengers were riding and although the car filled with smoke there was no undue excitement. The car was in charge of Motorman Cappallinni and Conductor Malnati, and proceeded under its own power after the fire was extinguished. There was no serious damage.

KAISER IS SOME HUNTER

Has Slain Over 67,000 Creatures During His Hunting Career

Berlin, Jan. 1.—To prove that Emperor William is entitled to his reputation as a mighty hunter, a sporting journal published statistics purporting to show that the number of creatures slain by the kaiser during his shooting career now amounts to 67,228.

The list includes twenty-four varieties of game, 38,578 pheasants, 17,950 hares, 3442 wild boar, 2068 stags, 867 partridges, three turkeys and one whale.

BROTHERS-IN-LAW INSTANTLY KILLED BY EXPLOSION OF COMPRESSED AIR

Napoleon Reed and Mitchell Lavoie Victims. Armand Vendret Stunned. Had Narrow Escape

Reed's Death Was Instantaneous. Lavoie Survived Only a Few Minutes. Both Had Limbs Fractured

Twe men were killed and another miraculously escaped death with a face wound at the plant of Reed & Vendret, Vernon street, off Centre street, about three o'clock Wednesday afternoon, following the explosion of a compressed air tank.

The men killed are Napoleon Z. Reed, 48 years old a member of the firm, and Mitchell Lavoie, 55 years old, who lived at Barry street, West Quincy. He is a brother-in-law of Mr. Reed. Armand Vendret was thrown to the ground and stunned by the explosion but when seen at his home, 76 Rodman street after the accident appeared to be in fine condition considering that he had passed through such an ordeal.

Mr. Reed was probably instantly killed and Mr. Lavoie died within a short time. Mr. Vendret was slightly bruised on the left cheek and his face was peppered with bits of stone which flew through the air. He was later treated by Dr. Thomas J. Dion at his home.

The tank which burst was part of the compressed air supply which is the power used at the yard for pneumatic tools. Tuesday the men detected a slight leak in the tank and since New Years day is a French holiday and the proprietors being Frenchmen, the yard was not running Wednesday. The firm members thought it would be a good day to repair the leak and had placed an inside and outside plate on. Just before the explosion August Reinhalt, the engineer was told to fill the tank and when it had reached a 75 pound pressure another hissing sound was heard. Mr. Reed took a wrench and after locating the loose bolt commenced to tighten it. He had taken but a few turns when the tank ripped with a noise which could be heard a long distance.

The three men were within a few feet of the tank, with Mr. Vendret standing in the rear. The full force of the explosion struck Reed and Lavoie, who were sheltering Vendret.

When workmen from nearby yards reached the spot Mr. Reed was dead and Mr. Lavoie was dying. Both men were stripped of what clothing they were wearing and pieces of the material was found here and there about the yard.

Dr. Roderick McLellan and Dr. Thomas J. Dion were summoned and arrived as Mr. Lavoie died. Dr. Fred E. Jones medical examiner viewed the bodies and ordered their removal to Hall's undertaking rooms.

A post mortem examination showed that the force of the explosion had drawn all air from the lungs and that a vacuum had been created, followed by the collapsing of all the organs of the bodies.

Mr. Reed, although standing close by when the tank exploded did not show any signs of injury other than a fracture of the left leg near the ankle. Mr. Lavoie had three fractures of the left arm bone and his left side was crushed in. Particles of rock and gravel were imbedded in the flesh of the face of both men.

Mr. Reed has lived in Quincy about 28 years. He was a member of the Granite Manufacturers Association, Clan McGregor, O. S. C. and Maple Lodge, K. and L. of H. He is the father of Miss Alma Reed, head nurse at the Quincy City Hospital and Miss Bertha Reed, a nurse at a Boston hospital. He leaves a wife, three daughters and one son.

Mr. Lavoie has been prominently identified with West Quincy, being a long time resident. He was a member of the Societe de St. Jean de Baptist and an attendant of St. Mary's church. He leaves a wife, two sons and two daughters.

The funeral of Mitchell Lavoie will be held from his late home, 27 Barry street, Saturday morning. A high mass of requiem will be said at St. Mary's church at nine o'clock.

The funeral of Napoleon Z. Reed will will be held from his late home, 7 Liberty square, at 2.30 o'clock, Saturday afternoon.

HISTORY MAKING EPOCH IN WORK OF WEST QUINCY M. E. CHURCH

Three Anniversaries Fittingly Celebrated With Banquet and Speech Making

Friends and Former Pastors Given Most Hearty Welcome

One of the largest social events of recent years in the Hall Place M. E. Church was the celebration of the three anniversaries, Wednesday evening, with a banquet followed by other interesting services.

Sunday, April 28th, 1912 was the 40th anniversary of the first Methodist sermon preached in West Quincy by Rev. Samuel Kelley, Dec. 15, 1912 was the 38th anniversary of the Dedication of the Church and Jan. 1, 1913, was the 45th anniversary of the starting of the Sunday School.

From 6 to 6.30 a social half hour was enjoyed. There old friends met new ones and friendships were renewed. There pastors met those who had been official members during their pastorates, the young people who have since taken up the activities of the Church met the pastors who have been instrumental in bringing them into the Church, and again some who were the younger members of the Sunday School during these interesting pastorates have been hardly recognizable in the mature young workers now to be found in this Church, and all in all a most enjoyable time of re-union and friendship was held.

About seven o'clock the large company sat down to the banquet and as there were many more than had been anticipated, a second seating was necessary. The young men of the Church acted as waiters, after which the young ladies turned to and waited on the young men.

Rev. T. C. Martin pastor, welcomed Rev. Mr. Willmott of Bethany Congregational Church, saying that it was very fitting that inasmuch as this Church had been started by members of the Bethany Chuch that the present pastor should be present. Rev. Mr. Willmott invoked Divine blessing.

As Rev. Mr. Willmott had to leave early to attend his own Church he was the first speaker. In introducing Rev. Mr. Willmott, Rev. T. C. Martin stated that he had learned that the Congregational Church at Quincy Point was formerly a Methodist Episcopal Church and said this was a splendid time to recognize the fine feeling existing among the Churches of Quincy and prophesied that Quincy will soon be known as the "City of friendly Churches."

Rev. Mr. Willmott said he was glad to be present and congratulated the pastor and people on the celebration of these anniversaries. He was not at all sorry that Methodist butter was made out of a Congregational cow, but couldn't see how Congregational butter could be made from Methodist creed. The average person does not look for ancestry, but asks the question, "What does he know that I want to know?" He saw no reason why there could not be a federation of churches as there are of ministers. He wished the Church a great deal of prosperity and happiness in the work.

The program following the banquet was opened by prayer by Rev. Carl H. Raupach, of St. Andrew's Church, Jamaica Plain.

Mrs. John A. Burns was introduced and led to speak of some of her early experiences in the work, both outside and inside of the Sunday School and told that after she and Miss Carrie L. Rideout had visited Mrs. Helen Trask where they had a season of prayer they started on their task of canvassing West Quincy to secure members, while Mrs. Trask remained at home and prayed for the work. She also spoke of the faithful work of Charles W. Carter, the first superintendent.

Mr. Hayward, superintendent of the Bethany Sunday School was next introduced and said he was glad to represent the Bethany Bible School at this time.

Mr. R. D. Chase, one of the teachers and also organist of the Sunday School, the next speaker gave some fine reminiscences of the early work.

At this point the choir was asked to sing the Anthem sung by Mrs. Ripley at the dedication of the Church, "Beautiful are thy towers," and was well rendered and pleasing.

Rev. Carl H. Raupach of Jamaica Plain, who directly preceded Mr. Martin as pastor at West Quincy was next welcomed. He said in part, "Words cannot be found to express the joy in my heart at having this

SENATOR JOHN J. McDEVITT.

REP. WILLIAM J. LESLIE.

McDEVITT FARED WELL IN FAVORS

In the Way of Legislative Committee Appointments

OTHERS NOT SO WELL

According to the list of legislative committees published this morning the Quincy Representatives did not get many New Year souvenirs. Senator McDevitt is on the joint Committees of Harbors, Lands and Liquor law. Representative Leslie gets a position on the joint committee on Election Laws and Representative Sullivan on the joint committee on Insurance.

REP. MICHAEL J. SULLIVAN.

FOURTH OF JULY COMMITTEE.

A meeting of the July Fourth celebration committee was to have been held tonight but owing to the fact that Mayor Stone the president of the society wil be unable to be present the meeting will be held at a future date. It is now more than six months since the celebration and the committee have as yet failed to make the promised report of its collection and expenditures to the citizens.

SADDER BUT WISER.

Some of the Quincy people who celebrated the coming of the new year at Boston hotels did not arrive at their homes in Quincy until 4 o'clock the next morning.

HUNT STRIKES WINNING GAIT

Added 2,000 Yesterday and 3,015 Today in Contest

MACKAY ALSO AFTER PRIZE

Another phenomenal gain was made by Sturgis Hunt today in the Inauguration contest for the free Washington trip, and he evidently proposes that Fred Williams shall not have it all his own way. Today only 8965 votes separate the two leading candidates. Mr. Hunt added 2000 votes yesterday and 3015 today, while Mr. Williams added none.

A. R. MacKay also proposes to win one of the prizes—the Washington trip or the diamond ring. His total is 830 larger than yesterday. Mr. Bowditch also gained 205 and Mr. Kessler 105.

Dan Scouler, a shipfitter evidently intends to contest the claim of R. M. Harmon as the leading shipyard candidate, for he moved up today from No. 49 to No. 18, ten votes ahead of his rival. R. A. Falconer of Broadway, another shipyard man is also gaining.

Richard Larkin is keeping up with the High school bunch with an increase of 45. Others to make gains were Edmond Roach, William Decoste, Charles H. Finn, Angus Kerr, Richard J. Gray, J. F. Hyland and Samuel Kadets. The last named was a new candidate yesterday, but having less than 50 votes his name did not appear in the list. Today he has just 50. All with less than 50 votes will not be printed.

THE TREASURY.

The Treasury building at Washington is an imposing structure of sandstone and granite, 450 by 250 feet. The system of making new money, exchanging new for old, and destroying the old, is what one sees at the Treasury. The cash room may be seen at any time from 9 to 2. The daily transactions run into the millions. Visitors may present their currency bills and receive coin at its face value. Among the vaults to which the attention of the visitor is directed is the bond vault, which contains the United States bonds deposited by the National banks on security for their own votes in circulation; vault No. 1 in the basement containing silver dollars; and vaullt No. 2 containing silver dollars, fractional silver currency and gold coin. There is a carefully devised system for guarding the Treasury against theft.

As announced Monday, all candidates with less than 50 votes are omitted today. This includes a new candidate, Samuel Kadets of Pride of Quincy lodge, who starts with 10 votes. His name, and those of other candidates, will appear in the list when their totals reach 50 votes.

It is not necessary to fill out the coupons in full, now that the candidates are nominated and well known, but every coupon should have the family name at least. All coupons marked "Williams" will be counted for Fred D. Williams, and all coupons marked "MacKay" will be counted for A. R. MacKay, and so on down the list. The Contest Editor would suggest, however, that one coupon each

The American Lady Shoe

Durability is a factor to be reckoned with in the yearly shoe bill. A shoe that wears 20 per cent. longer than another, at the same price, brings a decided economy in the yearly summing up of the family shoe bill—and larger the family, the greater the total saving.

The American Lady Shoes not only are well made of selected materials—and hence give the maximum of service—but they fit well; and the good fitting of a shoe adds to its length of service, because a shoe that fits isn't subjected to straining at wrong points. Come in and let us shoe you.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Russian treaty is closed but it is doubtful if the relations which now exist between this country and Russia will be severed.

Parcels post started out with three tons of paving bricks at Cary. If they should fall on the egg mail, especially the cold storage kind, there would be a clean out of the postal department.

Be sure to write it 1913.

PARCELS POST.

The parcels post has come and it is qiute probable that it has come to stay. The big service companies are optimistic that it will not last long, that Uncle Sam will soon have to abandon it because of the deficit it will produce in the post office department. What if there should be a deficit. It is the people who have to pay the freight and they may as well pay it for their own convenience as pay it into the funds of the companies to be disbursed in the shape of dividends. The cry that it cannot be carried on successfully in this country is a poor judgment upon our ability to work out what has been successfully operated in many countries of Europe for years. In this we are only following England and other countries. In this great advance the United States has only been a follower. It is to be hoped that she will soon be a leader in this department as well as in many others and that the parcels post will prove the success it promises and the relief from heavy tolls now imposed.

SERIOUS COMPLICATIONS.

Judge Dodge in the United States District Court, has cancelled eight certificates of naturalization on their holders as citzens of the United States. This action was taken on the petition of the United States District Attorney. This is to discourage a practice said to prevail among certain foreigners , who obtain those papers, then return to their own country and enjoy certain privileges which would not be granted them if they were not protected by the United States papers. It is said that men from the Maritime provinces, fishermen take out naturalization papers here to follow their calling, but maintain their home and interests in their native land. In other countries it was found that papers were held by people who had never even set foot in this country. This proved rather a serious matter and at any time might lead to serious complications. The authorities believe they have a way of preventing any further extension of this abuse of a privilege.

The work of cancelling these improper utilized naturalization certificates will be greatly facilitated by the federal statute which requires American citizens residing in foreign countries to register each year at the office of the U. S. consul in the district where they reside. This congressional statute was made a law in 1909 and was intended to principally serve just the purpose to which it is now being applied in this connection.

RARE AMERICAN HUMOR.

Americans as a whole are noted the world over for their quaint humor. No doubt the reputation was handed along to them from the Yankee ancestors were credited with mingling humor, shrewdness and ability to hold anything within their grasp for all time. Maybe some of the former qualifications may have slipped from the average American within the past few decades, but every once in a while it crops. The latest contribution to this much tooted American attribute is the scene laid around New York, where an army of government employees are hanging around waiting to come in contact with one of the Rockefeller family, William by name to serve a subpeano upon him to appear before the money probe commission. Up to date the emissaries of the government have not been successful. They have seen the great man's doctor and have been jollied along. They have camped on the great man's doorsteps, front and back, and even some are on the coal lid. All this mind you at considerable expense. How long is the joke to continue? How long is one man, even if he is a millionaire, going to set the whole machinery of this country at defiance and make it the laughing stock of the world? Even if he is sick, he could accept service and no one would expect him to do the impossible In European countries they do things different, better and quick. When they want a man they know where to find him and they find him. When it comes to pass that one man is bigger and stronger than this entire government, it is about time to retire from the republic business and set up a side show to the money and trust bosses of the country.

GEORGE DID IT.

There was a good attendance at the weekly whist tournament at the rooms of the Granite City club Wednesday evening. The usual twenty-five hands of progressive whist played. The two souvenirs of the evening were carried home by Francis E. Wharton and George T. Magee. The usual lunch was served after the play.

HALL PLACE M. E.

great privilege of being present here tonight. I thought I was a Methodist dyed in the wool, but after hearing of the work done in the past by these heroic people I think otherwise.

"Some of his best friendships had been made in West Quincy, and while it had been his privilege to serve longer than any other pastor, except Father Kelley, he counted it a great honor to have had some small part in this great work, he felt like cheering Brother Martin and West Quincy. He complimented the choir on the singing of the Anthem and hoped God's richest blessing would rest on the Church during 1913.

A communication from Dillon Bronson, D. D. District superintendent was read expressing his regret at not being able to be present and hoping that 1913 will be a red letter year in history of Church.

Mrs. McSword, a sister of Rev. A. A. Brown was introduced and Mr. Martin spoke of his work at Youngstown, Ohio, where he is at present located.

Rev. A. B. Tyler was next welcomed as the pastor who stood second in the number of baptisms during his ministry. "Father Kelley" baptised 80 persons while Mr. Tyler baptized 25. Mr. Tyler spoke of the faithful work of William Williams, organist during his pastorate and of the pleasant times he had enjoyed here and sometimes wished he had come back to West Quincy. As that had not been possible he was glad to be present and wished the Church great success in the future.

Mrs. C. H. Raupach was called on and wished the Church great prosperity in the years to come.

A most interesting and beautiful letter was read from Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Spelman of New York, former teachers, part of which follows:

"Your letter announcing the 40th Anniversary of the forming of the Society at West Quincy, awakens a flood of delight and tender recollections. Please present my loving and joyous greeting to the redeemed of the Lord Jesus and the inheritors of His glory, as they shall gather for that happy celebration. I feel I can add but little to what you already know of the early history of the enterprise. I was not present at the first meeting in the Willard School. The ladies you have already named had canvassed and brought the constituency together and had called in to their assistance, that strong and loyal organizer Charles W. Carter." The letter goes on and gives intetresting details of the early history.

Rev. Mr. Martin spoke of the faithful work of Mr. Doble who for many years was treasurer of the Trustees and whose son had succeeded him in that office.

A letter was read from Mr. and Mrs. Mayo P. Fuller who were charter members of the Church.

Rev. Mr. Martin stated that Mrs. Martha Loud who now lives at East Milton, is the oldest living member of the Church. He urged the present members to be as faithful in their work as were these pioneer workers in this enterprise.

Owing to the lateness of the hour it was necessary to draw the celebration to a close as a large number were obliged to take cars or trains and make connections elsewhere.

Everyone seemed to thoroughly enjoy the evening and all voted it a most successful and interesting celebration.

The banquet was in charge of Mrs. Robert Newcomb with the following corps of efficient workers, Mrs. George Hawes, Mrs. James McCormick, Mrs. William McCormick, Mrs. F. L. Badger.

The vestry was prettily decorated with the season's colors, the decorations being in charge of Mrs. F. L. Badger and Mrs. T .C. Martin.

Following is a brief historical statement of the events and dates in the early history .

HISTORICAL DATES.

Sunday,—Sept 8th 1867— Sunday School organized in one of the anterooms of Willard School house, 5 P. M., about 50 present.

The day before, Saturday, Sept 7, Miss Carrie L. Rideout and Miss H. Eliza Hardwick (Burns) canvassed West Quincy and got 52 persons to agree to join a Sunday School if started.

Monday evening, Sept. 9,—Miss Rideout and Miss Nellie F. Nightingale (Bush) visited Jacob Eaton School committee to see if he would grant use of hall over Willard School for Sunday School.

Sunday Sept. 15, 1867—over 80 present. Mr. Carter, Supt. of Orthodox Church chosen to be Sunday School superintendent at West Quincy.

Sept. 16—Miss Nightingale collected $6.00 for the School in West Quincy.

Friday, 20—Sunday School Library set up.

Oct. 13. Sunday—First Sunday School concert.

Nov. 10. Sunday—100 present at Sunday School concert. Passed off well.

Nov. 24.—Sunday began to hold Sunday School in afternoon, probably at 2 P. M.

Dec. 8.—Concert, Miss Nightingale brought 6 books for her class.

April 28 A. M. 1872—First sermon preached by Rev. Samuel Kelley.

Sept. 6, 1872—Twelve persons formed class.

Jan. 1, 1873—Sunday School formally transferred to the care of Methodist people and church. ,

June 1873—Generous offer made towards building a Church.

July 14, 1873—First meeting of Board of Trustees. Building committee of 3 appointed.

Aug. 1st 1873—A subscription book was opened.

Dec. 15—Tuesday, 1874 Church dedicated. 49 members and probationers. 150 in Sunday School average attendance 90 to 100.

Among others the following prominent guests were present.

Mr. Hayward, superintendent and Rev. Mr. Willmott, pastor Bethany Congregational church, Rev. and Mrs C. H. Raupach of St. Andrew's Church Jamaica Plain, Mass, Rev. and Mrs. A B. Tyler of People's Church, Newburyport, Mrs. McSword of Portland Oregon, sister of Rev. A. A. Brown, Mrs. John A. Burns and R. D. Chase

The following improvements have been made:

During the pastorate of Rev. Mr Martin the entrance to the auditorium was remodelled. The choir gallery in the back of the church was walled in and one door in the center took the place of the two side doors. The pews were also re-arranged, making in addition to the two side aisles a good sized center aisle. The frescoing was retouched and Church carpeted and pews re-upholstered. The choir is now placed at the left of the pulpit.

While Rev. Carl H. Raupach was pastor of the Church, a new gas lighting system acetyiene gas having been previously used , was installed and imitation art glass windows were placed in the Church auditorium, the belfry and clock were repaired and the Church thoroughly painted on the outside.

Since Mr. Martin came to West Quincy the improvements have still further increased. In the spring of 1911 the men of the Church and community volunteered their services in the painting of the Parsonage. At the end of the first four months of his pastorate a debt of $370.00 was paid, a celebration being held Oct. 1, 1911, at which time the "Mortgage Note" was burned. Since then the cellar of the Parsonage has been cemented and a new cement walk has been built in front of the Parsonage. A new bath room has been built and a furnace and gas lights have been installed in the Parsonage. A new window has also been put in.

On the Church there have been larger improvements. A new cellar has been put in, with a good substantial wall, in the rear of the Church and the two furnaces, formerly in the vestry have been removed to the cellar. The entrance to this cellar is through the small vestry in the rear of the Church. In the vestibule of the Church one stairway has been removed and the other has been widened to double its former width, five new steps and a platform being built in here which adds to its attractiveness and convenience.

The doors have all been re-hung, so that they now open out to conform with the Fire Laws.

The tower room has also been cleaned and repaired and painted and could easily be used.

New curtains and song books have been purchased for the Sunday school. Twelve new chairs were recently presented to the choir and each chair bears the name of its owner. Twenyfour chairs were also presented to the Sunday school for the primary department.

Great hopes are entertained for the work of the next few months. The improvements are not yet completed but it is hoped they may be in a short time.

A number of interesting souvenirs of this early time were on exhibition.

MANY OFFERED WELL WISHES

At the Beaulieu-Hedman Wedding Wednesday Night

A quiet but pretty wedding took place Wednesday evening at the home of the bride on Common Street, the contracting parties being Miss Elizabeth Hedman and Mr. Alfred Beaulieu. The house was filled with relatives and friends and Rev. C. C. Tilley of the Calvary Baptist church officiated.

The bride looked well in a beautiful white messaline gown, trimmed with all-over lace and carried bridal roses.

The maid of honor, Miss Louise Johnson, wore a pink chiffon gown and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The best man was Wesley Beaulieu, a brother of the groom.

The couple received numerous gifts and hearty congratulations and best wishes were extended them during the evening. Fancy ices were served and the large wedding cake was cut by the bride and distributed to the guests.

The couple left amid showers of confetti for a brief wedding trip and will make their future home at 53 Buckley street.

OVERCOME BY ACID FUMES

Deputy Fire Chief Dead and Five Others In Critical Condition

Portland, Me., Jan. 2.—Deputy Fire Chief William H. Steele is dead and five other Portland firemen are in a critical condition, following poisoning by nitric acid fumes yesterday afternoon.

A carboy of the acid was spilled over the basement floor of the H. H. Hay drug store on Middle street, and the fire department was appealed to to wash the acid down the sewer. Deputy Steele, with a crew of men, went to the scene.

They succeeded in washing the acid away, but were overcome and had to be carried home. Acute pneumonia set in in Steele's case and he died last night.

Steele was 50 years old and had been in the department for years, handling many big blazes.

SEARCH IS KEPT UP

Prison Officials Looking For Tool Which Was Used by Pomeroy

Boston, Jan. 2.—Warden Bridges has renewed his search at state prison for the tool with which Jesse Pomeroy cut the steel bars of his cell and escaped into the corridor, despite Pomeroy's declaration that he had destroyed the implement he used.

The warden refuses to believe Pomeroy did not have an accomplice. Every man and cell in the prison will be searched, if necessary, to find the tool with which Pomeroy cut the bars.

Pomeroy declared it took him three years to cut the bars and that he threw the bits of the tool away. He refused to say how he had destroyed the implement.

Compressed Air Kills Two Men

Quincy, Mass., Jan. 2.—A rush of compressed air from a leaky tank at the wholesale granite plant of Reed and Vendret killed Napoleon Reed, a member of the firm, and his brother-in-law, Michael Lavoie.

Cleaned Out by Burglars

Stamford, Conn., Jan. 2.—F. R. Bruggerhok kept his family plate in a silver chest and hid the key in a steel safe, but a burglar, breaking the safe, took the key and then the silver.

EVENING SCHOOL.

The action of the School Committee Tuesday evening in voting to continue most of the industrial evening classes and the evening commercial and drawing classes for a term of 10 weeks will meet the hearty approval of the men and women who petitioned to the committee to do so. Over 300 men and women were enrolled in these classes in the high school alone during the fall term and there were about 35 more in the Lincoln School. The classes to be continued are those in monument design and in lettering at the Lincoln school and in commercial work, freehand and mechanical drawing, gear design, blue print reading for machinists, sheet metal design, plumbers drawing and exterminating firemens and engineers licenses and the two classes in dressmaking. All of these classes have shown splendid work and attendance and the success of the experiment is most pleasing to the School Committee.

EARLY DISMISSALS.

Attempts are occasionally made by parents to have their children excused from school regularly on certain days for individual purposes. These requests come sometimes in groups, sometimes by ones and twos. Such requests have always been refused by the School Committee as the granting of one such request would make it necessary to grant all. Pupils are frequently and almost alyways excused by the teachers in individual instances and at the parent's request, but as a regular daily or weeklly occurrence the excuse is never granted.

QUINCY SCHOOL MASTERS' CLUB.

At the regular meeting of the Quincy School masters club held Wednesday at the High school, J. G. Spofford, director of the independent industrial school gave a detailed explanation of the working of the school of which he was in charge. This proved of especial interest to the members of the club because of its novelty. It is worth recording that the school has practically reached the limit of its capacity and new applicants will have to be placed on the waiting list until next year when another teacher will be needed on the teaching force. It is hoped that with the next fall term, the old Adams school building will be available to take care of this school as well as the Adams evening school and the evening trade classes now cared for in the High school building.

All of the teachers of the city are pleased to hear that Dr. J. Gardner Smith, the director of physical training in the schools is making a speedy and happy recovery from his recent serious illness and will soon be back among the schools again.

Miss Maude Amsden the new supervisor of music comes from a similar position in the towns of Athol and Orange, where she has won great success in her work. In Athol especially the annual oratorio given by the High school chorus, with professional soloists is the musical event of the year, and is always of great musical worth.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

A few days before the Christmas vacation, under the auspices of the benevolent committee of the Parent-Teachers' association, with Miss Clara E. Thayer in charge, a large quantity of preserves, cereals, apples, oranges potatoes, squashes, onions, etc., were donated by the children to people less fortunate.

The many friends of Miss Dora Start were very sorry to learn of her father's death during the Christmas vacation. Miss Start will not return for a few weeks. Miss Mabel Reardon is in charge of her room.

MANUAL TRAINING ROOM.

The boys of grade VIII have completed the plans for a manual training room to be built in the boy's basement. They have not only made working drawings, but have figured the amount of lumber and the cost. They hope to begin the actual work of erecting a partition, flooring, and building benches very soon. The boys will donate their work to the school.

MASS. FIELDS SCHOOL.

The regular meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association will be held in the school corridor this evening at 7.45 o'clock. Chas. H. Johnson of Quincy, will give his illustrated lecture on "Washington, The Great American." Soloist Master Roger Allen, M. F. S., '11, accompanist Miss Gertrude Allen. Bugle call by Mr. Ernest Pletsch. All are welcome.

DIPHTHERIA.

A large number of children are absent because of a rumor of many cases of diphtheria in the Massachusetts Fields school. The situation has been very much exaggerated as there have been only five families affected within the last five weeks. In one case no child of the family was in school. Another child was taken ill during the vacation when she had not attended the school for over a week.

The school physician is using every precaution to prevent its spread and parents have no cause for alarm.

Guests Would Be in Own Homes to Welcome the New Year

A pretty wedding took place at the home of the officiating clergyman, Rev. A. M. Thompson Tuesday evening. The contracting parties were George Bryson and Miss Margaret Milne formerly of Lochee, Scotland. The bridesmaid was Miss Mary Doble and the best man was Thomas Williamson both formerly from Ayrshire, Scotland. The bride was prettily attired in pale blue silk with trimmings of lace and satin and looked charming. The bridesmaid looked equally pretty in a beautiful gown of white net trimmed in lace. Miss Le Drew and Mrs. Lane friends of the bridal party were present and witnessed the ceremony. After the marriage they all left by taxi for Quincy Point, where a reception was held for them at the home of Mrs. Kerr, where they participated in tripping the light fantastic until near midnight after which they all hurried to their respective homes, in order to carry out a very nice Scottish custom of each person always trying to be in his own home to welcome the incoming of the New Year. Mr. and Mrs. Bryson will reside in Quincy.

City Candidates Have Not Yet Told How Much It Cost

Up to this noon the candidates for municipal offices a month ago have not filed the return of their expenses as required by law. The time for filing these expenses expires tomorrow. City Clerk Crane said this morning that he should notify all candidates today of their omission. The filing is usually done by the candidates. Some however fail to do so but as there is no penalty on this score, nothing can be done.

CHRISTMAS PARTY FOR BIG FOLKS

A Christmas party for the scholars in the senior department and for all the teachers of the Sunday school of Christ church will be held at the parish house this evening. Dickens Christmas Carol illustrated by stereopticon views will be one of the attractions. The Rector and Sunday school superintendent will attend.

RIVERSIDE CLUB.

The Quincy Women's Riverside club commenced New Years in an enjoyable manner at the club house Wednesday afternoon by serving a dinner at noon to the members. The menu consisted of chicken salad, escalloped oysters, baked beans, rolls, pies, olives, coffee tea and fruit.

A public whist was held from 2.30 until 4 P. M. seven tables being in play.

The success of the affair was due largely to the efforts of Mrs. Bradford Hayden and Mrs. George E. Sprague, who were assisted by the members.

CASTRO DOESN'T LIKE US

Government Officials Glad He Is to Recross the Ocean

New York, Jan. 2.—General Cipriano Castro, one-time President of Venezuela and defier of the civilized world, will probably sail for Hamburg on the liner America Saturday. He declines to stay in the United States owing to the official attitude he met with on his arrival from France.

When the Touraine was steaming up the bay, Castro was taken off by immigration officials and carried to Ellis island. Angered at the treatment, Castro expressed a desire to be allowed to go to Germany. He refused to accept any mail, telegrams or newspapers, or to receive visitors.

With the decision of Castro to return, the incident is closed, and the difficulty of the department of state and the department of commerce and labor as to how to deal with the South American "stormy petrel" overcome.

BOARD OF TRADE DIRECTORS

Meet and Report Good Financial Showing For Year

CO-OPERATION ON TRAFFIC

A meeting of the board of Directors of the Board of Trade was held Wednesday evening. Among those present was Arthur H. Andrews, president of the Brockton Chamber of Commerce who came to solicit the aid of the Quincy Board of Trade in common with similar organizations throughout the state in the interest of better railroad transportation and more sanitary cars and conditions about the railroad depots.

The Directors went over the books of the secretary and treasurer and found the condition most satisafctory. All dues for the 1912 with the exception of $10 has been paid and this amount has been promised before the annual meeting. It was also found that all bills of the year had been paid and that there was a balance in the treasury.

The annual meeting of the Board will be held next Wednesday evening. At this meeting the reports of the various officers will be made and officers for the year 1913 elected. Action will also be taken on a proposed change in the by-laws. The proposed change provides that the annual dues shall continue at $5 per year instead of $10 as decided upon when the new by-laws were adopted last year.

FINE MUSICAL TREAT GIVEN

By Local Artists Assisted by Capable Choirs

The sacred concert, given under the auspices of the music committee at Bethany church Wednesday evening, was an unqualified success. A large audience was present, and the "Holy City" by A. R. Gaul was rendered by superior talent, as follows: Emma Shufeldt Moore, soprano; Dorothy McTaggart Miller, contralto; Edward E. Bullock, tenor, Albert E. Hayden, baritone; Roscoe R. Ricker, violinist; Daisy Bemis Sampson, pianist; Agnes B. Ruggles, organist.

The church choir was assisted by the girls vested choir of Bethany church and Emmanuel church, Braintree, making a grand chorus of 40 voices, and was especially pleasing. Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Miller sang with their usual grace and ability, their voices blending harmoniously and coming forth pure and true on the high notes. Mr. Bullock possesses a fine tenor voice and sings with great expression. Mr. Hayden's powerful voice, so well modulated for in the softer portions, he displays the sympathy of a true artist, was heard to advantage. Mrs. Sampson, Miss Ruggles and Mr. Ricker interpreted the various difficult passages of the program very effectively and marked ability.

The committee is to be congratulated for its very superior entertainment.

LITTLE FOLKS PARTY.

Miss Marjory C. England, gave a New Year's party to her little friends at her home, 4 Highland avenue, Wednesday afternoon. The little folks enjoyed games, music and refreshments and every one had a jolly good time. Miss Marjory made a jolly little hostess and she was ably assisted by her sister, Miss Dorothy England.

DISTRICT COURT.

The continued case of John J. Craig for the larceny of a pung was heard. He was fined $15. Appealed and held in $300 bonds for the grand jury.

John Clark, Kula Hutula, Jerrimiah Bizzozero and Antonio Coucheis were arraigned for alleged neglecting to send their children to school. Cases continued until Feb. 20.

John J. Doyle of Randolph who was sentenced last week to three months in the house of correction for carrying a firearm at Randolph and appealed was brought into court and withdrew his appeal and took his sentence.

THE WOMAN'S BRIGADE

A Story of A. D. 1946

By SUSAN YOUNG PORTER

During the first and second decades of the twentieth century the women of England and America determined to wrest the vote for themselves from selfish man. The principal argument used against them was: "If you are citizens in one respect you must be citizens in all respects. If you are voters you must be soldiers."

The women triumphed. But their securing the vote brought about that which in the beginning they had not intended. Having proved their courage and endurance, they were forced to do military service. The more delicate women could not be induced to go to the polls. This gave the men a majority, and an act was passed by congress requiring military service from women as well as men.

To the surprise of every one, they sprang forward with alacrity. That aggressive spirit which had led many of them to smash windows led them to enlist, and the woman's brigade of the United States army was organized and placed under the command of women officers. The corps had hardly been completed when the anarchic condition of Mexico rendered intervention necessary, and the Mexican war of 1846 was repeated. The woman's brigade was sent with other troops by sea to Vera Cruz and began a rapid march toward the capital.

Almost on the exact ground on which was fought a century before the battle of Buena Vista another fight occurred between the Mexicans and Americans, in which the women took a conspicuous part. But, unfortunately for General Pollywottle, the American commander, it was his first fight with such an auxiliary, and he was utterly ignorant of certain provisions he should have made to guard against contingencies to which they were liable.

In this respect the Mexican commander, Antonio Rodriguez Bustamento, proved greatly the American's superior. The Mexicans were drawn up in line of battle to resist the advance of the Americans, who hurled themselves against their enemy with great vigor. The woman's brigade, being a part of the reserve, stood under arms, impatiently waiting to be led forward. Colonel Amanda Patterson of the First regiment sat her horse superbly, resplendent in a uniform cut and decorated in a fashion that excited the admiration and envy of the whole corps. Major Mildred Fortescue rode over to Colonel Patterson to ask her who was her tailor. Colonel Patterson refused to give the information. This led to hot words between the two, in which many of their subordinates joined, and before long their shrill words could be heard above the singing bullets and shrieking shells.

"For heaven's sake," roared the American commander to an aid, "send those women into the fight! Our men can't hear the orders for the din they make, and there'll be a panic. Order their general to lead them against the enemy's left flank and turn it if possible. Should they succeed the battle is won."

General Angelina De Lancy, a young commander of whom much was expected, as soon as she received the order, drawing her sword, swung it over her head. Unfortunately she severed two ostrich feathers worth a hundred dollars each, and so unnerved was she that valuable time was lost. When she recovered from the loss of her treasures she directed her bugler to sound the advance.

Now, General Bustamento, as I have said, had great experience with women, having been married seven times, which is once more than King Henry VIII., and had prepared an expedient for them which, on seeing their line move forward, he put into operation.

"What is that the enemy are firing from those mortars?" asked the American commander, raising his glass.

"They look like paper shells," remarked his chief of staff.

Great wads of paper rose in the air and, breaking apart, were scattered on the ground over which the woman's brigade was passing. Here and there a soldier in the ranks picked up one and became absorbed in reading something printed and looking at pictures on it.

"Great heavens!" cried General Pollywottle, "they are stopping to pick up the papers. The advance is delayed. Precious time is being lost."

Presently an officer from the woman's brigade was seen riding full gallop toward the commander in chief. When she came up she saluted and said:

"General De Lancy directs me to report that the enemy have fired a volley of fashion plates with descriptive articles among the troops. This has checked the advance and she is unable to induce them to advance farther. They are poring over the papers and are insensible even to danger. General De Lancy respectfully suggests that you send another force to turn the enemy's flank."

Words that sounded like a volley from a gatling gun left the general's lips. There were no other troops to send in place of the woman's brigade, and General Bustamento, seeing his advantage, sounded a general advance. The battle was lost. Within ten minutes the American army was in full retreat. The Mexicans passed the woman's brigade, still intent on the fashion plates and cut them off.

The corps became disorganized, many of the soldiers marrying Mexicans.

M'CARTHY HAS IT ALL HIS OWN WAY

Referee Stops Fight With Palzer In Eighteenth Round

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 2.—Luther McCarthy of Springfield, Mo., shattered the heavyweight championship ambitions of Al Palzer, the Iowa giant, at the Vernon arena. For nearly eighteen rounds he used the huge frame of the Iowan as a punching bag.

The middle of the eighteenth round found Palzer staggering blindly about under a volley of lefts to his battered face, and when Referee Eyton walked between the men and hoisted the right hand of the smiling cowboy pugilist, the decision was received with cheers.

McCarthy's victory, following his defeat three weeks ago of Jim Flynn, places him at the top of the list of white heavyweights. McCarthy has announced he would never fight a negro.

Palzer, in spite of his superior height, weight and reach, was no match for the cool-headed, agile youngster. He literally stumbled through the fight, assimilating awful punishment, and his rushes were wholly ineffective. He scarcely landed a clean blow throughout the fight.

Jury Unable to Agree In the Case of Los Angeles' "Human Bomb"

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 2.—Although Carl Riedelbach, the "human bomb," has expected a conviction, and warned the authorities that he intended to escape if possible, the jury which heard his case disagreed and was discharged.

Riedelbach was remanded to await a second trial. His attorneys said they hoped to prove Riedelbach was insane when he threatened to dynamite the city jail.

Miners Had Been Entombed In Colliery Nearly Forty Hours

Tamaqua, Pa., Jan. 2.—After being imprisoned behind a fall of coal, rock and other mine refuse, eight of the nine men entombed in the colliery of the East Lehigh Coal company, near here, were rescued alive last night.

The other man, Joseph Walters, is missing, and is believed to have been killed. The men were imprisoned nearly forty hours.

SYMPHONY HALL CONCERT.

The concert at Symphony hall Sunday afternoon, Jan. 5 will be given by Clara Butt, the most sensational contralto of modern times, assisted by the popular English baritone, Kennerley Rumford. Clara Butt is an extraordinarily beautiful woman, over six feet in height with wonderful stately grace She has a voice which is in every sense appropriate to her wonderful physique. It is a great, mellow, rich and noble contralto that is said to be more nearly akin to the diapason of the cathedral organ than any human voice now known. Madame Butt is today the best beloved of English singers. Every Good Friday she sings to an audience of twenty-five thousand in Chrystal Palace, London. Recently she made a tour of Australia and South Africa where her audiences averaged four thousand for each concert, something that even Paderewski has never done. In her programme she has placed by special request Liddle's beautiful hymn "Abide with Me" which she will sing with harp and organ accompaniment. The programme in full is as follows with Harold Craxton as accompanist:

TWO GATE MEN AT SOUTH QUINCY

Claimed They Will Be Appointed By Railroad

William Kelley is circulating a petition to the New Haven railroad asking that two gate men be placed on the Water street grade crossing at South Quincy. Mr. Kelley says that he was informed by the railroad officials that if he got a certain number of signers to a petition that the request would be granted. The crossing is one of the most dangerous along the main line and in addition to the many fatal accidents that have occurred at this point there have been innumerable narrow escapes. With two gate men, one on each side, the liability of accident would be reduced to a minimum.

"GENUINE GERMANS."

The tenth annual New Year's entertainment and dance of the "Genuine Germans" was held at the home of Mrs. John H. Anderson of 159 Whitwell street. A novel start was when the guests were carried to the place of rendezvous in automobiles operated by masked drivers.

The program started with a collation to Hostess, next a clever sketch "Polly's Predicament" was portrayed by Misses Alice Gurney and Edith Caspisan and there was a solo by Miss Ena Benson, piano selection by Miss Edith Caspisan. Refreshments and ices were then served. A quartette of Miss Mary Gurney, Miss Violet Caspisan, Donald Gurney and William Anderson sang the old year out.

Fancy dancing in cosutme by Miss Helen E. J. Gurney was next enjoyed. An interesting address on "New Year Resolutions was given by Miss Margaret Beaton after which the guests adjourned to the reception hall where the Christmas tree was enjoyed. An ancient German custom was practiced when at 12 o'clock each of the guests were supplied with a bible, opened the book at random and the first sentence that they saw is supposed to be the prediction for the New Year. Dancing was enjoyed until 3 o'clock after which the guests departed in a happy frame of mind, dragging the despoiled Christmas tree behind one of the carriages. Many of the guests were from out of town. Among them Misses Violet and Edith Caspisan of South Boston, Margaret Beaton of Lawrence; Ena Benson, of Baltimore, Md., Ena Reitz of Washington, D. C. Bert Whalen of Lynn, formerly of Quincy; Alfred Caspisan of Revere; Elmer Tucker of Carteret, N. J., and Herman LeRoy of Roxbury, formerly of Quincy.

FIFTY YEARS A NEWSBOY

In that Time George E. Mellen Travelled 5,000,000 Miles

Fifty years ago Wednesday, George E. Mellen, of Quincy commenced selling papers. He is now the veteran news dealer on Cape Cod trains.

"I guess I'll keep on selling them," he said "If my health remains as good as it now. I think that I can safely say that I'm the oldest 'newsboy' in point of service around this part of the country without fear of contradiction, and I don't believe there are many others as long in the game in the world."

Everyone who travels to the Cape in the Summer, and in the Winter for that matter, knows him, and he knows about everyone that knows him. Many Governors, Congressmen and State officials have known him for a long time. He has travelled about 5,000,000 miles.

Mr. Mellen is a man who has worked seven days a week all his life. On Sundays he takes the 7.38 train from Boston for Provincetown, arriving there at 12:05, and he leaves at 2:25 reaching Boston at 7.09, making a fairly long day's work especially when it is remembered that he has to come in from his home at 213 Independence avenue, Quincy, every morning and go back there after he gets in at night.

On week days Mr. Mellen takes the 7:38 train and goes as far as Yarmouth and then takes the 10:13 train back to Boston, arriving at 12:52. In the Summer he also takes the 1:38 in the afternoon, coming back on the Cape express which reaches Boston at 7 o'clock in the evening, but this Winter he has given up this trip.

Having been on trains every day for the last 50 years, Mr. Mellen has had many varied experiences. He was on the Cape train that was wrecked near the Dimmock street, Bridge in Quincy more than 20 years ago, when 25 persons were killed, among them Patsy Regan, the well-known oarsman, who was a personal friend.

He was also in the Randolph wreck, when the "Centennial Special" hit a freight train. The car he was in jumped a stone wall, but with the rare good fortune that always attended him, he escaped injury. Mr. Mellen has been stalled by snowstorms on the Cape so many times that he has forgotten the number.

He is no relation to President Charles S. Mellen of the New Haven Road, although he has been asked that question many times. He was born in Stoughton in June, 1853, and went to work selling papers on the train which ran between Boston and Randolph before he reached his 10th birthday. John Cross was the general news agent in those days and Mr. Mellen worked for him for 10 years until J. F. Murphy took up the business. For the past 40 years he has worked for Mr. Murphy.

When Mr. Mellen was 17 y ears old, he was put in the Fall River Line, running by train to Fall River and then on the boat to New York. After doing this for two years he was transferred to the trains on the Cape, where he has been ever since. In those days he used to take his trains at the Old Colony Station on Kneeland street.

In 1882 he was married to Josephine Eldredge of East Weymouth and they lived in Braintree and East Braintree until four years ago, when she died. Since then Mr. Mellen has lived in Quincy. He has one son.

VARYING TASTE IN DECORATION.

Reprinted from the Dutch Boy Painter magazine published by National Lead Company.

A few years ago very little thought was given to the exterior of the moderately priced house, and even much less to the interior. The planning of a house was considered more from the standpoint of convenience and economy than beauty and artistic effect. Regardless of the style of the house each member of the family was apt to have some special idea, which he wanted carried out, and in order to adopt them the original plan was subjected to many changes. Starting in the beginning with very little attention paid to the type of its architecture, and with additions such as a corner bay window here and a tower there, the result was a mongrel type of a house that had no beauty and was oftentimes an object of horror to those sensitive to the good and harmonious.

While this was true of the exterior the crimes committed in the name of interior decoration were even more atrocious. We recall with a shudder the day of the over-decorated, stuffy "den," which at one time was considered the acme of elegance (save the mark!). The usual color of the den was red, brilliant and warm, and it was called cozy and comfortable because of this warmness of coloring. Heavy draperies and dark furnishings added to this "warmth." Walls were hung with pipes, brasses, plaques and oriental lanterns. Ginger jars and wooden shoes were used for match receivers, and in some instances, where great originality was striven for, a gruesome replica of the skull of poor Yorick, or some other member of the human family, grinned at one from some dark corner where it served the lowly purpose of holding tobacco. In fact, in every conceivable corner something was hung up to be ornamental regardless of its fitness.

Couch pillows of all sizes and shapes covered with all sorts of designs, such as Indian beads, canoes, beetles, and even spiders in their webs, expressed the prevailing idea of art. "Den" was an appropriate name for this sort of room—"cozy corner" a misnomer, while "chamber of horrors" would have been more fitting than either.

Most of us followed this extreme of fashion. The pendulum of progress had swung too far. It had produced the grotesque. Fortunately the past few years have brought about great changes in individual taste in homes both on the exterior and the interior. Decorator and architect have done great service in educating the people up to the higher standards and much attention is devoted to harmonizing the interior decoration with the type of home always keeping in mind that the incongruous is to be avoided as the plague.

During this process of change, however, the eagerness to advance was the very thing that brought the Ornate Age upon us. The pendulum of progress had received a vigorous push and it had swung too far out of its normal arc and over ornamentation was the result.

Elaboration both in decoration and furnishing was the fashion. Bright colored wall papers with large, bold designs were considered fashionable. No attention was paid to harmony in the treatment of walls. The desire seemed to be to have as many different colors in different rooms as possible.

These elaborate and extreme effects existed in furniture and architecture as well, and after years of massiveness and showiness the pendulum now marks the time of higher ideals in art and more cultivated taste.

The decorator who has not followed this change and who does not realize that the age of simplicity in all forms of decoration is upon us, has missed the hand-writing on the wall and his success may well be questioned.

Dwellings now have a certain individual type and artistic interior are demanded. Artistic feeling is the keynote of success now, both within and without the home.

Extreme types of decoration may have their place, but one soon tires of them, and the home must be of a type that will stand the test of time and still be beautiful.

Also the houses built to-day are dependent upon the skill of the decorator both outside and inside, for their real beauty. Appropriate colors for outside painting are just as essential as the colors chosen for the wood trim or walls inside.

Surroundings should be considered as well as the type of house for exterior painting. Never advise the use of a color because you like it nor because it is desirable alone, but consider its relation to other houses around it. If this is followed out it will make certain localities very artistic and beautiful.

Craftsman houses and odd bungalows will have their day. People may like them now, but it is an extreme type and will become tiresome in course of time. The uncompromising squareness in the craftsman style, with its small wall space, does not permit of much artistic decoration.

Interiors with heavy woodwork and heavy rafters, unless in spacious buildings, will become depressing. Imagine living in a room with heavy beams over one's head, and at no greater height than ten or twelve feet! Such rooms are contrary to nature. They are confining and in small interiors the feeling of weight overhead creates an unpleasant effect.

Interiors should be handled so as not to impart the feeling of limitation or confinement. Walls should not be treated as boundaries but as backgrounds for the furnishings (just as in a picture the background should never seem to be there). Walls should serve as a setting for the rest of the room.

This is a most important feature in decorating. Study carefully this first principle.

WELCOMED THE NEW YEAR

Pleasant Gathering at the Mischler Home

A watch party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Mischler, Whitwell street, New Year's Eve. Among those present were Misses Agnes, Gertrude (Trudy) Bessie and Walter Deane, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Lauton, Mr. Charles Parker, Leo Martin, of Cambridge the famous minstrel man and William Rowe of Portland, Me., now visiting in Newton. A trio offered a few of the popular songs consisting of Mr. Parker with the tambo, Mr. Martin wiith the bones, Joseph Mischler with a banjo assisted by Al Lauton at the piano. Singing and playing was enjoyed until midnight when a buffet lunch was served. The party broke up in the wee small hours with much cheering for the coming year.

FRILLS ARE ABOLISHED

Customary Display at Inauguration of New York's Governor Omitted

Albany, Jan. 2.—William Sulzer was inaugurated forty-second governor of New York. In his inaugural address Sulzer promised "an honest, an efficient, an economical and a business-like administration of public affairs."

At the new executive's request, there was no military display, which formerly had been a feature of inaugural day. There was, instead, but a small procession from the executive mansion to the capitol, made up of the incoming and retiring governors and their staffs and the commanders of both the land and water branches of the state militia and their staffs. The customary governor's salute of nineteen guns was omitted also.

FALSE WORK GIVES WAY UNDER BRIDGE

Train Goes Into River and Eight Men Are Killed

Huntington, W. Va., Jan. 2.—Eight men were killed and fifteen injured when a freight train on the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad went through a bridge over the Guyandotte river, three miles from here.

A crew of thirty or more iron workers were employed in repairing the bridge when the freight train appeared on the main track. Some of them believing the structure to have been weakened left their posts, but others laughed at danger and were carried down with the wreckage when the bridge collapsed under the weight of the train. The fireman of the engine refused to cross the bridge and witnessed the accident.

False work had been placed under the bridge while the repairs were being made and those in charge believed it to be safe for railway travel. But the river had risen and it is reported so weakened the false work that it collapsed, allowing the bridge to go down.

AFTER THREAT TO RESUME WAR

Turks Capitulate to Majority of Demands of Allies

ENVOYS' MOMENTOUS SITTING

Ottoman Delegates Agree to Cede Practically Whole of European Turkey After Representatives of Balkans Express Themselves In No Uncertain Manner

London, Jan. 2.—After the protracted diplomatic skirmishing and a threat by the allies to renew hostilities, the Turks finally capitulated to a majority of the demands of the Balkan allies at yesterday's session of the peace conference.

Through Rechad Pasha they agreed to cede practically the whole of the Ottoman empire's European dominions, except Adrianople and the territory between it and Constantinople, to their victorious but traditionally despised neighbors.

The terms the Turkish delegates presented to the conference as a counter proposal to the demands of the allies were:

First: The ratification of the Turko-Bulgarian frontier by making the boundary west of the line now occupied by the troops of the allies in the vilayet of Adrianople.

Second: The question of the status of Adrianople to be settled by Turkey and Bulgaria direct.

Third: The cession of the remainder of European Turkey, including Janina and Scutari, to the allies.

Fourth: The Albanian and Cretan questions to be solved by the powers.

Fifth: The Ægean islands to remain Turkish.

The announcement of these terms was wrung from the Ottoman delegates with the greatest difficulty. They came only after Rechad Pasha had reiterated Turkey's desire to shift the responsibility for adjudicating all the vital questions to the great powers and the representatives of the allies had registered the unchangeable objections to such a course and plainly had given the Turks to understand that the failure of the Ottoman delegates to embark upon serious negotiations would mean a resumption of hostilities in southeastern Europe.

The meeting of the envoys was interrupted suddenly yesterday afternoon by Michael Madjaroff, the Bulgarian minister in London, who is acting as a Bulgarian delegate, rising and leaving after making the statement that he was going to the British foreign office to inform the authorities there that the allies were going to resume the war.

When the session was formally opened the Turks presented practically the same proposals as they had put forward at the last meeting.

The envoys of Bulgaria, Greece, Montenegro and Servia rose in indignation and volubly protested against this trifling by Turkey. Madjaroff took the lead in the protest by declaring the action of the Turks was indecent. It was, he said, an insult to bring the peace delegates to London simply to tell them to leave everything to be settled by the European powers. Madjaroff then quit the hall.

The peace negotiations, which have dragged on without definite results, took on a new interest when the conference was resumed. It was realized by both the Ottoman delegates and the envoys of the Balkan allies that a critical stage had been reached. Premier Venizelos, the head of the Greek delegation, presided.

Before gathering at St. James palace the Balkan representatives definitely decided not to give their collective remonstrances to Turkey the character of an ultimatum, in order to avoid anything that might produce the impression that they wished to break off the negotiations. If the negotiations were broken they realize that the responsibility would rest on the party which had decided to commit itself to definite terms.

Most of the delegates from the Balkans visited Paul Cambon, the French ambassador, and asked him to urge at the meeting of the ambassadors today a more active attitude on the part of the triple entente in favor of the allies.

Whatever course is taken by Turkey, it is believed that the moment has arrived for action. The situation at Adrianople is becoming desperate, and should the city fall the position of the Turks would be worse than it is now. When Adrianople was besieged it had provisions sufficient for about three months. These will be exhausted in two weeks, and even admitting that horses and other animals may be used as food, it is thought that the city will not be able to hold out against hunger after the end in January.

The Kitchen Cupboard

SOUPS FOR THE SEASON.

SOUPS that will give relish to the winter bill of fare are a valuable aid to the housewife. Nothing so quickly warms and revives the tired, cold human as a nice nourishing soup daintily served at just the right temperature.

Winter vegetables suggest themselves as the most popular ingredients for these soups, but cereals, such as rice or barley, or dried vegetables may take their places.

Vegetables With a Cereal.

Cabbage and Rice Soup.—Take half a small white cabbage, remove all the stalk and cut the leaves in pieces. Put these with half a cupful of washed rice into two quarts of light stock and add half a can of tomato soup. Season to taste.

Cauliflower Cream Soup.—Take a pint of the stock in which cauliflower was boiled. To it add two cups of boiling milk, one teaspoonful of onion juice, one teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper and a tablespoonful each of butter and flour rubbed together and the outside leaves of the cauliflower which have been boiled until tender and chopped very fine. Boil five minutes, stir well and dust with paprika.

A Delicious Cream Soup.

Cream of Celery Soup.—Take a pint of white stock, a pint and a half of celery cut in inch pieces, two cupfuls of boiling water, one slice of onion, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, two cupfuls of milk, one cupful of cream, salt and pepper to taste. Parboil the celery in water ten minutes, drain, add stock, and cook until celery is soft and rub through a sieve. Scald an onion in milk, remove the onion, add milk to the stock, add cream and season with salt and pepper.

Barley Soup.—Take a pound of the neck of lamb, wash and put it on to boil with two quarts of cold water, two tablespoonfuls of cut onion, two tablespoonfuls of carrot cut small, one tablespoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful pepper. Boil slowly half an hour, remove the meat and strain the stock. To it add two tablespoonfuls of well washed barley. Chop the boiled carrot fine and add to the soup. Pick the meat from the neck of the lamb and chop fine and add it also. One tablespoonful of caramel and one tablespoonful of chopped parsley are added to make a very nutritious and wholesome soup.

MYSTERY IN WOMAN'S DEATH

Probable Victim of Apoplectic Fit, According to Doctors

THE POLICE THINK OTHERWISE

Doubt That Young Woman Died on Lonely Road Where She Was Found —Young Prize Fighter Will Be Asked to Explain His Whereabouts In Connection With Death

Boston, Jan. 2.—The body of a young woman found dead near the Holy Cross cemetery in Malden yesterday afternoon was identified last night as that of Mrs. Mildred Donovan of Revere, and her last known companion was James B. Jennings, a prize fighter, better known as "Kid" Carter, who was arrested yesterday afternoon for shooting William McPherson in a South End barroom.

The double tragedy in the life of the young fighter was fraught with the most remarkable chain of incidents.

Mrs. Donovan's body, found by a teamster by the roadside on Lynn street, Malden, in one of the most lonely sections before the road stretches into the Lynn marshes, was identified by her father-in-law.

Jennings has admitted he left the woman's house in Revere Tuesday night. He has told the police he left her company in Linden square, which is half a mile from the place where the body was discovered. The Malden police assert they believe the body had been carried to the spot where it was found.

Medical Examiner Durell, who performed the autopsy with Dr. Swan and Professor Whitney of Harvard college, has issued a statement in which he says the woman, who was 22 years of age, probably died from an apoplectic fit or some violent nervous attack producing a similar result.

This report, made late in the afternoon, turned the efforts of the police in the direction of identification, although marks on the woman's throat indicate that some person, perhaps the woman herself, clutched her throat while suffering from an attack.

Another point which the police wish to clear is the report that Jennings took the woman to a dance in the South End Tuesday night instead of taking her to his sister's home in Everett, as he stated to the officials.

Witnesses who know the fighter make the allegation that, with Mrs. Donovan, he got off a car at Glendale square, Everett, and walked over the hill on Broadway to Lynn street in the early morning hours.

The police are also working on a theory that there may be a connection between the shooting of McPherson in the barroom row and that behind the strange case lies a romance in which the eternal triangle figured and ended with the tragedies.

Mrs. Donovan left her home, 102 Otis street, Revere, Tuesday night in company with Jennings. When she did not return yesterday morning they became alarmed and notified the Revere police.

Daniel J. Hayes and Samuel Parks, two team drivers, found the body by the lonely roadside. It was of striking physical appearance, and the garments were those of a person who dressed with taste and some refinement. They telephoned the Everett police, who immediately notified the Malden police, and Lieutenant Powers and Inspector Greenleaf were sent to the scene. The examination was under way when Dr. Durell arrived and ordered the body removed to the undertaking rooms of A. N. Ward in Malden.

Jennings has told the police he was going to take Mrs. Donovan to the home of his sister in Everett, and that he left her in Linden square. From that time, set by him at an early hour in the evening, he disclaims any knowledge of her movements.

Mrs. Donovan was married seven years ago and has a little daughter. Lately, it is said, her married life has not run as smoothly as it might, and recently she decided upon seeking action for divorce.

WANTED FOR TWO MURDERS

Admission of Man Under Arrest For Shooting Another

Boston, Jan. 2.—William H. McPherson was shot four times in a liquor saloon on Washington street, and it is believed his wounds will prove fatal. His assailant, James B. Jennings, a prize fighter, is under arrest.

According to Jennings' story of the affair there were several men in the saloon yesterday afternoon, and he claims a gang attacked him and tried to rob him. He was struck a blow in the face and knocked down, whereupon he pulled his revolver and shot.

The police say Jennings told them he was 23 years old and was born in San Francisco, but had no home. He admitted, they say, he is wanted for two murders.

British Cruiser Has Body of Late Ambassador Reid on Board

Newport, R. I., Jan. 2.—The British cruiser Natal, bearing the body of Whitelaw Reid, United States ambassador to Great Britain, passed the Nantucket Shoals lightship early this morning.

The battleships Florida and North Dakota and the destroyers Roe, Drayton, McCall and Paulding met the Natal off the lightship, and will convoy her to her anchorage in the North river, New York. Rear Admiral Fiske is in command of this squadron.

The radio station transmitted to Washington wireless messages from the Natal to the naval attache to the British embassy.

ENDED THE COMEDY.

A Telegraphic Dialogue That Closed With the "Wires" Down.

Two telegraph operators were seated in a downtown cafe recently when an athletic young man and an exceedingly pretty girl entered. They were placed at a table opposite the "key" men, who were sitting side by side in a position facing the girl. As is the custom of the craft when wishing to discuss some one in a public place, they telegraphed to each other, using their knives on the plate.

"Peacherino, isn't she?" one ticked to the other.

"A tree full," came back the tapping reply. "Wonder who the sack is with her?"

"Search me—looks like a boob tied up with a wren like her."

"Bet they aren't married. If they are, all she needs to do to get a divorce is to exhibit that map of his in court."

While the two men were enjoying a laugh over their silent joking they were surprised and somewhat alarmed to hear some more "table knife telegraphy." The "peacherino" was doing it, and she did not look at all pleased, either.

"You two had better look out while you are all together," carelessly ticked her knife blade while she listened to something her companion was saying. "This sack and boob, as you called him, with the divorce map, is my husband—safe mover by trade. He eats fresh little boys."

Something happened to the "wires" about that time, and all communication ceased.—Kansas City Journal.

TO BE GIVEN PAROLE

THEIR IDENTITY LOST IN PRISON

Dynamiters Will Be Called by Number During Confinement

THIRTY-THREE ARE IN PRISON

Higgins Collapses on Train on Way From Indianapolis—Ryan the Oldest of Group, and Wachtmeister Has Eight Children—All Quickly Enrolled as Convicts

Leavenworth, Jan 2.—The thirty-three labor union officials sentenced at Indianapolis for complicity in the McNamara dynamite plots have been formally enrolled as convicts.

As Frank M. Ryan, president of the Iron Workers' International union; Olaf A. Tveitmoe, the Pacific coast leader; Herbert S. Hockin, John T. Butler and the others stepped from the special train which brought them from Indianapolis they were taken in charge by the prison authorities. New Year's day thus found the labor leaders beginning in the federal penitentiary here punishments for their connection with crimes for which the McNamara brothers, confessed dynamiters, are serving terms in the state prison at San Quentin, Cal.

The prisoners were taken by rail directly to the prison grounds. Within an hour after arrival each prisoner had been subjected to a haircut and garbed in the prison uniform. Most of the new prisoners are iron workers, and it is understood the warden is to put them on the construction of buildings. Tveitmoe is the only one of the convicted men not affiliated with the Iron Workers' union, and it is expected he will be given clerical work. Ryan may be given similar work, because of his age and his physical condition.

It was a memorable trip which brought the prisoners over the 570 miles from Indianapolis. The train was guarded at windows and doors, all the curtains being drawn and no one being permitted to give out any word as to the happenings within.

F. J. Higgins of Boston, former New England organizer for the Iron Workers' union, became unconscious on the train, and was placed in the physician's care. He is sentenced to two years. When the prisoners were registered it was found that Ryan, aged 58, was the oldest, and Fred Sherman, aged 28, is the youngest. Charles Wachtmeister, Detroit, with eight children, has the largest family. He is sentenced to two years.

From the train within the prison gates the prisoners were called forth alphabetically and took up positions two abreast. It was the last time the men were to be called by name. Hereafter they will be called by number. In the office of Deputy Warden Mackey the prisoners were relieved of their pocket possessions. Among these were photographs of wives, mothers and children.

Each prisoner was photographed twice—once as he came in dressed in street clothes and afterwards in his dark gray prison suit. Later the finger prints of each were taken.

FATHER AND SON KILLED

Struck by Train on Trestle While Two Relatives Reach Safety

Cincinnati, Jan. 2.—Eugene W. Dahl, traveling freight agent of the Grand Trunk railroad, and his young son were instantly killed when they were hit by a train on a trestle at Pleasant Ridge, a suburb.

Dahl and his son were following Mrs. Dahl and her father, G. G. Carlson, of Chicago, along the tracks and were crossing a trestle when the train bore down upon them. Mrs. Dahl and her father barely managed to get off the trestle in time, but the husband and son were hit.

DAVIE STAYS IN PRISON

Governor's Council Refuses to Pardon the "Boy Broker"

Boston, Jan. 2.—After considering the reports of the physicians, the executive council voted unanimously that a pardon be not granted Robert E. Davie, the "boy broker."

The gist of the medical commission's report was that "while Davie's condition of lowered vitality renders him more susceptible to disease, our findings do not show a state of health at present lessening life."

The Lusitania Laid Up

London, Jan. 2.—Defects in the machinery, which developed on the journey from Fishguard to Liverpool, prevented the Lusitania approaching the jetty at Liverpool and her passengers were landed by tender. The Lusitania will not sail Saturday as a consequence of the mishap.

Dutch to Join In Canal Fete

The Hague, Jan. 2.—The government introduced a bill in parliament providing for the appropriation of $300,000 for the participation of Holland and the Dutch colonies in the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco in 1915.

MRS. PHILLIPS FOUND GUILTY

Practicing Medicine in Violation of the Law

FINED $100 AND APPEALED

The continued case of Mrs. Ella C. Phillips of South Quincy charged with practicing medicine without being lawfully registered was heard before Judge Avery this morning. It was claimed by the government that the sign in front of the woman's house read "Ella C. Phillips, Physic diagnosis and treatment of diseases, Clairvoyent reading and magnetic healing. Hours from 10 A. M. to 9 P. M."

According to the government witnesses Mrs. Phillips would go into a trance sometimes and sometimes she would examine their handkerchief and in this way diagnose their complaint and for this treatment the charge was $2 while an additional charge of $1.50 was made for medicine.

Mrs. Phillips in her own testimony said that she had a large business receiving from 9 to 15 patients a day. These she admitted charging $2 for treatment and $1.50 for medicine. She said that she would go into a physic state and was then able to see right through the body of a person the same as though it was an X ray. In this manner she could see what organs were diseased. She could also see plants growing while in this state, that is the plants she saw growing were the herbs that were needed to cure the patient. She would try and fix these in her mind so as to remember them when she came out of the physic state so that she could immediately mix the medicine.

She admitted that she might have written some prescriptions for a druggist to compound but she could not remember.

She admitted that she had from 9 to 15 patients a day and that her charge was $2 for treatment and $1.50 for medicine. Both the government and defendant were represented by counsel. The court said the only question was as to the practice of medicine.

After hearing the arguments the court found Mrs. Phillips guilty and imposed a fine of $100. She appealed and was ordered to furnish bonds in the sum of $300 for her appearance before the superior court.

RECORD FEVER CONTAGIOUS

Old Colony Follow Style and Smash Pins For Keeps

NEW LEAGUE FORMED

The bowlers of the Old Colony League followed the example of other league teams and set a few new records Wednesday evening. The City Square team rolled on its own alleys against Weymouth and won by only six pins after one of the closest races ever started in local bowling circles. In order to win they had to break the team total record, reaching 1390. An excited gallery watched this match all the evening.

The Norfolk Downs and Coliseum teams split four points in a pretty bowling exhibition. Excitement also ran high here and loud cheers followed the splendid showing of Gillen who made 124 for high single and 322 for high total thereby establishing new records for the league. Several men topped the century mark for two strings and fell down when they could have boosted their general average. Had the bowlers been consistent the highest scores ever netted on local alleys would have been made.

The new Foresters league opened the campaign at the Coliseum alleys Wednesday evening and Court John Erickson won four points from Court John Adams.

The Electricians defeated the Foundry in a postponed Fore River league match, 3 to 1.

One of the Ways.

"Who was that seedy individual I saw you give a dollar to?"

"An old literary friend of mine; author of 'Ten Thousand Ways of Making Money.'"

Lilliputians are rarely seen in these days so there is considerable interest in the Adams sisters who are to give an entertainment tomorrow night at Alpha hall under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. These little ladies are 49 and 46 inches high, are friends of Mrs. Tom Thumb and what makes them of unusual interest to Quincy people is that they the descended from President John Adams.

Cousins and Aunts Hold Pow-Wow With No One Idle

ONLY TWO MEN PRESENT

Mrs. Russell M. Keene of 341 Washington street was hostess at an aunt and cousin party at lunch Wednesday noon in honor of her sister, Mrs. John Foster of Winthrop, Me. In the party were three aunts, who also happened to be grandmothers, although the grandchildren were not present , and nine cousins. The two male cousins present occupied seats of honor at the table and thoroughly enjoyed their exclusiveness. Conversation did not lag during the lunch for it had been a long time since the party had all been together before and reminiscences were in order of the day. After the lunch there was music and after the two lone male cousins had taken their departure, the ladies passed the remainder of the afternoon at whist.

USE OF WHO OR WHOM.

Where Grammar Bunks Up Against Idiom and Gets a Jolt.

The employment of the nominative "who" for the accusative in certain forms of interrogation has become so imbedded in common usage that resort, even now, to the strictly orthodox practice frequently requires, on the part of educated men, positive effort or prolonged training. It somehow does not seem natural. In the past assuredly this nominative form, where precise grammar would require the accusative, turns up with almost invariable regularity in works which set out to represent colloquial speech.

"Who is it from?" says the mother in Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," to her daughter, who has just received a letter. "Who is it like?" says the heroine of "Jane Eyre" to St. John Rivers as she shows him the picture of Rosamund Oliver. Such examples could be multiplied by hundreds. There are cases, indeed, when the use of "whom" would strike upon the ears of most of us as painfully pedantic.

"Who the devil is he talking to?" says Sir Lucius O'Trigger in Sheridan's "Rivals," as he notices Captain Absolute soliloquizing. To tolerate "whom" in place of "who" in such a sentence as the last would require the speaker to be so thoroughly steeped in grammar that the sense of traditional usage, which has been hardening into idiom, has at last been completely overcome. That height of linguistic virtue few of us there are who attain —Thomas R. Lounsbury in Harper's Magazine.

GRIT OF A SHARPSHOOTER.

Sergeant Halliwell's Feat at the Siege of Lucknow.

During the siege of Lucknow in the Indian mutiny there was afforded what was probably the most notable instance of the record in war of a crack shot.

The rebels were endeavoring to mount two eighteen-pounders, which they had hauled up to the flat roof of one of the palaces surrounding the residency, and it was necessary to prevent this being done, or they would have been able to pour down a heavy fire on the defenders. Sergeant Halliwell was chosen for this duty. He was a crack shot of the Thirty-second foot.

Being given the best rifle that could be found, his orders were to prevent the guns being mounted. He took up his position behind some battered down masonry where there was only cover for him to lie at full length. He remained in that position, it is said, for several days, not being able to stand, inasmuch as that would have resulted in instant death. His only change was to roll over from his back to his stomach. His eyes were ever kept on the dismounted guns, and whenever the Sepoys attempted to mount them his unerring rifle played havoc among them and prevented their object being accomplished. Food was brought to him at night by men who crawled to his position.

After some time a sortie was made, and the Sepoys were defeated. For this brave work Sergeant Halliwell received the Victoria cross. — Harper's Weekly.

Macaulay as a Talker.

Where Macaulay's talk failed is clearly shown by Greville. "If he could tread less heavily on the ground, if he could touch the subjects he handles with a lighter hand, if he knew when to stop as well as he knows what to say, his talk would be as attractive as it is wonderful." It is all summed up in the sentence, "He gave society more than it required and not exactly of the kind." Macaulay, in fact, suffered from excess of the first requisite of talk, according to Johnson—"materials." As Sir Henry Taylor said, "His memory had swamped his mind." Flashes of ignorance as well as of silence are necessary to the perfect talker. And so, as has been said, Macaulay often exhausted his audiences before he exhausted the subject. --London Chronicle.

CRAIG REFUSED COURT'S OFFER

Fined $15 For Larceny of Sleigh, But Appealed

FOUND PUNG IN ROAD

The continued case of John J. Craig for the larceny of a pung of Joseph E. Ludden at North Weymouth last week came up in court this morning. This is the the pung which Craig claimed to have run into on the street and there being no one with it at the time he is alleged to have hitched it on behind his own team and brought it to Quincy. At that time the owner of the pung offered to drop the case if Craig would pay the expense which he had been put to but Craig refused. This morning in court the Court said that it would place the case on file on payment of $10 on account of costs. Craig refused to do this however stating that he desired to appeal his case. The court then imposed a fine of $15 from which Craig took an appeal and was held in $300 bonds for the grand jury.

CATCHING A HYENA.

Cunning Trap That Made the Savage Brute Helpless.

Traps for wild animals are not necessarily of steel. The author of "The Journal of a Sporting Nomad" describes a hyena trap that is simple and effective:

"Close to the station at this place I found a novel form of hyena trap—a round piece of dried ox hide as hard as a board, three feet or so in diameter, in which a very small hole, no larger than an apple, had been cut. Radiating from this hole were cut a series of V-shaped pieces. The trap was set as follows: A hole was dug in the ground about one foot deep and six inches in diameter. Into this hole a piece of meat was placed. Then the ox hide plate was laid over the place containing the meat, the two holes being one over the other. The ox hide was then pegged down with wooden pegs in three or four places.

"The hyena, on finding the bait, forced his head through the small hole in the ox hide to obtain it, the cuts in the hide giving way sufficiently for that purpose. The beast seized the meat, but on trying to withdraw his head had to use considerable force, which naturally drew the pegs that held the ox hide to the ground, the result being that the poor brute had a collar securely fastened around his neck which he was quite unable to get rid of.

"He could not run or walk, and even had he been able to go any distance encumbered by such an obstacle would have been brought up short in the first patch of bush or grass he encountered. He was now at the mercy of the individual who had set the trap, and could be put out of the way quite easily."

FURY OF A SPIDER.

An Insect Tragedy as Seen Through a Magnifying Glass.

One day, rummaging in an old desk, I found a magnifying glass. It was September, and in a sunny, weed ridden corner of the garden I had discovered a big black and gold spider who had strung her web between two tall burdocks and was doing a thriving business in grasshoppers.

Seated on the ground, I now surveyed her through the glass for an hour as she hung in the middle of her engine of destruction. When I touched the net with my finger she swung frantically to and fro, prompted doubtless by some instinct of self preservation, but otherwise was as motionless as if carved in jet.

Grasshoppers were not very plentiful as yet, but at last a large green fellow flew plump into the toils, the spines on his legs that had so often discoursed sweet music becoming entangled. Instantly the crafty spider was all alive. Darting upon her victim she took her station above him, and, hanging by two legs, seized him in her other six and rolled him round and round, unswathing him in a band of silver silk until he was as helpless as a mummy, and then she bit him in a dozen places with fangs oozing with poison.

At the spectacle of her evil eyes glittering with the lust of killing, magnified as they were by the glass, I turned sick and rolled over on my face among the weeds and lay for a long time miserably inert.—Atlantic Monthly.

MAYOR STONE FLATFOOTEDLY DEFINES HIS POSITION ON $100,000 DOCK

Favors Dock But Not Expenditure of $100,000 Unless There is Pledge For Proper Return On Investment

Councilmen Whiton and Thompson Among the Speakers at the Annual Gathering of Houghs Neck Association

"I am in favor of a public dock, but I do not believe in spending $100,000 of the city's money for it until the men interested come forward and agree, by signing an agreement to that effect to take space and provide business which will produce an income sufficient to meet the interest on the loan and the notes or bonds at maturity."

Such was the straightforward statement of Mayor Stone at the annual meeting of the Houghs Neck Association, Thursday evening, in their cabin over the main hatchway leading from the lower deck of the Fosdick ship, on Sea stream to continue the nautical picture.

MAYOR EUGENE R. STONE.

The announcement was received with great applause. There were a few other things which the mayor said which gained for him the hearty approval of the 50 or more members present. Among other things he favored an improvement of Sea street, which would in some measure make it comfortably passable and a credit to the city and the Houghs Neck section of the city. He had occasion to travel the road and had found it many times in poor condition and on one occasion when a legislative committee visited the city, the automobiles of the party got stuck in the soft mud, the wheels sinking to the hubs.

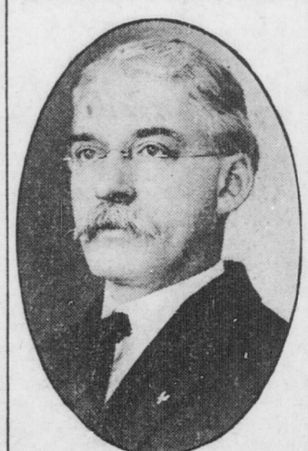
Those were only one or two of the grievances which were brought to light not only residents of Houghs Neck, but by others which showed that the grievance was not sectional by any means, but one in which the city as a whole was interested. The Mayor also advocated a road to Rock Island. Sea street should have been attended to by the 1912 council but he hoped that the members would see their way clear to perform this service this year. Main thoroughfares to all settled and growing sections should always be good.

JOSEPH L. WHITON.
Councilman at Large.

Councilman-elect Joseph L. Whiton was another speaker. There were no frills on the gentle words which dropped from Joe's lips, but that they were convincing, honest and sincere, every one felt assured. He believed Sea street should be improved. How that could be accomplished he did not know, but that some change was necessary he felt quite sure. He did not propose to make any promises or pledges. He would vote for whatever appealed to him at the best, most feasible and economical manner of meeting the situation. He did not believe in creating loans to meet current expenses and in his opinion, repairing streets, came under that head. He offered suggestions which seemed to meet with approval bearing upon the improvement of Sea street.

Councilman William P. Thompson was another speaker who believed something should be done with Sea street, and reviewed at some length the legislation which had been attempted with an idea of making some permanent improvement in this thoroughfare.

Other speakers were; Archie Baird, Daniel J. Maloney, Capt. Oliver G. Fosdick, Michael Coughlin, Michael T. Curran and Charles E. Decker.



JAMES E. WALL.

President Henry W. French presided and in one of his choice introductions suggested that the Public Dock was a good thing and should be placed down near the Houghs Neck Public Library. The occasion was the annual gathering of the Association to install the officers and indulge in the annual feast. Both of those are interesting, important and solemn events. Both events are taken very seriously by the club members. The "eats" came first. They were enjoyed to the limit. There were frankfurters, sauerkraut, ham, cheese, bread, potato salad, coffee and of course cigars. The members of the club and invited guests arrived early in the evening, and gathered around the great and comfortable stove and told stories. Many local battles were fought over and over again. Then the call to arms was sounded by President French and the party, 50 strong assailed the food entrenchments with good effect. Plenty of time was allowed for this masterly movement on the part of some of the destroyers and some records were made. Finally everyone being satisfied, President French rapped to order and calling the officers to the front and centre they were formally installed by Secretary Hiram C. Darrow.

The officers installed were:

President—Henry W. French.

Vice Presidents—Michael G. Coughlin and Patrick F. O'Brien.

Secretary—Hiram C. Darrow.

Treasurer—Michael F. Curran.

Financial Secretary—David T. Fenner.

Directors-at-Large— William B. North, Franklin G. Saylor, William P. Taylor.

Ward Directors—George E. Bell, John H. Merriam, Frank G. Coughlin, Oliver G. Fosdick, James E. Wall, Henry W. Pennington.

Auditing Committee—Michael G. Coughlin, Oliver G. Fosdick and Patrick F. O'Brien.

The installation ended, President French proceeded with the post prandial exercises, welcoming the guests and very cleverly presenting the speakers.

Mayor Stone who arrived late was given a hearty reception and when he retired was given three cheers and a tiger.

The Association members say they have entered upon a more active and progressive year than ever before and they will be heard. They are not planning to upset any apple carts, or do anything unreasonable but they do plan to assert their rights and demand things that the community sorely needs both as a community and for the betterment of that section with the idea of adding to the attractions and value of the entire city.

AUXILIARY OFFICERS.

Ladies Auxiliary, 10, A. O. H. elected the following officers:

President—Mrs. Katherine T. Cotter

Vice President—Mrs. Edward Powers.

Recording Secretary—Miss Agnes Colligan.

Financial Secretary— Mrs. Roger Tanner.

Treasurer—Mrs. Michael Griffin.

Sargent at Arms—Mrs. Martin Brennan.

Sentinel—Mrs. James McFadden.

They will be installed Jan. 8 at Hibernian hall at the joint installation for Div. 5 and 17 and Auxiliary 10.

CHAFING DISH PARTY.

Miss Mary Lyons gave a chafing dish party New Year's night. A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation of a Christmas tree to Miss Lyons as a New Year's gift which contained a handsome present for each guest. The carol singing will long be remembered by those present.

MRS. McDONALD KILLED BY AUTO AT DARK POINT OF ROAD

Woman Waiting For Electric Car in Obscure Point of Highway on Newport Avenue

Driver Russell Saw Her, But Too Late, as Auto Struck Her Body

The new year has certainly started in with a vengence, as regards accidents in this locality. New Year's day two men were killed by the explosion of a compressed air tank and Thursday there were three accidents in the late afternoon one of which was fatal.

The one with fatal termination, was that of Mrs. Agnes McDonald, widow of Randall McDonald, aged 55 years of Town Hill street who was run over by the auto truck of H. L. Kincaide & Co. on Newport avenue and sustained injuries from which she died later at the City Hospital.

Mrs. McDonald who has supported herself by working out had been working in a Wollaston family Thursday and about 5.15 started to take the electric car for Quincy, near the corner of Newport avenue and South Central avenue. At this point the car tracks are on the easterly side of the street and the sidewalk on the extreme westerly side of the street. Mrs. McDonald crossed over to the east side of the street and was waiting for the car which was approaching from Wollaston. The spot where she stood is a kind of dark pocket the electric light being some distance away.

Coming down Newport avenue on the way toward Wollaston was the auto truck of H. L. Kincaide & Co. driven by John A. Russell, aged 25 years of 65 Gay street and on the seat with him was his helper John Warner of Pond street. The automobile was coming down on the right or easterly side of the street the side fartherest away from the sidewalk.

Russell says that he was going not over ten miles an hour and suddenly as he came out of the shadow of the electric light into the dark pocket his head lights brought Mrs. McDonald into view. At this time the automobile was almost upon her and although Russell applied the emergency brake he was unable to prevent the accident.

The fender of the car struck her in the stomach knocking her down, one of the wheels passing over her. By this time the car stopped and Russell and Warner jumped off. Mrs. McDonald was conscious and was crying for help. The two men crawled beneath the car and pulled the woman out. Warner then ran to the residence of Dr. E. R. Johnson while Russell remained with the woman. Dr. E. R. Johnson was soon on hand and immediately saw that the woman was seriously injured and ordered her removal to the City Hospital where she was taken in the police ambulance.

Russell followed the ambulance to the hospital and then called up Col. Kincaide and reported the accident. The latter immediately advised Russell to go to the police station and tell his story. This he did. He told Chief Burrell how the accident happened, as noted above. He said that all his lights were lit and he was not moving over ten miles an hour. That he was keeping over on the right side of the street near the car tracks knowing that the sidewalk was on the other side thinking that he would have a clear road on this side. He passed under an electric light at South Central avenue and then came into a dark pocket and before he knew it, his lights showed him a woman directly in front of the machine.

He had done his best to stop his car but had been unable to avoid the accident. At that time it was not known how seriously the woman had been injured but later in the evening when Chief Burrell learned that the woman had died he went to the home of Russell and placed him under arrest on the charge of manslaughter.

At the hospital Mrs. McDonald was attended by Dr. T. J. Dion who immediately placed her name on the dangerous list. Dr. Dion found that she had sustained multiple injuries both external and internal. She died about 7 o'clock.

Mrs. McDonald leaves one adopted son, Carl McDonald. She was a widow her husband having died about two years ago. Since that time she has supported herself by going out working in private families. She is spoken very highly of by those by whom she had been employed.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The new City Council will grasp the reins of government Monday.

May they be guilded by wise Providence in guiding the Municipal chaise.

Every one agrees that Sea street should be improved. Then let some one devise an improvement that will be lasting, permanent agreeable to all the interests and as economical as possible.

The Houghs Neck Association is an energetic, progressive and lively organization working hard for that section of the city.

There are skunks and skunks. The regulation type that moves about and makes its presence known by its indisputable gift is appreciated at his full worth, but the animal which trots around under another name is a most despicable creature.

It does seem as if Luther is able and he certainly is willing he should take a little of the conceit and cocksureness out of that colored person who has become such a public nuisance. Far be it from us to be unkind but there are some animals who may be taught a better lesson from a good sound drubbing than mere kindness.

Mayor Stone has come out flatfooted and made his position plain on the Public dock question.

The Boston fish pier is now almost ready but the trouble is there is some little difficulty in securng the fish now that their new reception hall is nearing completion.

The State should have control of the roads is the claim of Gov. Foss. Good in theory but how is it going to work out in principle.

$50,000,000 is suggested as not an unreasonable sum for the Port Directors to expend. In view of the Hoosac Tunnel affair the state should exercise care as to manner in which its money is distributed.

The State House is to have wings. With the fins on the back of the sacred codfish in working it would seem as if the State House was fully prepared for any emergency.

Another big financier has passed along. The same old trouble, stomach and with all his money he could not give the dread messenger the hold-up signal.

While that Congressional official was frittering away his time telling what he did not know about the whereabouts of William Rockefeller and doing a press bureau stunt as to the plans for his capture the said Rockefeller quietly slipped away to Cuba. We always thought that Biddall, Riddall, or whatever his name is personally talked too plenty.

Now that Uncle Sam has Castro he does not know what to do with him. The best solution would be to let him get out of the way as soon as possible and use his own way of doing it.

Plunkett's managers say he did not favor the Payne tariff bill as a reason for his candidacy for United States senator. Men are not judged by what they do not do usually, but what they do and plan to do. The fellow who does nothing is not in the running.

BOOM YOUR OWN PLACE.

Almost every little hamlet of the west has its "Boosters Club." All the large cities, or the growing places of that region and especially west of the Mississippi river, have their press bureau and publicity bureau. There is no actress in the world that has anything on that bunch of western boomers, when it comes to handing out the hot air product for the digestion of the eastern partaker of the medicine. You seldom hear a murmur from those western places of any wrong doing within their midst. Graft, office seeking and the like, all the undesirable qualities are lost in those regions. Every prosecuting attorney in the west who has visited the east in the past few years has been hailed as a marvel, a cleaner up of his particular district with the result that the places makes spotless towns look a dirty deuce in a new deck.

As a matter of fact all those lines of humid air should be taken with a degree of adulteration. Those marvelous results have not been secured in a day or a year, as some would have us believe. But those people are optimistic. They are filled with the bigness, the expansion of the west. They get a place to breathe. They are original boomers. There is no place like home to them. They do not believe in running down their native health, or their local industries or enterprises.

And that is just where the people of this section might take a leaf from the western book to good advantage. Forget those beautiful pictures painted with the boomers enthusiasm. Feel that we have just as good here at home if not better. There is nothing the matter with New England. It is all right. Quit this knocking. Settle down to business and agree that we live in the best place on God's footstool. That will bring results.

MANY PROBLEMS.

The City Council of 1913 has many perplexing problems to occupy attention this year. It is evident that the members feel the responsibility, resting upon their shoulders and plan to meet the situation like large, public spirited men, men who know how to meet emergencies half way and thus get the best there is obtainable. Not least of the little affairs which the City Council will have to face, is the tax rate. The tax rate last year reached the limit, yet it has been predicted that 1913 will witness a slight increase. Then it is pointed out that the situation having been squarely met, the voyage figured out and a medium struck, the turn in the road will be reached and a downward tendency will follow until the rate will be at the normal average rate. Let us hope that this reasoning is logical and will be born out by results. There is no sense in kicking over the past that is behind us. We can however profit by the experiences which were handed out enroute along that thorny path. There is every reason to believe that the City Council members of 1913 will reach up to the situation, that they will frame up big enough to cope with wisdom and intelligence every obstacle that presents itself. If they fail in the trust imposed upon them, then it is up to the citizens to see that they do not have a chance to offend again in a similar manner.

Let us start out with the idea that we propose to do something for the city, something that will benefit the city and the people as a whole and if this course is followed the City Council cannot go far wrong, and they can make few mistakes which will resound to their discredit. Let every one in justice to the men now at the helm give them a chance to make good before engaging in kicking and unmerited criticism.

QUINCY W. C. T. U.

Quincy W. C. T. U. held its regular meeting in Protection hall, Thursday afternoon, the president presiding. It being the anniversary of the birth of Madame Willard, Miss Frances Willard's mother, various selections were read from her life, which were very interesting. Mrs. Susan B. Collins, who had met Madame Willard, when she visited Chicago as delegate some years ago, gave some personal reminiscences. She will always remember the visit as one of the happiest incidents of her life.

Copies of the Union Signal have been placed in the main room of the public library, and copies of the Crusader have been placed in the children's room. A book was found in the library detrimental to the temperance cause, being written by the liquor dealers and it has been destroyed. A list of books has been placed in the hands of the trustees and after due consideration, copies will be selected for the library.

The Kenyon bill was discussed and it was decided letters should be written by the members to Henry Cabot Lodge. The Kenyon bill now before the U. S. senate aims to prevent the present nullification of our local laws by the transportation of liquor from territory outside the state. It is probably the most important measure ever before Congress. The liquor dealers have brought tremendous pressure to bear upon the Senate. The National Wholesale liquor dealers' association appeals to the liquor trade thus: "Better drop all other matters and see your Senators and Congressmen personally at once."

The next meeting will be held the first Thursday in February.

John T. Cain Moves Up to No. 20 in the List

HARMON PASSES SCOULER

Sturgis Hunt, the Y. M. C. A. boy continues to make big daily gains in the Inauguration contest for the free Washington trip. Today he added 1,055, making a total gain of 6,070 in three days.

John T. Cain of the Knights of Columbus, with a gain of 85, has moved up from No. 38 to No. 20.

Mr. Bowditch and Mrs. Marnock have increased their totals. Richard Larkin has jumped in ahead of Harry Burr, and R. M. Harmon is again ahead of Dan Scouler.

Gains were also made by William Wolf of the Young Mens' Hebrew Association, George Powers of the Fore River office, William Allen of the Eagles, E. Alstein, a draftsman, and T. F. Flaherty.

THE INAUGURATION.

Preparations for the inauguration of President-Elect Wilson are going along rapidly. The inauguration will be the biggest spectacle that has ever been witnessed on the American continent. Already the accommodations at the Washington hotels are being reserved and by the time the first of March rolls around there won't be an available place left for the crowds that will be bound to attend. The Daily Ledger made its arrangements early for the winners of its contest and has excellent accommodations all reserved.

It is not necessary to fill out the coupons in full, now that the candidates are nominated and well known, but every coupon should have the family name at least. All coupons marked "Williams" will be counted for Fred D. Williams, and all coupons marked "MacKay" will be counted for A. R. MacKay, and so on down the list. The Contest Editor would suggest, however, that one coupon each day be filled out in full and put on top. Candidates will find rubber stamps very convenient.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

TWO MORE PRIZES.

Two prizes will be awarded Monday, Jan. 6, a first and a second prize for the largest gain in total during the week ending at 9 A. M. on that date. The prizes will not be vote certificates but very acceptable prizes to the winners. Get busy.

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

FOUR GOOD ACTS FOR KINCAIDE'S

Pictures Are Also of High Class Order

Four good vaudeville acts and four good photoplays are billed at the Kincaide Theatre the balance of the week. Joe Mole & Bro. perform a comedy bicycle act with machines of the latest pattern. The funniest stunts are funnier every time they are seen, and the size of the wheels on three of the bicycles are laughable.

Dacey and Chase, joy expressmen, deliver bushels of fun from the back of the stage in a novelty comedy act of high order.

The Great Opelt, the Dutch ventriloquist and the childrens friend will appear each evening with an improved scenario of hidden wonder, and the 1913 entertainers, Gladstone and Talmadge close the bill.

The photoplays are, Wanted—A Husband, Building an Automobile, The Call to Arms and A Devil of a Time.

Great recent events are alse exhibited by the Mutual Film Co.

BIG PARTY PLAN FOR BANQUET

Which Cost the Inauguration Day Proceedings

IN MOST FITTING STYLE

The indications now are that a party of about seventy-five will sit down to the dinner at the Parker house Monday evening at the inauguration banquet of the present and past City Councils and city officials. There will be a reception from 6 to 7 o'clock, dinner being served at the latter hour. Music during the dinner will be furnished by George Monk. President Ralph W. Hobbs of the City Council of 1912 will preside and there will be a little flow of oratory after the dinner. Among those from whom remarks may be expected are Mayor Eugene R. Stone, the President elect of the City Council of 1913, City Solicitor John W. McAnarney, Dock and Water Front Commissioner Frank Fessenden Crane, ex-Mayor Shea and others.

Pujo Committee Seeking Plan to Get Testimony of Rockefeller

Washington, Jan. 3.—A series of earnest conferences and a vast amount of digging into dusty tomes of law occupied the members of the house connected with the money trust investigation in their efforts to evolve a plan to secure the testimony of William Rockefeller, whom the sergeant-at-arms of the house has tried in vain to serve with a subpoena since last June.

Meanwhile Sergeant-at-Arms Riddell and a small army of deputies and private detectives camped about the New York home of the oil magnate.

AEROPLANE LANDS ON BOSTON COMMON

Young Aviator Performs Feat Thought Impossible

Boston, Jan. 3.—Harry K. Jones sailed from Saugus and landed on Boston common after a thrilling flight. It was the first aeroplane ever to land on the common. Lincoln Beachey landed there five years ago in a dirigible balloon. Aviators had declared it impossible to land safely in an aeroplane on the common.

Jones volplaned or "coasted" from a height of 3000 feet in his final flight, landing on the playground.

During his trip from Saugus Jones was lost in the fog, and not until he spied the top of Bunker Hill monument, sticking its apex above the mist, did he know where he was.

GRANTED WRIT OF ERROR

Case of Convicted Dynamiters Going Before Court of Appeals

Indianapolis, Jan. 3.—After attorneys for the thirty-three convicted dynamite conspirators had withdrawn their application for a writ of supersedeas, Federal Judge Anderson granted their prayer for a writ of error.

During the hearing W. N. Harding announced that Herbert S. Hockin would not ask an appeal in his case.

The granting of the writ of error means the request for a writ of supersedeas will be taken before a judge of the United States court of appeals.

Durability is a factor to be reckoned with in the yearly shoe bill. A shoe that wears 20 per cent. longer than another, at the same price, brings a decided economy in the yearly summing up of the family shoe bill—and larger the family, the greater the total saving.
The American Lady Shoes not only are well made of selected materials—and hence give the maximum of service—but they fit well; and the good fitting of a shoe adds to its length of service, because a shoe that fits isn't subjected to straining at wrong points. Come in and let us shoe you.

POWER OF THE SUN.

If Man Could Only Utilize It In a Perfect Heat Engine.

The heat of the sun that would be received on one square acre of the earth's surface at right angles to the rays of the sun, if the sky was clear and all other conditions favorable, would, if man could utilize all in a perfect heat engine, exert the power of 12,000 horses. But this figure is not of mathematical accuracy owing to the discrepancy of results among different researchers in many parts of the world, on plains at sea level, higher, and on tops of the highest mountains to which scientific instruments could be carried.

And this great force has been at work during millions of years in forming the world for the abode of coming man. Winds, tides, rains, chemical activity, coal, wood, oil—these and more are all due to this vast power of the sun.

A "horsepower" (how much longer will this word be used, when kilowatt is so much better?) is a force that can lift a weight of 33,000 pounds through a height of one foot in one minute. Thus the solar power reaching the deck of a slow going steamer, if all made available by the genius of man, could run the engines at a reasonable and comparatively safe rate.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

Keep the Armholes Down.

It is strange that not one person in a thousand knows how to help a man on with his coat or a lady with her jacket. They all make the mistake of holding the garment too high, especially the last sleeve. They lift it so that a man nearly dislocates his arm reaching for it. The more futilely he grabs and claws and lurches for it the higher they hold it until the wretched victim would have to get on a pair of stilts to find the armhole. The proper way? Why, hold the coat so that the armholes are as low down as the man's waist, taking care to keep the skirt of the garment off the floor, of course. If there is any struggle to find the last armhole, drop it still lower. Never raise it. Drop it until his hand slips into it naturally.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN BOSTON AND VICINITY

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

When George Arliss, who is starring in "Disraeli," began his Boston engagement at Plymouth Theatre, more than three months ago, the management had little idea that the play would supercede its already phenomenal New York success. Yet this is just what the play has achieved, when you consider all things. In the first place "Disraeli" has established the longest and most prosperous run of the season. It is the sort of play that, not only appeals to all classes of theatregoers, but one that draws you to it time and again. In fact during its long run there have been many repeaters to see the play. Moreover "Disraeli" has evoked the highest praise from press, public and pulpit. In the latter instance strong recommendations have come direct from pulpits urging members to witness the play. What else can be said to further emphasize the enormous success of this play? Other cities are clamoring for it and because of previous contracts the play must soon terminate its present engagement. It's at the Plymouth Theatre now but remember that to miss seeing this play is a regret not easily forgotten. Matinees at the Plymouth are held on Thursdays and Saturdays.

MME. CLARA BUTT,
Symphony Hall, Boston, Sunday 3 P. M.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Public taste has raised John Drew to the position, quite unassailable, as the chief American exponent of polite comedy. Every season one of the social as well as dramatic events of the cities in which Mr. Drew appears, after leaving the Empire Theatre, New York, where he delights his Metropolitan public, in his presentation in a new comedy. He will be seen at the Hollis Street Theatre, two weeks beginning Jan. 6th in "The Perplexed Husband" by Alfred Sutro, a four-act play which duplicated its London success in New York, where it received plaudits from the press and Mr. Drew's admirers.

Mr. Sutro, whose last success in America was "The Walls of Jericho," came over from England to personally stage his latest serio-comic play. The distinguished dramatist has created a strictly modern comedy, full of human interest, and his characters are live men and women who say and do things that are natural though unusual. As is his custom Mr. Drew is supported by one of those unique and perfect casts which delight his well-wishers.

In "A Perplexed Husband" Mr. Drew is a conventional husband who has good reasons for being worried. He returns home after a long trip to find that his wife has embraced the suffrage cause. She is for equal rights and insists that she must live her own life. Two leaders of modern theories are quartered in his home. The husband, suddenly becoming shrewd, pretends to be converted and introduces into the house a beautiful woman with a Greek Soul who he says needs converting also. Very amusing complications arise before the play of motives works out to a happy ending. The supporting cast includes Mary Boland, Hudert Druce, Margaret Watson, Nina Sevening, Alice John Walter Soldering and others.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

The event of the season in Boston vaudeville will be the appearance of Ethel Barrymore, the famous legitimate comedienne, at B. F. Keith's Theatre the week of January 6th. In many respects Miss Barrymore is the most notable capture ever made for vaudeville. The wisdom of Mr. Keith's judgement in the engagement of this talented actress for his circuit has been proved by the crowded houses that have everywhere greeted her, and in Chicago, Miss Barrymore with Mme. Sarah Bernhardt as an opposing attraction, broke all records in the Windy City. For her vaudeville tour Miss Barrymore has elected to appear in J. M. Barrie's one-act comedy, "The Ten-Pound Look," one of the cleverest playlets ever turned out by the famous Scotch author of "The Little Minister," and "Peter Pan." Miss Barrymore's engagement will be positively limited to one week only. She will be surrounded by one of the strongest and best vaudeville bills ever put together. Ed. F. Reynard, the ventriloquist with a production, will present his famous "Sets Dusenberry and Jawn Johnson in "A Morning In Hicksville," combining ventriloquial skill with some remarkable scenic and mechanical effects. Still another brilliant feature will be the Great Alpine Troupe of European wire walkers, late feature of the Ringling Brothers' Circus in startling feats in midair. Armstrong and Ford, the English man and the cop, will tell some dydiils and contribute some entertaining chatter; and other big features will be Campbell and Grady two newcomers from the West; Linton and Lawrence, in a new act; Arline and Adler, in burlesque magic; Peppino, king of the accordion, and many others.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The Gingerbread Man" is at the height of its success at the Castle Square. Its third week begins Monday afternoon, and the theatre will undoubtedly continue to be filled with delighted audiences. In "The Gingerbread Man" is something for everybody and besides the plot, the humorous dialogue and the tuneful music there are a number of added scenes that add to its popularity. Donald Meek and Al Roberts in their burlesque of "Othello" arouse screams of laughter, and in his clever travesty on "Madame X" George Henry Trader has devised a very funny series of incidents. Miss Virginia Tanner's Egyptian dances give extra variety to the second act, and the acting and singing of the entire company is receiving the highest commendation. Mr. Craig, Mr. Melrose, Mr. Meek, Miss Laurett Browne, Miss Florence Shirley and Miss Mary Young have the leading roles. Two plays that will follow "The Gingerbread Man" at the Castle Square are "The New Sin" which has been a recent sensational success on the stage of London and New York, and "Believe Me, Xantippe," which is John Craig's third annual Harvard prize play.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

The principal happening of the week at the Boston Opera House will be the first performance for this season of "Peileas et Melisande which is set down for Wednesday evening, Jan. 8. This strangely fascinating work by Claude Debussy, the most modern of modernists in operatic composition, created a profound impression last year, not alone through its musical and dramatic values, but also because of the rarely beautiful series of pictures which formed the background for the poetry of the narrative. Another French opera, but this time an old favorite,—"Carmen"—will have its first hearing Saturday night. Although as usual the prices will be on the popular scale, the title role will be assumed by Mme. Gay, the most famous Carmen of the day and a much more than competent coterie of artists will assist her. Fernand de Potter will be the Don Jose and Jose Mardones, the Escamillo, than whom there is no better Diamond Donner, whose debut as Mimi was one of the most pleasurable successes of the season will sing Micaela. The other parts will be taken by Mmes. DeCourcy and Sharlow and Mm. Sampieri, Everett, Bourquin, Devaux and Giaccone. Mr. Strony will conduct at this performance.

That on Monday evening Mme. Tetrazzini will sing in opera in Boston for the last time this season will be a matter of regret to the many who find in her flute-like tones and marvellous vocal agility, the supreme joy of opera. "Traviata" will be the bill and as Violetta, Mme. Tetrazzini again will entrance her hearers with delight as she did on Christmas night. In Giovanni Zenatello as Alfredo, there will be a tenor of an eminence equal to that of the prima donna and Mr. Polese will sing the grateful music written for the ungrateful part of the father. The orchestra will be under Mr. Moranzoni. The fourth subscription performance of "Louise" will be sung on Friday night. On Saturday afternoon, "La Boheme" which has been one of the season's most popular offerings, will be given what is likely to be its last presentation.

COMMITTEE TURNED DOWN

Nominations Not Accepted by Squantum Yacht Club

DREW RE-ELECTED

By a vote of 38 to 21, the members of the Squantum Yacht Club set aside recommendations of the nominating committee and re-elected Commodore Eleazer F. Drew for another year Drew's name was written in on the ballot.

Politics in the nominating committee were claimed to be responsible for the nominations on the ballot.

The annual meeting of the club was held at its winter quarters in the Wollaston Post Office building, Thursday evening.

With the exception of Commodore and one member of the regatta committee the nominations were uncontested. For a member of the regatta committee John McClure's name was written in 33 times, defeating W. Kimball who secured 19.

The officers elected were:

Commodire—Eleazer F. Drew.
Vice Commodore—Clintin Noble.
Rear Commodore—G. Wesley Sargent.
Treasurer—Arthur B. Hillman.
Secretary—Fenton C. Fowler.
Rep. Inter-Club—Howard Gannett.
Rep. Y. R. A.—Ralph S. Hendrie.
Treasurer—Archie H. Briggs.
Trustee-3 years—Charles M. Bryant Regatta Committee—Perley C. Rogers, John McClure, Fred C. Croucher, Fred D. Riley and G. Wesley Sargent.

Commodore Drew is in the employ of the Underwriters Bureau of Boston and carries on quite a large insurance business locally. His new yacht the Aryeto purchased several months ago is expected to make its mark in the races the coming season.

Fenton C. Fowler was appointed pro-tem in the absence of secretary Eppes; Arthur B. Hillman read the treasurer's report.

Perley C. Rodgers reported for the house committee and recommended the construction of outside lockers at the club's summer quarters.

George H. Bean reported for the regatta committee and Frank F. Badger for the trustees. The committee on by-laws asked for further time.

William I. Hartley gave the report of the bowling committee. The resignation of Perley C. Rogers as chairman of the house committee was accepted with regret.

Following his re-election Commodore Drew thanked the club for its endorsement and his committees for their good work the past season.

Speeches of felicitation were in order by the defeated candidate George H. Bean, Vice-Commodore Noble, Secretary Fowler and others after which the meeting adjourned.

WOLCOTT ASKS FOR 2 DISTRICTS

Would Have Milton Set Off From Quincy as to Medical Examiner

State House, January 3, 1913.—Ex-representative Roger Wolcott, of Milton, has filed with the clerk of the House, a petition which asks that necessary legislation be enacted to establish the town of Milton as a separate district in Norfolk county for medical examination and a medical examiner and an assistant be appointed.

Milton and Hyde Park constitute the second Norfolk district and Mr. Wolcott, thinks the district too large to be adequately served by the present officers. If the change is made by the legislature, it is probable that the new district (Milton) will be known as "District number 3" and the Quincy district which is now numbered three, will probably be changed to "District number 4."

DIED AFTER SHORT ILLNESS.

TELEPHONE EMPLOYEES

200,000 Start in Pension Plan the Present Year

To the Employees of the Western Union Telegraph Company, Western Electric Company and the Bell Telephone System. The new plan of benefits for disability due to accidents or sickness, of insurance and of pensions, goes into effect with the new year.

Nearly 200,000 men and women who are now giving their best years to the telephone and telegraph service of the country, will henceforth be assured of assistance in the exigencies of life, for which all are not able to provide, and will also be assured of a provision for their declining years.

It is but natural that every employee should desire to assume the normal responsibilities of life and to surround himself and those dependent upon him with the things that make life complete and enjoyable. Unforeseen happenings may make these responsibilities heavy burdens, and whatever may be put aside for the day of misfortune, must in the beginning be small and accumulated slowly. A realization that obligations must be met in times of misfortune as well as in times of prosperity, has made the need of something beside merely an old age pension appear absolutely vital.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Company, which centralizes the associated companies into one system with one policy for universal service, has considered the interests of all workers and has made a comprehensive plan possible. It is the administrative clearing house and the underwriter of the necessary reserve fund, upon which a general plan must depend.

One illustrative instance of the exercise of these functions has been the unifying of the various interests so that employees may aspire to work anywhere in the country with uninterrupted benefit, and any company can obtain any man it needs, without prejudice to his welfare.

Senator McDevitt and Representative Leslie fared even better in the way of legislative committees than was announced Thursday. In addition to the joint committees on Harbors, Lands and Liquor Law as announced the former is also on the committee on Counties. Representative Leslie in addition to the Committee on Election Laws as announced is Chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs. This is the one committee that Representative Leslie desired Representative Sullivan got but one committee as announced Thursday, on Insurance.

NIMROD ELCOCK IN THE HOSPITAL

Fears That She May Undergo an Operation For Stomach Trouble

The many friends of Miss Helen B. Elcock, better known as "Nimrod" will be sorry to learn that she was taken to the Deaconess hospital Thursday where it is possible she may have to undergo a surgical operation. Miss Elcock has been suffering from a stomach trouble and Dr. Lund was called in for an examination. It was upon his advice that Miss Elcock was taken to the hospital where she will go on observation for five days by Dr. Josselyn the celebrated stomach specialist. By that time it will be known whether she will have to undergo an operation.

GOVERNOR OF GRANITE STATE

Felker Is Elected by Legislature on the First Ballot

PROGRESSIVES SWAP VOTES

Hold Balance of Power and Turn It Over to Democrats For Governorship In Exchange For Speakership of House—Republicans Retain Only Three Minor Offices In Legislature

Concord, N. H., Jan. 3.—Thirty Progressives, combining with the Democrats in the legislature, last night elected Samuel D. Felker of Rochester, Democrat, governor of New Hampshire on the first ballot taken. This fusion resulted directly from the fight for speaker of the house, in which the Republicans and Democrats had been deadlocked, with the thirty Bull Moose voting solidly for their own candidate, William J. Britton of Wolfboro.

When vote after vote for speaker had been taken, the Progressives, holding the balance of power, and the Democrats agreed to swap, by which Britton was to be elected speaker and the Progressives were to turn their aid to Felker.

As a result, when the joint session came to a vote on governor, Felker won over Franklin Worcester of Hollis, Republican, 222 to 191.

Earlier in the day, in the session of the house, Britton had won the speakership, 217 to 182, over Charles A. Perkins of Manchester, Republican.

As the constitution of the state requires the governor shall be inaugurated on the second day of the legislature's session, the rather unusual ceremony of administering the oath of office at 10:15 o'clock at night took place, the oath being administered by Enos M. Sawyer, president of the senate. The governor spoke briefly, announcing that he will deliver his formal inaugural address Tuesday.

The joint legislative convention last night also filled four vacancies in the senate, electing four Democrats to the open places and giving that party a majority in the upper house.

The Democratic-Progressive coalition also elected three Democratic councillors, making the council entirely Democratic. With this went the presidency of the senate to Enos K. Sawyer.

All that the Republicans retained in either branch of the legislature was the clerk and assistant clerkship of the house and the sergeant-at-arms.

Governor Bass gave his farewell address to the senate and house in joint convention, reviewing the accomplishments of the administration and urging a continuance of the progressive legislation passed by the last legislature.

HAINES ASSUMES OFFICE

He Becomes Forty-Second Governor of the Pine Tree State

Augusta, Me., Jan. 3.—William T. Haines of Waterville, Republican, was inaugurated as forty-second governor of Maine with the usual ceremonies. He succeeds Frederick W. Plaisted, Democrat, whom he defeated for re-election.

The next proceeding of interest will be the election by the legislature of a United States senator to succeed Senator Gardner, Democrat, who was appointed to fill out the unexpired term of the late Senator Frye. Gardner's temporary term expires next March 4.

The election will come before the legislature, in separate branches, on Jan. 14, and before the joint convention of both branches the day following.

FOSS IS INAUGURATED

Walsh, Democratic Lieutenant Governor, Proves Attraction

Boston, Jan. 3.—Governor Eugene N. Foss was made governor for another term in the presence of a large number of spectators, who gathered at the state house to see the ancient ceremonies observed. The affair was not lacking in novelty, for the inauguration of the lieutenant governor, David I. Walsh of Fitchburg, the first Democrat to occupy that position since Henry H. Childs held that office in 1843, interested Democrats and Republicans alike.

In fact, Walsh rather had the centre of the stage during the brief period of the actual inauguration ceremonies. He shared attention equally with the governor, which is notable in the record of inaugurations.

GAS EMPLOYEES HOLD DANCE

Merry Party Tripped Light Fantastic at Alpha Hall

The annual dancing party of the Citizens Gas Light Co., employees was held at Alpha hall Thursday evening and was well attended. Representatives from all divisions of the Boston Consolidated were present, including employees of the Old Colony Gas Co. of Weymouth.

The feature of the evening was the singing of Miss Mollie Logee of Milford, Mass., who rendered "The Gypsy Queen" and responded to an encore. She was presented by Alfred J. LaCriox.

Many out of town friends were among the dancers, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Rockland and Abington, being represented. Dancing was enjoyed until midnight and music was furnished by Wilson's orchestra.

The floor was in charge of George Ellard, assisted by Harold Gullickson and John Hayes. The aids were Frank Johnson, Francis Walsh, George White, Edward Nelligan, Michael Lynch, James O'Brien, Walter Nicol and James Cleary. Timothy Regan, one of the aids was unable to attend because of illness.

GREEKS HEED CALL TO ARMS

Two Quincy Residents Depart to Defend the Fatherland

The call "To Arms" has been heard in Quincy and two of the best known Greek residents leave today for New York where they will embark for service under their native colors.

Petros Apostolis of the Emanuel Candy Store and Agamemnon Cephalos of Thompson's cafe received their call from the Consul Timagensis of Boston. They immediately replied favorably and were assigned to leave Friday. A large number of Greeks accompanied them to Boston.

GOOD ADVICE TO FORESTERS

On the Occasion of Installation at Quincy Court

C. M. DUGGAN OFFICIATED

The officers of Quincy Court No. 76 M. C. O. F. were installed at G. A. R. hall Wednesday evening by D. H. C. R. Cornelius M. Duggan and suite of Neponset. An entertainment and refreshments followed the exercises.

The guests were Rev. Fr. John J. Coan, who spoke in complimentary terms of the work of the Foresters;

CORNELIUS M. DUGGAN,
Who Installed Foresters' Officers.

P. C. R. Patrick F. O'Brien of Neponset and D. H. C. R. Cornelius M. Duggan.

Cornelius M. Duggan spoke on the needs of the organization as they appeared to him after holding the high chief rangers position and said that while the organization at the present was in a flourishing condition, there was always the need of increasing the membership roll. He urged all to continue efforts in this direction and closed by singing one of his many song hits. Selections were also rendered by C. F. Duggan and F. H. O'Brien of Neponset.

The officers installed were:

Chief Ranger—Michael Sweeney.
Vice Chief Ranger—John J. Feeley.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. Mary T Avery.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. Mary T Sullivan.
Treasurer—Mrs. Lucy G. Howard.
Senior Conductor—Michael Dorley.
Junior Conductor—J. Frank Goodhue.
Inside Sentinel—Leon Ducette.
Outside Sentinel—Patrick K. Ward.

PASTOR LILLBACK BUSY.

Rev. John E. Lillback preached a sermon at the Neighborhood meeting at the Finnish Congregational church Wednesday evening. Following the services he left for Fitchburg, returning Thursday.

This morning he officiated at a funeral service at East Douglas and will act in a similar capacity at Worcester in the afternoon. In the evening he will address his class in citizenship at the church.

Mr. Lillback, after several conferences, has secured permission to hold a naturalization session in the church vestry Jan. 14. Examiners Farrell and Fay of the Federal court will conduct the hearing, and it is planned to have at least 25 men qualify for citizenship.

SERIOUS ILLNESS.

Mrs. Elisha D. Atkins of Bromfield street was taken to Rest Haven, a private hospital on Harvard street, Dorchester, Wednesday, so that her physicians may be able by a thorough examination to learn the exact cause of her illness. Captain Atkins with their daughter and Miss Jean Hopkins a cousin came hurriedly from Baltimore as soon as the vessel reached port from Florida where they have been with him since the last of November. Mrs. Atkins was taken ill three weeks ago and her condition was soon so serious that her husband was sent for.

Mrs. James H. Stetson of School street is confined to her home with a grip cold.

WON THE JURY.

A Couple of Shrewd Queries and the Railroad Lost Its Case.

A number of years ago Benjamin F. Butler was a guest of friends in Brooklyn. During his visit he noted the rule of the street railway companies compelling conductors to register fares as soon as passengers entered the cars and before the fares were actually collected. Two or three years afterward he represented the plaintiff in a damage suit for $15,000 in which a Brooklyn street railway company was the defendant. The principal witness for the company was the conductor of the car on which the accident occurred, and his testimony was so strong as to make things look bad for Butler's client. But Butler recalled the unusual rule he had remarked years before, and on cross examination he said:

"Your company requires you to ring up fares as soon as passengers enter the car, doesn't it?"

"Yes."

"Suppose a passenger boards your car and then finds he is on the wrong line. Do you state that fact to your superiors, and do they make allowance on your returns for that fare?"

"No. I lose the nickel."

"Do you mean to say the company won't take your word for 5 cents?"

"No, they won't."

"Yet," said the shrewd veteran, turning to the jury, "the company asks you to take this conductor's word for $15,000."

Butler's client received a verdict.—Brooklyn Eagle.

"Spanish Mutton."

Dog meat, we learn from the Frankfurter Zeitung, is largely sold in Germany, and more especially in Saxony, but rarely under its own name. Traders describe it as Spanish mutton, and their customers are less chary of asking for it.

Catfish in England is trented in the same euphemistic way. There was a time when this fish was never seen in the shops. Then some fishmongering genius invented the name of "rock salmon," and bestowed it upon the despised catfish, which now has an established place in the market.—London Chronicle.

The Man Fish.

Mathew Buchinger, mentioned in old English wonder books as the "man fish," was the most remarkable monstrosity of his time. He had neither hands, arms, feet nor legs. From his shoulders grew two finlike excrescences, and along his back there were several rows of scales. He had the lidless eyes characteristic of the fish species and a queer puckered mouth and no ears.

Where Ignorance Is Bliss.

Mrs. Exe—So your husband fell asleep in church last night. I suppose you woke him up? Mrs. Wye—Not until after the sermon. There was a lot in it about women's extravagance—nonsense, of course, but I'm mighty glad John didn't hear it.—Boston Transcript.

An Expert on History.

"Wombat, what year did Damon and Pythias run?"

"Lemme see. I think they headed a ticket about 1830."

"And who ran against 'em?"

"Lemme see. Wasn't it Castor and Pollux?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Average Man.

A foreign visitor in an interview in New York told the truth about the average man.

"Your country," he said, "is made up, like mine, of average men. The average man," he added, "is a man who thinks himself immeasurably above the average."—Washington Star.

TERMS OFFERED BY THE ALLIES

The Only Ones Which Will Be Accepted by Them

DANEFF UTTERS A WARNING

Says Adrianople Is Vital Point to Bulgarians and Greece Must Have Some Islands In Ægean Sea—Rechad Pasha Declares Turkey Cannot Yield on Either Proposition

London, Jan. 3.—The peace negotiations between the Balkan and the Turkish envoys will be broken off, according to Dr. Daneff, the chief of the Bulgarian delegation, unless the map which the Turkish delegation is preparing showing the proposed boundary between Bulgaria and Turkey should prove to be in accordance with the terms laid down by the allies.

Dr. Daneff, in the course of an interview, said:

"The future of Adrianople is one of the most vital points in the negotiations, and as far as I can see no improvement of the situation in regard to it is to be expected when the new map is drawn up by the Turkish delegation of the proposed rectification of the boundary between Bulgaria and Turkey.

"If we find at tomorrow's meeting of the conference that the Turkish map is not in accordance with the terms offered by the allies and is unsatisfactory to us, the negotiations will be broken off.

"The second difficulty is in connection with the matter of the islands in the Ægean sea. There again we will insist upon our terms."

Rechad Pasha, the leader of the Turkish plenipotentiaries, was equally emphatic on the subject of Adrianople.

"We have ceded Macedonia in a spirit of conciliation and with the desire to avoid a renewal of the war," he said. "On two questions, however, we will not yet yield. We will give up neither Adrianople nor the islands in the Ægean sea."

The Ægeans, it is thought, may eventually be divided among the disputants.

In any case, the danger of a resumption of hostilities is regarded as eliminated, and the threats of a renewal of the war by various delegates may be taken as merely the playing of cards in the diplomatic game.

Another meeting of the ambassadors of France, Germany, Russia, Austria-Hungary and Italy was held at the foreign office yesterday afternoon, when the Balkan situation was again the subject of informal "conversations."

It seems likely, in the view of diplomatic circles, that the problem of the disposition of the islands in the Ægean sea will be solved by the European ambassadors who, it is thought, will divide the islands among the disputants. Those of strategical importance, like Tenedos, Lemnos and Mitylene, commanding the entrance to the Dardanelles straits, probably will remain in Turkish hands; others, like Chios and Samos, are likely to be given practical autonomy under the nominal sovereignty of the sultan of Turkey; while Greece, in all likelihood, will obtain possession of the rest, including Crete.

KNEW WHAT HE WAS DOING

Young Man Cuts Off an Arm at the "Command of God"

Buffalo, Jan. 3.—Harry Pullman, 23 years old, of Brooklyn, is in a serious condition at a local hospital from the loss of his left arm, which was severed by the wheels of a trolley car.

Pullman admitted he placed his arm under a street car in order that it might be cut off, giving as his reason that he was "commanded by God."

"I am not a drinking man," he added; "I knew and realized what I was doing."

YONKERS CARS TIED UP

More Than Forty Miles of Railway Lines Made Idle by Strike

Yonkers, N. Y., Jan. 3.—Street railway traffic is at a standstill here as the result of a strike of motormen and conductors on the Yonkers railway lines.

Not a wheel moves on lines as far north as Hastings-on-the-Hudson, as far east as Mt. Vernon nor as far south as the line dividing New York city on the north from the south end of Yonkers. More than forty miles of railway lines are idle.

Last of Auto Bandits Caught

Paris, Jan. 3.—While searching for the perpetrator of a burglary at Jusiers the police found Alexander Nourry, an anarchist, who is believed to be the last member of the gang of auto bandits, fast asleep.

Senate Moves For China

Washington, Jan. 3.—Immediate recognition of the new Chinese republic by the United States was asked in a resolution by Senator Bacon.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

CORNBREAD RECIPES.

CORNBREAD, one of the most useful quick breads of which the housewife can avail herself for winter breakfasts, may be made in a variety of ways. Cornmeal is a cereal that contains a large proportion of fats and is therefore more heating than wheat.

Eggs add to the richness and the nourishing qualities of these hot breads and where it is convenient to do so should be used liberally in making them.

Care of the Pans.

Be sure to grease the pans well before the cornbread batter is poured into them. One of the tragedies of the kitchen is a cornbread that insists on sticking to the pan.

Souffle Cornbread.—Take a cup of hot milk and stir into it half a cupful of yellow cornmeal and cook until it is a thick mush. Remove from the stove, add a scant teaspoonful of salt and the yolks of four eggs. Beat well, then fold in gently four stiffly beaten whites. Place in a greased baking dish, set in a pan of boiling water and bake in a moderate oven thirty-five minutes.

Steamed Cornbread.—Take a pint of cornmeal and mix it with a scant cupful of flour, a little salt and a teaspoonful of soda. Add to this a cupful of granulated cornmeal and three cupfuls of flour. Dissolve a yeast cake in water, add the remaining ingredients and mix thoroughly. Let rise, shape, let rise again and bake as entire wheat bread.

In Odd Forms.

Dish Cornbread.—Take a quarter of a cupful of cornmeal and stir it into a cupful of boiling water and steam twenty minutes. Add half a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of butter, a third of a cupful of milk, a well beaten egg and two-thirds of a cupful of cornmeal sifted with a teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake twenty minutes in a buttered baking dish and serve from the dish in which it was cooked.

Loaf Cornbread.—Take a cupful of cornmeal and a cupful of sifted flour, half a cupful of sugar, a teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder; sift all together and mix well. Beat one egg light, add a cupful of milk, pour into the dry mixture and beat well. Then stir in quickly a third of a cupful of melted butter. Bake in a loaf pan in a quick oven about twenty minutes.

Anna Thompson.

A VERY ANCIENT TUNE.

It Is Also Probably the Most Popular One In the World.

Perhaps the most firmly established popular song in the world is the air familiar to Americans as "We Won't Go Home Till Morning." The origin of the tune is obscure, but Louis Elson believes that the music was composed as a love song in the tenth century or earlier by one of the troubadours, the wandering minstrels of southern France. Chateaubriand, the French writer, heard it sung by the Arabs, and he suggested that it might have been carried to the orient by the French crusaders.

It was certainly sung by the French soldiers during the war in which the first Duke of Marlborough won his fame. It was the lullaby of the baby son of Marie Antoinette. It became one of the most popular songs of the French revolution. Napoleon whistled and sang it throughout his life. Beethoven used it as one of the themes of his "Battle Symphony."

It has been for more than a century one of the most popular street songs in Europe. And there is probably not a ten-year-old boy or girl in America who does not know the tune.

The French words, beginning "Malbrook s'en va-t-en guerre," were invented by some forgotten French soldier during the war of the Spanish succession. They describe the supposed death and funeral of the Duke of Marlborough, which death, in the words of Father Prout, "did not then take place, by some mistake," since "the subject of the pathetic elegy was at the time of its composition, both alive and kicking all before him."

The song had nearly died out in France when Marie Antoinette caught it up from the peasant nurse she had employed for her baby; thereupon it spread rapidly, as songs do in France. Beaumarchais introduced it into "The Marriage of Figaro," and it was used by the red republicans for incendiary purposes of their own.

Several sets of words have been sung to the tune in the course of its history, and it has itself undergone some modifications. But its identity is clear through all the changes. Probably it is familiar to a greater number of people at the present time than any other tune in the world.—Youth's Companion.

An Important Man.

"Always boasting, eh?"

"Yes; everything connected with him is always in the superlative. Even when he had a cataract on his eye it was a regular Niagara."—Kansas City Journal.

RUSSIAN SERFS ALL FREE

Premier Personally Urges Passage of Law Abandoning Bondage

St. Petersburg, Jan. 3.—The council of the empire adopted a law abolishing the last vestiges of serfdom in Russia. When the rescript of emancipation was issued in 1861 the Caucasus was excepted from its provisos on account of special conditions there and temporary transitional measures were instituted pending the adoption of the most suitable method for giving the serfs their freedom.

This transitional stage now, after half a century, has been terminated, though there was still opposition to its being abolished. Premier Kokovsoff personally appeared before the council of the empire to urge the adoption of the new law. It already has passed the douma.

IS GOING TO GERMANY

Castro Willing to Depart From America of His Own Accord

New York, Jan. 3.—Cipriano Castro, ex-president of Venezuela, engaged passage yesterday afternoon on the steamsip Amerika, sailing for Hamburg tomorrow. His valet will accompany him.

No formal charge to warrant his detention has been made against Castro beyond the report of La Touraine's surgeon that his physical condition made it advisable pending further medical examination.

Before the decision of the immigration authorities was announced, Castro declared he was willing to go back to Europe of his own accord.

POLICE ARE WORKING ON MURDER THEORY

Little Light on Mystery Enshrouding Donovan Tragedy

Boston, Jan. 3.—The time, the place and the cause of the death of Mrs. Mildred Donovan of Revere, whose body was found near the Holy Cross cemetery in Malden Wednesday afternoon, is still a mystery which the police investigation has failed to solve. These points have been brought out:

A street car conductor says James B. Jennings and Mrs. Donovan rode in his car Tuesday night, the woman getting off at Linden square at 7:45, walking up the Lynn road alone. Jennings remained at the square.

Edward Gunderson, a motorman, saw Mrs. Donovan in Adams square, Boston, at 2 a. m. Wednesday morning.

Epilepsy is unofficially given as the cause of Mrs. Donovan's death.

The Malden police are firm in their belief that Mrs. Donovan's body was carried to the spot where it was discovered by teamsters. They believe it was dragged for some little distance and dropped in the shallow hollow beside the lonely road.

In the meantime Jennings is occupying a cell in the city prison, where he is charged with murder. William M. MacPherson, whom he shot New Year's day, died yesterday at the City hospital.

ON VISIT TO WASHINGTON

Miss Asquith and Countess of Aberdeen Are Guests of Bryce

Washington, Jan. 3.—Miss Violet Asquith, daughter of the prime minister of Great Britain, and Lady Isabel Maria, Countess of Aberdeen, wife of the lord lieutenant of Ireland, arrived here to be the guests for a few days of Ambassador and Mrs. Bryce. Many entertainments and social functions have been arranged in their honor.

There was a small informal dinner at the embassy for them last night, but on Saturday night a formal dinner in their honor will be given there.

WIFE WAS GOING HOME

Announcement Enrages Italian and He Kills Woman and Self

New Haven, Jan. 3.—Enraged because his wife, Mary, told him she was going to return to her home in Italy, Carlo Barilo shot and killed her at the home of a friend in North Haven. He then went to a nearby field, where he put a bullet into his own head, dying instantly.

The woman arrived from Italy about eight days ago. She was 33 years old and her husband 35. They leave a young child.

Five Children at One Birth

Abbeville, La., Jan. 3.—Five male children, two of them dead, were born to Mrs. Audrey Lassen, 28 years old. Mrs. Lassen has three other children, two of whom are twins.

Prince Albert at Foot of Class

London, Jan. 3.—Prince Albert, son of King George, stood sixty-fourth in order of merit in a list of sixty-five persons who underwent an examination for naval cadets.

Fate Plays Queer Prank

Rome, Jan. 3.—Answering a matrimonial advertisement Signora Marchesi met a man in a tearoom and found him to be her husband, who was "lost" ten years ago.

PEACE EFFORTS FAIL

Garment Workers and Employers Are Still Far Apart

New York, Jan. 3.—Efforts to settle the garment workers' strike yesterday failed. The various agencies working for peace did not even find a basis upon which they thought manufacturers and employes might agree. The New York Clothing Trades association held a long meeting, at the conclusion of which President Benjamin declared nothing had been done toward a settlement.

He asserted that the employers were willing to treat with the men, but recognition of the union would not be granted under any circumstances.

The strike leaders said no more mass meetings were planned for the present, because the enthusiasm of the workers was so great further meeting were useless.

A TEN-MINUTE SESSION

House Honors Congressman McHenry's Memory by Adjournment

Washington, Jan. 3.—The house was in session only ten minutes after it reconvened following the holiday recess. Representative Palmer of Pennsylvania offered a resolution that the house adjourn out of respect to the memory of Representative McHenry of Pennsylvania, who died during the recess. Only trifling routine business was considered.

The senate notified the house of its disagreement to the amended immigration bill and asked for a conference. Speaker Clark appointed Burnett of Alabama, Sabath of Illinois and Gardner of Massachusetts as conferees on the part of the house.

RICH BROKER KILLS WIFE AND HIMSELF

Had Recently Become Reconciled After Separation

Bellport, N. Y., Jan. 3.—Henry C. Edey, a wealthy retired Wall street broker, shot and killed his wife in their home on Great South bay and then blew out his own brains. The murder and suicide followed by some six weeks Mrs. Edey's reconciliation with her husband, whom she left last summer.

Mrs. Edey's bedroom, where the tragedy occurred, gave evidence of a violent struggle. Servants on an upper floor were awakened by revolver shots and rushed in to find Mrs. Edey dead and her husband dying.

Mrs. Edey, twelve years younger than her husband, left Bellport last summer and was gone until the latter part of November. On the same train which she took was a young man with whom she was acquainted. He has has not made his home here since. Both Mr. and Mrs. Edey declined to discuss her stay out of town after she returned.

FIRE IN ALMSHOUSE

Inmate Imprisoned In Padded Cell Is Burned to Death

New London, Conn., Jan. 3.—One life was lost and sixty-seven others imperilled by a fire in the almshouse on the outskirts of the city. The monetary loss was small.

John H. Cronesbury was burned to death in a padded cell in the basement, where he had been confined suffering from delirium tremens. Five others were overcome by smoke, but are expected to recover.

The fire started in Cronesbury's cell, and witin a few moments the building was filled with dense smoke. Firemen rescued the helpless inmates.

BIG STRIKE THREATENED

Organizer Says Seven Mills In Fitchburg Will Be Affected

Fitchburg, Mass., Jan. 3.—Mayor Hardy conferred with officials of the Arden mills of the American Woolen company in regard to the strike among weavers at the mill, at request of Organizer Daniels of the I. W. W.

The mill owners will not grant demands, and Daniels says a big general strike will be called in Fitchburg. New members are being added every day to the ranks of the I. W. W. Daniels says he has an organization in all seven mills.

LOSE FIFTH OF SALARY

Chicago Council Cuts Pay of Twenty Thousand City Employes

Chicago, Jan. 3.—Twenty thousand city employes suffered a cut of 20 percent in their salaries by the action of the city council at a special meeting. Practically every employe of the municipality is affected.

Mayor Harrison, whose salary, like those of a few others in high authority, was not affected, stated he would voluntarily remit 20 percent of his pay.

Two Boys Go Through Thin Ice

Ashland, Mass., Jan. 3.—James Parker, aged 12, and Francis Murray, 10, slid to their death through thin ice on a mill pond, while a younger school fellow who could not run and slide as fast as they was saved by his slowness.

QUOTES FROM THE FATHERS

Bailey Presents Arguments Against Direct Legislation

"SWAN SONG" IN THE SENATE

Says Initiative, Referendum and Recall Have Been Adopted by Votes That Did Not Represent Twenty-Five Percent of Qualified Electors—Texan to Leave Capitol

Washington, Jan. 3.—Senator Bailey of Texas sang his "swan song" in the senate—a bitter denunciation of the initiative and referendum as "repugnant to the principles upon which the American republic was founded."

The Texas senator planned to make this the last set speech of his senatorial career. His formal resignation will probably be submitted to Governor Colquitt before the expiration of his term on March 4.

Direct government, Bailey said, was never contemplated by the fathers of the nation, and the government outlined by the convention of 1787, he declared, was better than any that could be established with the initiative and referendum.

Senator Bailey sought to make out a "complete case against the doctrine of the recall of judges." He said:

"The men who are opposed to the initiative and referendum have made no special pleas or efforts to reach the public. They have, it is true, protested from time to time with some degree of earnestness, but they have suffered those cumbersome and illogical legislative methods to be incorporated into the organic law of several states almost without resistance.

"An examination of the returns will show that these miscalled 'reforms' have been adopted in several states by votes that did not represent 25 percent of the qualified electors. Thus, these innovations have acquired a false appearance of strength.

"I am striving to reach those outside of the senate chamber, upon whose intelligence and patriotism this republic must depend for its existence.

"I feel constrained to read into this record the conclusive evidence that with a full knowledge of the different kinds of government before them, our fathers rejected a monarchy, rejected an aristocracy, rejected a direct democracy and wisely chose a representative democracy which they called a republic."

Senator Bailey then quoted from speeches of President Madison and others of the old Federalist party in support of his contention that they were unanimously opposed to the plan of an initiative and referendum.

For more than twenty-three years Bailey has served his party in the halls of the lower and upper house. He entered congress as a Democratic representative from the Fifth Texas district while but 27, and in a short time had climbed to the speakership.

His career in the senate was no less spectacular. He took the lead in every debate, was always an effective speaker and was one of the most praised and maligned Democrats in that body.

Senator Bailey served in the Fifty-second, Fifty-third, Fifty-fourth, Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth congresses. He aligned himself with the Bryan free silver policy early in his congressional career. His election as senator came in 1901. At the expiration of this term he was reappointed, his term expiring this year.

WOMAN HELD FOR ROBBERY

Charged With Assaulting Another Woman and Taking Pocketbook

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 3.—Miss Gertrude D. Fowler, 35, was held in $1000 for the grand jury on the charge of assaulting and robbing Miss Georgia Starkey on Dec. 21. Miss Starkey on the stand positively identified Miss Fowler as the woman who assaulted her with an iron bar and took her pocketbook.

Miss Fowler denied making the assault. Inspector Kane testified that he traced footsteps in the soft ground to Miss Fowler's home.

AGED MONARCH FAILING

Health of Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria Is Precarious

Rome, Jan. 3.—The Austrian ambassador, received in special audience by the pope, informed the latter that the health of Emperor Francis Joseph was precarious, owing to the great strain of recent political events.

Paris, Jan. 3.—The health of Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria-Hungary is such that he will die very soon, according to the Paris "Midi." The emperor is 82 years old.

Women Police For St. Paul

St. Paul, Jan. 3.—Mayor Keller announces the appointment of two women as regular members of the St. Paul police department. They are Mrs. Margaret Kelly and Mrs. William Moore. They were sent out to watch dance halls.

JULIET'S BALCONY.

It Looks Just as It Did When Romeo Wooed the Sweet Veronese.

This was the home of the Capulets, from whom descended Juliet, for whom so many kind hearts have wept and of whom the poets have sung.

You read the words on a tablet by the side of a tall and slender gray house in a quiet street of Verona. A few steps farther on the busy life of the old city is centered in the market place and in the one or two streets that lead from it. You stand in front of the lightly built dwelling, and you look at the slim balcony of wood from which beat forward the form of the radiant girl whose undying love story has echoed down the ages. It is an autumn day, and within the rail of the narrow framework some one has placed red flowers in tall green pots. A curtain at the little window moves in the breeze, and you expect at any moment to see the dainty form of Juliet appear and to hear a rippling laugh fall from her lips.

A woman steps from the room beyond, through the open window and stands to listen. She has a child in her arms, and he claps his hands, laughing and crowing, no doubt just as the beloved Veronese did centuries ago. The mother hushes him, for she is intently listening to the market cries. In the midst of that everyday life walks the immortal Juliet.—London Telegraph.

Seven In the Bible.

The number seven plays a prominent part in events in the Bible. The creation took six days, and on the seventh there was rest. On the seventh day of the seventh month a holy observance was ordained, and the Israelites feasted seven days and rested seven days. Noah had seven days' warning of the flood, and the seven years of plenty were foretold in Pharaoh's dream by seven fat beasts, as were the seven lean years by seven lean beasts. We speak of the seven heavens, and the seventh son was supposed to be endowed with pre-eminent wisdom. In short, there is no other number which enters into the Bible so often as seven. No doubt the wide popularity of the number and the superstitions which are connected with it came from its wide use in the Bible.

A Really Smart Man.

"He always says the right thing at the right time, doesn't he?"

"More than that. He always keeps still at the right time."—Houston Post.

DIPHTHERIA RESPONSIBLE

For Heavy Absences From the Massachusetts Fields School

At the monthly meeting of the Massachusetts Fields Parents and Teachers Association Charles H. Johnson of Quincy delivered his illustrated lecture on "Washington, the great American."

Bugle calls by Ernest Pletsch and patriotic songs by Roger Allen, M. F. S., '11, the audience joining in the choruses. Miss Gertude Allen was the accompanist, proved mighty fine features.

Sidney Smith, president of the Association announced the presentation to the teachers of a Morris chair, which had not arrived but was expected shortly. Principal Goodspeed accepted for the teachers and expressed the same sentiment as the man falling from the eight story building "All right so far."

Mr. Goodspeed deprecated the seriousness of the diphtheria situation. In the last 4 or 5 weeks there had been but five families affected and only one in the last 10 days. On Monday there were 75 or 80 absent and on Thursday 60. He hoped all would return.

ENGAGEMENT OF ATHLETIC GIRL

Miss Harriet C. Baird Announced at New Year Party

The engagement of Miss Harriet C. Baird, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Baird of Great Hill, Quincy and Frank Kenny of Somerville was announced at a New Year's party, Tuesday evening. The marriage will take place during the fall season.

Miss Baird is one of Quincy's most popular young ladies. She is a graduate of the Oliver Wendell Holmes school of Dorchester class of 1908, and entered the Quincy High school, class of 1911, where she attended three years. She is also a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music and is an accomplished pianist. Miss Baird is known throughout the city because of her athletic prowess. She is one of the strongest swimmers around Boston and has three rescues from drowning to her credit, two of them children. She is also skillful in handling yachts and has been known to venture out in the waters of Quincy Bay under the most adverse conditons.

Mr. Kenny is a graduate of Somerville High School and is connected with the Boston Public Library. He is a well known club member of Somerville.

GEORGE O. WALES SERIOUSLY ILL

Relatives Clinging to the Tiny Ray of Hope Held Out

George O. Wales, one of the best known and most highly esteemed citizens of Braintree is dangerously ill at his home in that town. He is surrounded by his devoted wife and sons and daughters who are untiring in their attention to the beloved patient.

At 2 o'clock, Mrs. Wales, in answer to a telephone call from the Ledger office said that Mr. Wales was very sick, he was in fact very low and his life was despaired of, but there was the one bright ray of hope which existed so long as life lasted and they were tenaciously clinging to that bright spot in the otherwise darkened atmosphere, buoyed up with the possibility that a turn for the better might manifest itself at any moment.

Mr. Wales is one of the best known residents of the South Shore, he is as well known in Quincy as he is in his native town of Braintree and every where expressions of keen regret are heard over his illness and good wishes for a recovery.

LINEMAN FELL TWENTY FEET

Daniel R. McKenzie Hurt Back and Head

AT QUINCY HOSPITAL

Hardly had the police ambulance returned from the accident case at the Fore River Thursday afternoon when a call was received from Canal and Spear street where a lineman employed by the Quincy Electric Light & Power Co., had fallen from a pole on the corner of the two streets named.

The lineman was Daniel R. McKenzie of Millett street Dorchester, and he fell from the second cross arm, twenty feet to the ground. His back was somewhat injured and his head slightly cut. He was attended by Dr. George M. Sheahan after which he was removed to the City Hospital.

ANDERSONS IN DIVORCE COURT

Wife Alleges Cruel and Abusive Treatment

MARRIED LESS THAN A YEAR

Eva E. Anderson of Quincy has filed a divorce libel against Dr. John H. Anderson. She alleges cruel and abusive treatment.

The couple were married in Quincy, March 11, of last year. In her libel Mrs. Anderson alleges that the cruel and abusive treatment commenced May 23, 1912, and continued at various other times. Mrs. Anderson asks for the right to resume the name of Fryer, that of her former husband.

Both have been married before, Mrs. Anderson divorced from Alexander Fryer, a salesman. Constance Fryer, a public fancy dancer, was their only child. Dr. Anderson was divorced by his first wife on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment. She was Vera Colin, a pretty Swedish girl, now a resident of Cambridge.

May 24, Mrs. Anderson had her husband arrested on a charge of assault and battery. Judge Albert E. Avery, before whom the case was heard, ordered the doctor to give his wife $3 a week toward her support. The couple lived together shortly after. A little son was born to them several weeks ago.

Previous to the assault case and when the couple had been married but ten weeks, Dr. Anderson was brought into court by his wife on a charge of non-support.

COSHLEP FELL FROM STAGING

Is Now in the Hospital With Broken Legs and Hip

ACCIDENT AT FORE RIVER

Late Thursday afternoon Michael Coshlep an employee at the Fore River Shipyard was seriously injured by a fall from a staging on one of the vessels at which he was at work. He fell about 20 feet and sustained a fracture of a bone in the right leg and fractured his left knee and hip. He was taken to the Red Cross hospital where he was given emergency treatment and later removed to the City Hospital in the police ambulance. Coshlep resides on Grafton street Quincy Point. He will recover.

NEWS ITEMS FROM MILTON

Albert Wood has returned from a trip through the cities of the Atlantic sea board.

The Cunningham gym basket ball team will play the strong Taunton Y. M. C. A. team at the gym Saturday evening. The visitors are considered some of the fastest in the state and some of the Milton supporters of the local team concede them the victory. If such is the case it will mean that Cunningham will have lost but one game on their floor. The only lose this season was to Needham at Needham, 24 to 17. They have beaten the Boston Y. M. C. A. 2nd, 26 to 7, Tilton A. C. 35 to 18: Brockton Y. M. C. A., 27 to 16; Boston Y. M. C. A., 56 to 27. A return game cannot be arranged with Needham.

The older members of the gym have formed a basket ball team with Bob Leary as captain and Stanley as manager. The first game will be with the Franklin A. C. at Franklin, Jan. 11 The players are Bob Leary, Russell Rich, Samuel Craig, John Shields, and Dan and Sid Duggan of the Quincy A. A. last season team. They expect a busy season, with a majority of the wins and the makeup of the aggregation undoubtedly means fast playing.

The Boston Y. M. C. U. gymnastic team will give an exhibition at the gym. 11. Since this team is rated as the best in New England and their popularity draws a large crowd, admission will only be by ticket.

One of the most picturesque socials ever held in Milton was the New Year party at the Gym, Tuesday evening. The gym was banked with flags, bunting and streamers, with Christmas colors worked throughout, and capped with boughs from Cunningham Pines. A moon, illuminated with a 100 candle power electric light was set in a window and as the midnight hour drew near, the lights of the hall were shut off and the moon had the appearance of trying to steal in the window. Expressions of pleasure were heard from all those present with the result of the setting and as the chimes struck the dawn of 1913 Dr. L. R. Burnett made a speech of welcome and bade 1912 adieu. About 75 couple enjoyed dancing, music being furnished by Ducettes orchestra. Refreshments were served in a quaint corner and the affair was in charge of Messrs Stout and Williams of the entertainment committee. The matrons were Mrs Holmes, Mrs. Johnson, and Mrs. Pope.

The athletic association of the Milton High school will hold the football dance at Town Hall, Jan. 4. The proceeds will be devoted to the treasury. Elaborate prepartion s have been made and it is expected that a large number will be present.

SUBMARINE AT FORE RIVER

Will Be Built Here During the Summer

PENNSYLVANIA IN SIGHT

Plans for the steel work tobe used in the six submaries, the contract for which has just been awarded to the Electric Boat Co., by the United States government the cost of which is about $2,250,000, are now being made by the Fore River Ship Building Co.

The hulls of the submaries will be built at the Fore River yards and the remainder of the work will be done at the plant of the Electric Boat Co. Groton, Conn. Although work on the hulls will not be commenced until the coming summer it is necessary to finish the specimens for the steel and get the orders for the 1500 tons of shapes and plates for the ribs and sides of the under-water craft.

The Fore River Shipbuilding Co. is preparing a bid for the greatest of all war ships, the Pennsylvania which will have a displacement of 32,000 tons and whose hull and machinery will cost $7,500,000 and the armor plate and armament much more.

The fourth twelve inch gun for the Argentine battleship Rivadavia has arrived and the fifth is on the way. The Rivadavia will have twelve of these guns but even at that she will be no match for the Pennsylvania.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 28 No. 4 | QUINCY, MASS., SATURDAY EVENING, JANUARY 4, 1913 | PRICE TWO CENTS

TRAINS TO GO OVER HIGHWAY AT THE WATER STREET CROSSING

Commencing at Franklin Street Will Be Depressed and Be 65 Feet Wide

Saville Street Dead Ended, But to Have Subway Connections

It is reported upon good authority that the much mooted question of grade crossings in Quincy has at last been settled and that the special commission appointed by the superior court will make its report in a few days.

Under what is considered good authority the Ledger learns that by the new plans agreed upon the tracks at the Water street crossing will go over the street. Commencing at the corner of Franklin street, Water street will be widened to 65 feet, largely on the northerly side of the street. At the same time the street will be gradually depressed until it reaches the crossing where it will pass under the tracks which will be raised about seven feet at this point. In order to get this raise in the tracks they will commence to go up south of Granite street bridge. It will also be necessary to raise School street.

President's avenue will be moved easterly at the point where it joins Water street and the Quincy Adams depot will be located on the easterly side of the tracks in what is now Presidents avenue. In order to do this the two buildings near the corner owned by Paul R. Blackmur will have to be moved. This will leave Water street practically as it is today.

At Saville street the thoroughfare will be dead ended at the railroad crossing and there will be a subway under the tracks from the east to the west sides. Upland road will be carried through the property of James T. Penniman to Granite street taking in what is now Irving place which will become a part of Upland road. The tracks will also be straightened at this point so that the curve at Granite street will not be as sharp as at the present time, the present curve being considered dangerous to fast trains.

The original plan adopted by the Commission for Water street called for the street to go over the tracks by a bridge. Under this plan Water street was to go up in the air commencing at Franklin street and come down to grade again at Pleasant street. There was considerable opposition to this however and just as the Commission was about to make its report the thing was held up .It is understood that the Commission then employed an engineer of its own and the present plan is the result.

An official decree will be issued by the special commission in a few days.

HELMSMEN OF MUNICIPAL SHIP THROUGH TROUBLED WATERS OF 1913

No Easy Task is the One which They Have Entered Upon, but They will Buckle to it with a Will ### Brief Sketch of the Gallant Twenty-Three Headed by Commodore Stone. Who will be Second in Command?

The twenty-fifth year of the City Government of Quincy will be inaugurated Monday at City Hall at 12 o'clock noon. The ceremony will follow that of other years to a large extent. Mayor-elect Eugene R. Stone issued no special invitations to the inaugural ceremony but extended a general invitation to the citizens to be present. That there will be a large attendance of citizens goes without saying for there is always interest in the inauguration of a new City Government, especially this year which may be the last with a council of 23 members if the plans of the Charter revisionists should come to pass.

The members of the City Council-elect are expected to be in their seats a few minutes before the hour of noon in order that when the inaugural party enters there will be no delay in the proceedings.

The inaugural party will enter the hall by the rear stairway and will be led by City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell who has performed that same function every year of the city government. Following him will come City Clerk Emery L. Crane, Mayor-elect, Eugene R. Stone and the Chaplain of the day, Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, who will open the exercises with prayer.

Rumor has it that there will be something out of the usual this year after the inaugural address. The Woman's Relief Corps will be present in a body and it is expected that they have a presentation to make.

The City Clerk will assume the President's chair and will preside until after the Council has organized. His first duty will be to administer the oath of office to the Mayor-elect. He will then call the roll of the City Council who will rise and take the oath of office.

Mayor Stone will then be introduced and will deliver his inaugural address which will be about the usual length and will be published in full in the issue of the Ledger that afternoon.

The address over the City Clerk will again call the roll of the Council who will express their preference for President. It is rumored that there is to be a contest for this office and if so the voting will continue until one has received a majority, or twelve votes.

After the President has been sworn in the City Clerk will resign the gavel to the President and step down to the Clerk's desk which he will occupy until a Clerk of the Council is elected. This will also be by roll call. After the Clerk is chosen and sworn in the duties of the City Clerk are over. A Clerk of Committees, City Auditor and City Messenger will then be elected.

The first thing on the program is the drawing for seats. Usually the old members are allowed to retain the seats occupied by them the previous year.

The Council is then ready for business. The rules of the previous year are usually adopted as the rules of the new Council. Communications will be received from the Mayor appointing constables who will be confirmed. Then the usual number of inauguration day orders will be offered such as borrowing money in anticipation of taxes, authorizing the printing of the Mayor's Inaugural address, the printing of council calendars, rules of the council, authorizing the Mayor to sign deeds and releases of the Adams Temple and School Fund, etc. Most of these are adopted although the anticipation loan order is usually referred to a special committee.

It will also be necessary at this meeting to nominate a member of the Woodward Fund and Property not a member of the Council which nomination must lay on the table for two weeks for final action.

Rule 1, which specifies that regular meetings of the City Council shall be held on the first and third Monday evenings will probably be suspended otherwise the Council would have to meet again that evening. Adjournment will probably be made for a week.

It is also necessary to nominate two members of the Council as Trustees of the City Hospital, although this may be done at a later meeting.

It is rumored that Mayor Stone may at this meeting forward to the City Council the list of his official family. The terms of the present officials do not expire until the first Monday in February, but the Mayor may save himself further trouble by getting these appointments off if his mind.

MAYOR EUGENE R. STONE

REV. BENJAMIN A. WILLMOTT
Who will make the prayer

MAYOR EUGENE R. STONE.

Mayor Eugene R. Stone who on Monday will be inaugurated for his second term as Mayor of the City of Quincy, was born in Boston in 1871, receiving his education in the public schools of that city. In 1890 he accepted a position in the building department of a well known New York house with whom he remained until 1898, at that time being the superintendent for the company. He resigned to accept a position with the Magee Furnace Co., of Boston with whom he remained for several years, leaving that company to embark in the heating and ventilating business for himself under the firm name of Stone, Underhill & Co. This firm have been hustlers from the start and have been successful in obtaining many contracts throughout New England and several in Quincy.

Mayor Stone began his career as a public official in 1905 as a member of the City Council from Ward Two, serving several years in this body. During his term of service he served on all the important standing committees.

In 1908 he became the Republican candidate for Mayor but was defeated at the polls by ex-Mayor Shea. He was mentioned as a candidate the following year but did not heed the call until the fall of 1911 when he accepted the Republican nomination and at the election in December that year was elected by a very large vote his majority being 2034 over the Democratic candidate, James E. Wall.

This year he received the nomination of the Republican party at the caucus and at the election in December was elected after one of the most strenuous campaigns that has been held in Quincy for years, in a three cornered fight by a plurality of 142.

It was during the last campaign that a series of signed letters appeared in the Ledger throwing what was said to be the lime light on the conduct of city affairs. While these letters did not claim that Mayor Stone was responsible for the financial condition in which the city found itself the fact that he happened to be in the Mayor's chair when the high tax rate that many foresaw was sure to come, arrived, many not fully conversant with municipal affairs laid the blame to him, which was not the fact. In spite of the handicap of an almost prohibitive tax rate and the opposition that developed in certain quarters he won out.

The experience gained by Mayor Stone in 1912 will be a great asset to him during the coming year and he has pledged himself that the strictest economy shall be exercised by all departments during 1913.

Mayor Stone was for three years president of the Board of Trade and during his term of service he was a hard worker for the success of that organization. In 1910 he started the movement for a Fourth of July celebration and was the president of the association which made the celebrations of 1910, 1911 and 1912 such a success.

He is also prominently identified with the Washington street Congregational church and has served as one of its officers. Socially he is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity being a member of Rural lodge, St. Stephen's Chapter and Quincy Commandery K. T. Quincy lodge of Elks and the Granite City club.

TREES AND ROCKS SWEPT ASIDE BY TERRIFIC FORCE OF WIND

Big Tree Fell Crashing on Roof of Bethany Church Breaking Windows

Workmen Found it Hard to Cross Bridges. Many Narrow Escapes

Quincy in common with other places experienced one of the heaviest southwest gales for years Friday night. The wind commenced to freshen late in the afternoon and by sun down it was blowing some and the velocity probably reached 60 miles an hour during the night. Huge limbs were torn from the trees, and the harbor front was lashed by angry waves. Considerable damage was done in many parts of the city. One of the first large trees to go by the board was that at the north of the Ledger office. It fell over onto the Bethany church smashing holes in some of the stained glass windows. The two memorial windows on this side of the church however escaped.

Brief sketches of the new City Council also follow:—

JOHN B. BASS.

John Benjamin Bass, one of the five Councilmen at Large, is the second youngest member of the new Council having been born in Quincy, Oct. 18, 1887. He is a son of George S. Bass, who for many years was connected with his father, the late John B. Bass as postmaster of Quincy and the former is at present connected with the post office department at Boston.

JOHN B. BASS

He received his education in the public schools of Quincy, beginning his studies at the Washington school and completing his education at the Quincy high school in the class o 1906. For five years he was employed as a salesman on the Boston Curb Exchange and at the present time is employed as a salesman with Henry L. Kincaide & Co. He is a member of the Quincy Yacht club and owner of the 23 foot cat boat Goblin, and a member of Quincy lodge of Moose.

CHARLES M. BRYANT.

No man in the City Council of 1913 is more familiar with city affairs, or has served the city longer in various capacities, as Mayor, Councilman, and member of Mayor Stone's Advisory board during the past year, than Hon. Charles M. Bryant. In all, Councilman at Large Bryant has served the city as a member of the City Council for twelve years the coming year being his thirteenth. In addition to this he served the city as Mayor for three years, 1902, 1903 and 1904. It was during his administration as Mayor that Quincy in common with other cities experienced

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Kisses take the place of handclasps at some of the inaugural ceremonies where women are inducted into office. No use trying to adopt Eugenic laws with any such bunch as that.

It is about time that officials quit juggling with the Senatorial election matter. Delay will mean that the state will be minus a Representative in the upper branch at a critical period in the nation's history.

Let the Governor and others give a little more attention to the coal situation which they have been talking of handling for months without making a move. The legislature at the present time can be depended to take care of the election of a senator.

Certain persons have already commenced to boom Mr. Walsh for governor next fall. Let the poor man get firmly settled in his new seat before moving the props from under him.

The difficulty of landing with an airship on Boston Common has been overcome. That does not mean however that it will develope into a regular roosting place for them.

The United States has been slow in recognizing the independence of China. It is to be hoped that the defect will be remedied speedily.

Greater Boston has another murder mystery to solve, and the skeins are tangled because of the connection with another more open and similar crime.

Down on the Cape there is a 100 year old lady who took advantage of leap year to get acquainted with a young fellow of her own age.

Brockton's shoe exportation last year showed a big falling off. That cannot be laid at the door of free trade.

Gov. Sulzer is willing to see every one, but it must be in the open. No secret conferences for his administration.

The British skipper who hooked his anchors out of the Bay of Fundy after cutting them away to save his vessel has a place of honor awaiting him among the members of the Sea Serpent club.

If the country is to lose the services of Col. Goethals in the canal zone through Democratic silliness, the finish of the party power is already in sight.

The new Maine governor delivered a fine temperance lecture in his inaugural address, but side stepped the important issue of enforcing the prohibitory law.

John D. Rockefeller prayed four years for something which finally came his way. It is a safe guess that it was a rise in gasoline as that has made its appearance in no uncertain sound at the present time.

Senator Bailey could not get out of the senate without having his little fling. In some instances it was justifiable, but it amounted to very little after all.

Gov. Foss's message rings all right but will it bear the test?

Action is a marvelous producer, far more effective than all the words in the dictionary.

The proposed bill to license cats would be a beneficial measure in many respects and would lessen the number of stray and homeless felines which now make night hideous and they are no good to themselves or anybody else. Cats, excepting the favored pets, have as a rule a hard time to exist and are left to shift for themselves summer and winter. There are numbers of the animals right here in town that are shelterless and uncared for and would be better off if put out of the way.

Hatfield is still at the head of the state republican committee. Hammond got the prize job, chairman of the finance committee.

Many of our friends have found themselves burdened since Christmas with several gifts exactly alike, thus making it difficult to feel altogether joyful over the remembrances. This is rather an unavoidable condition which could perhaps be alleviated by some business-like person who would establish a store for the exchange or sale of such gifts. Duplicate wedding presents have long been bought and sold and why should not the same idea apply to Christmas and birthday presents. The man with six red neckties or his wife with three pocket books, for instance could find an outlet for the surplus articles which might be "just what we wanted" to other purchasers. We think the idea is feasible and could be carried out successfully by the right parties.

BROKEN BONES.

Out of the deep oppressive gloom of centuries, there comes at this late day one bright ray of golden hope to the youngster with the broken bones. The aforesaid youngster is in every household where youngsters have come to be part and parcel of the home and if they have escaped broken bones it was more by good luck than good judgment, and the fact that when they have fallen, it has been their good fortune to land on either some soft part of the earth with their breakable parts or come in contact with the harder earth with some of the softer parts of their body, which of course at the youthful age referred to is not the head. However soft the inside may be the outside coating of the head of the average boy is pretty hard and brittle and susceptible to sudden jars. The same applies to the arms and legs. Maybe it should be expressed limbs, but be that as it may, the more standard term fitted well with the forefathers and there is no reason why it is not good enough for present every day use, that which the youngsters is most directly interested in however is the discovery by a surgical expert, that broken bones can be mended in four days. Cheer up boys, no more long torturous experiences, when the bones are broken and the other fellows are enjoying themselves and you lay and groan, not so much at the pain as the inactivity and the inability to join with the others. Only four days now for the perfect cure of broken bones and then you are ready for another break. Truly the youth of the present day have an abundance to be thankful for over their less fortunate predecessors.

MAYOR STONE'S POSITION.

In his speech before the Houghs Neck Association, Thursday night, Mayor Stone left no room for doubt as to his attitude with relation to the public dock. His statement was straight forward, to the point, had the ring of sincerity to it and there was no dodging the issue. He positively stated that he favored a public dock. But when it came to expending $100,000 of the people's money for such an enterprise there must be something more tangible than mere pledges, airy theory and uncertain qualities as to the receipts before he would sanction such a project. His remarks had the right ring to them and deserve the approval of every thinking citizen. The Mayor has put the issue squarely up to those who ardently advocate the construction of a public dock, and it is up to them to make good.

There is no doubt but what the gentlemen in favor of this project are honorable in every sense of the word. That they are honest and sincere in their belief that a public dock is a necessity, that it will fill a long felt want, and that it can be made to be self supporting, is accepted on every hand. The only point at issue is that they may ere in judgment. That question can easily be solved by following out the suggestion of the mayor conveyed in his remarks at Houghs Neck. Let those interested show in black and white, and by pledges and contracts that they are steadfast in their belief and the objection is removed. Any side stepping or dodging the issue will leave room for reasonable doubt and certainty if such should come to pass, Mayor Stone will carefully weigh that situation, when the matter is brought to him for approval providing the City Council by a vote should put it up to him for final action.

ANOTHER VULGAR DISPLAY.

Another fool woman and her money has soon parted company. A San Francisco female has paid $5000 for a three pound dog and paid a fee of $575 for the animals transportation across the continent in a special Pullman car. Now was there ever such a silly waste of money or vulgar display of wealth.

In the case of a noble dog which by its sagacity and splendid training may have been the means of saving life, it would not be considered strange that if in appreciation of his labors for mankind his last resting place should be marked by a simple stone presenting his virtues to those who passed as an object lesson to the higher order of animal.

But of late years this fine type of animal has hardly been given passing notice while some little snow ball of a pup has been the object of care far surpassing that to which thousands of human beings are albe to receive. Money is spent lavishly upon such animals. It is wilful wasted money thrown away, criminal extravagance, all because of alleged fadism or eccentricity which would be more fittingly termed down right silliness and a vulgar display of wealth, set up by some as a means of securing cheap notoriety. The many that has been foolishly spent on dogs or mites of animals in the past few years would go a long way to relieving the distress which is experienced in every community by hundreds of poor people.

COURSE OF SERMONS.

A course of four evangelistic Sunday evening sermons has been arranged for January in the Swedish Congregational church, each commencing at 7 o'clock.

The following heart and searching questions will be discussed:

Jan. 5—What is your aim?

Jan. 12—What side are you on?

Jan. 19—Have you a clear conscience?

Jan. 26—Is your name in the book?

Special singing will be arranged for these meetings and every one is invited.

GEORGE O. WALES PASSED AWAY

Prominent and Popular Braintree Resident Succumbed

AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

Braintree has lost in the death of George O. Wales a leading citizen, one who was exceedingly popular in town church and club interests. His death occured this morning, Jan. 4, at about one o'clock, after an illness of five days with pneumonia.

He was attended by the most skilled physicians and nurses. Dr. Ernest De Wolf Wales, his son, came on from Indianapolis and the other sons and daughters, who were nearby were summoned. They are George, Nathaniel, Louise and Mrs. Mary Wales Butler. Mrs. Lucy Morse Wales, his devoted wife, was constantly with her husband to do all in her power for his recovery.

George O. Wales was born in Braintree, son of the late George Wales, April 1, 1848. His mother, who is about 92 years old, moved to Randolph after the death of her husband, and is well cared for by her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Lyons. Mr. Wales visited his mother and sister every week, a certain day and hour so they knew when to look for him, never were disappointed. During the winter he visited every Sunday and last Sunday was up there in his automobile.

One of the greatest pleasures of Mr. Wales' life was his promptness in everything, business and social. He insisted upon having bills rendered to him without delay and upon their arrival were approved and checks sent.

Mr. Wales was thoroughly Unitarian and kept in touch with local affairs of that liberal faith, but his interests did not end there for he patronized and aided other denominations of the town. His greatest activity in Braintree was in All Souls' church, Universalist-Unitarian, and he has served most efficiently as the church treasurer and collector. It was by his effort and financial aid that the pretty stone church, which is free from debt, was erected on Elm street opposite the Cochato club. The church organ he gave in memory of his first wife, and Mrs. Jennie Hocking Hunt of Quincy has continually served as organist.

At all gatherings at All Souls' church Mr. Wales was there, except a very few times when away on a business trip. At the Sunday morning services he arrived early and greeted all who came with a hearty hand-shake. He ushered visitors to pews and often assisted in passing the offering plates. Offerings are taken at the morning services only four times a year. Mr. Wales always stayed to Sunday school and had a class of boys.

The Cochato club was started by Mr. W. H. Shaw and others, and with the help and assurance by Mr. Wales the club was organized and incorporated and an up-to-date club house erected about thirteen years ago. Mr. Wales visited the club nearly every evening to see that all was well and Saturday evenings greeted the members and guests cordially. He never entered into the games of bowling, billiards, and cards, but was interested just the same.

At the New Year dance there was a gloom because of his absence and the report that he was seriously ill, and from that time the club members and friends had been hoping for encouraging reports.

Last Saturday afternoon Mr. Wales attended the postponed Christmas tree festivities at All Souls' church and was at church Sunday morning apparently as well as usual.

Major Nathaniel Wales, the great grandfather of George O. Wales was one of Braintree's great men and was very influential in all town affairs. He had a daughter Mary and two sons, Benjamin and Nathaniel.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Wales had ten children, Waldo, Jonathan, Benjamin, Harriet, Mary, Sarah, George, Thomas, William and Ruth.

George Wales lived on Cleveland avenue, Braintree. The house was formerly the property of Major Wales and was located on Elm street on what is now the lawn in front of Mr. G. O. Wales' house.

The Wales family in Braintree has intermarried and a great many people in this town are related to them.

CONSIDERING DOUBLE TRACK

Houghs Neck Committee to Confer with Railway

THEN THE COMMISSIONERS

A conference was held at City Hall Friday evening on the proposition for the double tracking of the street car line to Houghs Neck. Several weeks ago the Houghs Neck associates appointed a committee to take up this question, the committee including Mayor Stone, Senator McDevitt and Representatives Sullivan and Leslie.

Friday evening President Henry W. French, of the Houghs Neck Associates met these gentlemen in one of the offices at City Hall. None of the street railway officials were present however. The gentlemen present talked over the situation and it was decided that the first thing to do was to have a conference with the officials of the street railway company to see what they were willing to do about the matter of double tracking.

If the Houghs Neck associates are unable to get the railway company to double track from the end of the present long turnout at Post Island to what is known as Calamity corner, it is proposed that the matter shall be taken up with the Board of Railroad Commissioners.

The committee will arrange for an early conference with the local street railway officials.

DIED AT HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Celia J. Baxter of 298 North street, North Weymouth, died at the Quincy City Hospital Friday night. The funeral will take place from her home Tuesday morning. A high mass of requiem will be said at the Church of the Immaculate Conception at 9 o'clock. Burial will be at Arlington. The deceased was the wife of Frank Baxter.

DEAVER—FLOWERS.

Miss Bessie M. Flowers of this city and William O. Deaver of Baltimore, Md., were married by Rev. Joseph Battell Shephard on Dec. 4, at Portland, Me. The occupation of the groom is given as a shipfitter. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Gillis of this city, whose address is given in the directory as 33 Newcomb place.

Yielding to many requests, Mr. Enrico Barraja has arranged a series of three chamber recitals at his studio, 30 Greenleaf Building. The successful outcome of the recitals of last year which were dedicated each to a composer, has led Mr. Barraja to arrange the coming ones, each to a typical school. Thus the first one will cover Italian music from the early time of 1600 and 1700, classic period and modern. The review will be rather fleeting but none the less comprehensive. The second will cover French music in the same way, and the third German music. Mr. Barraja will be assisted in the program by his advanced vocal and piano pupils. In addition to this, Mr. Barraja, will present some of his advanced pupils at a special recital in Huntington Chambers hall, Boston, January twentieth.

GREAT BOOZE FLOOD

$10,000 Worth of Intoxicants Emptied Into Independence Gutters

Independence, Kan., Jan. 4.—For four hours the gutters in front of the Montgomery county courthouse here ran with beer and whiskey, following the destruction of more than $10,000 worth of intoxicants confiscated in "joint" raids the last nine months.

Acting under orders of the district court the sheriff and his assistants carted the barrels and cases to the street and broke them open. There were 200 kegs of beer, 100 barrels of bottled beer, 150 cases of bottled beer, five barrels and 100 cases of whiskey, besides a number of small packages with various contents.

THE STORM

door fronts of Kincaides theatre was blown in with a smash that startled the audience. The ushers however calmed the people by their explanations and the performance was uninterrupted.

On Quincy avenue a large limb of a tree near Scammells plant blew down and fell across the trolley wire. Workmen coming home from the Fore River had to continually dodge falling limbs. Several large trees on Birch mountain were uprooted and a number of bowlders were dislodged. Some of them tumbled down into the street thirty feet below and then rolled across the roadway into the swamp.

At West Quincy a large tree in front of the residence of Dr. Ash was blown down but fell in such a manner that no damage was done.

At Montclair two large plate glass windows 24 by 49 were smashed in by the wind. A large tree near the corner of Farrington street and North Central avenue also went over and lodged on the electric wires. Many of the electric light wires in various parts of the city were either blown down or so badly crossed that the street lights went out and the Electric Light Co. had a large gang of men out all night trying to keep the circuits clear.

Pedestrians crossing the Neponset and Fore River bridges had a hard time getting across in the face of the high wind.

Dr. Daniel B. Reardon had a narrow escape from injury while coming over East Squantum street in his automobile. A limb blown from a tree came down falling directly in front of his machine smashing one of the head lights and bending one of the fenders.

All over the city the streets are covered with broken limbs and pieces of old papers that were blown about. Fences in many parts of the city were also blown down during the night. There was an unusually high tide Friday night and the shore front was lashed with angry waves.

For a time the wind would sag along about normal, being pretty stiff all the time. Then it would seem to hold back for a minute just like a shore wave gathering up its strength for the final dash, and there would be a roar and a rush and the air would sweep along as if it would carry everything before it. Houses rocked on their foundations like cradles. People in bed, while soothed by the rocking motion were all the time fearful that the roof and walls would clutter down about their heads and thus dispel the beautiful illusion of being rocked to sleep. From Adams street, along Hancock street, north as far as the eye could reach, not a street lamp was in commission during the early part of the evening. At about the same time, Greenleaf street was shrouded in gloom.

A chicken house, housing about 50 chickens, was upset in the yard of Mrs. William Sudron, 20 Payne street, during the night and an examination this morning showed that a number had been killed. Stretches of wire netting were tangled and posts uprooted and the place had a wrecked appearance. The full extent of the damage is unknown.

A chimney on the building of the Scammell Carriage shop blew down and considerable damage to the roof resulted. Workmen are repairing the chimney.

A large pole of the Quincy Electric Light and Power Co. at Main and Summer streets toppled across the street this noon and the residents became alarmed because of the many wires it carries. An arm supporting an arc light is close to the ground and the company immediately started to replace it after it was reported.

SUCCUMBED TO PNEUMONIA.

Mrs. Elizabeth Clifford, wife of John Clifford of Portsmouth, N. H., and daughter of Mrs. Margaret Farrell of 210 Willard street, West Quincy, died Friday after a weeks illness with pneumonia. The deceased was in her 38th year and leaves her husband and one child and mother, one brother Peter J. and two sisters. She is well known in West Quincy, where she made her home up to about six years ago. The body will be sent here, arriving Sunday. The funeral will take place from 210 Willard street Monday morning. A high mass of requiem will be said at St. Mary's church.

TO SPEAK IN QUINCY.

R. E. Hawley of the Boston School committee, Assistant Director of Evening and Continuation schools, is to speak in Quincy, Jan. 21, under the auspices of the Philanthropic committee of the Quincy Women's club. Mr. Hawley will speak especially of the work done at the Opportunity clubs in East Boston, Roxbury and Charlestown.

CHIMNEY BLOWN DOWN BY WIND

Roof and Side of the Packard Building Considerably Damaged

NARROW ESCAPE OF 2 MEN

Walter M. Packard and Thomas Burns narrowly escaped being struck by falling timber and brick when the 25 foot chimney on the Packard Foundry blew down shortly before noon today. The roof and side of the building was wrecked and wires were torn down. The bricks struck the foundation of a house opposite and blocked the street.

The two men had just finished pouring molten metal and had stepped away from a kettle directly below the chimney. They received no warning of the fall but had just stepped out of range.

The chimney was built in 1852 and has survived many severe storms. No one was passing on Cottage street when the chimney fell.

VICTIM OF EXPLOSION

Laid at Rest Surrounded by Sorrowing Friends

The funeral of iMtchell Lavoie, one of the victims of the Thursday afternoon explosion at the plant of Reed & Vendret on Vernon street, was held this morning from his home, 17 Barry street. A large number of relatives and friends attended the high mass of requiem at St. Mary's church which was celebrated by Rev. Fr. William J. Duffy. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The deceased was one of the best known residents of eWst Quincy and was a faithful attendant of St. Marys church. He was prominent in affairs of the Holy Name Society and was a member of Le Franco-Americaine and Le Societie de St. Jean le Baptiste Delegations were present from both societies.

Mr. Lavoie was known through the community as an energetic, honest and home-loving man. He is survived by a wife and four children, Blanche, Alice, George and Nelson.

SMITH—COLBATH.

Miss Elizabeth Etta Colbath, and Albert Wesley Smith were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Colbath, 65 Spear street, Thursday evening. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Wentworth F. Stewart of Roxbury.

Miss Lena Smith of Weymouth, the groom's sister was bridesmaid and Frank Walker, a cousin of the bride, was best man. The home was prettily decorated and guests were present from Woburn, Winthrop, Fall River, Weymouth and Quincy.

During a reception which followed the cereomny, Miss Ethel Raymond of Weymouth and Silas Ross of Hingham furnished a musical program.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith left for a honeymoon to New York and will make their home at 65 Spear street after Feb. 1.

BUSINESS AND SOCIAL SESSION

Gleaners Elect Officers and Then Have a Good Time

The annual business meeting of the Gleaners, a society of young ladies of the Swedish Baptist church, was held Friday evening at the home of Rev. Paul Hallin, Glendale Road. Excellent reports from both secretary and treasurer were read and accepted. There was very little business to come before the meeting so the time was given to the election of officers for the coming year. The president and treasurer were unanimously re-elected, the officers chosen were as follows:

Teacher—Rev. Paul Hallin.
President—Lillian Lindberg.
Vice President—Ella Werme.
Secretary,—Esther Carlson.
Treasurer—Rebecca Nelson.

An entertainment, flower and other committees were chosen.

Refreshments were served and singing and piano selections were enjoyed, after which the society adjourned until next month.

It is hoped this year may be a bright and prosperous one for the society, and that much good work may be accomplished by the members who are working earnestly.

PLAY SQUARE CLUB DANCE

About 75 couple attended the dancing party of the Play Square Club of the Universalist church at New Colonial hall Friday evening. Music was furnished by Wilson's orchestra and refreshments were served. The committee in charge was Lester Sprague, Freeman Hyland, Willard Hyland, Everett Andrews.

BETHANY CHURCH.

The services on Sunday will be of unusual interest. At the communion service in the morning thirty-three will be received into fellowship of the church. At the pleasant evening service the address will be on a popular saying, "Be good and you will be lonesome."

MRS. WHITTEMORE DEAD.

Mrs. Johanna Whittemore, wife of Frank A. Whittemore, died this morning at her home, 24 Chestnut street. The deceased was a sister of the late Mrs. William Corbin of Summer street, and is survived by a husband.

MR. STEVENS FUNERAL.

The funeral of Sandford S. Stevens was held from 50 Prospect street, Atlantic, Friday afternoon. Services were conducted by Rev. T. C. Davison. The casket was placed in the receiving vault of the Mt. Wollaston cemetery. Interment will take place within a few days. The deceased was in his 62nd year and leaves his wife, one son and one daughter.

GOOD WORK CONTINUES.

As a result of the excellent co-operation with the different societies and churches the Associated Charities report that between 25 and 30 more families received aid at Thanksgiving and Christmas this year than in previous years and it is believed that there was practically no duplication this year.

MERE HAND OUT OF SCHOOL Q'S

Some Feeling that it Should be Attended with More Ceremony

The four men on the Quincy High cross country team, Captain Kingsbury, Albin Anderson, Allen Connor and Edward Newcomb, received their Q's Friday. The boys feel very much put out over the way they were given out. Captain Kingsbury who was told to give them to the boys when he saw them. It is claimed that when each one has done his best, worked hard and faithfully to bring up the standard of the Quincy High, it seems as though they deserved to be recognized in a way other than make it seem a disgrace rather than an honor for them. Many express the hope that the authorities can see it in that light by another year and have the hall opened for the occasion,—in order that the other pupils may see them given out, and know what the Q's stand for, instead of twitting some of them and saying they never earned them. The different events were the Inter-class meet of Q. H. S., the Inter-Scolastic at Brookline and the annual run with Weymouth High.

TO INSTALL OFFICERS.

The installation of Officers of Paul J. Revere Corps, No. 103 will be held in G. A. R. hall, Tuesday, Jan. 14th. Special meeting in afternoon at 2 o'clock sharp. Supper will be served at 6 o'clock to which the members of Post 88 have been invited, and at 7.30 the installation of officers will take place with Mrs. Mary E. Holbrook as Installing Officer and Mrs. Carrie F. Loring as Conductor.

SUPERINTENDENTS DINED.

Seventeen superintendents of the Unitarian Sunday schools of Boston and vicinity dined at the City Club, Boston, Friday evening, with the president of their association. Charles H. Johnson of Quincy, presiding. Rev. William I. Lawrance, president of the Unitarian Sunday School Society of the United States and Canada, was a guest.

HELMSMEN OF POLITICAL SHIP

a coal famine similar to that of the present year only worse, and he took the bull by the horns and purchased several car loads of coal direct from the mines which he sold to the citizens of Qiuncy at cost.

He is widely known as a vote getter, and it is a common saying that what he goes after usually lands in his hat. During his service in the City Council he has served as its President for several years, the last time in the Council of 1911. His previous service in the City Council was during the years 1889, '91, '92, '95, '96, '97, '99, 1900, '01, '08, '09, '10, and '11.

He was born in Lowell, Nov. 29 1857 and has lived in Quincy since the early eighties. He was educated in the Bridgewater academy, and at the Chauncey Hall school Boston. He entered the paper trade during his young days and is now treasurer of the A. Storrs & Bement Co., the well known paper house of Boston.

He has also served the Squantum Yacht club as Commodore for several years and has been President of the American Poultry Association. In addition to his many other things he is a poultry fancier and his Rhode Island Reds are almost too well known to need mentioning.

He is a 32nd degree Mason as well as being a member of the Royal Arch Chapter and Quincy Commandery.

JOHN R. RICHARDS.

Councilman at Large John R. Richards re-elected returns to the City Council of 1913 with an experience of four years, three of which was as a representative from the ward and last year as Councilman at Large. During the past year he has held the position as Chairman of the most important committee of the Council, namely the Finance Committee, and it is reported that he is a candidate for the presidency of the council of 1913.

Councilman Richards is a native of Plymouth, England where he war born Sept. 28, 1865, but he has been a resident of Quincy since 1879. He learned the granite trade when a young man and this he has since followed. Some years ago he formed a partnership under the firm name of Craig & Richards which continued for some years, but for a number of years he has carried on business under his own name. He is one of the most active members of the Quincy Board of Trade and has served as its president, also an honorary member of the Bird club and the Quincy Yacht club.

Since he has been a member of the Council he has served on practically all of the committees and in the Council of 1912 as chairman of the Finance Committee.

EDWARD J. SANDBERG.

Councilman at Large Sandberg has the reputation of always polling one of the largest votes of any candidate either for municipal or state office for which he has been a candidate. He has been a member of the City Council for four consecutive years and now enters upon his fifth. In addition to Councilman he has served as a Representative a the General Court from this district in 1906 and 1907.

Councilman Sandberg was born in Sweden, Oct. 21, 1866 coming to America in 1886. He received his education in his native town and for two years was employed with the engineering corps of the Skone & Holland railroad company. Coming to Quincy he found employment with the late Henry Barker with whom he remained for two years after which he entered business for himself as a teamster and contractor at which he has been phenominally successful.

He is a member of the Swedish Lutheran church, of the several branches of Odd Fellows, Board of Trade, Quincy Yacht club, Quincy lodge of Elks and the Scandinavian Republican club. During the past year he has served as Chairman of the Committee on Streets.

JOSEPH L. WHITON.

In point of previous service Councilman Joseph L. Whiton is one of the longest members of the City Council for the council of 1913 will be his seventh year of service having previously served in the City Councils of 1902, '03, '08, '09, and '10. The first three years of his service was as a Councilman from Ward Two then as

JOSEPH L. WHITON.

Councilman from Ward One and lastly as Councilman at Large.

Councilman Whiton was born in Quincy, Feb. 28, 1873 and has always made his home in this city. He was educated in the public schools and at the Adams Academy and is at present engaged in the rubber business although for a number of years he was engaged as a shoe salesman.

He is a member of Rural Masonic lodge and the Quincy Yacht club. He has served on all of the important committees of the council.

CHARLES A. ERICSON.

Councilman Ericson's popularity was testified to at the recent municipal election when he received a phenominal large vote and was returned to the City Council from Ward One for the fourth term. Councilman Ericson was born in Tisslinge, Sweden, Oct. 19, 1873. He attended the public school in his native place and on leaving school learned the carpenters trade. He came to America in 1895 and has since made his home in Quincy. In 1904 he commenced business under his own name and since that time has built many houses in

CHARLES A. ERICSON.

Quincy and has been a large factor in building up that section of the city known as Cranch hill, Glendale road and Spear street.

His first term as Councilman was in 1910 when he served on the standing committee of Streets and Legislative Matters. In 1911 he served on the Finance committee and Street committee and in 1912 as Chairman of the Committee on Sewers and as a member of the Finance committee.

He is a member of the Quincy Board of Trade, Foresters of America, Scandinavian club and several other organizations. He resides on Euclid avenue.

JOSEPH W. JOHNSON.

One of the new members of the City Council of 1913 from the Centre district, ward one is almost too well known about City Square to need any introduction and the large vote which he received on election day can testify to his popularity. "Joe," as his friends call him, was born in Boston, Sept. 29, 1855, but came to Quincy when but a babe. It was in the public schools of Quincy that he received his early education going from here to Woburn at the age of 13 years and completing his education at the Warren academy at Woburn.

He was always fond of the water and it is not surprising to learn that on leaving school he enlisted in the navy where he served for three years. After getting his fill of the sea he returned home and began work in the grocery and provision business. Returning to Quincy is 1888 he found employment with W. H. Doble at South Quincy where after a brief period he and Mr. Doble formed a co-partnership and a grocery store was opened by the firm at Houghs Neck. This firm continued for two years at the end of which "Joe" and his brother Robert started the well known firm of Johnson Bros. Five years ago Joe withdrew from the firm and opened a provision store in Boston near the North station which he still carries on. He resides on Russell Park.

He is a member of the Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows, Quincy lodge of Elks and the Quincy Yacht club. The office of Councilman is his first public office.

WILLIAM P. THOMPSON.

Councilman from Ward One, re-elected is a native of Brooklyn, N. Y. where he was born April 1874. He received his education at Bowdoin college being a member of the class of 1894. After graduating from Bowdoin he entered the Harvard Law school, graduated with the class of 1897 and was admitted to practice in 1898. While in the law school he was associated with George Swasey the well known Boston attorney and on being admitted to practice he associated himself with that office.

He came to Quincy in 1901 and opened a law office in this city in connection with his Boston office. He is a member of the Quincy Board of Trade and the Granite City club. During the year 1912 he served on the Committee on Streets and Public Buildings.

STEPHEN L. DEVANEY.

Reelected from the Quincy Point ward after a hot political contest for his second term is an East Boston boy having been born in that part of the state capital, Dec. 23, 1885. He however came to Quincy with his parents when three months old and has since made this city his home.

STEPHEN L. DEVANEY

He graduated from the Washington school in 1899 and from the High school in 1903. Leaving school he found employment at the Fore River where he is still located. During the Council of 1912 he served on the standing committees of Sewers and Legislative Matters.

CHARLES A. ERICSON,

FRANK J. DUFFY.

After an absence of one year Frank J. Duffy returns to the City Council from the Quincy Point district, ward two for his second year of service. He is a native of East Brookfield, where he was born April 25, 1885. He came to Quincy with his parents in 1893. He attended the public schools and the Adams academy from which he graduated in the class of 1902. He then found employment with the Fore River company starting at the bottom rung of the ladder and working up step by step until he now holds an important position in the electrical department. He is a member of Quincy Council Knights of Columbus and is a brother of the late Rev. Michael Duffy.

THOMAS GRIFFIN

One of the new members of the City Council from Ward Two was born in Ireland in 1873 and came to America when a child and settled in Lowell. He received his education in the public schools of Lowell, and graduated from the Lowell High school. Soon after leaving school he found employment in the electrical department of the Bay State Street railway Co. He has been in charge of the power plants of the company for some years. He came to Quincy in 1900 and has since that time been in charge of the million dollar power plant of the street railway in Quincy. His technical education was received at the International Correspondence school and at the Y. M. C. A. schools. He is married and resides on Edison street.

GEORGE GAUTHIER.

One of the three members of the City City Council from Ward Three, the South Quincy ward returns to the Council of 1913 for his second term. During the year 1912 he served on the Committees on Fire Department and Police, Ordinances and Licenses. He was also a member of the special committee appointed to select a site for a public dock and to consider the advisability of establishing a dock.

GEORGE GAUTHIER

He was born in Wolton, P. Q., March 15, 1857, during a temporary stay of his parents in Canada, who were residents of Maine. He returned to Maine with his parents when an infant and received his education in the public schools of that state. He came to Quincy Jan. 2, 1891 and has since that time made his home in this city. He is a carpenter by trade. He is a member of Preble lodge, A. F. & A. M. of Sandford, Me.

WILLIAM FARQUHARSON.

No man is better known among the granite men than is William Farquharson the new member of the Council of 1913 from Ward Three. Born in Scotland, June 29, 1859, he spent his youthful days on a farm, coming to America and to Quincy, April 14, 1880. Soon after coming to Quincy he found employment at the polishing mill of McKenzie & Patterson, the first firm to introduce granite polishing in

WILLIAM FARQUHARSON

Quincy. He remained with this firm for two years when he went to Biddeford, Me., where he became the foreman of a polishing plant of a large granite firm. Returning to Quincy he was again employed by McKenzie & Patterson for a time and then accepted a position as foreman of the international Granite Co., whose plant was located where the Fore River plant is now. He remained there for 9 years and in September, 1894, he formed a co-partnership with M. J. McInnis under the firm name of the Eagle Polishing Co., which company is still in operation. Councilman Farquharson has been a member of Clan McGregor O. S. C. for 32 years having become affiliated with the Clan before he became of age. He has also been a member of the Royal Arcanum for 13 years and treasurer of the local lodge for 12 years. He is also a member of the Quincy Board of Trade and the Republican City Committee. The office of Councilman is his first public office.

CHARLES A. ROSS

Returns to the City Council of 1913 from Ward Three for his second term. He was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, May 15, 1882 but has been a resident of Quincy since he was a year old, his parents coming to this city at that time. He completed his education in the public schools of the city and then entered the employ of the Vose Piano Co., where he mastered the piano business. At the present time he is head salesman of the Kraft, Bates & Spencer Co. He is a member of Rural Masonic lodge, Clan McGregor O. S. C. and the Water Street Presbyterian church. During the year 1912 he served on the Committees on Sewers and Public Buildings.

HARRY T. BOYD

Of the West Quincy ward returns for his third term, having served in the Councils of 1911 and 1912. He was in Quincy March 21, 1884, being a son of Capt. William Boyd, and a brother of John A. Boyd for whom the local camp of Spanish War Veterans was named. He received his education in the public schools and at the Adams academy. After leaving school he entered the employ of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., where he is still engaged. During the past year he has served as chairman of the Committee on Elections and also on Streets. He was also a member of the Special Committee on Financial Investigation which has gone into the study of City affairs the past year and which has reported several important measures. He is a member of the Copeland club and the St. Mary's C. T. A. & M. B. society.

DANIEL F. CORCORAN.

To Daniel F. Corcoran belongs the distinction of being the youngest member of the City Council of 1913 and he will represent Ward Four. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Corcoran of 9 Grove street and was born in Quincy Feb. 27, 1889. He obtained his education in the public schools of Quincy commencing at the Willard school. On the completion of the new Gridley Bryant school he was transferred to that building from which he graduated in 1902. He entered the High school in the class of 1906 where he remained two years.

Leaving school he found employment with a monotype company and soon became an expert, and as such has travelled all over New England as a demonstrator. He is at present employed with the Standard Printing Co., of Boston. He is affiliated with Division 2, A. O. H., Ave Maria Council Knights of Columbus and the McDevitt club.

STEPHEN B. LITTLE.

After an absence from public life for fourteen years Stephen B. Little of West Quincy returns to the City Council of 1913 for his fourth year. Councilman Little first entered service in the City Council in the year 1896 and he also served in the Councils of 1897 and 1898. During those years he served on the Committee on Public Buildings, Streets, Fire, Police and State Aid. He was the labor man's friend in the council and was a hard worker for any measure that would benefit the laboring man.

Councilman Little was born in West Quincy in 1855 and after graduating from the Willard school in 1871 he worked for a time at the stone cutters trade. In 1876 he opened a gentlemen's furnishing goods store in West Quincy which he still carries on. In 1895 he was appointed as superintendent of Station A by the late James F. Burke, the then postmaster, and this position he has since held. He was also at one time the editor of the West Quincy Enterprise a weekly paper published at West Quincy in the early nineties.

When the West Quincy Improvemen Society was formed several years ago he was elected as its President and has been reelected to that position ever since. He is a member of the A. O. H. and has been prominently identified with St. Mary's church.

CHARLES W. BAILEY.

Returns to the City Council for his third year from the Wollaston district ward five. Since his service in the City Council he has become almost too well known to need any further introduction at this time. He is a man who makes a careful study of all matters brought before the Council and his vote is recorded in accordance with what he considers the best interest of the city. Whether the order in question is one that concerns his own ward or any other ward, does not count if he considers the appropriation unwise or beyond what he believes the city can afford.

He was born in Scituate in 1872 but has been a resident of Wollaston for a number of years. During his younger years he was employed in a jewelry store but at the age of 16 he secured a position in the Boylston National bank of Boston where he has advanced step by step until today he holds one of the most important positions in that institution. He is also a trustee of a large Boston estate, a member of the Boston National Bank Cashiers' association and the Boston Baptist Social Union, also a director in the Quincy Y. M. C. A. and Wollaston Co-operative bank.

CHARLES E. BARKER.

Of Ward Five returns to the Council for his second term. He is a state of Maine boy having been born in Livermore Falls, Feb. 19, 1880. His education was obtained at the public schools in his native town and at the Livermore Falls High school from which he graduated in 1896. He came to Wollaston January 1, 1900. He then entered the Burdett Business college where he completed his education. After graduating he entered the employ of the Walter C. Mentzer Co., wholesale provision dealers and has since been employed by that firm.

He is a member of John Hancock lodge I. O. O. F. and was one of the organizers of the Wollaston Tennis club. He is also a member of a well known whist club.

CHARLES E. GILLIATT.

Returns to the Council of 1913 from Wollaston for his second term. He is one of the ward's well known business men, being president and general manager of the A. B. Robbins Iron Co. whose plant is located at Norfolk Downs. He was born in Digby, N. S., in 1874. At the age of 16 years he went to Worcester where he mastered the trade of an ornamental iron worker. Here he was employed by several firms, at one time being the superintendent for the firm with whom he learned the business. In 1901 he associated himself with the A. B. Robbins Co.

He received his early education in Digby, N. S. and studied architecture at Worcester. Returning to Boston he took a course in structural engineering under Prof. Rockwell. He has been a resident of Qiuncy for five years.

He is a member of the Wollaston Yacht club, the Park and Downs Men's club, of the Masonic Fraternity, including the Commandery, Shrine and Eastern Star, The Master Builders association and New England Iron League.

HERBERT G. BEEMAN

Returned to the Council of 1912 from the Atlantic district, Ward Six, is a native of St. John, N. B., where he was born in 1866. He received his education in the schools of Canada and Boston having come to the latter city when a young man. By trade he is a machinist and for 11 years was foreman for the G. A. Walker Machine Co., of Boston. For the past, ten years he has been employed as general foreman for the Standard Rivet Co. He is a member of John Abbot lodge of Masons of Somerville, the Somerville Royal Arch Chapter, De Molay Commandery K. T. and Aleppo Temple Mystic Shrine.

JAMES H. CUNNINGHAM.

Of the Atlantic district, Ward Six, returns to the council of 1913 for his third year, his first year having been in the City Council of 1892. He was born in Boston in 1861 and came to Atlantic nine years later where he has since resided. He received his education in the public schools of the city and has been identified with local public affairs for many years. His first appearance in public life was during the administration of Ex-Mayor Fairbanks, when he was an inspector of the Board of Health. In 1902, '03, and '04, he served as Overseer of the Poor under Ex-Mayor Bryant and in 1905, '06 and '07, as Tax Collector under Ex-Mayor Thompson. In 1906 on the death of County Treasurer, Charles H. Smith he was elected by the County Commissioners for the balance of the year. With the advent of Mayor Shea, Councilman Cunningham went out of office but not for long for he soon received an appointment as agent of the State Board of Charity which he still holds.

One little incident in the public life of Councilman Cunningham provokes a smile. When Ex-Mayor Hodges took office, Councilman Cunningham held the position of Inspector of the Board of Health. Mayor Hodges had another man slated for the position, however, and his excuse for not appointing Mr. Cunningham was because he was in poor health and was not expected to live long. Mayor Hodges has been gone on the long road some years yet Mr. Cunningham is still on earth and about as lively as they make them. During the past year he has served on the Finance Committee and has been a ready debater on many of the matters that have come up for consideration.

CHARLES A. HADLOCK.

Is one of the new members of the City Council of 1913 from the Atlantic district, Ward Six, yet he comes to the City Council with an experience of five years having served in the City Councils of 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1909. It was during the latter year that as Chairman of the Committee on Ordinances he gave a lot of valuable time to the revision of the Ordinances of the city.

He was born in Charlestown, Dec. 17, 1862 and when still a babe came to Neponset where he obtained his education. Leaving school he served an apprenticeship as a carpenter with his father, J. E. Hadlock, a former well known Boston builder, and whose business is now carried on under old firm name by Councilman Hadlock. He came to Atlantic May 8, 1897 and has made his home in Quincy since that time.

BRIEFS

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the National Mount Wollaston bank is to be held in the banking rooms on Tuesday at 3.30 P. M.

Miss Winnie Cole and Master William Cole have been confined to their home with tonsilitis the past week.

The annual service of the Woman's Guild of Christ church the fourth of its kind in this parish, will be held Sunday evening, at 7.30. It is one of the best services of the year, when all the members of all the organizations assemble as a working parish to worship together and to hear an inspiring sermon. The preacher will be the Rev. Dr. Addison, rector of All Saint's church, Brookline. The music wil be festival. Pews will be reserved so that members of the various arganizations may be seated together.

The question of a New Years watch meeting in Atlantic has been agitated for several years, and each season the local minister has evaded the matter fearing that holding a religious service until after twelve o'clock at night would be more evidence of the lack of sense or dissipation than religion. However the watch meeting in Boston this year gave the ultra religious consciousness an opportunity to gratify the abnormal religious appetites, and several after the night's enjoyment looked satisfied walking from Neponset bridge to their different homes with children at their different home Years morning. Ringing bells and blowing horns after midnight may have a religious element, but there are many who feel that those hours would be better spent in taking the rest that nature demands.

The next meeting of Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters will be held with Mrs. Carrol Bates of Warren avenue on Monday, Jan. 6th.

Mrs. Elisha D. Atkins of Bromfield street underwent a severe surgical operation Thursday. She has a host of friends who wish her complete recovery to health and there is every indication that her convalescing will be favorable though necessarily tedious.

Atlantic came up to its highest mark in selling red cross seals this year, passing the expectations of Dr. Maria E. Drew, who has undertaken the thankless task of distribution, collection and sale of seals for several years. The benevolent spirit is growing throughout the community and few appealed in vain in this section. $900 red cross seals being sold in Atlantic alone. The services of Memorial Congregational and the Sacred Heart Sunday schools were freely put at the service of Dr. Drew, by the pastors.

Mrs. Henry Glass Grandmouth is suffering from a severe attack of bronchitis at her home of John street.

The parcels post has made its successful and welcome debut in Atlantic; successful because it covers the whole community and delivers the goods in good repair; welcome, because the team has been a lift to the over-worked letter carriers. Without the parcels post, this section depended on the local expresses bringing bundles from the general express offices or people carrying their own bundles. Rev. T. W. Davison has twice spoken of the local carriers being made to act as pack mules at Christmas an New Years saying it was time for the people to ask for better service. Uncle Sam should be more considerate of the public servants who carry so much cheer and happiness to others.

VOTING CONTEST

dates are nominated and well known, but every coupon should have the family name at least. All coupons marked "Williams" will be counted for Fred D. Williams, and all coupons marked "MacKay" will be counted for A. R. MacKay, and so on down the list. The Contest Editor would suggest, however, that one coupon each day be filled out in full and put on top. Candidates will find rubber stamps very convenient.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

TWO MORE PRIZES.

Two prizes will be awarded Monday, Jan. 6, a first and a second prize for the largest gain in total during the week ending at 9 A. M. on that date. The prizes will not be vote certificates but very acceptable prizes to the winners. Get busy.

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate

By Seaver & Frost, Auctioneers, 18 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage of real estate given by James Donohue and Barbara K. Donohue, his wife in her right, both of Somerville, County of Middlesex and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to the Workingmens Co-operative Bank, a corporation duly established under the laws of said Commonwealth, and having its usual place of business in Boston, in the County of Suffolk and Commonwealth aforesaid, dated March 21, 1902, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Book 917, Page 532, for breach of the condition of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same will be sold at Public Auction on the premises on Monday, January 20, 1913, at three o'clock in the afternoon, the real estate described in said mortgage to wit:—

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situated in that part of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk and said Commonwealth, called Wollaston Park, being lot numbered Four hundred and five (405) on plan of Charles S. Miller, dated April 10, 1890, recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Book of Plans No. 12, Plan 566, bounded: Southeasterly by Beach street, Fifty (50) feet; Southwesterly by lot Four hundred and four (404) on said Plan, Eighty-four (84) feet; Northwesterly by land formerly of B. A. Gould, Fifty (50) feet; and Northeasterly by lot Four hundred and six (406) on said Plan, eighty-four (84) feet. Containing, according to said plan, Forty-two hundred (4200) square feet of land, be said measurements more or less.

ADAMS SISTERS VERY PLEASING

Little Ones Rendered Delightful Program

Too much cannot be said in praise of the refined, unique and attractive entertainment presented by the Adams sisters, at Alpha hall, Friday evening, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. The program was varied and interesting and the charming personality of the sisters gave additional pleasure.

The first numbers "The Disappointment" and "The Bluebird" were sung by both in clear, sweet, harmonious tones, very delightfully. The reading, "The Keeper of the Lighthouse," by Sara Adams, was rendered in an unusually expressive manner, and elicited hearty applause. She responded with, "The Little Boy in Trouble." The sketch, "Fast Friends," by both was exceedingly amusing, and pleased the audience. "Hiawatha's Wooing" by Longfellow, by Lucy Adams, displayed talent and ability. The group of tableaux Merald of Peace; Goddess of Flowers; Morning; Night; Red Riding Hood and Advent of Liberty by Sara Adams were especially graceful and pleasing.

The monologue by Lucy Adams showed her remarkable gift of portraying charcter, and was greeted by a round of applause. She responded with "Posing for a Photograph," which was genuinely witty. The character song "Gypsy Girl," by Sara Adams, was gracefully rendered and the audience thoroughly appreciated it. The Swiss cantata, "Mountain Maidens," by both, was a work of art, displaying ability of a high order and remarkable versality.

The program closed with a group of Greecian Art Tableaux, which were executed with skill and grace.

The whole program was received with enthusiasm, and pronounced one of the finest if not the finest ever presented in this city, and expressions of appreciation were heard from all. These little ladies are certainly to be contgratulated on their very superior entertainment.

BRIEFS

Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Twitchell of Newbury avenue in the loss of their little infant daughter who died Thursday.

Mr. Vaughn has been a resident of Atlantic but a short time coming here from South Middleboro where funeral services will be held. Burial will be at Rochester, Mass. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Ella C. Ellis.

Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, Mrs. Frank S. Davis and Mrs. L. Packard were the members of the Quincy Women's club who attended the literary and library extension conference at the Boston Public Library, Friday. It was a most pleasurable affair.

It looks as though new subscribers to the Ledger would play an important part in the final count of votes for the Ledger trip to Washington for many subscriptions are being received. These mean 1000 votes, so that any contestant securing several new subscribers is sure to forge ahead.

BRAINTREE

Elisha Thayer of Crescent avenue was reported to be ill with the grip but is much improved.

Mrs. George W. Stevens of Tremont street will take part in a debate in Bridgewater town hall today. The debate is given under the direction of the Old Colony Pomona Grange. The subject is "Suffrage for Women." Mrs. Stevens will be the leader on the negative side Tuesday evening at the Dighton town hall. Mrs. Stevens will speak on "Our Foremothers." The following day she will be entertained by Mrs. John Wade of Taunton.

A well attended subscription party was held at the Bates Opera House last evening. Mrs. W. E. Thompson and Mrs. T. F. Bates of this place were two of the matrons.

On Tuesday afternoon the King's Daughters gathered at the home of Mrs. Charles Jordon of Allen street. After a short business meeting refreshments were served and a social hour was enjoyed.

The engagement is announced of Willard Perkins Sheppard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Sheppard and Miss Mollie G. Brown of Wollaston. The couple were classmates at Thayer academy in 1904. Miss Brown is a teacher in the Quincy High school and Mr. Sheppard is treasurer of the J. F. Sheppard & Sons, Inc.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Teaching the Deaf and Dumb to Sing is the Latest Hubbite Marvel—How Miss Keller Astonished the Savants with Her High Notes—"Honey" Fitz Gets Pot of Beans by Parcels Post—Boston Feminine Athlete, Miss Eleanora Sears, is Descendant of Isabella de Vermandols—But So Are Twelve Million Other "Eugenically Fit" Americans—Are You One of Them?

Director John T. Benson of the zoological garden at Franklin Park has the honor of being the first Bostonian to send a parcel post package on the opening of the new system at midnight January 1. Director Benson mailed a package containing a framed picture of the zoo to Mayor Fitzgerald. The anxiety of the enthusiastic philatelist to obtain the first parcels post stamp spurred Mr. Benson on to establishing a relay of six men to hold positions before the four windows of the parcels post section in the main post office from five o'clock the previous afternoon. Mayor Fitzgerald who at the time was busily leading the cheering, singing hosts of thousands welcoming the New Year on the Common, was the recipient also of the second package mailed—a small pot of Boston baked beans.

The increase of enthusiasm over the advent of a new year in Boston is so rapid that it will be surprising if the day is not made an official holiday ere long. The cafes, hotels, theatres, and last but not least the Common presented a spectacle which reminded one of New York's New Year's Eve festivities on a more orderly basis. Mayor Fitzgerald's innovations of Christmas and New Year's celebrations with appropriate music, singing and illumination on the historic playground of the people have worked with wonderful success, and will probably become fixed features of the season. "Sweet Adeline" was strictly barred from the official program for the ceremonies around the Parkman Memorial Bandstand, but after some 80,000 people had demanded it vociferously the genial "Honey Fitz" consented to sing it through a megaphone, accompanied by the appreciative crowd. In time Bostonians will be inclined to stay in Boston to celebrate instead of finding important business in Gotham the last day of the year.

Are you a descendant of Isabella de Vermandois who lived in the twelfth century? You may not know anything about it, but if you are one of the "fittest" it is more than probable that mother Isabella was your ancestor. Miss Eleanora Sears of Boston, who seems to be fated to be a spectacular personage whether she will or not, is among the fit. So, at least, claims David Starr Jordan, who ought to know, if research and study of years amounts to anything. Dr. Jordan claims in a little book which is in preparation at Stanford University that at least half the citizens of this country of English ancestry are descendants of one "superwoman" and members of one colossal family. The progeny of this remarkable woman, who was the mentally and physically sound progenitor of the finest of the English speaking race, include many well known citizens of America, and in fact the notably virile, intelligent and otherwise "eugenically fit" of our population. In this list of notables descended also from mother Isabella are Vincent Astor, John D. Rockefeller, J. Pierpont Morgan, George Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, the Harrisons, Cleveland, Roosevelt, President emeritus Eliot, and many others. Of our good many-times-grandmother Isabella Dr. Jordan writes: "We selected Isabella de Vermandois as a common ancestor to whom we would trace as many American descendants of English families as possible." Isabella is known to have been a woman of sound mental, moral and physical characteristics, and of a strain so virile that it has lasted in her progeny down through the centuries. That by the way, is nature's way of purifying the human current. The progeny of the feeble-minded die out, like withered branches of a tree, and the sound limbs spread on and branch out. Isabella was a remarkable woman, and I have studied her life a great deal. She was the daughter of Hugh Magnus a famous crusader of the twelfth century. The Plantagenet blood, of which she was, has spread itself through the English race and is singularly virile."

"A deaf and dumb singer and linguist" sounds startlingly like the traditional deaf and dumb pencil vender on the street corner, occasionally heard to swear at a passer-by who drops a plugged nickel into his tin cup—nevertheless it is a perfectly true and sober title which bids fair to become increasingly common in this world of deaf-mutes. The amazement which greeted Miss Helen Keller's demonstration before the national convention of ear specialists at Harvard last summer has settled down into conviction that the same methods which developed her power to speak in several languages and to sing in a very fair voice may be applied to deaf mutes the world over to the end that they may speak naturally and comfortably among people, thus enabling them to derive much pleasure from life than has heretofore been possible. Charles A. White, of the faculty of the New England Conservatory of Music, whose theories proved practically adaptable in the case of Miss Keller, is carrying on similar studies and efforts in the case of Miss Mabel Johns of Bronxville, New York, a deaf and erstwhile dumb young woman, who hopes to become capable of speaking intelligibly and perhaps even of singing with a clear enunciation and understanding. Miss Johns has been deaf since the age of two months, when she suffered an attack of spinal meningitis. She has already studied a number of years and can speak sentences in four European languages, enunciating much as a German of Frenchman enunciates. Mr. White has worked out a system of training of breathing, control of the chest and throat muscles and cords, and resonating cavities, similar in a general way to the ordinary vocal training as carried on with the regular students at the Conservatory. The inability to hear the sounds made and the absolute lack of co-ordination among the vocal organs makes the task an extremely delicate undertaking requiring indefatigable patience and perseverance on the part of Mr. White and his pupil. Mr. White advocates the development of kindergartens for the deaf in which the same system as has been developed in instructing students at the New England Conservatory may be applied to the deaf at an age when they will be most readily responsive and desirous of self expression.

PLEASURE AND BUSINESS

Catholic Club Formed Happy Combination at Their Session

The Quincy Catholic Club will hold their dancing party of the winter season at Alpha hall, Monday evening, instead of Jan. 7 the original date. Elaborate preparations have been made to make this affair one of the most enjoyable parties the club has held.

At a meeting Thursday evening at the rooms of the Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus, final arrangements were made. Mrs. Daniel J. Deasey, president, conducted the meeting which was followed by a social hour.

An entertainment was given under under th e direction of Miss Mary Heaney and Miss Lena Moynihan. Miss Belle Murphy of Wollaston rendered sevxeral solos and Miss Manley also gave several selections. Violin and piano selections were given by Mis Beatrice and Edith Costello of Atlantic.

BRIEFS

Herbert Burch of Squantum street is rapidly recovering from his operation.

Dennis Crowley, contractor, is putting a new street through the Babcock property on Adams street, East Milton.

Miss Blanche Thayer is to be the speaker at the woman's clubhouse Monday afternoon at the Vost school, Milton, on Feb. 3.

Mr. C. H. Roberts and son Kenneth of Braintree, have returned from a two weeks visit with Mrs. Roberts mother, Mrs. Belle Bingham of Cambridge.

At the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Police base ball league, in Chelsea, Friday night, Henry T. Parsons of Chelsea was elected president. Jeremiah Dineen of Quincy was elected a member of the Finance committee.

The social service committee of the Wollaston Unitarian church is to hold an open meeting at the church Tuesday evening. Mrs. Garland Spencer of New York will speak on the "Social Service of the Church, throughout the Community." All are invited, no matter what creed or faith.

Mrs. Alice Hawthorne Hadden Sheldon, wife of Percy E. Sheldon died Friday at her home in East Milton. She was a graduate of Wellesley college in the class of 1907. On Aug. 8, last year, she was a passenger on the Cohasset train which was wrecked at Crescent avenue, Dorchester, and was severely injured.

Quincy members of the Cochato club, Braintree regret to learn of the death this morning of George O. Wales of Braintree, president of the club, one of its charter members and its most active and interested member. The sad news has cast a gloom over the entire community. The clubhouse will be closed this evening and other social affairs at the clubhouse have been canceled.

THAYER NOT IN IT FROM START

Quincy Played Circles Around the Academy Boys

WINNING BY 46 TO 7

The Quincy high basket ball season opened with a gusto Friday afternoon when Thayer Academy were defeated in the local gym 46 to 7. The game was good to watch, many fast scraps for the ball taking place, with Quincy as the aggressor.

Leon White, the elongated centre was the first of the season to score, and as an encore he repeated the performance.

Young Andrews then awoke and kept his score even with White. Sam Prout, after overcoming the parental objection, was in the game, and he also did some pretty shooting, equaling Andrews and White's score.

Quincy displayed but little knowledge of the real game, and Thayer did not put up any stiff opposition. Even had they jumped into the fray with all skill at their command. Quincy's spirit would have probably nosed out the victory.

Quincy did very little passing, was not often obliged to cover the man an d A. Brown, left forward of the visitors, scored the only goal from the floor.

A number of fouls were called on both teams, but none were intentional Coach LaRose will probably divide the local squad and place a second team in the field.

Ed Brown was sent in at centre during th e second half and showed that he was entitled to the name "Bull Moose," for he certainly plays on aggressive game. Capt. Larkin secured two goals. Ralph Prout dropped a pretty one into the cage. Jenkins did no scoring but played a good defense game and Safford scored two goals.

Quincy lost many chances through inaccuracy. The first half ended 23 to 4. A revised schedule with more home games will be given out next week.

The score:

| QUINCY | H. S. | THAYER ACADEMY |
|---|---|---|
| Andrews, Safford | l f | r g Harmon, Holmes |
| S. Prout, R Prout | r f | l g R. Bower |
| White, Brown, c | | c Chapman |
| Jenkins, Crane, l g | | r f Greeley |
| Larkin, Betts, r g | | l f A. Bower |

Score 46—7. Goals from floor, Andrews (5) S. Prout (5) White (5) Safford (2) Larkin (2) R. Prout, A. Bower. Goals on free tries, Greeley (5) Andrews (3) Safford (2) S. Prout. Referee McKay. Umpire Avery. Timer Atwood. Time 20 and 15 minute halves—periods. Attendance 200.

—The New York Tribune refers to the school system of Massachusetts as ideal in every respect, one that is attracting the attention of educators all over the country. Yet right in this state are people who do not hesitate in saying that the state's system is very bad. Just a difference of opinion, you see.

☞An attractive house on Spear Street near the public library is advertised for rent. Large sunny rooms fine location for a private family who wish to be convenient to everything yet in a quiet- residential neighborhood.

BURIED AT MIDDLEBORO.

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine Hollingshead took place Friday afternoon from her late home, Adams street Braintree. The Catholic committal service was read over the body at the St. Francis church by Rev. Fr. A. J. Fitzgerald. Burial was at Middleboro. She leaves a husband Albert and was well known in Quincy.

☞It seems that a larger number of people than ever are planning to enjoy the festivities of the Revels, and this is not to be wondered at, for the successes of the two previous years have spread abroad the afme of this the most merry social event of the season. The Revels last year were more elaborate and joyous than the first year and from plans under foot it seems assured that the Revels this year will be even more spectacular and full of zest. The tickets are strictly limited, so it is assured that the hall wil not be too crowded to mar the fun.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 28 No. 5 | QUINCY, MASS., MONDAY EVENING, JANUARY 6, 1913 | PRICE TWO CENTS

HIS HONOR, MAYOR EUGENE R. STONE

ADVOCATES TWO YEAR TERM FOR CHIEF EXECUTIVE OF CITY

Commissioner of Public Works and Mayor Should Decide What Streets Need Repairs

Urges Taking of Land on Washington and School Streets For Contemplated Widening which Has Got to Come

The twenty-fifth year of the City government of Quincy was inaugurated at 12 o'clock noon today, in the presence of a large gathering of citizens. Those who witnessed the ceremonies began to gather soon after 11.30 as it was anticipated that seats would be in great demand. In this no one was mistaken for City Hall was packed to its very doors.

The balcony was reserved for the ladies and the front row was occupied largely by the lady clerks employed at City Hall, and wives of the members of the City Council. At the right of the presidents desk were a large number of chairs which were occupied by guests of Mayor Stone. These included several from his Boston office and personal friends, Mrs. Stone being among those present. There was also quite a delegation from Paul Revere Woman's Relief Corps who occupied special seats as they were to take part in a presentation during the ceremonies.

On the presidents desk, as well as on the clerks desk were several large bouquets of flowers, the gift of friends of the Mayor. These served to add color to the scene.

With the exception of the flag presentation the ceremonies differed but little from other years. A few minutes before the hour of 12 the members of the City Council had taken the seats assigned to them while in the row of seats back of the desks of the Councilmen were most of the City Officials.

A minute before the hour of noon the door at the foot of the rear stairway was heard to open and the next minute City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell, appeared in the Council Chamber followed by the inauguration party. These included City Clerk Emery L. Crane, who presided until after the City Council had organized, Mayor Eugene R. Stone and Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, pastor of the Pethany church, the Chaplain of the day.

As Mayor Stone stepped on the platform and took one of the seats there came the first outburst of applause. The exercises opened with a brief prayer by Rev. Mr. Willmott.

The City Clerk then turned to the Mayor, who raising his right hand took the oath of office. The Clerk then called the roll of the Council and administered the oath of office to them. Then turning to the audience he said "His Honor the Mayor."

As Mayor Stone arose to deliver his inaugural address there was a spontaneous outburst of applause. The Mayor spoke in a clear voice, that was audible in all parts of the hall. His address was somewhat shorter than usual and will be found in full on page four in this issue of the Ledger. He occupied about 30 minutes in reading the message.

Prolonged applause greeted the Mayor as he completed his address. Hardly had this died down when the delegation from the Woman's Relief Corps stepped forward.

As the Mayor finished his address Mrs. Eliza A. Penniman, Patriotic Instructor of Paul J. Revere Women's Relief Corps stepped forward and presented the Mayor with a handsome silk flag for his office. In presenting the flag Mrs. Penniman thanked the Mayor for his courtesy in extending an invitation to the corps to be present at the inaugural, and that it gave her great pleasure in behalf of Paul J. Revere Women's Relief Corps to present to him the silken National emblem for his office, and that it was as a slight token of the appreciation of the corps for the many courtesies shown them during the past year. She also wished him a successful administration.

In accepting the flag His Honor thanked the Women's Relief corps and assured them that it would be given a prominent place in his office. He also assured the corps and other patriotic organizations of the city that he was always ready and willing to do all in his power to assist these worthy organizations in their good work, in any way possible.

He said that he believed it fitting that the National emblem should be in the office of every Mayor and especially in Quincy. Mrs. Kate Blaisdell, one of the department officers then recited a brief poem to the G. A. R.

The presentation over the City Clerk announced that the Council would then proceed to the election of a president, and each member as his name was called was requested to state his preference. As a result of the ballot Hon. Charles M. Bryant was elected the vote being as follows:

VOTE FOR PRESIDENT.

Whole number of votes 20.

Necessary for choice 11.

Charles M. Bryant had 13.

John R. Richards had 6.

The members voted as follows:

For Bryant—Bailey, aBrker, Beeman, Boyd, Corcoran, Cunningham, Duffy, Ericson, Gilliatt, Griffin, Hadlock, Johnson, Little,—13.

For Richards,—Bass, Devaney, Farquharson, Gauthier, Ross, Sandberg, Thompson—7.

Excused—Bryant, Richards.

Absent—Whiton.

President Bryant was then sworn in and the organization of the Council was completed the following being unanimously elected.

Clerk of Council and Committees, George T. Magee.

City Messenger—Harry W. Tirrell.

City Auditor—Henry O. Fairbanks.

The City Clerk swore the Clerk of Council in and his duties then ended. The City Council then proceeded with its business.

The rules of the Council of 1912 were adopted as the rules of the Council of 1913.

By vote of the Council the members of the Council of 1912 who are members of the Council of 1913 were allowed to retain the seats occupied by them last year. The drawing for seats was then held by the Clerk and Messenger.

The organization had now been completed and regular business was in order.

The first were communications and under this head a communication was received from the Women's club asking for the use of the Council Chamber for a meeting Tuesday Jan. 21. Laid on the table until later when it was granted.

Communications were also received from the Mayor appointing constables and special constables. Laid on the table. It will be noticed that the list of constables is considerable smaller than in other years for many have been dropped for what might be called, "Good of the service."

In addition to these the Mayor sent in a list of public weighers, measurers of wood and bark and pound keeper as follows:

Constables:—James F. Allen, Francis Abele, Jr., Frank Anderson, Frank E. Burrell, T. Willard Burke, Francis M. Curtis, Cornelius T. Driscoll, John Evans, Napoleon B. Furnald, John J. # OVER 26,000 VOTES WERE CAST TODAY IN CONTEST

Phenomenal Gain Of 11,300 by Fred D. Williams, Who Continues to Lead

Sturgis Hunt, However, Won the First Prize for Week's Gain

Another phenomenal Monday vote today in Washington contest of the Daily Ledger. The total gain is over 26,000 divided largely among the first ten in the list. It is the largest vote that has been cast in a single day since the beginning of the contest. Certificates and coupons both figure in result. Certificates divided among four candidates aggregated 14,000 votes, and coupons over 12,000 votes more.

The largest gain was made by Fred Williams who has been laying low during the week. He adds 11,300 today bringing his total up to 39,705, and he continues the leader in the contest.

Sturgis Hunt is second in gain today with 4,905, his largest vote in a single day, and his total is now 26,410. He continues second in the race.

A. R. MacKay, the Heptasophs candidate, added 4,845 today, only 60 less than Hunt's gain and he now has five figures in his total.

Mrs. Marnock also made a phenomenal gain, adding 3,520 which gives her a total 8,185. She has passed Mr. DeNormandie in the race, and is now number four.

Mr. Bowditch jumped up 670 today, and passes Miss Morrissett. Mr. Kessler adds 320 and Mrs. Lamont 280. Several others made gains of less than 100.

PRIZES AWARDED.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Fruit growers of New England will tell how it is done and money made in Boston this week.

The 1913 Council entered upon its duties today. May they have a successful voyage.

M. Wilson is finding it no easy task to frame a cabinet.

If all the clerks of the New Haven system should go out on strike, it would mean some tie-up.

It is now said that there are two kinds of progressives in Maine, the serious and those who play politics. They all try the latter game but some prove a little better than others at pulling off the tricks.

The senatorial candidates are all now on the 2ring line.

France has an unwritten law that her president shall not seek reelection. We had a similar code about the third term but there is a determined effort to violate it.

Mr. Taft's recital at his own "political wake," opens up many things which people were prone to forget or had not even heard of.

According to unofficial reports there were 9152 murders in this country last year and still the pardon advocates are busy.

The post office department seems quite up to handling the parcels post efficiently despite the claims to the contrary by the express companies.

Perhaps if some of those advocates of prison reform had some actual experience with prisons and prisoners they might change their tune.

Galveston is to have a five story oyster shell building. The builders will have a fine time searching for pearls.

Silverton, Ore., has a woman bank president. The office is no more feminine in its appointments than when a mere man held down the job.

The Mayor of Everett failed to sanction the increase in pay for the police. They are now getting $3 per day and wanted another quarter. No resignations have been noted because of the failure to get the increase.

Some newspapers are trying to make base ball an all year round attraction. As it is the rehashing that is going is painful.

The fourth Mrs. DeWolf Hopper wants a divorce. Is the big comedian looking to crowd Nat Goodwin out of first place in the divorce calendar?

Mr. Rockefeller has consented to accept service. He is about the only one the past few months who has been able to live up to that oft repeated and much abused phrase, "That every American citizen is a sovereign in his own right." When it comes to a literal acceptance of this Willie has gathered all the crowns and sceptres unto himself and the average person has not had a look-in.

Castro is somewhat of an acrobat in the mind changing process.

START RIGHT.

The new City Council enters upon its duties today and for the next 12 months this body of men will be responsible for the affairs of the city whatever measure of criticism or praise is deserving will fall to them as their share. Taken as a whole the City Council is a pretty well balanced body of men. A great many of them have had experience in municipal matters so that if there is any effort to put anything across by any one, it will have to be of the brand new order to get by those men who are awake to every move in the political and municipal game as it is played today.

The members have a chance to make a splendid record for themselves. If they succeed in reducing the tax rate they will have accomplished a great deal. They should look carefully into all expenditures. Every department should be closely scrutinized to see if there are any leaks and the best way in which they can be plugged up. Economy, not of the false unwise type that is not true economy, but wilful waste, will have to be practiced. The Council has no easy task set out for the members but it is safe to assume that the body will enter upon the duties cheerfully and with an enthusiastic desire to bring about reform and improvement wherever possible.

close contest for the weekly prizes, and the former won by 685 votes. The big gains during the week were as follows:

|---|---|
| Hunt | 11,985 |
| Williams | 11,300 |
| MacKay | 5,675 |
| Marnock | 4,315 |
| Bowditch | 1,235 |

The prizes are theatre tickets and are awarded to Sturgis Hunt and Fred Williams. The gain by both candidates was surprisingly large.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

BATH HOUSE ORDER VETOED

Also Fire Ordinance Fixing Residence of Call Firemen

MAY BE TAKEN UP THIS YEAR

One of the last acts of Mayor Stone as Mayor of 1912 this morning was to veto two of the orders passed at the last meeting of the City Council. These were the orders amending the Fire Department ordinance which among other things provided that call firemen should reside within one mile of the station to which they were attached, and the second the order which requested him to petition the legislature to establish a public bath house on Wollaston beach. In vetoing the former order His Honor says: "I hereby veto the order for the following reasons: The proposed amendment should definitely determine the conduct on the part of a call member of the department which shall terminate his connections therewith." The amendment as drawn does not do so in that respect. It is too vague and indefinite."

In regard to the bath house order he says:

"I do not believe there is sufficient demand on the part of the citizens of Quincy for a bath house at Wollaston shore, to warrant petitioning the legislature for the same."

As the Council which created and passed the orders has ceased to exist the orders are dead and can not be acted upon. This does not prevent the new Council however from passing similar orders.

REVOLVER AND KNIFE

Said to Have Figured in Assault on DeCoste

TWO ITALIANS ARRESTED

Rafael Settermedenne and Miachael Stacco were arrested late Saturday night at West Quincy charged with assault with a dangerous weapon on Jeffrey and Herbert DeCoste. The brothers were standing on Willard street when it is alleged that the two Italians came along in a team and attempted to run them down. They seized the horse's head at which it is alleged the two Italians jumped out. It is also alleged that Settermedenne drew a revolver and that Stacco drew a knife and started to assault the DeCoste brothers. Just at this time Officer Curtin put in an appearance and placed Settermedenne under arrest on charges of assault and with carrying a loaded revolver. Stacco got away with the team at that time but was captured later on his way to Braintree. He was returned to Quincy and locked up on the charge of assault. Both men appeared in court this morning.

CITY HALL WILL CLOSE.

Owing to the fact that the members of the City Council and City officials will be in Boston, this evening, attending the City Council banquet, the offices, usually open on Monday night will be closed tonight.

APPOINTED SPECIAL POLICE

One of the first acts of Mayor Stone after the inauguration ceremonies was the appointment of the following as special police, Samuel D. DeForest, Henry J. Matthews, Malcolm C. Stewart, Calvin T. Dyer, David J. Gordon, Charles J. A. Nelson, Edward J. Sandberg, William J. DeCoste, Jeremiah J. Connelly.

WIND TOO MUCH.

The high wind Saturday caused the postponement of the soccer game between the Quincys and Beverlys at Beverly. The officials of the Boston district league will name a date for the contest at the regular meeting this week.

WHAT'S THE HURRY?
Well, Read the Interesting Whys and Hows of the Telephone Directory
If You Want to Get In, You Had Better Call Up FORT HILL 7600 To-day

It is to the mutual advantage of the Telephone Company and the subscriber to have the latter listed in the directory as soon as possible after he gets his telephone, because such a listing saves many calls for "Information."

The Boston division directory plays such an important part in promoting good service that its preparation, printing and distribution are subjects of the most careful supervision. It costs a good deal in time and money to revise an average of 40,000 listings per issue, to transform 600 tons of paper into 200,000 books of 400 pages each, and to distribute these books over 1,500 square miles, but it is well worth the effort.

It is apparent that the preparation for printing must proceed on a schedule as arbitrary as that of a newspaper pressroom. If the book is not produced promptly, much of its value is lost. When the closing date is announced, therefore, the printing must proceed with whatever listings are at hand. Those received subsequently must be held over for a later issue.

The patron who rushes in at the last minute with his order may find he cannot be listed in the next book. It may be for one of many reasons, such as the running of additional wires or the setting of new poles or cross-arms; but the reason is a compelling one, although perhaps it might have been overcome had sufficient notice been given.

MORAL: Don't wait another day if you are contemplating installing a telephone, or changing to another class of service. Call Fort Hill 7600 and ask for the Contract Department. Such a call, from any Telephone or Pay Station in the Metropolitan District is FREE OF CHARGE.

HALL PLACE M. E.

"I will arise and go to my Father," Luke 15:18, was the text of the Sunday morning sermon by Rev. T. C. Martin, of the Hall Place M. E. church Mr. Martin said he considered this a good text for the beginning of another forty years' work.

The regular communion service which should have occurred will be held Jan. 19th at which time there will be roll call of members and probationers, each responding to name by a verse of scripture or by letter.

At the Sunday school some of the younger scholars were promoted to a higher class.

This evening at 7.30 the Teachers' Training class will meet.

Commencing Tuesday evening the congregation will attend the Union meetings to be held four nights this week at the Wollaston M. E. church. Parties walking will leave the parsonage at 7 P. M. Special singing by Hall Place choir.

From Jan. 14 to 17 inclusive, union meetings will be held at the Hall Place M. E. church, special music being provided by the Wollaston choir.

Speakers at the Wollaston church will be: Jan. 7, Mrs. F. H. Morgan; Jan. 8, Rev. T. C. Martin; Jan. 9, Mrs. F. H. Morgan; Jan. 10, Rev. T. C. Martin.

Speakers at Hall Place church: Jan. 14, Mrs. F. H. Morgan; Jan. 15, Rev. Wesley Wiggin; Jan. 16, Mrs. F. H. Morgan; Jan. 17, Rev. F. H. Morgan.

RECEIVING CONGRATULATIONS.

The many Quincy friends of Mr. and Mrs. Rutledge Peyton Pray of Elizabeth, N. J., are extending to them hearty congratulations because they are the happy parents of a baby girl, Rouena Canterbury, who came to join their happy household Sunday. Mrs. Pray will be remembered as Helen Barnes, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. Barnes, formerly of Wollaston, and whose marriage to Mr. Pray took place in Wollaston, August 1910.

ASTRONOMER SMITH DEAD

Had Achieved World-Wide Fame Because of Great Discoveries

Binghamton, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Dr. Lewis Swift, America's greatest astronomer, died Sunday at his home in Marathon, never recovering consciousness following a stroke of paralysis sustained New Year's day. The body will be laid to rest in the village cemetery.

Dr. Swift was a fellow of the Royal Astronomical society of England and also of Canada. He received three gold medals from the Austrian academy of sciences for discoveries, the greatest number ever given to any one man, and also received the Lalande silver medal and 540 francs from France for the most rapid discovery of comets ever made. He was born in Clarkson, N. Y., Feb. 29, 1820.

MRS. BACKMAN SACRIFICED

That Her Contribution to the Hospital Might Be Greater

Editor Quincy Ledger:—

The legacy of $2500 just received by the Quincy City Hospital from the estate of Mrs. Annie P. Backman deserves more than a passing notice. It is of more than ordinary interest that a comparative stranger who resided in Wollaston for a little time only should have so appreciated our Hospital as to give it nearly one-quarter of her estate.

As I knew Mrs. Backman intimately in my boyhood I noticed particularly how in the last days of her life she counted the cost of everything and can say that in a sense this is a gift of sacrifice, for Mrs. Backman was a lady of simple tastes and economized rigidly. Having no one absolutely dependent upon her, she would have been justified in spending more than her income for personal comfort but almost without exception she remembered relatives and intimate friends in her will keeping prominently, however, before her the work and worthiness of the Quincy City Hospital. It goes without saying that this legacy should remind our own people not to forget the constantly recurring and increasing expense of this splendid institution. It places especial emphasis upon the need of annual gifts from our own people. When the collectors make their next call upon us, let us welcome the privilege which it affords us of investing in the Hospital. As to this legacy: "Go thou and do likewise."

Rufus P. Tobey.

BRIEFS

Miss Annie Kingman is confined to her home on Maple street by illness.

Miss Mary Manhill of Albertina street is the guest of her sister in New Jersey.

HABEAS CORPUS FIRST STEP

Castro Prepared to Fight For Admission to This Country

New York, Jan. 6.—Government officials believe the move to obtain the release of Cipriano Castro, the Venezuelan exile, who is now on Ellis island, is the beginning of a long fight for his admission into this country. It is declared his counsel will keep up the fight even if the New York court dismisses the writ of habeas corpus which is returnable today.

Should the immigration commission at New York order his deportation the case would come up on an appeal to the secretary of commerce and labor. His refusal to interfere would pave the way for another resort to the federal courts, probably through the application for a writ, and an adverse decision by the court might result in the case being brought to the supreme court of the United States.

INAUGURATION

was voted when the council adjourn it be until Monday evening Jan. 13. But for this suspension of the rules the council would have had to meet tonight.

The following orders were then offered and adopted.

Order by Councilman Cunningham that the rules of the Council of 1912 be temporarily adopted as the rules of the council of 1913 adopted and an amendment to the rules which provided that no appropriation for rebuilding or constructing streets should be made after the first day of June was laid on the table.

That all petitions and orders involving all appropriation of money received after April 1, be referred to the President of the Council of 1913.

That the clerk of the Council advertise that no petitions will be received later than April 30.

That this rule shall not be suspended except by a three fourths vote.

This amendment was laid on the table.

Councilman Cunningham offered a resolve for the Mayor to petition the legislature to allow the city to change the rates of sewer assessments. Adopted.

Councilman Cunningham presented a resolution that the Mayor petition the legislature for authority to establish an ordinance relative to grades of streets through private land and the cellar levels, etc. Adopted.

Councilman Cunningham offered a resolution for a committee of ten members of the Council, ten not members of the Council to be appointed by the President and ten to be appointed by the Mayor to consider the question of public dock. Laid on the table.

Councilman Cunningham offered a resolve that the City Officials and Schol committee in submitting its estimates for the year include the cost of water furnished by the city. Laid on the table.

Councilman Bailey offered an order for the Mayor to petition the legislature for authority to sell the water in the old reservoir for mechanical purposes without paying the Metropolitan water board for the same. Adopted.

Councilman Cunningham offered an order authorizing the City Treasurer to borrow $350,000 in anticipation of taxes. Read and ordered to a second reading.

Adjourned at 1.28.

INAUGURATION NOTES.

Among the many beautiful floral pieces which ornamented the President's desk during the inauguration ceremonies was a massive basket of roses from the City Officials, a large bouquet of red and white carnations from the clerks at City Hall and a basket of red carnations and roses from Henry L. Kincaide.

All of the City Officials were distinguished by white carnations in their coat lapels.

During the first part of the exercises a flash light photograph of the assemblage was taken by Pierce. The camera was set in the southwesterly corner so as to take the faces of the councilmen and audience.

GOLD BURIED IN BOTTLES

Party Hunting For Treasure Hidden In California Hills In 1852

Redding, Cal., Jan. 6.—It was learned here that a party of nearly a dozen men are searching the hills of Trinity county for a fortune in gold dust worth $84,000, buried in champagne bottles in 1852.

Several attempts previously have been made to find the gold, and newly found information, the source of which has not been disclosed, has again set the treasure hunters on the old quest.

Italy's King a Voter

Rome, Jan. 6.—King Victor Emmanuel is the only sovereign in the world who is entitled to vote. At his own request the king's name was included among the list of voters recently increased owing to the new electoral reform which practically gives universal suffrage.

NEW COURSE OF STUDY

Provision For Washing Dirty Children In Public School

Madison, N. J., Jan. 6.—Superintendent of Schools Whitney, who has been doing things with the school system ever since he accepted office last fall, has named a new course of study. When the pupils came back today they found provision had been made to wash them during school hours.

In the past dirty children were sent home, but it was found they rarely went there, preferring to employ their enforced leisure playing in the streets, and getting dirtier than ever.

The superintendent interested School Trustee Cook to such a degree that Cook, who is a plumber, donated shower baths connected with the water supply in the Central Avenue school. A heater was also provided.

DECLARES WAR ON BULL MOOSE PARTY

Taft Urges Republicans to Rally and Fight to End

New York, Jan. 6.—President Taft has placed himself on record as an unalterable opponent of the new political party brought into being by Theodore Roosevelt and the principles it represents. He sounded a call at the dinner of the Republican Clubs of New York, Philadelphia and Boston at the Waldorf-Astoria for all Republicans to get together and declare unceasing war on the new party.

"We are not bitter, we are not cast down," he said, "we are not vengeful. If the people of the United States can stand a Democratic administration for one or two or even more terms we shall certainly not object to their capacity for endurance in this regard, but what we wish to assure ourselves of is that neither through Democratic radicalism nor through the Progressive radicalism shall the pillars of our noble state be pulled down and the real cause of the people be sacrificed to dreams of demagogues and theorists."

Mr. Taft analyzed with frankness the cause of his defeat. He spoke of the dinner as the "funeral obsequies," and remarked that it was not usual for "the deceased to attend the wake." He strongly denied the charge that he was an aristocrat and not in sympathy with the people.

MRS. DRAKE PASSED AWAY

The many friends of Mrs. Lizzie, wife of Fred E. Drake of 71 Upland road will be grieved to learn that she passed away Sunday evening. Mrs. Drake was taken ill last fall and was taken to New Hampshire in the hopes that the change would do her good. The expected change for the better did not come however and an operation was necessary which was performed by Dr. Nichols of Boston. She returned home several weeks ago but recently had another attack from which she died.

Mrs. Drake was a daughter of P. P. Kitredge one of the old residents of Quincy Point, where she spent her early days. She was a pupil at the Washington school at the time of Alexes E. Frye, who later became the first superintendent of schools in Cuba, and Mrs. Cragie Richards, known in the literary world as John Oliver Hobbs, were pupils at the same school.

Her husband is a son of the late John E. Drake at one time one of Quincy's well known shoe manufacturers.

OLD RESIDENT DEAD.

Mrs. Albertina Nelson, widow of Nils Nelson, one of the long residents of West Quincy died Sunday at the home of her daughter Mrs. John Anderson, 42 Nelson avenue, aged 75 years. Her husband was one of the first Swedish residents of that part of the city and Nelson avenue derives its name from him.

MAYOR STONE'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

Gentlemen: of the City Council:—

It is not only in accordance with the established custom, but in my judgment, very appropriate for the Mayor of the City at the commencement of your term of office to furnish you with a statement of the financial condition and resources of the city, and to direct your attention to such special legislation as, in his opinion, the city may require, in addition to the annual appropriation bill and the other routine subjects you will be called upon from time to time to consider.

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF THE CITY.

While the financial condition of the city is not all that could be desired, there is, however, no occasion for any unnecessary alarm or uneasiness. Our condition, to a large extent, is a logical sequence of two causes.

First; the general and persistent demands from all parts of the city for public improvements, such as the extension of the water and sewer systems, improvement in police and fire protection, acceptance of new streets and re-building of old ones, street lighting, construction of permanent sidewalks, and also for increased school accommodations.

All these demands, each reasonable and proper in itself, call for the expenditure of large sums of money each year, and just as the people demand these improvements and receive them, they must expect to pay therefor.

Second; a form of government which has made it possible for the city during twenty-four years to be governed by eleven different Mayors, with the average term for each of 2 2-11 years. With these eleven different changes in the office of the Chief Executive have come as many different removals from office of practically the entire administrative and working forces of the city, as it has been the policy of the citizens, whenever they elect a new Mayor, to nearly always demand the removal from office of all the heads of the departments, irrespective of individual experience or ability.

These frequent changes in office of the men charged with the responsible duty of administering the city's affairs, in my judgment, has been unreasonable, as well as unwise and cannot be too strongly condemned. It has made it impossible for any Mayor, no matter how conscientious and able, to initiate and put into practical execution any sound, economical and comprehensive policy for carrying on the business of the city.

I venture to assert there is not a business corporation or concern in this Commonwealth today that has had to deal with such large and vital problems as have confronted the City Government of Quincy during the past twenty-four years, or that during those years has expended so many millions of dollars, whose stockholders or those controlling it, have believed it sound business policy every two years to discharge the head of the Corporation, all administrative officials, superintendents and foremen, no matter how hard working, able or efficient, as we have been doing in Quincy. Such a policy would mean the ruin of any business, and the citizens of Quincy who are responsible for a continuation of such a form of government and method of procedure, must bear their share of responsibility for any unsatisfactory condition of affairs which exist today.

While dealing with this subject, I desire to emphasize the further fact that the success of any government depends not only on cooperation between its several branches, but also on the part of the citizen body. In the past, for a period of six weeks following the issuance of the tax bills in the Fall, and preceding the city election in December, the attention of the citizens has been focused on the city officials, and their acts made the subject of hasty criticism or partisan approval. Then with the passing of election day, all interest in city affairs seems to be laid aside, until the heat and strife of another campaign is on. It is to be regretted that such a course is adopted by our citizens. In my judgment, it would be wiser and more helpful if the tax payers would extend their interest in the city business over the entire year, instead of concentrating it on those few weeks. Commencing with the Inauguration of each new Administration, the people should each year avail themselves of the provisions of our City Charter and take a more active interest in the transaction of the City affairs. The privilege is granted them of attending each session of the City Council and of being heard on nearly every measure of importance coming before the Council, as the right of petition and protest, both individually and collectively, is reserved to them. These rights and privileges are valuable, and should be exercised by our citizens. They should by their active interest and cooperation, aid their representatives in the performance of their duties, and not wait until the work, satisfactory or otherwise, has been accomplished and then, too late to change results, express their opinion as to the same.

Last year there was raised in the tax levy the following items:

|---|---|
| Budget | $413,110.93 |
| Sewer Bonds, etc. | 36,300.50 |
| City Debt. | 157,643.00 |

| " Highway | 133.50 |
| Charles River | 2,373.65 |
| Total | $805,592.32 |

Of this amount $173,425 was expended in the maintenance and running expenses of our schools. When you compare this item of expense with the total amount raised in the budget, you will realize what a substantial sum we are appropriating each year for the education of the children of Quincy. It is right and proper to do so, and I merely call your attention to it at this time to emphasize the fact that Quincy is not niggardly in providing a liberal education for its youth. This year, on the best information obtainable, it will be necessary to raise the following items:

|---|---|
| Budget | $422,637.43 |
| Sewer Bonds, etc. | 38,000.00 |
| City Debt | 161,676.00 |
| Interest | 28,000.00 |
| Sewer Improvement | 7,300.00 |
| Interest | 2,840.00 |
| Park | 2,000.00 |
| Interest | 880.00 |
| Int. Tem. Loan | 15,000.00 |
| State Tax Estimated | 49,375.00 |
| County Tax " | 22,000.00 |
| Met. Sewer " | 30,000.00 |
| " Park " | 21,500.00 |
| " Water " | 26,000.00 |
| " Highway " | 133.00 |
| Charles River " | 2,373.00 |
| Refund Loan " | 15,000.00 |

You will notice that there is an increase over last year in the item budget of $11,409.07. That increase is estimated upon the annual increase in the operating expenses of our schools which is from $6,000 to $7,000 a year; also the increase made necessary in the operating expenses of the several departments by the Council of last year and the voters of the city in accepting the Vacation Act for the Firemen. Therefore, it will be necessary to raise this year at least $37,922.11 more than was raised last year. Last year on a gross valuation of $35,377,340 we had a tax rate of $22 a thousand. This year, if the valuation of the city were to remain the same, you will readily see that it would mean that we would have to increase our tax rate, as we will be obliged to raise more money, but each year there is a normal increase in the valuation of the city of about one million dollars. This increase in valuation on the figures I have stated, will keep our tax rate practically as it is today. I call your attention to this fact at this time, because I wish you and the people who may make demands upon you for special appropriations, to appreciate the fact that every dollar you appropriate in excess of the items I have stated, will mean a proportionate increase in the tax rate the coming year.

It is true of a city as it is of any other business enterprise; it cannot remain stationary. It is either moving forward or retrograding. There are improvements we must make each year, and they cannot be avoided. There must be a sane and reasonable extension of our sewer and water systems, new streets must be accepted, sidewalks built, highways repaired and other public improvements inaugurated. To do all these efficiently and economically will be a task which will tax our combined ability. As we have voluntarily assumed the burden, let us apply to its discharge the best that is in us.

SPECIAL ACTS.

|---|---|
| Water construction | $65,000 00 |
| Sewer construction | 40,000 00 |
| Refunding loan | 150,000 00 |

NET VALUATION.

|---|---|
| 1910 | $32,192,905 00 |
| 1911 | 34,347,845 00 |
| 1912 | 35,219,786 00 |

LIMIT OF INDEBTEDNESS.

Our limit for general Municipal indebtedness is two and one-half per cent on the average net valuation of the city for the last three years:

|---|---|
| Average net valuation for said years | $33,920,179 00 |
| Limit of borrowing capacity for city in 1912 | 848,004 47 |
| Municipal debt Dec. 31, 1911 | 711,496 46 |
| Net borrowing capacity Dec. 31, 1911 | 136,508 01 |

LIMIT OF TAX LEVY.

The law allows us to assess $12 per $1,000 on the net valuation for the preceding year for the current expenses of the city for the present year:

|---|---|
| Net valuation of the city in 1911 | $35,219,786 00 |
| $12 on $1,000 (amount available for current expenses) | 422,637 43 |

The total city Municipal debt outside of the debts authorized by special Acts amounts to $711,496.46, and of that amount $162,676.46 falls due this year.

DEPARTMENTS.

It has been the custom in the past for the Mayor in his Inaugural Address to refer to the several administrative departments and to some extent to give a review of the work accomplished by each during the past year. I do not believe there is any occasion for doing this, as all such information will be furnished you at an early date. The heads of departments will shortly submit to me full and detailed reports for their respective departments, together with any recommendations they may have to make concerning the same. These reports will be forwarded to you, and from them, and if necessary, from the department officials, you will be able to obtain such information as you may require in order to deal intelligently with legislation affecting the various departments.

SPECIAL LEGISLATION.

Braintree Reservoir.

Since Quincy was admitted in 1899 to the Metropolitan Water System, except for the purpose of testing water meters at the pumping station in South Quincy, no use has been made of the water of the Quincy Reservoir in Braintree. The City pays Braintree annually a tax of $57.24 on this property. The average amount of water annually available for use from the reservoir is about three hundred and fifty million gallons. This water may not be suitable for drinking purposes, but can be put to mechanical uses.

It seems to me a manifest waste for the city to receive no revenue from such a valuable property, when it is capable of being utilized and producing a substantial annual revenue for the city.

The Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Board claims the right, under the Metropolitan Water Act as amended by Chapter 457 of the Acts of 1906, to cause the city to be assessed for any water it may sell from the reservation the same basis as it is now assessed for water furnished it from the Metropolitan supply. Such an assessment would be prohibitive, as it would be greater than a manufacturing concern could afford to pay for water from the reservoir.

At certain periods of the year the pressure on the fire hydrants in some sections of the city is so low as to afford but little if any fire protection, and at such times the water in the house services in those sections is not sufficient to meet the ordinary household demands. This condition of affairs is largely attributible to the large quantity of water used by manufacturing plants. The city should be allowed to sell the water from the reservoir to the large manufacturing plants in Quincy, thereby reducing by many million gallons the quantity of water now being taken from the Metropolitan supply and obviating to a large extent the fire danger I have referred to, and providing a substantial revenue for the city. The city should secure the right to sell this water for mechanical purposes, without being assessed by the State for the water so sold. The Commonwealth has never taken possession of this reservoir, or allowed the city anything on account for it, and it seems to me that if the city safeguards the right of the State and City to use the water in the event of an emergency, it should be allowed by the Legislature to distribute and sell this water for mechanical purposes, and I recommend that the Legislature be petitioned for that right.

A manufacturing concern in Quincy has recently offered to pay the city a net income of $1,500 per year for a period of twenty years for the privilege of being allowed to connect with the pipes from the reservoir at the Quincy Pumping Station and draw a minimum quantity of one hundred and fifty million gallons annually, and paying at the rate of ten dollars per million gallons for any water used in excess of that amount. All expense of maintenance, as well as the initial expense of connecting the plant with the pipes at the pumping station, to be borne by the manufacturing plant. From this offer you will readily see that the city cannot afford to any longer allow such a valuable asset to remain idle.

WATER RATES.

During the past year I have given much study to the rates we are charging consumers for city water. I believe the rates should be re-adjusted, and while we must be careful and not make such a reduction as will be excessive or handicap the department, I do feel that some reduction in the water rates can be made this year. I ask that you give this subject your early attention.

STAND PIPE AT HOUGHS NECK.

Houghs Neck is a section of the city which is rapidly growing, and after careful study I have become convinced that it and the adjacent sections of the city are not receiving adequate fire protection. The people who have invested their money in developing this territory and those who are making their homes there, are entitled to better fire protection, and during the dry season to better water service.

The city owns a tract of land at the top of Great Hill; a standpipe of sufficient capacity should be erected thereon, and I recommend that action be taken to that end.

SANITARIES.

The City Square is rapidly becoming a busy centre for travel. Thousands of people daily pass through it, not only to and from different sections of our city, but also from points to the north and south of Quincy.

I believe the city should either at its own expense or in connection with the Bay State Railway Company, maintain suitable sanitaries at some convenient location in the Square.

HOSPITAL FOR CONTAGIOUS DISEASES.

The State authorities have again notified the city that it must provide a hospital for the care of patients afflicted with contagious diseases. The city can no longer defer action on this matter without being liable to being heavily penalized for its failure to do so. I, therefore ask you to take appropriate action and trust you will recognize your responsibility in the premises.

SEWER ASSESSMENT.

Several years ago the city, under authority given to it by its Sewer Act, fixed the manner in which the amount should be determined an estate legally liable to an assessment for an extension of the sewerage system, should be charged. I am satisfied that the provisions of the Sewer Act are not complied with, and that the private estates should pay a larger proportion of the sewer construction expense, as the city is paying more than its share. An attempt was made by the Council of last year to increase the amount the owners of the property benefitted by an extension of the system should pay. I vetoed the order, for two reasons:

First; because the amount was not increased enough.

Second; because the City Solicitor advised me it was doubtful if the city, after having once fixed the rate determining the assessment on a private estate, could, without legislative authority, change the same, and that the proper way to proceed would be to petition the Legislature for that authority to do so. I respectfully request authority from your body to petition the Legislature to that effect.

PUBLIC DOCK.

The only action taken by the City last year on this important subject was the appointment of a Committee to consider the avisability of establishing a Public Dock, and if it thought advisable to do so, to recommend a location for the same. No definite action was taken by the Committee and the matter has been referred to the City Council for this year. I regard this subject of vast importance and I ask your body to give it most careful consideration, to the end that any action taken may be for the best interest of the city.

ADAMS ACADEMY.

The Council of 1912 authorized the Mayor and the Supervisors of the Adams Temple and School Fund, to petition the Supreme Judicial Court to modify the terms of the deed of gift so as to enable the city to establish a classical course at the High School to be known as the "John Adams' Classical Course." A petition to that effect will be filed in the Supreme Court this month. In view of the discontinuance of the Adams Academy by the Supervisors, arrangements have been made whereby the Paul Revere Post No. 88 of the G. A. R., is to be custodian of the academy building and premises, and also, together with the Quincy Historical Society, to have the occupancy of it under a lease properly protecting the interests of the Fund.

I trust these organizations will be in possession of the premises not later than the early spring.

GRADES FOR PRIVATE WAYS AND CELLARS.

There are many places in the city where streets have been opened on private land and houses erected on land abutting thereon before proper street grades have been established. In many places it will be necessary to expend large sums of money before such streets can become public ways of the city, and in some instances satisfactory results cannot even then be obtained.

It seems imperative, therefore, that some action be taken by the city Council to regulate the opening of ways upon private land, and to establish proper street grades, before improvements, such as water and sewer, are laid therein.

There are also many houses in the city where cellars and even the first floors have been built at such a low elevation that they are continually flooded by extreme high tides. I recommend that the Legislature be petitioned for authority on the part of the city to regulate the laying out of streets through private lands, where the streets are to be dedicated for public use, and also for authority to establish a minimum cellar grade and minimum elevation of the first floor of buildings erected in the city.

CITY CHARTER.

My experience as a member of the City Council, and as Mayor leads me to believe that the time has arrived when the City Charter should be amended. I believe it will be a decided improvement on our present form of government to have amendments to our City Charter adopted, changing it in these particulars.

1—The term of Mayor should be increased from one to two years.

2—The Council should be reduced from twenty-three to nine members; one from each ward and three at large.

3—The City Council should be a continuing body. The term of office should be for three years and each member should receive five dollars for each meeting he attends, provided, however, he shall not receive more than one hundred and fifty dollars in any one year.

4—The Council should be required to transact its general business in a Committee of the whole, and the present system of having Standing Committees to whom matters may be referred should be abolished.

I recommend that the Legislature be petitioned to submit these proposed changes in the Charter to the people for acceptance or rejection at the next Municipal Election.

HIGHWAYS AND SIDEWALKS.

Last year on account of our financial burdens, I deemed it unwise to make the highway improvements recommended in my Inaugural Address. I feel that we should act as to some of these improvements this year. School street must be widened, and Washington street widened and straightened, in the near future. I believe it wise to take the land necessary for these improvements now, before the streets are further built upon, although the actual improvements on them may be deferred to some later date.

Each year the Council passes special loan orders outside the Budget for the purpose of making specific repairs in certain streets. It has always seemed to me it would be much better to let the Commissioner of Public Works and the Mayor determine as to what streets needed specific repairs and to repair them whenever it can be done most advantageously to the city. Therefore, I recommend that a sum of money be appropriated by the Council early in the year for this purpose.

I believe the time has come when a comprehensive study should be made and plans prepared for a complete system of surface drainage for the city, dividing the city into drainage areas, so that our highways and new streets particularly may be properly drained, thereby saving in the expense of keeping them in repair.

The city annually expends money in building permanent sidewalks, and abutters are required to repay a proportionate part of the expense. I believe in justice to them that such sidewalks should be kept in repair, and I ask that an annual appropriation be made for that purpose.

There is a growing sentiment in Quincy in favor of building its streets by contract instead of by day labor. Many believe by so doing the city will be able to build its streets at much less cost than by the present method.

I intend to try that experiment to some extent this year.

MOUNT WOLLASTON CEMETERY.

I am advised that nearly all land owned by the city and constituting a part of the Mount Wollaston Cemetery, available for burial lots, has been sold, and it is necessary for the city to make provision at once for enlarging this cemetery by acquiring additional land. I believe you should act on this matter without any unnecessary delay.

HANCOCK CEMETERY.

I desire to call the attention of the City Council to the condition of the Hancock Cemetery and recommend that steps be taken to improve and beautify this historic spot. Within its limits lie buried the bodies of the ancestors of the Adams', Hancock and Hoar families. Names known and reverenced not only in our city and State, but throughout the Nation. Each year, more and more, patriotic individuals and Societies are making pilgrimages to historic places and it seems eminently fitting that our city, so rich in historic interest, should carefully preserve and tenderly care for the last resting place of those men, through whose efforts, in a large measure, our Commonwealth was established.

At present the income of the Charles E. French Fund, amounting to about one hundred dollars per year is alone available for caring for this cemetery, and I suggest that during the coming year, you make a specific appropriation for repairing the fences and the general care of the grounds.

ENDING.

Gentlemen:

There is but one service we will be called upon to render our city during the coming year, and that is to do our full duty as representatives of the people. Let us, insofar as we are capable, render that service wisely, fearlessly and faithfully. Let us each so discharge it that he will not only satisfy his own conscience, but will be able to look forward with complacency to the time when his acts will be the subject of his fellow citizens' comments.

BOWLING

The winning teams in the regular matches of the Fore River league on the Coliseum alleys Friday night did pretty well as far as scores go, but the showing of the losers was,—"Good Night."

The Machinists Floor dropped four points to the Yard, the Patternmakers took three from the Foundry and the Machinists Gallery beat the Government Draftsmen, 3 to 1.

Smith of the Yard and Jensen of the Patternmakers tied at 115 for high single string, but Smith rolled 313 for best total.

Some of the bowlers seemed to be more interested in listening to the shrieking wind than to the clattering pins. None of the bowlers did consistent work as compared with past marks.

Even Poehler was a law man, rolling 97, 87 and 95. He is getting in his workout for the big match with Hintze of Revere which takes place Jan. 6 at Chelsea and Jan. 9 at the local alleys.

Norfolk Downs is leading in the Old Colony league, with Weymouth a close second. Four matches have been rolled and all teams but the City Square five are represented in the averages above 90. The latter sticks to the cellar position with five wins and 11 losses. The total pinfall for the Norfolk Downs team is 5279, and although Weymouth is in second place their pinfall is 5412, or 133 ahead of the Norfolk Downs total. The Coliseum team is in third place with the second largest pinfall and three of their men are leading in the general averages.

The highest averages are as follows:

Grant, Coliseum, 94 pins.
Carlson, Coliseum, 92 pins.
Burke, Coliseum, 92 pins
Stobert, Norfolk Downs, 92 pins.
H. Smith, Weymouth, 92 pins.
Kiley, Weymouth, 91 pins.
Tirrell, Weymouth, 91 pins.

Gillen of Norfolk Downs has the best single string with 124 and also the best three string total of 322. Weymouth has the highest team match total of 1421.

The standing of the league is as follows:

TO ENTER THE MINISTRY

Brother of Clarence Richeson Enters Virginia Preparatory School

Blackstone, Va., Jan. 6.—Earl Richeson, brother of Clarence V. T. Richeson, who was electrocuted in Boston last spring for the murder of Avis Linnell, has entered the Blackstone academy, a preparatory school, to fit himself for the Baptist ministry.

He arrived here a day or two ago from his home in Amherst and entered upon his studies. It was through the influence of E. S. Ligon, principal of the academy, that young Richeson determined to follow his illfated brother into the ministry.

HEAVY LOAD SUNK TO HUBS

Truck With 34 Ton Engine Went Through Hancock St.

18 HORSES IN THE HITCH

An off rear wheel of a truck loaded with a 34 ton steam turbine for the Quincy Electric light and Power Co., sunk into Hancock street, opposite Kincaide's theatre this morning and blocked car traffic for half an hour. All cars were obliged to use the outbound rail and schedules were greatly delayed.

Eighteen horses were hitched on, with "Bill" Harris of Quincy, known throughout the state as one "fine driver," handling the reins. Considerable trouble was experienced in getting the load started. Heavy jacks were required to lift the load up so planks could be placed under.

The station where the engine will be installed is at the foot of Bracket street and the approach is in bad condition. It will be probably taken from the truck and rolled along. W. S. Brine Transportation Co., of Boston has charge of the hauling.

The planks used in shifting the turbine from a car to the truck at Quincy Adams this morning snapped and a manhole cover of the telephone company was split by the heavy load at Washington and Temple streets.

STRONGER TEAM BUCKED QUINCY

But it was No Go, Gloucester was Not Strong Enough

TO CAP A VICTORY

The Y. M. C. A. first team ran up against an entirely new aggregation of basket ball players at Gloucester, Saturday night when they played a return game with the latter association. The Gloucester team was easily defeated here early in December, the score being 51 to 32, but the visitors claimed that their real first team did not come to Quincy.

That this was the case was seen early in the contest Saturday night for the new players were up to all the tricks of the game Gloucester is the home town of one of the best professional teams in the state and the Y. M. C. A. players evidently have been taking in all of their games, judging from the style of game that was put up. J. McCallum, who officiates at the professional games also had charge of the Y. M. C. A. game and our boys were considerably handicapped by his very lax interpretation of the amateur rules.

The game started off with an early score by Trask from a free throw soon followed by a goal from the floor by the same player. Gloucester evened up the score by a clever goal by Clark. The score was nip and tuck in the first half which ended 10 to 10.

Jenkins, who played his first game of the season, dropped a dandy goal at the beginning of the second half, followed by a basket by Parker. "Jenks" then made another goal and Parker also repeated. Gloucester scored one on a foul and then O'Neil made a long shot for a goal, this making the score 18 to 13. The rapid scoring by Jenkins and Parker seemed to take the snap out of the Gloucester team and from then on the Quincy players were not in danger of losing. Trask did some good work in the second half, while Jenkins seemed to get stronger as the game went on. The final score was 25 to 17. Trask had an off night on goals from free throws, making only 3 out of 12 trials.

The summary

TRUCK VICTIM LAID AT REST

Mrs. Agnes McDonald Buried This Morning With a Mass

The funeral of Mrs. Agnes, widow of Ronald McDonald, who died shortly after she was struck by the auto truck of Henry L. Kincaide & Co., operated by John A. Russell of Gay street, at Newport and South Central avenues, Thursday evening, was held this morning from the home of her sister, Mrs. Mary Duggan, 7 Doris street, Dorchester.

A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. Mary's church by Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady. The Gregorian chant was sung by the regular choir, assisted by Mrs. Catherine Fennessey, who sang the Pie Jesu at the offertory

Interment was in the family lot in St. Mary's cemetery. There was a large attendance and many floral tributes. She is survived by her sister, Mrs. Mary Duggan and an adopted son, Paul McDonald.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, through an unfortunate accident on Jan. 1st, 1913 Quincy Lodge No. 413 L. O. O. M. has sustained the loss of one of its members Napolean Z. Reed, and; Whereas, the members of this lodge realizing the true worth, and sterling qualities of Brother Reed, both as a member, and as a man, therefore be it Resolved:

That we, the members of Quincy Lodge No. 413 L. O. O. ## JOSHUA E. DREW DIED TODAY

Agitated Annexation of Atlantic to Boston

Joshua E. Drew, who a few years ago was one of the prominent agitators favoring the annexation of Atlantic to Boston, died this morning at his home, 16 Hampden circle, in his 68th year. He was the father of Dr. Maria E. Drew, Eleazer F. Drew, Commodore of the Squantum Yacht club, Mrs. Fred Raynor of Wellesley and Arthur Drew of Wollaston. His wife died some time ago.

Mr. Drew took an active part in Atlantic's early days but after the city was incorporated he gradually withdrew from public affairs. He was connected with the China Mutual Marine Co. until they dissolved partnership.

The funeral will be held from his home, 16 Hampden circle. Thursday. Burial will be at Duxbury, Mass.

BRIEFS

Mt. Wollaston Lodge, No. 80 I. O. O. F. exemplifies the initiatory degree on candidates Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Celia J. Baxter who died Friday at the City Hospital was a member of Paul J. Revere W. R. C., and Maple lodge of this city. The W. R. C. services will be held this evening at her late home in North Weymouth, and the funeral Tuesday morning.

Miss Eva B. Rice and Miss Minnie H. Rice of Standish avenue returned Saturday after a week at Worcester and Holyoke where they were guests at a wedding and later a reception. Their grandfather, Joseph Mussette of Dixville, Canada who is visiting the family accompanied them.

Frederick E. Drew, oldest son of Samuel T. Drew, compositor at the Ledger office, has been elected to the office of City Clerk of Portsmouth, N. H. He has been for several years editor of the Portsmouth Times. Mr. Drew senior is much pleased over the selection of his son for so important a position in the city government.

DUNDENE WANTED DONATO TO PAY BACK THE COSTS OF DRUNK CASE

Started Out to Collect, Cornering Donato in His House on Phipps Street

Latter Alarmed, Cut His Way Through Partition to Escape

Donato D'Allasantio of 9 Phipps street got the scare of his life Monday when Constanzo Dundene appeared at his door and demanded that Donato make good the amount which he had been called upon to pay the court last November on a charge of drunkenness. It appears that at that time Dundene was fined the costs in a drunk case amounting to $4.10. The money came hard and he has been nursing the idea ever since that Donato, who made the original complaint, should pay him back the fine that had been imposed.

Monday he started in to collect. Approaching Donato's house he found the door locked and attempted to break in. Donato who was on the inside then became very much alarmed for his own safety. The only avenue for escape was through the tenement of Eddie Ferguson who occupied the other side of the house. There was no door connecting the two so Donato proceeded to chop his way through. Seizing an axe he went at the partition and soon had a hole through the plastering large enough for him to crawl through. In the mean time Ferguson learning the facts of the case had sent word to the police station and the wagon arrived and took Dundene away for safe keeping. In court this morning he was arraigned for assault and for attempting to break and enter and was held in $200 until Thursday.

WELL KNOWN GRANITE MAN

Passed Away at City Hospital of Incurable Malady

Victor Johnson, 52 years of age, died at the Quincy City Hospital, Monday night, where he was being treated for cancer. During September he was first admitted and showing signs of improvement he was discharged. Soon after he became an inmate of the City Home where he remained up to three weeks ago. He was well known in this city and was a granite cutter by trade. He was unmarried.

UNITY OF PURPOSE AND ACTION FOR COMMON GOOD OF COMMUNITY

Harmonic Notes which Stirred Responsive Chords at the Annual Municipal Banquet

Optimism Reigned Supreme Among Council Members and Officials as to Continued Posterity of Quincy

The inauguration night banquet, which for several years has been a regular feature on the evening of inauguration day was held Monday evening at the Parker house, Boston, and was the occasion for a gathering of 85 which included, Mayor Stone, present and past members of the City Council, present and past City Officials and a few outside friends.

PRESIDENT R. W. HOBBS.
Who Presided.

It was the largest attended banquet of the kind yet held, and it became necessary to set a smaller table in the room adjoining the Crystal room where the main tables were set.

The participants begun to gather in the parlors of the hotel soon after 6 o'clock, where they separated into little groupes and discussed city affairs. It was but a few minutes past the hour of 7 when Monk's orchestra began to play "See the conquering hero come" and the party marched into the dining room.

Councilman at Large, Edward J. Sandberg, chairman of the banquet committee headed the line with Mayor Stone. Then came President Charles M. Bryant and ex-President Ralph W. Hobbs, the toast master, Councilman Herbert G. Beeman of the committee and ex-Mayor William

EDWARD J. SANDBERG,
Chairman of the Committee.

T. Shea. Representatives Michael T. Sullivan and William J. Leslie, City Auditor Fairbanks and Dock Commissioner Crane, City Treasurer Tilden and City Clerk Crane, Commossioner Tupper and Tax Colector Sandberg, City Messenger Tirrell, and City Engineer Sargent, Overseer of the Poor Elcock and Mayor Stone's father. Following them was what one was pleased to term the "general rabble."

The only preliminaries were the announcement of Chairman Sandberg to get busy and for an hour there was a clash of knives, forks and spoons as the various courses were served. Music was furnished during the dinner by Monk's orchestra. All the popular airs were played, including "Sweet Adeline" and although "Honey Fitz" was not present to lead in the singing there were plenty of others and the room was constantly resounding with musical efforts.

The dinner over Chairman Sandberg rose to introduce the toastmaster but found it a difficult job to be heard for with almost every word there was a cheer that drowned out his voice. Eventually however he managed to get ex-President Hobbs introduced, who began his opening remarks with "Politicians and others." President Hobbs was at his best and his witty introductions of the speakers brought out rounds of applause.

MAYOR STONE.

Mayor Stone was the first speaker who said that it was a great pleasure to be present and meet all in attendance. He said that he had made one long speech and would not inflict another on them. This was the first time in his recollection that Ed Sandberg had all he wanted to eat. He hoped that during the coming year the City Council would get along with the Mayor as well as during the past year. If we do the citizens of Quincy will have had one of the best administrations it ever had. He did not believe in the unluckiness of the thirteen in this year's calendar. In closing he thanked the members of the past City Council for the kindly feelings and words, and if you all pull together the citizens will be satisfied with your endeavors.

President Bryant was introduced as "Teddy's Terror." You will find him a good presiding officer. He is a man that knows and if you will follow him you will find something doing.

PRESIDENT BRYANT.

President Bryant spoke of his 15 years of service to the city and that he was glad to state that while he occupied the office of Mayor "our present Mayor was a member of the City Council and he assisted materially in what I tried to carry out for the good government of Quincy.

"The only reason that I was willing to take the time from my business and come back to the City Council was because I thought I could assist the city. I want to assure the Mayor that the City Council will assist him in his every effort to give the very best government the city ever had." He said that he did not believe the City of Quincy in bad financial condition. We are not allowed to do certain things under the law. People demand certain improvements which we can not have under the present $12 limit. He favored progression. If the people will come here and build houses it is a good asset, as it increases our revenue. Let us work together. All he asked was that the Councilmen assist the President all they could. "Come to me and I will do all I can to bring out the best for the city so that we may make a good record."

FRANK E. CRANE.
Dock and Waterfront Commissioner.

The genial President however made no reference in his remarks this year to "it."

Toast Master Hobbs then read an alleged telegram from the state house which referred to a bill written on a

BOYNTON SEEKS REINSTATEMENT TO GET BACK INTO REVERE CHURCH

Suit Against Pastor Ayers in $25,000 Alienation Claim Continued For a Month

Effort to Remove Suspension May Open Up Another Church Battle

New developments bearing upon the split in the ranks of the members of the Park and Downs Congregational Church of Wollaston, when the pastor, the Rev. William B. Ayers, was accused by a member of the church, Chester A. Boynton, of alienating the affections of the latter's wife, became known Monday and promise further agitation if not a renewal of the controversy between the two factions of the congregation.

The new angle in the situation was learned after the postponement of Boynton's $25,000 alienation suit against Rev. Ayers Monday. The case was called in the superior court and, at the request of Ayers's counsel, was continued to February 5. Atty. Cutler, of Cutler & James, counsel for Boynton offered no objection to the postponement, although ready to proceed with the trial.

It has now been learned that Boynton, who, following his accusations against the Rev. Mr. Ayers, was suspended from membership of the church for a stipulated period, now seeks to become a member of the Revere Congregational Church, which he attended before going to Wollaston. In so doing he is required to furnish the pastor of the Revere church with a letter from the church he last attended, stating that he is a member in good standing of that church. Such a letter Boynton will now seek to obtain from the Park and Downs church.

With his term of suspension drawing to an end Boynton feels he should become a member in good standing again at its expiration. Whether he is granted the letter or not is the question which the members of the Park and Downs Church will be called upon to settle.

That the granting of Boynton's request will be vigorously opposed is believed in some quarters.

Friends of Boyton declare that the letter placing him in good standing as a member of the Park and Downs congregation should be granted without delay at the expiration of the term of suspension. The church should make amends to Boynton, they declare for the treatment accorded him at the time of the "church trial" of the Rev. Ayers, following Boynton's charges.

They assert that the church should have withheld judgment until the court had passed on the truth or falsity of the charges and also declare that the meeting at which Boynton sought a hearing was "packed" like a political caucus.

Boynton was assistant treasurer of the church and was one of the most active in raising funds for the new church. He was suspended by action of the standing committee, July 5 to Jan. 1, but the period was later extended.

Rev. Mr. Ayers was installed at the Park and Downs church, March 29, 1910. Since that time he has been a strong factor in building up the society and headed the movement for the new stone church which the society occupies.

His last pastorate before coming to Wollaston was at Cape Vincent, New York, which he left in 1909 to take up special courses at Harvard University and Andover Theological Semihary.

Chester A. Boynton, who until the present difficulties began, resided with his wife and Mr. Ayers on Beach street, Wollaston, is at present living at Revere.

Mr. Boynton recently served as president of the East Norfolk Union of Christian Endeavor.

Mrs. Boynton, was Miss Helen T. Willett, daughter of Daniel H. Willett, daughter of Daniel H. Willett of Bromfield street, Wollaston. She is a graduate of the class of 1905, Quincy High school and married Mr. Boynton, August 6, 1907.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Another batch of oil letters have been offered to the senate finance investigation committee. What concerns the people mostly at the present time is the big advance in gasoline.

Gen. Wood believes in the revival of the army canteen. Here is another chance for an outburst of the phials of wrath.

Lawson ought to be able to give that Jujo committee some valuable pointers.

The Frick's have cut down the invitations to their great fete to 200. Maybe owing to the many vacancies when they sent out over 1,000 a few years ago.

President Taft has given his critics another chance to remark upon his vaccilation by agreeing to have the Panama canal matter arbitrated.

Why not give the whole of Europe the canal, fortifications and all and let the United States continue to pay the bills?

Over $10,000 worth of liquids flooded the streets of Independence, Kan. What a fine crop of big heads was saved.

Shiftiness is looked upon by the Good Government association as a ban to office-seeking.

The beef trust added a simple $3,000,000 as a surplus, after declaring a seven per cent dividend and still people wonder at the high price of meat.

A temperature of 64 in the shade yesterday is going some for the sixth of January.

Mr. Cady has come to the fore again and denounces liquor, tobacco and some other things, and very few people will be found who would care to take the opposite side of the argument.

Chicago ministers raised a howl because the cafes there were allowed to keep open until three o'clock New Year's morning. In Boston, it is reported that some of the hotels and cafes were open until four o'clock, and yet all they have is a 12 o'clock license.

Would it not be more business like for the railroads and their critics to get together and see if something cannot be done to improve conditions? All this fault finding cannot be of much benefit to any of the parties vitally concerned.

Mrs. Harris is to stump Boston in behalf of her husband's candidacy for the school board. It would only be fitting in that case that some male champion volunteer for Miss Curtis.

President Taft consoles himself that he has saved the nation from the Progressives. Possibly the relief may be only temporary.

The suffragettes can parade any place but Pennsylvania avenue March 3. They would have a large and varied audience tramping through Peacock alley of the New Williard.

All aboard for the Ledger Inauguration trip. The candidates are certainly putting in some good work the past few days. It will be a trip worth taking and long to be remembered.

Home Rule is again in sight according to some optimistic reports which have drifted across the mill pond.

RECOGNITION OF CHINA.

This country has been somewhat slow in its official recognition of the Republic of China. The excuse that the movement was only an experiment, liable to all the dangers and pitfalls which surround such an enterprise, has long since passed away. If the delay is occasioned by any European diplomatic entanglement, it is to be regretted. This country so far as possible should keep outside the concert of European diplomacy wherein the tangled skein has the fate of one or more nations, great or small, within the hollow of its hand. But it should be ready at all times to assert itself in the interests of peace and justice.

China has shown a wonderful power to change from one condition to another in such a short time, and all things considered, the nation, the size of the country, the people, the rulers and the many interests which were involved the Republic was launched with very little disturbance and bloodshed. All that China asks of this country is recognition of the new order of things. President Taft could not do much less than grant the request. When this country was first launched, it was not only recognition, but aid that was tendered by the French government. At a later period, in the civil war, Russia showed her friendly feeling and no doubt saved a serious complication. So that we are showing to the world, a lack of appreciation of what was done for this country in its stormy and trying days when we withhold recognition of the Chinese republic.

CORNERING MARKET ILLEGAL

"Cornering the market," in commodities, is illegal according to the decision of the supreme court, delivered Monday. The direct cause of this decision was the end of the case brought against James Patten and others for cornering the cotton market. Immediately following the decision, the market price of cotton dropped on the stock exchange. However this does not mean that it lost any of its productive value to the consumer.

It is always the way with those market articles. On the exchange, here is a great flurry, prices go up and down at lightning speed, but to the consumer there is seldom any change in the figure except to take an upward move once in a while when the manipulators feel that they should give the poor public another little squeeze just to convince them that they are still hard and fast in the grip of the octopus. The decision is a good one and meets with the hearty approval of the entire country. The only trouble with those cases is that it takes so long to have them finally decided that the main issue is befogged by time and there is no chance for any real remedy as the conditions have changed, the alleged corners have been broken, rounded off, or whatever you will and the product has been probably worn out in the way of clothing by the time the corner decision is handed down. But now while this decision is fresh in the memory of man and there are also one or two other things likewise clear to the memory, would it not be a good move to take immediate steps to see what can be done with this corner in coal, in oil, in beef, and in many other things too numerous to mention.

That there is some kind of a corner or combination which maintains a grip upon those mentioned as well as other commodities is quite plain to the average person who has to produce for those articles. Just how it is done the long suffering public would like to know. Just how a remedy can be applied and applied effectively is of more concern but while the subject is on the carpet the people would like to get in touch with all the combinations. If that is done, then there would be rejoicing on every hand. It is to be hoped that a movement with this end in view will be started immediately and all further farcial and non-result producing efforts be left to the politicians and spell binders to work out to their own gratification. Bluffing on these important matters have been carried to the limit. The people are sick, and tired of promises, pledges, and the like and on the spur of the moment and the jack in the box, me too of this and that politician when some movement is contemplated. Action is wanted. The time for talk, bluff and bluster has gone by and something tangible to relieve the situation is demanded of those city and state officials who were so eager to enter the lists a few months ago but who have become strangely quiet and done nine since the election.

MAKING FRIENDS.

That woman senator in Denver has done more to advance the cause of woman suffrage by her nice tactful demeanor than all the crazy headed marchers, paraders, spouters, window smashers, would be orators and few other types could have accomplished in a month of Sundays. In the first place she is womanly from her head to her toes and in that gains the respect of the men whom she meets. She is not a radical, going off at a tangent at the slightest insinuation against the proper rights of her sex. She is conducting herself just as any lady should and lady like conduct on the part of the advocates of this innovation will be more successful in the work towards reaching the goal they seek than all the rattle brained publicity seekers who are smashing windows, parading and the like. The former class show good judgment. They exhibit a balance wheel which intelligent men are sure to distinguish and credit them with possessing. Armed with those desirable qualities they are given credit for being able to act intelligently. And so in the long run it will be the intelligent, womanly woman, and not the flighty fanatic who will bring about universal suffrage. And when it can be accomplished and the women of this desirable class take their place in the ranks there will probably be less objection to the movement than at present. At present many irresponsible, publicity seekers are doing more harm than good to the cause they espouse, because it is plainly evident that it is purely personal with them and the limelight appeals more strongly to them than the gauge of battle for their sisters.

DAILY GAINS IN CONTEST

Miss Morrissett Nearly Overtakes Mr. Bowditch

ANOTHER PRIZE OFFERED

The Contest Editor was overworked on Monday when it was necessary to count over 26,000 votes in three or four hours, but the task was accomplished. Today a lull in the vote was expected, but there is always something doing in the Washington popularity contest. Miss Nellie Morrissett sought to regain the position she lost yesterday. Her gain of 165 would have put her ahead of Mr. Bowditch, but Galen was not caught napping, for he added 150 and says he intends to hold seventh place against all comers, until he decides to move up.

Gains were also made today by R. M. Harmon, who passes Dan Scouler; by Walter Mead, who is trying to overtake the other High school candidates; by Alice O'Neil of West Quincy, Edmond Roach, George L. Phillips Carl W. Leaf, B. L. Smith, William Erickson and George A. McDonnell. None of the first six candidates made gains today.

ANOTHER PRIZE.

Again on Monday, Jan. 13, at 9 A. M. a prize will be awarded to the candidate who makes the largest gain for the week of Jan. 6—13.

THE LAST COUPON.

The last coupon in this contest will be printed in the issue of Saturday, Feb. 8, and the polls will close a few days later. A great hustle is expected during the last days of the contest.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

CONQUEST OF THE AIR.

First Public Flight of an Aeroplane In This Country.

In "The Curtiss Aviation Book" Glenn Curtiss describes the first public aeroplane flight in America, in the days before any one had ever heard of the young Yankee inventor, and he was experimenting with Alexander Graham Bell and others:

"Baldwin climbed into the seat, took the control in hand, and we cranked the motor. When we released our hold of the machine it sped over the ice like a scared rabbit for two or three hundred feet and then, much to our joy, it jumped into the air. This was what we had worked for through many long months, and naturally we watched the brief and uncertain course of Baldwin with a good deal of emotion.

"Rising to a height of six or seven feet, Baldwin flew the unheard of distance of 318 feet 11 inches! Then he came down ingloriously on one wing. As we learned afterward, the frail framework of the tail had bent and the machine had flopped over on its side and dropped on the wing, which gave way and caused the machine to turn completely around.

"It had taken just seven weeks to build the machine and get it ready for the trial; it had taken just about twenty seconds to smash it. But a great thing had been accomplished. We had achieved the first public flight of a heavier than air machine in America'"

Emily Bronte.

G. K. Chesterton has added his meed of praise to Emily Bronte, the woman writer, who of all others has perhaps won most unstinted praise from men. A splendid creature Chesterton calls the author of "Wuthering Heights," and the book itself he finds likewise splendid. "But there is nothing human about it. It might have been written by an eagle."

PURSE OF GOLD FOR KEOHANE

Retiring Ranger of St. Kevin's Court Remembered

OFFICERS INSTALLED

The installation of the officers of St. Kevin's Court, M. C. O. F. took place at Poland's hall, Monday evening, before a gathering consisting of representatives from Neponset, Dorchester, Boston, South Boston and Quincy.

The exemplification of the degree staff of Brockton court was under the direction of District Deputy Michael Milan. High Senior Conductor Cornelius F. Buckley was unable to be present.

A pleasing event of the evening was the presentation of a purse of gold to Past Chief Ranger Ted Keohane by District Deputy Milan. He also gave Miss Catherine Sullivan senior conductor, a gold emblem. In a short speech he said that both had been instrumental in the growth of the court. As they went forward to accept the gifts they were given rounds of applause.

The guests of the evening were Rev. Fr. J. P. Cuffe of Sacred Heart Parish, Past High Chief Ranger, Cornelius M. Duggan of Atlantic, Miss Catherine Flannagan of St. Louise Court of Neponset. Remarks were made by the guests and officers and a brief entertainment consisting of songs by Joseph Sullivan, Frank O'Brien, C. F. Duggan were well received. The officers installed were:

Chief Ranger—John Hayes.

Vice Chief Ranger—Joseph A. Sullivan.

Recording Secretary—Miss Marie Duggan.

Financial Secretary—James F. Keohane.

Treasurer—John McClure.

Senior Conductor—Miss Catherine Sullivan.

Junior Conductor—Mrs. Joseph McClure.

Inside Sentinel—Miss Mary Driscoll.

Outside Sentinel—Frank O'Brien.

Trustees—William McCarthy, Miss Catherine Fay, Richard Cole.

Delegate to the convention—Ted Keohane and John Hayes.

Alternates—Henry J. Langelier and Joseph A. Duggan.

THREE PILOTS LIVE IN QUINCY

Men Who Move to Atlantics Tumble Find Quiet Here

Three of that hardy class of men, who winter and summer are found outside of Boston harbor, jogging along in their little schooners waiting to be picked up for pilotage make their home in Quincy. There is no class of men in the world who have such thrilling experiences, and there is no class which calls for quicker or better judgment or who are more often called upon to act with promtitude and decision in emergencies that the coast pilot.

The Boston pilots are acknowledged to be the best of their type in this country. Quincy is proud to be the home city of three of the leaders in this profession.

Rowell Y. Woodbury is a "State of Maine boy." He had been a fisherman, and Capt. George Lawler got him into the piloting, putting him into the Hesper. Capt. Lawlor's good eye was justified by Capt. Woodbury, who has made a fine record. He is married and lives at 77 Sea street, Houghs Neck.

Joseph Fawcett was born in England, but came to this country very young, and grew up in East Boston. He, too, had a long sea experience before he went piloting; he was made out of the Friend, is married and lives at 31 Wollaston avenue, Wollaston.

William H. Lewis is another of the young fellows. He was born in East Boston and has had considerable deep-water experience before he went piloting. He got his commission out of the Liberty. He is married and lives at 109 Prospect street, Wollaston.

CITIES' NEEDS DISCUSSED

Various Reforms and Improvements Suggested by Mayors

Boston, Jan. 7.—Inaugural exercises were held in many Massachusetts cities yesterday and last night. Two new chief executives, going into office, scored past administrations and called for reforms. Mayor John F. Hurley of Salem, in his fifth inaugural address, attacked the police department, saying it was demoralized and must be reorganized.

Industrial development was urged by Mayor Burns of Somerville and Mayor Chambers of Everett. Mayor Ashley made a plea for state aid in the development of the port facilities of New Bedford, pointing out that with the completion of the Cape Cod canal that city will occupy an important position.

The appointment of business men as an advisory board to the municipal counsel was announced by Mayor Foster of Gloucester.

Mayor Hickey of Brockton, where the Democrats are in power for the first time, strongly advocated that the Brockton Fair association be investigated. He declared the association is supposed to give a percentage of its profits to charity, but has failed repeatedly to do so.

ADOPTION OF RADICAL STEP

To Be Urged by Postmaster General Hitchcock

COUNTRY'S EXPRESS BUSINESS

May Be Taken Over and Operated by the Government—Clause of Act Bestowing Power to Make Proposed Change One of Most Liberal Ever Passed by Congress

Washington, Jan. 7.—That Postmaster General Hitchcock, in his forthcoming annual message, will recommend that the government take over and operate the express business of the country, is the statement of those who are in a position to know the plans of the administrative official of the parcel post system.

It is believed Hitchcock will make this recommendation not as a new proposal but as an extension of the present parcel post.

"You may expect several sensations in that report," was the way one man put it. "The postmaster general, according to his own statement, made on Jan. 1, has arrived at the conclusion that the express companies have got to go and that Uncle Sam must take their place."

It is pointed out here that the postmaster general will not have to ask congress for additional power in order to take this radical step, for congress, in the act passed last August, has already given him, in conjunction with the interstate commerce commission, the power to change existing law as regards rates, zones, classification, weights, and all other matters.

All that is necessary is for the postmaster general and the interstate commece commission to become convinced, after a study of the facts, that the parcel post service will be benefited by the change. Then by executive order any change can be made. The clause of the act which bestows these powers is one of the most liberal ever passed by congress.

The evidence that Hitchcock is preparing to take advantage of these powers has given advocates of the Lewis plan of a postal express new courage. They are ready to back up the postmaster general in congress, in case he should need their aid.

They point out that the Goeke bill has shown the way by which the postoffice department will be able to take over and run the express companies with the least loss to the private capital invested, and with the maximum efficiency. It is known that Representative Lewis of Maryland has been in consultation with the postmaster general, over his forthcoming message.

PLAN TO KIDNAP MINISTER

New Tactics Adopted by Militant Suffragettes In London

London, Jan. 7.—Milder atrocities failing to win the ballot, the militant suffragettes now threaten stronger measures to gain their ends, it having been learned that women of the suffrage movement had formed a plot to kidnap some member of the cabinet.

The police give no intimation as to what cabinet officer the women had designs upon, but it is learned that a party of suffragists invaded the office of Home Secretary McKenna.

Disbelieving the statements of attaches that McKenna was at the house of commons, the women broke into his private office, tore open closets and ransacked bookcases until police reserves, called from a nearby police station, forcibly ejected the women. Some of them were thrown bodily into the street.

Every member of the cabinet is now guarded by armed detectives in their homes as well as their offices.

AS TO RAILWAY CONTRACTS

States Have No Jurisdiction on Limitation of Liabilities

Washington, Jan. 7.—Railroads and express companies won a revolutionary decision in the supreme court when it was held that contracts limiting to small sums their liability for loss of shipments were not subject to state laws, but to interstate laws.

It was further held that contracts limiting liability to a small sum, in return for a low rate, were not in violation of the interstate commerce laws, particularly the Carmack amendment. Scores upon scores of such contracts have been held void under state laws.

Kaiser's Suite on Warship

Berlin, Jan. 7.—A suite de luxe exclusively for the emperor is a feature of Germany's biggest warship, the Kaiser, now being built. Wilhelm II. will occupy it during naval maneuvres.

Queer Decision of Registrar

Paris, Jan. 7.—"You cannot be married because you do not exist," was the Lorient registrar's answer to Mme. Kerguel's application for license to wed. Her birth had never been recorded.

UNITY OF PURPOSE

paving block, which had reference to party designation and the toast master assured the genial ex-Mayor that he was with him in this case.

EX-MAYOR SHEA.

Ex-Mayor Shea replied that all recollected the paving block and the result. He congratulated the City Council on its president. He is a fair fighter. He possesses much valuable knowledge regarding the City of Quincy. We hear much about the financial condition of Quincy, but it is all right. We have got a lot of citizens who for a month before election are heard from, but after that they are heard from no more. Speaking of party designation he said that no man was licensed to sit in the City Council simply because he was a Republican or Democrat, but simply for his qualifications for the office. All that he asked was that the legislature give the voters a chance to decide and they will settle it.

JOSEPH L. WHITON.

At this point the toastmaster announced that Santa Claus had left a few gifts for him to dispose of the first of which was marked Richards. It was a miniature gavel which he took great pleasure in handing over, with the admonition that "a little practice with it would put him in line."

COUNCILMAN RICHARDS.

Councilman Richards in accepting the gavel said he thought that "Peaceful Harry" must have had something to do with it. It does us good to get together here. We will not always agree and the party designation phase did not appeal to him. If President Bryant is satisfied I am. You will find me as good a looser as winner. He agreed that if we were to get results we must pull together. We all have our honest differences of opinion and the only thing is to work out the merits of the case which will be doing all we can for the benefit of the city.

REPRESENTATIVE LESLIE.

Santa Claus had other presents in his bag and Toast Master Hobbs then produced a rattle for Representative

REP. WILLIAM J. LESLIE.

Leslie who in accepting said that he would try and find use for it some time. He agreed that Quincy was the best city on the face of the globe. Everybody has heard of Quincy, its granite hills and Fore River ship yard. The trouble is that people are not taking the interest they should in the city. They should sit up and take notice. He knew the tax rate was high but it is going down again. The financial men of the city should help out. The trouble is that the conduct of affairs is left to some one else and the Mayor gets the blame. During the coming year he would try and get as much for Quincy as possible on Beacon hill.

REPRESENTATIVE SULLIVAN.

Said that he had supposed that there was now nothing that Quincy wanted on Beacon hill but after hearing the Mayor's inaugural he had come to the conclusion that the representatives would be kept busy. Referring to the City Council of 1913 he said that he believed it was all right and would be able to handle matters all right. He promised to do all in his power for the City of Quincy in the legislature and promised that the citizens would have no cause to regret sending him there.

COUNCILMAN STUDLEY.

There was one more gift and this was handed over to ex-Councilman Studley who last year served as Chairman of the Committee of Fire Department. The gift was a miniature Hook & Ladder truck, and in presenting it the toast master said that "Happy Henry" had mounted the seat and driven it to victory.

Councilman Studley said that he gladly accepted the gift and he spoke briefly of his work on the Fire and Police Committee. The citizens of his ward had seen fit to retire him and he did not think it proper to make a house to house canvas and ask votes so he was down and out. He had tried to reduce the number of call men but the special committee had not endorsed it. He felt that a man who lived a mile and a half from the fire station and responded to the alarms was better than a man who lived near and never responded.

EX-COUNCILMAN JOHN D. SMITH.

Spoke briefly in a semi-humorous vein and spoke of the harmony of the council of 1911 and he urged the new council to pattern after the 1911

COUNCILMAN JOSEPH L. WHITON

Was introduced as the only real Bull Mooser. He spoke briefly and said that he did not expect to agree with the President in all things. If the Ledger could be believed all had not been harmony in the Council the last year. There was no question but what a $22 tax rate was high, especially with a high valuation. He did not want to stop progress but we should go carefully. He hoped that the Mayor and City Council would work together.

HERBERT G. BEEMAN

DOCK COMMISSIONER CRANE.

Spoke of the many assets of the City of Quincy. Quincy was bound to progress no matter what was said. There were granite quarries at West Quincy known all over the world. At Atlantic and Wollaston are beautiful residential sections and at Quincy Point there is a water front with 26 feet of water which is one of the greatest assets any city can have. He also spoke of how these several assests had increased during the past year in spite of all. He said $1 will take a ton 127 miles by railroad and 1250 miles by water. It is up to us to use our water front. It is the best asset that Quincy has. Believed in the public dock but it should be in the proper place, under proper supervision. Quincy is growing. You can not keep it back, with all the croaking. It is bound to grow in spite of all.

Brief remarks were also made by ex-Councilman J. R. S. Ross of Houghs Neck. Councilman Cunningham and ex-Councilman Robert B. Craig of Ward Three and at 9.30 the dinner came to an end with the orchestra playing "Auld Lang Syne."

POLAND-GANZEL NUPTIALS QUIET

Two Popular Young People United in Marriage

In the presence of the immediate families, Miss Gladys Ganzel, daughter of Charles W. Ganzel, the old-time Boston National ball player, was married Monday evening to Edwin A. Poland, son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Poland of Atlantic.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, 132 Billings road, by Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, pastor of the Bethany Congregational church.

The bride was attended by her sister Miss Sadie Ganzel and her brother Lloyd Ganzel was the best man. The bride was dressed in mauve velvet, with a hat to match and carried lilies of the valley. Her attendent wore blue silk, with lace trimmings and carried white roses.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Poland were given a reception and were the recipients of many beautiful wedding presents. They will reside at 134 Faxon road, Norfolk Downs.

The bride is one of the most popular Quincy young ladies. She has been a devotee of athletics, being expert in swimming, tennis and golf. The groom while at the Quincy High school was identified with field sports and was prominent in short distance events and high jumping. Mr. Poland is the travelling salesman of a Boston grocery house.

The friends of the young couple planned to have a good time after the ceremony and reception and their movements called for a kidnapping of the bride. They would have succeeded but for the strategy of Joseph McIntire, the chauffeur who was engaged to take them by automobile to the South station in Boston in time to take a train for Rochester, N. Y., where they decided to spend their honeymoon.

When McIntire arrived with his big touring car he was not slow to take in the situation. About 200 friends of the young couple had gathered and surrounded the house.

There are roads running closely about the house, and for a long time McIntire kept the throng puzzled by running the big car rapidly about the house in circles. Then, at 8.30, when he had the crowd tired and off its guard, he suddenly dashed the machine up to the curbing. The couple had caught a given signal. There was a quick rush of a blushing bride, and a stalwart young groom and the couple were in the machine. The chauffeur put on speed and again showed strategy by completely circling the house, thus avoiding the mirthmakers. Swinging back at high speed, he doubled on the throng, charging through them and making off toward Boston as they scattered, barely able to hurl a little rice and fling an old shoe or two.

ONLY LIVED HERE FOUR MONTHS.

After four months residence in America, Giovanno, the 16 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Peruzzi of 59 Nightingale avenue, died Monday night at the Quincy City Hospital where he was being treated for penumonia.

The funeral will take place from the home of his parents Wednesday morning. A high mass of requiem will be celebrated at St. Johns church. Interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

DIED OF MEASLES.

John W. Truesdale, Jr., the four months old son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Truesdale of 66 Copeland street, died Monday night. He had been suffering from the measles but a short time when he died.

NEW FACTS IN DONOVAN CASE

Discovered by Both Medical and Police Authorities

INSPECTORS VERIFY NEW CLUE

Visit Jennings In Jail and Confer With His Counsel—Prize Fighter Formally Charged With Murdering MacPherson and Case Continued—Were Once Good Friends

Boston, Jan. 7.—Both the state and the Malden police worked late into last night on an important clue in the Malden death mystery case, which the heads of both departments refused to divulge. It is intimated that important information received would place James B. Jennings, otherwise known as "Kid Carter," the prize fighter, nearer to the scene of the death of Mrs. Donovan than anything yet uncovered.

Inspectors Greenleaf of the Malden police and Smith of the state police, it is believed, visited Lynn yesterday, but spent a greater part of the day in Boston, where the clue which they found was verified.

The renewed activities lead to the belief that the authorities, both medical and the police, have discovered facts which they do not care at present to make public.

Aside from visits to Lynn, it is known that both Greenleaf and Smith visited Jennings yesterday, and later in the day were in conference with Melvin B. Breath of Boston, who has been engaged as counsel for Jennings by both Mrs. Jennings of Everett and Suffolk county.

Jennings was arraigned yesterday before Judge Creed on a charge of murdering William MacPherson on New Year's day in a South End saloon. Through the efforts of the police the case was continued another week, so that the grand jury at its meeting today may hear evidence in the case.

Information furnished by Miss Ida M. Feener yesterday would seem to establish the fact that Jennings and MacPherson, the man he killed, were not only well acquainted, but had roomed in the same house at one time.

"About two years ago," said Miss Feener, "both Kid Carter and MacPherson had rooms with me on West Springfield street. I was running a number of lodging houses and while these men did not occupy the same room, they had rooms in my house at the same time. They were friends, both carried guns and they would go off together and return together.

"There was an Archie McLaughlin, who was also a pal of theirs, but I have not seen him for some time."

Every effort was made to trace McLaughlin yesterday, but late last night it was found that he had been in the west for some months.

PREPARES A NEW WRIT

Castro Takes Personal Charge of Fight to Enter United States

New York, Jan. 7.—Cipriano Castro has taken personal charge of his fight against deportation. He called a lawyer to his room, where he is detained at Ellis island, and prepared a new petition asking for a superseding writ of habeas corpus. Later in the day this writ was granted by Judge Holt in the federal district court.

The new writ is more specific than the original document sworn out on his behalf last Friday. Castro believes it will require a more detailed answer from the immigration authorities. Like the original writ, it is returnable Jan. 10.

AT BIER OF HIS WIFE

Young Man Takes Poison a Few Minutes Before Funeral Services

Rome, N. Y., Jan. 7.—Requesting those in the room to leave that he might be alone to pray with the body of his wife, who died on Saturday, Patrick McCormick stood beside the bier a few minutes before the funeral services were to begin yesterday and swallowed poison.

He was taken to a hospital, where he soon died. McCormick was 25 years old.

Greeks Capture Bizani Heights

Athens, Jan. 7.—The Greek army moving upon Janina from the southwest captured the Turkish batteries upon the Heights of Bizani. The war office received word that this was the last serious obstacle in the way of the Greeks.

Editor Succeeds Jeff Davis

Little Rock, Jan. 7.—Governor Donaghey appointed J. N. Heiskell, editor of the Arkansas Gazette of this city, United States senator to succeed the late Jeff Davis. The appointment is for the short term ending March 4.

Six Thousand Taxi Drivers Out

London, Jan. 7.—The taxicab strike, which has reduced London cab traffic to the old days of broughams, victorias and crowlers, is as far from settlement as ever, 6000 chauffeurs being still idle.

EVERYBODY SATISFIED

At the Fine Attractions at Kincaide's Theatre This Week

"Come boys, lets all make merry, Hearing Art Rigby.—"

He is at Kincaides theatre this week, closing Wednesday night. Monday night he convulsed one of the largest audiences the theatre has held and if Art Rigby is not all that can be expected of a minstrel man he will tell you where to find a better one. And furthermore, Art knows a little dope on the sweetheart proposition which naturally tickles all the "fellers and gals and women."

Hap Handy and Co., present a neat sketch which bursts with a bubble demonstration on a scientific basis and the Variety Trio specializing in "Alabam" song hits reach over the footlights.

A distinct novelty act is the mechanical paving stunt of the Four Magnanis who extract music from unusual sources.

The feature picture, "For the Cause" in two reels, deals with the Confederate side of the Civil War, and aside from showing a realistic battle scene, depicts the strength of purpose of a Southern hero and the loving qualities of a pretty maid.

Two comic photoplays add to the program of an intensely interesting theatre. Matinees commence at 2.30 o'clock.

FINE WORK BY MALDEN STAFF

Members of LePorto Court Installed Officers of St. Ambrose Court

The ladies degree staff of Lepanto Court 142 of Malden, under the direction of Deputy High Chief Ranger, Hannah M. Penney, installed the officers of St. Ambrose Court, M. C. O. F. in St. Joseph's hall Monday evening. The fine execution by the staff elicited hearty applause from the large number present.

The guests of the eveping were Rev. Henry T. Grady, Rev. William J. Duffy, High Outside Sentinel George T. Daley of Erin Court, Boston; Dr. John H. Ash, court physician.

Supper was served by Burleigh and Martin and remarks by the guests were thoroughly enjoyed. An impromptu entertainment was furnished by the members. The officers installed were:

Past Chief Ranger—Mrs. Alice T. Ash.

Chief Ranger—Mrs. Catherine O'Brien.

Vice Chief Ranger—Mrs. Catherine Martin.

Treasurer—Mrs. Annie G. Watson.

Recording Secretary—Miss Susie Pickering.

Financial Secretary—Miss Mary Pickering.

Outside Sentinel—Mrs. Annabelle McDonnell.

ELKS PLANNING SOCIAL EVENT

Annual Concert and Ball to Surpass All Previous Efforts

Plans are well under way for the annual concert and ball of Quincy Lodge of Elks which will be held at Music hall Jan. 30. The first meeting of the committee was held early this week and if the plans as outlined at this meeting are carried out the affair will eclipse all previous efforts.

"LET THE PEOPLE RULE"

Governor of Utah Warns People Against Following the Slogan

Salt Lake City, Jan. 7.—Governor Spry took the oath of office here for his second term as chief executive of Utah. In his inaugural address Spry decried "popular government" agitation.

"Rallying to the cry 'let the people rule,' many of our countrymen have been swept from their feet," he said, "to all but renunciation of the constitution which alone is responsible for all that we possess as a nation."

BURIED IN QUINCY.

The funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth Clifford who died at Portsmouth, N. H. Friday took place from the home of her mother, Mrs. Margaret Farrell, 210 Willard street, this morning. A High Mass of requiem was celebrated at St. Mary's Catholic church by Rev. Fr. William J. Duffy.

The Gregorian chant was sung at the mass by the choir under the direction of Miss Frances Cronin, organist. Mrs. Catherine Fennessey sang the De Profundis and Libera, assisted by Paul Foley.

Burial was in the St. Mary's cemetery. The bearers were James P. Leary, Henry M. Hughes, George S. Hebert and Charles C. Kelley. There was a profusion of floral tributes.

Mrs. Clifford died from pneumonia, after a week's illness. She moved to New Hampshire shortly after her marriage to John Clifford and has resided there about six years. She was well known in Quincy and had many friends here. Besides her husband she leaves one child, mother, two sisters, and one brother, Peter J. Farrell.

HELL FOR LOST SOULS

Townsend Disagrees With Eliot's Ideas on the Subject

Boston, Jan. 7.—That there positively is a hell, and a real hell to which lost souls are confined in the next world, and that President-Emeritus Eliot of Harvard university has shown his ignorance of theology and has, "without modesty," declared knowledge of things of which he has no knowledge, was the subject of a lecture delivered in Tremont temple by Dr. Townsend, under the auspices of the Evangelican Association of Greater Boston.

"I cannot allow any man whose knowledge is so limited as that of President Eliot to persuade me that there is no hell," said the speaker. "Men say Mr. Eliot has traveled. But how can his travel give him knowledge of this great subject?

"Let him go to the slums and see the life there, where poverty, filth and the most hateful profanity abound, and he will then realize that as there is such a hell in this world there must be one in the next."

The doors are open at 7.15 and an organ recital by the organist of the Cathedral will precede the meeting. Seats are reserved for delegates until 7.40 P. M. St. Chrysostom's will be represented by F. E. Cleveland and Mrs. D. L. Jewell. A. H. Briggs will sing in the choir on this occasion.

CHRIST CHURCH.

The Galahad Club will meet Wednesday evening at 7.30 o'clock. The Gardner Club meets, Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. The St. Margaret's Guild will meet at the Rectory, Friday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

Mrs. Armstrong will be very glad to see all the St. Margaret girls Friday evening at the Rectory. Let each member bring another so that we may have a splendid meeting.

One of the Altar Guild, Mrs. Austin, presented the church with some beautifully embroidered linen at Christmas time.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

Rev. Carl G. Horst took his text for the morning sermon from the 90th Psalm, 12th verse, "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." The preacher said in substance: "Life is, in the sight of God, a seamless robe; the blending of past, present and future is so imperceptible that our short lives are but as a tale that is told.

"The chiming of a bell, the striking of a clock marks the change from one day to another, from one year to another, but today is our opportunity to render service, for it is the only day of which we are certain. The loam of life must be kept always strung with the harp, and as each day comes, we must weave into it some pattern which shall be permanent and beautiful. Today is the heritage of the Yesterdays, and it comes to us in the husbanded strength and glory of which we made up the Yesterdays of life. No life shall have success and fulness of satisfaction unless the duties of each day have been bravely met and borne and of one thing we may be certain—"As our days so shall our strength be."

Rev. Carl G. Horst began on Sunday the fifth year of his pastorate in Wollaston.

The committee in charge of the 25th anniversary meets at the minister's house this evening at 7.30 o'clock.

Mrs. Garlin Spencer, associate director of the New York School of Philanthropy and one of the best known social workers in the country, will speak on "Social Service of the church to the community in the Wollaston Unitarian church, Tuesday at 7.45 P. M. The public especially all the social workers in Quincy, are cordially invited to hear this address. The meeting is in charge of the Social Service Committee of our church. Frederick H. Bishop, chairman will preside.

The next vesper service will be Sunday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock. The Weber Male quartet of Boston will render the musical part of the service and Rev. Mr. Horst will preach on "The Powers of Music" Please be in your seats at 4.25.

Dr. Starbuck, the eminent psychologist, will give nine lectures on successive Saturdays beginning Jan. 11, at Channing hall, 25 Beacon street, Boston at 11 A. M. His lecture titles are "What is Religion?" "How Religion Grows," "Self Regard and Its Place in Religion," "The Threefold Meaning of Love," "Fear, its Use and Elimination in Religion," "Religion and Whole Mindedness." These lectures are freely open to all interested.

Rev. Abraham M. Rihbany, a native of Syria and a profound student of Oriental life will give eight lectures on successive Fridays in Channing hall, Boston, at 10.30 A. M. beginning Jan. 10. There will be three lectures on "The Psychology of Oriental Life as Revealed in the Bible" and five lectures on "The Social Side of Oriental Life as Revealed in the Bible." These lectures are free and open to all interested.

The New England Associate Alliance holds its next meeting at the Church of the Disciples, Boston, Thursday, Jan. 23, speakers Rev. Abraham M. Rihbany, Rev. Chas. W. Wendte, Mrs. G. W. Coleman, Rev. L. G. Wilson and Ex-President Charles W. Eliot, L. L. D.

Rev. Carl G. Horst will give an address before the Women's Alliance of the First Unitarian church in Exeter, N. H. on Jan. 9.

All who have printed matter relating to the church are invited to contribute it to the Wollaston Unitarian Scrap book, which the pastor is getting ready for the 25th anniversary.

The annual business meeting of the church will be held Monday evening, Jan. 27, in the vestry. The treasurer will greatly appreciate receiving contributions due to the church before that date.

All 25th anniversary gifts will be announced at the service Saturday evening, Feb. 1.

The Young People's Religious Union held a helpful meeting Sunday evening at which Miss Ernestine Litchfield spoke on "Integrity in little Things."

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

The New Year Sunday witnessed a large attendance at the morning service and communion of the Lord's Supper. Twenty-seven persons were welcomed into fellowship of the church by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Sneath. In his brief discourse preparatory to the communion he encouraged his hearers on the ground of past achievement to continue in the Christion way and to add more and more to their Christian growth. Christian achievement is best accomplished along the old lines of communion with God, struggle against sin, the cultivation of love for others and loyalty to the highest and best. Even as the depth of a channel is secured by the waters flowing over the same river-bed.

The Junior Endeavor society held a very pleasant social Saturday afternoon. This organization, only a month old, is in a very flourishing condition. Miss Madeline Morse is the efficient superintendent.

The annual meeting of the chuch will be held Wednesday evening, supper at 6.30 and business meeting will follow. Charles Randall, the successful superintendent, of the Sunday School, will not consent to serve another year.

Troop L. Wollaston, Boy Scouts of America gave a stereopticon lecture Monday evening in the church on the work of the organization. It was given by Field Secretary Webb of the Greater Boston Council.

The high wind on Saturday blew out one of the beautiful windows in the church audience room.

The regular meeting of the Ladies Auxiliary W. B. M. will be held Tuesday at 3 P. M. at the home of Mrs. A. A. Lincoln. It will be a thank offering meeting and will be led by Mrs. F. E. Perkins.

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

At the Wollaston Methodist church Sunday large audiences were in attendance at both services. Rev. Wesley Wiggin, the pastor spoke from the words "As thy days so shall thy strength be," at the morning service. He said in part: "It is good that we pause occasionally and review the past. It is well to remember past blessings, to consider the mistakes and the failures of our lives in order that we may profit by them and guard ourselves against them in the future. Paul said he was willing to forget the past and press forward. Paul was willing to forget whatever hindered him in his Christian progress. There were some things that Paul could not forget. But the things that were a hindrance to his Christian attainments he would give up.

"Each New Year brings us face to face with new duties, new experiences, and new responsibilities. Notwithstanding the stress and strain and failure of life God has revealed unto us means for our individual improvement which means increased responsibilities.

"No one can be a hearer of the Word without incurring responsibility. Unnumbered appeals come to conscience and invitations to consider our ways. No one can read the future. It is wise that we cannot read the future that we cannot know the details, that we cannot see the results. It is enough that the present is ours for true living, for right doing, for high ideals and for noble service. What matters it if we cannot read the future if only we have faith in God and believe the Bible for omnipotent and omniscience love assure us that "As thy days so shall thy strength be."

"Therefore we are to live day by day. We sing "Moment by Moment." We are to live a day at a time. Human nature wants to see, touch and feel things and because we cannot see and touch things we complain, and find fault and doubt. There are days when life is filled with jubilant song. Then there are days when the heart echoes a dirge. There are days when success crowns the life. There are days when the reverse is true.

"Strength sufficient for each day is assured. Todays courage, and todays strength for any particular will not suffice for tomorrow's duties. We need fresh courage and renewed strength for tomorrow's battles and tomorrow's duties. Living day by day saves us from forebodings.

"Living day by day brings to us the strength that is best needed for each day's task. It is the best test of our loyalty to Christ and His Church."

A large number attended Sunday school to greet J. A. Sedgwick who has just returned from a month's vacation trip to California. He received a most cordial welcome from the whole school. He brought greetings from Samuel A. Kay a former superintendent, whom he met in Alberquerque while waiting for a train.

The Junior League was in charge of the pastor assisted by Miss Florence Bennett and Miss Alfreda Dewsnap. A membership contest is to be tried with Miss Francina Crothers and Miss Gladys Hirtle as Captains.

W. C. Sanders led the Epworth League meeting at 7 o'clock which was well attended and full of interest. Clarence P. Cassidy led the praise service and Miss Beulah presided at the piano.

At 7 o'clock the pastor preached a short sermon on "What it means to be a Christian" after which he baptized a number of candidates and received a large number into the church. Miss Marguerite Louise Holbrook sang two solos "Consider, Hear Me" and "The Peace of God," which were well received. Mrs. F. G. Bennett was the organist. A large number participated in the communion service.

The Wollaston and West Quincy Methodist Episcopal Churches will hold special union services this week and next. This week the meetings will be held at Wollaston with the following speakers. Tuesday evening at 7.45 Mrs. F. H. Morgan; Wednesday Rev. T. C. Martin; Thursday 7.45 Mrs. F. H. Morgan, Friday 7.45 Rev. T. C. Martin. Everybody invited. Special music.

POINT CHURCH.

That the men at the Washington Street Congregational Point Church are alive was proven by the way they turned out last evening at their weekly men's class.

In New England the Bible class that meets at any hour other than the noon hour is an inovation. Yet in many cities the whole Sunday school meets before the regular morning service.

Last evening nearly 50 men attended the class. After one or two solos and the singing of a number of songs the men present were invited to sit down to eat a lunch. Most of the men present were living away from home and to meet with the class would otherwise have to do without their suppers.

After more singing President Fittan led the class in the discussion of the topic for the day, "The Signs of the times and the Leaven." The discussion was lively and helpful. Next Sunday the class meets at six thirty.

BEEF EN CASSEROLE.

BEEF cooked in the casserole dish takes on new and delicious flavors; also tough beef is made tender by cooking it in this way.

Miroton of Beef. — Take about a pound of cold beef and mince it. Then season, using half a teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of pepper. Mix with two hard boiled eggs, chopped fine. Moisten with gravy or stock. Butter a casserole dish, one which has a tight cover. Place the meat in the baking dish and cover with the cold mashed potatoes, which have been mixed to a paste with milk and butter. Cover the top with breadcrumbs and dot with bits of butter. Cover the dish and bake for half an hour. Then remove the cover and let the top brown.

Meat and Vegetables.

Casserole of Beef With Tomatoes.—Take a buttered casserole dish and place in it a layer of round steak cut in pieces and season with salt and pepper and a little sifting of flour. On this put a layer of sliced onions that have been parboiled a few minutes, add the seasoning of salt, pepper and sifting of flour. Next add a layer of tomatoes and more salt, pepper and flour. For the top layer use potatoes cut in quarters and salt, pepper and flour them. Fill the dish with water and bake slowly two or three hours.

Casserole of Beef With Potatoes.—Take a pound of the upper round of beef and cut into small pieces. Slice two small onions and brown with the beef in a hot pan with drippings. Rub a casserole with the drippings, cover the bottom with a layer of sliced raw potatoes, put in the browned beef and season to taste. Cover with a layer of potatoes and then with hot stock or hot water to cover all. Put the cover of the dish on and cook in a moderate oven until done.

A Medley of Ingredients.

Casserole of Beef and Mixed Vegetables.—Take a pound and a half of beef, a tablespoonful of onion and a carrot, cut fine; a tablespoonful of minced celery, a teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of white pepper, a tablespoonful each of flour and finely chopped parsley and a dash of paprika. Use a wet cloth to wipe off the meat, which may be chuck or round. Cut into small pieces or let remain whole. Put the meat into a casserole dish with the onion, celery, carrot, salt, pepper and paprika. Add two cupfuls of boiling water and bake in hot oven two hours, adding water if necessary. Put the meat in the center of platter, mix the flour with a little cold water and add to the gravy. Boil one minute. Pour the gravy over the meat and vegetables and sprinkle with the chopped parsley. Garnish with sprigs of parsley.

FATE OF OLD FRIGATE

Wabash to Be Burned to Obtain Valuable Metal In Her Hull

Boston, Jan. 7.—The famous old United States frigate Wabash, which has been a familiar figure at the local navy yard for many years, will shortly leave here for Baltimore, where she will meet the same fate that has befallen others of the old naval craft—destruction by fire.

When the Wabash was stricken off the naval list some months ago it was believed some historical society would purchase her on account of the association connected with her name, but none did.

A Baltimore concern bid her in and they will burn her to get the valuable metal contained in her hull. The price paid for the frigate was $22,655. The copper in the hull is believed to contain a percentage of gold and silver, so the purchasers feel that they got a bargain.

BONDS FOR DYNAMITE MEN

Attorneys Expect to Have Them Ready Within Next Ten Days

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Bonds for the thirty-two labor leaders convicted in the dynamite suits, and in whose cases appeals were granted last week, will be submitted to the United States circuit court of appeals in Chicago within the next ten days, according to attorneys for the defendants.

The bonds will not be submitted to Judge Anderson, who presided in the case at Indianapolis. District Attorney Miller, who prosecuted the cases, will be asked to aid in passing on the sureties.

Sureties will be tendered in various sections of the United States, it being necessary for each defendant to obtain bondsmen from his own state. Blanks for the signatures of the prisoners have been forwarded to the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth.

ROSE'S TESTIMONY WANTED

Gambler Confers With Whitman Regarding Police Graft Charges

New York, Jan. 7.—"Bald Jack" Rose, whose testimony helped send Police Lieutenant Becker to the Sing Sing death house, may be a witness before the extraordinary grand jury which is investigating charges of police graft here. The former gambler came from Philadelphia and conferred with District Attorney Whitman, who did not deny that Rose might testify before the grand jury.

The district attorney will go before the grand jury today and ask for an indictment against George W. Sipp, the graft witness, who is under arrest in Atlantic City. Sipp cannot be brought back to this city unless he is indicted.

HELD ON HIS FEET AS HE WAS MARRIED

Nurse Says Rich Man Was Almost Helpless at Ceremony

Boston, Jan. 7.—It required two people to hold the late Henry Wenz on his feet, two years ago, while he was being married to Miss Mary Sullivan, his young and attractive bookkeeper, according to testimony taken in the Wenz will contest.

This testimony, elicited from Miss Marie Stone, a nurse, and for two years the constant attendant of Wenz, together with other equally spectacular statements, already has given the contest a sensational turn.

Wenz conducted a chocolate manufacturing plant. In May, 1912, he died, after an illness of several years, leaving an estate the value of which is $200,000. Wenz was 70 years of age.

According to the will the bulk of the estate goes to the young widow, while but $500 is left Mrs. Frances Wenz, his mother. The latter brought suit against her daughter-in-law for the estate.

COURTESY TO OLD PEDLER

Forgotten by Young Woman Until She Receives a Check For $8000

Harrisburg, Jan. 7.—Four years ago Margaretta J. Brown, 18 years old, of this city, helped an old pedler on a trolley car. As the car moved off he mumbled, "I will remember you well some day for your kindness to an old man."

The girl has become Mrs. Ray M. Knesel, and long since she forgot the incident. In her mail yesterday, however, she found a check for $8000 and a note addressed: "To the little girl who helped me on the trolley car four years ago."

The note and the check came from Valentine P. Curtis and were mailed

MANY BILLS READY FOR LEGISLATURE

End of Cannery Abuses In Sight In Empire State

Albany, Jan. 7.—The beginning of the end of the canneries abuses, where babies hardly out of their mothers' arms have been working at times eighteen hours a day, and of the employment of women at laborious work such as handling cores in iron foundries, is at last in sight in New York state. Following the vigorous denunciation of child labor by Governor Sulzer in his initial message to the legislature, when the legislature resumed its session last night among the batch of bills introduced was one prohibiting child labor.

The state factory investigation committee is expected to report its conclusions to the legislature very shortly, with a score of bills recommending reforms. It will have a canneries bill, and, while its measure will likely be the one finally adopted, a number of members have announced they have also prepared stringent bills and they will introduce them, independent of the committee.

TURKEY CLINGS TO ADRIANOPLE

Her Delegates Remain Adamant Upon That Subject

PEACE CONFERENCE SUSPENDS

Balkan Allies Not Satisfied With Offer of Crete and More Thracian Territory—Next Move Is Up to Turkey—Powers Continue to Exercise Pressure at Constantinople

London, Jan. 7.—The Bulgarian, Greek, Montenegrin, Servian and Turkish delegates to the peace conference met again yesterday afternoon. Stojan Novakavitch, the chief of the Servian envoys, presided. The conference lasted exactly an hour, during which the Turkish envoys offered to make further concessions, which were considered by the Balkan plenipotentiaries sufficient to prevent the threatened rupture.

The peace negotiations will be resumed, but the date of the next meeting was not fixed at the conclusion of yesterday's session.

The official report of the meeting of the peace delegates says: "Having examined the new proposals, the Turkish delegates made a reply to the declaration of the allies, at the last sitting. The latter declared the work of the conference suspended."

The Ottoman delegates presented a long statement in which they spoke of Turkey's earnest desire to reach a settlement, but the only concessions they offered were to yield the rights of Turkey in the island of Crete and to give a further small concession with regard to the Thracian frontier between Turkey and Bulgaria. Rechad Pasha and his colleagues remained adamant upon the subject of Adrianople. They said Turkey could not possibly give up that fortress.

The delegates of the Balkan allies then adjourned to the committee room to consider the Turkish offer, and upon returning to the conference they presented a counter statement, adding that as the Turks had not met their terms they must ask an adjournment without fixing the date of the next session. The delegates subsequently emphasized the statement that the negotiations had not been broken off.

By suspending the sittings of the peace conference the delegates of the allies claim to have left the next move to the Turks. Rechad Pasha, they say, has the alternative of presenting fresh proposals which shall follow closely the demands of the Balkan league, and thus resuming the conferences, or of adhering to the Turkish claim for the retention of the fortress of Adrianople, and rupturing further negotiations.

In the meantime many things may happen. Of first importance among these, the fall of Adrianople would impel Turkey to accept the inevitable. The powers continue to exercise pressure at Constantinople, aiming to demonstrate to the porte that resistance would only lead to graver losses. The impression is that Turkey will end by ceding Adrianople, and that this will be done without any serious results, such as are always predicted by Turkish sympathizers or threatened by Constantinople, whenever Turkey is engaged in a conflict with a Christian state.

POLICE USE THEIR CLUBS

Striking Garment Makers Attack Women Who Refuse to Join Them

New York, Jan. 7.—In their efforts to intercept 350 young women employed in the wholesale clothing manufacturing concern of J. L. Taylor & Co. as they were leaving work last evening, 500 striking garment workers, the majority of them women, attacked the police on guard in front of the building.

Automobiles were waiting to take the young women to their homes and the police had formed a cordon across the sidewalk to the curb. The police used their clubs on the outstretched arms of the strikers, who reached under their arms to seize the coats and dresses of the girls. The automobiles were quickly filled and rushed away.

UNCLE SAM'S BIG FAMILY

Estimated Population of the United States Placed at 96,496,000

Washington, Jan. 7.—The latest estimate of the population of continental United States places the figures at 96, 96,000 on Jan. 2, 1913.

This figure was used by the treasury department experts in determining that of the total money in circulation in the country on that date, $3,350,727,500. The amount per capita was $34.72.

Russians Great Liquor Drinkers

St. Petersburg, Jan. 7.—More than 135,000,000 gallons of vodka, Russia's national liquor, were consumed during the first six months of 1912.

OLD GUARD IS DOWNED

McCall Forces Win First Skirmish In Bay State Senatorial Fight

Boston, Jan. 7.—The "field," consisting of McCall, Draper and Guild men, downed the "old guard," consisting of Weeks men, at the Republican conference of the house and senate upon the question of the number necessary to nominate at the caucus which they decided to hold tomorrow afternoon.

The result is that if 94 Republicans vote for one man at the caucus, he will be nominated for United States senator. Had the old guard motion been put and carried the number would have been but 83.

As it stands, the McCall men carried the motion put by them, and it was unanimous. Ninety-four is two-thirds of 140, which is the number necessary to elect in joint assembly.

There are thirty-two members who have as yet refused to be bound by the result.

TO DEMUR OR CHANGE TENTATIVE PLEAS

Defendants In Monopoly Case Given a Week of Grace

New York, Jan. 7.—The time when Charles Mellen and E. J. Chamberlin, presidents, respectively, of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad and the Grand Trunk railway, must decide finally what they will do with reference to the federal indictments, charging them with violating the anti-trust law by attempting to monopolize the railroad traffic of New England, has been extended for a week. The defendants will have until next Monday to demur or change their tentative pleas of not guilty, already entered.

When the case came before Judge Hough in the federal court, John D. Lindsey, attorney for both Mellen and Chamberlin, said he had not had time enough to study the case and determine whether he wished to make any preliminary motions. The extension was granted at his request.

MRS. WELLS' DEFENSE

Children Killed by Pork Which May Have Fallen Into Rat Poison

St. Albans, Vt., Jan. 7.—Mrs. Anna M. Wells, the Swanton woman who is confined at the county jail here on the charge of having poisoned two of her younger children, will make the defense that the children were poisoned from having eaten fresh pork which had accidentally become smeared with rat poison in the barn of the Wells place.

She explained in the presence of her husband, Julius Wells, that he had been mixing rat poison in the stable in a leaky dish and shortly afterward she left a dish of fresh pork in the stable and that it is her belief little Louis, the boy who died, knocked the dish over, the meat landing in the drippings of the dish in which the rat poison was mixed.

MINNESOTA LAW INVALID

Demurrage Measure Annulled Because of Federal Government Action

Washington, Jan. 7.—The Minnesota reciprocal demurrage law of 19( was annulled as unconstitutional by the supreme court of the United States.

The court held that the federal government had legislated on the subject and so taken away all power, if any existed, from the states to legislate on it as far as interstate commerce was concerned. Several states have similar laws.

Taft Renominates Neill

Washington, Jan. 7.—President Taft renominated Charles P. Neill to be commissioner of labor. Neill has served in that position since Feb. 1, 1905.

Disappointed In Insurance

New York, Jan. 7.—Because he got $250 instead of $500 for damages to his place of business by fire, Eyman Wagner committed suicide.

BRIEFS

The annual meeting of the school board will be held at their rooms, this evening.

Officer Charles T. Crooker has been confined to his home several days with a severe attack of the grip.

Rev. and Mrs. Frederick H. Steenstra of the rectory, Wollaston were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Collins of Manville, Rhode Island, the rector accepting an invitation to officiate at Emmanuel church where he was formerly rector.

Miss Bessie M. Flowers who was married to William O. Deaver at Portland, Me., on Dec. 4, is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Flowers, 33 Newcomb place, whose maiden name was Mary Gillis, the return from Portland giving only the mother's maiden name.

The State Board of eHalth among other things which they will ask for this year wil be an appropriation of $10,000 for continuing its investigation of inafntile paralysis and one $35,000 for completion of the work of improving Neponset river so that it will be less dangerous to public health.

The Quincy Teachers' Association will meet at the Coddington school, Thursday evening when the speaker will be Dr. David Snedden, State Commissioner of Education. He will talk on "Current Tendencies in Education." It will be his first official visit and the city officials have been invited to attend.

At the Sunday morning service at St. Chrysostoms church the Rev. Warner F. Gookin, instructor in the New Testament department at the Espiscopal Theological school, Cambridge, preached a strong and forceful sermon of the Church's duty, taking his text from St. Pauls' words from the Epistle for the day.

GOOD GAME EXPECTED.

The game between the Quincy Gym and the Roxbury Y. W. C. A. teams scheduled for this evening, has been cancelled and the Randolph five has been substituted. The game will be played in St. Mary's hall. Those teams have met twice, the first resulting in a victory for the Quincy girls and the second a tie score of 11 to 11, ending at the close of the first period as one of the Quncy girls was hurt and there being no substitute on hand, it was decided to call the game.

It is "quality" that counts with William S. Currier, the new proprietor of the market at 1331 Hancock street, formerly Berry Bros., and with the square deal store" as his motto he is building up a good business. Reliable goods in all departments.

Shipfitters Got away From Pipe Fitters Three One

OTHER GAMES PLAYED

The Yard beat the Electricians four points and the Shipfitters beat the Pipefitters, 3 to 1, in the Fore River League matches at the Coliseum Monday night. The Pattermakers and Government Draftsmen did not roll most of the teams having gone to Chelsea to see Poehler beat Hintze.

Kiley of the Yard secured 115 for high single and Smith struck 287 for high total. A poor string by most of the rollers queered higher scores.

The Wollaston Benedicts and the Wollaston Bachelors, after a cessation of hostilities, again sounded the war cry and the former won by a close margin. A string of 102 gave De Coste high single and Rich stopped at 271 for best total.

In the Match Game with Hintze on the Latter's Alleys

SECOND ROUND THURSDAY

Poehler beat Hintze by 44 pins in the first match at the Congress square alleys, Chelsea, Monday evening. The last ten strings will be rolled at the Coliseum alleys Jan. 9.

Hintze made 20 hits, with a total of 105. Poehler made but 18 hits and had a total of 103. Poehler rolled consistently throughout the match, while Hintze floated between 82 and 115.

A large aggregation accompanied Poehler and Hintze, money was not clearly in sight. The breaks were good for both men, but Poehler's championship calibre aided him in winning from Hintze on the alleys he owns.

High single went to Poehler who made 11 for the second string. The best string of Hintze was 115. The score:

| | Poehler | Hintze |
|---|---|---|
| 1 | 113 | 89 |
| 2 | 121 | 105 |
| 3 | 101 | 89 |
| 4 | 90 | 82 |
| 5 | 97 | 114 |
| 6 | 109 | 101 |
| 7 | 107 | 115 |
| 8 | 98 | 86 |
| 9 | 94 | 101 |
| 10 | 99 | 103 |
| Total | 1029 | 985 |

Official scorer for Poehler, Archie Welsh of Boston; for Hintze, Brooker of Chelsea. Judge at foul line, Frank Kennedy of Atlantic. Judge of Pins, Frank Cox.

MRS. BAXTER BURIED.

The funeral of Mrs. Celia J. Baxter who died at the Quincy City Hospital Jan. 3 was held this morning from her home 298 North street, North Weymouth. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at the Church of the Immaculate Conception by Rev. Fr Lynch. Burial was at Arlington.

The deceased was 57 years of age and leaves a husband, Frank Baxter. She was a member of Paul J. Revere Women Relief Corps, St. Francis Court, M. C. O. F., Ladies Auxiliary, 10 A. O. H. and Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor , No. 1. Representatives from all these societies attended the services. There was a profusion of floral tributes. The funeral was under the direction of Edward D. Barrett.

BOUNDARY LINE MARKS.

These Between Hanover and Holland on the Rhine Are Unique.

Many of the international boundary marks display a sentimental as well as a practical character. The famous "Pillar of Farewell," which marks the line between Russia and Siberia, has been celebrated in song and story. This boundary mark stands between Ekaterinburg, in Russia, and Tiumen in Siberia. It stands on the main road along which thousands of exiles have passed. It is an obelisk of brick, sixteen feet in height. On the west side it bears in Russian characters the word "Europe," and on the east side the word "Asia."

The boundary marks along our northern frontier, separating us from Canada, are of a most practical sort. For many hundreds of miles the St. Lawrence river and the great lakes form the natural boundaries, but there is a vast stretch of prairie land beyond with no natural demarcation. The boundary marks here are pillars of iron and wood placed at intervals of one mile. They have been alternately supplied by the two governments and may be seen from the Lake of the Woods to the Red river valley. Beyond that the marks are mounds of earth and cairns of stone.

The strangest of European frontier lines is that marking the boundary between Hanover and Holland, where it crosses the Rhine. A row of pontoons lies across the river, chained bow and stern. Inasmuch as the dividing line runs through from stem to stern, the eastern halves of the boats are painted in German colors, the western in Dutch. The effect is most striking.

Austria has a frontier line of about 3,800 miles, of which 2,096 is land. Every mile of this must be guarded against the encroachments of Austria's neighbors. Germany is in a similar situation, since her land frontiers, bordering upon Russia, Austria, Switzerland, France, Holland and Belgium are 2,255 miles in extent, and by far the larger portion is not protected by mountains, rivers or any other natural boundaries. The German seacoast, however, is only 744 miles in extent.—Harper's.

WM. A. McKEE DEAD AT MILTON

Had Been in Employ of Forestry Department of the Town

William A. McKee, one of East Milton's best known residents and a native of the Town of Milton, died Monday night at the Convalescent Home for cancer. He had been a patient there for sometime. Eminent specialists were unable to locate the growth and were treating him for an examination. The deceased was in his 56th year and unmarried. Of late years he has been in the employ of the Forestry Department of the Town of Milton. He resided at 7 Pierce street, East Milton.

UNION MEETING.

A union meeting of the men's clubs and improvement associations of Wollaston and vicinity will be held in the assembly hall of the new Wollaston school, Friday evening, Jan. 17.

It is expected this will be one of the largest gatherings of men ever held in Wollaston and representatives from every men's club and improvement association in Quincy, and all men interested in the betterment of the city are invited and urged to be present.

George B. Gallup, of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and president of the American Federation of Men's Clubs will speak on "What co-operation can do along lines of city wide improvements."

The Wollaston Glee club will furnish special musical selections.

The affair is under the direction of a committee consisting of William A. Mann, chairman, Edward J. Badger, A. B. Cassidy, Louis F. R. Langelier, George A. Vibert, Ralph P. Greene, Edward O. Woodward, Harry W. Dunnore and Frederick J. Kessler.

The organizations represented are the Wollaston Congregational club, the Walther class, the Wollaston Unitarian club, the St. Chrysostoms Men's club, the Park and Downs Union club, the Wollaston Park Improvement association, the Norfolk Downs Improvement association and the Montclair Improvement association.

It is aimed to resolve the meeting into a federation of the mens clubs and improvement associations of the entire city.

The movement was started several months ago by William A. Mann, president of the Wollaston Congregational club and met with instant favor at all organizations where it was proposed.

DRESS OF MALTESE WOMEN.

Silk Hooded Cloaks Hide Face and Form From the Curious.

The dress of the Maltese is very singular, and that of the women striking in the extreme. When abroad they are all arrayed in black. They put on over their other dress a robe or loose skirt of that color, brought high on the bosom, and in place of bonnets their heads are covered with a black silk mantle which invests their shoulders and descends halfway behind.

The part which covers the head is furnished with a piece of whalebone inserted in the hem, which keeps it in position and prevents the silk from dropping over the eyes. One hand, placed inside, is always necessary to hold together the sides of the scarf in front and the other hand is often hid under its folds, only a forefinger being suffered to appear through the opening left for the purpose. Of course, under such mufflers little can be seen of the beauties of form or feature if a Maltese nymph happens to possess them. The eyes and a moving, pall black figure are all that can be distinguished.

But sometimes the fair one deigns to exhibit her face to a curious gazer in place of engrossing herself the privilege of seeing and features good humored, rather pleasing than handsome and irradiated by a pair of fine, sparkling eyes, are displayed to the beholder. The complexion is a dark olive, partaking a little of a sort of mulatto tinge.

The mantle is obviously borrowed, or rather it has descended from a distant age and people. It answers to the veil of eastern ladies.

Such figures, thousands of whom are abroad on the Sabbath, give the streets a funeral look. It seems as if all Malta had gone into mourning.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Scott's Narrow Escape.

The world had a narrow escape of never having known a Sir Walter Scott. When a tiny babe he was left in charge of a maid, but the girl's heart was in Edinburgh, whither she wanted to go to rejoin her lover. She was, however, compelled to stay and look after the infant at Sandy Knowe. The girl regarded her charge as an obstacle to be removed and afterward confessed that she carried young Scott up to the crags (under a strong temptation of the devil as she expressed it), fully intending to cut his throat with her scissors and bury him under the moss.

RAILROADS TO ELECTRIFY

If the Bill Presented By Rep. Fox Becomes a Law

IN METROPOLITAN DISTRICT

State House, January 7, 1913.—Representative Channing H. Cox, of Boston, has filed a petition whereby all the railorads of standard guage in the Metropolitan district be obliged to electrify their roads within six years from passage of the accompanying bill. This would include the road from Boston to Braintree, and allows for no conditions.

NEW SCHEDULE IN BASKETBALL

INSTALLATION.

With many out of town friends present, and a large number of members, State Deputy, Robert Rogers of Cambridge installed the officers of Bay View, L. O. L. at Wilson hall, Monday evening. After the rituals, an entertainment was furnished by the members and refreshments were served. The officers installed were:

Worthy Master—Alex Ross.
Deputy Master—M. McKenzie.
Recording Secretary— Malcolm McLeod.
Financial Secretary—Malcolm Stewart.
Treasurer—William F. McCalder.
Chaplain—John McDonald.
Director of Ceremonies—Daniel McLeod.

Outside Tyler—Neil McDonald.
Trustees—Nicholas Williams, W. J. McLeod, J. J. McLennan.
Committee on Law—M. Lamont, R. Rainey, A. C. McLeod, Daniel Nicholson, M. M. McLeod.

PLEASING INTERTAINMENT.

A pleasing entertainment was given at the Wollaston Congregational church, Monday evening under the auspices of Troop Two of the Boy Scouts, the feature of which was a stereopticon lecture by Field Secretary Webb of Boston on the Boy Scout movement. He told many interesting stories of scout work, camp life and first aid.

An organ recital by Clarence Walter Rogers preceded and following the lecture the boys of Troop Two gave a scout demonstration.

Maynard Hatch and Dorford Bruce first practised bandaging and splint work followed by the production of artificial respiration by Sherman Brokaw and William Mullen.

Stanley Richards and Milton Moore constructed a crude litter and Paul Richmond and Stanley Richards gave the fireman's lift.

Scouts Crossley and Hatch tied various kinds of knots. Theodore Higgins and Herbert Merrill gave examples of signalling and concluded by thanking their audience in the signal code.

Lyman Sayward and Howard Baker were in charge of the tickets. The troop was assisted by Troop One and Three.

NEW LEAGUE OF BOWLERS

City Organization Will Invade Alleys This Week

Well may the readers of newspaper ask if Quincy has gone bowling mad since one of the most prominent features of the week's sports is the bowling scores made by leagues and individual teams. And, to help roll the ball along, another league, to be known as the City League, has been organized, consisting of six teams, composed of good amateur bowlers. The opening event is billed for Jan. 10 at the City Square alleys. The teams and captains are as follows:

Cranch—Capt. Fred Erickson.
Manets—Capt. Leo oHwley.
Telegram—Capt. A. N. LaBrecque.
Granites—Capt. George Johnson.
Melanchopee—Capt. George Russell.
Gilt Edge—Capt. Frank Gillis.

—All enlistments in the regular army now are for seven years instead of four, so that each recruit who serves his full time will be a new man when he comes out, if there is truth in the old theory that a man's physical characteristics completely change in seven years.

ITINERARY

OF LEDGER TOUR

—To—

WASHINGTON, D. C.

FEBRUARY 28 TO MARCH 7

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 28.

Leave Boston at 6.00 P. M., by train for Fall River, connecting with one of the magnificent steamers of the Fall River line for New York. Stateroom provided.

SATURDAY, MARCH 1.

Breakfast on steamer is provided and New York is reached at 7.20 A. M. The forenoon will be devoted to sight-seeing about the city. Luncheon provided at hotel. Leave New York at 2.00 P. M., via the Royal Blue Line. Seats in parlor cars included. Arrive Washington at 7.00 P. M., and transfer to a first-class hotel, where rooms and meals will be provided for the stay at the National Capital.

MARCH 2—3—4 (INAUGURATION DAY.)

In Washington. Under direction of conductor the principal public buildings, including the Capitol, Congressional Library, White House, etc., etc., will be visited. Tuesday, March 4th is Inauguration Day. The Inauguration of the President of the United States, while lacking the pomp and glitter of a coronation, is a magnificent and soul-stirring spectacle. The first event of the day is the parade of the United States regulars, West Point and Annapolis Cadets, escorting President Taft and President-elect Wilson from the White House to the Capitol Building, in front of which takes place the actual Inauguration ceremonies, including the administration of the oath of office, to Mr. Wilson by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Then follows the great parade when the Army, Navy and Malitia and the veterans of the Civil War pass in review before President Wilson, and down Pennsylvania Avenue. Seats will be provided from which both parades will be seen to the best advantage. In the evening the grand Inauguration Ball is held in the immense Pension Building, for which the members of the tour will receive tickets. The entire floor of this building is cleared for this event and the decorations are on a lavish scale. The music is by the Marine Band and the toilettes of the ladies, the splendid uniforms of the members of the foreign legations and of the officers of the Army and Navy form a brilliant spectacle.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5.

On Wednesday a pilgrimage will be made to Mount Vernon, the home and last resting place of the immortal Washington. The trip will be made by electric train over the Washington-Virginia railway and a stop will be made at historic Alexandria and a visit paid to Christ Church, where Washington worshipped, and the Marshall House where Ellsworth was killed.

THURSDAY, MARCH 6.

Transfer will be provided from hotel to depot in season to leave Washington in parlor car on 9.00 A. M. train for New York. Luncheon in dining car is included and New York is reached at 2.00 P. M. Leave New York at 5.00 P. M., on Fall River Line steamer. Staterooms assigned and evening dinner served.

FRIDAY, MARCH 7.

Arrive Fall River at 5.30 A. M., connecting with train for Boston.

ROUND TABLE CONFERENCE IDEA FAVORED BY PRESIDENT BRYANT

Budget Should Especially Be Considered Publicly and Openly in Committee of the Whole

Original Ideas Shattered when Supplanted by Political Germs

President Charles M. Bryant in taking the president's chair at the inauguration Monday, after thanking the members for their confidence in electing him as president said that he hoped the City Council this year would revise its rules so that the City Council as a body might consider matters. He believed there were many things that should be thus considered, especially the budget. This was one matter of interest to the public and they were entitled to know how the money desired by the several departments was to be expended. Every year the departments ask for more than can be given them, and if these matters were considered by the council as a body in open meeting the public would have an opportunity to hear and see for themselves.

While many of the Council are doubtless in accord with President Bryant on this question there are others who believe that there are many matters that can be considered better by committees. President Bryant's idea however, is simply carrying out the idea of the framers of the City Charter. Their idea was that about a kind of round table and consider all matters as a committee of the whole.

Political germs however begun to enter into the consideration of matters from the first and instead of the round table there came the standing committees which have prevailed ever since.

To many it is thought that the rules of the City Council as they are today are altogether too complicated and cumbersome for good work. President Bryant knows the rules and the City Charter thoroughly and he can be depended upon to hold the Council strictly to the rules during the present year, whether the old rules prevail or whatever new rules may be adopted.

The changes proposed by Councilman Cunningham were considered by some members to be a little radical, especially for a body in a small city which should get as near the citizens as possible.

FACTORY HELP IN NEAR PANIC

Bursting Pipe Causes Rush for Exits at No. 1 Shop

OF RICE & HUTCHINS CO.

About 150 alarmed operators rushed for the fire exits of the Rice & Hutchins No. 1 South Braintree factory at 7.30 this morning, when a cloud of steam filled the building, following the splitting of a coupling on the steam pipe leading into the structure.

Engineer Hannon who was in the boiler house, immediately jumped to his valves, shutting them down, and before a panic ensued he had stopped the sudden exhaust of steam.

A sharp report preceded the hissing of escaping steam. Both men and women are employed in the factory, and their only thought was to reach the exits.

As the atmosphere cleared all fears became quieted. No one sustained any injuries during the rush.

The emergency boiler was immediately put into use and no unusual delay resulted.

CRANE AGAIN COMMODORE

Re-elected at Aunual Meeting of the Town River Yacht Club

The annual meeting of the Town River Yacht club was held Tuesday evening at which the officers for the ensuing year were elected. Commodore Crane, was re-elected by a wide margin. The officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows:

Commodore—Thompson B. Crane.
Vice Commodore—William T. Laing
Secretary—Wallace C. Luther.
Treasurer—George E. Sprague.
Executive Committee for three years William E. Lee.

Short remarks were made by Mayor Eugene R. Stone, Mr. Foster and Mr. Williams, after which the meeting adjourned to partake of the refreshments which the Entertainment committee had provided.

CHIMNEY FIRE.

The central station auto chemical was called on a still alarm about 7 o'clock Tuesday evening for a chimney fire on the house of William H. Lee on Thompson street. The damage was slight.

LAST TRIBUTE TO GOOD MAN

Friends Manifested Their Sentiments Towards G. O. Wales

BURIED AT MT. WOLLASTON

The funeral of the late George O. Wales of Elm street, Braintree, was held in All Souls' church, Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, the auditorium being filled to overflowing by a hushed and tearful throng of people assembled there to pay their tribute of respect and love to a man of good deeds and noble life.

The services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Daniel Roy Freeman, who delivered the following eulogy:

If we had expressed our feelings during these days, the doors of all our homes would have been hung with wreaths of mourning. It is hard for us to comfort one another because all of us need comfort ourselves. Each one has met with a personal grief. The reason we feel so close to the man whose life has been lived so wonderfully, and nobly amongst us is because he came close to us. No person was to him a means to any ulterior end. Each one was an individual being in himself, with his own value. His relationship to no one of us was formal or perfunctory but vital and human and real.

The influence of Mr. Wales, immeasurably more than that of any other man or woman, made the spiritual climate of Braintree. It is the shining of the sun that brings spring and summer to the earth. So it was preponderantly the shining of his personality that brought warmth here and caused human blossoms and fruitage to grow. How often have I heard him say of this or that institution, "It is the spirit that counts,—the spirit, the spirit!" Of his life, also, it was the spirit which prompted and animated all his works, that affected us. Only this morning I received a letter containing these words, "I have many failings, but I try hard to combat them, and a man like Mr. Wales was a constant inspiration to do better." The very presence of the man, with his great, tolerant spirit revealing itself in his face was a blessing and an impetus towards good.

With the memory of his life upon us every scripture which sets forth the good life will have new meaning for us. When we hear the words, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God," we cannot but think of his purity of heart, his disinterestedness of motive, his genuine devotion to what is right, and of how he thus saw God, and caused others to see God through him. When we hear the words "What doth the Lord require of thee,

But to do justly.
To love mercy.
And to walk humbly with thy God?"

We cannot but recall how seriously and earnestly he regarded that injunction, and how profoundly his life fulfilled that requirement and we cannot fail to give closer heed to it ourselves.

Whenever, in the course of the work of any of us with Mr. Wales, he felt it necessary to differ with us or to make a suggestion, the difference of opinion or the suggestion never left any trace of rankling or resentment. For whatever he did or said was prompted wholly by his love for what was best. Personal recognition never weighed with him for an instant as compared with the accomplishment of a worthy purpose. He was always ready to do far more himself, than he would ask from any other person.

He bore malice towards no human being. He was a fair and just man.

The name "George" means husbandman. George O. Wales was a true husbandman of the vineyard in which he found himself. He did not expend his energies in wondering why weeds and thistles should exist in his garden. He rather went about uprooting them and causing something useful to grow in their place. How he tended, watered, nurtured, watched every serviceable plant. Every promising shoot he encouraged with the greatest care. If any vine he saw

HORSE BECAME UNMANAGEABLE

Driver Fred L. Bryant Thrown Out and Run Over

ANKLE BADLY BRUISED

Fred L. Bryant, driver of Currier's market Boston team had a narrow escape from serious injury Tuesday forenoon while on his way to Boston for supplies. The horse became unmanageable on Dorchester avenue bridge, throwing the driver to the street. Both wheels passed over Mr. Bryant's right ankle and while badly bruised and in considerable pain, it is thought that no bones are broken. The horse continued up Dorchester avenue until, finally colliding with a heavy coal team, he was thrown to the ground, breaking both shafts and the cross bar of the wagon. The horse is uninjurerd. Mr. Bryant's many friends wish for a speedy recovery and hope soon to see him back in his accustomed place.

DAUGHTERS OF VIKING

DRAFTSMEN HOLD DANCE

First in a Series of Four Events Planned for Season

The first of a series of four events planned by the Fore River members of the American Association of Marine Draftsmen was a dancing party at Alpha hall Tuesday evening. Disagreeable weather conditions discouraged many who had planned to attend. About 75 couple enjoyed dancing until midnight.

Refreshments, consisting of ice cream, punch and fruits were served the guests in a decorated corner. Music was furnished by Hamilton's orchestra.

Mrs. David Moffatt, Mrs. Otis McDonald and Mrs. James Hennessey were matrons.

The committee in charge were J. Barraja-Frauenfelder, David Moffatt, Alexander Robertson, Charles Laing and J. Emil Schmeltzer.

COMMITTEE ORGANIZED

Schools Launched Upon Another Year of Activity

OFFICIALS SELECTED

The annual meeting of the School Committee was held Tuesday evening at which John L. Miller was unanimously re-elected as chairman. Albert L. Barbour was also unanimously re-elected as Superintendent and secretary of the committee.

Charles H. Johnson was elected as attendance officer and census taker.

The school calendar for 1913 was as follows:

Present term closes Friday, Feb 21.

Second term from Monday, March 3, to Friday, April 25.

Third term from Monday, May 5, to Friday, June 27.

Grammar schools graduation, Friday, June 20.

High school graduation, Wednesday, June 25.

Fourth term from Tuesday, Sept. 2, to Friday, Dec. 19.

New Year Monday, Jan. 5, 1914.

The committee assignments will be made at the regular meeting of the committee the last Tuesday in January.

GRASS FIRE HARD ON HENS

But the Egg Producers Were Shooed to Safety

The alarm from box 7, Monday afternoon was for a lively grass fire foot of Edison Park that gave the people in the vicinity quite a hustle for a time before the arrival of the firemen. The fire was dangerously near a large gasoline tank at the T. R. Yacht Club and it was thought at one time that it would explode. The hen house of Mrs. Herbert L. Harmon of Edison park was also in danger of being destroyed and Mrs. Harmon had quite a time in getting her egg layers to a place of safety.

OUR ATLANTIC SUBSCRIBERS.

Because of much complaint from our Atlantic subscribers who cannot get the Ledger delivered at their homes around four o'clock eachafternoon and others being unable to receive it until the next day, we have been considering for some time a new agency.

The Ledger reaches all the outlying wards each afternoon around four o'clock, excepting Atlantic, where the agents won't handle them except by train. As there are no trains between the hours of 2.19 and 4.26, it is readily seen that it is impossible to get the Ledger into Atlantic until nearly five o'clock, too late for the carriers, whereas if they went by trolley they would be there before four o'clock, same as at Squantum, Boston or Wollaston.

We feel that Atlantic people are entitled to good service and we are going to give it to them, therefore beginning today we shall discontinue the distribution of the Ledger and Patriot through the Branschield & Marten agency.

We shall have several agencies and probably a boys' route. While adjusting some of the details of the change, we ask the patience of our subscribers if their paper is a little irregular in its delivery. Further announcement of the new agencies will be made Thursday, also the boy who will deliver each afternoon.

If you do not receive your "home paper" hereafter in good season and regularly, telephone us—Quincy 1910.

DISTRICT COURT.

Joseph Connelly was araigned for a statuatory offense at Quincy and was held in $100 until Jan. 10.

WM. E. BADGER PASSED AWAY

Prominent and Popular Citizen and Leading Business Man

HAD BEEN IN POOR HEALTH

The many friends of ex-Councilman William E. Badger will be shocked to learn of his death this morning at his home 116 Crescent street, West Quincy. Mr. Badger has not been in the best of health for some time although able to be about. Ten days ago he underwent an operation at his home and the shock from this probably hastened his death.

Mr. Badger wasa son of Louis Badger who in 1855 founded the well known firm of Badger Bros. He was born in Quincy Nov. 20, 1855, and was educated in the public schools of the then town. On completing his education, and at the age of sixteen years he started in to learn the machinist and engineers trade which he mastered and became a recognized expert in these lines, and for years had charge of that branch of the firm's business.

In 1882 he became a member of the firm and has been ever since. In politics he has always been a staunch Republican and for many years has served as a member of the ward and city committee from Ward Four.

He was a member of the City Council for three years serving as Councilman-at-Large during the years 1898, 1899 and 1900. He was also for several years a member of the Board of Health.

He was a member of Rural Masonic lodge and other Masonic bodies. He leaves a widow and three sons, Louis K., district engineer of the fire department, Harold and Irving.

—"Kicking time" is now an institution in the official life of Kellogg, an Idaho mining town, where the town council has set aside one meeting each month for irate citizens to vent their spleen. Mayor I. F. Davis decided it would be best to have a special meeting for this purpose rather than to mar the harmony of business and legislative sessions of the council.

GEN. ALL SORTS IN COMMAND

Of Complicated Weather Campaign Now in Operation

FINISH FIGHT PROMISED

Old Gen. All Sorts has been the man on horse back the leading figure in the direction of the campaign which has raged the past 48 hours in full exemplification of the New England variety and quality of weather. The changes have been many and lightning like in their production. Monday was insufferably warm, with warm sunshine bathing the earth and breathing from every quarter to soft tones of spring. Monday night was cloudy and threatening. It was a toss up between rain or snow and the rain won out and Tuesday morning, the advance splashes of the flood were felt.

Along about the middle of the forenoon, there was a darkening of the sky to inky blackness. Few nights were any blacker. Many thought fearfully of that black Friday some years ago. The pall however did not last long. It soon lifted but the sunshine did not penetrate the clouds.

The rain kept on its busy session. It seemed as if it was working over time. Shortly after dark there was a drizzle of hail stones. Then came a little sleet. Later there was a lively snow flurry. But the rain kept the upper hand through all those evolutions, coming out master of the situation and continued quite monotony throughout the night and it looks good for the rest of the day and perhaps another night.

MOVEMENT FOR MR. SEDGWICK

As President of the Board of Trade Started By Friends

A movement has been started the past few days favoring Joseph A. Sedgwick, treasurer of the Fore River Company, for president of the Board of Trade. Mr. Sedgwick has not been consulted in the matter, but his friends assume that he will accept if it comes to him in the proper manner, fairly and above board, as his friends intend it shall.

Mr. Sedgwick will be nominated from the floor and his friends claim that the members will quickly take up the idea. The annual meeting of the Board of Trade will be held at the rooms in the Adams block, this evening.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

And now President Eliot is credited with claiming there is no hell. He may be correct as to the future, but a good many people have enough of it on this earth to satisfy them to the day of judgment.

Maybe it would not be out of place to start some arbitration with regard to Mr. Castro.

Mrs. Henry Russell has one fear, that of becoming fat. She is not alone suffering from that state of mind. But as a helper in that direction we would suggest that she quit eating candy.

By the time all the base ball players, managers, football players and pugilists are fitted out with engagements on the stage after their regular season, the regular actors will have a hard time to get a look over the footlights at all.

Did he ride or was he carried? Every one seems to be troubled over how "old Hickory," was inaugurated. The main thing was that he got to the White House and people were not kept waiting to realize that he was there good and plenty for eight good years.

A suspender is said to be the latest addition to the Parisian ball room gown. Many such contraptions look as though they need a whole set of harness to keep them in place.

It will be the irony of fate for the senator who is said to have despised him to deliver a eulogy on the late senator Jeff Davis.

That Philadelphia policeman who licked eight in a first fight should immediately resign and go into training for the prize ring and the vaudeville stage.

Bro. McCall is getting peeved.

He says the Republican State committee is the "most arrogant and despotic organization in the state." Has there been any difference in conditions in the committee during the 20 years which Mr. McCall bobbed along as the party candidate without a yip of complaint about that "arrogant and despotic organization?"

One Boston official has charged up $100 expense account for going over to New York to witness a launching. It is possible he may have been working overtime and so charged the usual double rate.

The Mayor of Waltham has decided to appoint women to the office of inspector of buildings and principal assessor. He should have added chief of police and chief of the fire department.

That Pujo committee would accomplish more if it carried out some of its alleged secret plans before publishing them broadcast.

New England maintains its reputation of having the most tarnal climate ever known.

The Atlantic has been some boisterous the past few weeks judging by the banging which incoming ships have received.

The tariff committee might gain a great deal of information if it employed an expert to tell them just how much it costs to produce some of the things which are disposed of at fancy prices and for which a high tariff is demanded in the interests of the laboring man.

THE HOLY LAND.

The peace negotiations now pending in Europe were given a new turn by the action of Pope Pius X, yesterday, in a message to the ambassadorial conversation of the great powers requesting the participants to exert their influence in behalf of Palestine. The Pope asked that the Holy Land either be wrested from the Turks or that the powers undertake to guarantee the permanent sanctity of holy places and the protection of Christian pilgrims.

The request is a reasonable one that should appeal to people all over the civilized world. There is nothing sectarian in its import or intentions. It is a Christian like request to wrest that long fought for land from the infidel and place it where it should long have been placed under the protectorate of Christian powers.

For centuries the Holy Land was the goal of knights of old, and many European rulers gave of their best years and blood in the effort to drive the infidel from the land, but their efforts lacked success. For several centuries now no move with the same end in view has been entered upon.

The victories of the allies, the entering wedge in the driving of the Turk from Europe, the breaking of Mussulman's power west of Asia, has offered an opportunity for a peaceful solution of a problem which cost many brave lives and much treasure.

It is time that the world awoke from its long continued lethargy with regard to this sacred section of the earth's surface. The action of the Pope is one that will appeal to Christians all over the world regardless of creed or denomination and as such should receive the attention it deserves at this time.

LARGER SCHOOL BOARD.

At this time when so much stress is laid upon centralizing of power, with the idea of more definitely placing responsibility, the action of the Central Labor Union of Boston in petitioning the legislature for an increased school board is somewhat surprising. The new movement provides for 26 members on the school board one from every ward in the city. Some years ago the school board was made up on this basis of representative field, by both the Democrats and Progressives, the party at the present time, when it should be united is split wide apart over a selection for United States senator to succeed W. Murray Crane.

During all the years of victory they were as harmonious as a flock of doves. Now when peace is essential for the preservation of the party, its principles and candidates they are separated and drawing further apart. It is a funny situation, or at least it would be funny were it not so serious. The candidates are Congressman John W. Weeks, Ex-Gov. Eben S. Draper, Congressman Samuel W. Mccall and Ex-Gov. Curtis Guild. All of them estimable men. At the same time, the men in the legislature, who do not know from the expressions of public sentiment heard on every hand who would be the most acceptable man to the great mass of the voters, must certainly lack in that degree of intelligence which would make them discriminating legislators. If they follow that sentiment as found on every hand in every city and town of the state, they will come nearer to electing a United States senator by popular vote than ever before and it wil establish a precedent. There is no sense or reason in the members of the legislature contending for a minute that they do not know who would be most acceptable to the people. Their failure to appreciate this may be borne home to them at a later period when election time comes around. At any rate the members should get together and break a deadlock and clear an atmosphere which is doing anything but good for the Republican party.

GET TOGETHER.

Not in the history of the party have the Republicans of Massachusetts faced such a situation as they do at the present time. After their candidate for governor is defeated three successive years, with inroads made into the senatorial and representative field, by both the Democrats and Progressives, the party at the present time, when it should be united is split wide apart over a selection for United States senator to succeed W. Murray Crane.

GOOD GAIN BY MRS. MARNOCK

Mr. Bowditch and Miss Morrissett in a Struggle

OTHERS ARE MAKING GAINS

Mrs. Emma Marnock made the largest gain today in the inauguration contest of the Daily Ledger. She says she would like to go the Washington and attend that grand ball, and she would dance too. Her total is 430 larger today.

Miss Morrissett made another attempt today to catch Mr. Bowditch, but Galen gained 95 while she gained 85. Miss Morrissett says she don't expect to go to Washington, but she would like to wear a diamond ring.

None of the other leaders gained today but the following moved up in the list: John H. Hart of the shipyard, Miss Etta Kenney, of Hancock chambers, Miss Ruth Cahill of the Odd Ladies, Miss Katherine Walsh, the head operator of the Telephone Company, and James Neary.

The five-vote coupons count up fast in this contest, but the subscription certificates good for 1000 votes count much more rapidly. Every candidate should be able to secure one or more subscriptions. The more the better.

INAUGURATION BALL.

There is a movement at Washington to have the grand Inauguration ball held in the rotunda of the historic and stately Capitol building instead of the Pension building which was first used when President Cleveland was inaugurated, but which of late has been severely taxed.

It is claimed that there would be room for all in the Capitol. If dancing was objected to from any quarter the affair could be turned into a great reception to greet the President and the new members of Congress. Mr. Wilson could hold forth in the spacious private room in the Capitol, specially built and reserved for the President of the United States.

Mr. Marshall could repair to the beautiful Vice President's room in the Senate wing. Mr. Clark could hold an informal reception in the Speaker's room on the House side. Various Senators and Representatives could hold forth in the large committee rooms. Here could be gathered Governors and their staffs from the many States.

If a man came from Massachusetts he could go to the room of his Senator and there get in touch with the home delegation. As it is now, during inauguration time, Washington is one great jumble. Nobody knows where to find any one.

The President, Vice President, Cabinet officers, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Governors, members of Congress could each be granted the privilege of issuing a certain number of invitations. The grand promenade of the Capitol Building would accommodate 20,000 people without crowding, says the Washington correspondent.

ANOTHER PRIZE.

Again on Monday, Jan. 13, at 9 A. M. a prize will be awarded to the candidate who makes the largest gain for the week of Jan. 6—13.

THE LAST COUPON.

The last coupon in this contest will be printed in the issue of Saturday, Feb. 8, and the polls will close a few days later. A great hustle is expected during the last days of the contest.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

ADAMS CHAPTER D. R.

Adams Chapter D. R. had a pleasant meeting Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Antoinette S. Paige, 17 Davis street, Wollaston Park the hostesses of afternoon being Mrs. Paige and Miss Mary L. Hinkley of Atlantic. Owing to the illness of Miss Hinkley, Mrs. Paige did the honors, graciously and hospitably.

After a short business meeting members and guests enjoyed a fine program of music and the reading of historical papers, those contributing to the pleasure of the afternoon being neighbors of Mrs. Paige. Mrs. E. A. Cooley sang a group of songs, "The Mission of a Rose" and "All thro the Night" accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Grace Dudley, who later played several solos which called forth appreciative applause. Mrs. Cooley has a sympathetic voice which always pleases and her selections were received with loud encores, also the song "Forgotten" which she sang with much feeling.

The paper of the afternoon by Mrs. William Hingston on the "Old Quincy Homestead and Quincy Family" was of particular interest as the homestead is directly across from Mrs. Paige's home and in plain sight during the reading of the paper. It was well written showing careful research and accuracy as to historical facts.

Another paper was read by Mrs. Paige giving the history of the Aviation field at Squantum, showing how years ago in colonial times it was a sporting field and how history repeats itself.

Most abundant and delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Paige, and music and social chat were enjoyed over the teacups for an hour, during which the gift box presents were distributed, each member contributing a gift and receiving one. All enjoyed the excitement of opening the mysterious packages.

It was an enjoyable meeting. The Chapter goes to Braintree for the February meeting.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

One of the largest social affairs and quite the merriest of the season under the auspices of the Quincy Women's club is the Twelfth Night Revels by the Art committee. This year's frolic is to come off Jan. 17 at Alpha hall and Mrs. H. H. Kitson has the assistance of Mrs. John D. Mackay, Delcevare King and a large committee, in making it the best yet held. Every one is to go in costume and some unusually clever ones are being prepared as well as the beautiful and grotesque. Every one seems to be entering into the affair most heartily, which shows that most every one likes to get away once in a while from formal things and play a while. So much interest has been shown in the costumes and entertainment that the balcony is to be reserved for those who may desire to look on rather than participate actively.

One of the attractions in the club program this month is the annual musicale which is scheduled in the year books for the regular club date, Jan. 28 but has been changed to Monday afternoon, Jan. 27 at 2.30 at Music hall. The club rules are to be strictly enforced for the musicale and members will be allowed only one guest and that guest cannot have been a guest at any previous meeting this season of the club. Members should note this rule carefully before inviting a guest to the musicale and prevent embarrassment to themselves, their guest, and the custodians who have no choice but to enforce the rule. If any member does not intend to use her guest privilege she is asked to notify the custodian, Miss Emily C. Wilde, that the ticket may be available for other guests.

Owing to the popularity of Mrs. Christobel Kidder who is to read "The Blot on the 'Scutcheon" at the meeting of the club on Jan. 14, it was thought best to secure a hall for the meeting, the clubhouse being too small to accommodate all wishing to attend. The committee not being able to secure a hall, on the date, through the courtesy of Rev. A. L. Hudson and the parish committee of First church, the meeting will be held in the Unitarian chapel at the regular hour 2.30 P. M.

During the business session reports will be given by Mrs. Short of the autumn conference and Mrs. Bone of the Home Economic conference. Some 75 or more new members will be welcomed into the club and there will be a social tea and closing reception. Music will also be a feature as a group of songs will be sung by Miss Henderson of the Unitarian church in Lynn.

EUGENE YSAYE RECITAL.

Eugene Ysaye, by common consent of his greatest colleagues like Kreisler, Elman and Zimbalist, the foremost violinist of our time, will give his only recital in Symphony Hall on next Sunday afternoon, January 12th at 3.30. Ysaye in America after an absence of eight years shows that his hand has lost none of its cunning nor his tone any of the wondrous beauty which has made it unique among violinists of the world. He is still the supreme master of his art.

He has arranged a remarkably interesting programme and inasmuch as it contains much music by the old classical masters of the 17th and 18th centuries, it will be full of melody. He will have the assistance of Camille Decreus, the talented pianist and in the Chaconne by Vitali he will be accompahied by Mr. John P. Marshall on the great organ of Symphony Hall.

The programme is as follows:—

|---|---|
| Sonate in A Minor | Veracini |
| Sonate in B Minor | Geminiani |
| Concerto in G Major | Mozart |
| Chaconne (with organ) | Vitali |
| Reve d'enfant | Ysaye |
| Old Mute | Ysaye |
| Rondo Capriccioso | Saint-Saens |

SAYS BROKER EDEY LAID WHOLE PLOT

Murdock Not a Party to "Wife Swapping" Arrangement

New York, Jan. 8.—Declaring he will push his suit against the estate of Henry C. Edey, the broker who shot and killed his wife and then committed suicide in their Bellport, L. I., home, Gardner Murdock, husband of the fourth party to the so-called "wife swapping" tragedy, made startling disclosures.

Murdock said he had never been a party to changing wives with Edey. "The four of us were close friends," he said, "but there was nothing wrong. When I went to Texas, Edey framed up a scheme to get rid of his wife by sending her down to me and making it look bad for the two of us. I sent her back home as soon as she arrived in Galveston.

"The thing had started so much scandal that I thought Edey ought to pay for it. I wanted $200,000, but he would only come up to $100,000. Then he reneged on that and I started suit."

—The butter trust ought to be the next object of attack by the women of the country, for there appears good evidence that it is one of the greatest trusts in articles of food. Elgin, Illinois, is the centre of the butter trust, and according to reports the price of butter is absolutely regulated from there, regardless of the law of supply and demand.—Old Colony Memorial.

ONE STANDARD OF MORAL LIFE

And That a Good One Declared Mrs. Spencer at Wollaston

SOCIAL SIDE OF CHURCH

Many advanced ideas along the line of social uplift were contained in the address "The social function of the churches" Tuesday evening in the Wollaston Unitarian church by Mrs. Garlin Spencer, a director of the New York School of Philanthropy.

Frederick H. Bishop, presided.

The parish has been canvassed to find what social work is being done by its members individually.

Mrs. Spencer emphasized two points in the social creed drawn up at a recent conference of church workers in Chicago. These were "The church shall aid in abolishing poverty" and "There shall be one standard of moral life for both sexes and that a high one." She said:—

"The church has moved from its old standards where the saving of individual souls by a mystic process, with character as a secondary thought, was the thing.

"The whole Christian church has moved to another plane where it is recognized that it is the business of the church to make this world a better place to live in. An optimistic spirit dominates the church of today.

"What, could be done in a town such as this where conditions were favorable and there were not very many people of vast wealth or an excessive number of poor people.

"There are however lonely people, detached people and people just beginning life. The church should be made a hospitable place and ingenious methods used for getting at people.

"There should be a compelling atmosphere of warmth and attraction to the church. There are many who are not and never will be on the books of the Associated Charities who are greatly in need of what a body of friends could furnish them with.

"I don't believe in a shut up church. The church should be a pleasant meeting place where the atmosphere of fraternal feeling and goodfellowship prevails. Thec hurch plant should be considered a social institution. There should be the selected religious services of course but the church should not be limited to that small group principally responsible for the erection of the church building."

The speaker mentioned the many national issues which the church might support. Among these were the crusade against a national standing army, the movement against the white slave traffic, the establishment of a minimum wage and many other questions of social welfare.

"The first duty of the church" said Mrs. Spencer, "is to learn what is going on. Every church should have its forum and its study classes. The principles of co-operation should be strongly introduced.

"The church might stand sponsor for co-operative saving organizations and fraternal orders. I am even in favor of a Housewives League and the storing of their goods in the painfully vacant vestry. The church should represent every line of human helpfulness and human friendliness that any group of society represents."

An extended discussion of social questions followed the address. The evening opened with an organ rcital by Mrs. Chandler W. Smith.

FELKER'S MESSAGE

Progressive Legislation Urged by Governor of New Hampshire

Concord, N. H., Jan. 8.—Governor Felker, New Hampshire's first Democratic chief executive in thirty-eight years, in his inaugural address outlined a program for progressive legislation by the state legislature. He declared himself in favor of the election of United States senators by the people, and urged that the direct primary be extended to nominations for United States senators, the president and the vice president.

Governor Felker declared a halt should be called on expenditures, saying the expenditures and debts of the state have nearly doubled in the past twelve years. Other measures advocated by him were the conservation of New Hampshire's natural resources, laws to protect the purity of the ballot, building of good roads, ratification of the federal income tax amendment, revision of the public statutes, longer school years in the country districts, more appropriations to stimulate interest in farming in the state.

POLICE HAVE NEW EVIDENCE

Man Resembling Jennings Seen Climbing Cemetery Fence

LEFT BLOOD-STAINED GLOVES

Close to Spot Where Body of Mrs. Donovan Was Found—Medical Examiner Reports Death Due to Asphyxia, but Officials Will Not Discuss How It Was Caused

Boston, Jan. 8.—Medical Examiner Durell of Middlesex county yesterday filed his report on the death of Mrs. Mildred Donovan and in it says death was caused by asphyxia and that no trace of poison was found.

None of the officials will discuss how asphyxia was caused. They declare no marks of violence existed other than the abrasion on the nose which caused the blood found in two pools, one in the gutter of Lynn street and the other by the roadside where the body was found.

This report, made yesterday afternoon, followed the announcement by the police that they had evidence which now practically dispels the mystery which has shrouded the death of the woman whose body was discovered Jan. 1 by the roadside, outside the Holy Cross cemetery, Malden.

Two witnesses have been found by the Malden police who saw a man closely answering the description of James B. Jennings, the last known companion of Mrs. Donovan, climbing the Eastern avenue fence of Holy Cross cemetery.

The point where the man was seen is diagonally opposite the point on Lynn street where the body was found. The witnesses say the man's actions were peculiar and he walked and moved with rapidity. As he jumped, they say he seemed to have hurt his ankle.

Not twenty feet from where he leaped the fence were found a pair of blood-stained gloves. These, the police believe, were thrown over the fence into the graveyard by the man. They claim the man was "Kid Carter," James B. Jennings, the prize fighter.

Although the ground on New Year's eve was soft and muddy there was no mud on the face of the young woman when the body was found. The mark on the nose which had apparently caused the flow of blood, for this reason, is believed to have resulted from some other cause than a fall.

Asphyxia, the police officials believe, might have been caused by someone having placed a hand over the mouth of the woman to prevent a scream.

No one saw the woman and her companion on Lynn street. For this reason it is a mystery whether the unfortunate woman was struck or was injured accidentally, or even if she had epileptic attack. Only a statement from Jennings or the companion answering his description will solve this part of the case.

The Suffolk county grand jury yesterday was presented the evidence in the shooting of William MacPherson by Jennings. There were eleven witnesses heard. They told the story of the fight in the South End barroom, which, it is claimed, ended in the fatal shooting by Jennings and his pursuit of the man who a little later fell before his gun fire. The jury found an indictment. It is probably for murder in the first degree. Jennings will possibly be arraigned within a day or two.

The shooting occurred within a few minutes of the time the body of Mrs. Donovan was found beside Lynn street, Malden.

BAD WEATHER AT SEA

Fears That Two Big British Freighters May Have Foundered

Boston, Jan. 8.—Two big British freighters are long overdue. One has been given up for lost and the other now is believed to be seriously damaged, if not lying helplessly crippled, somewhere out in the Atlantic ocean, the prey of wind and storm.

Dec. 8 the freighter Fernley sailed from Bremen for Boston, the trip being expected to take two weeks. Since her sailing not a report has been received of her.

The other big freighter is the Snowden Range, which sailed from Philadelphia and was due nearly five weeks ago in Fowey, Eng.

Officers on liners arriving for the last month have declared this the worst winter at sea in several years.

LAST TRIBUTE

was not of a very good variety, still he tried to help it to yield as good fruit as it could. He was a practical idealist. He was deeply dissatisfied with the world as it exists. But he did not spend himself in discontent. He sought rather how he might, starting where he was, with people as he found them, achieve some solid betterment. Even a bruised reed he would not break, nor quench the smoking flax.

Our real tribute to him is not in a few words spoken in these brief moments. It exists in the heart mourning we feel over his departure; in the love and veneration which brought these flowers here. It will come to noble fruition, I believe, in the strong and fervent purposes which shall carry us forward into our vastly heavier tasks of the future days.

Let us not forget that that life, truly great and distinguished in its unselfishness and good deeds, is a reality. It has actually occurred. Nothing can cause it not to have been. Our very sense of unutterable loss bears unmistakable testimony to its substance. It came from the heart of God. God can care for it. God is providing for him whom we love. Children sometimes fear the coming of the night. It seems to them as though all that was dear to them by day is vanishing. Colors disappear, and forms, all with which they were familiar vanishes. It is only when darkness has settled over the earth that they see that it required the night to bring forth the stars. So, I doubt not, death has already brought to him whose eyes have closed upon the accustomed sights of the world novel and unforseen glories. The universe is broad and deep and God can furnish ample scope in which his well-trained soul can exercise its powers. "When we die we shall find we have not lost our dreams, we have only lost our sleep."

We shall please most him whom we honor if, in the days which lie with their high challenge before us, we give heed to the words which were the guiding-star of his life.

"What doth the Lord require of thee,"
I can almost hear him speak them to us,
"But to do justly,
To love mercy,
And to walk humbly with thy God?"

Prayer was offered by Rev. Frederick R. Griffin, a former pastor of the church, and now located in Montreal. The great number of floral pieces completely banked the whole front of the church, and words are useless to describe their beauty.

The ushers were Harold M. Gage, George H. Hamblett, Lester E. Bates, all of Braintree, and W. P. Battles of Weymouth.

The hymns "Woolwich" and "Manoah" were rendered by the church quartet, Miss Gladys Hayward of Jamaica Plain, soprano; Miss Theresa Keating of Quincy, alto; Lawrence Emery of Montello, tenor; and John E. Greene of Quincy, bass. Mrs. Jennie Hocking Hunt presided at the organ.

Burial was in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy, and the bearers were Herbert F. Kneeland, Horace R. Drinkwater, Alva Morrison, Edwin L. Emerson, all of Braintree, and Warren G. Hills, Jamaica Plain, Isaac Jackson, Boston.

JOSIAH QUINCY.

Former Mayor of Boston, Tried With Julian Hawthorne For Fraud.

QUINCY NOT GUILTY

Verdict Ordered by Court on Three Counts In Alleged Mail Fraud

New York, Jan. 8.—The government rested its case against Julian Hawthorne, Josiah Quincy, William J. Morton and Albert Freeman, who are accused of using the mails fraudulently to promote Canadian mining claims.

Counsel for the four men outlined their defense to the jury, in effect pleading justification of the defendants' efforts to promote their mines.

No evidence connecting Quincy with illegal use of the mails in promoting the Temagami-Cobalt, Elk-Lake Cobalt and Montreal-James properties, was introduced by the government, according to a ruling by Judge Hough, who directed a verdict of not guilty on these counts.

The former Boston mayor's case must, however, go to the jury on the indictments relating to the Hawthorne Silver and Iron Mines, Ltd., and the Julian Hawthorne company.

CONFIRMATION OF CONSTABLES

Question as to Such Action by Council on Appointments

It is claimed that the appointment of constables by the Mayor do not have to be confirmed by the City Council for the reason that the city has never accepted the provisions of certain chapters of the Revised laws. The question has been put up to the City Solicitor. The failure of the Council Monday to confirm constables left the city without a constable qualified to serve civil process and as a result the Deputy Sheriff has been working overtime

TO ENTER COMPETITION

Wells Fargo Express Company Intends to Fight the Parcel Post

San Francisco, Jan. 8.—Direct competition, national in scope, between the Wells Fargo Express company and the federal parcel post will go into effect as soon as plans which the company has long been maturing can be set afoot. This was the statement made here by C. R. Graham, traffic manager of the company, at a hearing before the state railroad commission.

Competition, Graham explained, would extend to both rates and services, with special regard to perishable foodstuffs, to be delivered direct from shipper to consignee.

Eleven pounds would be the maximum weight acceptable, as with the parcel post.

INTERVENTION OF THE POWERS

A Possibility For Prevention of Further Hostilities

ARE CONSIDERING JOINT ACTION

Secretary Grey Says Situation Is Too Delicate to Go Into Details—Turks Decide Not to Make Any New Proposals—"No Surrender of Adrianople" Is Still the Watchword

London, Jan. 8.—If the Turks and the allies do not show a disposition to reopen negotiations immediately, the great powers of Europe will intervene. This was stated in the house of commons by Sir Edward Grey, secretary of state for foreign affairs.

The foreign minister admitted the powers, through their London ambassadors, were considering joint action to bring about peace in the Balkans, but he declined to go into particulars, saying the situation was too delicate.

The Turkish government has firmly decided not to make any new proposals of peace, according to a news agency dispatch from Constantinople.

"No surrender of Adrianople," remains the watchword of Rechad Pasha and his colleagues of the Turkish peace delegation. "If Adrianople should fall," said Rechad, "it would be owing to famine and only owing to famine. The Bulgarians would not, therefore, be able to attribute the fall of the fortress to a feat of arms. As to the further sittings of the conference, I can only say that the allies themselves have suspended it."

Rechad Pasha went on to say that the question of further negotiations was now in the hands of the Turkish government.

War in the Balkans against Turkey will not be resumed before some time next week, if at all. The peace delegates of the Balkan states will give Turkey until Saturday to request the reopening of the suspended negotiations, it is semi-officially learned.

Should the Ottomans make no move for a resumption of the negotiations, the envoys of the allies will themselves call a meeting of the conference for the purpose of formally breaking off the negotiations. That meeting could not be held before Monday.

It is not believed in diplomatic and military circles that war will be renewed, but in such an eventuality the various states of the Balkan alliance could hardly get into action until two or three days following the formal rupture of the negotiations.

SLAY TWENTY COMRADES

Two Divisions of Mexican Troops Did Not Recognize One Another

Toluca, Mex., Jan. 8.—Twenty federal soldiers were killed owing to a clash, by mistake, between two bodies of government troops, who had been brought to Toluca as a sequel to an attack by fifty followers of Zapata on a passenger train fifteen miles to the south of this city.

A detachment of light cavalry had been sent to protect the passengers of the wrecked train and convey them here. As they were marching they were observed by another body of federal troops approaching the same spot, and these opened fire on the cavalry.

Later it was found this was a detachment of federal infantry, but before the commanders of the two forces had recognized that they were fighting comrades twenty men were lying dead on the field.

COMMISSION IS LEGAL

Vermont Supreme Court So Decides on Public Service Body

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 8.—The public service commission of Vermont was declared by the state supreme court to be a legal body. The decision is rendered in a suit against the Rutland railroad for certain concessions in Alburg. The public service commission approved of the concessions and the railroad company appealed in order to test the commission's authority.

Fifteen measures have beeen held in committees of the legislature pending the decision of the court on the legality of the commission.

Elevator Kills Young Woman

Boston, Jan. 8.—Miss Mary L. Welter, a stenographer, aged 22, was killed in the elevator well of the Oliver building, 141 Milk street. Her hat fell back just as she stepped from the car. She turned and tried to catch it, but the elevator had started up and caught her between the car and the wall.

Ex-Evangelist In Sing Sing

New York, Jan. 8.—Percy L. Davis, a former alderman, and Eben J. Owen, one time evangelist, were sentenced to not less than one year and not more than twenty months in Sing Sing. They were convicted of extorting money from Mrs. Eva B. Carroll.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

FEDERATION CONFERENCE.

Mrs. True Worthy White, chairman, presided at the conference of the literature and library extension department of the State Federation held Jan. 3, in the lecture hall of the Boston public Library, and introduced the speakers. The topic of the meeting was "The Relation of Contemporary Literature to Contemporary Life."

Mrs. Josephine Preston Peabody (Mrs. Lionel Marks) read from her own writings, giving "The Singing Man," an appeal for work over which man can sing, and "The Open house."

In spite of the fact that poets are not supposed to enjoy reading their own poems, it is surely certain that Mrs. Mark's loves to read hers, though she did express herself that way and she delighted her audience.

She was followed by Miss Angela Morgan, who recited her own poems, "Today," and "Answer," the latter addressed to employers who refuse to pay women a living wage, and in response to the applause of the company recited "Know Thyself," another of her poems.

The fire in her eyes and the animated countenance of Miss Morgan as she recited "Answer," while her sentences came with increasing velocity and her rich mellow voice rose and fell, made her poem most impressive.

Miss Alice H. Spaulding spoke on methods of drama study as practised in the Brookline High Schools. She alluded to the fear some of the parents had that their children were to be dragged to the theatre or be made actors. Miss Spaulding showed that the idea is to make them enjoy what is good at the theatre and in the drama.

Go few times and choose better, and she enlivened her talk by several intimate conversation with her pupils one of which she called her classic story which she always told.

Mrs. White before the opening of the discussion said we must get away from the idea that only the old in literature is good and she made an appeal to read poetry in which others express what we can not.

Among those who spoke on the question was Mrs. Henry C. Mulligan Pres. of Federation. Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney and Mrs. Leila C. Pennock. Delegates from the Quincy Women's club were Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, Mrs. Frank S. Davis and Mrs. Herbert L. Packard.

BURTON HOLMES LECTURE.

Burton Holmes will begin his annual series of finely illustrated travelogues at Tremont Temple this week with "The West Indies" as his topic. Early last Spring Mr. Holmes made a delightful cruise through the West Indies, touching at all the principal ports making a pictorial record of places and peoples, customs and customes, scenes and scenery.

By colored slides and motion pictures Mr. Holmes will take his fellow travelers to Cuba, Porto Rico, Jamaica, Trinidad, Barbados, Martinique and St. Thomas.

His motion pictures will include the last hours of the ill-fated Maine, San Juan, Kingston, Port of Spain, Fort De France and the eruption of a number of the world's great volcanoes.

"The Cruise to the West Indies" will be given Friday evening and Saturday afternoon. Next week Panama.

FALL OF RED SNOW

It Means Great War, According to Superstitious Swiss Villagers

Geneva, Jan. 8.—Red snow fell on the Silveretta glacier and in other parts of the Voralberg district as low down in altitude as 3000 feet, the downfall being fairly heavy.

The superstitious villagers, who already believe 1913 to be an unlucky year, are much troubled by the phenomenon, declaring it means a great war.

WIDOWS' PENSIONS.

Public pensions for widows with children, instead of relief by overseers of the poor or private charitable societies, are being discussed in every part of the United States. Laws granting pensions will be proposed in many of the 42 states whose legislatures meet this winter.

In order to get actual facts with regard to the success or failure of widows' pensions in the few states which have already adopted them the Russell Sage Foundation commissioned C. C. Carstens, secretary of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, to make an intensive study of the subject.

Mr. Carstens, who is one of the best known child saving experts in the country, spent several weeks in San Francisco, six weeks in Chicago and shorter periods in Kansas City and Milwaukee, and his general conclusions are given below:

The Illinois Funds to Parents Act, which enables the Juvenile Court to pension parents if they are poor and unable to care for their children, is a loosely drawn law which does not limit its benefits to widows or even to mothers, but permits the pensioning of both parents. It is certain to be given, in time, a much wider interpretation than has yet been put upon it in Chicago, which is now, a year and a half after its passage, the only Illinois community that has seen fit to take advantage of its provisions.

After six weeks' study of the pension administration in Chicago and an intensive investigation of 100 of the 503 families that are receiving aid, the law does not appear to be one to imitate, though the judge of the court, Judge Pinckney, has done everything to safeguard its administration by inviting the leading charities of the city and a group of socially-minded citizens to aid him. To the committee thus constituted, and to the staunch way in which the judge has supported their work, is due such success as has been achieved.

In practice, the pensions have been largely confined to widows with two or more children, to women whose husbands are permanently disabled, and to women who have been deserted more than two years. Wholesale desertion would have been encouraged by the pensioning of families recently deserted. On the whole, investigation shows intelligent choice of beneficiaries in the first instance, and more adequate assistance than had been given before by the private agencies interested in the same families.

But two very weak spots were discovered; (1) in the greatly decreased interest of relatives, churches and employers in doing their share since the public pension went into effect, a decrease shown in 51 out of 100 cases studied; and (2) in the total incompetence of a large majority of the probation officers supposed to have supervision of the pensioned families. In 89 out of 100 families, their supervision was inadequate; in 32 families the conditions were such that there should be a court re-hearing of the case and a new order issued if the pension is to be continued In 10 families now being pensioned the home is too bad to be kept together, owing to drink, immorality or serious communicable disease. In other words, "pensions" and "relief" seem to have much the same effect and to need the same safeguards.

The law was agitated for as a means of keeping children out of institutions, but the population of Chicago institutions was 125 greater for the six months ending June 30, 1912, than for the same six months in 1911, when there were no pensions. Families containing 1,700 children are being pensioned at a cost of nearly $12,000 a month. It is estimated that Chicago must spend $200,000 next year if the present pension policy, even with its unusually strict interpretation of the law, continues.

In summing up his conclusions, after visiting not only Chicago but San Francisco, Kansas City and Milwaukee, Mr. Carstens points out:

1. The unwisdom of copying a pension law on the statute book of one state in other states where resources, methods of administration and needs are quite different. Even within the same state provisions should be adapted to local conditions.

2. Adequate relief cannot be assured by estimating so much per child or per family. The inflexibility of public pension funds, has made it necessary for the Chicago court to ask the private agencies to take over the care of a number of families which it cannot relieve adequately without danger to its whole administrative policy

3 New machinery for the relief of a special class is being created without dealing with the machinery of public relief already in existence. In Chicago the county relief department investigates the applications for pensions already investigated by the probation officers. This duplicate machinery with its conflict of authorities is most unfortunate. Judge Pickney of the Chicago and Judge Baker of the Boston Juvenile Court have testified that the juvenile court is not the right agency to administer these pensions, and that they will interfere with the court's discharge of its proper functions

4. The enthusiasm in favor of widows' pensions must not be underestimated or undervalued. It is born of a desire to see justice done, but justice is best done through the better protection of the living, so that there may be fewer widows with dependent children. Prevention of and adequate provision for industrial accident, for occupational and other preventable diseases, state-wide provision for the cure of curable disease, adequate segregation and kind care for all the unfortunates who must not propagate their kind—these are the points in a social program that need most attention, in addition to the much neglected laws for the enforcement of legal responsibility—the desertion, bastardy and support-by-relative laws Lump sums from the public treasury are too likely to become substitutes for all these better measures, upon which emphasis should be thrown.

For the need of the present that undoubtedly exists, we must develop to their utmost the public and private agencies for home assistance. If they are not doing all that they could and should, we must adapt, standardize and use them. If, however, social and economic conditions, upon careful inquiry, are found to be such that large groups of families are left in poverty or destitution, it were better that a plan of social insurance be adopted than that these families, should, group by group, be added as dependents to our communities. Such plans of insurance against widowhood, unemployment, invalidity or accident are now in vogue in England, Germany and other European countries. The state provides the whole support or asks the breadwinner to contribute from hs earnings a portion of what will be paid him as a pension when some unavoidable misfortune has come upon him.—The Survey.

WOMEN IN POLITICS

Champ Clark Advises Them as to Their Field of Endeavor

Washington, Jan. 8.—In an address before the Women's National Democratic league, which convened here in its first annual convention, Champ Clark expressed the belief that the advent of women in politics would have for its field of endeavor the amelioration of the conditions of the human race, the relief of poverty and the inculcation of morality.

Mr. Clark was followed by Mrs. John S. Crosby of New York, president of the league, who, in announcing her candidacy for re-election, answered criticisms aimed to discredit her right to that position.

In calling attention to opposition to her as president because of her political principles, Mrs. Crosby defended her opinions and admitted she is a free trader and an advocate of the single tax theory.

URGES THE FEDERAL INCOME AMENDMENT

Boston, Jan. 8.—In a special message to the Massachusetts legislature, Governor Foss urges immediate action by that body favoring the proposed income tax amendment to the federal constitution; asks that action be taken under the ratified amendment to the state constitution conferring on the general court the right to relieve forest lands of their present tax burdens and suggests this be done by means of a special commission to make forestry recommendations.

The governor points out that there is much tax dodging on personal estates, causing "grave inequality in the distribution of taxation," and favors new laws to relieve the situation. On income-yielding personalty he favors a tax on the income instead of the property.

EXPELLED FROM YALE

Result of Athlete Flynn's Marriage to Winter Garden Actress

New Haven, Jan. 8.—Maurice B. ("Lefty") Flynn is expelled from Yale. The varsity fullback's marriage to Irene Leary, the Winter Garden actress, has acted automatically as his expulsion.

In Flynn, Yale loses her best candidate for pitcher of next season's nine, the star back of the eleven and the best all-round athlete in the college, his loss coming as a heavy blow to the already weakened varsity teams.

There is no rule of the university which compels a student who marries during his school days to leave, but Director Chittenden of the Sheffield scientific school declared last night that the marriage of a student under "notorious" conditions, as that under which Flynn's marriage is described, acts of itself as the student's dismissal from the university.

Well, Read the Interesting Whys and Hows of the Telephone Directory

If You Want to Get In, You Had Better Call Up FORT HILL 7600 To-day

It is to the mutual advantage of the Telephone Company and the subscriber to have the latter listed in the directory as soon as possible after he gets his telephone, because such a listing saves many calls for "Information."

The Boston division directory plays such an important part in promoting good service that its preparation, printing and distribution are subjects of the most careful supervision. It costs a good deal in time and money to revise an average of 40,000 listings per issue, to transform 600 tons of paper into 200,000 books of 400 pages each, and to distribute these books over 1,500 square miles, but it is well worth the effort.

It is apparent that the preparation for printing must proceed on a schedule as arbitrary as that of a newspaper pressroom. If the book is not produced promptly, much of its value is lost. When the closing date is announced, therefore, the printing must proceed with whatever listings are at hand. Those received subsequently must be held over for a later issue.

The patron who rushes in at the last minute with his order may find he cannot be listed in the next book. It may be for one of many reasons, such as the running of additional wires or the setting of new poles or cross-arms; but the reason is a compelling one, although perhaps it might have been overcome had sufficient notice been given.

MORAL: Don't wait another day if you are contemplating installing a telephone, or changing to another class of service. Call Fort Hill 7600 and ask for the Contract Department. Such a call, from any Telephone or Pay Station in the Metropolitan District is FREE OF CHARGE.

Several clerks and minor officials of the New Haven testified at the first day's session. It was reported further indictments would be found within ten days or two weeks.

PROGRESSIVES TO HAVE BUREAU

Propose to Keep Busy During the Sessions of Congress

HEADQUARTERS AT CAPITAL

Will Issue Educational Press Matter and Push Questions For Which New Party Stands Through Congress—Plans Outlined In Significant Speech by Former Forester Pinchot

Washington, Jan. 8.—The Progressive party is preparing for active work in Washington during the sessions of the Sixty-third congress. Withing a few weeks a bureau will be opened in the national capital and from it the plan is to issue "educational" press matter, interviews, miscellany, and the rest of the regular output of a political campaign.

Although nothing has been said about it officially as yet, it is known here that a former administrative official of the government, a close friend of Theodore Roosevelt, will have charge of the bureau. Part of its work will be educational, and part of it will be the practical work of trying to push "progressive" measures through congress.

In view of this, some remarks delivered by former Forester Pinchot at a Progressive meeting in New Haven Monday night are believed to be significant. Pinchot's speech was given out by the National Conservative association in Washington, and is in part as follows:

"The Progressive party has not been relieved from the responsibility by the result of the election. As second of the great national parties our obligation to work for the practical application of our principles is as clear as if we had won this first battle.

"Accordingly we propose to formulate and present to congress and to the state legislatures bills to carry the planks of our state and national platforms into practical application. In a three months' campaign we advanced from a position of a party without organization or legal standing to that of the second or minority in the United States, and we accept cheerfullly the duties which that position entails.

"Facing those duties squarely, the Progressive party, united, vigorous and determined, should lose no chance of forwarding the cause for which it stands. If the majority party in congress or state legislatures proposes to take action hostile to the public welfare, we of the Progressive party, through our senators and representatives, through our committees on legislation and in other ways, should oppose it to the limit of our powers; but any legislation genuinely for the public interest, originating from any party or from any source, we will support and defend, for we are and shall remain more interested in the prosperity, happiness and success of the people of the United States than in the fortunes of any political organization whatsoever, not excepting our own."

This was the statement that came last night from Pomona, centre of one of the heaviest producing sections of the citrus fruit belt. Only a fifth of the crop may be salvaged, it was asserted.

If this be true, the total loss on 150,000 acres of fruit will amount to close to $40,000,000. Between $5,000,000 and $8,000,000 of this sum will be the loss to railroads in curtailing freight receipts.

Bourne of Boston, in the County of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth; William Burr, of Jacksonville, in the State of Florida; Clara M. Wild, of New York, in the County and State of New York; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Thomas T. Spear of Gloucester, in said County of Essex, to register and confirm his title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land situate in said Cohasset, bounded northwesterly by Margin Street one hundred and twenty-two feet and nine inches; easterly by land of the town of Cohasset; southerly by the Cove; and westerly by land of Lura M. Tilden.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the third day of February A. D. 1913, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this sixth day of January in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen.

QUINCY GYM GIRLS WON

Mildred Smith Made Record of 11 Goals From Floor

MISS O'NEIL CLOSE SECOND

When the whistle ended the Quincy Gym Randolph girls basket ball game at St. Mary's hall Tuesday evening, the local quintet were 33 to 25.

Miss Mildred Smith, Quincy's left forward, scored 11 baskets, and set a mark for this season. Miss Agnes O'Neil was close to the Quincy girl with 10 baskets.

A game had been scheduled with the Roxbury Y. W. C. A., but as they sent word Saturday of their inability to play, owing to sickness in the ranks, a game was immediately arranged with Randolph.

This was the third time these teams have clashed. In the first game Quincy won, and the second was brought to a halt when Miss Edith Mullen was knocked unconscious at Randolph. The score then being 11 to 14.

The result justifies the Quincy in their claim of being the better of the two teams.

The sumary:

| QUINCY GYM | | RANDOLPH |
|---|---|---|
| Isadora Beal | rf | Anna Kane |
| Mildred Smith | lf | Anna Walsh |
| Edith Mullen | c | Bertha Teed |
| Ruth Hilderbrand | rb | lf Alice Keep |
| Lena Clark | lb | rf Agnes O'Neil |

COMMISSION MOVED SLOWLY

In the Matter of Reorganizing the Basket Ball League

SCHEDULE ARRANGED

Despite the clamor that has arisen in local basket ball circles regarding the delay of the N. E. A. A. A. U., the commission appointed last November to make arrangements for a brilliant season did not agree until Tuesday night's meeting. The first game will be between the Quincy A. A. and the recently formed North Dorchester A. A. team at Quincy.

The teams finally decided to stick a season out are the North Dorchester A. A., Quincy A. A., St. Mary's and St. Alphonsus. The North Dorchester A. A., the home of the best athletes in the country, made it possible for the commission to agree by consenting to play their games in Quincy because they had no hall.

When the season first opened, all eyes turned to the commission to form a league similar to that of last year when the two Quincy A. A. teams secured the championship of the state Disappointments followed however and petty wrangling and incidental arguments of but little value to the sport interfered with the completion of a schedule. Also, teams desiring to play, had no hall, and an effort was made to supply them.

Several of the local organizations, disgusted with the long wait have voted to place a five in the field, and if they carry out their intentions it may sadly interfere iwth the commercial side of the proposition. At a meeting of the St. Mary's C. T. A. and M. R. Society of West Quincy Monday evening they voted to form a team. In the past they have produced the goods and still can do it, and if they insist on carrying out the wishes of most of the members it means that the Quincy and North Dorchester. A. A. will have the second pick of dates if St. Mary's hall is used.

William H. Flynn of the Quincy A. A. is a member of the commission. John J. Kelliher of Cambridge and John McGuiness of the North End have been named as officials.

The schedule to date

Jan. 15—Quincy vs North Dorchester at Quincy.

Jan. 17—St. Mary's vs Quincy at St. Mary's.

THAW IN NEW YORK

Slayer of White Has Brief Vacation From His Quarters In Matteawan

New York, Jan. 8.—Harry K. Thaw, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Mary C. Thaw, Dr. Leak of Matteawan, and County Detective Moore, came to New York yesterday and was given permission by Judge Mayer in the federal district court to remain over night in the city.

He will appear today as a witness in the suit of Attorney John B. Gleason for the recovery of $53,000, which Gleason claims as fees due him from Mrs. Thaw for his services during the second trial of Stanford White's slayer.

LOW SCORES WERE THE RULE

Only One Heptasoph Team Scored Better Than 1300

LOFTSMEN IN BATTLE

Low scores prevailed at the Coliseum alleys Tuesday night by the Heptasophs. A couple of men toppled the pins for over 100, but the general average was about 80. Capt. Dackers was shy a man and the dummy netted him 194.

Raiche of team C kicked the bunch for high single of 115 and Jones of D scattered the set ups for a three string total of 298.

Team C won four points from E; F took all from A and D beat B 3 to 1.

The quintet of Capt. Dackers is leading the league with .750 and are six wins ahead of their neighbors Capt. Mullen's team.

The Loftsmen first and second teams regular match resulted in Sherriff breaking with 113 for high string after he made two 74 strings. The former took three out of four points.

BRIEFS

Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows worked the initiatory degree upon several candidates Tuesday evening.

Miss Etta Hanson entertained the Dorcas society of the Universalist church at her home 963 Hancock street Tuesday evening.

Mis Mary Ford of the Tax Collectors office is at Brockton with an attack of apendicitis. Miss Ford was at Brockton on a visit when she was taken illl. A telephone this morning says thats he is much improved.

ASSIST VESTED CHOIR.

Mrs. R. E. Armstrong will entertain the members of St. Margarets Guild at the Christ church rectory Friday evening.

Arrangements are being made to have the members assist the vested choir in Steiner's "Crucifixion" which will be given under the direction of Prof. Frank Wrigley. The young ladies will also assist in the musical portions of the Wednesday evening Lenten services. Invitations are extended to those who wish to take part to meet at the parish house at 7.15 Friday evening.

MRS. MARY FORD.

Mrs. Mary Ford one of Quincy's old residents died at the Quincy Home this morning after an illness of some duration, due to infirmities incident to old age. Mrs. Ford was the widow of Dennis Ford who was blind for many years and for nearly fifty years she lived at the house at 48 Sumner street. She was about 80 years of age. She left no family. She was a remarkable woman for one so old retaining all of her faculties until the last. She readily recalled many of the important events of years ago, as vividly as though but yesterday, and her fund of information was often drawn upon by visitors.

UNION SERVICE.

Two weeks of special meetings are being held with the Wollaston and West Quincy Methodist Churches. This week the services are at Wollaston. An appreciative audience was present Tuesday evening to listen to an interesting sermon by Mrs. F. H. Morgan, who took for her text the words found in Hebrew 11:1, "Faith is the substance of things hoped for the evidence of things not seen." Mrs. Morgan held the closest attention of the audience as she spoke of Faith, its power, object and application. She spoke of faith in the business world and what an important part it occupied in the lives of men. She said it had transformed lives, and brought comfort to sorrowing hearts. The object of faith is the tribune God and the Divine promises of God.

Rev. T. C. Martin of West Quincy offered prayer. Quite a number from West Quincy were present in spite of the inclement weather. A good interest was manifest throughout the service. This evening Rev. T. C. Martin will preach. Everybody invited.

BAY STATE SENATORSHIP

McCall and Guild Men Combine Against Weeks and Draper Forces

Boston, Jan. 8.—An offensive and defensive alliance arranged between the supporters of Congressman McCall and the backers of Ambassador Guild furnished a new development in the fight for the Republican nomination for United States senator to succeed Mr. Crane.

Another development came in the letter which Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, wrote, urging the election of McCall.

The alliance between the Guild and McCall forces has caused an alignment of the various contending forces into two camps—conservative and progressive. The supporters of former Governor Draper and Congressman Weeks have been disposed to be friendly toward each other for some time, and now the Guild and McCall men have reached a practical agreement.

Star Distance.

Miles are useless in measuring astronomical distances. They have to use the rate of light—184,000 miles a second—in covering the mighty spaces with which they are forced to deal. Even then we cannot half understand, let us say, the immense distance of Gamma, in the constellation Virgo. Many, many years must light travel in order to reach our little world from these two suns. They might even have been extinguished hundreds of years ago, and yet we should still "see" them, so vast are their distances. In the year 1877 a new star suddenly shone forth in the "Swan," but many did not know that the star really came into existence hundreds of years before, but its light did not reach the earth until it was seen by the observer in 1877.—New York American.

His Lesson.

"You know I refused you half a dozen times before we were married," said Mr. Meekton's wife.

"Yes," replied her husband. "I suspect that's what has kept me from ever wanting my own way again."—Washington Star.

QUINCY TEAMS TOOK TWO GAMES

Handicapped Somewhat By Rafters of Gym

SOON GOT THE LAY

Quincy High basket ball representation paid a friendly call on the Weymouth High school boys Tuesday afternoon and took two victories away with them. The first team won 21 to 10 and the second team put it over 20 to 4.

Although Weymouth put up a stubborn fight they were unfortunate in the goal tries. This also applied to Quincy since many of the shots made would not reach the rim because of rafters which were part of the construction of the gym. After the game a number of the Weymouth boys complained of their hard luck, but Quincy met the same condition.

Quincy, handicapped by the poor layout of the gym for basketball, did not display the spirit they do at home. The first half ended with Quincy leading, 8 to 5. Larkin and Jenkins were uable to make their long passes on account of beams crossing. White and Sam Prout could not locate the net because a few more rafters were close to the rim, so they simply fell back to short passes which enabled the forwards to add necessary points.

The boys tumbled each other around in great shape and Bull Moose Brown relieved White at centre and displayed his usual aggressive spirit. The little Andrew's boy, after shooting five baskets, was pulled out and Safford went in at right forword. The latter made three baskets while Brown and Crane each made one.

The second team game looked very bad for Quincy at the outset. After an eight minute tryout, however, they seemed to start something and they kept at it until the game ended. Some of Weymouth boys started a star perforamnce in the dribbling game and exhibited enough spirit to rather feaze Quincy's seconds, but "Wit" Brown simply put a little of the strenuous life into play and the spirit gradually ebbed.

Hard careful practice will take up the time of the squads in preparation for the game on Jan. 10 with Tech '14.

Carried Off Honors in First Match of K. of C. Tourney

As was expected the members of Ave Maria Council went to East Weymouth Tuesday evening for the first match in the recently organized Knights of Columbus elague and brought home all the points. The schedule as prepared was ararnged for four councils, but Braintree decided at the last moment not to place a representation in the running.

The interest of the members is at fever heat, particularly regarding the calibre of the East Weymouth members. As far as the Quincy and Ave Maria council teams are concerned, most of their qualities are known.

The boys were given a royal reception on their appearance and all courtesies of the club rooms were extended. Refreshments were served and an entertainment was provided after the matches. Napoleon Grignon of th ewinning team displayed a few of his card manipulations which made a fine impression.

In checkers, Napoleon Grignon beat Muse, three wins. In pool, Jorn J. Buckley beat Leary 50 to 42; Edward Desmond beat Maddigan 50 to 35. In cribbage James O'Dowd and James Ktily beat Gallant and Grant 6 to 5.

In bid whist, John Minihan and Martin King beat Quinlan and Frank McCarthy, 32 plus: Thomas J. Shortle and James White beat J. McCarthy and Coffey 44 plus; Joseph McGilvray and George Reinhalter beat Keith and Smith, 55 plus.

The next match is between East Yeymouth and Quincy at the local council rooms, Jan. 14.

BROOKS MADE DARING FLIGHT OF TWELVE MINUTES WITH WAITE

Young Stenographer Has Been Acquiring Skill as Bird Man Unknown to Friends

Feels Well Equipped to Join the Argentine Aviation Corps

The first Quincy resident to take up aviation is B. H. Brooks, not known generally throughout the city, but known at the Fore River yard as the official stenographer of the Argentine Commission. Mr. Brooks has been here but two years and has not attained his majority. Of an unassuming nature, he is the last man in the city, one would connect with aviation.

Some time ago he became interested in the Gnome engine, and being of a mechanical bent he devoted some little time to studying it. Naturally he developed a leaning towards aviation and making his desires known to but a few friends he quietly commenced negotiating with sky pilots for instruction.

A little over a week ago he was taken as a student by H. Roy Waite, who daily gives as scientific exhibition of flying over Cliftondale and Lynn, as any man in the business. Mr. Brooks has made several flights, all the while studying the action of air currents, holes, ascent and descent and commencing next week he will be given the priviledge of handling the levers of a biplane.

Harry Jones, spoken of as the "intrepid" Jones secured the plaudits of an immense throng by flying in the teeth of Friday's gale for two minutes, while over in Lynn. Aviator Waite and Student Brooks braved the elements for 12 minutes and it is hardly known.

Mr. Brooks expects to qualify in a short time. He will probably become a licensed pilot and follow it as a profession. He feels that remarkable opportunities are offered a young man who places carefulness ahead of carelessness and it is not improbable that he will secure an appointment in the proposed aviation corps of Argentine Republic since he has knowledge of Spanish and understands the customs of southern people through a number of years spent in Mexico.

SENATORIAL DEADLOCK COMPLETE WITH McCALL AHEAD--WEEKS SECOND

President Greenwood Voted Weeks Chairman. Cushing Surprised Every One By Coming Out For McCall

Representative Leslie, Secretary of the Caucus Cast His Vote and Fortunes with Capt. Weeks

(Special to the Ledger.)

Boston, Jan. 9 1913.—The Republican members of the legislature after a three hours session, six ballots and a futile attempt fix upon a candidate for United States Senator, Wednesday afternoon adjourned to a second session, at three o'clock, today after a deadlock which looks as though it would stick. Congressman McCall to the surprise of the wiseacres led from the drop of the hat. McCall gained steadily until he had scored 73 on the fifth ballot and then dropped to 72 on the sixth. Congressman Weeks rose to 68 on the fourth, but fell back to 67 on the next two ballots. Curtis Guild started with 14, one more than Eben S. Draper who had the hoodoo 13 to contend with. The former dropped to 8 and the latter to 5 on the sixth ballot. The number present varied from 160 to 157. President Greenwood of the senate presided over the session which was held open in the house chamber.

Representative William J. Leslie of Quincy was secretary. President Greenwood voted for John W. Weeks as did Mr. Leslie. Speaker Cushing of the house surprised every one by voting for Samuel W McCall.

If the rule calling for two thirds vote or 94 on the endorsement holds it is doubtful if the deadlock willl be broken very soon and may be carried into next week.

The caucus vote was as follows:

| Ballot Number | 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| SAMUEL W. McCALL | 63 | 71 | 72 | 72 | 73 | 72 |

FRIEDA BUILT AT FORE RIVER NOW ON HER WAY TO NEW YORK

Big Bulk Cargo Steamer Launched Oct. 26, Sent to Home Port Today

Equipped with All Up-to-Date Needed Appliances

The bulk cargo steamer Frieda built by the Fore River Building Co. for the Union Sulpher Co., of New York, left the Fore River plant this morning for New York where she will go into commission in a few days. She left in charge of Capt. William McGray. The Frieda is a sister ship of the Herman Frasch built by the Fore River Co. two years ago. The Frieda was launched Oct. 26, 1912 in the presence of a large party of the Union Sulphur Co., officials and friends from New York, her sponsor being Miss Adeline H. Snider, a student of Wheaton seminary of Norton, Mass.

The Frieda is 315 feet long and of 5,000 tons deadweight on moderate draft. She was designed especially to carry bulk cargoes of low density and for this reason there has been incorporated in her hull, topside and athwartship ballast tanks on the Simpson principle, making the holds self trimming, thereby more than doubling her ballast capacity and reducing her tonage 20 per cent.

She is equipped with a submarine signal, wireless telegraph, Morse night signal and a porhydrometer for the automatic weighing of the cargo.

Her propelling machinery consists of a 22 1-2 triple expansion engine with two large single ended Scotch boilers. She also has in her engine room duplicate sets of 10 kilowatt generators and two half ton capacity ice machines.

RADICAL CHANGES IN THE LAW PROPOSED BY RECESS COMMITTEE

No Department Permitted to Exceed Appropriation Except in Special Cases

Trust Funds Liquidated and Money Invested Elsewhere

(Special to the Ledger)

State House, Jan. 9, 1913. The Special Committee on Municipal Finance which has been conducting an investigation into the advisability of changing the State laws governing the conduct of finances in the cities and towns of the Commonwealth filed an exhaustive report which contains these recommendations together with drafts of bills, which will be submitted to the legislature.

1. That the limitation on the amount which cities may assess annually for the payment of municipal expenditures, except in Boston, be abolished.

2. That cities, except Boston, be given authority to fix by ordinance, after a public hearing, a limit of taxation for municipal expenditures.

3. That mayors of cities, after con-

Board of Trade Suggests That Site For State Building

OTHER MATTERS CONSIDERED

The annual meeting of the Quincy Board of Trade was held Wednesday evening at their rooms in the Adams building. The meeting was well attended showing there was considerable interest.

President Hearn presided. Secretary John O. Hall in his annual report said that through the activity of the officers and members the membership of the Board had nearly doubled during the past year, at present being 235. That through the activity of the Board they had been enabled to secure an appropriation of $25,000 for the Town River and an appropriation of $6,000 for dredging the channel at Wollaston, also an appropriation for $100,000 for the boulevard from Wollaston beach toward Hancock street. Various legislative committees had been entertained in Quincy during the year and all had spoken in the highest terms of their reception. The interest of the Board had also been useful to local representatives. It had become affilliated with the Associated Board of Trades of Norfolk county and through this organization Quincy had been kept on the map and the Board of Trade was known throughout the country. Through its connection with the Boston Chamber of Commerce much valuable information had been received.

Treasurer Charles H. Johnson reported all bills of the Board were paid, the dues with the exception of $10 had been collected and a small balance on hand.

The annual election was then held and the following elected:

President—John L. Hamilton.

CHURCH WILL CHANGE NAME

Park & Downs to be Known as Trinity Congregational

PASTOR WARMLY ENDORSED

The Park and Downs Union Congregational church, Wednesday evening voted to change its name to the Trinity Congregational Church of Wollaston.

Legal action will be taken at a specil meeting to be called later. A majority of the members thought the present name too lengthy and unwieldy for convenient use.

The meeting was marked by strong evidence of the unanimous support of the pastor Rev. William B. Ayers and those present showed their loyalty at every oportunity

On motion of J. A. Boone that those present rise to show their loyalty to the pastor, all voting members of the parish arose and the applause continued heartily for several minutes. "All I can say is thank you" declared Rev. Mr. Ayers.

It was voted to support the action of the standing committee in placing on probation for one year over a score of the church members who since the trouble, have withdrawn their support.

Deacon James D. Willson offered resolutions commending the pastor which were adopted.

The following officers and committees were elected for the ensuing year:

Deacons—(four years) Artemus W. Dingwell. (one year) Victor Harrie.

Sub-Deacons—William J. Colby, Amory Waite.

Standing Committee—William B Holmes, Alonzo Bissette, Thomas G. Breen.

Trustee, (three years) William C. Crane.

Clerk—Charles A. Richardson.

Sunday School Superintendent—William J. Colby.

1st Assistant S. S. Superintendent—Clarke Crichton.

Treasurer of the Church—Eugene Blaisdell.

Assistant Treasurer— James A. Boone.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Morgan and Aldrich, both have gone to Egypt to dig up relics and many of the Wall street sharks will do a good deal of "rubbering."

What is to prevent every country of the world demanding an arbitration of the Panama canal tolls?

Gov. Wilson opposes a personal friend for Controller of New Jersey because he is interested in the banks The president-elect is showing his calibre already.

In the Castro matter as in so many others of a similar nature the treatment of Castro has been somewhat of the burlesque type.

Gov. Sulzer has cut off quite a big contract when he designates himself the leader of New York. He will have a chance to try his strength again: some pretty strong propositions.

The Trans-Atlantic liners have agreed upon a route one degree further south, which makes travelling across the pond probably just one degree safer and no more.

While the Republicans appear to have broken loose from machine rule, it might be pertinent to ask in what position are the big plurality of the state voters at the present time.

The steamship Rosecrans closed a checkered career of 29 years, by going to the bottom with 30 men. Rather significant that trouble perched on her bow almost from the moment of her launching.

The news of a college youth getting married is a reminder of Billy O'Rourke, whose parents would have him write before he could spell.

The Chinese ladies have abandoned the trousers. Many American women are only just donning them.

It might be a good thing to know that of all the money Boston people spend on base ball, how much really circulates around the Hub.

Portugal is not getting much comfort from its independence. Maybe they will take Manuel back if he is real good.

ISOLATION HOSPITAL.

The State Board of Health has again notified the city that a hospital for the adequate care of contagious diseases must be provided. The City officials and tax payers jointly may be hugging and congratulating themselves that in deferring action on this matter they are saving money. On the other hand a dilatory course in the accomplishment of this object, is just the reverse from economy. It would not be at all becoming to hold up the bugbear of a possible epidemic of some contagious disease to influence action on this institution, but it should be taken into consideration, that things are liable to happen at any minute. To have a hospital which would on the minute be prepared to care for any undesirable contagious disease and with the aid of science and medical skill, prevent its spread, is an asset which every city should possess. Such a provision is not waste of time or money, but an economic safeguard, a sure and desirable way of being able to meet any emergency which might arise. That the hospital would be a good thing no one can deny. That in case of need it would be a great boon to the afflicted and a great saver for the city is also quite well understood. The members of the City Council will undoubtedly give the matter their attention at an early date.

REDUCE WATER RATES.

Mayor Stone struck a responsive chord in the hearts of probably every citizen and tax payer when in his inaugural address he recommended a reduction in the water rates. The mayor says he has given the subject much study the past year. He very wisely suggests that whatever change of rate is decided upon that no radical action tending to cripple or handicap the department should be entered upon.

He suggests that the City Council give the subject early attention. This is a matter however, which the Mayor and commissioner have more to say than any one and it is understood that they have the power to fix rates. If this understanding of the situation is correct, it is within the power of the Mayor and the commissioner to get together and decide upon a readjustment which will be beneficial to the community and at the same time exercise such care, that no ill effects would result to the department. Any robbing "Peter to pay Paul" policy in this direction would be unwise and false economy which would be readily felt in other directions.

PENSION FOR LIFE SAVERS.

A movement has been afoot in Congress for some time to secure pensions for members of the United States life saving service who may become incapaciated because of injuries sustained while pursuing their dangerous calling or from old age. Irrespective of how the general run of people may view the pension system as at present applied there are few if any who would demur at this slight reward which is held out to this particular class of men for a service which is in itself inestimable. Perhaps only those located on the sea coast who have had opportunity to watch the work of those men can have a true estimate of their worth or the splendid service they render to humanity.

At all hours of the day and night when on station they are subject to call to engage in a most hazardous undertaking in the effort to save shipwrecked mariners and property.

The boats are supposed to be non-sinkable, that is the latest type, but time and again are the life savers hurled into freezing water in the winter time, getting soaking wet and challenging death at every movement until again safely on shore. Night and day they patrol certain sections of the shore in all kinds of weather and the man in the crow's nest lookout has his share of burden.

Yet for some unexplained reason their claims have been sidetracked from time to time. At present the movement for the pension appears to be on a firmer footing and it looks as though those men would receive the recognition they deserve.

MR. BOWDITCH NOW NO. SIX

Jumps Over Mr. Kessler, Former Leader in Contest

CONDUCTOR KELLEY GAINING

Galen Vinton Bowditch says he cannot affort to flirt longer with Miss Morrissett; that business is business, and excelsior is his motto, and he proposes to make a bid for that free Washington trip. Today he has gained 625 and moved up to No. 6 in the Daily Ledger contest, putting Mr. Kessler between him and Miss Morrissett, and he hopes soon to overtake Mr. DeNormandie and Mrs. Marnock. Gains however, were made today by Mrs. Marnock and Miss Morrissett, and Mr. Bowditch will not have it all his own way.

A friend of Conductor Kelley has sent 120 votes today, and he moves up from No. 26 to No. 16. Gains were also made by George A. McDonnell of the Knights of Columbus, Ambrose O'Dowd of the street railway, William Wolf of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, Michael P. Barry of the Fire department, Peter T. Fallon and J. F. Gallagher of the shipyard.

No gain was made today by the first three candidates in the contest. Evidently they desire to give the other candidates a chance.

The vote coupon will appear in only 26 more issues of the Daily Ledger. These however, will be good for over 300,000 votes, and they will become quite a factor in the grand total of candidate. How many will be gathered in?

ANOTHER PRIZE.

Again on Monday, Jan. 13, at 9 A. M. a prize will be awarded to the candidate who makes the largest gain for the week of Jan. 6—13.

THE LAST COUPON.

The last coupon in this contest will be printed in the issue of Saturday, Feb. 8, and the polls will close a few days later. A great hustle is expected during the last days of the contest.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

COMPLETELY SCALPED

Doctors Expect Girl Whose Hair Caught In Shafting Will Recover

Marblehead, Mass., Jan. 9.—While in the act of adjusting some part of the machinery about which she was working, at the Metcalf factory, Miss Mattie H. Cox, aged 18 years, had her hair caught in the shafting, was whisked up as far as the ceiling and was completely scalped, her head and the back of her neck being denuded not only of hair but skin also.

Dr. Eveleth found the girl conscious and showing wonderful pluck and nerve. He bandaged her head and she was taken to the Salem hospital. She was at once placed on the dangerous list, but the hospital authorities expect she will recovevr.

If she does survive, skin grafting will be resorted to within a few days.

WEST QUINCY IN BASKET BALL

St. Mary's C. T. A. to Have Team in League Just Formed

At a meeting of the St. Mary's C. T. A. Society of West Quincy Mohday evening the subject of basket ball was brought up and created much enthusiasm. It was unanimously voted that the Society be represented by a basket ball team and John J. Joyce was elected manager. In past years, as the fans of Quincy well remember, when this society had a team, they were always in the front rank in basket ball circles and met and defeated many of the strongest contingents in the state. With a live wire "Jack" Joyce at the head and with the material he has to select from there is no question but that the team this year will uphold the reputation made by the past quintets, and the people of Quincy will be assured of seeing plenty of fast basket ball from the start. Manager Joyce is already making up his schedule and is ready to book games with the best there are. Home games will be played in St. Mary's Hall.

Mewis Twins to Have Different Homes and Names

ABOUT 16 MONTHS OLD

One of the interesting, yet pathetic incidents, at the session of Probate court in Quincy Wednesday was the granting permission for the adoption of twin girls, a little more than a year old, whose mother died a few months ago The twins were Helen Victoria Mewis and Evelyn Agnes Mewis, daughters of William and the late Helen K. Mewis. The twins were born Sept. 20, 1911 and were remarkable pretty babies The mother died a few months ago after a brief illness. The father is employed at the Tubular Rivet & Stud Co., plant at Wollaston and lives with his daughter who has a large family of her own and was unable to properly care for the additional children.

Soon after the mother died ex-Councilmen and Mrs. Robert B. Craig who have no children of their own were anxious to adopt one of the twins and the necessary permission was granted by Judge Flint in the Probate court, Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Craig adopted Evelyn whose name was changed to Ruth Evelyn Craig.

Helen, the second of the twins was adopted by Alexander Kirkland, the maternal grandfather and her name was changed to Helen Victoria Kirkland. While it seems hard to separate the twins, they both now have good homes and will be given the best of care.

MISS BARRON'S FUNERAL.

Funeral services for Marion Melissa Barron were held from her home, 301 Summer street, Somerville, on Tuesday, Rev. Carl H. Raupach of St. Andrew's M. E. church, Jamaica Plain, officiating.

Rev. Mr. Raupach in his short talk spoke of his visit to Miss Barron at the hospital Christmas day, of his talks with her, of her deep faith in Christ that through everything she would be true to Jesus. The Temple quartet sang "Eternal Goodness," "Face to Face," and "Good Night."

Miss Barron was born at Cambridge, April 6, 1865, the family moving later to West Quincy, where they resided for many years. The last 14 years she has lived in Somerville.

Although an invalid all her life, most of her time being spent in a wheel chair, she has ever been a good example for all by her patience and gentleness and her sweet disposition. She was content with her lot, showing kindness and thoughtfulness for those around her, and helping them in every way possible.

She had been in poor health for some time and two weeks ago was removed to the Massachusetts General hospital, where an operation was performed, but it was found she could not be helped and she passed away Jan. 4th, yet her death was sudden and came as a shock to her many friends. A wealth of beautiful flowers showed the love and esteem in which she was held, a silent tribute of sympathy for those who have watched over and cared for her and from whom a precious life has gone. They included: Pillow, Brothers and Sisters; sweet peas, Miss Sarah Bartley; violets, Miss Catherine B. Hodgkinson; spray pinks, Eligtt Horton; wreath, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Horton; spray white carnations, John T. Dodge; spray pinks, Mr. and Mrs. Loue Barron; spray mixed flowers, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Francis; spray pinks, Mrs. Ellen Hutchins; spray of pinks and sweet peas, F. T. Hodgkinson; spray pinks, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Crowell, Mr. and Mrs. James Moorehead; spray roses, "Friends"; spray roses, Mr. and Mrs. Doherty; spray pinks, Mr. and Mrs. Cross; spray pinks, Mrs. Acorn and Mrs. Preston; pillow, Mr. and Mrs. Ivon P. Mahoney; pillow, Mr. Tom Mahoney and family; violets, Mrs. Eva Williams; spray pinks, Mrs. Sanborn and Mrs. Quayle; spray roses, Mr. and Mrs. Bennett; spray mixed flowers, Mr. and Mrs. Seeley and family; spray pinks, Mr. and Mrs. Hicks; spray pinks, Mr. and Mrs. Ford.

Miss Barron is survived by her mother, four sisters, Mrs. Ivon P. Horton, Mrs. Charles Hutchins, Mrs. John T. Dodge of Somerville, and Addie Barron of South Boston, and three brothers, Oscar Barron, John Barron and Charles Barron of Quincy. Interment was at Mount Wollaston cemetery.

HERE'S CHANCE FOR ATHLETES

Three Hikes Are Arranged For Ambitious Pathfinders

A cross country "Hike"" in three sections is announced for Saturday afternoon, conducted by the Municipal A. A. mainly in the Blue Hills reservation. This event is to be different from any of the series heretofore as it will be entirely outside the city. There will be two starting points and a third and shorter route for those who prefer a park walk only.

Route 1 is entirely in Blue Hills reservation, starting at 2.15 P. M. from the West Quincy station of the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad. The course will be over Chicatawbut hill near the start, and up and down Great Blue near the end. The finishing point will be at Blue Hill avenue. Included in this course will be a pathfinding contest. The Boy Scout officials have, at the request of the Municipal A. A., laid out a trail which will not be known in advance. It will be necessary to find the path from time to time as the "hike" advances. The natural country surroundings and the pathfinding contest promise to make a very interesting event. If there is snow on the ground the trail will be followed by its aid in Scout or Indian fashion. The total distance for Route 1. will be about 9 miles.

Route 2 will be from Mattapan square to Great Blue, leaving the square at 3 P. M. over Brush Hill road to the top of Great Blue and down again to the finishing point at at Blue Hill avenue, distance about 8 miles. This route will be easier traveling than No. 1, but not so interesting as the more strenuous "hike" from West Quincy.

Route 3 a park walk for those who do not care to proceed rapidly, starts at 3.30 P. M. from the junction of Randolph avenue and Administration road, covering a distance of about 4 1-2 miles, over Great Blue and down to the finishing point at Blue Hill avenue.

The Metropolitan Park Commission will assist in the conduct of the events. At the finishing point time will be recorded for those who do Routes 1 and 2. To all who walk either course within the time limits the regular certificates will be issued. The time limit for Route 1 is 2 1-2 hours, and for Route 2 is 2 1-2 hours. The "Hike" is open to all over 16 years, or who are in physical condition. Further information and entry blank from the office of the M. A. A., 6 Beacon street, Boston.

RAILROAD TICKET SCANDAL

Two Old Conductors on the New Haven Road Are Suspended

Boston, Jan. 9.—A ticket scandal that may involve thousands of dollars has been charged against employes and passengers of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company.

Two of the oldest conductors in point of service on the road already have been suspended, and many other conductors are under suspicion.

Prominent business men of Plymouth, Abington, Whitman, Randolph and other towns and cities are receiving bills for transportation, accompanied by curt notes suggesting that immediate settlement may forestall prosecution for evading fares or conspiracy.

GOLD WATCH FOR MELLEN

Not of the New Haven But President of the Eagles

OFFICERS INSTALLED

An unusual number of members of John Adams Aerie, F. of E., attended the installation ceremonies at Electa hall, Wednesday vening. Guests were present from Hyde Park, Brockton, and Dorchester Aeries.

FORESTERS INSTALLATION

John Ericson Court Doing Good Work and in Fine Condition

The installation of the officers of Court John Ericson, Foresters of America, took place in Wilson's hall, Wednesday evening. Grand Deputy, Charles Guertin and Herald James Curley of Monatiquot Court, performed the ceremony.

Reports were received from the various officers. The treasurer's sheet showed an expenditure of over $1500 in society obligations, also a substantial balance.

The membership is 201, a good gain having been made during the past year. The court has lost two members by death, Charles Pierson and Uno Youngquist.

Speeches were made by the visiting and new officers, Otto Gelotte, and others. Songs were rendered by John Troupe and August Brunstrum.

The following were reported as being sick Laurence Peterson, Alexander Lawson, Verna Johnson and Frank Nelson.

One candidate was initiated during the evening.

The committee in charge was William Ericson, Nels Lodengarad, Oscar Peterson and Eric Olsen.

The officers installed were:

Chief Rangers—August Johnson.

Sub Chief Ranger—Nils Dahlberg.

Treasurer—Algot Ericson.

Financial Secretary—Swan Cedarstrom.

Recording Secretary—Gerna Hermanson.

Senior Woodward—John Almquist.

Junior Woodward—Olaf Hanson.

Inside Beadle—Nils Lodengaard.

Outside Beadle—John Larson.

Lecturer—Peter M. Carlson.

Trustee—Thure Carlstrom.

Physician—Dr. John H. Ash.

A GREAT STEP TOWARD PEACE

Demand For Port on the Adriatic Is Abandoned by Servia

POWERS OFFICIALLY NOTIFIED

Hope Expressed That Other Sacrifices Will Not Be Asked—Pressure on Turkey by Ambassadors of the Powers, Who Urge Ottoman Government to Meet Allies' Terms

London, Jan. 9.—The Servian government has reached the decision to withdraw from the Adriatic sea. This is regarded in all quarters as a notable step in the direction of peace.

The European powers were officially informed of this decision yesterday, Servia announcing, as proof of her willingness to make sacrifices in the interest of the general peace, she had decided to remove her troops from the Adriatic coast immediately after peace had been concluded. The Servian government hopes Europe will take this evidence of its moderation into account and will not ask other sacrifices which possibly would be beyond the power of Servia to make.

Interest in the Balkan situation centres in Constantinople, from which capital it is expected the form which the action the European powers have decided to take will be divulged. Meanwhile the peace conference here is marking time. Rechad Pasha, the chief of the Ottoman envoys, is still waiting instructions from the Turkish government and the allies are making incessant efforts to influence the ambassadors of the European powers in their favor.

Dr. Daneff, the leader of the Bulgarian delegation, and M. Jonescue, minister of the interior of Roumania, continue their "conversations." Both are showing the greatest discretion, as they do not desire newspaper comments to embitter the differences between Roumania and Bulgaria.

The Greeks are displaying great dissatisfaction at the leading part taken by Italy, supported by Germany and Austria-Hungary, in the plans to deprive them of the islands of Imbros, Lemnos, Tenedos, Mitylene, Chios, Cos and Rhodes, for reasons which they declare to be destitute of any sense of justice. The Greeks still hope their arguments will prevail.

The Balkan delegates were unofficially informed that the ambassadors at Constantinople were continuing to exert pressure on the porte in order to find the best way to come to terms with the Balkan states. The tension between Austria and Russia has lessened as a result of an exchange of explanations regarding the military measures both have taken. Austria is said to have convinced Russia that her present military strength is less than that of either Russia or Germany.

HUNTER PAYS $500 FINE

Money Goes to Young Son of Maine Guide Who Was Killed

Skowhegan, Me., Jan. 9.—William Wilding of Indianapolis, who was charged with negligently shooting and killing Warren Holden, a guide, was discharged from custody on payment of $500 and costs, amounting in all to $675. The court stipulated that the $500 should be used for the benefit of the 8-year-old son of Holden.

Wilding for a number of years has spent his annual vacation hunting in this state. He mistook Holden for a deer while the two were on a hunting trip.

Child Labor Bill Becomes a Law In Green Mountain State

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 9.—A bill limiting the hours of labor for children under 16 years of age or women in manufacturing establishments to ten hours a day, with a maximum of fifty-eight hours a week, which had passed both branches of the legislature, was signed by Governor Fletcher.

The bill also provides that women shall not be required to work for two weeks before or four weeks after childbirth.

Hundred Persons Rescued at Sea

Singapore, Jan. 9.—All the 100 persons on the Russian ship Peter March were rescued after the vessel sank in a hurricane and have arrived here. They drifted in open boats for twenty-four hours and were almost exhausted when found.

Expulsion of Jews Suspended

Odessa, Jan. 9.—Responding to the appeals of thousands of Jews who have been ordered from their homes in the Kief district, Governor General Trepoff suspended further expulsions until the spring.

5. That cities be authorized to incur debt for specified purposes and for specified periods of time to an amount not exceeding 2 1-2 per cent of the average of the assessors' valuations of the taxable property of the preceding three years, the valuations being first reduced by the amount of all abatements made thereon previous to the last day of December in the year preceding.

6. That cities and towns be authorized to borrow outside the debt limit for specified purposes and for specified periods of time.

7. That limitations of amount which may be borrowed, imposed in special acts, shall be construed to limit the amount applicable only to the indebtedness authorized in special acts.

8. That cities and towns be authorized to borrow in anticipation of revenue to an amount not exceeding the tax levy and sums received from the state for bank, corporation and street railways taxes for the preceding year.

9. That notes issued in anticipation of revenue should be made payable therefrom not more than one year from the date of the note.

10. That notes in anticipation of revenue issued for a shorter period than one year may be renewed, provided that such renewal shall be for a period of time not longer than one year from the date of the note renewed.

11. That trust funds, unless otherwise provided by the donor thereof, shall be deposited in savings banks or invested in securities which are legal investments for savings banks.

12. That cities and towns which have appropriated trust funds to general purposes be required to restore them and invest them as recommended above.

13. That authority to establish sinking funds for the payment of debts incurred in the future be repealed; but that cities and towns shall contribute regularly to all sinking funds heretofore established an amount sufficient to pay the debts incurred at maturity.

14. That cities and towns be required to provide for the payment of future debts by the serial payment method.

15. That the issue of demand notes be prohibited.

16. That cities and towns be required to refund outstanding demand notes under the serial payment method.

17. That assessors be appointed by the mayors of cities and the selectmen of towns, the appointments to be subject to the approval of the Tax Commissioner of the Commonwealth.

18. That assessors be made jointly responsible with the financial officers of cities and towns in determining the amount of indebtedness falling due and to be assessed with the year.

19. That section 54 of part 1 of Chapter 490 of the Acts of 1909 be amended by striking out the words "for the purpose of avoiding fractions" and that cities and towns be authorized to assess overlays to an amount not exceeding five per cent of the tax levy.

20. That tax collectors be required to complete the collection of taxes within one year from Oct. 1 of the year in which they are assessed, the act to take effect Jan. 1, 1915.

21. That tax collectors be authorized to make collections of poll taxes at an earlier date than that upon which the final tax warrant is submitted to them by the assessors.

22. That no discounts shall be allowed for the payment of taxes.

23. That interest be charged at the rate of 6 per cent a year on all taxes remaining unpaid after Nov. 1 of the year in which they are assessed.

24. That the contingent fund act of 1912 be made applicable to all towns in the commonwealth.

25. That the fiscal years of cities, except Boston, shall end on Nov. 30 to make them correspond to the fiscal year of the state.

26. That the fiscal years of towns shall end on Dec. 31.

27. That the auditors in cities and the selectmen in towns be given the statutory authority to withhold payment of bills against the cities or towns on the ground that they are fraudulent, unlawful, or excessive.

28. That towns be required to insert in the annual warrants in the year 1914 an article to see if the town will vote to petition the director of the bureau of statistics for an auditor of its accounts in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 598 of the Acts of 1910, and ammendments thereof.

29. An act to provide for the apportionment in the state tax of sums extended for the maintenance of state highways.

30. That cities and towns be required to maintain city and town ways improved with state funds.

31. That building inspectors be required to give notice to assessors of the granting of permits for the construction or substantial alteration of buildings.

32. An act to facilitate the filing of official letters.

GRANITE CLUB AT THEIR LIMIT

With 10 Candidates and Only Eight Vacancies in Sight

Considerable interest is being taken in the meeting of the Granite City club Saturday evening. The present membership of the club is 117 and the membership limit is 125. There are now ten applications for membership posted on the bulletin board which probably means that there will be a waiting list after Saturday evening. The club is thoroughly Democratic and has enrolled among its members practically all of the business men about City Square as well as many well known business men of other wards in the city. The growth of the club during the past two years under the presidency of Eben W. Sheppard has been phenominal.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Two more magazines have been added to the already large list of periodicals subscribed to by the Public Library. "National Waterways" published by the Rivers and Harbor Congress of the United States, gives in a non-technical manner the important features of waterway development, terminal facilities, governmental policies and other questions dealing with the important facts of the transportation trinity "Road, Rail and River." The magazine is well illustrated and the initial number contains articles by such men as George W. Goethals, Hon. Gifford Pinchot, Hannis Taylor, Joseph E. Ransdell and J. Hampton Moore. The current number may be borrowed for three days, back numbers for two weeks.

The "Literary Digest," a well known magazine contains news of affairs both at home and abroad as well as matters of interest in science, literature and art, is the second addition. It reviews the current events of the week by condensing opinions of leading newspapers and magazines thus giving an unprejudiced account. The current number will be found on the reading room tables, back numbers may be borrowed for one week.

BOOKS LATE IN ARRIVING

So there is Delay in Establishing System of Accounting

IN AUDITOR'S OFFICE

There has been some delay in putting the new system of auditing and accounting at City Hall into effect owing to the non arrival of the necessary books from the state. The system is that devised by the Bureau of Statistics and is installed free by the state to those cities who desire it. The City Council of 1912 voted to have the state install the system and two men from the State House have been at work on the books for some time getting things ready for the new system. Everything was in readiness Jan. 1, but the books had not arrived from the state. It was announced this morning that the books were on their way.

CLARENCE E. CARR

His Followers May Not Be Bound by Action of Caucus

CARR MEN STAY AWAY

Sixty-Two Democrats Also Ignore New Hampshire Senatorial Caucus

Concord, N. H., Jan. 9.—The senatorial mixup in this state was further complicated last night when sixty-two Democrats failed to go into the legislative caucus held for the purpose of nominating a candidate for senator.

This action is taken here to mean that the Democrats, who lack four of having a majority on joint ballot, will be unable to rally their full strength for their nominee, Henry F. Hollis, Of the 148 votes cast in the caucus Hollis received 144, Clarence E. Carr 3 and William J. Ahern 1.

Carr has made an aggressive campaign for senator and the fact that he received but three votes, together with the absence of a number of leading Carr supporters, gave rise to talk that a concerted move was made by the Carr followers to stay away so that they would not be bound by the caucus action. Carr was not placed in nomination in the caucus.

STOMACH DOES WORK WHILE OUTSIDE BODY

New Scientific Marvel Is Related by Dr. Carrel

Paris, Jan. 9.—Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller institute, New York, winner of the Nobel prize for medicine, made the first announcement, through Professor Pozzi, to the Academy of Medicine, of the result of his latest and most remarkable experiment in the preservation of life extra-corporeally.

This consisted of removing from a cat all the thoracic and abdominal organs and placing them in a box containing a solution of artificial serum maintained at a heat of 38 degrees centigrade (100.4 Fahrenheit).

Dr. Carrel succeeded in keeping the organs working normally during thirteen hours after death. Animal food and water placed in the stomach were completely digested; the heart beats were strong and regular, the circulation perfect and the intestines showed proper peristalic contraction.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

ORANGE MARMALADE.

ORANGE marmalade is a wholesome and appetizing addition to the breakfast or supper bill of fare. Marmalade made at home is always to be preferred. It is not only less expensive, but is more apt to be pure and of the right degree of sweetness. Manufacturers sweeten their fruit to suit the average taste instead of catering to that of individuals.

Methods of Making This.

Oranges which one does not care to eat fresh may be made into marmalade. Indeed, for this purpose oranges which are a little tart are the best. The size and shape need not be considered, either, and thus a cheap grade of oranges may be utilized for putting up.

Among the various methods of making orange marmalade choose the recipe that seems best to please you.

Excellent Recipes.

English Orange Marmalade.—For each orange used allow a pint of water and a half pound of sugar. Take the peel of one lemon to six oranges. Cut the oranges in thin slices, remove the pips and put into a basin with a little extra water. Put the sliced oranges and finely chopped lemon peel into an earthen dish with the water and let it remain all night. Next day boil for five hours, then add the sugar and boil for an hour longer, put into jars and cover when cold.

Delicious Preserves.

Rich Orange Marmalade.—Take equal weights of lump sugar and oranges. Peel the oranges and boil the peel in plenty of water for four hours, changing the water once or the peel will be too bitter. When boiled it must be cut into thin strips. From the inside of the oranges first remove the white, then the pips and skin, leaving in a dish the juice and pulp. Wash the skins with a little water and add the water to the juice. Next boil the juice pulp and sugar together for half an hour, then add the cut peel and boil all together for ten minutes.

Another Orange Marmalade.—Acid oranges insure a marmalade that will jelly. Slice thin one dozen tart oranges and five lemons. Cover with eight quarts of cold water and let stand for twenty-four hours, stirring it occasionally. Put away for another twenty-four hours. Measure and allow one cupful of sugar to each of the orange mixture. Simmer another hour then turn into jelly glasses.

DELICIOUS CARAMELS.

PURE candy can be made at home much cheaper than it can be bought. Caramels are among the most popular of homemade candies, and if one has a thermometer, such as is used by candymakers and which may be bought cheaply where confectioners' supplies are sold, the results are more certain.

To make caramels the sugar is cooked until it reaches 420 degrees and turns brown.

Wholesome Sweetmeats.

Cocoanut Caramels.—Take a pint of fresh sweet cream and put it into a pan with three ounces of desiccated cocoanut and let them boil together for three or four minutes, stirring all the time. Then pour into a basin, cover and leave till nearly cold, when you pass it through a fine sieve. Take one pint of this liquor and two pounds of sugar, put them in a pan and stir them together over the fire till the sugar is dissolved; then add half a pound of glucose, a quarter of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar and boil these all to the "crack," keeping them well stirred. Pour on to a buttered pan and when cooling divide in squares and wrap in greaseproof paper.

Vanilla Cream Caramels.—Take half a pint of molasses and put it into a saucepan with four ounces of granulated sugar and half a gill of water and stir these over the fire till the sugar is dissolved; then let it cook without stirring for fifteen to eighteen minutes or until, on dropping a little of the mixture into a glass of water, it becomes hard. Flavor with a teaspoonful of vanilla and beat until creamy. If liked, four ounces of chocolate can take the place of the molasses. Pour into well buttered pans and, when cold, cut into squares.

Nut Confections.

Nut Caramels.—Take a quarter of a pound of unsweetened chocolate and put it into a pan with four ounces of butter, one pound of brown sugar, half a cupful of molasses, half a cupful of cream and half a teaspoonful of vanilla. Cook until brittle when dropped into cold water, then add a pound of chopped nutmeats, either of one kind or mixed.

Chocolate Caramels.—Take a cup of molasses, half a cupful of sugar, half a cupful of cream, a quarter of a pound of chocolate cut very fine and a tablespoonful of butter. Boil these together, stirring constantly till it reaches the caramel stage. When it hardens when dropped in cold water, take off the stove, pour into shallow pans and, as it cools, mark off into squares.

FARM LOANS FOR INDIANS

Commissioner Says Tests on Small Scale Have Proved Successful

Washington, Jan. 9.—An agricultural credit system, similar to that advocated by President Taft for the farmers of the country, whereby they could borrow money on their prospective crops, is being successfully tested in a small way among certain Indian tribes, according to F. H. Abbott, acting commissioner of Indian affairs.

He favors the insertion in the Indian appropriation bill now under discussion in the house of an item granting $250,000 for this purpose.

The only way to save allotted Indians from the blight of the rental system, Abbott believes, is to provide resources sufficient to make self-support possible.

SPEECH MIGHT RESULT IN STRANGULATION

William Rockefeller May Have to Remain Silent For Life

New York, Jan. 9.—William Rockefeller probably will never be able to appear as a witness in the finance inquiry conducted by the Pujo committee at Washington, in the opinion of Dr. Chappell, his physician. The only way he could answer questions on the witness stand would be in writing, for speech might result in strangulation, so serious is the condition of Rockefeller's throat, according to the physician's statement published here.

Dr. Chappell practically said that Rockefeller must be silent for the remainder of his life. Rockefeller is now resting in the Bahamas.

"Mr. Rockefeller is past 70 years old," said Chappell, "and, in my opinion, he will never be physically able to appear on a witness stand; in fact, probably not even for a written examination, as his hands tremble so that it is difficult for him to write legibly."

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

LAND COURT.

To the City of Quincy, a municipal corporation located in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; John Morgan, Henry M. Faxon, Moses A. Boynton, Martha J. Barker and Arthur Agnew, of said Quincy; Harlow H. Rogers of Brookline, Susan A. Plummer of Milton, in said County of Norfolk; Nathaniel N. Thayer, of Boston, in the County of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth Administrator de bonis non of the estate of Angeline F. Page, deceased, and as Administrator of the estate of Henry D. Page, deceased; Richard Polson of Chicago, in the State of Illinois; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by William H. Faxon of Buffalo, in the State of New York, Ellen F. Passmore, of Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, Anne Page and Lilias Page, of Cambridge, in the County of Middlesex, and said Commonwealth to register and confirm their title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land situated in said Quincy, bounded northwesterly by Beale Street; northeasterly by Hancock Street; southeasterly by Webster Street and land of William H. Faxon; southwesterly by land now or formerly of John Morgan, Henry M. Faxon, Benjamin F. Dyer Hilda Carlson, Martha J. Barker and Richard Polson, containing about 476,900 square feet.

Petitioners claim as appurtenant to the above described land a right of way over said Webster Street.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the twenty-seventh day of January A. D. 1913, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this thirty-first day of December in the year nineteen hundred and twelve.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

CLARENCE C. SMITH, Recorder.

NOT A VICTIM OF VIOLENCE

Death of Mrs. Donovan Due to Natural Causes

REPORT OF MEDICAL EXPERT

Practically Clears Up Mystery Surrounding Death of Woman Who Was Supposed to Have Been Murdered—Police Still Trying to Trace Jennings' Movements

Boston, Jan. 9.—The report of Dr. Whitney of Harvard that the death of Mrs. Mildred Donovan was due to natural causes, and the asphyxia to the stagnation of blood in the vocal cords while the woman was probably insensible from an epileptic attack, practically clears up the mystery which surrounded the case.

There remains alone the possible theory that the companion of Mrs. Donovan, New Year's eve, might have struck her in the face, causing the flow of blood which resulted in strangulation.

There were no witnesses to the scene which transpired between Mrs. Donovan and her companion on the lonely road beside the Holy Cross cemetery, Malden.

Mrs. Donovan may have fallen and struck her head against some hard substance or she may have been struck in the face. The blow was not sufficient to cause a large abrasion of the skin, but it caused considerable bleeding. It was not, however, of sufficient force to leave a black and blue mark such as the physicians declare would have been produced by a fist blow of any magnitude.

James B. Jennings, the last known companion of Mrs. Donovan, the police say, has been placed in the vicinity of the spot where the body of Mrs. Donovan was discovered, and at a time which coincides with the medical examiner's report as to when death ensued.

These are the connecting links in the chain of circumstantial evidence binding Jennings to the time and place of the woma's death.

Crime itself does not appear from the physical examination of the body. The police, faced with the medical opinions, will probably end their investigation shortly. They are working up the last pieces of evidence which, they claim, will make it certain that Jennings was with Mrs. Donovan when she died, or was dying, and dragged her body into the bushes beside the road where it was found.

In view of the prosecution of Jennings in Suffolk county for the killing of William MacPherson in the South End, it is doubtful if the Middlesex authorities present any evidence on the death of Mrs. Donovan before the grand jury until the outcome of the Suffolk county case is determined.

No inquest has been ordered and it is considered doubtful, under the circumstances, if one will be held for some time. The witnesses in the case are all persons well known and if occasion arises can be summoned at any time.

The clearing of the mystery has been accomplished in an unusually short time through the work of the Malden and state police.

NAVY MASCOT IN DISGRACE

Billy Goat Attacks Uniform With an Admiral Inside It

Norfolk, Jan. 9.—A belligerent billy goat's lack of respect for the uniform, it is said, was the cause for an order of Rear Admiral Doyle banishing all of the sailors' pets and mascots from battleships, cruisers and receiving ships at this station.

Admiral Doyle is reported to have been inside the uniform when the goat, a mascot aboard the New Hampshire, butted it so vigorously that it toppled over on the deck. The goat is now an exile, and with him went a long train of cats, dogs, parrots, bears and other goats. Doyle is commandant of the Norfolk navy yard.

STAYS ON ELLIS ISLAND

Castro Will Not Be Examined by Special Board of Inquiry

New York, Jan. 9.—Cipriano Castro, Venezuela's former president, who is detained by the immigration authorities at Ellis island, must remain under detention there at least till Friday.

Immigration Commissioner Williams so announced in declining to empanel a special board of inquiry to determine whether Castro may enter this country.

Lawyers Come to Blows

White Plains, N. Y., Jan. 9.—After appearing before Justice Keogh in the case of Antonio Belardo against the Pittsburg Contracting company, the opposing attorneys, Herbert S. Bird and John A. Goodwin, withdrew to the corridor of the courthouse to settle a few questions with their fists.

BALDWIN BEGINS SECOND TERM

Second Governor So Honored by Connecticut Since 1891

REPUBLICANS OUT OF CONTROL

Senate Is Democratic by Majority of Fourteen—Progressives In House an Important Factor—Governor Favors Abolishing Electoral College and Votes For Women

Hartford, Jan. 9.—With the inauguration of Governor Simeon E. Baldwin for a second term as chief executive of Connecticut the state administration passes from the Republicans to the Democrats for the first time in a long period of years, and for that reason more than usual political interest centred in the ceremonies.

The house is nominally Republican, but the senate is Democratic by a margin of fourteen. The presence of eight Progressives in the lower branch gives the Democrats hope that they will hold politically a strategical position in that body when a test of strength comes in upholding policies laid down by the governor and supported by the Democratic senate. The assumption is that the Progressives will act independently and the latter expect re-enforcements from those Republicans who are in sympathy with the legislative program laid out by the committee of the Progressive party assigned to keep watch over legislative matters.

Governor Baldwin, sixty-fifth governor since the Colonial days of John Haynes, and forty-first since the adoption of the constitution of 1818, is the first to enter upon a second term since Morgan G. Bulkeley, in 1891.

The governor in his inaugural message asked the legislators to pass an act requesting their senators in congress to give support "to any proper convention that may be negotiated by the president for the reference of the claim of Great Britain, as to the true legal construction of the treaties on which she relies, to the permanent tribunal of arbitration at The Hague."

He urged also ratification of the federal constitutional amendment providing for popular election of United States senators, and the requesting of congress to propose a constitutional amendment for election of the president and vice president by popular vote and abolishing of the electoral college, his plan being to accredit each state with the number of votes cast for the two officers under the present system.

On woman suffrage the governor advocated extension of the franchise to women owning taxable property, as an important step towards granting the full franchise.

In state matters, economies in various ways and the consolidation of some departments were urged, as was legislation for the election of state senators on a general ticket instead of by districts, and the enactment of a workingmen's compensation act.

Governor Baldwin declared the public utilities commission had justified its creation, pointed out that the through railroads are in general good condition, and asked for a law to prevent discrimination against the uniform of sailors and soldiers.

BECOMES MRS. GREEN

Daughter of John Redmond Weds Head of Irish Prisons Board

London, Jan. 9.—Max Green, chairman of the Irish prisons board, and Miss Johanna Redmond, youngest daughter of John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalist party, were married in this city. The bridal pair received many handsome gifts from members of the Irish party and others of the house of commons.

Mrs. Green has inherited her father's literary tastes. She has contributed to many papers and a London manager has engaged her to write a play for his theatre. The bride is 21 years old and is of charming personality.

DROPS FROM "L" STRUCTURE

Car Smashes Like an Eggshell as It Drops Into Chicago Street

Chicago, Jan. 9.—An empty car of an Oak Park elevated train crashed to the street from the elevated structure after bumping the icy tracks and uncoupling from the rest of the train. Nobody was injured. The car was smashed like an eggshell.

This is the first time in the history of the Chicago "L" lines that a car has dropped from the structure to the street.

Wants $10,000 For a Tooth

New York, Jan. 9.—Alleging that her dentist pulled a perfectly good tooth, following a discussion about an old bill, Mrs. Mary Zogarsky sued him for $10,000.

Stale "News" in Russia

St. Petersburg, Jan. 9.—Russian military and naval news, by imperial edict, cannot now be published until it is a year and a day old.

SUITS FROM THE AUGUST WRECK

Mr. and Mrs. Baker Claim $15,000 From New Haven Road

DEFECTIVE ROADBED CLAIMED

Alleged defective roadbed and rolling stock are the unusual and peculiar basis of two suits filed in the Norfolk Superior Civil Court against the N. Y. N. H. " H. R. R. Co, by Mrs Edith H. Baker and her husband, George H. Baker of Weymouth, the first for $10,000 and the latter for $5000.

In her declaration Mrs. Baker says that in Aug. 8, 1912, she was a passenger on a train of the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R., and "by reason of insufficient and decrepit equipment of the roadbed over which she was being drawn and of the equipment of the engine, cars and their appurttenances, by which she was being drawn and in which she was riding, she was hurt; that the defendant did not use due care with reference to the roadbed and cars.

The Fore River Shipbuilding Company has one suit against it amounting to $10,000 and three suits amounting to $17,000 are the outcome of automobile accidents and there are nine actions of contract amounting to $22,500.

LOST BONE IN HER LEG

Chorus Girl Gets $12,000 Damages From a Transportation Company

New York, Jan. 9.—A settlement for $12,000 has been made by the Mason-Seaman Transportation company in a suit for $50,000 damages brought by Miss Edith Watson, formerly a chorus girl, because she was injured so badly in one of the defendant's taxicabs that it is doubtful if she will be able to walk again.

Miss Watson was taken before Justice Dugro and a jury on a stretcher with her leg strapped to a board. A piece of bone removed from her leg was exhibited in a bottle.

The defendant decided to settle after Miss Watson's expert witnesses had said that she would always have to keep her left leg extended while in a sitting position.

NEGRO "INVASION" IS FEARED IN ENGLAND

Prominence Given to Warning by a Detective Agency

London, Jan. 9.—The Evening Standard gives prominence to a warning by an anonymous manager of a London detective agency of the danger of "an invasion of England by negroes, especially American, which has been proceeding steadily for two years." The warning says:

"Every ship from the United States brings fresh arrivals to swell the large colony which is already here, where they are treated on an equal footing at the lodging houses and boarding houses and sit at the same table with whites.

"For the first time in their lives they are permitted to mix with white women on social equality. This has erected a grave peril, which is becoming worse every day."

The agency report draws an ugly picture of the negro character.

KISS AND MAKE UP

Duelists Return to Europe Upon Their Sentences Being Suspended

New York, Jan. 9.—The United States lost today the only two real duelists arrested in this part of the country for nearly 100 years. Pietro Dutto and Charles Van Cent, who satisfied their old world notions of honor by exchanging harmless shots in a vacant lot, promised the court to go back to Europe if their sentences were suspended.

Dutto is an Italian and Van Cent a Frenchman. They quarreled over the proper way to conduct the Balkan war. To show that they were quite reconciled, they embraced in the courtroom and fervently kissed.

The maximum penalty for duelling in this state is ten years in prison.

PAYS HER TAXES UNDER PROTEST

Ellen F. Stetson Appeals From Weymouth Assessors

LIVES IN BRAINTREE

Claiming that she had been a legal resident of Braintree for years, and has never relinquished her domicile in that town, although on April 1, 1912, she was boarding at the home of Dr. William F. Hathaway, 86 Washington street, Weymouth, Ellen F. Stetson of Braintree, appealing from the decision of the Weymouth assessors in taxing her personal property last year, filed in the office of the clerk of Norfolk County a petition for the abatement of the taxes which she has paid Weymouth under protest.

She contends that her residence in Weymouth was merely temporary, and that she, keeping her legal residence in Braintree as she had for years, paid to the town of Braintree the taxes on her personal property last year.

The Weymouth assessors assessed her for her personal property. She then contended that she had never given up her legal residence in Braintree, and that her residence in Weymouth was only temporary and asked for an abatement of her taxes. The assessors abated $182.67, but refused to abate the whole amount, and on Jan. 4, 1913, she paid the town of Weymouth the remainder of the tax, $248.56 and interest, bringing it up to $252.84, under protest. She now seeks the return of this tax, which she has already paid in duplicate willingly to the town of Braintree.

Lane Heads Interstate Board

HIBERNIANS' INSTALLATION

Division 5 and Auxiliary Unite in Interesting Ceremony

Hibernians from nearly all of the Norfolk County Divisions attended the joint installation at Hibernian hall, Wednesday evening. County President Katherine Donovan of Norwood, installed the officers of Ladies' Auxiliary 10, and State Treasurer Dennis J. Slattery of Weymouth installed the officers of Div. 5.

Mrs. J. J. Hanley of Weymouth and Miss Catherine Barry of Quincy, assisted at the Auxiliary installation. The degree team of Div. 9 of Weymouth, under the direction of James Knox assisted at Div. 5 installation.

Addresses along the lines of Hibernianism were made by the officials and elected officers. Dr. George M. Sheahan also spoke briefly.

The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. M. Conners, rMs. Katherine E. Cotter, Miss Agnes Colligan, Mrs. Michael Griffin, Patrick J. Ferguson, Thomas J. Welsh, Daniel Mannex and James M. Cantfill.

An entertainment was given and among those who sang were Peter O'Neil of Boston, Daniel O. Shea of Braintree and Daniel Scully. Music was furnished by James Provost. Refreshments were served.

The installed officers of the Auxiliary were:

President—Mrs. Katherine E. Cotter.

Vice President—Mrs. Edward Powers.

LECTURE.

A pleasing and instructive stereopticon lecture was given Wednesday afternoon and evening at St. John's Parochial school hall on "Historic Quincy," by Charles H. Johnson.

In the afternoon it was given for the benefit of the school children, while the evening was for the older people. There was a large attendance of youngsters who enjoyed every moment of the talk and pictures.

There was singing by the school children. There was even a larger audience in the evening.

About 212 slides were thrown on the screen. The lecture was in charge of Rev. Fr. J. Coan. The children sang in the evening, accompanied by John Mahon on the piano.

A rising vote of thanks, three cheers and a tiger were extended Mr. Johnson and W. F. Perry who operated the lantern.

BOWLING.

The City Squares beat the Coliesum 3 to 1 at the City Square alleys in an Old Colony League match Wednesday evening.

Bean rolled 110 and was high man in the singles and topped the bunch with 307 in the totals. Grant was high man for the losers with a string of 107. The winners rolled good throughout the match.

DIED AFTER PASSING 100

South Weymouth's Centenarian Died of Old Age

LEAVES MANY DESCENDANTS

Mrs. Roxana Urquhart, the centenarian of South Weymouth, died, Wednesday of a general breaking up, due to old age. She celebrated her 100th birthday anniversary, Nov. 8, 1912 and up to that time had been in good health and accustomed to take daily walks, unattended, only requiring the aid of a cane.

She has been the mother of 14 children, nine of whom still live. One of her grandchildren is Chief of Police Thomas O. D. Urquhart of Arlington.

Mrs. Urquhart was born in New Brunswick and was one of six children. Her maiden name was Evans. With her parents she moved to Maine and settled on the Penobscot while she was still a child. When 18 she married John Urquhart, and 19 years later she moved to Gloucester, where she lived till she settled in Weymouth many years ago.

There are 34 grandchildren, 17 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be Friday and the burial will be in Gloucester.

RIVERSIDE WOMAN'S CLUB

Had a Great Afternoon Although It Was Pretty Tough Weather

Despite the disagreeable weather of Wednesday afternoon a large number of the ladies attended the regular meeting of the Riverside Club at the club house on Edison park.

In the absence of the president and Vice president, through illness, the secretary Mrs. Ida Crane called the meeting to order and Mrs. Hayden was chosen president protem.

The classes in dressmaking were reported as rapidly growing and all club members and others desirous of joining should report at once to Mrs. Dinnie, 253 Washington street.

After the regular routine work Mrs. T. L. Williams entertained the members with a paper on "Topics of the day."

Extensive preparations are being made by the ladies to hold a first annual "Gentlemen's Night" at Alpha Hall, Feb. 11.

In closig the members rose in a body, offered silent prayer and accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Hodgkinson, sang an appropriate anthem in memory of Mrs. Lee.

MAYOR STONE'S PETITION.

(Special to the Ledger.)

Boston, Jan. 8—Mayor Stone today put into the house of representatives a petition for legislation for authority to govern the laying out of streets and is accompanied by a draft of a bill which was filed by Representative Michael T. Sullivan which provides as follows:

Sec. 1.—No street or way shall hereafter be opened over any private land in the City of Quincy by the owners, lessees or occupants thereof and dedicated to or permitted to be used by the public until the width, location and grade of same shall have been approved by the Mayor and City Council of the City of Quincy.

It was referred to the committee on cities and hearing given later.

Vice President—J. A. Sedgwick.

Secretary—John O. Hall.

Treasurer—Charles H. Johnson.

On the retiring of President Hearn the Board passed the following resolution.

"That the Board accepts with deep regert the decision of Mr. Hearn to no longer continue as President. That we greatly appreciate his service to the Board and extend to him our warmest thanks for his service and express the hope that his interest in the welfare and prosperity of the Board of Trade will be undiminished and we extend to him our best wishes for his happiness and success."

President Hearn thanked the members for their vote and the officers and members for the hearty support given him during the year.

The amendment to the by-laws making the dues $5 per year was unaniomusly adopted.

The committee on the price of gasoline reported and were given further time.

The committee on the matter of a five cent fare on the street railway to Milton Lower Mills reported and the secretary was instructed to communicate with the officials of the street railway to see what they intended to do.

It was voted to hold the annual banquet and the following were appointed as the committee: A. L. Whitman, Chairman, President Hamilton, Secretary Hall, T. L. Williams, A. W. Stetson, W. H. Teasdale, F. F. Crane, D. King, H. E. Crane, Eben Prescott, H. L. Kincaide, Walter E. Piper, W. G. Shaw, C. H. Johnson and John R. Richards.

Mayor Stone was asked in regard to the grade crossing question and said that he had received no official report as yet and he was requested to inform the Board immediately upon his receipt of a finding of the Commission.

President Hamilton and Secretary Hall were elected to represent the Board of the conference being arranged for by the Brockton Chamber of Commerce in the matter of railroad transportation, etc.

F. W. Bent was elected a member of the Board.

Representative Leslie was present and asked for instructions in relation to the bill which the Board was to present to the legislature for a bath house on Wollaston beach. It was voted that the sense of the Board be that the bath house should be located near what is known as Rufe's Hummock.

—Noontime services in King's Chapel, Boston for the benefit of those in shops and offices, for shoppers and other visitors to the city, and for all who would be helped by such a brief period of devotion, are to be held every day in the week from Jan. 1 to May 16. These services are an extension of the Wednesday noon services which for several winters have been a regular feature of Unitarian life in Boston, and will be similar to these in character, except that on Saturdays there will be no address, but the whole half-hour will be given over to organ music. Various ministers, as was the custom at the Wednesday services, will speak.

TWO SCENES IN TWO LIVES

By MARGARET BARR

One bright, frosty morning an elderly gentleman living on a country road was taking the air walking about his place. It was not spacious, and the house was not palatial. They indicated an owner of moderate means, but there was something about the premises that denoted he was refined. There was a whirring of wheels up the road and an automobile appeared. Beside the chauffeur there was only one person aboard, a middle aged lady well wrapped in fur robes. The vehicle had reached a point perhaps a hundred yards from the place described when there was an explosion like a pistol shot. The auto swerved and in doing so went over.

The chauffeur was unhurt. Not so the lady. The gentleman who saw the catastrophe went to her assistance. She was lying with closed eyes, but she soon opened them and looked at the man bending over her.

"Tell me, madam," he said, "how badly hurt you are that I may decide what to do."

"I don't know," she said in a faint voice, "but I doubt if my injuries are serious."

The chauffeur joined them, and the two carried the lady to the house. Two young ladies, the daughters of the host, took her in charge, while the gentleman telephoned for a surgeon. When the medical man arrived he pronounced the lady unhurt, with the exception of a sprained ankle, which prevented her walking. He said she might be driven to her home at any time. Left alone with her host, the lady said:

"This is a singular meeting, Mr. Canning."

The gentleman started. "We have met before?" he asked.

"Yes. You were once well known to me. But that was twenty years ago, and my age is just double what it was then. It is not remarkable that you should not recognize me."

"But you have recognized me."

"There is a reason for that."

"Will you give it?"

"Yes, but not directly. I will tell you a little story. The scene is the veranda of a house on an eminence overlooking a river. The season is spring. The hour was that when the twilight fades into night. A new moon is standing over the western horizon.

"Two young persons were sitting on the veranda, a man and a woman. The man took her hand in one of his; the other he stole around her waist. 'I love you,' he said, 'and I wish you to be my wife.' The words were simple but more winning from their simplicity. It was the happiest moment of her life.

"But not relishing being won too easily she asked for time, promising an answer within a few days. He assented, but reluctantly. When a few days had passed she looked for him to come to her for her answer. He did not come. A month passed and she received a letter from him from a distant city, telling her that he had suddenly been called away; that a new field had opened to him, but that it would be a long while before he could expect any great success. Had she loved him deeply she would not have asked for time. This was probably fortunate, since he could not be near her, a long while must pass before they could be married, and he would only stand in her way of being settled for life. If she agreed with him in this an answer to the question he had asked was not necessary. If that answer was to have been 'Yes' and she preferred to stand by it she might write him, and he would do his best to make good his offer.

"This chilled her first and only love. She wrote him that doubtless he was right about the matter, and since his view was hers, she considered his offer annulled."

The lady had reached this point which was the end of her story, when one of the young ladies in the house brought in a dainty luncheon on a salver. She would have lingered, but her father told her that the stranger was not equal to seeing more than one person at a time. The girl withdrew. Then he spoke.

"There is a period in a man's life between, say, eighteen and twenty-five, when what he is to be is forming. He is clay ready to thrust into the furnace. This person you speak of was then in that condition. He was at an important point of his life when the two elements, caution and daring, are struggling for the mastery. In his case caution prevailed. And yet for a time the chances between the two were equal.

"This person who at a critical moment looked behind him never again came to a point where he could confidently, fearlessly look before him. He has lived a negative life. He has been a failure."

There was a deep sadness in his last words. The lady took his hand in hers and pressed it sympathetically.

"The carriage that was ordered has arrived," said one of the young girls, throwing open the door.

The injured woman was helped to the carriage and when seated thanked those she left for their kindness, then she was driven away.

"I wonder," said one of the sisters that evening, "what is the matter with papa. Ever since that automobile accident he has looked so sad."

"Has he?" said the other. "I haven't noticed it."

UNION SERVICES INTERESTING.

Rev. T. C. Martin of West Quincy preached an interesting sermon at the Methodist church Wollaston, Wednesday evening. He spoke on the Prodigal Son and laid emphasis on the "I will." He said a great deal depended upon the choice that was made. The soul can find God. There were two things that stood in the way of this young man's choice to arise and return to his Father's house. First there was the humbling of pride. No one likes to acknowledge that he has lived a life of uselessness and has been reduced to poverty. It is hard to humble pride. Another difficulty was the fact that there was no crisis. Had death come, or should there be some great calamity then it might be easier to make such a decision but there was no crisis to lead him to make such a decision except his own need.

Miss Helen Martin sang a solo which was greatly enjoyed and Mr. Lawrence and Miss Helen Martin of West Quincy sang two duets which were well received. The meeting was full of interest and showed a large increase over Tuesday evening. A large number came over from West Quincy to join in the service. The meetings are held for one hour only. Mrs. F. H. Morgan will speak this evening, and the West Quincy church will furnish the special music. Everybody is cordially invited to any or all of these services.

DISTRICT COURT.

Thomas Cain was fined $10 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Gertrude E. Hunt was arraigned for alleged neglect to support her minor child. Case continued one week.

Frank Shea was fined $25 for rescuing a prisoner at Braintree.

The continued cases against Constanzo Dendene for breaking and entering and for assault on Donata D'Allasantio at Quincy were heard. He was discharged on the breaking and entering complaint and fined $5 for assault and put under $400 bonds to keep the peace for three months.

Home Proposition Submitted by Representative Sullivan

WOULD IMPROVE PROPERTY

(Special to the Ledger)

State House, January 10, 1913. Representative Michael T. Sullivan, seeks to obtain legislation whereby property used for a dwelling house and occupied by the owner thereof for at least one year previous to April 1, may become exempt from taxation to the amount of $1000. In order to have advantage of the exemption, the owner must make oath to his intention to use the building exclusively for dwelling purposes for at least one year from April 1.

Rep. Sullivan's argument is that it would tend to improve property and make for better citizenship, if some inducement is offered for more people to own their homes.

Another petition filed by Representative Sullivan asks that the trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library be authorized to take and hold real estate to an amount not exceeding $750,000 which may be given, for the benefit of the Library. The petition is signed by Morton Smith, Eugene R. Stone, George A. Sidelinger, Rufus B. Tobey, Arthur W. Hall, Maurice P. Spillane, Henry R. Holden and William Edwards.

REP. MICHAEL T. SULLIVAN.

WEEKS' LEAD ONLY TEMPORARY

McCALL AGAIN FIRST FOR SENATOR

Seven Votes to the Good when Caucus Adjourned on 17th Roll Call. Guild Forces Stand Pat and Smiling

Draper Strength Drops Completely Away. McCall Men Still Claim That Victory will Come Their Way

CONG. JOHN W. WEEKS.
Who Took the Lead in Senatorial Contest.

(Special to the Ledger.)

State House, Jan. 10—Five more ballots were taken at the Republican caucus this morning with the result not materially changed, although ex-congressman McCall again took lead by a small margin. President Greenwood presided and Representative Leslie of Quincy acted as reading clerk. After the ballots were taken they adjourned at 12.15 until Monday at two o'clock. The ballots were:

| Ballot No. | 18 | 19 | 20 | 21 | 22 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Weeks | 73 | 70 | 70 | 71 | 71 |
| McCall | 66 | 74 | 74 | 73 | 73 |
| Guild | 11 | 7 | 8 | 9 | 9 |
| Lawrence | 2 | 2 | 2 | 2 | 2 |
| Draper | 3 | 2 | 2 | 2 | 2 |

There has been a shifting of scenes and remodelling of situations to meet the new conditions which developed at the State House yesterday in the senatorial contest among the Republican members of the legislation, but the second days gathering was without tangible results and after 11 ballots, making a total of 17 in all, adjournment was made without deciding who should be the Republican candidate for senator before the legislature, next week. One new development however which was significant was the changing of the places of McCall and Weeks.

| Ballot No. | 6 | 7 | 8 | 9 | 10 | 11 | 12 | 13 | 14 | 15 | 16 | 17 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Weeks | 67 | 67 | 64 | 71 | 70 | 71 | 73 | 69 | 68 | 74 | 76 | 73 |
| McCall | 72 | 72 | 73 | 67 | 68 | 66 | 67 | 68 | 65 | 64 | 68 | 66 |
| Guild | 8 | 10 | 11 | 9 | 10 | 12 | 11 | 14 | 12 | 9 | 8 | 8 |
| Lawrence | 4 | 5 | 7 | 8 | 6 | 6 | 4 | 4 | 4 | 6 | 3 | 3 |
| Draper | 5 | 5 | 4 | 4 | 5 | 4 | 4 | 4 | 3 | 4 | 3 | 2 |
| Plunkett | 1 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Bates | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 4 | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Bagley | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 1 | 0 | 0 | 0 |

At the close of the balloting, Wednesday McCall had forged to the front with a total of 72 votes a net gain of nine from the time he left the tape at the drop of the hat with 63. Weeks started out with 56 on the first ballot, and closed Wednesday with 67 a gain of 11.

They opened with the same relative figures on the seventh ballot, Thursday. On the eighth Weeks dropped three and McCall gained one. From this point Weeks showed greater strength and reached his high mark with 76 on the 15th ballot, but dropped back to 73 on the next and last ballot. Weeks was able to make gain by aid of four votes from Lowell, two from Fitchburg, and one each from Somerville, Springfield and Peabody.

Curtis Guild never got higher than 14 votes, and Eben S. Draper received 5 but dropped to 2. Under the rule 94 votes is necessary for a choice. An effort on the part of the McCall men to press for an expression on second choice was sidetracked, by the Weeks men who said their first, last and only choice was Weeks.

If conditions warrant however this may be amended. Representative Leslie of Quincy has been a consistent supporter of Congressman John W. Weeks from the start. The result of the 11 ballots taken yesterday tell their own story.

McDEVITT ASKS CHEAPER GAS

Also Would Have City Sell Water From Braintree

FOR MECHANICAL PURPOSES

(Special to the Ledger)

State House, January 9, 1913. Senator John J. McDevitt, of Quincy, introduced two petitions in the Senate one from Mayor Stone and asking that the city be allowed to sell water from its reservoir in Braintree for mechanical purposes only, and that no assessments be made for the water so used by the Metropolitan Water system. The other asks for legislation which will fix the price of gas furnished by the Citizens Gas Company to the citizens of Quincy at 80c per 1000 cubic feet.

LITCHFIELD'S THIRD TERM

Re-elected President of Firemen's Relief Association

OTHER OFFICERS CHOSEN

The annual meeting of the Quincy Firemen's Relief association was held Thursday evening and these officers elected:

President—Amos L. Litchfield.
Vice President—Richard Colbert.
Secretary—James Gallagher.
Treasurer—Edmund C. Hayden.

A board of directors, which included members from each fire company of the city, was also elected.

This is the third time that Chief Litchfield has been honored with the presidency of the association, the first time being upon its formation 26 years ago, he being its first president. Again in 1907 he served as president.

AMOS L. LITCHFIELD,

STREET CAR MEN INSTALLED

Local Favors the Present Nine in Eleven Hour Law

MUCH ENTHUSIASM

At Electa hall, Thursday evening the officers of the Quincy local of the Carmen's union were installed by aPst President William Kelly. Among those who spoke were President Austin Fales of the Boston Building Trades Council, President John Downes of the Plumbers and Steamfitters of Quincy and President Frank H. McCarthy of the Boston Central Labor Union.

A vote was taken which favored the present nine in 11 hour law, and several of the speakers referred to the purport of the bill which street railway men tried to have passed by preceding legislatures.

Luncheon was served by the committee in charge of the installation, Patrick Denehy, Herbert Johnson and Arnold Kent.

The officers installed were:

President—John C. Faircloth.
Vice President—William H. Gould.
Recording Secretary—John J. Kelly
Financial Secretary and Treasurer, —A. L. Blanchard.
Conductor—J. E. Carey.
Sentinel—Thomas Ferguson.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

Potent Factor in Determining School Problem

DR. SNEDDEN'S LECTURE

"The Modern Tendencies of Educatioi" were discussed by Dr. David Snedden, State Commissioner of Education, before the Quincy Teachers' Association at the Coddington school, Thursday evening. Consuming about one hour, Dr. Snedden gave a most intelligent version of the hopes of the board. As a speaker he is something on the rapid fire order, who can present his hopes in a logical way and still reach the innermost thoughts of his hearers.

This was his first official visit to Quincy and although many of the city officials and councilmen had been invited to be present but one appeared.

Seated on the platform were John D. Mackay, Arthur Newcomb and Joseph H. McPherson, members of the school committee. Mr. Townsend, president of the association presented the speaker and at the conclusion of the talk announced that Edward Davis a celebrated bird mimic would present his illustrated lecture, "An Evening in Birdland," at the meeting on April 17.

Miss Emma S. Perkins, whose resignation as instructor of music has been accepted, sang several solos which were given hearty applause. It was probably the last public appearance of Miss Perkins in this city as instructor.

Dr. Snedden in his talk deplored the lack of institutions that would develop properly the teaching functions and paid a high tribute to Col. Barker, a former superintendent of schools in Quincy who later went to Chicago, and who, through his remarkable foresight and understanding of conditions, made his views felt throughout the land with regard to vocational education.

He said in part:—

"A broad, elastic subject is my topic and in lack of the modern tendencies are some current tendencies in our own civilization, the chief of which we can find emerging whatever forces have been crystallized from our Democratic principles and social economy. We want to make America a people with a maximum number of efficient, moderate and happy individuals, with a minimum number of diseased, misshapen and wrong individuals, which shall in the largest possible measure reflect in distributed form the ideals of our time and in making that people we have learned that controlled knowledge is our great instrument.

"We are increasing our control over diseases, natural forces and are developing greater insight in the social forces in play among ourselves and thereby diminishing the waste of distributive conflict, unnecessary waste and misunderstanding. Our social economy has taught us these things and some of the important tendencies are now coming into consciousness.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Twenty-two false alarms of fire in the course of year in Quincy is not an enviable record.

Boston plans to clear the Common of hoodlums. The movement could be spread to other parts of the City without stretching the law.

The bare headed girl is still much in evidence, but it is quite noticeable the way she snuggles her head down into the collar of her coat.

A town censor of plays is the latest thing which an enterprising legislator wants tagged on the statute books.

One senatorial candidate after going through all the callings which it might be considered were allotted to man winds up the list with etc. Jack of all trades probably and following it to its logical conclusion, master of none, so a desirable candidate for any old public office.

The High school boys want an indoor track. They cannot develope speed as athletes without all the appliances accorded other schools.

Will some kindly spirit tell those guess ridden writers, Frank Chance's salary, and then let us have peace. Between Chance, Murphy and a few others against some people have had a grouch, a lot of waste material has been cast before an innocent public.

The Board of Trade favors Rufe's Hummock for the bath house. Well with a hammock, a good book, a becoming bathing suit and a box of candy, with a red sun shade most any girl would be satisfied.

The finger bowl has been declared a menace to public health. Throw out the carpets, burn up the window curtains and give the door mat a coat of varnish.

It would take a lot of encouragement to dig up that negible quality known as latent good in some people.

Many people not thoroughly imbued with religion got down on their marrow bones the first time in a long period on that black demonstration Tuesday.

By all means let us have uniform streets, and if possible a uniform distance from the street line for all houses. Then we will be getting nearer to the ideal city beautiful.

While Boston plans to expend a large amount beautifying Copley square, which is at present to say the least not objectionable, thousands of poor people must breath the muck and dirt of unsanitary highways in other parts of the city, where an expenditure of a few thousands would do much good.

Any group of two men seen together the past few days were accused of hatching some deal in the senatorial fight.

Plunkett did not plunk in as well as friend Foss anticipated. In fact he rather "funked out."

If Massachusetts does not hurry up and get in on that income tax bill, she will lose her progressive standing and the thing will be accomplished without her aid.

PURE SHOE BILL.

Much opposition has sprung up with regard to the Oldfield bill as it is called, requiring a stamping of shoes to show just what they are made of, almost on a line with the pure food bill, which requires that food shall be stamped in compliance with this latter measure.

The claim has been made that if the Oldfield bill passes it will mean an increase in the cost of the shoe. Undoubtedly many people have jumped to the conclusion that the bill provides that every shoe of whatever quality shall be stamped as to its parts.

Now the bill does not intend any such thing and further it plainly states so.

What the bill does mean is to prevent manufacturers from using a substitute for leather in any part or parts of a shoe or boot, without affording the purchaser a means of knowing that he is not receiving a shoe manufactured from genuine leather in all parts where leather is employed.

In other words, it is a preventive of such practice whether intentional or otherwise.

To obviate the necessity of any such stamping on a shoe made wholly of leather the bill makes ample provision.

The bill, after enumerating the leather parts and the substitutes commonly used for leather in those parts says:

"That it shall be unlawful within any Territory or the District of Columbia for any person to use, in manufacturing for sale any boot or shoe, any substitute for leather whatsoever, without legibly and in the English language stamping with a metal die, and in plain view, upon the outside of the outsole of the boot and shoe where and by whom such boot or shoe was made and what substitute for leather has been used, designating each part where such substitute or substitutes has or have been used, whether in the counter, heel, insole, middle sole, or slip sole; and it shall be unlawful for any person within any Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia to sell or offer or expose for sale any boot or shoe containing a substitute for leather within the meaning of this Act without same being stamped as provided by this Act: Provided, That no dealer shall be prosecuted under the provisions of this Act when he can establish a written guaranty signed by the wholesaler, jobber, manufacturer, or other person residing in the United States from whom such boots or shoes were purchased to the effect that the same contain no substitute for leather within the meaning of this Act, or that the same are properly stamped as provided for by this Act. Said guaranty, to afford protection, shall contain the name and address of the person making the sale of such boots or shoes to such dealer, and in such case said person shall be amenable to the prosecutions and penalties under the provisions of this Act.

This act shall not be construed to apply to what is commonly known as a rubber boot or shoe or to the use of a rubber heel on a boot or shoe, nor shall anything in this Act be construed to apply to the use of steel or wood in the shank or counter of a boot or shoe, nor be construed to apply to the use of cork or cement between the soles of a boot or shoe."

So that the proposed law is quite clear and tends to protect both the manufacturer who uses leather exclusively and the buyer at the same time from purchasing for actual leather a substitute for that article.

NOT CREDITABLE.

The record of 22 false alarms of fire for the year 1912 is by no means a creditable one. Yet it is a problem how this evil can be checked in such a manner as to cause a complete discontinuance of the trick or habit, whichever it may be termed in its most innocent acceptance, but which must be acknowledged as criminal inits tendencies.

Many boys delight to see the fire apparatus in action. They find pleasure in watching the madly rushing horses, the engines vomiting smoke and fire as they pass through the streets, the meteor like flights of the power machines through the highways and gather keen enjoyment in witnessing the tense eagerness of the firemen and then the play of the steamers when they arrive on the scene. But in the case of false alarms the excitement of the playing is lost to them.

Many false alarms of course must be credited to the thoughtlessness of youth, yet there are others, older, more matured in judgment, who should be above such practices who find recreation for their over pent energy in the fire glamor and to satisfy this thirst or craving for excitment they too become addicted to the false alarm habit. In the case of the latter it must certainly be something the matter with the head. Their case requires immediate attention and if discovered and the examination proceeds they should be provided with proper care and attention to prevent further indulgence in this undesirable practice.

Of course there is the usual talk that it should be easy to discover the offenders, but the task is not so simple as it appears. In the first place, people pay little attention to a fire alarm box until an alarm is sounded and then their ears are cocked to catch the number of the box. By the time any one reaches the box the offender has covered his tracks and so his detection is not very simple in the long run.

It is fair to assume that any one bent upon ringing in a false alarm is not going to shout his purpose to the first person he meets, and again he is not going to rush to the box when it is surrounded by people or when there are people in the immediate vicinity. No indeed that crafty indivicual is going to wait until the coast is clear and then dodging around is only on the scene like any of the most innocent people attracted by the ringing of the box.

Some people are unreasonable enough to censure the police heavily for failure to detect the culprits. Again it may be considered that the ringer is not going to wait until a police officer is within hailing distance. On the other hand it would be both too costly and highly impracticable to have a policeman posted at every fire alarm box night and day.

The thoughtless people who ring in those alarms should remember that it costs quite a tidy sum every time the fire apparatus is called out and to multiply that by 22 in the course of a year it can be seen that much needless expense is incurred in this way which might be saved to the city. The firemen however must respond to every call. They are in no position until they arrive at the location of the box to determine if they are called out on a fool's errand. One thing is certain if any offender is apprehended he should be dealth with in a manner which would serve as a warning to others.

Further than this the offender if he has intelligence enough to grasp the situation should refrain from further operation of this practice. Aside from the element of cost there is a far more serious consideration and that is the danger to the public and firemen alike from rapidly moving apparatus. Accidents are liable to happen at any minute. Those things should cause the seeker for excitement to weigh carefully his act and endeavor to satisfy his craving in some less costly field, where there is less danger to innocent people as a consequence.

MOOSE HOLD LADIES' NIGHT

Brilliant and Enjoyable Gathering By Local Herd

The capacity of Alpha hall was taxed to its utmost at the ladies night of the Quincy Lodge of Moose Thursday evening. Guests were present from Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Dorchester and Brockton.

An entertainment, dancing and an unlimited quantity of refreshments in Union hall supplied the desires of all who attended.

Dictator Albert Wiliams made a special address to the Ladies Circle of the Lodge and a speech of welcome by Frank Sampson opened the festivities. Songs were rendered by George Boutelier, and George Martland and piano solos were given by Leon Biganess and Miss Edna Milford. Overtures were also sandwiched into the program by Provost's orchestra.

The floor was in charge of Frank Sampson, with Herbert Selden as the assistant floor director. The reception committe also acted as aids and the dance program was of the variety nature giving old and young a chance to swing their partners.

The reception committee consisted of Carl W. Weixler, Walter F. Carmen, Joseph Halter, Richard Buckley, John McCoombs, Henry Biganess, Ernest Wilding, John Heffernan, Joseph A. Daley, Isaac Sussman, Samuel Castleman, Silas A. Perkins, Frank Sampson, H. Sawyer.

—From the new wireless station of the navy department at Arlington frequent communication has been had with Colon, a distance of 2,000 miles, and this month an effort will be made to exchange messages between the station and the scout cruiser Salem 3,000 miles out in the Atlantic. With the rapid development of the wireless, it will not be many years before it is possible to send a message through the ether clear around the globe.—Somerville Journal.

SEVERAL GAINS IN CONTEST

Large Increases Daily by Mr. Bowditch That Count

25 MORE DAYS OF COUPON

Since Monday Mr. Bowditch has been doing the biggest work in the Washington Inauguration contest and daily gains of 600 or 700 are sure to count. Today his friends have forwarded 770 votes, making a total gain this week of 2,319. His grand total is 4,620, only 925 behind Mr. DeNormandie.

None of the first five in the list report gains today, but they have not been idle. Several down the line made gains. Joseph Barber of Elm avenue added 125 and moved up thirteen numbers. Smaller gains were made by Harry Burr, Paul Blackmur, Jr., S. F. Nutting, Lloyd Lewis, Olof Carlberg, Fred M. Dolan and L. Lindville.

A limited number of Daily Ledgers with coupons are for sale at wholesale prices at the Daily Ledger office, but candidates should keep in mind the subscription certificates which are good for 1,000 votes each. These are issued to both old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Candidates will need a few of these to win.

TAFT MAY ATTEND.

It would not surprise those who have followed the personal relations of the two men if President Taft would remain in Washington to attend the inaugural ball of his successor. During the heat of the campaign, following one of Roosevelt's attacks on President Taft, it will be remembered that Gov. Wilson spoke in the highest terms of the President. This has not been forgotten by Mr. Taft.

Following the last inauguration, President Roosevelt went directly to his train, but in this instance Mr. and Mrs. Taft might be persuaded to remain in spite of the difference in political faith between the President and his Democratic successor.

In the meantime, Washington is already, and the Nation soon will be, agog over the great approaching social event. Whether it is held in the Pension Hall or the magnificent Capitol Building, there is no doubt that it will be as beautiful and attractive a gathering as this country has ever seen.

ANOTHER PRIZE.

Again on Monday, Jan. 13, at 9 A. M. a prize will be awarded to the candidate who makes the largest gain for the week of Jan. 6—13.

THE LAST COUPON.

The last coupon in this contest will be printed in the issue of Saturday, Feb. 8, and the polls will close a few days later. A great hustle is expected during the last days of the contest.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN

BOSTON AND VICINITY

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

John Drew, the leading American exponent of light comedy types, may always be expected in one of the brilliant comedies that gladden his public. He is playing a two weeks' engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre in "The Perplexed Husband" by Alfred Sutro. This four-act comedy created a great sensation in London when it was first produced this year because of its satirical attack upon woman suffrage and the amusing situations that arise when "the new woman" is confronted with that almost unknown being, "the new man." It would not be quite correct to call "The Perplexed Husband" a problem comedy. When Mr. Drew first appeared in it at The Empire Theatre, New York, where each year he seems to quietly usher in the theatrical season, the dramatic critics were agreed in their opinion that Mr. Drew has not had in recent years such a sparkling and timely vehicle in which to demonstrate his fine ability as a polished actor.

The story has to do with a London ten merchant, a conventional representative of the upper class business man, who returns home after a lengthy trip to find his home has been turned topsy-turvy. During his absence, his wife, who is a nice home body, has become acquainted with two advanced thinkers, a woman who is jealously fighting for the rights of her sex, and a man proclaimed "the master," who would much rather lecture than work for a living. Under their influence the wife falls in with a new set of ideas, and thinks that she has been living all this time with a false standard. No longer will she be a parasite, a petted plaything, a human doll. She will break the shackles of her sex and from now on be firm in her determination to "live her own life." As a first step she does not meet her husband upon his arrival, and moves her personal belongings to a distant part of the house. Amazement and consternation of the husband, as portrayed by Mr. Drew is most amusing. Not only can he not understand this attitude of his "loving wife," but fails to understand why her two friends should be living in his home and at the same time turning her against him. It is a situation that his experience does not tell him how to meet. At first he storms and threatens without the slighest effect. His wife is not affected by this.

BOSTON THEATRE.

The biggest thing scenically ever attempted upon a stage is what is said about "The Garden of Allah," which will be seen at the Boston Theatre on Monday, January 13th, for the first time in this city. The play is a dramatization of the novel of the same name by Robert Hichens. The locale is the desert of Sahara and its environs to the north. The story briefly told, deals with a Trappist monk who becomes wearied of the monastery and yields to his natural impulse. He wanders off into Morocco and its environs, and at a dance hall in Biskra meets and falls in love with a wanderer like himself—but one of the female persuastion who confesses she is a gypsy. He constitutes himself her protector, which eventually leads to love and marriage. Their adventures in the desert and the discovery by the wife that her husband is a monk who has broken his vow to the church—her renunciation and his return to the monastery, form a story of absorbing interest.

The pictures of the Orient, its camels, horses and other animals of the desert, its melange of Eastern peoples and Occidentals, its vision of the desert and its luxuriant gardens are fascinating and far in advance of everything ever attempted heretofore upon the stage.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

The premiere of Wolf-Ferrari's "The Jewels of the Madonna," an event which is being awaited with more eagerness than any other among the several promised for this season at the Boston Opera House, is now definitely set for Friday evening, Jan. 17. Hitherto, in the year since it first saw the footlights, the work has been sung only in Chicago, Philadelphia and New York on this continent, for previously it has belonged to the repertory of the Chicago Opera Company. In Germany, Italy and England it has won most enviable success and next summer will witness its introduction to Paris, when Miss Garden will create Maliella, a role which might have been hers if she had thought it worth while, when Mr. Dippel first staged the opera in Chicago.

Just as the composer, himself the offspring of a German-Italian marriage, combines the two nationalities in his temperamental makeup, so does the opera incline toward the rich modern harmonies of German opera in the orchestration, while at the same time retaining a flow of melody distinctly Italian. For this reason it has an equally strong appeal to the adherents of either faction. In Berlin Wolf-Ferrari has been accused of being too Italian and in Italy his Tuetonic tendencies have been declared to be the strongly predominating ones.

Like Charpentier, the composer of "Louise," Wolf- Ferrrari writes his own libretti as well as his scores and so for this reason the music is wedded to the text in a fashion otherwise almost impossible. In "The Jewels of the Madonna" he discloses phases in the lower walks of Neapolitan life, pictures all aglow with wonderful effects in scenic as well as orchestral color, street scenes of almost photographic verity. Above all he tells a story which grips and interests throughout to the accompaniment of something which is a rarity in modern opera—a continuous flow of melody.

Again as was the case in "Louise" the street scenes call for a very long cast of characters and almost the entire strength of the organization will appear.

The other bills for the week are: Monday, "Pelleas et Melisande. Wednesday "Carmen" "Haensel und Gretel." Saturday matinee in conjunction with "Cavalleria Rasticana." Saturday evening "Aida."

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

One of the biggest novelties of the season will be presented at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week, in "At the Movies," a spectacular comedy of life in the moving picture theatres, by Hamish McLaurin. In "The Movies," Mr. McLaurin has hit upon a phase of life found in every city and town in the country, and one that abounds in humor. This comedy is presented by a large cast of character actors, all the types one finds any day if he cares to journey to a picture palace, being depicted with a rare fidelity of life. The piece is in three scenes, showing in turn the exterior of the theatre with the crowd bustling about and preparing to enter to see the show; the rear of the theatre, and finally the interior of the theatre itself. In this last scene is introduced a burlesque film taken especially for this production, and entitled, "For Loves' Own Sweet Sake," which is a screamingly funny travesty on the impossible and absurdly ridiculous love stories that form the principal attraction in the picture theatres. The flossy ticket seller; the dreamy piano player, the inebriated gentleman, the shopper with her baby, the tough boy and girl, in short, every peculiar denizen of "The Movies" is shown true to life. The result is a comedy that abounds in laughs from start to finish, and which is really out of the ordinary. Other big features of a splendid bill will be Tim McMahon and Edith Chappelle, who have not appeared at this house in years, in their latest comedy sketch, "How Hubby Missed the Train;" Linden Beckwith, the magnetic mistress of melody; Four Cliftons, muscular marvels from the Olympia, Paris; Rosa Crouch, and George Welch, liveliest of singers and dancers; Bowman Brothers, the blue grass minstrel boys; Burr and Hope, in "A Lady, A Lover, and A Lamp;" Merlin and his pack of cards; Jed and Ethel Dooley, comedy cycling marvels; and Pathe's Weekly, with all the world's news in pictures.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

John Craig is always on the watch for novelties for Boston theatre-goers, and he has secured "The New Sin," one of the most-talked-about plays of the day, for next week at the Castle Square. It was produced in London a few months ago, was immediately brought over to New York, and has created a sensation wherever it has been produced. The play is a curiosity in its way, for it contains only seven characters, and all are men.

"The New Sin" has a plot that is best revealed by the action of the play and by its characters, and therefore there is no need of giving it a summary. It deals with salient features of the life of today, its characters are real living human beings, and it holds the persistent interest of the audience to the very end. Hilary Cutts, its leading character, is a strikingly original personage, with unusual views of life and he is certain to become one of the principal figures in the drama of the twentieth century. The play, more over, contains plenty of humor.

The dialogue of "The New Sin" is strong and virile, and the play as a whole when it receives its first Boston performances at the Castle Square on Monday, is almost assured on an immediate success. The leading role of Hilary Cutts will be played by John Craig, with Wilson Melrose, Donald Meek, George Henry Trader and Walter Walker in the other principal characters.

MOTOR BOAT SHOW.

Each year shows an added interest, not only on the part of the enthusiast but the general public as well, in the annual Motor Boat & Engine Show in Boston. Aside from the regular attractions which have always made the Motor Boat Show in this city of more ordinary interest, Manager Chester I. Campbell, this year promises to present a number of novelties and unique exhibits which are bound to prove of absorbing interest to all interested in motor boats and power boating.

The show which will be held in Mechanics building, Feb. 1 to 8 inclusive, will easily surpass in magnitude all its predecessors, for already there is hardly an inch of space left in the large halls which has not been either assigned or spoken for by leading manufacturers of motor boats, engines and accessories. As a boat show it will eclipse anything ever held in this country, while there will be the usual varied display of marine engines.

There will be a great showing of new designs both in speed launches, day cruisers, and shippy little seagoing vessels. The motor boat show presents a splendid opportunity for those who are contemplating either the purchase of a motor boat or the enjoyment of a season afloat, for at the show they have an opportunity of seeing and comparing designs and construction of the crafts exhibited. The general public will find something of interest on ever hand and the accessory exhibit will be of more than ordinary interest for many new devices, such as lighting plants, storage batteries, ignition systems, oiling devices, and a thousand and one appurtenances, which go to make for pleasure in life afloat and shore, will be on view.

MRS. FISKE COMING.

Jan. 20 Mrs. Fiske, on whose shoulders rests so gracefully the mantle of American stage leadership, is to begin an engagement of two weeks only, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees, at the Hollis Street Theatre. It has been two years since Mrs. Fiske was last seen in Boston and this added to the fact that she brings this time one of the greatest successes of her brilliant career, "The High Road," by Edward Sheldon, should make the engagement as memorable as was that of her revival of "Becky Sharp," in which her last local appearnces were made. "The High Road" is just closing a most successful engagement in New York where it has been voted one of the most vigorous and interesting American plays produced in many years. Mrs. Fiske herself has probably never before recived such unanimous and enthusiastic encomiums, her characterization of Mary Page being acclaimed as one of the greatest and most appealing contributions known to the stage of her time.

ELKS GUESTS AT THE THEATRE

Management at Kincaide's Makes Special Effort For Them

LATER LUNCH AT CLUB HOUSE

Quincy lodge of Elks to the number of about 150 were the guests of their brother Elk, Col. Henry L. Kincaide, Thursday evening at his new theatre, where they enjoyed an exceptionally fine program, including three good moving pictures, one of which was a double roll, entitled "The Vengeance of Fate" and was most interesting. The others were "A guilty conscience" and "Jim works his way through college."

The vaudeville acts on the program opened with some clever work by a magician, during which the quickness of his hand deceived the eyes and some unusually good acrobat and tumbling work by Zarrell Brothers, who are certainly wonders in this line of work

Then there came Jerome and Lewis, colored sketch artists in a laughable sketch, Kelley and Goodwin in a side splitting sketch and who the large audience repeatedly recalled by spontaneous applause Their allusion to some of the well known members of Quincy lodge added to the merriment.

The king pin of the evening however was the Lilliputian wonder, Princess Suzanne, who is 27 years old and but 32 inches tall. She is a most accomplished actress and as she came upon the stage one had the idea that she was little more than a child. Her quick change of costume on the stage and her tight wire walking was a wonder.

This was all on the regular program, but Manager Wardwell had arranged another feature for the Elks. The sound of a distant bell was heard and as the strokes tolled out the hour of 11, that mystic hour in Elkdom, the curtain again rose disclosing a massive clock with illuminated dial with the hands pointing to the hour of 11.

The door at the bottom of the clock opened and from it stepped Miss Theresa Wholey of Neponset who sang "Our Absent Brother" As the closing words "Should Auld Acquaintance be Forgot" was reached the audience rose and united in singing the words of the familiar air. It was a very pretty feature and a fitting close of the evenings entertainment.

As soon as the entertainment was over, the Elks hiked it for the club house on Foster street where "Tony" Thompson had prepared something for the inner man. This included sandwiches, potato salad, sauer kraut, oyster stew, crackers and cheese and hot coffee.

Then the Elks gathered in the parlors and talked over the coming grand ball, determining that they would do their part to make it the best yet, which means considerable.

Col. Kincaide and Manager Wardwell came in while the banquet was in progress and were heartily congratulated upon their fine and well appointed amusement house, and with the excellent program that had been presented.

VICTOR JOHNSON BURIED.

The funeral of Victor Johnson was held Thursday afternoon and services were conducted by Rev. Carl Rydstrom of the Swedish M. E. church. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery. The deceased died at the Quincy City Hospital Jan. 6 from cancer. He was a well known Swedish resident of this city and was a granite cutter by trade. Shortly after he developed his sickness he was admitted to the City Home. Being improved he was discharged. About three weeks ago he was again admitted and when his illness became serious he was removed to the hospital where he died. He was unmarried.

The Young Man of the Bridge

By DOROTHEA HALE

In Constantinople there has always been, since its conquest by the Turks, a miscellaneous population. Persians, Greeks, races of western and southern Europe are mingled together, besides Moors from northern Africa. Some of these peoples form colonies among themselves and continue the customs of their native countries. Consequently there are a great many queer customs in Constantinople.

Among these customs perhaps the strangest is betrothal and marriage among the Moors. There is no such thing as a courtship among them. Marriages are arranged by contract between the parents of the groom and the bride, who do not see each other until they are married. Yet the human heart in these people beats the same as among other races. It may be well for a bride if she has not met some man to whom she has given her heart, for, fancy free, she may fall in love with her husband or at least become attached to him as is natural between those who live and bring up children together. But woe to the young girl who has seen the man who has inspired her with a grand passion.

The marriage ceremony among these people is also peculiar, as will appear in the case of a young Moorish girl called Ayxa, who was betrothed to a young man named Muley Abdul by her parents, but who had fallen in love with a young man she had seen but once. The young, especially girls on the threshold of womanhood, are prone to succumb before a single glance of a man who captivates their fancy, and southern races are more liable to this than colder blooded peoples of the north. Ayxa in crossing that much frequented bridge uniting two parts of Constantinople, stopped to look down over the side into the water. While doing so she uncovered her face, since there was no man below to see it. Presently turning her eyes aside she saw a young man also leaning over the side, but instead of looking into the water he was gazing at her. She saw the lovelight in his eyes and unconsciously returned it.

Covering her face, she pursued her way. But from that moment she was changed. Her young and excitable being saw in all about her that face alone. At least it was all that excited a response in her. Indeed, it became a part, the greater part, of her being.

It was at this time that negotiations were entered upon for her marriage with Muley Abdul. When she heard of them she had not met the young man on the bridge, and they did not especially interest her—that is, they were not repulsive to her. After the meeting they became a horror to her. But she could do nothing to prevent the union that awaited her. She had met the young man of the bridge but once, and even if she had seen him often and they had become lovers it would not have made any difference. She would have married the man provided for her and that without having seen him.

The arrangements for the marriage having been completed, the parents of the bride and the groom, who were both Moors, prepared for the wedding, to be celebrated as it would have been celebrated in Tangier or Tripoli. Ayxa, as was the custom, was to be carried to her husband at night. The street in the Moorish quarter through which the bride would pass was lined with persons to see her pass. She was at home with her father and mother and the woman who had nursed her from babyhood. Languidly she bade her parents goodby and left them, going with her nurse, who in accordance with the ceremony was to conduct her to her husband.

And now comes the strangest part of this strange custom. The nurse left the house, carrying a box which contained the bride, placed it on a mule standing before the door, then led the animal down the street. Moving slowly to the sounds of wierd music, the old woman, the mule and the bride within the box proceeded on their way to the home of the groom. As they passed house after house friends emerged to salute the bride.

None knew the feelings of Ayxa, for she had not confided them even to her mother. What desperate resolve was in her fierce Moorish bosom she kept hidden there. A bride who had loved another, on her way to an unknown husband, had been found at the door of his house dead in the box that enclosed her, by her own hand. Indeed there were those along the route who, remembering this, shuddered lest the casing concealed a corpse. But nearly all were as loud in their congratulations as if Ayxa was going to the husband of her choice.

At last the home of the groom was reached. He was not at the door to receive her, but waited for her within. When a living bride stepped from the box there were those in the throng who breathed a sigh of relief.

Ayxa was conducted by her mother-in-law to the room where her husband awaited her. There she was left to enter alone. She was expected to advance toward him and throw herself at his feet. Instead of doing so she stopped short and fixed her gaze upon him. Then she sank upon the floor in a swoon.

In a few moments she revived to find herself in the arms of the man she had married. He was looking down upon her with love and delight in his eyes.

He was the young man she had met on the bridge.

INQUEST OVER DONOVAN CASE

Malden Police Prepared to Bring It Before Court

DISTRICT ATTORNEY IS BUSY

Belief That He Has Decided Matter Should Go Before Grand Jury—Jennings Said to Have Been With Woman When She Died—Pertinent Questions For Him to Answer

Malden, Mass., Jan. 10.—The Malden police say they are ready for the inquest into the cause of the death of Mildred Donovan, the Revere woman who left her home on New Year's eve with James B. Jennings, known as "Kid Carter," and whose body was found in Malden the next afternoon.

The date of the inquest has not been fixed, but it will be held the first of next week in the Malden court. Judge Sweetser will preside.

Following a conference with the Malden police, District Attorney Higgins of Middlesex county announced that there will be an inquest into the death of Mrs. Donovan.

The fact that the district attorney has in his possession the full medical report, including that of Professor Whitney of Cambridge, and that he has kept the report a secret for several days, has led to the belief that he considers the case one for the grand jury.

The Malden police assert they can prove Jennings was with Mrs. Donovan when she died. They do not take any stock in the theory that the woman fell on her face and died of strangulation from blood that flowed from her nose.

If she did fall on her face in an epileptic attack, how did it come that she was found lying on her back with her clothing straightened out, her arms by her side? is being asked.

These are questions the police will ask "Kid Carter' when they eventually confront him:

How was the bruise on Millie Donovan's nose inflicted? Was she stricken with an epileptic fit? Was she struck by some person?

These questions will solve the mystery. And these answers must be verified by the police.

Then the man proven to have been with Mrs. Donovan when she died, if he says she was stricken with a fit and fell, will be asked to explain why he did not go for help, and why he left her body lying in the bushes, without notifying anyone.

PLANNING LONG HIKE

Suffragettes to March From New York City to Washington

New York, Jan. 10.—A march of suffragettes volunteering from all parts of New York state with "On to Washington" as the program will be begun in this city Feb. 10, according to announcement made last night by Rosalie Jones, leader of the "Votes For Women" band which recently carried a message for "the cause" from New York to Governor Sulzer at Albany.

Welcoming recruits in five states as they proceed southward the women plan to reach Washington in time to add themselves to the ranks of marchers in the woman suffrage parade on the day before Woodrow Wilson's inauguration.

DIED OF HEART FAILURE

But Nash's End May Have Been Hastened by Sleeping Draught

London, Jan. 10.—A verdict of "death from heart failure" was returned at the coroner's inquest on the body of Paul Nash, United States consul general at Budapest.

The doctor who had attended Nash was called as a witness and testified that his patient had taken a sleeping draught to combat the insomnia from which he had been suffering and that this possibly hastened death. Nash's heart, however, was in bad condition.

The late consul general's body is to be cremated here and the ashes sent to Cambridge, Mass.

Gleason Loses Suit Against Mrs. Thaw

New York, Jan. 10.—Attorney John B. Gleason lost his suit against Mrs. Mary C. Thaw to recover $53,000 counsel fees for defending her son, Harry K. Thaw, at his first trial for murder. The federal court ordered a decision in Mrs. Thaw's favor, with costs.

Auto Kills Child on Sled

Everett, Mass., Jan. 10.—Agnes Hinds, 6 years old, was crushed to death by a six-ton truck at Bradford and Main streets when she coasted down an embankment in front of a house to the street directly in the path of the big machine.

Dogs Provide Skin For Burned Boy

St. Louis, Jan. 10.—The skins of the stomachs of eight puppies have been grafted on the legs of Ralph Kerls, 7 years old, of this city, who was burned, but five more dogs will be sacrificed to provide more skin.

—The foreign trade of this country, both in exports and imports, was bigger in November than in any previous month of our history. The exports ran up to the enormous figures of $277,898,681, and the imports, though unprecedented, were only moderately more than one-half of that. There were very heavy increases in the breadstuffs, cotton and mineral oil exports.—Banker and Tradesman.

HIGH BOYS WANT BANKS

On Their Track, Lack Material But Are Hopeful

The boys of the Quincy High school track team want banks built in the High school, but the yhave not the material. They have made a very good showing so far and want to make a better showing next spring. An indoor track will accomplish that result.

TABLE OF AGGREGATES.

One of the many things to be found in the Assessors books, is what is known as the table of aggregates. This table gives in detail many things that do not appear when the tax rate is announced, for it is the last table compiled. The tables for 1912 was as follows:

CIVIL SERVICE.

A competitive examination for Special Agent male in the State Bureau of statistics, salary, $1,200 per year, will be held Feb. 6. From the eligible list established by this examination, names will be certified to fill two vacancies, and others as they occur.

To be eligible for this position a man should have had practical experience in the collection and correlation of statistical data, and he should also be capable of preparing the results of investigations in the form of written reports.

The examination will consist of a test in statistics, including the practical handling of statistics as outlined above; also arithmetic, handwriting, accuracy, spelling, and a sworn statement of training and experience.

For one of these vacancies special aptitude is sought in securing and handling data pertaining to labor problems; for the other vacancy, special aptitude in securing and handling data pertaining to manufacturing industries. In each case the examination will be framed to test such aptitude. Each applicant may elect to take whichever of the two examinations he desires.

Men desiring to take this examination may secure application blanks by applying, in person or by letter, at the office of the Civil Service Commission. Room 152, State House, Boston, Mass.

Applications may be filed at any time; but in order to appear at this examination, the application paper must be filled out and placed on file in the office of this Commission on or before Jan. 30, 1913.

—The limit of sensationalism in the pulpit would seem to have been reached by a Minneapolis clergyman, who recently invited two chorus girls from a burlesque theatre to dance the "turkey trot" and "grizzly bear" in the church on Sunday morning, to illustrate his sermon on the harmfulness of such dances. When the girls had finished, he observed "Now you have just seen how fashionable society carries on when it gets started." Even so there is no occasion for the pulpit to outbid fashionable society in sensationalism.—Milford Gazette.

DIVIDENDS OF 226 PERCENT

Paid In Last Four Years by First National Bank of New York

BAKER GIVES HIS TESTIMONY

Special Dividends For New Investments to Evade Law—Would Keep Depositors In Dark Regarding Nature of Securities—Power of Money Trust Committee Is Questioned

Washington, Jan. 10.—Enormous profits by the First National bank of New York city were recounted by George F. Baker, chairman of the board of directors of the bank, as a witness before the house money trust committee.

Baker furnished the committee with records showing that since its organization in 1863 with a capitalization of $500,000 the bank has made profits amounting to more than $80,000,000.

In the four years since 1908, Baker told the committee, the bank had paid dividends of 226 percent, or more than twice the total capitalization, which is now $10,000,000. When the capital was increased to that amount in 1901, a special dividend of $9,500,000 was declared, Baker said, to enable the stockholders to take up the additional investment.

In 1908, in order to provide $10,000,000 of cash for the organization of the First Securities company to take over the business "which the bank could not do under the law," Baker said, a special dividend of $10,000,000 was declared. This was in addition to the regular yearly dividends.

Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the committee, from the figures supplied by Baker, calculated that since he assumed the presidency of the First National, in 1873, that institution has paid dividends of 18,550 percent on its original capitalization.

Baker flatly opposed the suggestion made by Untermyer that national banks be required to make public their assets, in order that depositors and stockholders might know the nature of the securities held by the banks, the witness declaring he saw no possible good that could come of such a provision.

That there is no impropriety in one man holding directorship in two or more potentially competitive banks, railroads or other industrial corporations, was another stand taken by Baker. Untermyer reviewed with him a long list of railroads in which he was a director, some of which the lawyer held were potentially competing lines. Baker declared that it was rather an advantage to hold such directorships "because differences between the companies can thus be readily adjusted."

"Such a situation," he continued, "is often beneficial to all parties concerned."

The witness did not approve of the "voting trust" form of control of corporations by which the stockholders turn over their voting rights to voting trustees, but said he would not disapprove of it if stockholders desired.

What may become a test in the courts of the power of the committee in investigating the affairs of the national banks developed when the committee and the house unanimously directed the speaker to certify to the district attorney of the District of Columbia the case of George G. Henry, the New York banker, who refused to divulge the names of national officers who profited by the flotation of California Petroleum stock. The district attorney will be asked to proceed against Henry for contempt.

IN SERIOUS CONDITION

Duchess of Connaught Is Rushed to a Montreal Hospital

Montreal, Jan. 10.—No attempt was made at the Royal Victoria hospital to conceal the fact that the Duchess of Connaught, who was brought here from Ottawa, is in a serious condition as the result of an attack of peritonitis.

Physicians, however, say the trip to this city did not greatly fatigue her, and she passed a comfortable night.

Leopold's Daughters Win Suit

Brussels, Jan. 10.—The suit brought against the state by Princesses Louise, Clementine and Stephanie, daughters of the late King Leopold, for a larger share in their father's fortune, was ended by an offer of $7,520,000 to settle their claim.

Paper Rate Increases Held Up

Washington, Jan. 10.—Proposed increases of about 10 percent in the freight rates on news print paper from Sault Ste Marie, Ont., to destinations in the United States were suspended by the interstate commerce commission from Jan. 11 till July 11.

Gunner Killed as Gun Bursts

London, Jan. 10.—During experiments at the military depot at Shoeburyness, a heavy gun burst, killing a gunner and seriously wounding a captain and two other men.

FOR DESTRUCTION OF MAIL

Two Suffragettes Are Sent to Jail For Eight Months Each

London, Jan. 10.—Long sentences were passed on two of the militant suffragettes, many of whom, in recent months, have engaged in a campaign of destruction of the mails.

May Billinghurst and Louisa Gay, two of the first to be arrested in connection with these outrages, were brought up for trial at the Old Bailey and condemned to eight months' imprisonment each.

The evidence showed that letter boxes throughout the centre and West End of London had been damaged, together with their contents, by use of acids and by other means. Many valuable documents had been destroyed in this way. These included money orders, contracts, checks and banknotes.

CREW PROBABLY DROWNED

Steamer Snowden Range Believed to Have Been Lost at Sea

Philadelphia, Jan. 10.—The general belief here that the British freighter Snowdon Range, which sailed from this port for Leith, Scotland, Nov. 23, has been lost at sea with all hands, about thirty men, received practical confirmation when the officers of the steamer Vesterland reported sighting a vessel, believed to be the Snowden Range, in a helpless and damaged condition about 700 miles west of Scotland early Dec. 19.

The Snowden Range is now more than a month overdue. Until the arrival of the Vesterland not a word had been received concerning the whereabouts of the craft. It was three weeks ago when the Vesterland sighted the disabled vessel.

PASSED AS A GIRL FOR EIGHTEEN YEARS

High School Student Shifts From Skirts to Boy's Clothing

Victor, Col., Jan. 10.—After masquerading since childhood as a girl, Irene Moynahan, 18, until Christmas a student in the Victor high school, has been found to be a boy and is now on his way dressed in boy's clothing to join his father and brother in Bisbee, Ariz.

Mrs. Timothy Moynahan, Irene's mother, refuses to give any reason for the deception other than that she "wanted a girl." The father and brother, according to the mother, did not know anything about the deception and they were to be informed for the first time in a letter that Irene was taking with him to Arizona.

The facts in the case were discovered by Marshal Weincke of La Junta, who arrested Irene on a train on suspicion that he was a fugitive trying to get out of the state disguised as a girl.

CUT OFF BY FLOOD

Wheeling Isolated by Ohio River Overflowing Its Banks

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 10.—The Ohio river has reached a stage slightly under forty-four feet and this city is in the midst of a disastrous flood.

Railroads, trolley lines and steamboats are all out of commission and the city is practically isolated from the outside world.

In some sections of the city the natural gas supply is cut off and much suffering has been caused. A majority of the iron and steel mills have been forced to suspend by the high water and upwards of 10,000 men are idle.

NOT TO QUIT BENCH

Justice Holmes Declares Rumors Are Without Foundation

Washington, Jan. 10.—Emphatic denial that he considers retiring from the United States supreme court was made by Associate Justice Holmes.

"There is nothing to it whatever," he said. "I have not considered the question in any manner. The report is without foundation." Justice Holmes reached the retirement age last month.

Train Decapitates Alderman

Boston, Jan. 10. — Alderman Charles A. Furness of Everett, a switchman, aged 52, was killed instantly in the freight yards of the Boston and Maine railroad in Charlestown by a train. His head was severed.

Confessed Murder to Actor

Vienna, Jan. 10.—A farmer is on trial for murder of which he long was not suspected, because an actor, made up as a clergyman, obtained a confession from him while the farmer was sick.

Mobile Theatre Burns

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 10.—Fire destroyed the Mobile theatre, and in fighting the $200,000 blaze Fireman Serda was killed and two other firemen were probably fatally injured.

Engineer Killed by Elevator

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 10.—Samuel F. Hall, chief engineer of the Norton company of Massachusetts, was crushed to death in the well of an elevator.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

COLD CHICKEN DAINTIES.

WHEN there is a quantity of cold chicken in the house it may be made up into various delicious luncheon or tea dishes as follows:

Chicken Fritters.—Cut up cold roasted or boiled chicken in small pieces Season with salt, pepper and a piece of fresh lemon. Let the meat stand one hour; then make a fritter batter and stir the pieces into it. Drop it by spoonfuls into boiling fat and fry until a light brown. Drain and serve.

A Fine Hash.

Chicken Hash.—Cut the chicken from the bones and divide it into small neat pieces. Heat the gravy left over, diluting it with hot water or with weak stock if the supply is too small. Season with salt, pepper, Worcestershire sauce or ketchup and put the meat into the gravy when this is boiling hot. When the meat has simmered in it for ten minutes add a tablespoonful of cranberry or currant jelly, thicken with a little browned flour and serve either on toast or fried bread, with triangles of this arranged around the edge of the dish.

A Dainty Meat Loaf.

Chicken Loaf.—Take cold boiled chicken and separate the meat from the bones. Take off all skin and cut into thin slices, mixing the light and dark parts together. Season with salt and pepper. Take the cold broth in which the chicken was boiled, heat it, pour it on the meat and mix well. Shape this like a loaf of bread, wrap it in a cloth and press with a heavy weight for a few hours. When served cut in thin slices.

Highly Seasoned Croquettes.

Chicken Croquettes.—Take one pint of finely chopped cooked chicken, one tablespoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper, one cupful of cream or chicken stock, one tablespoonful of flour, four eggs and one teaspoonful of onion juice, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, one pint of crumbs and three tablespoonfuls of butter. Put the cream or stock on to boil. Mix flour and butter together and stir into the boiling cream; then add chicken and season. Boil two minutes and add two of the eggs well beaten. Take from the fire and set away to cool. When cold shape and fry, adding parsley.

OPIUM FIEND PAYS THE DEATH PENALTY

Woman Publicly Shot at Shanghai on Governor's Order

Shanghai, Jan. 10.—Death as a punishment for opium smoking was meted out to a woman of this city who persisted in the use of the drug despite the stringent manifesto issued by the government on Christmas day, prohibiting the people from indulging in the habit.

By order of the governor of the province, the woman was taken to a public place yesterday afternoon and shot, a large crowd witnessing the execution.

The manifesto issued by the Chinese government expressed the desire for the suppression of the evil in order to save the people from a life of degradation, but at the same time voiced the fear that although the government was in earnest, the people would try to evade the law.

EXPLORERS ARE MISSING

Fears That Stranze and Companions Perished In Arctic Wastes

London, Jan. 10.—Captain Berg, who is destined to command the main German Arctic expedition, received a telegram from Captain Ritchel which says that the Herzog Ernest is frozen in at Treurenburg bay and that no news has been received from Lieutenant Stranze and companions, who left the ship in September on a sledging expedition. The message says:

"The ship's crew left the Herzog Ernest on Sept. 9. The oceanographer, Dr. Rudiger, was left behind at the Wijde bay station with a frozen foot. He had provisions until January."

HIDING IN MEXICO

Paris Police Receive News of $6,000,000 Swindler From Belgium

Paris, Jan. 10.—Information has reached the Paris police that Nestor Wilmart, who is charged in Belgium with the embezzlement of $6,000,000 and was reported in October to have committed suicide by leaping from the liner Niagara at sea, is hiding in Mexico.

Wilmart was president of the Ghent Terneuzen railway in Belgium, and is accused of fraudulently duplicating a $6,000,000 issue of bonds. Inability of bondholders to redeem their coupons led to an investigation, which revealed the fraud.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

TEACHERS ABSENCE

Since the opening of the New Year there has been a greater number of teachers absent on account of illness than for many years and there has hardly been a school that has not had a substitute for one or more days.

THE SCHOOL CALENDAR.

Those who observed the public school calendar as printed in Wednesday's issue of the Ledger may have noticed that it is changed quite materially from last year. The present year will have four terms instead of three. The period between Jan. 1 and the close of the school year has been divided into three terms each eight weeks long, instead of two separated by the week before Easter as has been customary. This change accords with the custom in a great many other cities and towns of the state and is calculated to avoid long terms in the latter part of the year. The first term of 16 weeks following the summer vacation is always the least fatiguing for the teachers and children. By separating the balance of the school year into eight week periods each separated by a vacation of one week it will be found that there will be less fatigue and exhaustion than has been the case previously.

The new calendar also provides for a two weeks vacation between the first and second including both Christmas and New Years.

EVENING SCHOOLS.

The new term of the evening classes at the High school as well as all the industrial classes opened on Monday. The schools for non-English speaking people also resumed their sessians to complete the term of 40 nights. The same teachers are in charge of the classes as during the past term and excellent work is expected to result.

CONTINUATION SCHOOLS.

A bill for the establishment of continuation schools will be introduced in the legislature this year and it is felt that it will be quite likely to pass. The bill will provide in substance that in any city or town in which the school committee shall have established part time day schools satisfactory to the Board of Education, children between the ages of 14 and 16 years who have left school and are in regular employment may be required by the school committee to attend those schools for from four to eight hours per week, between the hours of 8 A. M. and 5 P. M.

The sort of teaching provided will be left to the various school committees, subject to the general supervision and approval of the State Board of Education In some instances it may be of a definitely vocational sort and in most cases it will doubtless be correlated with the children's work. There will probably be a considerable variety of method in order to suit different industries and different intellectual needs. The primary aim will be to secure the continued development of the children during those two most important years.

SALESMANSHIP COURSE.

The second series of the course in business methods and salesmanship, under the direction of Nathaniel C. Fowler, Jr., its originator, will open shortly at the Boston Y. M. C. Union. There will be ten sessions—eight demonstrations of actual selling, business-doing, and position-getting, in which about 200 of Boston's leading manufacturers and merchants, and their employees, will take part, appearing upon Union hall stage, which will be set to represent factory and business offices. Several of the leading business firms of Boston have purchased from a dozen to even fifty tickets for their salesmen and other employees.

At the opening session, Jan. 14, the relation of the school to business will be discussed by Director Fowler; President Locke of the Union; Lieutenant Governor Luce; Dr. Snedden, state commissioner of education; Dr. Orr, deputy commissioner of education; Dr. Carver, professor of economics at Harvard University; Dr. Dyer superintendent of schools; Dr. Thompson, assistant superintendent of schools; and Chairman Ellis of the school committee. The sessions will close on March 16 with a lecture by Dr. Hugo Munsterberg, professor of psychology at Harvard University.

IN NEW QUARTERS.

In keeping with the pace that has been set by Boston's leading commercial houses and industries for the great business advance which is predicted by experts in the various lines for the year 1913, the Wood, Putnam & Wood Co., advertising agents, have moved to new and larger offices on the ninth floor of the new Minot building at 111 Devonshire street.

The company has added many service departments, until it is one of the most thoroughly organized and equipped agencies in the country. It has now the advantage, also of offices specially designed and equipped to enable all the departments of the organization to work together with greatest efficiency and convenience.

Founded in 1904 by Allen H. Wood, who has been president since the incorporation of the company two years ago; the late John Wood, his brother, and Marion V. Putnam, treasurer, the agency has grown rapidly and constantly.

Most of its business is conducted on a national scale with advertising placed in newspapers, magazines and billboards throughout the United States and Canada, and even in foreign countries.

The service given its clients by the agency includes not only the preparation and placing of advertisements, but the planning of merchandising and selling campaigns, designing trademarks and seeing that they are properly registered, making trade investigations, determining markets, preparing package designs, booklets, catalogues, poster and car card designs, etc.

NEW MAGAZINE.

A new monthly publication is the Pilgrim magazine whose mission is to help develop plans for the fitting celebration of the three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims. It is published at Boston, the editor being H. Grattan Donnelly, well known in Plymouth, where he has been a summer visitor for some years. Clubs and societies are getting into line for this celebration, which ought to be made a national event, so closely identified as it is with the history of the whole country. The "Pilgrim Magazine" can do good for this object, being an official organ where all interested can express their views and learn of the progress of the movement.

UTILIZED MULE'S HEELS

Man Whose Animal Battered Down Door Is Sent to Jail

Philadelphia, Jan. 10.—Peter Kinsler sought the aid of a mule's heels to get into a house he had been forbidden to enter. Peter got thirty days in the county prison for it.

Kinsler's mother lives with Mrs. Elizabeth Boyle at 3715 Brandywine street. He sought to visit his mother, but Mrs. Boyle refused admittance. Then Peter unhitched one of his mules and backed the animal up against the Boyle door; then he tickled the mule and the mule's good hind legs did the rest. The door went down in splinters and Peter proudly entered.

A policeman heard the racket and ran to the Brandywine street house. Peter was conversing with his mother, but Mrs. Boyle told the policeman what had happened and Peter was soon in the lockup. The mule went unpunished.

INVESTIGATION IN ORDER

Mrs. Gray Charges That Diseased Beef Is Sold to Indians

Washington, Jan. 10.—Sales of diseased beef to Crow Indians, with knowledge of interior department officials, was charged by Mrs. Helen P. Gray, an investigator, before the senate Indian affairs committee hearing Senator Townsend's resolution to direct the interior department to send the Crow records to the attorney general for investigation.

Mrs. Gray declared that beef or cattle with lumpy jaw sold to the Indians by lessees of their lands had produced lumpy jaw in the Indians. Townsend declared he was convinced gross frauds had been practised on the Indians, and that investigation should be made.

MAIL BAGS FOUND BURIED IN DEBRIS

Hidden by Robbers In an Abandoned Shoe Factory

Salem, N. H., Jan. 10.—Proof that there has been a successful post-office robbery in this vicinity was unexpectedly discovered when workmen, while engaged in clearing rubbish from an abandoned shoe factory building in North Salem, discovered several United States mail bags which had been cut open and the contents rifled.

The bags had been buried beneath a pile of debris about two years. The workmen had thrown one of them aside unrecognized when attention was attracted by several postal money orders which fell out.

Nearly a dozen money orders were discovered, the burglars in all probability deeming it unsafe to attempt to cash them. Several envelopes which had been registered were found torn open. The contents were missing. The officials at the Boston postoffice were notified and the local officers took the bags and papers, awaiting their further disposition.

THE PANTHER IS SAFE

Supply Ship Reports to Naval Department From Cuban Port

Washington, Jan. 10.—The naval repair ship Panther, for whose safety fears were felt, reported her arrival at Guantanamo late yesterday.

The Panther proceeded to Cape Cruz, on the southern coast of Cuba, and will be on duty for torpedo practice to be held in the Gulf of Guacanabo, as a part of the winter maneuvers of the Atlantic fleet.

Unfounded reports to the effect that the Panther was lost had caused scores of inquiries to be made at the navy department by relatives of the officers and 174 men aboard her.

JURY FAILS TO AGREE

Cannot Decide Whether Hammerstein Owes Stotesbury $39,960

New York, Jan. 10.—The suit brought by Edward T. Stotesbury, the Philadelphia banker, against Oscar Hammerstein, to recover $39,960, resulted in no verdict. After four hours' deliberation the jury in the United States district court reported a disagreement and was discharged.

Stotesbury contended the money he sued to recover was a loan. Hammerstein held it was a gratuitous contribution for the support of grand opera in Philadelphia.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 10.—The New Year's reception at the winter palace on Jan. 14 has been cancelled, owing to the illness of the empress and the dowager empress.

Bank Fails For Nearly $3,000,000

Marseilles, Jan. 10.—The banking house of Rodriquez Ely suspended, with liabilities estimated at nearly $3,000,000. An investigation will be made.

A Nervy Pickpocket

Paris, Jan. 10.—A street car pickpocket took $120 from a police inspector in uniform, stealing the officer's wallet, containing his men's weekly wages, from the inspector's coat tail pocket.

CANNOT HOLD OUT VERY LONG

Adrianople Reported Racked by Famine and Disease

BALKAN ENVOYS IN NO HURRY

Peace Parley Will Not Be Renewed Until Turkey Is Ready to Make Proposals Worth Considering—Ambassadors Hoping Adrianople Difficulty Will Solve Itself

London, Jan. 10.—The progress toward a resumption of the peace negotiations between the Balkan allies and the Turkish empire is slow. It may, however, be accelerated after yesterday's meeting at the foreign office of the European ambassadors, who are expected to agree on united action which they hope may put an end to the deadlock in the event that intervention should become necessary.

The delegates in the meantime are consulting in separate groups, but the allies do not appear anxious to convene another meeting of the conference until Turkey is ready to make proposals which promise a basis for fruitful discussion.

Dr. Daneff, the chief Bulgarian peace plenipotentiary, received cipher messages from the Bulgarian capital which represented conditions in Adrianople as appalling and the fall of the city is imminent.

The capitulation of Adrianople will, in the opinion of the Balkan plenipotentiaries, take place within a few days, either directly to the besieging forces, or through European pressure. Pending some fresh development the Balkan delegates are keeping in closest touch with the ambassadors because they are aware that some of the questions they have most at heart depend almost entirely on the will of the powers.

Meanwhile the ambassadorial conference is doing little, hoping that the Adrianople difficulty will solve itself in some manner, and thus make interference by the powers unnecessary. Moreover, the action of the ambassadors is hampered by the previous agreement that they must be unanimous in any decision requiring active interference.

Should the fall of Adrianople still be delayed, now that the conference is suspended, it might become imperative for Europe to intervene, otherwise Europe would lose the prestige entitling her to dictate her will in smaller matters, such as creating an autonomous Albania and partitioning the Ægean islands.

One suggestion is that, failing a better solution, Adrianople might be ceded to the powers, who could transfer it to the allies after permitting the Turkish garrison to depart with the honors of war, and guaranteeing other conditions, such as the preservation of religious and property rights to the Turks and the creation of special courts for the trial of civic disputes arising between the Mussulmans.

With regard to the condition of affairs in Adrianople, The Times correspondent says:

"According to letters from the Bulgarian lines before Adrianople, Turkish deserters, who are coming in every day, declare that sickness and disease are making havoc in the ranks of the surviving troops and citizens. There is reason to think that the food supply is by no means exhausted, but it is believed here that the Turkish heir apparent is in the beleaguered city."

Porte Stands Pat on Adrianople

Constantinople, Jan. 10.—The porte, according to official announcement, has sent a circular to the Turkish ambassadors abroad, intimating that unless the allies accept Turkey's peace proposals by the end of the week the Ottoman delegates will be invited to return to Constantinople immediately. The circular adds:

"Whatever happens, the porte is determined to maintain its attitude with regard to Adrianople and the Ægean islands, in view of the fact that sacrifices made in other directions have reached the extreme limit."

WILL EXPOSE "SYSTEM"

Sipp Says He Will Do All He Can to Aid District Attorney Whitman

Atlantic City, Jan. 10.—George A. Sipp, former New York hotel man, arrested on a felony charge for the New York police, has been freed and will plunge immediately, he says, into an exposure of the "system."

He has given himself into the hands of Assistant District Attorney Groehl of New York and refuses to be parted from him, even on the advice of his counsel. Sipp says he is going to do all in his power to aid District Attorney Whitman.

Cubans In Bloodless Duel

Havana, Jan. 10.—In consequence of an article in La Lucha criticising Senor Ferrara, the speaker of the house, the latter fought a duel with Miguel Coyula, one of the editors. Neither was hurt.

CITY REWARD NOT PAID YET

Only Provided For Payment on Apprehension

LEGAL QUESTION INVOLVED

It was generally supposed that at the time Officer Patrick A. Milford of Quincy and James E. Qualey of Braintree found the body of Louis G. Restelli, the murderer in the quarry hole that they would receive the reward offered by the city for the apprehension of the murderer, but up to the present time all they have received was the $100 offered by the Hardwick family for the finding of the dead body.

In looking up the City Council orders in the matter it appears that on Aug. 11, 1910 at a special meeting called for that purpose the City Council passed the following order:—

"That His Honor be and hereby is authorized to offer a reward of $500 for the apprehension of Louis G. Restelli."

Nov. 7, Councilman John D. Smith offered an order appropriating sum of $500 for the payment of the reward offered for the apprehension of Louis G. Restelli. This order was referred to the Mayor with the request that it be referred to the City Solicitor for his opinion as the rights of the city in the premises.

This was the last heard from it as no reply was received from the Mayor and it evidently slipped the mind of any Councilman to inquire further in the matter.

It will be noticed that the order for the reward, was for the apprehension of the murderer, and there was a question as to whether the finding of the dead body could be construed to mean the apprehension of the man. In the case of the reward by the reward by the Hardwick family, it was provided that if the murderer was apprehended a certain reward should be paid, and if the dead body was found a reward of $100 should be paid. This latter sum was promptly paid by the family.

BRIEFS

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the First Presbyterian church are to hold a social in the vestry next Friday evening.

Robert Fitzgerald will be the tenor soloist at the first concert of the Wollaston Glee club at the Wollaston Congregational church next Tuesday evening.

Rehearsals for the play "Mr. Bob" which is to be given by the Y. P. S. C. E. of the First Presbyterian church sometime next month have begun in earnest and a good cast has been secured and under the direction of Miss Georgie Michael promises to be one of the best of the season's events.

The Men's class of the Quincy Point church will meet, Sunday afternoon the topic will be "The eLaven of Today, Righteousness and unrighteousness." The class will meet at 5.45 o'clock, when moving picture views will be given as a preliminary to the discussion. All men are welcome.

☞The Revels—grand pageant—festive vaudeville—merry dancing.

UNION SERVICE.

Mrs. F. H. Morgan preached a strong and vigorous sermon at the Methodist church, Thursday evening. to an audience that taxed the seating capacity of the vestry. She spoke from the words found in Amos 4:12 "Prepare to meet thy God." She said in part: "We see warnings all about us. We need to give heed to the warnings of God. We see God when we stand and gaze into the heavens. We see God in the growth of the seed, in the bud and the flower and in every blade of grass that grows. We see God in His Divine Providences. In the sick chamber, in the going out of the loved one, in the Disciple of our lives we see God.

"We need to prepare to meet Him. We should prepare in character that we may be able to stand the test. Reputation is what people say about us. Character is what we are. It does not matter so much what people say about us but it does concern us what our character is. Character is what we are in God's sight. We should prepare our case that we may have a good advocate, one who can plead our case well. We should prepare for the judgment for we must all meet God there. We sing 'When the roll is called up yonder I'll Be there.' We shall all be there. Let us prepare to meet God." Rev. T. C. Martin offered prayer. The praise service was led by the pastor and Mrs. Orville Estes presided at the piano. The meetings have increased each evening both in interest and attendance. Rev. T. C. Martin of West Quincy will preach this evening. A most cordial invitation is extended to all to come in and share in the blessings which the services make possible.

DISTRICT COURT.

James H. Hattesly of Milton and Frank Tracy of Quincy were arraigned for drunkenness. Cases continued on probation until May 8 on payment of $3 costs each.

Ludviclea Janovitch was arraigned for assault on Paulins Tyzliewiez at Quincy. Case continued on personal recogniance until Saturday.

POEHLER WON FROM HINTZE BY WONDERFUL SPEED AT START

Opened Up a Gap of 102 Pins in the First Five Boxes and Still Kept Moving

Average For the Evening, Poehler 116.1--Hintze 109.3

Paul Poelher cinched his match with Hintze on the second roll in their 20 strings at the Coliseum alleys, Thursdoy night, rolling up a score of 1161 to 1093 for Hintze. In this second string, both men developed marked improvement over the showing at their first meeting at the Chelsea alleys, Monday night, when Poelher hit the pins for 1029 and Hintze for 985. Poelher went at the task in a cool and determined manner, and smoked throughout the contest. Hintze at the start, showed some little nervousness. He chewed gum all through.

Poelher had a good share of the luck, in the breaks. On his spares and strikes he made fine scores, but Hintze fell down bad in those departments and his clean ups on his strikes and spares was very small. Poelher's picking off of single pins was truly artistic. On strings two, three and four, Poelher cleaned up 293. William Galway on the Bolyston alleys, March 10, 1909, scored 381 in three consecutive strings which was accepted as a record. Poelher jumped into the lead at the start and topped in each of the first five strings, closing that session with a comfortable lead of 102 pins. Hintze took the next two, breaking the lead by 27, but then he stopped as the next string was a tie and the last two went to Poelher.

Poelher had 28 spares and five strikes and Hintze ahd 23 spares and five strikes. Poelher's high string was 138 and low, 95, with an average of 116.1. Hintze rolled for an average of 109.3 his high string being 120 and low, 95. The scores of both sessions by way of comparison and for reference are given below:

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

"We are learning that the adult is not and that the child is a plastic creature. We Wcan shape the lives of the latter to our better knowledge and so in proportion as civilization tries to realize its ideols, it uses as an instrumentality what is called schools.

"The next generation as a result of the merging of our humanitarian, democratic tendencies will develop o great deal. The home, workshop, library, stage and other forms are agencies, but of all these the school under our modern conditions is the one completely responsible to the collective will the state, and more and more we are resting upon it to carry out the ideals ahead of us.

"The school of today is one of many and in the near future we are going to have more to do. We must organize the labor of those to teach it for greater responsibilities are coming up-in the schooll.

"Vocational education is one of the potent factors. It always has been necessary to teach boys and girls to work effectively and some of the teachers resent that school should do this. In the past other agencies gave it but under the transformation it is become substantially impossible to establish what is the life heritage of the time. The home and others are not as effective as in the past in making the efficient individual.

"It is most natural that Massachusetts, one of the foremost states in the union should take up vocational education. It is but part of a completed education. We have experimental stations but it is only within the last few years that we are considering the rank and file of workers. Our stations are not to replace but to supplement and begin where the old leave off, it picks quire a high degree of training and scientific ability.

med by school life and helps them ac-

"We realize that the best way for the state to become prosperous is to have in it as large as possible a number of men and women who are able to make themselves prosperous by the plus of their productive effort, and it is only through trained brains and hands, through rightfully expended effort that they can produce what we need. We are training the boy to do with ease with satisfaction and joy to himself in the production.

"Our liberal education is responding to the times. On the other side is the one that teaches people to live. We can call it our ability to utilize what the world has to offer. We have about us the heritage of ages, what men of the past have thought and felt in all lines. Those who live to best advantage are those that know how to choose what will make for their own better living and react upon those that produce and make them better. I like to think of the world that will demand everything that is good and raise the uality of those that produce those things. That is the supreme aim of a liberal education.

"I am growing optimistic every day and believe all will prove equal to the responsibility laid upon teachers and the school will occupy the central position and in spite of the mistakes and inadevuate forces at our command I grow optimistic that we American people will prove equal to the responsibility of the new social economy."

BRIEFS

Mayor Stone said this morning that he should send to the City Council, Monday evening, the names of the gentlemen whom he had appointed as his official family for the year 1913. No changes are looked for by the public in his appointments, as his officers have given general satisfaction throughout the year.

The present Neponset-North station line via Hampden street will be operated between Park street, Dorchester, and the North station during the hours of light riding, and the service on the Neponset-Dudley street line will be increased during the same period from 15 minute intervals to 7 1-2 minute intervals.

☞The first Revels were Good—the second Gooder—and it is expected that the Revels Jan. 17 will be Goodest.

—Some one is circulating the report that in Mesopotamia they have discovered a statue 5000 years old that bears a remarkable resemblance to Chauncey Depew. We are inclined to doubt that, although Chauncey has been circulating jokes that are older than the newly found statue.

TAMING A SHREW

By ELIZABETH WEED

"Well, what are you goin' to do about it?"

"I dunno. If I could git the gal to marry me I'd be in a fiery furnace for the rest of my life. If I let her alone I'll be goin' around like a whipped rooster. It's six for one and half a dozen for the other."

"Why don't you git her down and pummel her for awhile? Mebbe that would take some o' the cussedness outen her."

"I'd like to see the man that could git it out of her that a-way."

"You mought scare her."

This plan seemed to set the other thinking. They were two backwoodsmen sitting by a campfire. Rogers was the man who loved the shrew, and Baxter was the friend who was advising him. Evidently in his last suggestion the latter had struck something that warranted consideration.

"What d'ye think would scare her?"

"Injuns."

"Mebbe," said the other after some thought. "How'd you work it?"

"Waal, you mought git some on 'em offen the reservation to put on their war paint and come down on the gal's home. The neighbors mought be told about it. They'd chime in with the plan, for she's a terror to the hull lot of 'em. I think I know a redskin—Arapahoe Jim, they call him—who would carry out the plan for a jug o' firewater."

The result of this dialogue was that one night soon after it occurred those living near Tom McGuire, the father of Madge McGuire, began to talk of trouble on the reservation and expressed fear that the Indians might break away. Tom didn't take much stock in the reports, but so many persons talked with Madge about it that she believed they were in earnest. "Let 'em come," she said. "I'll be ready for 'em."

One night when her father was away Madge heard a distant whooping and saw the light of what she supposed were burning houses, though they were really bonfires. She locked all the doors and, getting down two rifles that hung on the wall, made preparations for defense. The whoops came nearer, and finally, looking out through a window, she saw a sight capable of striking terror into the stoutest heart. Half a dozen Indians carrying lighted brands were coming down the road. As they drew nearer their war paint, in the glare of the burning wood, was doubly savage looking. But they didn't come as near as they had intended, for Madge sent a bullet in among them, which altered the situation. It tore the blanket of one and scraped the leg of another. Baxter was among them, dressed and painted as a redskin. Rogers, who was waiting a short distance up the road, was to join them when they had got Madge scared and do the heroic by saving her from their tomahawks. He was to fire some shots in among them, and at every shot a redskin was to drop. When most of them were put out of the fight the rest were to take to their heels and Rogers was to appear to Madge as her deliverer. She was expected to be so badly scared and receive such evidence of Rogers' power that thereafter he would lead her like a lamb.

This initiative of Madge's somewhat checked the enthusiasm of the Indians, but Baxter said to them, "We'll make it a bar'l," and led his braves on, and under the additional incentive they were ready to take the risk. But they straightway began their Indian tactics, crawling and dodging so that Madge was not able to locate them. Nevertheless an occasional shot came from her fortress, usually followed by a yelp from some redskin who was either grazed or winged.

But they were too many for her, and while she was watching the front of the house Baxter and an Indian took it in the rear and, getting on the roof, dropped down the chimney. Baxter got lead in his arm, but they captured the girl.

Trifling incidents often turn a general's original intentions, and the spirited defense requiring the Indians to skulk spoiled the plan. Rogers, not knowing what to do, rushed in, swore a blue streak at the savages, but did not hurt any of them. Madge, whose eye was full of fire and who was panting with fury, seeing that his advent was of no advantage to her, let out on him.

"Why don't you go for 'em?" she shrieked.

"Go for 'em!" repeated Rogers, like an actor who had forgotten his lines.

"I do believe you're one on 'em."

Baxter didn't know what to do or say. Neither did Arapahoe Jim nor the supers in the performance. Whether Madge caught on to the fact that there was a game in it all or gathered courage from the inactivity of her enemies, she caught up a broom and began to lay about her like a fury. Baxter, who had a blank cartridge in his rifle, fired it at her, but it only served to enrage her. The Indians, not relishing the broom beating, one by one got out and away. Their leaders followed, and Baxter was next. Rogers was left alone with his love.

"You, Bill Rogers, git out o' here!" she said. "You been puttin' up a job on me, and I'd have you know I won't stand it!"

With that she brought the broom down on him, and he, too, fled.

He is trying to think out a better plan by which to tame his shrew.

CHURCH MEETING.

The meeting at the Park and Downs Congregational church Wednesday evening, opened with prayer by the pastor, Rev. William B. Ayers who was unanimously elected moderator.

The report of Charles A. Richardson, the clerk showed a membership of 184 last year the church had grown to 224, 20 were admitted by letter and 20 by confession of faith. There had been 19 withdrawals leaving the present membership 205.

A. N. Barstow closed five years of faithful service as treasurer and was extended a vote of thanks.

Other reports were received from the Christian Endeavor, the Woman's Missionary Society, the choir, music committee, the D. O. Club and other church organizations. The budget was adopted which carried with it an advance in the salary of the pastor.

In the ministers report Rev. Mr. Ayers thanked his loyal friends and staunch supporters. He believed the spiritual growth here had been genuine and deep. He would always carry love for the people of this church. He was not making his valedictory. He was not thinking of departing. He, like Lincoln once said, proposed to peg away and do God's work. If obstacles arose he would surmount them. If there were problems he would pass them. He would peg away and win in Christ's name. Continued applause greeted the pastor's conclusion.

BURIED AT DUXBURY.

The funeral of Joshua E. Drew, who died Monday morning was held from his home, 16 Hampden circle, Thursday morning. Services were conducted by Rev. Frederick Steenstra of St. Chrysostoms church. Burial was at Duxbury.

Y. M. C. A. VS. TECH.

The local Y. M. C. A. team will endeavor to win its sixth victory Saturday night when it meets the strong Tech Freshmen. This year's entering class at Tech is conceded to have the strongest basket ball team of any of the Freshmen classes and a good game may be expected. The center of the visitors, McDougal, is rated one of the best amateur players in the game today, and is expected to give Ed Jenkins the game of his life. "Danny" Dackers who played with the Quincy A. A., last year is also to be in the local teams line up. The second team will line up against the "Silent Five" a team which has just been organized this season. It already has two victories to its credit and as it is composed of local boys the rivalry will be all the greater.

Game called at 8.15 o'clock.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LEAGUE.

Two good games are scheduled for the local Sunday school league Saturday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A.

Bethany K. O. K. A. which has not yet lost a game will meet the Wollaston Baptist and Wollaston Congregational will play the Houghs Neck Union chapel team.

As no admission fee is charged to these games a good crowd is expected. The first game called at 4 o'clock.

☞Upon payment of yearly subscriptions to the Daily Ledger, certificates good for 1000 votes in the Washington contest are issued in blank, and may be forwarded to any candidate. The vote can be held back.

BACK RIVER BRIDGE NOW OPEN TO WALKERS AND LIGHT WAGONS

Announcement Made by County Commissioner Merrill Is Cheering News

Hope That It Will Be Complete By Summer

After many long months it was announced by county commissioner John F. Merrill this morning that the Back River bridge, between North Weymouth and Hingham, which has been closed to public travel for more than a year, is now in such condition that it can be used by pedestrians and light vehicles. The bridge was ordered rebuilt with a wide draw by the War department of the United States government and work was commenced early last year.

COUNTY COM. JOHN F. MERRILL, Who Made Happy Announcement Today

Since that time the highway has been impassable at this point which was particularly inconvenient during the summer months, as the through street cars to Nantasket and the heavy automobile travel use this route. All of this traffic was diverted through East Weymouth, this new course making about fifteen minutes difference to the automobiles and from twenty to thirty minutes difference to street cars from Quincy to Nantasket.

There has been much delay in the building of the new bridge. In the first place the appropriation was found not sufficient when the bids were opened and it was necessary to go to the legislature for more money before work could be commenced. Then the government stepped in and imposed a forfeit for every days delay in commencing work. After work was finally commenced there came more delays owing to the non arrival of steel. For this reason it will be good news to learn that the bridge is now open, although restricted to light vehicle travel.

EASTERN STAR INSTALLATION

History of Order Reviewed By Grand Matron Lucy Colby

QUINCY CHAPTER COMMENDED

The spacious Masonic apartments were unusually attractive Friday evening, at the public installation of Quincy chapter, Order Eastern Star, before a large and appreciative gathering, the "sisters" predominating. Flowers at the officers stations added their beauty and fragrance to the scene.

Margaret B. Knight of Haverhill, the Worthy Grand Marshal, announced Lucy G. B. Colby of Haverhill, the Worthy Grand Matron, in waiting with suite to install the officers, and they were welcomed by the chapter. On the suite were William P. Sears, a Past Grand Patron as Worthy Grand Patron and Mrs. Susie Furnald, the first Matron of the chapter, as Worthy Grand Chaplain.

The beautiful ceremonies of installation had added charm as exemplified by Worthy Grand Matron Colby and suite, assisted by the Harvard quartette—Messrs. Boyd, Bartlett, Phillips and Thomas. The officers as installed are:

Worthy Matron, Mrs. Henrietta S. Files.

Worthy Patron, Edward Damon.

Associate Matron, Mrs. Margaret E. Gammons.

Secretary, Mrs. L. Charlotte Spargo.

Treasurer, Mrs. Laura E. Holt.

DOWN WITH GAS PRICES

Senator McDevitt to Urge Reduction of the Commodity

ALSO HOME GRANITE CUTTING

Senator McDevitt has promised to introduce a bill calling for 80 cent gas in Hyde Park which is now adjusted to a sliding scale.

The towns supplied by the Old Colony Gas Co., of Weymouth will be included in a petition for a reduction in the price of gas which he will present this week.

He is also considering proposed legislation making it compulsory to cut dressed granite, used in public buildings, within the state.

ADAMS COURT INSTALLATION

Court Also Plans to Observe 14th Anniversary

The installation of officers of Court John Adams, No. 144, Foresters of America, took place at Doble's hall Friday evening. The new officers were inducted by Deputy Grand Chief Ranger, Charles Guertin, assisted by Herald James Curley, both of Court Monatiquot of Weymouth.

At the business meeting reports were read showing the court to be in a strong financial condition and that the gain in membership had been considerable.

Arrangements were made for the 14th anniversary to be held at Music hall, Jan. 31. A drama and dance will be given that evening.

The officers installed were:

Chief Ranger—Fred Beer

Sub Chief Ranger—James Conway.

Treasurer—John Pritchard.

Financial Secretary—Alexander W. Russell.

Recording Secretary—Charles Osborne.

66 Senior Warden—Robert Craig.

Junior Warden—William Welch.

Senior Beadle—Henry Allicon.

Junior Beadle—William Reipke.

Trustee—George Clark.

Lecturer—Stanley Collins.

Pianist—Chester Brown.

Physician—Dr. John H. Ash.

The committee in charge were John Hackett, Andrew Pirrie, David Melrose, John Pritchard, Neil Johnson, George Clark, Fred Beer, James Conway, Hugh McLellan, Alexander W. Russell, John M. Troup, Cornelius Driscoll, Chief Ranger; Charles Osborne, secretary; Fred Steinbrenner, treasurer.

BIG ADDITION FOR THE CHURCH

Wollaston Baptists Plan to Spend $10,000 For Annex

PLANS ALREADY PREPARED

At a special business meeting Thursday evening the Wolaston Baptist church voted to build a two story addition to its present edifice. The rapid growth of the Sunday scholo is responsible for this action and the addition will contain a number of large class rooms.

Plans are by Architect Albert H. Wright of Quincy and the contract will probably be awarded E. H. Sears of Wolalston. The building will be two stories, of wood and will cost about $10,000.

It will be constructed on the Warren avenue side of the present chapel and will be approximately the same size. On the ground flor will be two large class rooms for the adult classes and on the second floor several smaller rooms for the primary department.

Rev. Joseph Walther, the pastor, acted as moderator and Ernest W. Campbell described the plans in detail.

The project is in charge of a committee of 20 who are acting in conjunction with the trustees of which John L. Miller is chairman.

STEEL BRIDGE FOR NEPONSET

Hope That Measure May Get Through Legislature

IMPROVEMENT NEEDED

It is understood that a bill has been introduced into the House of Representatives calling for a large appropriation to construct a steel bridge over the Neponset river. The bill is the outcome of several years fight between political factions in the city of Boston. As far as can be learned the introduction was made by Representative Buckley of ward 24.

Boston members of the house have already commenced lobbying for the passage of the bill, anticipating a favorable report by the Harbor and Lands committee to which it will probably be referred. Senator John J. McDevitt of this city is a member of the committee. His views regarding the bill are known.

Representative Sullivan is opposed to the bill on the grounds that just now Quincy's financial condition will not, in his opinion, warrant the assumption of a proportionate part of the expense.

Last years session considered and rejected a bill for a new bridge.

INSPECTION ONCE A YEAR FOR AIR TANKS WITH 50 LB. PRESSURE

District Police Shall Issue Regulations Governing Use of Such Appliances

Violation of Law Carries $50 Fine or 30 Days, or Both

(Special to the Ledger.)

State House, January 11, 1913—With a view of interesting legislation that will provide protection to granite workers and with the recent accident in a local granite yard in mind, Representative William J. Leslie, presented the following bill:

Sec. 1. No person shall install or use, or cause to be installed or used, any tank or other receptacle for the keeping or storage of compressed air at any pressure exceeding 50 pounds per square inch, for use in operating pneumatic machinery unless the owner or user thereof shall hold a certificate of inspection issued by the boiler inspection department of the district police, certifying that the said tank or other receptacle has been duly inspected within one year.

Sec. 2. The boiler inspection department of the district police shall inspect all tanks or other receptacles used for the keeping of storage of compressed air at pressures exceeding 50 pounds to the square inch at least once each year, and shall prescribe regulations for the size, construction, operation, maximum pressure, guages

If We Paid Our Debts to Our Feet

Most of us would choose our shoes with a great deal more care than we do. Because our feet are a loyal hard-working pair and they deserve to be comfortable for their own sake and to look well for our sake. Many a woman is judged by her shoes.

Some shoe buyers choose for style and overlook comfort, others for comfort and ignore style.

It is quite possible to find these two virtues in the same shoe, as is proven by our collection of

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The kindergarten aviator positively announces that he knows all the air currents and pockets. Which is perfectly true perhaps as to those he has just passed through but as they change almost as quick as a flash his next experience may leave him some room to doubt this knowledge as being very extended.

The profits of some of the New York bankers have been enormous and undoubtedly furnish a reason for the high cost of living to a great extent.

T. R. opposes Munsey's scheme. Did any one think otherwise?

For a man who travelled so much and did so much campaigning Mayor Fitzgerald got out of the senatorial fight cheap. If all candidates could move around the circle and still not have it cost them a cent seeking office, the field would be rapidly increased.

Some people imagine that a congressional job is nothing but a labor employment bureau.

Bowling has certainly got its grip on Quincy all right. It is a good clean sport and keeps young men and boys from less desirable places, than the bowling alleys.

The candidates for municipal office are somewhat slow in making returns of their campaign expenses.

However they are not one whit behind the Fourth of July committee in presenting its official financial statement.

If you saw it at Kincaide's its good. If it is good it is at Kincaide's.

John Hays Hammond offers to pacify the Mexican Indians No doubt Madero would be glad to have him undertake the task. There is a little bit of land about the size of Rhode Island in the Indian district which this mining engineer desires to develope.

As the duty of an admiral is to manage a fighting ship he goes rather far afield when he engages to direct diplomacy.

That Cohasset assessor showed that he knew his business in that Bigelow case. The great trouble is however that so many assessors lose their jobs for knowing their business that the great majority of them prefer to plod along in apparent ignorance.

It now develops that Dan Russell or to be more explicit Dakota Dan had hay fever. What a lot of valuable time and money has been spent on this case when the identity could be immediately determined by such a simple test. Just wait till the hay time comes around and watch Dan.

Youth and being an academy student is one of the latest defenses and pleas for leniency in an auto speed case. Rather weak affairs on which to escape but they worked.

And the cabinet makers with all their glibness and cleverness have not drawn a yip from the president elect. Looks very much as if "Woodie" was able to keep his own council.

"Of course, I speak as only one member of the party,—" and if any one can point out any one else at the wheel of direction or aiming policies they are welcome to the find.

Revels, revels, and then again revels.

ENORMOUS DIVIDENDS.

The disclosures before the Pujo finance probe commission, regarding the enormous dividends by some of the New York banks are amazing. It has revealed a condition at which many guessed but none cared to point at, because if referred to at all, there were few who would dare announce such profits accrueing, for fear of the ridicule which would immediately follow their claims. But the information coming first hand from the bank officials who participated in shared in and shared those great dividends it must be accepted as true. This thing has been going on for years. There has been no effort to check or remedy it. To certain people it must have been obvious.

Bank examiners if they attended to their duties intelligently and consciously must have been aware of the conditions existing. Of course it was not the duty of those examiners to make public their findings. They were only the servants of officials higher up. The Pujo committee is prevented from securing information from United States officials.

Were those officials cognizant of the immense sums disbursed in stock and dividends? And if they were was it part of their duty as public officials to take steps to check such proceedings?

If those questions are answerable in the affirmative, and there was no law which enabled them to check such proceedings, in fact rather a law to prevent their making them known it would seem reasonable that a law which should prevent such immense earnings would be both desirable and applicable.

If there existed a law to check such money manipulation then the country would not be under the necessity of expending immense sums, as is the case in the present probe, to ascertain the facts and institute a change which would be reasonable without being a hardship or curtailment of trade or embarressment to business.

The incoming congress has an opportunity with the material at hand, to make a record unsurpassed, if not unequalled in the history of the country.

Such enormous earnings to a few people must spell loss, hardship, and probably ruin and disaster to many others. A measure which will bring relief to those who suffer without at the same time endangering business stability or undermining commercial enterprises would be a grandly creditable thing for any congress. Is the incoming congress equal to the emergency. It is to be hoped for the good of the country that it will not fail in this great hour.

CONNECTING TERMINALS.

The aim to connect the North and South stations of Boston by a subway, is at present in its infant stages so far as the general public is concerned, but it would not be surprising if the engineers of the great railroads interested in the undertaking had already well developed plans under way with that end in view. They must have been looking forward to the time when such an undertaking for their own benefit and convenience as well as that of the public would be necessary if they keep pace with the seven league strides in traffic advancement, which are everywhere in evidence. On the face of it the estimated cost is $50,000,000 which will carry with it an electrification of the railroad lines within a certain number of miles of Boston, the elimination of the North station and the construction of a direct surface way from one station to the other. The electrification of the roads has long been considered. The necessity has been apparant for a long time and the only question which should have prevented its consumation long ago was evidently one of finances and expediency.

Both the North and South stations are horrible examples of the smoke nuisance. Both have been impregnated with the smoke and cinders to such an extent that they are not desirable.

Take either of those stations at the present time and compare them with the terminal at Washington. At the latter there is not a vestige of smoke anywhere in evidence, and the result is that the stone and marble of the structure are clean and wholesome to the eye and a pleasure to behold. On the other hand both the terminals in Boston are soot coated, grimy and the air permeated with gases which are not pleasant.

When the day arrives that those objectionable features will be removed by the electrification of the roads, both the people of Boston and the travelling public will have much for which to be thankful for.

CREDITABLE.

The bowling match between Poelher and Hintze at the Coliseum alleys, Thursday night, aside from the good sportsmanship shown by the contestants also demonstrated that the bowling fans of Quincy are a very fair minded and gentlemanly crowd of fellows.

In base ball contests, basket ball and other sports, where partisanship runs high there is often a tendency on the part of the fans to lose their grip on their finer feelings and give vent to hasty passions which are regretted on sober second thought. To the credit of the audience at the Coliseum Thursday night, all untoward demonstration was omitted. A spirit of fairness predominated. Hintze's good work was readily recognized. There was no undue demonstration at any period. The spectators did not attempt to indulge in any joshing, or witticisms or unfitting language at any time. It was an orderly crowd gathered to witness a clean sport in a clean manner, eager to note the excellence of performance of either contestant and taken all in all it was very creditable to those who were present in the capacity of spectators.

MISS PRICE DEAD.

Miss Clara Price died Friday morning at her home, Glover place. She was the daughter of Edward Price and was a well known resident of Atlantic.

"US TWO," HAD COMPANY.

In the New Colonial hall, Friday evening, Just Us Two, Miss Margaret W. Torrey and Mrs. Edna B. Holyoke, entertained about 50 couple of the younger set at a dancing party Pretty decoration were about the hall and dainty refreshments were served. Music was furnished for dancing by an orchestra for 16 numbers and four extras. The social continued until 11.30 o'clock .

OBSERVATION CLASS.

An observation class of 30 students from the Worcester Polytechnic Institute spent Friday afternoon at the Fore River yards. They were accompanied by an instructor and they eagerly examined the application of the company's mechanical devices.

Poole's Orchestra will play at the Revels—"nuf sed."

BIG GAIN BY MRS. MARNOCK

Mr. Bowditch Almost Jumped Into Fifth Place

MISS MORRISSETT GAINING

The Boys in Blue and other friends of Mrs. Emma Marnock, the W. R. C. candidate for the free Washington trip, have made a grand rally this week, and her gain today is 1905. She now has five figures in her total 10,555,—only a few hundred behind Mr. MacKay. A subscription certificate for 1000 votes made possible this large gain.

Second in gain today is Mr. Bowditch, who adds 605. His total is now 5,225 only 320 behind Mr. DeNormandie.

Sam Shellman is third in gain today, with 165, and has nearly overtaken Miss Randall.

Miss Morrissett with a gain of 105 now has a total of 3,260, only 80 less than Mr. Kessler.

Other gains were made by Ambrose O'Dowd, Dan Scouler, Miss Ruth Cahill, Helen King, Charles H. Finn, F. J. Hamel and J. McCullough.

Another big day among the leaders may be expected on Monday, for another prize will be awarded at 9 A. M. to the candidate making the largest gain during week ending at that hour.

It may be necessary next week to drop all candidates with less than 100 votes.

ANOTHER PRIZE.

Again on Monday, Jan. 13, at 9 A. M. a prize will be awarded to the candidate who makes the largest gain for the week of Jan. 6—13.

THE LAST COUPON.

The last coupon in this contest will be printed in the issue of Saturday, Feb. 8, and the polls will close a few days later. A great hustle is expected during the last days of the contest.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

EVENING CENTRES.

R. E. Hawley, who has charge of the Evening Centres in Boston, is to speak in Quincy under the auspices of the Philanthropic committee of the Quincy Women's club, Jan. 21, in the afternoon. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, chairman of the committee, applied for the use of the council chamber, City hall, and permission to use the chamber has been granted, for this occasion; so the committee extends a cordial invitation to all interested in the question of providing evening instruction and amusement for working young people, to attend this meeting.

Mr. Hawley will speak especially of the work which is being done with young people of Boston, in the Opportunity clubs. These clubs were started by Mr. Hawley under the auspices of the Women's Municipal League, of Boston, in East Boston, last year. They proved so successful that the Boston School Board took over the work and Centres, similar to that in East Boston have been established in South Boston, Roxbury and Charlestown.

This year in East Boston alone 700 young people are registered in the different clubs. They meet in the high school building and each of the 37 clubs is prospering and flourishing. Among the clubs are chorus and minstrel clubs, city council, mixed orchestra, literary, dramatic, girls, athletic, sewing and mandolin clubs.

In addition to these a mothers and homemakers club has recently been organized, under the direction of Mrs. Hawley. At the meetings of these clubs, which are held in the afternoon, an entertainment is provided and a social hour, moving pictures, lectures etc. The story of this work is intensely interesting and suggestive, and it is extremely well told by Mr. Hawley, who illustrates his talk with views. It is expected that a large number of those interested in the welfare of the young people in Quincy will avail themselves of this opportunity, to learn something at first hand of this splendid work being done in Boston.

ENGINEERS' ASSOCIATION

To Hold Annual Convention and Consider Road Building

TUPPER TO ATTEND

Commissioner of Public Works Frederick E. Tupper leaves today for New York to attend the convention of the American Association of Civil Engineers, who will especially consider the subject of road building. The convention will be in session for four days and will be attended by Civil Engineers from all over the United States. Many of these have been actively engaged in road building and experimenting so as to obtain the best results in road building. For this reason much valuable information on this subject will be obtained by Commissioner Tupper.

Commissioner Tupper said this morning that with the opening of spring he intended to commence rebuilding one side of Independance avenue, Franklin and School streets as far as Quincy avenue. All of these streets are badly in need of repair and two of them were the subject of orders in the City Council last year for which appropriations were asked, but not granted. The Commissioner believes that what money the city has to expend can be expended to better advantage in repairing the fifty miles of streets that are greatly in need of it rather than to accept and build new streets.

STEWART—CONSINS.

A marriage return to the City Clerk's office records the marriage of Miss Emily Cousins of Malden to Simon Murchin Stewart of 178 Franklin street, Quincy. The ceremony was performed at Malden, Dec. 23, by Rev Rupert C. Foster of Cambridge. The groom is an electrician by trade.

DIED AT MATTAPAN.

Lawrence Peterson, 53 years of age, of 85 River street, Mattapan died Friday morning after a few months illness. The deceased was well known in Quincy and leaves a widow, two daughters, Waldburg and Mabel and one son Fridolph.

Mr. Peterson was a member of the Court John Ericson, Foresters of America. The funeral will be Sunday afternoon. Services will be held at the Swedish Methodist church, Quincy.

SHIFTING SCENE BY COMMITTEE

Second Event Lapsed From Athletic to Dreamland

The second of the series of four events planned by a social committee consisting of prominent Quincy residents took the form of a German at Alpha hall, Friday evening. At the first affair, which was an athletic dance, the decorations were of an athletic nature and costumes were of the same variety. Friday evening however, it was entirely a social affair and as pretty a circle of dancers as ever graced a hall were on the floor.

A special feature was the popular composition, The 69th Regiment March, played by the Rosewood orchestra and directed by the composer, John A. Ham. As the martial strains of the selection echoed about the hall and into the street, the singular beauty of the composition affected all present.

The smoking room reflected the reveries of a bachelor, within some instances and cigarettes and conversation occupied their share of the evening. Refreshments were served.

Large, flowing American flags were entwined with silken bunting about the hall and a mass of potted plants completely hid the orchestra from view.

The committee consisted of J. Harry Slade, Mrs. Sydney C. Hardwick, Mrs. Walter E. Burke, Mrs. A. R. Gould, J. Barraja-Frauenfelder, and Wendell Luce.

GUILD TO AID REGULAR CHOIR

In the Lenten Services at Christ Church

About 45 members of St. Margarets Guild have signified their intentions of assisting the vested choir during the Lenten services. On Good Friday evening they will sing Steiner's "Crucifixion," under the direction of Prof. Frank Wrigley.

A valentine supper is planned for Jan. 31, and the affair is in charge of Miss Edith Fox and Miss Maud Johnston. An entertainment and dancing will follow.

Friday evening Miss Powell of Welcome House, Boston, gave an instructive talk on the institution

☞The Quincy Women's club is indeed to be thanked for establishing the Revels, the most unique and entertaining event we have. A number who have attended both the Revels of the Copley Society, Boston and our Revels prefer the Quincy variety, for tho the decorations and costumes are of course much less elaborate, the carnival spirit is much more in evidence. It is the jolliest of times—fun fast and furious and festive abounds.

☞Quincy people who come from Boston by electric cars may obtain the Daily Ledger at Neponset at Thompson's lunch room in the Quincy car barn, after 3.30.

HIGH PRICES CONDEMNED

Squantum Women's Club in League to Down Them

THE S. I. A. GETTING BUSY.

The Squantum Women's club has endorsed the movement to secure lower prices of food stuffs of the Housekeeper league, Boston. About 15 members have handed their names in to join and more are planning to do so.

There will be a meeting of the Squantum Improvement association Tuesday at the bungalow of C. E. Carlson, Huckins avenue. A number of important matters regarding the improvement of Squantum are to be taken up. The street committee will decide upon some definite campaign to secure the acceptance by the city of Huckins avenue and Bellevue road. The matter of a school house and better school accommodations for Squantum children will be taken up. The following committee on Schools has been appointed by Vice President Smith: John Holmes, chairman; John R. Nelson, Roger Mason, John Olson and William A. Reed.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Carlson and son Edward Carlson have returned from a three month's trip to Sweden and England. They sailed from Boston and visited their old home in Sweden for an extended stay. The trip back was very rough but they landed safely in New York and returned to Squantum which they said looked better to them than ever before.

Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 22, an executive meeting of the Squantum Women's club will be held at the home of Mrs. C. E. Carlson and the finance committee is expected to make favorable reports. Now that the holidays are over active work will begin at once to raise money for a club house to be erected on land recently purchased by the club on Huckins avenue. After business is transacted the ladies will sew for a fair to be held in the near future.

A little daughter, Barbara, was welcomed into the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hogan, New Year's morning. Mrs. Hogan will be remembered as Miss Vesta Rich. Mr. and Mrs. Hogan are making their home with her parents Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Rich, East Squantum street.

The Squantum Women's Club had a pleasant meeting Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Matthew McGrain, Bayside Road. Mrs. McGrain proved to be a most delightful hostess. After a short business meeting the members enjoyed a reading by Mrs. S. H. Adams.

Mrs. McGrain served a dainty buffet lunch assisted by Mrs. William A. Reed and Mrs. C. E. Carlson who acted as pourers.

A social chat and music were enjoyed for an hour.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Smith entertained at whist Wednesday night at their home on Wedgewood street. A remarkable score was made by C. E. Carlson and Miss Phyllis Bostwick. They retained their seats at the head table throughout the entire evening and scored 63 points nearly twice that of any other player at the party. They were crowned champions of Squantum whist contingent. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Morse, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Carlson, Mrs. Helen McGowan, Mrs. Louise Holt, Miss Phyllis Botswick, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Botswick, Mr. and Mrs. James Hagan, Mrs. James Foster, Mrs. Matthew McGrain, Mr. Perley Bostwick, Mr. J. R. Nelson and Mrs. William A. Reed.

LADIES' AID HELD REUNION

Storm Had No Terrors For People of Atlantic Methodist Church

Despite the inclement weather that prevailed Tuesday night, there was a good attendance at the reunion and reception of the Ladies' Aid society, of the Atlantic Methodist church. The auditorium and vestry were beautifully decorated with ferns; begonias, Japanese cherry blossoms and evergreen trees, and illuminated with pink shaded lights, a suggestion borrowed from Robert Millet, the electrician who furnished the red lights at the recent fair, presented a pleasing spectacle that made all forget the storm that raged without. An excellent musical program was rendered, including the soprano solos by Mrs. Harry Taylor, "The Ninety and Nine" and "O, dry those tears;" violin solos by Mrs. Frederic Sutherland, Hubey's Kyric Kati," Retfeld's "Humoresk" and Melville's "Berceuse;" piano solos by Mrs. William Lee Howard, Jr., Chaminade's "Scarf Dance" and Mrs. Howard's own composition "Syncopated Jungle Glide;" and piano solos by Mrs. Cecil H. Marble, Goddard's Second Mazurka, "Wollenhaupt's "Valse Styrienne" and Liszt's "Rakoczy March." Mrs. Marble, who arranged the program acted as accompanist to the vocal and violin numbers.

Refreshments were served and a very delightful evening was spent.

The success of the occasion was due to the efforts of the following committees:—Entertainment, Mrs. H. J. Lord, Mrs. A. M. Whittum and Mrs. E. Burr; decorations, Mrs. O. M. Niles, chairman, assisted by ladies of the church; refreshments, Mrs. George Burr, Miss Delle Lord, Mrs. Thomas Spinney and Mrs. Tony Angotti. Rev. Alfred A. Wright, the pastor, Mrs. E. Burr, president of the Ladies' Aid, Morris Kilpatrick and Mrs. Kilpatrick were in the receiving line.

The ushers were Mrs. Herbert Fairclough, Mrs. Arthur Thayer and Mrs. A. M. Whittum.

BRIEFS

Mrs. J. F. Davidson is confined to her home on Newbury avenue with an attack of the grip.

The annual parish meeting of Christ church will be held Wednesday evening, Jan. 22.

Little Eleanor Holt of Botolph street gave a party to some of her little friends Wednesday afternoon. A most enjoyable time was spent, games being played and refreshments served A generous Santa Claus had donated gifts for all the guests. Those present were: Barbara Wells, Elizabeth Burdett, Barbara Burdett, Phebe Buckley, Ruth Beeman and Earl Beeman.

Twenty-five members were added to the membership of the Wollaston Congregational church at the communion service on Sunday. The attendance was larger than at any communion service in the history of the church. The new members were welcomed by the pastor Dr. Sneath with a short address full of hope and cheer. This large accession to the membership is the result of only four months' labor on the part of Dr. Sneath and augurs well for the future.

Mrs. Mary A. Howe of Newtonville is to speak on Women's Suffrage, on Wednesday at 11 A. M., at the home of Mrs. N. S. Hunting, Hancock street corner of Whitney road. Any one interested in this timely topic is invited to attend the meeting.

Miss Elsie Wohl of Walker street left last week for New Hampshire where she has accepted a position as supervisor of drawing in the towns of Hillsboro and Petersboro.

Mrs. C. F. Letteney has been confined to her home on Webster street with the grip.

The Wollaston Unitarian Forum meets Sunday at 12 o'clock; subject: "Can a business man be both honest and successful?" Leader: Walter E. Simmons. Everybody is welcome.

Unity Circle King's Daughters, held its regular meeting in Bethany vestry, Tuesday evening, the president, Mrs. W. G. Shaw in the chair. The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard. After the business was disposed of preparations were made for the annual supper to be held the first Tuesday evening in February. The Junior King's Daughters provided the entertainment which was very pleasing and much enjoyed. Refreshments were served by Hospitality Ten. At the recent entertainment of the Visiting Ten, $40.00 were netted which will be used for the benefit of Pond Home.

It is reported that E. Gallagher who now lives on Hunt street is to build a two flat house on Appleton street near his brother, E. J. Gallagher.

The Ladies Sewing circle of Bethany church held its regular meeting Wednesday afternoon. At the business meeting, Mrs. Albert Smith of Milton gave an address upon the consolidation of the different women's societies connected with the church. She presented the subject in a clear, concise manner, making it apparent that much better results can be obtained from uniting and working harmoniously. Rev. Mr. Willmott was present and spoke favorably of the plan, which has been tried very successfully in other churches.

☞Don't be stumped and stay away from the Revels for lack of a fancy costume. It is an easy matter to make up some simple one and often the home-made ones are the most effective.

BRIEFS

The people of Wollaston and Quincy may not appreciate the work done by the Wollaston Glee club during the eleven years of its existance. It has given two concerts each season, including in its programs standard works of the best composers and introducing to its patrons the best soloists to be obtained. This year the club has a well selected program which has been carefully studied. The first concert of this season is to be given Tuesday evening in the Wollaston Congregational church. Mme. Wilhelmina Wright Calvert, dramatic soprano, beside solos will sing with the club in one selection "Spring Night" by Max Filke. Friends of the Glee club are anticipating a fine concert.

At the annual meeting of the Women's Guild of Christ church, Jan 2, the following officers were elected: President Mrs. Charles E. Haskins; 1st vice president Mrs. Francis F. Brewer; 2d vice, Mrs. George H. Brown; secretary, Mrs. C. Theodore Hardwick; treasurer, Mrs. Charles Wilson. The president appoints the chairmen of committees. The Guild voted $300 for inside repairs on the rectory.

The second term of Miss Corlew's classes in dancing in Wollaston will begin on Monday next. The annual dance given by Miss Corlew on the afternoon of Feb. 22, will be held this year at the Copley Plaza instead of Brookline.

This week was observed as the week of prayer by Memorial church, Atlantic, Wednesday evening. Rev. T. W. Davison conducted the service and Thursday Rev. Mr. Bryant of Winthrop. Friday, the service was held in the auditorium. The choir sang two selections and Dr. Emerick of the Home Missionary society, preached the sermon.

The Massachusetts Daughters of the Revolution are to hold a meeting at Hotel Vendome, Boston, on Friday, Jan. 17, at 2 P. M. The business meeting will be followed by an interesting program and social hour.

The regular meeting of the Wollaston Parents-Teachers' Association will be held in assembly hall Monday evening, at eight o'clock, when Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of Quincy will speak on "The School System in relation to the child in the Home." Bass soloist—Louis B. Weston.

Mrs. Joseph W. Ferguson, of Hollis avenue has been confined to her home since the first of the month, with the grip.

At the meeting today at Hotel Vendome, Boston, of the New England Wheaton Seminary club, the business meeting will be followed at 2.15 P. M. by a musicale by Miss Elizabeth Stanley, violinist; Miss Villa Whitney White, soloist; Hiram G. Tucker, pianist. Gentlemen will be welcome as guests of the afternoon. Social hour and tea will be enjoyed from 3.30 until 5.

The people of Atlantic who attended the beautiful service at St. Paul's cathedral, Boston, New Year's eve were more than repaid for the walk home at midnight from Neponset. Surely the prayers and helpful words at that service will help make better men and women through this year, and in the years to come.

RUNAWAY—NO DAMAGE.

A horse attached to one of A. W. Loud's Electric Express delivery wogons ran away on Granite street Friday noon. The horse and wagon, minus the driver came up Granite street, then turned into Hancock street thence via Cottage avenue to the freight depot where he stopped. He had become frightened by a piece of pipe on one of the Gas Co. trucks. No damage was done.

☞Won't you be sorry on the 18th if you have not had a share in the fun on the 17th.

OPPOSED TO BATH HOUSE

Wollaston Park Association So Votes at Annual Session

Strong sentiment against a state bath-house at Wollaston Beach was voiced at the annual meeting of the Wollaston Park Improvement Association, Thursday evening at the Wollaston Yacht club. A unanimous vote against such a building was passed and provision made for a committee to represent the association at the State House hearing.

The following officers were elected: President—E. O. Woodward; Vice President—Prof. J. H. Marceau; Secretary—Russell T. Anthony; Treasurer—F. H. Chase; Directors—Benjamin F. Chase, Louis S. Cleves, W. J. Gaffney, William E. Hingston, Dr. Philip Kelley, D. W. Wade and Harry M. Watts.

This is the second year of the organization and William H. Burrell remarked upon the association's success and presented President Woodward a handsome gavel as a testimony of appreciation from the members.

There were many speakers against the public bath-house the charge being made that the project was being pushed for personal gain.

The matter of insufficient police protection of the district was taken up and a committee appointed to wait on the mayor, chief of police and city council.

It was the suggestion of several members that, if the efforts were futile this year as last, a subscription should be taken up and a special officer hired to protect the locality.

President Woodward thanked the club for its token of appreciation and urged the co-operation of all members.

SHENANDOAH

A Stirring Story of Military Adventure and of a Strange Wartime Wooing, Founded on the Great Play of the Same Name

By BRONSON HOWARD AND HENRY TYRRELL

Illustrations From Actual Wartime Photographs by Brady

COPYRIGHT, 1912, BY G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS

PROLOGUE.

This thrilling romance of love, war, patriotism and adventure in the valley of Virginia, 1861-5, has a vivid historical and scenic setting. The whole stirring panorama of the mighty struggle that preserved the Union is outlined as a background to the romantic love drama continuously occupying the stage, the dramatis personae of which are famous soldiers and typical civilians on both sides. This novel, like the play which ranks as Bronson Howard's masterpiece and which has held undiminished popularity on the stage for a quarter of a century past, is broadly nonpartisan in spirit and abounds in striking characters, with effective contrasts of pathos and comedy. The illustrations are particularly interesting because a majority of them are actual wartime photographs of famous generals, camps, batteries, historic scenes and typical soldiers who wore both the blue and the gray.

CHAPTER I.

Haughty Old Charleston.

"CHARLESTON always looks to me as if it had drifted bodily across the Atlantic from old France or Spain," said Colonel Haverill as he stood gazing out harborward from the pilliared veranda of the roomy colonial mansion fronting on the East Battery.

It was early spring of the year 1861. Sky and water in that southern seaboard clime were blue, but it was the soft, dreamy blue of Mediterranean shores. Nights of velvety dusk were lit with strangely large, low hung stars. The magnolias were not yet in bloom, but amid the moss veiled live oaks already the mockingbirds sang, or rather rhapsodized in language of golden tone, as if confiding thrilling secrets that burst from stifled hearts.

Such were the enviable conditions, heightened rather than restrained by the political turmoil of the time, under which an oddly assorted group of people of various ages and conditions, and including besides Charlestonians a number of representatives of other sections of the south as well as of northern states, planned the Ellingham ball for the second week in April.

Colonel Haverill of the regular army of the United States had been a Mexican war comrade of the late Colonel Ellingham of Virginia. When Ellingham died Haverill became the guardian of his two children, Robert and Gertrude.

Robert was duly graduated from West Point and with his classmate, Kerchival West of Massachusetts, went, with the rank of lieutenant, to see active service on the plains in the regiment of Colonel Haverill. Ordered to Washington, Colonel Haverill and his wife were now traveling northward via Charleston, accompanied by Lieutenants Ellingham and West. Gertrude Ellingham had come on from the family homestead in the Shenandoah valley of Virginia to meet her brother Bob. Likewise Madeline West had come to join her brother Kerchival and incidentally to enjoy her first acquaintance with the fascination southern city.

Nothing less than a ball—one of the famous Ellingham "levees"—could fittingly honor the occasion.

The younger set, including the two lieutenants, had practically no other subject of "serious" discussion. Secession talk was rife, to be sure, and military activities going on were such as to lead to but one logical conclusion—that war or something very like it was imminent. But love outranked logic, in that particular camp at least.

At the very opening of the campaign the casualties took in Kerchival West and his demure, dark eyed sister Madeline; also, as mutual offsetting to this pair, the gallant Bob Ellingham and his sister Gertrude, the latter a spirited girl, with warm bronze hair befitting her emotional temperament and vivid complexion to match.

The first cloud that appeared in this roseate sky was Edward Thornton.

Thornton was rather a handsome fellow in his insolent way and a few years older than the two lieutenants—that is to say, he was close upon thirty. He had more than the assurance of manner that such advantage might perhaps be expected to give him—especially with Mrs. Haverill, the colonel's wife.

The young people frankly did not like Thornton, though none of them had said so, and probably any or all of them would have denied the charge had it been made.

Meanwhile Dr. Ellingham and the colonel and Mrs. Haverill and the Pinckneys (South Carolina relatives of the Ellinghams) saw graver portents than sentimental ones on the near horizon. Their conversation turned upon questions of state sovereignty, the "old flag," and rights as to secession from the Union.

"If the interests of your manufacturing and shipping states of the north," observed Dr. Ellingham, "and of our agricultural and cotton states of the south are not running in harmony, that is no excuse for a family quarrel."

"I quite agree with you," said Colonel Haverill. "It is an awkward thing for a soldier to take sides in such a dispute. Theoretically we don't have to. The government settles all that for us, and we simply obey orders. I feel confident they will find a remedy for the present break as they have for other and perhaps worse ones in the past. If it were not for the slavery question"—

"Ah," sighed the southern conservative, "if I owned the 4,000,000 slaves I would gladly give them all up for the preservation of the Union."

"Well, your friend, Major Ruffin, certainly has more decided opinions on the subject than both of us put together," laughed Haverill, making the customary effort to divert the conversation into lighter channels.

Ruffin was a striking character, typical of the time. They met him afternoons at the Charleston hotel or on a sunny morning walking by the Battery sea wall, gazing out across the harbor to where the Sumter fortress reared its forty foot walls on an artificial island built on the shoals. This was one of the important fortifications of the seceding states whose status in relation to the federal government was in ominous dispute.

"Sir," Ruffin would say impressively, "if the status of these federal forts in the seceded states is not yet determined, it is high time it should be. If an appeal to arms is necessary, and I can see that it is, sooner or later, let it come right here and now."

"But, major," Colonel Haverill would protest, "I understood you were a Virginian? Virginia has not seceded."

"Not yet, but she will—she must. I am, as you say, sir, a Virginian born. But this hanging fire is so little to my taste, sir, that I have sold my Virginia property and cast my allegiance with South Carolina for the present. I have enlisted with the state troops here, and I await any minute General Beauregard's call to the batteries he is planting all around Sumter."

Major Ruffin was a white haired, elderly man, sixty years old if a day. In his fiery fanatical zeal there was something humorous—and something tragic.

Colonel Haverill, fifty-five years of age, was distinctively an American soldier type.

A veteran of the Mexican war, he was happily married to his second wife, a New York belle up to the time of her becoming the colonel's bride, some six years before the period with which the present narrative is concerned. His only son, Frank, was at that time a boy of fourteen, bright and spirited; but, as the colonel declared with real mortification, evidently not cut out for a soldier. That most lamentable deficiency—in the father's eyes—gave color to the assertion, made not by Mrs. Haverill alone, that the colonel thought more of his young southern wards, Robert and Gertrude Ellingham, than he did of his own son.

However this may have been, the colonel's young wife more than made up to the lad the deprivation of his father's full measures of paternal confidence and affection. Having no children of her own, she gave to the boy what in his infancy he had never known—a mother's loving care. As he grew up in New York amid good family associations and in comfortable circumstances, seeing little of his father and experiencing the irksomeness without the companionship of that parent's strict control, it was not to be wondered at if Frank came perilously near to being spoiled.

After graduation from Columbia—instead of from West Point, as the colonel would have desired if such a choice could have been realized in the natural course of events—Frank Haverill entered the banking house of the Howards, relatives of his stepmother. This had seemed a promising connection—it might have led, possibly, to another matrimonial alliance through one of the pretty daughters of the family on whom the young clerk was known to have made a most favorable impression—when suddenly he ran away with and married Edith Maury, a nice enough girl, as it was said, but two or three years his senior and the daughter of an impoverished southern family whose home was in New Orleans.

This was bad enough. Still a rash love match is not in itself an unpardonable sin. Frank was forgiven. At least a truce was patched up and the prodigal son went back repentant, as it seemed, to his stool at the bank.

Alas, the prodigal climax was yet to come. Its beginnings had dated back even to the college days. Edward Thornton had been much in New York then. He had first met the Haverills at Saratoga. Handsome, reckless, a social favorite and sportsman of no small pretensions, Thornton had immediately exercised over young Frank an influence amounting to fascination and hero worship. Those were flush times of racing, of gambling, of drinking and—south of Mason and Dixon's line especially—of dueling. Thornton took the eager, precocious boy in hand and "made a man of him." It was such a "man" as the colonel, his father, absent most of the time on western duty, never dreamed.

Matters were in such strained relations now when the colonel and his wife stopped at Charleston on their way north. And it was at this fateful moment that the last stroke fell.

The day before the Ellingham ball Colonel Haverill learned from the New York newspapers and simultaneously by letter from his lawyers there that his son was an absconder and a fugitive. Under suspicion on account of irregularities discovered at the Howard bank, he had fled, no one knew whither, to escape arrest, leaving his wife deserted and without resources.

Colonel Haverill's grief and rage were fearful.

"I might have expected it," he said. "And yet, hadn't I enough else on my mind just now without being brought to face a thing like this? Well, let fate deal with him. He deserves the worst that can happen. I am through with him. I have always done my best by him; now I have other and more important duties to perform. I am an officer of the United States army."

"Don't judge him too hastily, John. May it not have been that it was only after another was dependent on him that the debts of a thoughtless spendthrift—for he was nothing worse—drove him to desperation—to fraud, perhaps—I will not believe crime."

"His wife shall be provided for—my lawyers have their instructions," replied the colonel curtly.

Mrs. Haverill stole softly out of the room, closing the door behind her, passed through the spacious galleries and down the broad winding stairs to the drawing room.

Everywhere, as Mrs. Haverill descended after her troublous interview with the colonel, the younger people were blissfully lounging or circulating about, still talking love and war.

They had a new and breezy accession to their ranks in the person of Jenny Buckthorn, U. S. A. She was the daughter of bluff old General Francis Buckthorn of the regular army and had been born and brought up in a military camp on the western plains.

"We're going to see active service now—sooner than you civilians seem to suspect," announced Jenny to an attentive group of listeners under the front portico. "Our boys are already under marching orders in Washington. Your General Beauregard is riding his high horse, it seems. Tell him for me that he'd better mind what he's doing or we'll have Heartsease down here after him."

"And who is Heartsease, pray?" inquired Gertrude Ellingham, who of late was developing an unwonted interest in the federal military service.

"Heartsease? Brevet Captain Heartsease? Why, he is—one of my favorite cavalry officers. You'll hear about him."

"Yes—wherever Miss Buckthorn is for five minutes or so," whispered Bob Ellingham to Madeline West. "I know Heartsease. Not a bad fellow, but the biggest fop that was ever misdealt into the cavalry. You ought to hear what General Buckthorn says about him. Wears a single eyeglass at guard mount, and carries a scented lace handkerchief at cross country drill."

Gertrude Ellingham drew Jenny aside and asked her:

"How is it to have a sweetheart who is a soldier?"

"It's all right," answered Jenny promptly. "I wouldn't have a sweetheart who wasn't a soldier—a northern soldier, of course."

A flush of pleasure stole over Gertrude's face, then died out as suddenly as it had come.

Madeline West murmured to Robert Ellingham:

"It is only lately that I have realized there are northern soldiers and southern soldiers. I thought there was but one flag, and that you all served under it."

"That is what I was brought up to believe," replied the young lieutenant, "but some unaccountable change has come about."

"But it seems to me," interposed Kerchival West, "that the people of Charleston are taking an extraordinary interest in the preparations to bombard Fort Sumter. They look forward to such an event as if it were to be a gala day."

It was at this juncture that Mrs. Haverill appeared. Before she had time to join the group Thornton hastened forward to meet her and said in a low, hurried tone:

"I must see you alone. I have important news for you."

"Are there—any further tidings of Frank?" she inquired eagerly.

"Yes. We must not talk here"—as they passed out together into the hall and paused at the foot of the stairs—"Frank is here in Charleston."

* * * * * * * *

The halls were decked and garlanded, ball dresses were laid out in readiness, and the young people were practicing minuets.

Toward twilight Kerchival West and Robert Ellingham strolled across the Battery park and along the old sea wall together.

"Bob, old comrade," the former began, "I have something I want to mention to you."

"Is it about Thornton?"

"It is about Mrs. Haverill, the colonel's wife."

"I understand—certainly, old boy—tell me all you know about it."

"Well, I was passing along the gallery of the second floor on my way to my room when I heard a muffled scream, then a lady's voice uttering violent, or, rather, hysterical, exclamations. The sounds came from one of the principal guest rooms, as I supposed, but whose I didn't know. Then the door was opened hastily, and Mrs. Haverill appeared, looking alarmingly ill or else terribly frightened and trembling with excitement."

"And was any one with her?"

"Not that I know of. I did have an impression— Anyway, she recovered herself quickly after I had saturated my handkerchief with ammonia and eau de cologne and anything else that chanced to be at hand and given it to her. It would be all right, she said, and I was not to let such a foolish little incident disturb me on any account. Still"—

"Still, the 'foolish little incident' must have had a serious cause behind it, eh?"

"So I thought. But it may have been only a mouse."

"Or it may have been Thornton. I was right," exclaimed Ellingham, striking the clinched fist of one hand into the palm of the other.

"Then, by heaven, Bob"—

"It mustn't get to the colonel. Leave Thornton to me."

"A pretext is all that is necessary. If you don't find it I will."

They shook hands in silence, then hurried in to dress.

Robert and Kerchival were as eager as any one for the dancing, yet they could not enter into the spirit of the affair and engage their partners (as a matter of fact, these latter, meaning chiefly Madeline and Gertrude, did not make an early appearance in the parlors) until their anxiety about Mrs. Haverill should be allayed. Would she find an excuse to avoid the ordeal of gayety under the eyes of at least two persons who knew of the shock she had suffered but a few hours previously?

LAST SAD RITES FOR MR. BADGER

Esteemed Resident of West Quincy Laid at Rest

The funeral of ex-councilman William E. Badger, who died Wednesday morning, took place this afternoon from his home, 116 Crescent street. The demise followed an operation which was performed about two weeks ago, Mr. Badger not being able to survive the shock.

Services at the house were conducted by Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, pastor of the Bethany Congregational Church. Several selections were rendered by the Temple quartette. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery. The bearers were Fred L. Badger, George L. Badger, Russell W. Badger and J. Frank Merrill.

The deceased was a member of Rural Masonic lodge and other Masonic bodies. A delegation of brother members attended the funeral. A profusion of floral tributes testified to the esteem in which Mr. Badger was held.

He leaves a widow and three sons, Louis K., district engineer of the fire department, Harold and Irving.

Mr. Badger was well and favorably known in West Qiuncy where he was born and reared. He was educated in thep ublic schools of Quincy, became a member of the firm of Badger Bros., and was councilman at large for three years. He was a past member of the Board of Health.

MONUMENT TO LABOR LEADER

Carved From Quincy Granite to Be Dedicated Sunday

IN CALVARY CEMETERY

The beautiful memorial erected by the Steam Engineers Union of America to Frank B. Monghan, who was Past General President of the union and Managing editor of the International Steam Fitters, a union publication, erected in Calvary cemetery will be formally dedicated Sunday afternoon. The Steam Engineers of Boston and other parts of the county will meet at the Forest Hills station at 2 o'clock and march to the cemetery. After the dedication a banquet will be held at the Revere house.

The monument is cut of the famous Ballou dark blue granite and was quarried and cut at the plant of John C. Ballou at West uincy. It is all polished and consists of two bases and a die. The bottom base is 6-8 by 4-8. The second base 5-8 by 3-8 and the die 4-4, by 2-4 by 6-6.

On the front and back faces of the second base is the name "Monghan". On the top of the die there has been carved a steam guage about which are the words "International Steam Engineers." The top of the die is also elaborately carved.

On one of the two faces of the die is the following inscription:—

"Erected to the memory of Frank B. Monoghan. Born in Providence, R. I. 1859. Died in Boston, Mass., May 6, 1909 aged 50 years Erected by the International Union of Steam Engineers."

The inscription on the opposite face of the die is as follows:—

"Erected by the International Union of Steam Engineers, to perpetuate the memory of Frank B. Monghan, Past General President and Managing Editor of the International Steam Fitter, by resolution adopted at the Denver convention 1910. The following committee was appointed by General President Max Comerford to take charge of the erection; W. R. F. Whelan, local 16, Boston, Mass., Chairman P. G. Horan, local 20, New York City, Secretary, James Hannahan, local 69, Chicago, Ill., Treasurer, Harry Hebler, local 68, Newark, N. J. T. J. Roberts, local 507 Oakland, Cal."

BRIEFS

Mrs. Jennie Dolan is ill at her home on Brackett street.

Mrs. Thereca Grant of Granite street has recovered from her recent illness.

Mrs. E. E. Willey of Walker street is confined to her home with the grip.

Charles Pero Niles of Nashville, Tennessee is the guest of his cousin, Charles F. Bryant of Beach srteet.

K. E. Bumpus has severed his connections with the E. J. Murphy Rexall store to enter the wholesale shoe business.

Herbert Burch of East Squantum street who suffered with the pleurisy some six weeks ago is convalescent and left Friday for Jeffrey, N. H. where he will remain several weeks to recuperate.

J. M. Brady deputy of Commerce and Labor of the Board of census at Washington arrived in town this morning for the purpose of making an inspection of the accounts of the city. He will remain in Quincy until he has inspected the finances of all departments of the city.

☞"Everybody's doin' it." Doin' what? Going to the Revels, of course.

BRAINTREE PHILERGIANS.

The next regular meeting of the Philergians will be Tuesday, January 21. Miss Mildred Maddocks will lecture on "What to Eat and Why."

On Wednesday the art class heard Pietro Isola's last lecture in the course on art of Italy and Spain. He threw on the screen many excellent photographs of the works of Jusepe Ribera and Bartoleme Murillo, Diego Velasquez and Francisco Goya—the last two Mr. Isola considers the stronger class.

The first lecture by Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney to the class in modern literature will be next Monday, January 13, at 2.30 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Henry W. Davenport, 174 Middle street. Mrs. Gurney's subject will be "Contemporary Literature in its Relation to the Problems of Life."

The reception committee will be composed of the members of the parish committee at the time the church was dedicated and are Dr. George B. Rice, Walter J. Wellington, Charles T. Baker, Frank A. Page, Frank W. White, Walter E. Simmons, Chandler W. Smith and Walter M. Hatch.

MRS. GRIFFIN'S BIRTHDAY

Guests Surprised Hostess by Appearing in Costume

One of the jolliest mid winter gatherings was that Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Griffin of 1067 Hancock street, when they entertained a large party of friends, in honor of Mrs. Griffin's birthday. The nearness to Twelfth Night prompted the guests to appear in costume, although the fact they were to so appear was not known to the host and hostess until the guests arrived. The costumes were many and varied and created no end of merriment.

In addition to this the guests brought many gifts, and in keeping with the spirit of the occasion, many of these gifts were in the nature of joke gifts which served to add zest to the occasion.

During the evening Mrs. Griffin, who is an accomplished vocalist, rendered a number of selections being accompanied by John Mahon, who also gave a number of instrumental selections, which with the various games served to make the evening pass all too quickly.

During the evening a birthday supper was served, and at a late hour the guests reluctantly took their departure.

☞All gallery tickets for the Revels are $1.00 except a few in the front row, specially reserved, which are $2.00.

IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Atlantic Joins the Ranks Marching For Betterment

A new organization known as the Atlantic Improvement Association came into existence Friday evening with 22 members. The meeting was held at Mr. Hendrie's store on East Squantum street. A constitution and by-laws were adopted. Committees were appointed to look after street improvements, also gas and electric lights, the idea being to get improvements for the new section of Atlantic which is rapidly growing.

The president of the association is Mr. Baker of the Boulevard and W. H. Davis of Ocean street is secretary.

LYCEUM COURSE.

The second attraction in the Lyceum course will be the famous Venetian band under the leadership of Signor Calefty Victor. This band has won for itself a renoun that has not been surpassed by any concert band that has toured this country. The Y. M. C. A. was fortunate to secure an open date with this famous organization.

Probably no feature has been more warmly received than their brass sextet, two and three encores being an almost nightly experience. Their rendering of Donnizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor" is almost the perfection of execution and never fails to enthuse the audience. Miss Evangeline Hiltz, a colotura soprano who was secured to fill an emergency engagement with the band last year, success was so pronounced that the management promptly secured her for this season and she shares the honors with the band. No more satisfactory attraction could have been secured for this number in the course.

Arrangements have been made with the Street Railway to have cars leave Wollaston at 7.30 for Music hall also from Wollaston Park. At the close of the concert there will be cars at the Music hall to take the people to Wollaston without their being obliged to walk to the center.

TWELFTH NIGHT REVELS.

Under the auspices of the Art committe of the Quincy Women's club the program for the Twelfth Night Revels will be:

Bugle call.
Grand procession of the Populace.
Proclamation by the Beadle.
Bugle call.
Entrance of the Great Cake with its Bearers.
Cutting of the Cake by the Beadle.
Distribution of the Cake.
Bugle call.
The King and Queen are discovered, and announced.
Coronation Procession of King and Queen, Crown-bearers, Attendants and Father Christmas.
Father Christmas crowns the King and Queen.
Speech of the King from his throne to the loyal Populace.
Youths and Maidens from the Populace sing and dance before the King and Queen.
Lusty Troubadours and Cavaliers revel in song and rhyme.
The Court Jester makes the fun contagious.
Grand Tournament between Knights mounted on fiery chargers.
Revelers take partners and dance the Portland Fancy, Serpentine, etc.
Procession to the Banquet Hall.
Feasting.
General Dancing, Virginia Reel, Serpentine Battle, etc., etc.
12 P. M. the revelry ceases.

PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT.

The entertainment given in Y. M. C. A. hall under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary, Friday evening, was a delightful one, although the program was changed at the last minute, Mr. Finch of Everett, who was to have given the address, being unable to come owing to a severe cold. Charles H. Johnson came to the rescue and gave his stereopticon lecture on George Washington, and many expressions of appreciation were heard from the audience.

The audience joined in singing America at the close and Mr. Johnson was given a vote of thanks.

The musical program rendered by William Childs, cornet; Theodore Gullicaslee, violin and Edward Bullock, pianist, was of a high order.

QUINCY HIGH LOST TO TECH

Local Boys Not Discouraged by Strength of Opponents

PLUGGED RIGHT ALONG

Quincy High lost their first basket ball game to Tech, '14 at the gym Friday afternoon, 36 to 16.

The first half was Tech's throughout. Quincy showed no signs of team work and found it unable to cover their man. This was due to the line formation and accurate passing of the visitors.

Williams and Price had things all their own way in the passing line. The age and experience of the visitors was a real asset, while Coach LaRose is gradually developing good timber, having been obliged to start his boys on the rudimentary principles of the game and the boys show improvement and keener knowledge of the game every time they play.

It was not infrequent to see three, sometimes four Quincy men, having the ball in their possession and through inaccuracy losing chances to score. Even while crowding around under the cage they seemed to be the victims of an unkindly fate. At other times the passing of some was wild in the extreme.

During the second period Quincy played a fairly classy game. They stuck to their man better, played harder and judging from some of the cries from the balcony they should have roughed it. However they continued playing the game with a vigorous spirit trying to be clean and neat and on the whole displayed as sportsmanship an attitude as was ever witnessed on the floor.

In a way, they did well not to have a larger score against them. The spirit is commendable of all the players, and it would not be surprising to see the boys work into a fast quintet. Showing a real desire to learn the principles of basket ball they are giving it their time and Coach La Rose is highly pleased. A most regrettable feature is the poor attendance at the games. If a champion team was playing the gallery would be crowded and at this time, when the hearty support of the students is needed, they are conspicuously absent.

The score:

| TECH' 14 | | QUINCY H. S. |

| Tirrell rf | | lf Jenkins |
| Williams lf | | rb Larkin—Crane |
| Ruoff Fox c | | c White |
| Price rb | | lf S. Prout—Safford |
| Bryant lb | | rf Andrew—E Brown |

Score 36—16. Goals from floor, Tirrell 4, Williams 4, Ruoff, Price 4, Bryant 3, Crane, White, Safford, Andrews 2, E. Brown. Goals from fouls Tirrell 2, Williams 2, Safford, Andrews 3. Referee McKay. Scorer Mansur. Timer, Atwood. Time 2-20m.

DEFENDANT PROTECTED

From Effect of Previous Convictions in Court

BY SULLIVAN'S BILL

Representative Michael T. Sullivan presented a petition and bill Friday, to prevent previous convictions being communicated to the Judge by Probation Officer until the defendant has been found guilty. The bill amends section 96 of Chapter 217 of the Revised Laws.

Its present condition makes it the duty of the Probation Officer to supply that information and allows him to do it while the case is still on trial.

The bill was drafted by John D. Mackay, J. J. McAnarney, Frank A. Tirrell all of Quincy, and Jacob Wilbur of Brockton.

The introduction of convictions while a trial is being held oftentimes become a factor in the judgment. The passage of the amendment will eliminate this hearing and will be incidental only to the judgment.

FOUR FOOT PROTEST UP TO TAFT ON PROPOSED IMMIGRATION BILL

Jewish Residents of Quincy Active in Their Opposition to the Measure Submitted

Brawn and Muscle Not Illiteracy the Tests in the Great West

A four foot protest against the passage of the Burnett-Dillingham bill with the illiteracy test was today forwarded to the New England Conference Committee to be sent to President Taft. The petition bears the signatures of representative people of all races and asks President Taft to veto the bill in case it is passed by the house. The petition reads as follows:

His Excellency, The President of the United States, Hon. William H. Taft.

We, the undersigned citizens of New England do protest against the enactment of the Burnett-Dillingham bill. We belive that the illiteracy test as proposed by this legislation is not only unfair to the immigrants but is inimical to the best interests of this country.

We feel that the illiteracy test is no criterion of desirability and fitness. The time has not come when all immigration to the United States should be stopped. This land has still room enough for many millions more and the actual success and prosperity of this country depends upon a large increase in Western, South Western and Southern states, where brawn and muscle and not illiteracy must count.

Therefore, your petitioners humbly request that your Excellency veto the bill.

The petition was circulated and orginated by the members of the Young Men's Hebrew Association of Quincy, under the direction of Joseph B. Grossman, one of the committee who is in touch with the workings of the New England Conference Committee. The protest has the hearty endorsement and support of Congressman James M. Curley who has been ably fighting its passage by the house.

LABOR MEN PAY HONOR TO DEAD

Monument to Frank B. Monaghan Dedicated Sunday

QUINCY GRANITE SHAFT

James Duncan of Quincy, vice President of the American Federation of Labor, was one of the speakers at the dedication of the monument to Frank B. Monaghan at Calvary cemetery Sunday afternoon. Mr. Duncan said that "Monuments throughout the world, have generally been erected in memory of military or naval heroes, and have been connected with the spilling of blood. This shaft has been raised for a nobler purpose, in the memory of one who devoted his whole being to the conserving of life and the betterment of the condition of humanity.

"For several years I was a close friend and fervent admirer of Mr. Monaghan. He was a first-class union man from early in the morning until late at night. When herealized that his end was near he asked me as his last earthly request that he be buried plainly as an engineer and with the union button pinned on his coat."

The dedication, or unveiling exercises were attended by many labor men from all parts of the country. In the evening the engineers held a banquet at the Revere House. The monument as stated in a recent issue of the Ledger, is of Quincy granite and was cut at the quarry of John C. Ballou.

POMONA GRANGE BUSY SESSION

State Officer Installed Those of Weymouth at Braintree

SUPPER AND BUSINESS

The Farmers' Institute, which is composed of the members of the Weymouth Agricutural and Industrial society and the Mayflower Pomona Grange, held its annual meeting last Saturday afternoon and evening in Odd Fellows' hall, South Braintree.

In the afternoon occurred the installation of the officers elect by E. E. Ludlow, Worthy Overseer of the State Grange. The officers are as follows:

Master—George H. Estes, Halifax.

Overseer—H. W. Spear, South Weymouth.

Lecturer—Miss Annie B. Holmes, Hanson.

Steward—H. C. Bacon, East Bridgewater.

Assistant Steward—Lawson B. Twitchell, East Braintree.

Chaplain—L. C. Bartlett, Marshfield.

Treasurer—Laurence W. Seymour, East Bridgewater.

Secretary—Winthrop Fillebrown, Plympton.

Gatekeeper—William B. Wood, Halifax.

Ceres—Miss Eva W. Hatch, East Bridgewater.

Pomona—Miss Emily Davis, South Braintree.

Flora—Mrs. Elizabeth B. Fillebrown Plympton.

Lady Assistant Steward—Mrs. Emily Baker, Hanson.

Executive Committee—Charles F. Holbrook of Whitman and Leroy M. Peterson of Duxbury.

At the conclusion of these exercises an address on "Poultry" was given by Dr. R. W. Sanborn of Holbrook, and an opportunity was given his auditors to ask questions on this subject.

At six o'clock a supper with a varied and appetizing list of viands was served by the following committee from the local grange: Mrs. George W. Burton, Mrs. Otto Schrader, Mrs. Jennie Holbrook, Mrs. William M. Call, Mrs. Mary Litchfield and Mrs. E. A. Hollis.

In the evening the Pomona degree team worked the 5th degree on a class of 22 candidates and afterwards there was a business meeting. Representatives were present from the granges in Duxbury, East Bridgewater, Halifax, Hanson, Hingham, Pembroke, Plympton, Rockland, South Weymouth Webster, Marshfield, Whitman and Braintree. The affair was successful and instructive and all expressed their pleasure at being able to attend.

BELYEA—BATES.

Mansfield Albert Belyea, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Belyea and Miss Elva Spencer Bates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Bates, were united in marriage at the Baptist parsonage, Braintree, Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Rev. J. A. Mitchell performed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Belyea will make their home at the corner of Washington street and Robinson avenue, Braintree.

Mrs. E. C. Wheeler, Jr., formerly of Quincy has been elected president of the Boston Women's Golf Association.

ALL THOUGHT OF HOMELAND

Scandinavians Enjoyed All the Dances of Their Country

OLD SETTLERS ENTERTAINED

With visions of sociallbility of the homeland, The Old Settlers entertained about 75 couple of Scandinavians at Faxon hall, Saturday night at an old fashioned time. An entertainment, singing, reading and dancing completed the program.

Whole families, eager to participate, attended with their parents, and while the youngsters sat upon the stage watching their parents doing the folk dance they appeared like a medley of colored ribbon.

Carl Basten and August Vidman were the big hits of the evening. Aside from furnishing music for the dancing they ranked foremost on the entertainment program.

The committee members, all of whom have been Quincy residents for over 20 years, gave short speeches and songs. They were Andrew Johnson, Otto Gelotte, Peter M. Carlson, Nils A. Johnson, Charles Colberg, Gus Lundberg, Edward J. Sandberg.

PARISH REUNION OF ST. MARY'S

Meeting Planned for This Week to Make Arrangements

The members of St. Mary's parish are to meet in the music room of the church Wednesday evening to formulate plans for the annual reunion. This event is one of the leaders of the year's social events and St. Joseph's hall will be the scene of the festivities. Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady will direct the committees.

BRIEFS

Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of Bethany church exchanged Sunday morning with Rev. Charles Clark of North Weymouth.

The announcement has come east of the engagement of Rev. H. Houghton Schumacher, formerly of Quincy, now of Iowa City, Iowa, to Miss Edith Louise Mather.

The many Quincy friends of James Donovan will be relieved to learn that he is recovering from his recent serious illness.

Commissioner of Public Works Fred E. Tupper left Saturday to attend the Civil Engineers convention in New York city. The main topic of the convention will be road building.

A regular meeting of the West Quincy Improvement Association will be held at St. Jean hall Thursday evening. The speaker of the evening will be Dock and Water Front Commissioner Frank Fessenden Crane, who will speak on the public dock question. He will be prepared to answer any questions that may be asked.

☞Only 4 days to the Revels.

$10,000 FOR CHANNEL AND BASIN AT HOUGHS NECK LOOKS GOOD

Port Directors to Be Authorized to Deepen and Widen Channel From Pig Rocks to Landing

Movement to Make Uniform Car Fare From Quincy to Braintree and Weymouth

(Special to the Ledger)

State House, Jan. 13,—By a bill introduced by Representative William J. Leslie, authority is provided for the directors of the Port of Boston to spend not less than $10,000 out of the Port of Boston fund for making improvements at Houghs Neck.

The directors are to make a survey and examination to widen and deepen the steamboat channel from a point opposite what is known as Pig Rocks to a point 30 feet above the Quincy public landing at Bay View avenue, and to dredge a suitable basin for the public use with six feet of water at extreme low tide.

Rev. John F. Dwyer, of Weymouth, has filed a bill which asks that the Bay State Street Railway be compelled to issue transfers on the payment of a five cent fare, to passengers on the Quincy avenue lines between Fore River Ship Building yards and Newcomb square in Quincy and Columbian Square in Weymouth, in either direction. The purpose of the bill is to equalize fares between Braintree and Weymouth for Quincy passengers.

INSTALLATION AND SUPPER.

The regular meeting of Paul J. Revere Woman's Relief Corps No. 103., will be held in Grand Army hall, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Supper will be served at 6 o'clock and the annual installation of officers of the corps will be held at 7.30 o'clock.

BROTHERS ATTENDED FUNERAL.

A large delegation of members of Court John Ericson, Foresters of America, escorted the remains of Lawrence H. Peterson, a deceased brother to Mt. Wollaston cemetery, Sunday afternoon. Services were held at St. Paul's M. E. church by Rev. Carl Rydstrom. Mr. Peterson died Friday at his home, River street, Mattapan, after a long illness. He was in his 53rd year and leaves a widow and three children, Walborg, Mabel and Fridolph.

CLAN McGREGOR 700 STRONG

Big Membership Mark to Be Celebrated in Due Form

Tonight will be a red letter one in the history of Clan McGregor O. S. C. for in addition to the installation of its newly elected officers the advent of the lodge to a membership of 700 will be taken due notice of. Under the reign of Alfred O. Diack, the Chief, the clan has made rapid strides during the past year. Its growth has been remarkable and as Mr. Diack will reign over the clan during the coming year there is no reason why the growth the present year will not be as great as there is plenty of eligible material from which to draw its membership.

GOING ON THE STAGE.

Miss Elizabeth Deane of 210 Whitwell street gave a farewell party to a number of friends, Sunday. Miss Deane who is a graduate of Woodward Institute is going to New York to study theatrical work. She has appeared in a number of amatuer plays and her pleasing personality and skill has helped her to score a success.

Among the guests were the popular minstrels, Leo Martin and William Powers of Cambridge.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Would you sooner be president of the United States or manager of the New York Highlanders?

Sockless Jerry Simpson would have been overpowered with envy if he had seen that Garden of Allah gang troop into the South Station Sunday night, without a shoe or stocking. They all wore slip shods.

If the Lolly Flynns finally get settled there may be a chance of some one else getting in the lime light.

Joseph Ettor's New York speech was clever if he is correctly reported, but his meaning was clear.

All of which might tend to the observation that it is not the illiterate immigrant who is the most dangerous.

If the control of the money got into the hands of bad men it might be hard on the country declares Mr. Baker. Have a crowd of white robed, long winged, saintly eyed angels got the upper hand at the present time?

The legislature is as usual flooded with petitions and bills many of which would make proper ornaments for a waste basket just before the arrival of the janitor.

If the fire laws at present were enforced there would be no need of fiddling away time on a lot of others to create new jobs. The men on the jobs at the present time have little enough to do.

More samples of the variety of New England weather were crowding each other for a place, Sunday.

While every one is busy hammering Mr. Mellen for the conditions of the New Haven have any of them stopped to consider how much of the responsibility should be borne by our good friend Mr. J. P. Morgan.

Things have come to a pretty pass when the law steps in and censures boxers for not appearing to keep their engagements. They should be encouraged in such breaches of ring etiquette.

That gang of Braintree clothes line thieves must have felt some mad when they found the boys underclothing would not fit them.

The City Council of 1913 will buckle down to regular work tonight.

That "Tea party," or "Beer party," is taking up a lot of attention at the present time. As the party attained their object very few of the present day care much where they made their start from.

The jackies must have their pets even if they are conveyers of disease.

Were the Republican legislators received with open arms or the frozen mit when they reached their several bailiwicks Friday night?

Boston in nine years will be observing the 100th anniversary of its incorporation as a city.

Boston will have only four offices to fill in the election Tuesday, and of the four the school committee contest has held the centre of the stage.

The more the wrangle continues over the senatorship the more convinced people are that the time has long since passed when senators should be elected by popular vote.

GOVERNMENT BY COMMISSION.

Cities all over the country are falling into line and marching along to the slogan of government by commission." In other words the municipalities are reducing the former cumbersome machinery of local government, where it is almost impossible to place responsibility and going in for smaller councils, elimination of ward lines in some cases, and other advanced ideas which seem to have worked very well in a great many places.

If the change operates to the benefit of cities, why in mercy's named would it not be equally as beneficial to states. Under the present system in Massachusetts, there is a governor, a lieutenant governor, a council, a senate, and house of representatives. The houses form the legislature. Much money is expended for his big body each year in salaries and mileage.

Much matter which is hardly worth considering is hurled into the legislature each year and the statute books are crowded with measures which are never enforced, yet cumulative legislation follows each year without any apparent benefit.

With so many in charge of the ship of state, it is not difficult to determine how easy it is to shift responsibility from one to the other. The governor blames the council, the council blames the governor, the governor blames the senate and house, the senate blames the house, the house blames the senate and both unitedly or separately blame the governor. So there you are. There are plenty of places on which to place the blame, but the whole machinery is so cumbersome, that it is difficult to apply a remedy.

If cities have solved the problem of good government by electing small bodies why would not the same thing apply to the state.

Such a course would save much in salary and mileage and at the same time the people would be in a position to more readily pass judgment as to responsibility if their desires were trifled with and they could more easily be able to make a change which would show to the officials that the people were not to be fooled all the time when their interests were at stake. At any rate the experiment is certainly worth a trial. It cannot make things any worse than they are at present and there is a good chance for making them better.

POPULAR VOTE.

However uncertain the people may have been in the past upon the advisability of electing senators by popular vote, the action of the Republican members of the legislature the past few days has certainly tended to eliminate any doubt upon the subject. The legislature of last year, jumped into the arena with its resolutions in favor of thus electing a senator and there was much clamor of Massachusetts as usual leading its sister states in the march of advancement, but the legislature did not go far enough. They were satisfied to let their work remain half finished, so that their much tooted energy lacked anything worth while and left the present body up against a peculiar situation.

The people at large are no doubt somewhat wearied of the present state of affairs and exhibition attendant upon it. If the preceding body had been half as progressive as it was credited with being, the people might have been spared the present farce. Gov. Foss opposed a special session of the legislature last year in the effort to solve the problem by putting it up to the people.

The governor now favors giving the people that chance. Last year, Mr. Lawson offered to defray the expenses of the special session to the tune of $50,000. Of course that was out of the question.

The governor claimed that the legislature at that time, had declined to act on several occasions and there was nothing to indicate that the body had changed its sentiment. Was this the real reason or was there a possible fear that with the way things were looking that some one who was an avowed candidate might break all precedent and slip into the place?

Stranger things have happened and the workings of the average politicians mind are varied and strange.

ACTIVE IN NEW YORK.

Joseph J. Ettor, recently acquitted of an offense charged against him in this state is quite active and a really central figure in the strike of the New York waiters. Mr. Ettor has made several speeches and according to the reports which have been published they were all clever, and in keeping with his many utterances during the terrible time at Lawrence about a year ago.

Here is what Mr. Ettor is quoted as saying in one of his New York speeches:

"Go back with your minds made up that it is the unsafest thing in the world for the capitalist to eat food prepared by members of your union."

It is clearly a master piece. Yet it would be a dull student who did not understand its meaning.

Accepted literally there seems to be but one construction to be put upon it, yet it hardly seems probable that an educated man, one who, as Ettor, is credited with being a total abstainer would make to a party of men whose minds were inflamed by their wrongs whether real or fancied.

If there is a hidden meaning, a covert conveyance of an untenable position by such language, it is a very serious matter. It points to a condition which should be met with promptly and vigorously. No half way measures could cope with such an attitude with any degree of success

The language is not in itself such as would cause unnecessary alarm, but it is the manner in which it might be uttered, the conditions surrounding the call for such a speech and the frame of mind of the listeners, which might produce evil and disastrous results. So that it might really prove the entering wedge of a campaign against law and order.

OVER 10,000 VOTES TODAY

Biggest Gain By Mrs. Marnock of the W. R. C.

WHO WINS WEEKLY PRIZE

Most of the leaders made large gains in the Washington Inauguration contest today, the aggregate increase being over 10,000. Mrs. Emma Marnock, the candidate of the Women's Relief Corps, captured 3,040 of these, and is well established in fourth place, with a possibility of jumping into third place soon.

Second in gain today is Sturgis Hunt, of the Y. M. C. A. who added 2,605. He continues a good second in the race, while Fred Williams, the leader, only gained 885 today.

A. R. MacKay, the Heptasophs candidate, added almost as many as Mr. Hunt, 2,325 and is doing good systematic work. It is a pleasure to count the votes of Mr. MacKay, is all his coupons are so carefully trimmed and stamped. No other candidate is so particular as Mr. MacKay.

Fourth in gain today is Mr. Bowditch with 1,020 votes, which puts him ahead of Mr. DeNormandie. He will not find it as easy to move up another place, but he has been doing great work of late.

Others to make gains today were J. Nathan, Richard Larkin, W. C. Luther, Clara Stoddard, and Richard J. Gray.

THE WEEKLY PRIZE

Theatre tickets offered as a prize for the biggest gain during the past week are awarded to Mrs. Marnock, who has surprised some of the leaders. She gained over 2,000 more than her nearest rival Mr. Bowditch. The biggest gains for the week were:

|---|---|
| Mrs. Marnock | 5,410 |
| Mr. Bowditch | 3,265 |
| Mr. Hunt | 2,605 |
| Mr. MacKay | 2,325 |
| Mr. Williams | 885 |
| Miss Morrissett | 420 |

It is the "reserved vote" which will count largely in the final returns, and someone well down in the list may win the free Washington trip or the diamond ring. There is a great hustle for coupons all over the city.

THE LAST COUPON.

The last coupon in this contest will be printed in the issue of Saturday, Feb. 8, and the polls will close a few days later. A great hustle is expected during the last days of the contest.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quiney, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

|---|---|
| Fred D. Williams, drug clerk | 40,530 |
| Sturgis Hunt, Y. M. C. A. | 29,015 |

FUND OF $10,000,000

Set Aside by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to Reclaim Fallen Women

Washington, Jan. 13.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has set aside $10,000,000 in bonds, title of which has not passed as yet, for the purpose of establishing the Rockefeller foundation, a charitable institution, the one and only object of which will be to reclaim women of the tenderloin, give them good homes and place them in lucrative positions where they will be self-supporting.

Stanley O. Finch, chief of the United States government bureau of investigation, will be in active charge of the entire work, with the exception of the finances, which will be under the control of Rockefeller and his associates.

The plan of Rockefeller recently was outlined by a man who expects to be in close touch with it, and its magnitude is appalling. Rockefeller expects to bring about the reform of these women by going at it in a business manner, and after he has put up the money to start the affair, to enlist the assistance of great business acquaintances and place these women in positions.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

All who attended morning worship at the Wollaston Congregational church, Sunday, were privileged to receive through Dr. Sneath's serman, a message unique in its development and strong in its powerful simplicity of appeal, a wonderful lesson in the value of endeavor.

The subject was "Drawing the Bow at a Venture." The text was taken from I Kings, 22:34; the story of the treacherous King Ahab's death at the hands of a Syrian soldier, "and a certain man drew a bow at a venture and smote the king of Israel between the joints of the harness."

Dr. Sneath began by speaking of the venturing spirit as we meet it in the business world. Continually we hear there the phrase "on a venture." The venturing spirit is characteristic of man; it is fostered in him from childhood. How often as children are we admonished, "nothing venture, nothing have;" "hitch your wagon to a star," etc., In the athletic world and the scientific world, as well as in the spiritual realm we meet this same venturing spirit.

Without it we would achieve nothing. In the business world, with its many difficulties, much is sometimes lost by the venture; but in the spiritual realm the loss cannot be so great as to interfere seriously with our possibilities for later accomplishment, and it may be to our great advantage. And in the spiritual realm, even with small investment, the possibilities of success in a venture are so great! For there is enough power in one word to change a human life. "The possibilities of a venture movement in life cannot be expressed," said Dr. Sneath. "It may result in some of the greatest movements in the Christian world; and there is not one of us who has not the power of venture. We are co-laborers with God, and he can guide us to the greatest results if we just have faith in an unlimited power. Have a little faith in a great God; this is necessary to the achievement of the greatest results." Also, we can never do what we would do in any but our own way. Many a good effort has failed because the individual tried to do it with the weapons or in the way of some one else. David encumbered with armor, could never have killed Goliath. It is well to remember that in life's great spiritual field each one must do his own work; we are limited to be sure, but we can at least 'draw the bow at a venture' in our own way. In the life we are living sometimes the greatest results are achieved by the smallest things done at a venture. Of course we can never know the results of our best endeavors until God reveals them to us. But even though the results never become apparent, it is well that we make the endeavor, for we do know that God never lets fail one thing done in his name and for his sake.

This whole impressive truth Dr. Sneath then summed up in Longfellow's beautiful lines: "I shot an arrow into the air."

The music included two anthems by the choir: Te Deum in C, and "Teach me, O Lord:" also a tenor solo "The King of Love My Shepherd is," rendered by H. R. Rogers. This was the first Sunday of Mr. Rogers' engagement with this church.

FIRST CHURCH.

The sermon of the Rev. A. L. Hudson, Sunday morning was a trumpet call to duty. He spoke his mind frankly and the congregation listened with manifest approval. There was a large attendance, as on preceding Sundays of late, indicating a revival of interest in the life of the church. Mr. Hudson spoke in part as follows:

"No religious service, even if it carry us into ecstasy, can do us any good at all unless it make itself evident in our daily lives. It must bear fruit. That is the real test of any religious exercise or instruction. We must endeavor to give practical expression during the week to the ideals which we acquire on Sunday. It won't do for us to settle back in snug complacency. It won't do for us to allow the church to deteriorate into a mere ecclesiastical club, nor allow it to be regarded as representing a moribund cause. We must exemplify the faith we profess in our private lives and we must unite to make our church a vital thing, an influence for good in the community. We Unitarians are misunderstood when we affirm our faith in salvation by character. We don't mean that we expect salvation in exchange for good works or good character. We are saved when we have overcome evil propensities in our own lives, when like Paul, we serve the law of God with the mind. We have then acquired the character which saves. Character is salvation."

In the evening, Guy Richardson, editor of "OUR DUMB ANIMALS," addressed the Young People's Religious Union in the chapel, speaking on the work of the Humane societies.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

The Wollaston Forum held a most interesting meting Sunday considering the subject "Can a Business man be both honest and successful?" Walter E. Simmons led the meeting and gave a splendid address.

Wednesday afternoon, at 2.30 the Ladies' Aid Alliance holds its regular meeting in the vestry with Mrs. Thomas Lacey in charge. The subject to be considered is Social Service. Many members of the Alliance will attend the neighborhood meeting in the Brockton Unitarian church Tuesday. There will be a social hour from 11 to 12, followed by luncheon; speaker Rev. A. M. Rihbany of Boston.

The 25th anniversary begins with a reunion of out-of-town and local members of the church Friday evening, Jan. 31.

The Junior Lend-a-Hand club meets at the home of Dorothy Sprague, 8 Park street, Tuesday at 4 o'clock.

Workmen have begun installing earphones in the church. They will be ready for use at the anniversary service.

The Wollaston Unitarian club meets Tuesday evening, dinner at 6.30. Hon. William S. McNary, chairman of the Harbor and Land Commission will speak on "Development of the Port of Boston."

At the Young People's Religious Union meeting, Sunday evening Charles H. Johnson will give a stereopticon lecture.

All who are not yet members of the church are invited to join this week.

One of the interesting features of the anniversary service is the announcement of gifts to the church.

The annual business meeting of the church will be held Monday evening, Jan. 27.

UNION SERVICES.

A good sized audience was present Friday evening for the closing services with the Wollaston Methodist church. The meetings have been well attended and full of interest which has increased as the meetings proceedec. This week the meetings will be held in the Hall Place Methodist Episcopal church Rev. T. C. Martin of West Quincy, preached the sermon, Friday evening taking for his text the words found in Mark 10:21. "One thing thou lackest." Mr. Martin interestingly pictured the young man's condition telling how he had missed his opportunity. He had gained wealth, prestige, he was an educated man for he showed evidence of intelligence. He said he must have been a man of moral standing for he had kept the commandments from his youth up He doubtless was a man of influence but still he lacked the one thing. He related incidents in the world of men getting wealth, position, and lacking the one thing.

DEVELOPMENT.

William S. McNary, the chairman of the harbor and land commission of Boston, and a member of the Board of Port Directors of Boston, will speak on the "Development of the Port of Boston," before the men's club of the Wollaston Unitarian church, Tuesday.

HELD IN $5000 BAIL

Monchamp Pleads Not Guilty to Attempt at Bank Robbery

Tilton, N. H., Jan. 13.—Louis Monchamp, the Manchester high school boy who, it is claimed, tried to rob the Citizens' National bank here and held up the cashier at the point of revolvers, was in the police court charged with assault with intent to rob. He pleaded not guilty.

Judge Fellows ordered the young man to furnish $5000 bonds for appearance at the March term of the Belknap county superior court. In default of bail he was committed to jail in Laconia.

The young man's brother lays the affair to incessant reading of dime novels.

UNION SERVICE FOR CATHOLICS

Holy Name Societies Will Attend Church at Atlantic

A meeting of the Holy Name Society of St. John's church was held Sunday afternoon and arrangements were completed to attend the Holy Name Union service at the Church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic, Jan. 19, at which service Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady of St. Mary's church will be the speaker.

President Edward Lennon presided. It was voted to assemble in the church yard at 3.30, weather permitting. Otherwise the members will meet in Parochial hall. Special cars will transport the members to and from the meeting. It is expected that the representation from St. John society will be a large one.

Similar plans are being perfected with regard to the members of St. Mary branch. It is thought that a large number of parishioners from the three churches will attend the services. Rev. Fr. J. P. Cuffe and assistant Rev. Fr. P. McNiff of the Sacred Heart church are making the arrangements.

ENDEAVORERS PLAN DRAMA

Much Activity Among Other Residents of Atlantic

The Christian Endeavor Society of Memorial church, are planning to give the Drama "Mr. Bob," in the vestry of the church in the near future. The proceeds will go towards putting a granolithic walk from the sidewalk to the church.

William Norton Stetson of Webster street, was the soloist at the Boston City Club, Saturday evening.

Welland Knapp of Henry street has returned to his home, after a month's automobile trip, through Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, with his employer.

The skating rink at the foot of Webster street, has been flooded once more, and the young people are anxiously waiting for cold weather.

Mrs. Sarah Thomas is seriously ill at her home on Atlantic street.

Mrs. Nash of Madison street, has been confined to her home for some time with the grip.

Miss Ruth Warren of Webster street, has left the 1915 class of Quincy High school and has entered the Burdett Business College.

William Northrop of South Weymouth, formerly of Atlantic, has accepted a position with Stone and Webster Company of Boston.

Rev. William McGlaughlin D. D. of Billings street spent Sunday in Salem and preached in the Universalist church of that city.

Mrs. Millard F. Baker of Walker street, is confined to her home with the grip.

B. F. Thomas has given up his position in the wholesale poultry market, and is taking a few weeks' rest, before looking for a position or entering business.

Misses Ada and Cora Harding, of Botolph street, spent the week end with their sister, Mrs. Coyle Allan of Worcester.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Dustan of Worcester, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Safford, of Clive street.

Horace Jenkins of Hartford Conn., spent the week end with his father, Frank Jenkins of Billings street.

Miss Clara Price, daughter of Edward Price of Glover avenue, was buried from her late home, Sunday afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. T. W. Davison was the officiating clergyman. Miss Price had been an invalid almost all her life.

A very pretty baptismal service took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burkhardt of Billings street, at three o'clock Sunday afternoon, when their infant son, Roger Frederick, was baptized by Rev. T. W. Davison. The boy was named after his two grandfathers, Roger Wilde, and Frederick Burkhardt. The Godfather was W. N. Prescott of Brookline and the Godmothers, Mrs. Prescott, and Miss Louise Wilde, Mr. Burkhardt's mother and sister were also present.

Robert Knapp is recovering at his home on Henry street from his operation for appendicitis, which was successfully performed in the Quincy City Hospital a short time ago.

Ralph Hendrie, of Henry street, is one of the successful hockey players of the Boston Arena.

FLYNN WEDS IN CHURCH

"Lefty" Now Elegible to Take Second Degree In Knights of Columbus

New Haven, Jan. 13.—"Lefty" Flynn, who a week ago eloped with and married Miss Rena Leary, better known as Irene Claire of the Winter Garden, sent word to the local council of the Knights of Columbus that he had again married Miss Leary, this time in accordance with the rites of the Catholic church.

"Lefty" took his first degree as a Knight of Columbus a month ago, but his marriage to the singer by an alderman barred him from taking the second degree.

Flynn was married at the cathedral in New York Saturday and will be given his second degree here Jan. 19.

JENNINGS INDICTED IN FIRST DEGREE

Grand Jury Returns Bill For Murder of MacPherson

Boston, Jan. 13.—William B. Jennings, known as "Kid Carter" in the prize ring, was indicted for murder in the first degree by the Suffolk county grand jury, the indictment resulting from the shooting of William MacPherson in a South End saloon.

The shooting occurred the same day the body of Mrs. Mildred Donovan of Revere was found in a marsh beside the Holy Cross cemetery, Malden. Jennings went with her to Malden from Revere New Year's eve. Even if the authorities should endeavor to connect Jennings with her death the evidence would not be presented to the Suffolk county, but the Middlesex county grand jury.

JACKIES RETAIN PETS

Doyle's Banishing Order Is Overruled by the Navy Department

Washington, Jan. 13.—Nobody is going to get the navy's goats if Assistant Secretary Winthrop can prevent it.

Rear Admiral Doyle, commandant of the Norfolk navy yard, incensed because the mascot of the New Hampshire recently "spilled" him on the deck of that battleship, issued an order that no mascots of any kind were to be permitted on naval vessels touching at his yard.

The assistant secretary overruled that order and said the sailors would be permitted to keep any mascots that the commander of their ship approved. Scores of letters of protest have poured in on Winthrop.

PLAN GENERAL STRIKE

Twelve Thousand Garment Workers In Boston May Go Out

Boston, Jan. 13.—Boston is facing a general strike of the 12,000 garment workers of this city. At a mass meeting last night it was stated that demands would be presented the cloak, waist and skirt manufacturers next Thursday or Friday.

These demands will call for an increase in wages, sanitary shop conditions and the abolition of the "sweat shop" and employment of minors under age of legal employment. There were over 2000 men and women at the meeting.

Castro Loses In Court

New York, Jan. 13.—Judge Holt in the federal district court dismissed the habeas corpus writ obtained in behalf of General Cipriano Castro, deposed President of Venezuela, by George G. Battle.

White Star Insures Fleet

London, Jan. 13.—The White Star line has begun to insure its fleet against loss for the ensuing year. The rates charged prior to the Titanic disaster have been nearly doubled.

BUSY SESSION LOOMING UP

For the Second Gathering of the City Fathers

PROMISES MANY THINGS

The second meeting of the City Council of 1913 will be held this evening, and if anything can be judged by the first meeting it will be an important one. Several important measures proposed at the first meeting and laid on the table, can be taken up on the call of any Councilman and acted upon. These matters include the appointment of constables, and the City Solicitor will probably be called upon for an opinion as to whether it is necessary for the Council to confirm these appointments.

In the calendar is the order authorizing the City Treasurer to borrow money in anticipation of taxes. It is also probable that President Bryant will announce the make up of the several standing committees of the council as the rules of the council of 1912 are in force. It is possible however that a special committee may be appointed to revise the rules so as to embody some of the recommendations of President Bryant particularly that the annual budget should be considered by the council as a whole.

BRITH ABRAHAM INSTALLATION

Organization Opposition to Proposed Immigration Bill

SOCIETY STRONG ONE

The installation of officers of the Pride of Quincy Lodge, Independent Order of Brith Abraham, 443 was held Sunday afternoon. The exemplification was by District Deputy Sol Levy and District Deputy Harry Leven of Boston. They were assisted by Past Presidents S. Berkowitz, Joseph Szathmary, Hyman Edelstein, Barnard Julien and Hyman Katz.

Guests were present from surrounding lodge centres and addresses were made by the officers. Refreshments were served.

The officers installed were:

President—Aaron Hurwitz.

Vice President—George Schwartz.

Recording Secretary—Jacob Grossman.

Financial Secretary—Sam Kadets.

Treasurer—Joseph Halter.

Inner Guard—Sam Katchen.

Trustees—Henry Litchman, Harry Grabowski, Barnard Julius.

Resolutions were adopted protesting against the passage of the Burnett-Dillingham bill with the illiteracy test.

Reports from the different officers were read and approved, showing the order to be in sound condition financially and with a large membership.

ANNIVERSARY OF WALKOUT

Occasion Is Celebrated by Former Strikers at Lawrence

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 13.—The mill workers of Lawrence who are affiliated with the Industrial Workers of the World celebrated yesterday the anniversary of the beginning of the great textile strike of last winter.

Meetings were held by the several nationalities represented among the operatives, each of which was addressed by Joseph J. Ettor.

Ettor recounted the success of the workers during the past year in securing advanced wages and predicted that the coming year would be one of success in the same direction, with the scene changed.

House Passes Pension Bill

Washington, Jan. 13.—After Representative Roddenbery of Georgia and his filibustering assistants had exhausted every parliamentary expedient, the house passed an omnibus pension bill. The bill carries increase in pensions for 237 veterans and widows.

MEMBERSHIP LIMIT REACHED

Granite City Club Admits Eight and Others Must Wait

Eight well-known business men were admitted to membership in the Granite City Club at its regular meeting Saturday evening, bringing the membership up to the limit fixed by the by-laws, namely 125. In addition to the eight admitted there are several names on the waiting list seeking membership.

The club is one of the most democratic clubs of the state. Politics are tabooed and the rules prohibit intoxicating liquors being brought into the rooms. The quarters are well equipped for the pleasure of the members being provided with three billiard and two pool tables in the main apartment. Then comes the parlor with its piano and reading table, which contains all of the leading magazines. The card room equipped with numerous card tables where many scientific games of whist are played during the long winter evenings and where on Wednesday evenings the regular whist tournaments are held. Beyond this in the kitchen which is well supplied with cooking utensils, a gas stove and everything necessary for the lunches that are served every Wednesday and Saturday evenings throughout the year.

Everything is free, the members dues entitling him to all privileges without additional compensation. Its members include practically all of the business men in and about City square as well as many from Quincy Point, Wollaston and West and South Quincy.

BOOK CASES DISTRIBUTED

Valuable Space in City Clerk's Office Cleared by Removal

Work was commenced this morning making some changes in the arrangement of the furnishings in the City Clerk's office at City Hall. Under a recent order of the City Council all of the surplus law books have been transferred to the law library at the court building. These books occupied much valuable space in the City Clerks office, which is now available for other purposes. The unit book cases which were filled with these law books have been placed in some of the other offices at City Hall where they can be used to better advantage.

MARCH 2—3—4 (INAUGURATION DAY.)

In Washington. Under direction of conductor the principal public buildings, including the Capitol, Congressional Library, White House, etc., etc., will be visited. Tuesday, March 4th is Inauguration Day. The Inauguration of the President of the United States, while lacking the pomp and glitter of a coronation, is a magnificent and soul-stirring spectacle. The first event of the day is the parade of the United States regulars, West Point and Annapolis Cadets, escorting President Taft and President-elect Wilson from the White House to the Capitol Building, in front of which takes place the actual Inauguration ceremonies, including the administration of the oath of office, to Mr. Wilson by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Then follows the great parade when the Army, Navy and Malitia and the veterans of the Civil War pass in review before President Wilson, and down Pennsylvania Avenue. Seats will be provided from which both parades will be seen to the best advantage. In the evening the grand Inauguration Ball is held in the immense Pension Building, for which the members of the tour will receive tickets. The entire floor of this building is cleared for this event and the decorations are on a lavish scale. The music is by the Marine Band and the toilettes of the ladies, the splendid uniforms of the members of the foreign legations and of the officers of the Army and Navy form a brilliant spectacle.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5.

On Wednesday a pilgrimage will be made to Mount Vernon, the home and last resting place of the immortal Washington. The trip will be made by electric train over the Washington-Virginia railway and a stop will be made at historic Alexandria and a visit paid to Christ Church, where Washington worshipped, and the Marshall House where Ellsworth was killed.

EAST SIDE WILL SEE HIM NO MORE

"Big Tim" Sullivan Cannot Be Cured of Brain Malady

New York, Jan. 13.—A pall of sadness lowered upon the Bowery district when it became known that Timothy D. Sullivan, affectionately hailed by the many thousands in that polyglot population as "Big Tim," had entered a sanitarium.

When the "big fellow" became a voluntary inmate of Dr. Bond's sanitarium at Yonkers months ago, it was hoped the fighting force in his makeup would be able to conquer the approaches of the malady attacking his brain.

With the application to the supreme court by 'Big Tim's" family for an order committing the old-time leader permanently to the care of the sanitarium, all hope of his recovery was abandoned and his beloved East Side will see him no more in life.

"SOME ONE IS LYING"

Murdock Is Angered by Questions at the Edey Inquest

Sayville, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Gardner Murdock went on the witness stand in the Edey inquest, but flatly denied he had ever agreed with Henry C. Edey, the millionaire broker who killed Mrs. Edey and himself, to exchange wives.

Murdock admitted he had started suit for $100,000 against Edey for alienation of the affections of Mrs. Murdock, which suit is said to have brought about Edey's murder of his wife and his suicide. At times Murdock grew angry, standing up and shouting his denials. He refused to say his wife had not told the truth, but declared "some one is lying."

FRENCH CABINET CRISIS

Millerand, Noted as Great War Minister, Resigns His Office

Paris, Jan. 13.—Alexandre Millerand, who won a reputation at home and abroad as a great war minister, resigned from that office yesterday. M. Lebrun, minister of colonies, has been appointed minister of war, and M. Besnard, under secretary of finance, replaces M. Lebrun, the under-secretaryship in the ministry of finance being temporarily abolished.

The incident is another echo of the famous Dreyfus case. The ministerial crisis was the direct outcome of the reinstatement of Lieutenant Colonel Du Paty de Clam in the French territorial army.

—The demands of business are doing more toward elminating the drink habit than all the temperance orators. The modern deterrent was summed up by the general superintendent of the Pennsylvania railroad, speaking of the renewed effort of the company to stamp out tippling among its employees, when he said, "You can't run trains and drink rum at the same time."—Milford Gazette.

CO-OPERATION OF HONEST MEN

Wanted In the Administration of the Nation's Affairs

LOST CONFIDENCE OF PUBLIC

Can Only Be Restored by Business Men—Pleads For Equal Access to Credit and Says Banking System of the Country Has Been Convicted—Strongly Opposed to Monopoly

Chicago, Jan. 13.—Big business interests in the United States have nothing to fear from President-elect Wilson, but he is strongly opposed to monopoly. He has made this plain in an address he delivered here to 350 men, representing the big industries and railroads of the middle west. Speaking under the auspices of the Commercial club, he made a plea for equal access to credit and asked the co-operation of the honest business men in the administration of the nation's affairs.

Mr. Wilson declared that until the credit of the country is extended, instead of confined to a few, there will be monopoly and a need of reform. The extension of the credit will do more to better business interests and kill monopoly than anything else. The public has lost confidence to a large extent in the business men of the country because of recent practices, and the business men alone can restore confidence. They should take a new point of view of public interests, he declared.

Mr. Wilson in his address said:

"The raw material of this country must be obtainable to every one on exactly the same terms. Absence of discrimination is what we need. I want to see the time when the hostile feeling the people of the country have toward the business men will be wiped out.

"The rank and file of the country don t believe that all are on equal terms in this country. It is believed that a poor man has a smaller chance than a rich one.

"God forbid that should be the fact. You have got to clear yourselves before the general jury. That is hard. It hurts my heart. There are some men whom I can't get to take part in the government of the country because they don't believe the public trusts them."

Speaking of credit and banking, he said:

"The banking system of this country doesn't have to be indicted. It has already been convicted. I haven't a single idea of indictment against any one, but there are reasons to believe that there are inner and outer circles of credit.

"The future belongs with the men who are not yet recognized by the men in this inner circle. The next generation is now struggling for a foothold and it finds it difficult. The bankers must see that the credit of the country is open to all on equal terms. That is the only solution of the great puzzle of this country.

"If the credits of this country were open equally to all, the Americans wouldn't have the impression that they are not. We must be set free from a future of monopoly. There will be monopoly until the business men cease to bring it about. I know there are some men who deliberately set up monopoly.

"You can't carry water against competition. I don't care how big business gets so long as it is honestly conducted.

"I hope the government will never take up the business of the country, because the people can do it themselves.

"What I want to say to you is that just so soon as you say there will be no monopoly in this country there won't be monopoly."

Doctor's Mistake Costs Him $11,700

New York, Jan. 13.—In an action in the supreme court brought by Mrs. Emily F. D'Zuibia against Dr. John Mann to recover damages for unskillfully treating the plaintiff for a fracture of the leg, she was awarded $11,700 by a jury, which held the doctor liable for not setting her broken leg right.

Wagon Load of Bricks by Mail

New York, Jan. 13.—A wagon load of bricks backed up at the South River, N. J., postoffice to be sent by parcel post. They are samples shipped to agents. Each brick was wrapped separately. Heretofore the bricks have been expressed at 25 cents each and by parcel post the cost is 18 cents.

WATERWAY IMPROVEMENTS.

Washington, Jan. 4 — Chairman Sparkman will call a meeting of the Rivers and Harbors Committee immediately upon the resumption of the session of the House, with a view to an agreement for an early report on the annual bill making appropriation for waterway improvements.

Consideration of the measure has not yet reached such a stage as to indicate what will be the size of the bill, except that, from expressions of members of the committee, it will nearly approximate the necessities of provision for continuing contracts, maintenance and outlays for such public works as are of obvious and imperative importance in carrying forward the progressive policy adopted by Congress responsive to widespread public opinion.

Both the Rivers and Harbors committee of the House and the Commerce committee of the Senate gave hearings during the ante-holiday period of the session, notably during the presence in Washington of members of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress. The work of the two committees has thus far been almost wholly given to these hearings, and but few more hearings, at least by the House committee, will be had before the bill is reported to the House, as it is planned shall be done early in the remaining days of the session.

During the meeting of the national waterways association the first week in December, delegations from that organization were heard by the two committees of Congress on problems affecting the larger inland waterways, notably the Mississippi and Ohio rivers.

In both instances respecting these two rivers, advocates of improvements laid stress upon the desirability and importance of the federal government taking over the entire scheme of improvement and abandoning the local co-operative practice on the Mississippi River, particularly in levee improvements and on the upper Ohio, at the junction of the Alleghany and Monongahela rivers, involving lock and dam construction and flood prevention projects.

The hearing on the Mississippi river's difficulties, in the discussion of the levee problem, disclosed that local co-operation in levee work had made excellent progress up to the disastrous flood of early last summer, the extent of the vast destructiveness of which convinced all interests that the safest dependence to prevent the recurrence of these numerous disasters, is for the federal government to be given complete control of the construction and care of the levees of the great water highway. It was particularly emphasized that the speediest possible improvement in accord with the policy was now more than ever manifestly the most vitally important of all river projects, in view of the approaching completion and opening to the commerce of the world of the Panama Canal.

The estimates from the engineers of the army for all river and harbor improvements call for the expenditure of about $44,000,000. There are millions more, already involved in former recommendations. At the first meeting of the Rivers and Harbors committee after the holidays an effort will be made looking to an adjustment of the difficulties indicated, and paring the amounts as far as possible to an equitable basis of distribution, keeping in mind always the two considerations of public economy and the superior importance of public works already projected or commenced.

PASSENGERS ARE SAFELY LANDED

Nearly Nine Hundred on Steamer as She Goes on Ledge

GREAT HOLE TORN IN HULL

Immigrants Swarm From Steerage and Fight Against Separation When Effort Is Made to Get Women and Children First Into Lifeboats—Uranium Strikes Off Shebucto Head

Halifax, Jan. 14.—Wives were torn from the arms of their husbands and children forcibly separated from fear-stricken parents in the rescue of the 880 passengers of the steamship Uranium, bound from Rotterdam to this port and to New York from Halifax, which drove up on the jagged ledge off Chebucto Head Sunday.

Terrified passengers, swarming from the steerage when the rush of water through the rent in the steamer's bow tilted the ship's length to stern at an alarming angle, resisted the efforts of the ship's officers to get the women and children first into the lifeboats.

In spite of the chaos of hysterical mothers and frenzied fathers, husbands and wives, the work of rescue was accomplished and every passenger borne over the waves in the ship's boats and in the surfboats of the shore lifesavers to the fleet of local craft which answered the first call of distress.

The snapping of the hawser of an anchor, heaved immediately after the liner struck, knocked down and severely injured several of the crew, including the quartermaster. These men were brought to the hospital here last night.

Not a life was lost, and although the craft was awash inside and still clinging to the rocky spur which drove in her bow plates, Captain Eustace refused to quit her, and will remain aboard until all hope of saving the vessel is gone.

The government steamer Lady Laurier and the steamer Bridgewater, to which the passengers were transferred from the wreck, arrived here last night.

The Uranium was riding in through a stiff storm of sleet and rain and was in the midst of a fog bank when she struck the ledge, about a fourth of a mile from the Chebucto Head light station.

Most of the passengers were between decks when the crash came and quick work on the part of the officers for a time kept all below.

The steamer's bow drove upon the rock with a ragged hole about ten feet long below the water line.

The rush of sea water filled the first compartment within a few seconds after the shock and before all the bulkheads could be closed the brine had swept astern and was rapidly filling the stern when stemmed by the compartment doors.

Signals of distress were hoisted and fifeboats unlimbered, and forty-five minutes after she struck, the Duncan Cove life station's crew were alongside in surfboats.

As the ship settled astern the passengers could no longer be kept below, and swarmed to the decks. Hundreds of them could understand no word of the officers, and scenes of the wildest excitement prevailed.

It was not until they were partly assured that some might be saved by the sight of the life savers standing by that any semblance of order could be gained.

The steamer's wireless call for aid was caught at the Camperdown station and word was flashed from there to this city.

C. H. Harvey, marine and fisheries agent, was warned and in turn notified R. Holland, the Chebucto lighthouse keeper, and the nearest life saving stations.

The government steamer Lady Laurier was caught outside by wireless and with a fleet of other local craft hastened to the rescue.

The engines of the Uranium were stopped when it became apparent that no effort of theirs could free the liner and all attention directed to the life boats.

C. H. Harvey, while in communication with Captain Eustace by wireless, ordered him to put off the passengers at once, and when the Herring Cove life savers reached the liner's side the work of transferring them was started.

It was then that frightened men and women fought against separation from relatives. The order of women and children first was met by a storm of objection, and it became necessary to wrest women from husbands and children from parents.

The fate of separated mothers and children and husbands and wives on the Titanic seemed to be uppermost in the minds of the passengers. Although the rain and sleet was falling, there was really no rough water.

The disembarkation was finally accomplished by the ship's boats, boats from tugs and the surfboats of the lifesavers and all the passengers and injured seamen taken from the Uranium without serious accident.

POLICE GRAFT CHARGES

Two Inspectors and a Captain May Be Indicted In New York

New York, Jan. 13.—On corroboration of the story to be told by George A. Sipp to the John Doe grand jury hangs the indictment this week of two police inspectors, a captain and several policemen. Sipp has given information to Assistant District Attorney Groehl, which Groehl believes is more than amply sufficient to indict these policemen as soon as a corroborating witness is heard. This corroboration is expected to come from Sipp's son, Mrs. Sipp and several other witnesses whose names Sipp has given to District Attorney Whitman.

Sipp will remain in seclusion in New Jersey until he is brought here to appear before the grand jury. Groehl will remain there with him to familiarize himself with the man's story and to protect him from outside interference. Sipp and his son are being watched, it is declared, by men sent to New Jersey to spy on him. Sipp has declared his life has been threatened if he testifies.

LAST REMNANTS REMOVED

Work Connected With Raising the Maine Has Been Completed

Washington, Jan. 13.—Work of removing the last remnants of the wreck of the old battleship Maine and the accumulations that gathered about it in the bottom of Havana harbor has been completed. Colonel Black of the corps of engineers of the army, who was detailed to carry out the undertaking, has submitted a general report on the subject.

Following the removal of the afterportion of the Maine, which was floated last February and towed to sea and buried on March 16, it still was necessary to remove the cofferdam, which had been built around the wreck, as well as to remove clay, rocks and other accumulations so as to restore the site to the condition it was when the battleship went to the bottom. This has been done.

CAPTAIN AMUNDSEN RECEIVES A MEDAL

Formally Recognized as Discoverer of the South Pole

Washington, Jan. 13.—Captain Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer, was formally recognized for the first time in the United States as the discoverer of the South Pole and honored for his achievement with a special gold medal by the National Geographic society at its annual banquet, where he was the guest of honor.

Beside Amundsen sat Rear Admiral Peary, U. S. N., retired, to whom the society two years ago gave a similar medal, recognizing him as the discoverer of the North Pole.

Captain Amundsen, in replying to the speech of presentation of the medal, modestly tried to minimize his own great accomplishment and gave strong words of praise to those who had preceded him in the Antarctic fields.

ON PURE FOOD BOARD

Bigelow Has Long Been Connected With Bureau of Chemistry

Washington, Jan. 13.—Dr. Alsberg, chief of the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture, announced the appointment of Dr. Willard D. Bigelow as a member of the board of food and drug inspection, which passes on all cases of alleged violation of the pure food law.

Dr. Bigelow, who fills the vacancy caused by the voluntary retirement of Dr. Doolittle, has been with the bureau of chemistry for twenty years, and had served as assistant chief since 1903. The other members of the board are Alsberg, chairman, and A. G. Mitchell.

MAN'S LEG IN SUIT CASE

Chicago Detectives Are Given New Mystery to Unravel

Chicago, Jan. 13.—A man's leg, severed at the hip and cut in two pieces, was found in a suit case near a barn in the northern part of the city. The pieces were wrapped in a newspaper dated Jan. 7. A sock was on the foot and a piece of underclothing on the leg.

Physicians said the condition of the tissues made it appear that the leg had been severed not more than twenty-four hours. They said the work had not been done as a doctor or medical student would do it.

Five detectives were assigned to the case.

READY TO GIVE BATTLE

Republicans Resent Holding Up of Presidential Nominations

Washington, Jan. 13.—At another caucus of the senate Democrats an unalterable determination to oppose all of President Taft's nominations was expressed and a new resolution was taken to continue the fight until March 4. The only nominations to whose confirmation the Democrats will agree are routine promotions in the army and navy and such diplomatic appointments as expire with the present administration.

The smouldering resentment on the Republican side against this course will break out this week. It has been held in check during the Archbald trial, but with the field cleared the regular Republicans will begin the new engagement.

CHAPTER II.

After the Ball.

No such concern seemed to hold Edward Thornton back. He was here, there and everywhere, overacting if anything the role of "the life of the party" and never missing a dance.

Suddenly the colonel's beautiful wife, flanked by the two vivacious girls, and herself looking the picture of health and radiance in a specially modish ball gown of flowered satin, sailed into the salon like the star of a stage play.

It was the official, formal opening of the ball.

"Do you know what Mrs. Pinckney says?" Gertrude Ellingham asked Lieutenant Kerchival West. "She has invited a party of friends to her house to witness the firing on Sumter."

"How delightful!" responded Kerchival, in rather a forced tone of gayety. "I hope, however, that they won't wait for breakfast until the fortress is bombarded."

"You think it will be a long wait? Well, Lieutenant West, I'll bet you an embroidered cigar case against a box of gloves that the first gun is fired before sunrise."

"Done. You will lose the bet, Miss Gertrude, unless Major Ruffin, unable to curb his patience any longer, should steal out and touch off a mortar on his own hook. Not that I shouldn't be overjoyed to offer you the gloves, particularly if—well, in the hope that—that one of the little hands belonging inside them shall"—

They were in the shadow of the oleanders as he spasmodically seized one of the aforesaid little hands. She withdrew it almost as promptly, murmuring:

"Shall remain in my own keeping for the present until some one comes along who has a good excuse for claiming it. So you don't believe that General Beauregard is going to open fire on Sumter this morning?"

"No; of course not."

"Well, I happen to know that everything is in readiness."

"It is a heap easier to have everything in readiness to do a thing than it is to do it. For instance, I have been ready a dozen times today to say to you, Miss Gertrude, that—that I"—

"Well, sir?"

"But I didn't, you know."

"Very likely General Beauregard has more nerve than you have."

"Oh, it is easy enough to set a few batteries around Charleston harbor. But when it comes to firing the first shot at woman"—

"At a woman! Why, what are you talking about?"

"I mean at the American flag. A man must be a—must have the nerves of"—

"You northern men are so slow to"—

"Yes, I know I've been slow, but I assure you, Miss Gertrude, that my heart"—

"Aren't you going north to join in the threatened invasion of our southern Confederate states?"

"Yes, that's our orders, I believe."

"You are ready to fight against my friends, against my own brother, your comrade. If that don't make us enemies what does?"

"Nothing can make me your enemy, Gertrude. My services belong to my country at call. I belong to the north"—

"And I am a southern woman. There the fatal line is drawn."

Here Thornton and Jenny Buckthorn came up.

"I'm glad the attack on Sumter is to be made at last," declared Thornton.

"I do not share your pleasure in that prospect," said a serious voice over Gertrude's shoulder. It was that of her brother, Lieutenant Robert Ellingham.

"And you a southern gentleman!" retorted Thornton, with the customary shade of insolence.

"And you a northern—gentleman!"

With the reluctant accent Bob gave to the word "gentleman" it actually seemed to be in quotation marks with an interrogation point after it.

"I am a southerner by choice. I shall join the cause," said Thornton curtly.

"We can take care of our own rights, sir. They will be safe in our keeping, even if you should not find it to your interest to run risks in our behalf."

"You'll find me ready for any risk you like," muttered Thornton, turning on his heel.

At the same moment Colonel Haverill, who had not participated in the dancing, approached from the direction of his wife's apartment. He held in his hand a white silk handkerchief, which he immediately offered to Lieutenant West, who took it, glanced at the initials—his own—thanked his superior officer and passed out to the veranda overlooking the lawn, where many colored lanterns twinkled. Here, almost as if by preconcerted arrangement, Mrs. Haverill joined him a moment later.

"Madam," said the young man, with embarrassed solicitude, "I beg to tell you how happy I am to see that your indisposition has vanished—also to offer humble apologies for my awkwardness and helplessness when I undertook to rush to your aid. You can always depend upon me to act the part of an idiot in such an emergency. Fortunately I was able to find Miss Gertrude and my sister and send them to you in time to be of real service. Colonel Haverill has just handed me back my handkerchief."

"Oh, thank you, lieutenant, for everything. I suppose my husband had been to my room looking for me. Something came up today that has upset us both a bit. And it is in regard to that matter that I wish to ask you to do me a favor—a great service. Will you?"

"Pray command me, Mrs. Haverill," answered Kerchival with his heart thumping in wild, wondering excitement.

"It is about the colonel's son, Frank. You know the trouble he has got into in New York. He has escaped arrest, and I have just received word that he is here in Charleston. I am the only one he can turn to. His father is stern and uncompromising in his humiliation. I want you to find Frank and arrange for me to meet him as soon as possible, if you can do it with safety. I shall give you a letter for him. I should like you to take it at daylight if possible. It is a sad errand, and I know of none but yourself whom I can trust with it."

Lieutenant Kerchival West bowed profoundly.

"I will get ready at once," he said. "I can change my clothes in five minutes."

How he welcomed this spur to action! The ball had ended for him at the last words of Gertrude.

He kept his word within the five minutes specified and came back booted and spurred to report to the colonel's wife. She was not where he had left her, but he heard her low, earnest voice at the other end of the shadowed veranda.

"If my husband knew," Mrs. Haverill's voice was saying, "he would kill you, Edward Thornton, unless you treacherously took advantage and shot him down without remorse. You know I am innocent. I never gave you any hint of encouragement, and the last I remember you were crouching before me like a whipped cur. But I have kept the secret, and you must. Avoid meeting Colonel Haverill before we leave Charleston."

"You have my apology," whispered Thornton.

"That is not what I have asked."

"Do you mean by that that you will not accept amends?"

"For my husband's sake," the woman pleaded.

"Ah, your anxiety on his account, madam, makes me feel that perhaps, after all, my offense is indeed unpardonable. What an absurd blunder for a gentleman to make. If I hadn't supposed it was Lieutenant Kerchival West who was my rival"—

"What do you mean, sir?"

"But instead it is your husband who stands between us."

"How dare you, sir!" cried the exasperated lady, now on the verge of hysterics. "Let me tell you that whatever I may wish to spare my husband he fears nothing for himself. But, no; I entreat of you do not let this horrible affair go any further."

Kerchival West, having no choice but to overhear, was of the same mind. He now stepped forward decisively, saying:

"Pardon me. I hope I am not interrupting. I believe, Mrs. Haverill, you have an errand for me?"

"Yes!" she exclaimed eagerly. "Thank you so much. I will go and write the note immediately. Pray excuse me, Mr. Thornton."

Without another word she hastened away. The two men bowed and waited in silence until she was out of sight and hearing. Then Kerchival West drew himself up and said quietly:

"Thornton, you are a d——d scoundrel. Do I make myself plain?"

"You have made it plain all along that you are looking for a quarrel. I've no objection. Still, I prefer to pick my own adversaries."

"Colonel Haverill is my commander," said West, trembling with suppressed excitement. "He is beloved by every officer in the regiment."

"Well, what authority does that give you"—

"His honor is our honor. His wife"—

"Oho, that's it, eh? So you have a first class license to act as Mrs. Haverill's champion. I have heard that her favorite officer"—

Kerchival approached a step nearer.

"You dare to suggest"—

"If I accept your challenge," sneered the other, "I shall do so not because you are her protector or the protector of her husband's honor, but as my rival. We stand on even ground."

"Cur, you listen to me now"—and Kerchival emphasized his words with a slash of his riding whip full in Thornton's face.

"I think you are entitled to my attention, sir," responded the other, recovering himself quickly.

"My time here is short, as you know," Kerchival said.

"Long enough for my purpose, I reckon. The bayou—up the Ashley a mile or so—is a convenient place. In an hour from now it will be light enough to sight our weapons."

"I'll be there in half an hour with a friend!" cried Kerchival.

Clergyman and Wife Asphyxiated

Yonkers, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Rev. George H. MacDonald, a retired Presbyterian clergyman, and his wife, both octogenarians, were found dead in bed from gas. A faulty stopcock was on the gas jet.

Burns to Death In Bed

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 13.—Henry A. Walker, 43, was found burned to death in his room in a lodging house here. The firemen say he probably went to bed smoking.

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake if You Follow This Quincy Citizen's Advice

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, it's time to act and no time to experiment. These are frequently symptoms of kidney trouble, and a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys should be taken in time.

Doan's Kidney Pills is a good remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has acted effectively in many cases in Quincy. Follow the advice of a Quincy citizen.

P. J. Garrity, 298 Granite street, Quincy, Mass., says: "Some time ago I suffered so severely from kidney disease that I could hardly get about. I was restless at night and could not find any position that was comfortable. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and contained a heavy sediment. I was rapidly growing worse and was at a loss to know what to do as the many remedies I tried failed to help me. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. After I had taken the contents of four boxes I was in good health. I highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other kidney sufferers."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

CLEANING UP TO BE PUSHED

Plans to Punish All Guilty of Graft at Nashua

RESORT OWNERS ARE SCARED

Men Already Indicted Are Nearly All Well Known—Detective Who Got In With Hotel Proprietors Proved to Be a Good "Mixer"—Others Aided Him In Gathering Evidence

Nashua, N. H., Jan. 13.—Talk of impeachment of men "higher up" in the municipal graft scandal here, coupled with Police Commissioner Gregg's announcement that there will be no stop to the crusade until all the guilty ones have been punished, has resulted in the closing of a number of resorts.

Gregg admits he will probably address the legislature for the impeachment of certain officials. There is much curiosity regarding the identity of the men who furnished money for the prolonged investigation into local corruption.

Since the returning of the indictments Gregg has done little talking about the matter, but it is persistently rumored that members of the city government are apt to be involved. The men who have already been indicted are nearly all well known in the city, some of them having been in the business of running hotels or letting rooms for years. The true bills against the women formed the striking part of the matter, for no intimation was given that any such were involved.

The results of the work of the detectives who were here all summer was very profitable. William Sullivan is the name of the man who got in with hotel proprietors under the guise of having some idea of buying up a place, and is remembered as one of the best "mixers" here. It is stated that one man suspected Sullivan the second day he was in town, telling his friends there was something out of the way with him and to be careful what they said or did.

Sullivan spent money freely, and treated this rumor as a great joke when it was called to his attention. He was able to get on such friendly terms with the managers and clerks of the hotels where he stopped that they occasionally had him act as night clerk and in this way he accumulated evidence. It is understood, however, that he was not alone in gathering the evidence, it being reported that at least four other detectives from an agency of international repute have also been working in town.

Gregg gave out a statement that later he intends to explain to the citizens all the particulars of the investigation. He stated he was not alone in pushing the case, but he was backed by influential friends who are not to cease their efforts until Nashua is cleaned up.

ATHLETES GET IN THE RUNNING

Several Good Men Who Will Form the B.A.A. Relay Team

Quincy's athletes after a seeming withdrawal from competition have again entered the field and will participate in the scheduled winter indoor events.

George Sullivan, the short distance runner of the post office will be a member of the B. A. A. relay team. His brother runners are William Prout Frank O'Hara and Merrihew. The quartet is fast and the prospects of the B. A. A. securing a number of firsts depends on the North Dorchester showing.

On the latter's team Fay Phelan, a local favorite is the strong supporter, with Powell, East Milton's colored runner. They will have the assistance of Howe, a second place winner in the Olympic tryouts, and Ferguson of the champion English high team of last season.

The friendly rivalry between these two teams stimulates the interest of local followers who are planning to attend the games where the teams will contest.

ATHLETE PASSED AWAY.

John C. McGuane, a nephew of Mr. Timothy Crowley, Murdock avenue, with whom he lived during his Quincy residence, died Thursday at Norwood of heart disease. He was about 35 years old. Burial was at St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy.

Of late years, Mr. McGuane has been identified with atheltics, having been manager of the fast Normal baseball team. While in Quincy he took part in athletics and secured recognition as a short distance runner.

He graduated from the old Quincy grammar school and lived in the Point district until about 10 years ago. He was formerly superintendent of the Nevins building, Chauncey street, Boston. He leaves a brother and sister.

NOTICE.

BOY BROKE THROUGH ICE

Young West in Freezing Water Up to Armpits When Rescued

BY JAMES H. DAVEY

James Henry Davey, rescued Walter the six year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur T. West, from a pond near the Babcock street turnout about 12.15 today. The rescuers attention was attracted by the boy's screams as he was throwing the signal block.

The rescue was effected by a plank and line which was secured for Davey by Fred Cappellini and which was pushed out on the thin ice.

Walter had gone skating and broken through. Both his shoes had sunk into the mud and the water was lapping his shoulders. The ice would not bear the weight of the plank even and Walter held on while he was pulled ashore. He was taken to his home nearby and is apparently in good condition.

Davey is a conductor and Cappellini, a motorman on the Bay State street Railway, running on the Houghs Neck line.

PLUMBERS ASK FOR CONFERENCE

Mayor Stone and Senator McDevitt to Act in Matter

MEN OBJECTED TO SYSTEM

A mass meeting of the seventy-five plumbers and steam fitters at the Fore River plant who are out on a strike was held this morning in the hall at the corner of Washington and Chubbuck street. By special invitation, Mayor Stone, Senator McDevitt, Representative Sullivan and Congressman Gilmore were present.

Last week the Fore River company started to put these workmen on the contract system, it being understood that all departments are to be placed on the same system. The men, however objected to this plan and quit work. The object this morning was for the purpose of getting the Fore River Company to give the men a conference.

According to the Fore River Company the men have not asked for a conference, had they done so, it would probably have been given. Nothing was done at the morning meeting other than Mayor Stone and Senator McDevitt agreed to confer with the officials of the company to see if they could not arrange for a conference.

THIEF SAVAGE AT MISTAKE

Tied the Poor Boy's Underclothing Up Into Knots

Clothes line thieves were fooled late Saturday night or early Sunday morning at South Braintree when they stole some boys underclothing from a line in the yard of William Knowlton, Taylor street.

Three years ago two sets of men's underwear, nearly new, were stolen from a line in the same yard. The underclothing was the property of Michael Sullivan, janitor of the Town Hall.

The last haul of clothing belonged to a little boy in the Knowlton family. The thief discovered his mistake, evidently, after he had got out on the road for the underclothing, tied up into knots was found on the steps of the old Catholic Church, a short distance away.

In order to accommodate people who can not visit City Hall during the day to pay their water bills the office of the City Treasurer will be open Monday evenings from 7 to 8 o'clock.

HOUSEBOAT BURGLARIZED

Fixings Knocked Topsy-Turvy and Articles Missing

POLICE AT WORK

When Charles E. Folsom of the Boston Board of Assessors went aboard his houseboat which is moored off the Squantum shore Sunday afternoon he found the furnishings topsy turvy, decorations destroyed and clothes and several sets of marine glasses missing. He will be unable to accurately estimate the damage until an inventory is taken.

Mr. Folsom has for the past few years kept a comfortable, roomy houseboat in Squantum waters. He has never had any reason to regret doing so until the examination of Sunday showed that vandals had taken advantage of his absence. The owner is in the habit of frequently visiting the floating palace but heretofore has found everything in good order. He reported the theft to the police and they are now at work on the case.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

Services at Methodist church Sunday were well attended and full of interest. Rev. Wesley Wiggin, the pastor, spoke at the morning service on "How character is revealed." The Sunday school was in charge of J. A. Sedgwick superintendent, who summed up the lesson by using illustrations from present day events by showing the greatness of man in human achievements. He referred to Burbank who has developed the seedless plum, and Edison in his use of electricity and Marconi with his wireless telegraphy. A large attendance was present. The primary department was in charge of Mrs. Belcher and the kindergarten was in charge of Miss Bessie Wilbur.

A large number was present at the Junior Leageu meeting which was led by the pastor. The contest for membership and attendance began Sunday and has already proved a success as was evidenced by the attendance.

At 6 o'clock Mrs. F. M. Morgan led the Epworth League Devotional services which was one of unusual interest with a large number of testimonies. Mrs. Morgan took for her subject, "Obedience the Test of Religious Certainty." She said in part: "Obedience is the secret of the whole matter. He that doeth the will shall know of the doctrine . Obedience brings knowledge. If we obey we shall know. This law holds good in things of the world. Obedience brings the nearness of Christ. If we obey we shall feel the nearness of Christ. Obedience gives satisfaction.

Miss Nettie Crittendon presided at the piano and Walter Sutermeister led the praise service.

At 7 o'clock thep astor preached on "The Need of a Refuge." Mr. F. G. Bennett led the praise service.

Miss Marguerite Louise Holbrook was the soloist for the day singing at the morning service "Beyond the Gates of Paradice" by King, and in the evening "Supplication" by Brewer. The choir was at its best rendering the anthem entitled "I will Magnify Thee." Mrs. F. G. Bennett was the organist for the day.

The mid-week service on Thursday will be omitted. It is hoped that a large number will attend the services at West Qiuncy. Those who are planning to walk will leave the church at 7 o'clock. Those who take the electrics can take the 7 o'clock car and transfer to the East Milton car. Get off at West Quincy station or the turnout near the station.

SAVAGE ATTACK ON COUNTRYMAN

Two Syrians Had Little Difference, Which Led to One

SEEKING REVENGE

There was some trouble in a Syrian boarding house at 54 Winter street, Sunday morning as a result of which Gustffin Lerne received two bad cuts on the top of the head which required the services of Dr. W. J. Middleton to sew up. According to the injured man he had some little trouble with Alley Legeh two days ago after which the injured man ordered Legeh out of his room and told him not to come in there again. Sunday morning Lerne says that he went down to the cellar and as he came up stairs Legeh who was hiding behind a door stepped out and struck him two savage blows on the top ofthe head. Dr. Middleton who was later called said that the man had two cuts on the top of his head that had evidently been made by some blunt instrument. The cuts went clear through to the skull.

Lerne said that after the first blow he saw who it was that had struck the blow but after receiving the second blow his face was covered with blood and he fell down. The police were notified and later Officer Johnson placed Legeh under arrest charged with assault. He was arraigned in court this morning.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

LAMB AND VEGETABLES.

DIVERSITY may be given to the ways of cooking lamb by combining it with vegetables. These will often give an entirely different flavor to the meat.

Any kind of lamb preferred may be used for the purpose. The vegetables combined with the meat may be such as convenience or personal taste dictates.

Breast of Lamb.

Fricassee of Lamb.—Take two pounds of breast of lamb and cut it into square pieces. Sprinkle with salt and flour and place the pieces in a frying pan and brown with butter or drippings. Then take a stewpan, place in it a sliced onion and cover this with boiling water, adding the meat. Simmer until any bones which may have been in the meat can be slipped out. Strain the broth off the meat, take off the fat and let boil again. Then adding the meat, salt and pepper stew it until almost tender. Then stir in a quart of canned peas and simmer for a quarter of an hour. Instead of peas a pint of broiled maccaroni cut into short pieces or a pint can of asparagus tips may be used.

Breast of Lamb and Tomatoes.—Take out the large bones and season the breast of lamb. On the inside put a layer of breadcrumbs mixed with one egg, one tablespoonful of butter, an even teaspoonful of salt and a quarter teaspoonful of pepper. Now roll the lamb and tie it up; put in a saucepan with the bones and brown over the fire. Dredge a tablespoonful of flour over the meat and brown. Add a quart can of tomatoes or a quart of fresh tomatoes which have been peeled and sliced. Season with salt and pepper and add enough boiling water to make the tomato sauce the consistency of gravy. The lamb should then cook slowly for about an hour.

A Toothsome Fricassee.

Fricassee of Lamb With Potatoes.—Take a pound and a quarter of lamb, six potatoes, a tablespoonful of minced onion, a cupful of milk, a tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley, two teaspoonfuls of flour, a teaspoonful each of butter and salt and a quarter of a teaspoonful of white pepper. Wash the meat, put over fire with one cupful boiling water, add the onion and boil one hour, watching that it does not go dry. Add water as it is necessary. When it has boiled an hour add the salt, pepper and potatoes; boil thirty minutes, then remove the meat, put it into the center of a hot platter, with the potatoes around the edge. Thicken the gravy with the butter and flour, which have been rubbed together, and when it comes to the boiling point. add the milk and boil one minute. Pour the gravy over the meat and potatoes and sprinkle the chopped parsley over the top.

World's Aeroplane Record

Buc, France, Jan. 13.—Maurice Chevillard, driving a light military aeroplane, established a world's altitude record, carrying three passengers. He rose to a height of nearly a mile.

—In these days of settling up don't kick and froth when a man presents you his bill. Just pay him and let him go and pay his debts, and by and by the man who is owing you will pay up, and the world will look brighter and you will be happier for having done your part.—Foxboro Reporter.

Y. M. C. A. TOOK BOTH GAMES

Exciting Contests With Tech and Silent Five

LATTER SOME FAST

The basket ball fans who attended the games at the Y. M. C. A. Gym on Saturday night witnessed two of the best played and most exciting contests of the season. The scores were close in both games and at no period of the play was there more than 6 points separating either of the teams.

The "big" game between Tech 1916 and the local first team was one of the best seen on the floor. Tech had it on the Y. M. C. A. boys in passing and dribbling but they were unable to cage the ball after it was worked up to shooting distance. The local players did more long passing, which was not so spectacular as the short quick passing of the vistors, but which brought the ball up beneath the goal in short order.

Merritt of Tech got an early start on Rich who has been playing "back" since Jenkins returned to the game and before the audience knew it, the visitors had a lead of 8 to 2. Capt. Parker made a quick shift, going to back position while Rich went to forward. The change worked well, for when the half ended, the score was 11 to 12 in Tech's favor, instead of the runaway score it looked to be.

Jenkins and Dewson the two centers had a great match as was predicted; the honors being about even, each player scoring one goal, although Jenkins had several "hard luck shots. Trask had an off night, missing shot after shot, many of them very easy. The star of the game was "Yeats" Kenn, who is rapidly developing into one of the best backs in the Y. M. C. A. league. He scored four goals, and held his opponent to a shut-out. Every one of his goals came at the time they were needed, as a slump would have caused the local team to waver.

Wilde of Tech played a good game as did also Merritt.

The Second team game was a "scream" from start to finish. The Silent Five is composed of players who went out for positions on the first and second team but who did not quite make good. Of course it was up to them to show just how good they were and if the individual members had put as much life and fight into their practice when they were out for the team, some of them would be wearing the regular uniforms.

"Bobby" Summers was the bright star of the game, for he put it "all over" Corthell and Miller his opponents at the centre position. He missed about three times as many goals as he made, and he made six goals at that.

Shirley covered Al Thomas to good purpose, for Al only had about six trials at the basket. Shirley deserves a great deal of credit for his fine work which was clean played throw out. Joe Pinell was high score man for the second team with 6 goals to his credit, closely followed by Dineen who was playing forward in Price's position. The absence of Price made quite a difference to the second team as the team work centers around him.

Referee Stone's work was the best that he has done this season, as several times it seemed that the members of the 2nd team and Silent 5 would get a bit too strenuous in their sport.

VICTOR'S BAND THE ATTRACTION

Miss Hiltz Contributed Materially to Pleasure

OF SECOND LYCEUM EVENT

An appreciative and enthusiastic audience greeted Victor's Band of 20 instruments, under the direction of Signor Lawrence Portrelli in the second of the Y. M. C. A. Lyceum events at Music hall, Monday evening. They dispensed high grade music, ranging from the ever welcome operatic selections to popular waltz hits.

The most acceptable part of the well arranged program was the vocal solos of Miss Evangeline Hiltz of Malden. Her ready response to the insistent demand for an encore was unusual for a singer of such note and tumultuous applause followed both her appearances.

Miss Hiltz, although suffering from illness, was in fine voice and her tone qualities, remarkable expression and stage presence warranted the hearty applause accorded her.

The program opened with Victor's march, "American Belles." Rossini's "William Tell" followed and the familiar overture was so well given that the director generously gave a medley of national airs as an encore.

The three dances of "Henry VIII" by German was the third number and the waltz song "That's How I Need You" preceded a soprano solo by Miss Hiltz.

"Prima Vera," by Strausz, a most difficult composition to interpret was intelligently given by Miss Hiltz and

MISS JOHNSON GOOD SAILOR

Enjoyed Storm and Rush of Sea on Overdue Manitou

STUDIED ART ABROAD

Miss Marian J. Johnson, Wellesley, '12, of Quincy proved herself a true sailor on the voyage of the steamer Manitou which arrived in Boston Monday. The big steamer encountered the storms which have kicked up such a fury the past few weeks, and run right into the fiercest of gales and mountainous seas. The big steamer was just a week overdue. Of all on that storm tossed vessel, Miss Johnson proved herself a heroine. When the elements were warring vigorously and the Manitou was hardly able to make steerage, Miss Johnson was on deck. She revelled in the rush of waters, the giant waves and the foam and spume of the big waves which reached to and over the smokestacks. She was on deck all the time and rather enjoyed the storm and excitment. Miss Johnston has been abroad five months, with Miss E. J. Newkirk, professor of art at Wellesley, studying art and they visited many important cities of Europe. Miss Johnson makes her home with her grandmother, Mrs. Benjamin Johnson, Mill street.

MAYOR ANNOUNCES OFFICIAL FAMILY WITH VERY FEW CHANGES FROM 1912

Temporary Loan Order Brings Out Plenty of Oratory. Street Railway Co. Criticised By Councilman Whiton

No Provision For Salary of Captain and Inspector of Police. Half Fare For Workmen From Brewers Corner to the Mills

Judging from Monday night's meeting of the City Council, the gatherings of that body this year will have plenty of spice and questions will be fully debated as the present council has an unusual number of ready and willing speakers. President Bryant was as follows and they were placed on file:

Commissioner of Public Works—Frederick E. Tupper.

City Treasurer—Henry F. Tilden.

City Clerk—Emery L. Crane.

Collector of Taxes—Oscar S. Sandberg.

EMERY L. CRANE,
City Clerk.

held the speaker strictly to the questioin under debate and thus doubtless prevented a much longer period of the opening session.

The debate of the evening was on the order authorizing the City Treasurer to borrow $350,000 in anticipation of taxes. Several believed that the amount should be increased but the amendments were defeated and the order as originally offered was passed.

Every member was present at roll call.

Councilman Whiton who was absent on inauguration day was present and was sworn in by the City Clerk.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing Philip L. Saward a public weigher. Confirmed.

A communication was received from the Mayor withdrawing the list of

FRED'K E. TUPPER
Commr. of Pub. Works;

WM. H. TEASDALE
Chmn. Bd. of Health

constables forwarded to the Council Jan. 6. Withdrawn.

A communication was received from the Mayor announcing his appointments. The list show but few changes, and they minor ones from last year. The changes were as follows:

Daniel Schouler Jr., succeeds Edward J. Murphy as Inspector of Milk.

Charles C. Hearn, who last year served as one of the Managers of Public Burial Places succeeds W. W. Whicher a member of the Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library and Edward O. Woodward succeeds Mr. Hearn on the Burial Place Board.

Herbert S. Barker succeeds Joseph L. Whiton as one of the Managers of the Adams Academy.

The complete list of appointments

City Solicitor—John W. McAnarney.

Chief of Fire Depart.—Amos L. Litchfield.

Overseer of Poor—James H. Elcock.

City Engineer—Ezekiel C. Sargent.

City Physician—John H. Ash, M. D.

Inspector of Animals— Francis Abele, Jr., V. S.

Assessor for 3 years—Wellington W. Mitchell.

Park Commissioners— George E Pfaffmann, Ira M. Whittemore, Thomas L. Williams.

Board of Health—William H. Teasdale, Fred E. Jones, M. D., James Thomas.

Inspector of Meats and Provisions—James F. Allen.

Inspector of Milk—Daniel Schouler, Jr.

Public Library Board—Henry McGrath, Charles R. Safford, Morton G. Smith, Rufus B. Tobey, George A. Sidelinger, Charles C. Hearn.

Managers of Public Burial Places—Albert W. Fay, Edward O. Woodward, Alfred O. Diack, John L. Hamilton, Andrew Johnson, John Q. Cudworth.

Managers of Adams Academy—Luther S. Anderson, Walter S. Pinkham, George M. Sheahan, M. D., Perry Lawton, Rupert Claflin, Herbert S. Barker.

Dock and Waterfront Commissioner—Frank Fessenden Crane.

Inspector of Buildings—Warren S. Parker.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing Dennis J. Ford as a Registrar of Voters for three years, his term begining April 1. Confirmed.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Chief of Police stating that when the Council of 1912 amended the police ordinance creating the office of Captain and Inspector it did not provide any salaries for these offices. To be referred later.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Chief Engineer stating that on account of the one day off in five for the firemen he desired three additional permanent men. He also recommends that the number of call

HENRY F. TILDEN,
City Treasurer.

OSCAR S. SANDBERG.
Collector of Taxes.

men be reduced by fifteen men. To be referred later.

The Mayor forwarded a list of constables. The list is practically the same as the list filed on inauguration day. The main change was that the name of Amos L. Litchfield was omitted from the new list.

AMOS L. LITCHFIELD,
Chief of Fire Department.

GOOD SHOWING BY THE CHURCH

Deficit Shown, But $2500 Was Raised for Parish House

BY ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S

The annual parish meeting of St. Chrysostom's church was held Monday evening in the parish rooms. Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra, the rector, was in the chair. After Clerk George E. Allen had read the warrant and the minutes of the last meeting, John W. Atkins read the treasurer's report which showed a deficit but that when taken into consideration that the parish has raised practically within a year's time $2500.00 towards a parish house which made claimable the gift of $500.00 promised from the Diocesan Reinforcement Fund should not be taken to heart the rector stated.

The secretaries of the different organizations were then asked for their reports. George J. Poch for the Sunday school, Miss A. Maud Briggs for the Altar Guild, Miss Nellie M. Weeks for the Girls Friendly society, Miss Grace F. Purdom for Junior auxiliary, George P. Parker for the Men's club, Mrs. Herbert H. Albee for the Rummage Bag Fund used for Calendar expenses, Archibald H. Briggs for the choir, Miss Annie Clean for the Woman's Guild, Mrs. David L. Jewel for the Missionary committee of the Woman's Guild responded. The fact that the Woman's Guild are more than alive was shown by the fact that they have contributed $599.12 to the parish house fund this year. The Sunday school records of $419.86 for the same fund is a matter of congratulation.

The officers for the year are:

Senior Warden—Frank E. Cleveland.

Junior warden—Percy L. Davidson.

Treasurer—John W. Atkins.

Clerk—George E. Allen.

Vestrymen — Herbert H. Albee, Archibad H. Briggs, William J. Leslie, Theodore Parker, Edward F. Parlee, Charles O. Kolstad.

Delegates to Diocesan convention, George D. Rundlett, Charles O. Kolstad.

Delegates to the Arch deaconry convention, George B. Curran, George P. Parker and Mrs. David Fulton.

The rector appointed the nominating committee, John Albert Severance, George E. Poch, Arthur E. Holland, Mrs. David L. Jewell and Mrs. Howard D. Fowler.

Refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee were served by Mesdames, Miller, Walter, Allen, Stanley and Parlee.

WORK PROGRESSING.

"An important meeting of the ball committee of Quincy lodge of Elks, to be held Jan. 30, was held Sunday afternoon at the club house. The committees reported that arrangements were proceeding most satisfactory and that from present indications this year's ball would eclipse anything yet given.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Fourth of July Association will be held at the Board of Trade rooms this evening. Mayor Stone who is president of the association will preside. The election of officers for the current year the clearing up the voyage of last year's celebration and determining upon a celebration the present year are among the things which will come up for action.

ELECTED CLERK.

At a special meeting of Christ church, last evening, Harry C. Halowell was unanimously elected clerk to fill the vacancy existing. As Mr. Hallowell was not present at the meeting a committee was appointed to bring him before the assembly his popularity was attested by the hearty applause wihch greeted his appearance.

CLAN McGREGOR INSTALLATION

Organization Looks For Record Membership

BANQUET AFTER EXERCISES

The officers of Clan McGregor, No. 5 O. S. C. were installed Monday evening at Doble's hall South Quincy in the presence of a large gathering of clansmen. The installation was by Grand Deputy Frank Abercrombie assisted by Royal Deputy Thomas Johnston.

In resigning the chair which he has held for the past two years Alfred O. Diack was the recipient of many congratulations for the good work he has done.

During his term of office 283 members have been added bringing the total membership of Clan McGregor to an even 700 making it the second largest clan in the country. During the coming year Chief Angus Martin and the members will strive to make even a better showing and it is hoped by the end of the year that the clan can say it is the largest in membership of any clan in the country. In order to carry this idea out committees were appointed to hunt for new members.

After the business of the evening there was a banquet which was followed by remarks by the grand officers and members of the clan. There were also several solos by some of the members and the evening passed all to quickly.

The officers installed were as follows:—

Chief—Angus D. Martin.

Thanist—Charles Nicol.

Chaplain—John Bissett.

Corresponding Secretary—Walter Mitchell.

Financial Secretary—James F Marr.

Treasurer—Alex. W. Russell.

Sr. Henchman—Thomas Melrose.

Jr. Henchman—Walter Nicol.

Seneschal—William Cantley.

Warder—William Summers.

Sentinel—Wiliam McIntosh.

Trustee—John C. Murray.

Physician—Dr. R. McLennan.

Auditor—William Ross.

Finance Committee—Alex Clark, William Taylor, John Russell, Pianist, Charles Joss.

THEIR FIRST PARTY.

The Brinkley Girls held their first annual dance at Alpha hall Monday night and a large number was present.

The Delco Girls and Elcho Club of Brockton attended. About 30 of their members made the trip in a large auto truck, leaving here after midnight.

Miss Kathryn McEacheran was floor directress and Miss Mary McClay her assistant. The aides were Misses Anna Franzi, Edith King, Amy Medlyn, Ruth Devine and Helen Peterson.

Music was by Moore's orchestra, with Quincy's long time friend, "Phil" Schaeffer at the piano.

HEART FAILURE.

Herbert Leon, the 10 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dorley of Murdock avenue died this morning from heart failure following a severe attack of dipheriatic complications. He was a pupil of the Washington school and was the third of the children in the family to have the disease. The other two have practically recovered.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Unless something happens to upset the apple cart, Congressman Weeks will have authority to add another to his many honorable titles within a few days.

President-elect Wilson says the number 13 is his lucky sign and he rather clings to it. It is to be hoped that he will not put too much trust in the sign lest it fall him some day.

The glue men believe that the tariff on that commodity should stick.

The suffragettes plan another hike. It is their hunt. If they think they gain credit for power to wield the ballot by making themselves ridiculous they have no one to blame but themselves if their day of victory is long delayed.

Gen. Sickles is almost as much in print as the elusive base ball manager or the prize fighter.

The senator from North Adams who wants Patriots' day abolished will find that he has stirred up a hornets nest for himself.

Another legislator who famishes for fame wants every city to have a play censor.

Rev. Mr. Cady says any man who shows his head in heaven under 70 years of age ought to be ashamed of himself. That lets out Morgan, Carnegie and Rockefeller.

The peace envoys in London are taking things easy enough, while probably hundreds if not thousands of human lives are daily paying the price of their procrastination.

Mr. McCall has lost his chance to save Massachusetts from the "most arrogant and despotic sway," of the machine.

Every so often Editor Stead who went down with the Titanic sends messages from the other world. More cases of night mare. The recipients of the message should be careful what they eat. And further according to the best accounts Mr. Stead is a mile under the ocean and there is no wireless from that locality and the cables do not pass along that particular thoroughfare.

Justice Goff of New York has again made a ten strike when he announces that the time has gone by to send scoundrels into the navy to reform them and sentenced a thief to 11 months in the penetentiary.

If the government case on the Panama canal is so weak, that fear is entertained if it is sent to the Hague tribunal then much would be saved by giving away the right requested rather than submit it to another arbitration board which would be subjected to the same influences.

The senate did not take long to decide the fate of Judge Archbold. There are probably many others of his ilk who deserve the same fate.

And again be careful of skating on thin ice.

TO ABOLISH PATRIOTS DAY.

Are we having too many holidays? Off hand the average person would put a negative upon any proposition to limit the number which are now enjoyed. Senator Mack of North Adams seems to think that it would be wise to curtail a few of the festive days of the state. He has introduced a bill for the exclusion of Patriots' day from the list of legal holidays. Originally Patriots' Day was called Fast day, and was set down for a fixed Thursday in April. Later it gave way to Patriot's Day and since that time has been a fixed institution for the nineteenth of April whatever day in the week that happened to fall on, with of course the proviso that it should be observed the following Monday, if the nineteenth fell on Sunday.

Many incline to the belief that there are too few holidays as it is in the course of a year. Whatever may be the sentiment of the constituents of Senator Mack on this subject it is doubtful if he will receive tremendous support of his measure from people in the eastern part of the state. It is hardly likely that members of the legislature will flock to the standard of the western part of the state man, to aid him in the passage of his bill.

It has not developed as yet that Mr. Mack has received a tremendous amount of press bureau returns from his little innovation.

There has been no ardent upheaval for any reform of the holiday system at present in vogue in Massachusetts. Neither employer or employed have made any demonstration towards an increase or decrease of the holidays now enjoyed. From a newspaper standpoint holidays are really no holidays. They merely produce an accumulation of matter of two days which must be crowded into one, and plans must be made for this boiling process in every newspaper office or there would be a nice sweet tangle to unravel.

As long as every one appears satisfied with the recreation days as at present provided there hardly seems any occasion for Mr. Mack or any other legislator to tax his grey matter with a view of revising the same.

There does not appear to be any great demand for a change at the present time. The legislators have enough matters of vital importance to the inhabitants of the Commonwealth to which they could devote their time and talents to adjust on equitable lines to all, without frittering away hours or even minutes on such a proposition as is advanced by this bill. The committee to whom it is referred will perform a sensible service if they bury the measure beyond all hope of resurrection and take up matters which have greater bearing upon the comfort and welfare and happiness of the people of the state.

VERY WISE MEASURE.

Two bills before the present legislature, which found their origin in Quincy, call for more than passing notice at this time, and on the whole they are wise, humane in their scope and intent and would undoubtedly eventualy prove productive of much good.

One presented by Representative Sullivan and framed by some of the local lawyers who believe in tempering justice with mercy provides that in cases before a judge or jury, the previous record of a defendant shall not be presented, before a verdict is reached. Of course if the verdict is innocent, and based upon th law and evidence in the case, it would be hard to drag up before the unfortunate defendant, the record of some offense, committed in youth or the storm of passion, which he or she is honestly and sincerely trying to forget in leading a good honest and upright life and trying to prove a worthy citizen. If the law and evidence in the second offence warrant a conviction, the bill provides that the record may then be introduced to aid in determining the sentence.

Many of course will have an honest difference of opinion with regard to the seasonableness of the course proposed in the first instance but on the whole it cannot do any one any great injustice. On the other hand a record introduced during the trial of a case where there had previously existed reasonable doubt as to guilt, might prove influencing to a judge or jury and possibly bring unjust condemnation upon an innocent person. On this hypothesis the ends of justice would be better secured by the passage of such a bill and its operation in the courts.

The other bill to which reference is made is that prepared by Assistant Court officer Hultman. If adopted it might be the means of filling a long felt remedy in many cases in which the officers are under the existing law prevented from exercising power or rather jurisdiction, which their experience and judgment tells them would be for the best interests of the person or persons most concerned.

Under the present system, if a man arrested for drunkenness has a bottle of whiskey in his possession when taken into custody, it is returned to him the next day on his release from court either by payment of a fine or by the probation route.

As soon as that persons gets beyond the range of the court building, that bottle is sampled, and it has happened in a great many cases in the second incarceration of the unfortunate offender whose condition renders him more succeptible to the influence of the liquor than if he had gone forth thoroughly sobered with a strong head and good nerves. In some courts where such cases have been brought to the attention of the presiding justice the prisoner was afforded a chance to relinquish his claim to the bottle held in trust and it was destroyed.

In other cases where the offender "knew his rights and was not going to be deprived of them," the demand was made for the liquor with the inevitable results. Of course the proposition which the justices put up to the prisoners were wholly voluntary. There was no law to enforce such a rule, but the defendants were given a chance to avoid the immediate temptation which was within their grasp.

For a time, the Boston police questioned men arrested for drunkenness as to where they obtained the last drinks, which must have been delivered to them when they were obviously in no condition to partake of any more and in this way some liquor dealers were hauled over the coals with the result that they were more careful as to the condition of men to whom they sold liquor. Not very much has been heard of this practice lately. It may have been abandoned from one cause or another.

The bill which Mr. Hultman has framed provides that liquors found on a man arrested for drunkenness shall be confiscated by order of the court and of course later destroyed.

Such a measure would be in line with what probation officers have been trying to bring about for some time, namely to deprive the intoxicated person from having immediate access to quenching his thirst the morning after. It would undoubtedly work to considerable advantage and save many men who may have been animated by good intentions from again falling almost immediately into the tolis.

WEST QUINCY CANDIDATE

Passes Mr. Kessler and Leads in Gain Today

HARRY BURR DOUBLES VOTE

There are no off-days in the Washington Inauguration contest, over 1200 votes being cast today, and there are some changes among the leaders.

Miss Nellie Morrissett, the West Quincy candidate, makes the largest gain, and her 540 votes put her well ahead of Fred J. Kessler.

Mr. Bowditch adds 375 today and says he does not think it impossible to overtake Mrs. Marnock.

Harry Burr of Atlantic, the president of the class of 1913 at the High school, nearly doubled his vote today and moved up from No. 18 to No. 13. He now has a good lead over Richard Larkin, Walter Mead and Sam Prout.

None of the first four in the contest made gains today. They are willing to give the others a chance. The following have larger totals: John H. Hart, at the shipyard, Miss Hannah Sandberg of the Daughters of Viking, William Wilson of South Quincy, and J. Nathan.

Again it is necessary to remind candidates that all coupons should bear the name of the candidate. It is not sufficient that one coupon be filled out. A rubber stamp will be found very convenient, and all that is needed is the name. This cancels the vote so that it cannot be used again.

Candidates should look around for a few vote certificates good for 1000 votes. The Daily Ledger will be delivered to all yearly subscribers in any part of the city or outside the city.

THE LAST COUPON.

The last coupon in this contest will be printed in the issue of Saturday, Feb. 8, and the polls will close a few days later. A great hustle is expected during the last days of the contest.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

|---|---|
| Fred D. Williams, drug clerk | 49,590 |
| Sturgis Hunt, Y. M. C. A. | 29,015 |

VICTOR'S BAND

"Comin' thro' the rye," a favorite encore number made a fine impression.

The third act of "Faust" with incidental solos by Signori Manna Campanaro and Sisalli closed the first portion of the program.

The Delibes concert Idyl, "Pass des Fleurs" which is an exquisite tone poem was beautifully rendered and the sextette arrangement from "Lucia di Lammermoor" by Donizetti was given by Signori Manna, Derisi, Sisalli, Verni, Campanaro and Dipalma. "When I get you alone tonight" was the encore.

Miss Hiltz sang Eckharts Swiss Song and gave "Annie Laurie" in answer to the plaudits of the most appreciative audience with all the sweetness and feeling of that old Scotch ballad. She received four curtain calls after singing four verses.

Excerpts from the opera of "Carmen," by Bizet would have passed unnoticed if it were not for the Toreador chorus and the closing number was the "Star Spangled Banner" during which all stood.

Patrons lingered after the concert to express to each other their gratification and it was perhaps as fine a band concert as Quincy people will ever attend.

The first Lyceum event was the Temple Singers and the contrast between the two methods of developing musical themes was marked and wide. In the former "Worship Music" was interpreted and through Victors Band a general selection of classic compositions was given.

On January 27, Maude Ballington Booth will lecture on "Lights and Shadows of Prison Life" and the difference between the third event is as marked as the contract between the Temple Singers and Victors Band.

☞Upon payment of yearly subscriptions to the Daily Ledger, certificates good for 1000 votes in the Washington contest are issued in blank, and may be forwarded to any candidate. The vote can be held back.

THANKFUL FOR SCHOOL SYSTEM

Foreigners Fully Appreciate American Institutions

DECLARES MR. WILLMOTT

Declaring for some of the good old principles of his own school days in England, Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, addressed the Wollaston Parent-Teachers Association on "The school system in relation to the child in the home."

He said, "We foreigners, appreciate American institutions more than those to the manor born, you have much to be thankful for. The children of foreign parents appreciate the public school system and you can leave it in their hands with absolute safety. The public school is one of the most tremendous powers in the moulding of public opinion that America ever had. As long as she keeps her free schools, her free press and her free pulpit America need have no fear for the future.

"I have never become reconciled to coeducation. I believe boys during their period of adolescence should be taught by men. Men who can pick them up and trounce them if necessary. Men who can control them and put into their lives a certain masculine tinge that boys of the present day sometimes lack."

"I wish Americans were trained better in sports. Here the emphasis is placed on victory rather than the sport. There must be a crowd to applaud. Englishmen are taught to love sport for the sport's sake.

"The New England teacher need never hold her head low in comparing the school product in character and manner with any other school."

"To be sure there is criticism of our public schools. Our nearest and dearest friends are the ones we are sometimes bitterest to and say the meanest things about.

"The disintegration of the American home is pathetic and foreboding. It has placed upon the public schools a responsibility which they are neither orrganized nor should be expected to meet."

He believed the young people should be chaperoned from dances.

"I am not sure that the school should be obliged to furnish a beautiful hall and patronesses and chaperons. If the young people are to have these functions at least have the mothers go with them. If you set the pace others will fall in line.

"The schools need criticism to be sure. Every live and growing thing is apt to make mistakes.

"The school system is alive and makes mistakes but it has the right to be judged in a friendly spirit. As and Englishman who takes pride in becoming an American I say 'Cherish a most tender spirit and a most generous ardor toward your public schools. In them is the portent promise of a great America—without them retrogration is certain.'"

Resolutions on the death of Dr. Wellington Record offered by Walter S. Pinkham were adopted.

Louis B. Weston rendered several bass solos, Mrs. A. R. Moulton being the accompanist.

Refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. Carroll E. Bates, Mrs. Herbert Y. Follett, Mrs. Frank A. Page, Mrs. Joseph Walther, Mrs. A. B. Hillman, Mrs. Chester Godfrey and Mrs. Walter Brady.

BOUNTY ON BRITISH BABIES PROVIDED

General Sickness Benefit Is Also In Operation

London, Jan. 14.—The enjoyment of benefit under the much abused national insurance act began yesterday and for every child born the parents, provided either is insured and the child lives a month, will receive a bounty of $7.50. The mother also is entitled to a "sickness benefit" during her confinement.

It is estimated there are 1,200,000 births annually in the United Kingdom, and fully 1,000,000 of these babies will be entitled to the insurance benefit.

The general sickness benefit also came into operation yesterday. One effect of the maternity benefit is expected to be an improvement in the national physique, which it is agreed has suffered enormously from the fact that so many mothers bring their children into a world of poverty.

SENATORSHIP IS WON BY WEEKS

Elected by Bay State Legislature to Succeed Crane

BATTLE FOR THE NOMINATION

Smoke Does Not Clear Away Until Thirty-First Ballot Is Cast, After Four Days' Deadlock—Tremendous Pressure Brought to Bear Upon Members of Legislature

Boston, Jan. 14.—Congressman John W. Weeks of Newton was elected United States senator from Massachusetts, to succeed Winthrop M. Crane, when the legislature convened today.

The four-day deadlock in the Republican caucus was broken late yesterday afternoon, when on the thirty-first ballot Weeks received ninety-seven votes, or three more than was necessary for a nomination under the two-thirds rule.

The result on the thirty-first ballot was as follows: Weeks, 97; McCall, 57; Guild, 5; Lawrence, 1.

The nomination was made unanimous on the motion of Senator Allen, the McCall leader in the contest. Representative Sherbourne, a Guild leader, seconded the nomination.

The tremendous pressure brought to bear upon the members of the legislature began to tell on the twenty-fifth ballot. Slowly but surely the Weeks strength broke into the McCall forces until eighty-six votes, or three more than a majority, had been secured.

Following the thirtieth ballot, Speaker Cushing broke from McCall to Weeks, on the ground that the latter had the majority backing of the party, and it was all over.

The conference of the Democratic members of the legislature, which was held while the Republicans were balloting, broke up in disorder. Several of the members, under the leadership of Representative Meaney, bolted the conference, following a vote which provided that the Democrats should go into the legislature with a candidate.

The remaining members, under the leadership of Martin Lomasney, voted the sense of the conference was that Sherman L. Whipple should be supported as the Democratic candidate in the legislature.

The only point at issue was whether or not the Democrats should name a candidate in the conference. Both Meaney and Lomasney agreed on the support of the bill providing for the direct preferential choice of United States senators.

Meaney and the members who followed him in the bolt contended that the duty of the Democrats was to concentrate their fight on the direct primary bill and that it was a violation of the party platform to nominate a candidate for United States senator.

In an interview last night Weeks said:

"I am highly gratified at the action of the Republican members of the legislature and am especially pleased that there seems to be no bitterness resulting from the long and strenuous contest. I feel that the campaign has been conducted on a high plane and in harmony with the ideals of the commonwealth. A senatorship from Massachusetts is a very great office, I think I realize its responsibilities and if the action taken today is ratified by the legislature I shall do my best to uphold the traditions of the office and shall try to prove myself worthy of the confidence and support of the people of Massachusetts.

"I am most appreciative of the generous attitude of my opponents towards me during the campaign and am profoundly grateful to all those who have given me their loyal support."

BOY MURDERS MOTHER

Eleven-Year-Old Angered Because He Was Refused Five Cents

Pittsburg, Jan. 14.—Leroy Higgins, aged 11, shot and killed his mother in their home at Monaca, near here. The lad was angered because he was refused 5 cents to purchase candy.

After shooting his mother the lad reloaded the shotgun, and, going into the yard, fired a charge through the wall of the house, leading the police to believe, until he confessed, that some other person was guilty of the crime.

$2,000,000 Packing Plant Fire

CITY COUNCIL

Councilman Sandberg sought to have certain of the names confirmed and the others held up. Those he wanted to confirm were the constables who served civil process. No one seemed to know much about this business. The entire list was then confirmed.

An application was received from J. A. Keating for an auctioneers license. Laid on the table until later when Councilman Johnson offered an order granting the license which was adopted, and the bond approved.

A petition that Bromfield street be accepted between Mason street and the reservation was received and will be referred later.

A petition from the Bay State railway company for attachments on Hancock street was granted.

A petition for the same company for a relocation of poles on Maple and Franklin streets was received and laid on the table until later

A petition was received from the Citizens' Gas Light Co., asking for a location for mains on Brackett, Field, Centre, Liberty, West, Station, Robertson, Quarry and Germain streets and Brook road. A hearing was ordered for Monday Jan. 20 at 8.15.

A petiton was received from the Electric Light Co., for a relocation of poles on Whitwell street, Granted.

From the same committee for a location for poles on North street. A hearing was ordered for Monday, Jan. 20, at 8 o'clock.

Councilman Little offered a resolution that the Mayor be requested to petition the Railroad Commissioners that the Bay State Street railway company grant a half fare to workmen between Brewers corner and Milton Lower Mills. Adopted.

Councilman Corcoran offered a resolution that the City Council endorse the petition of Senator McDevitt for eighty cent gas for Quincy. Adopted.

Councilman Richards offered an order for $9,000 for the paving of Penn street.

Under the calendar the temporary loan order for $350,000 came up. A point of order was raised by Councilman Cunningham that under the rules the order should go to a committee. The chair ruled the point well taken.

On motion of Councilman Duffy Rule 25 was suspended on a rising vote of 20 yes and 3 no. The order then took its second reading and Councilman Bailey moved to suspend the rules.

Councilman Richards asked the Mayor if he thought he could carry the city through on $350,000 and His Honor replied yes.

Continuing Councilman Richards said that it seemed to him that the amount should be larger. If more was to be needed now was the time to provide for it. He then asked the City Auditor if the amount would be sufficient and the Auditor replied that it all depended on the collection of the taxes. If not more was collected than last year it will not be sufficient. He moved to make amount $400,000.

Councilman Cunningham objected to having the order railroaded through It was an important matter and should have more than five minutes discussion. He wanted time to consider the question and satisfy himself. He then raised the point of order that the question was on suspension of the rules.

The President ruled the point well taken.

Councilman Sandberg wanted the order laid on the table but the motion to suspend the rules was put and carried on a rising vote 17 voting yes and 5 no.

Councilman Richards then renewed his motion to make the amount $400,000.

Councilman Little said that if the Mayor finds that the amount stated in the original order was not enough he could readily come back and ask for more.

Councilman Duffy asked if he had any reason to believe taxes would be collected any better this year.

Mayor Stone replied that he hoped to collect more this year. They had figured close and hoped to get along with the amount. He however had no objevtion to making the amount $50,000 more. If it was not needed it will not be used.

Councilman Duffy opposed the amendment. It was the councils duty to keep the expenses down and if the amount was $350,000 it would be an inducement to keep expenses down.

Councilman Whiton wanted time to consider before voting.

Councilman Whiton. We have been voting this kind of order for twenty-five years. What difference does it make whether the amount is $350,000 or $500,000. He did not believe any official was going to borrow more than was needed. He believed in a larger amount and was not in favor of renewing notes.

Councilman Cunningham spoke at length on the question. He was glad the Councilman at Large from Ward One was so well informed. He was not. He wished to understand the matter thoroughly. This is simply a subterfuge for renewing notes outstanding. Last year the Council passed an order for $150,000 to retire some of these notes. He believed a large part of the amount would be used to renew notes.

At this point the speaker was informed that he was getting away from the question but would be given five minutes for generalities.

Continuing Councilman Cunningham said that he wanted to go over the matter with the Mayor and Treasurer. We ought to be satisfied. There ought to be a satisfactory effort to realize on the assets of the city and not on notes all of the time.

Councilman Beeman said it was easy to say what ought to be done. There should be money enough on hand to run the city.

Councilman Bailey opposed the amendment. The auditor said the amount needed depended upon the amount of taxes collected and he was right. Last year the temporary loan was for $500,000 and $150,000 was refunded. We will need as much this year unless the taxes are collected. It was up to the departments to get busy and collect the taxes. If the administration should come back and ask for more we can then ask why the taxes are not collected. If we give them a larger amount they wil not hustle as they would with a smaller amount. He believed that the good intentions of the administration were being shown.

Councilman Farquharson said what he had heard was a revelation to him. He had no idea there was so much taxes out. It seemed to him that if notes could be renewed there was not the incentive to collect in taxes. He believed if money was wanted it should be got by collecting the taxes.

Councilman Whiton had said he had not changed his mind. He could not see how money borrowed for current expenses could be used to renew notes. He did not believe that $350,000 would force the collection of taxes.

Councilman Griffin asked if notes could be renewed and was informed that they could be.

Councilman Whiton then asked the City Solicitor if money borrowed on the temporary loan for current expenses could be used for paying notes outstanding.

City Solicitor in reply said money received from taxes and money received from the temporay loans were put into the general treasury fund and it would be hard to tell which dollar was used for current expenses and which was used to renew notes.

Councilman Whiton then asked if the money received from taxes was put in one box and the money from temporary loans in another box how it would be then.

City Solicitor McAnarney replied that was a rather hypothetical question and he could not answer what might happen.

The amendment of Councilman Richards was then put and lost on a rising vote of 6 yes and 15 no.

The order was then passed to be ordained by roll call 21 voting yes and 1 no. Councilman Farquharson voted no.

At this point the petition of the street railway for a relocation for poles was taken from the table.

Councilman Duffy said that he did not propose to give the street railway anything if he could help it until they gave something in return. The only way was to deny them every franchise. It was a disgrace that there was no public sanitary in City Square.

Councilman Little did not want to object on a small matter but for three years the people of West Quincy had been trying to get a one fare to Milton Lower Mills but could not even get an official reply from the railway. Patience had ceased to become a virtue.

Councilman Whiton said it was the worst railroad in the United States. The cars were poor and no attempt was made to get better. We have put up with a lot of things. He did not want to blame the local superintendent if he was not to blame. He also wanted to know if these poles had already ben relocated.

It was said that the Superintendent was in the hall and the City Messenger was sent to request him to appear before the Council, but he had gone.

It was then voted that the petition be laid on the table and an official of the railroad be requested to be present at the next meeting.

Councilman Bailey moved that Rule 25 be suspended indefinitely.

This is the rule that requires the President to appoint committees during the month of January, and the motion prevailed.

Councilman Cunningham then raised a point of order that the suspension of a rule for an indefinite period was the same as repealing the rule and under the rules of the Council was not in order as it must lay on the table for a week.

The President ruled the point well taken.

Councilman Bailey moved that a committee of five be appointed to include the President to revise the rules of the Council and report at the next meeting. Voted.

The President appointed Councilmen Bailey, Whiton, Cunningham and Little.

The Council by ballot then proceeded to elect two members of the Council as trustees of the City Hospital.

Councilman Cunningham and Richards were elected.

Adjourned at 9:15 until Jan. 20.

URANIUM REMAINS FAST ON THE ROCKS

Fleet of Tugs Unable to Extricate Stranded Steamer

Halifax, Jan. 14.—So firm and fast is the steamer Uranium lodged on the rocks near Chebucto Head, where she ran aground in Sunday's fog, that no amount of straining by a fleet of tugs pulled her a foot towards liberty.

After three ineffectual attempts to float her Captain Eustace decided he would have to lighten his ship before she could be extricated.

Of the 880 passengers who were transhipped to rescue craft many left here for their destinations yesterday. Six hundred and forty-three, examined by United States immigration service inspectors during the afternoon, left late last night for New York.

GOES TO STATE PRISON

Former Lynn Real Estate Man Pleads Guilty to Forgery Charges

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 14.—William P. Carroll, a former well known real estate man, with an office in Lynn, pleaded guilty to forgery and uttering checks in Boston and Cambridge last December. Judge Chase, in the superior criminal court, sentenced him to state prison for a term of three to four years.

Carroll, who has been before the court on various charges since 1906, served a term of six months, and on another occasion he was fined $100 for violating insurance laws.

CONCESSIONS MADE BY ROAD

New Haven Allows Clerks 80 Per Cent of Their Demands

AND AVERTED STRIKE

A threatened strike of the freight clerks employed on the New Haven road has been averted by concessions by the company that were announced Sunday night. The principal concessions include a flat increase of 15 cents a day and two weeks' vacation each year with pay. There were also more than 30 other demands of the clerks that the company agreed to.

Nearly 3000 persons will be affected by the new edict of the company, which holds good in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and other states as well as in Connecticut. The increase means about $1.05 a week to most of the clerks, many of whom are seven-day workers. The concessions show that the clerks got 80 per cent of their grievances adjusted.

FALL INTO THE THAMES

Two British Aviators Meet Death After Dropping Long Distance

London, Jan. 14.—Two British airmen, L. F. MacDonald and a man named Ingles, were drowned in the River Thames yesterday afternoon. The aviators were flying at a height well above the river when the machine suddenly swooped downward. Immediately upon coming in contact with the water the engine exploded.

One of the aviators clung for a while to the top of the machine, but he sank before boats from shore could reach him.

ASKS FOR WILDCAT BOUNTY

Doolan Makes an Unusual Catch at North Gardner, Mass.

Gardner, Mass., Jan. 14.—For the first time in at least ten years, a request for bounty on a wildcat has been filed at the office of Town Clerk Clark. David E. Doolan of Ashburnham, who shot a wildcat in North Gardner, is the applicant for the bounty, which will be paid out of the county treasury.

After killing the cat and showing it to his acquaintances, Doolan brought the carcass to Gardner to prove his case.

BUT FIVE VOTES IN HIS FAVOR

Conviction of Archbold Means Removal From Office

SIXTY-EIGHT ARE AGAINST HIM

Senate Upholds Impeachment of Judge of Commerce Court by the House—Thirteen Articles Voted on, Although Not Necessary For Removing Him From Bench

Washington, Jan. 14.—Robert W. Archbald of Scranton, Pa., for twenty-nine years an occupant of judicial positions upon the Pennsylvania state bench, the federal district bench and the United States commerce court, was adjudged guilty by the United States senate of "high crimes and misdemeanors," was stripped of his office and forever disqualified from holding positions of public honor or public trust.

The conviction and judgment came as the conclusion of the impeachment trial that has been pending in the senate since last summer, on charges that Judge Archbald had been guilty of misconduct and misbehavior as a judge, and that he had corruptly used his judicial power to further the private interests of himself and his friends in the acquisition of coal land properties in Pennsylvania.

The senate's conviction of Archbald removes him from the federal bench without further procedure.

A verdict of guilty was voted on the first count against Archbald, that he had wrongfully influenced Erie railroad officials to grant him an option on the Katydid culm dump. Conviction on the other twelve charges was not necessary to remove Judge Archbald from the bench, but the senate proceeded. The vote on the first count was 68 against Archbald and 5 in his favor.

A verdict of guilty was voted by the senate on the first count impeachment charge against Archbald, that he had wrongfully influenced Erie railroad officials to grant him an option on the Katydid culm dump. The vote on the first count was 68 against Archbald and 5 in his favor.

Senator Root proposed that the question of Archbald's guilt should be submitted in this form:

"Senator, how say you? Is the respondent, Robert W. Archbald, guilty or not guilty of the charge contained in this article?"

The order adopted by the senate provided that each senator should rise in his place as his name was called and answer "guilty" or "not guilty."

Not guilty was the verdict on the second article of impeachment, which charged Archbald with having attempted to secure a fee by settling a case between the Marion Coal company and the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad. The vote was 46 to 25 in the judge's favor.

On the third charge the senate found Archbald guilty. This charge embodied alleged undue influence on Lehigh Valley railroad officials in a coal dump deal. The vote on the third article was 60 to 11.

The vote on the fourth article of impeachment, charging secret and wrongful correspondence with a railroad attorney on a case pending before him, again resulted in Archbald's conviction. The vote for conviction was 52 to 20.

The fifth vote resulted in another verdict of guilty, this one on the charge of unduly influencing Philadelphia and Reading railroad officials to grant a coal land lease to Frederick Warnke. The vote for conviction was 66 to 6.

Archbald was acquitted on the sixth charge, the vote for conviction being 24 to 45. It alleged corrupt use of influence with the Lehigh Valley roalroad in coal land deals.

Article seven charged Archbald figured as a signer and payee of a note for $2500 by W. W. Reissinger of Scranton five days after he had adjudicated an insurance lawsuit in which Reissinger was a beneficiary. On this article he was found not guilty, the vote being 29 guilty, 36 not guilty.

The vote on the eighth article was 32 guilty, 42 not guilty.

Archbald was found not guilty on the ninth article, the vote being 23 to 39.

Articles eight and nine charged that Archbald sent Edward J. Williams to Boland to discount a note for $500 signed by John H. Jones, while the Bolands were interested in a lawsuit being tried before him.

The vote on the tenth article was 1 guilty to 65 not guilty. This article charged Archbald with having received a large sum of money from Henry W. Cannon for defraying the expenses of a pleasure trip to Europe.

Archbald was found not guilty on the eleventh article. The vote charged Archbald with having accepted a sum of money from lawyers practicing before his court to spend on a trip to Europe.

The twelfth article charged that J. B. Woodward, a general attorney for the Lehigh Valley, was selected as a jury commissioner by Archbald while the latter was serving the middle district of Pennsylvania. The allegation was that Woodward served the railroad while selecting juries in railroad cases for trial in Archbald's court. The vote was 19 guilty to 46 not guilty.

On the last article of impeachment, alleging that Archbald had sought credit from attorneys and litigants before him, and had carried on a general business in coal land speculations, the vote resulted in conviction, 42 to 20.

When the house of representatives decided to impeach Archbald it was the ninth time in the century and a quarter since the adoption of the constitution that this procedure against a civil officer of the national government had been instituted.

Of the eight previous impeachments that were begun only two resulted in convictions. Both of those found guilty were judges of the federal district court. Of those who failed of conviction, one was a chief executive of the nation, one a secretary of war, one a justice of the United States supreme court, and two district court judges.

HAS STRONG ARM SQUAD

How Chicago Minister Protects Women Members of His Flock

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Seventeen men of the First United Presbyterian church have organized a "strong arm squad" to protect women going to and from church for evening services.

Rev. James E. Walker, the pastor, called on the men of his congregation to help protect the women, and from his pulpit announced the names of seventeen muscular individuals who agreed to go wherever the pastor assigned them to escort women to and from church.

The move was decided on after the minister learned that two women of his congregation had been followed by rowdies a week ago.

DIPLOMATS WORKING TO SECURE PEACE

Advise Balkan Allies and Turks to Exercise Moderation

London, Jan. 14.—Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign secretary, and the ambassadors of the powers are making valiant efforts to bring about a settlement between Turkey and the Balkan allies in the direction of peace.

They have had additional interviews with Dr. Daneff and Rechad Pasha, the heads of the Bulgarian and Turkish delegations, respectively, advising moderation on both sides and warning them that either party, if through obstinancy it should plunge Europe into war again, would incur a heavy weight of disapproval.

The general impression among the plenipotentiaries is that the definite decision on war or peace must come from Constantinople. Whatever concessions and compromises the Balkan league may make the allies will never consent to the renunciation of Adrianople, which the Turks make the sine qua non of peace.

WITHOUT COUNSEL

Castro Appears Before Special Board to Plead His Cause

New York, Jan. 14.—Cipriano Castro, former President of Venezuela, being detained at Ellis island by the immigration officials, was taken before a special board of inquiry which is to determine whether he may enter the United States.

The hearing was secret and Castro appeared without counsel. The findings of the board, it is understood, must be submitted to Secretary Nagel of the department of commerce and labor before final judgment in the case is made public.

VALUABLE FILMS LOST

Many That Cannot Be Replaced Destroyed In Movie Plant Fire

New Rochelle, N. Y., Jan. 14.—Many miles of motion picture films, some of them produced at great cost, went up in a burst of flame that swept over the plant of the Thanhouse Moving Picture company here.

The plant covered more than an acre in area and the blaze seemed to break out in a dozen places at once. A bevy of actresses at rehearsal had scant time for escape. The loss is estimated at nearly $250,000, mostly in films that cannot be replaced.

Upset by "Trial Stew"

Munich, Jan. 14.—Thirty-three girls of the municipal cooking school were made seriously sick by eating a "trial stew" of their own concoction.

PARCEL POST BY AEROPLANE

Jones Carries Packages of Beans From Boston to Providence

Providence, Jan. 14.—Harry M. Jones, the first aviator commissioned by the federal government to carry parcel post matter, landed in his biplane at the Providence baseball park yesterday afternoon, having made the trip from Boston in fifty-nine minutes.

Jones brought with him nine packages containing Boston baked beans, addressed to Postmaster Kilton and other persons in this city, and to the postmasters at New London, New Haven, Bridgeport and New York.

The landing was easy. When Jones sighted the city he arose to a height of 4000 feet and followed the railroad tracks until he was near the baseball park. He made a long glide to the field, turning an easy spiral to give effect to his undertaking.

A Stirring Story of Military Adventure and of a Strange Wartime Wooing, Founded on the Great Play of the Same Name

Nobody in Charleston slept that night of April 11-12. At the Ellingham house, as at Pinckney's, and at many another home of luxury and pride there were festive or other gatherings which kept people up and about until long past midnight.

Then in the early hours of that fateful Friday an exchange of rocket signals between Forts Johnson and Moultrie began. Every one knew what that meant. The men, some of them without stopping to change their evening clothes, disappeared with strange, silent, ominous alacrity. The women huddled in whispering groups or brought spyglasses and from outdoor points of vantage watched intently across the dark waters to where the flagstaff of Sumter, like a warning finger, pointed solemnly to the stars in the balmy dusk of the southern springtime sky.

The abrupt departure of Thornton and Lieutenants West and Ellingham, accompanied, as it appeared, by Dr. Ellingham and one or two of the young men in uniform, had not failed to attract attention and excite comment. Mrs. Haverill by discreet inquiry among the household servants, obtained a startling hint or two which she hastened to communicate in confidence to Gertrude—none else.

"There are tears in your eyes, Gertrude," said Mrs. Haverill sympathetically.

"They have no right there," returned the girl, with a pitiful flash of the old spirit that contrasted with the scared look on her unwontedly pale face.

"I am afraid I know—not what has happened to Lieutenant West in those last few minutes, but—forgive a woman who has had more experience than you have, dear, and who is fond of you—what happened between you and him when you were together for the last time, maybe, in—who knows how long? Let fate part you, if it must, but not a quarrel. What is pride or coquetry at such a moment?"

"Another rocket," cried Madeline West, flitting from somewhere in the outer darkness. "Does any one know where Rob—I mean where Lieutenant Ellingham is? He excused himself for a minute and he has been gone an hour and a half. He promised to be here before"—

"So did Lieutenant West," Mrs. Haverill joined in with undisguised anxiety.

Boom, came a loud, sullen, reverberating report from over the bay.

"Look!" screamed Gertrude Ellingham, jumping up in a frenzy of excitement. "Did you see that line of fire against the sky. That was no rocket—that was a shell. It has struck the fort!"

At the same instant there was a loud clatter of horses' hoofs outside and Bob Ellingham dashed up the front steps.

"Ruffin has fired the shot!" he cried, throwing his cap into the air. "Hark! there goes another one. They have opened fire on Sumter, sure enough!"

"Where is Mr. West? Mr. Thornton? The doctor?" demanded the three women, all in a breath.

"They are—Anderson doesn't reply—That's what I rode back ahead to tell you. It's all right. The second shot hit Thornton, and Kerchival hasn't a scratch. He'll be along with the doctor directly. Ruffin swore he would fire the first"—

"For heaven's sake, Robert, what are you talking about?" pleaded Gertrude, seizing him by the arm. "Do try and compose yourself and tell us what has happened. You say that"—

"Kerchival and Thornton have had it out, I tell you. Beauregard has 3,000 or 4,000 men under arms, and it's a chance if Anderson can muster a hundred. Well, as I was saying, they met in the gardens down at the bayou. Sam Pinckney and myself loaded the weapons, a pair of regulation navy sixes. Then we tossed up a silver dollar for choice of position at ten paces, and Thornton won. But that made no difference, for the sun wasn't up yet"—

"Mercy! Was it a duel?" Mrs. Haverill interjected.

"It certainly was, madam. Kerchival scored at the second fire. His bullet plowed through Thornton's cheek, branding him, but nothing dangerous. The doctor is with him, and old Kerchival is all right and coming along after me any minute. Well, that trifling affair is over and well over. Something more important has started. I thought you'd all be anxious to know that"—

"Madam, I have to beg your pardon for my unexpectedly prolonged absence and to report for orders."

This last was the voice of Kerchival, looking uncommonly pale and animated, addressing himself to Mrs. Haverill.

She grasped his hand without speaking and drew him aside.

"I can only say God bless you, Lieutenant West," she said, with quivering lips. "Some happier day I hope to thank you adequately and so will the colonel. He knows even less than I do at the present moment. But he knows that Frank has taken refuge here, and he will not see him or allow me to do so. You will take these to the poor boy, won't you—this letter and this little packet? It is a sacred confidence, and I ask it, as I know you receive it, freely."

Kerchival bowed profoundly and was off in a second.

Mrs. Haverill's envoy to her stepson Frank had cost her another poignant scene with the colonel. Before the ball had ended and the excitement of Sumter fairly began, husband and wife had met in the seclusion of the lady's apartment.

"My Desdemona," he had said in more than half serious bantering, "I picked up Cassio's handkerchief here, and I have returned it to its owner. That is all very well, my girl, but what is this I hear about you having had a fainting spell or something earlier in the evening? You are trembling and excited even now."

"My husband, there is something I have to tell you—something very near to your heart. It is about your son"—

"About Frank? Again?"

"He is here in Charleston."

"He ought to be in prison, I suppose. But to me he is nowhere."

"I am sending word to him; I may see him later. Have you no word for him?"

"I have told you be and his unfortunate wife are provided for. Why should you see him? I shall not."

"At least I had thought to convey a warmer message than that from his father."

Here the colonel paused a moment in silence and made his peculiar gesture of violently brushing something aside from before his face.

"Frank is a man now," he said at last. "I couldn't trust myself to see him—and, anyway, he must now stand on his own pins. We all must, for these are desperate days and rebellious boys are not the only concern by a long way. But, here"—the colonel carefully took something from his breast pocket—"I will send him something to make a man of him if anything can. He will understand. I know he loves you as if you were his own mother. Possibly he has some little tenderness for his father also. If he has I think he will look tenderly upon this picture and at the same time remember me."

"A miniature portrait of me!" gasped Mrs. Haverill as she received it from her husband's hands.

"Yes; the one you gave me before we were married. I have never been without it a single hour since. I have carried it through every campaign and in many a scene of danger on the plains. You see what a sentimental old ruffian I am now, don't you? Never mind. Frank is a fugitive from justice. God only knows what his future will be."

CHAPTER III.

Parting of the Ways.

A STRANGE feeling of excitement, something like exhilaration, was in the air at Charleston that morning of April 12. Henry Clay's birthday, as more than one of the Ellingham household had remarked, in a way that cannon signal roaring against Sumter had come as a relief to the general tension not only at the South Carolina storm center, but everywhere, north and south. It was the decisive beginning of what all now knew to be inevitable war.

When Colonel Haverill reflected upon the calamity pending over the country his own personal griefs and annoyances sank into insignificance. It was the same with the elderly southerners, and the personal greetings and communings of that day were marked by grave courtesy and kindness.

From earliest daybreak every available place on the harbor side was thronged by ladies and gentlemen, old and young, white folk and black, viewing the spectacle of the bombardment. Troops came pouring into Charleston, but were held in reserve, the forces already manning the score of batteries now in action against Sumter being more than ample. Civilians of various descriptions were arriving from all directions on horseback, afoot and in every species of antiquated or improvised conveyance. Far out seaward could be described the vessels sent by the Federal government for the relief of the beleaguered fortress, and it was rumored that they would still make an attempt to throw re-enforcements into the place.

Meanwhile Major Anderson, within the fort, had withheld his fire until long after daylight, when parapets were knocked down and breaches began to appear in the masonry of the walls where the thirteen inch shells from the mortars struck, and smoke and flames from burning sheds told of havoc wrought within.

When he was "good and ready," as they said, Anderson opened fire with three barbette guns and stirred up the Confederate batteries on Mount Pleasant and Cummings point like a hornets' nest. Then he brought into action the two tiers looking toward Fort Moultrie with such effect that several of the latter's guns were eventually silenced.

The firing continued all day and intermittently through the night. Sumter had no ammunition to waste. One of her magazines had been exploded by the Confederate shells. The latter were persistently directed in an attempt to carry away the colors, but all day these defiantly waved, and when the morning of the 13th dawned the flag was still there. At last, about noon of that second day, a successful shot was aimed and the flag, which had been hanging by a single halyard, fell. One of the enlisted men was quick to raise it again, replacing the shattered flagstaff with a spar.

In that brief interval Major Anderson's fire having of necessity ceased, the Charlestonians concluded that the fort had surrendered. Senator Wigfall, in the name of General Beauregard, put forth in a boat and went to offer Anderson the most favorable terms of capitulation—evacuation with permission to salute the flag and to march out with the honors of war, with their arms and private baggage. Under these conditions his brave defense having won him the best possible terms and knowing that further resistance would mean useless sacrifice of life, Major Anderson without humiliation hoisted the white flag over Sumter and entered into negotiations for the surrender of the fortress.

FOR BACK TAXES OF $1,200,000

What Government Will Ask of Oleomargarine Makers

GIGANTIC FRAUD IS REVEALED

Use of Secret Color Said to Give Oleo Exact Appearance of June Butter—Offer of Settlement For $102,000 Asserted to Have Been Made—Law on Subject Strict In Bay State

Boston, Jan. 14.—Oleo dealers in Boston and New England were astonished at the news, which came in dispatches from Washington, of the discovery of a gigantic fraud in colored oleomargarine.

The government chemists have discovered, it is alleged, that various concerns, one with a huge plant at Providence, have been using a hitherto unknown color, "fulvous oil," to give a yellow tint to their oleo.

The government tax on white oleo is ¼ cent a pound. The tax on colored oleo is 10 cents. The government charges that the firms have been evading this tax by the use of the secret color, and seek to collect $1,200,000 in back taxes. An offer of settlement for $102,000 has been made by the oleo dealers, it is asserted.

The firms involved, and the amounts sought to be collected are:

Oakdale Manufacturing company of Providence, $5095.

Of Chicago, Armour & Co., $122,886; Friedman company, $78,875; G. H. Hammond company, $213,657; Moxley company, $335,167; United States Butterine company, $66,479.

Of St. Louis, Blanton Manufacturing company, $6876; Mound City Manufacturing company, $4680.

Ohio Butterine company of Cincinnati, $125,331.

Capital City Dairy company of Columbus, O., $266,434.

The significance of this fraud for Massachusetts people and for Massachusetts dealers lies in the fact that the law here forbids the selling of oleo colored in the "semblance or imitation" of butter. The oleo colored with this obscure fulvous oil is said to have the exact appearance of June butter.

Royal E. Cabel, commissioner of internal revenue, told the house committee on expenditures in the treasury department that he had notified the above manufacturers of oleomargarine to show cause why they should not pay the government $1,200,000 in back taxes.

Fulvous oil is an oil containing enough sulphur to give an artificial color.

Mr. Cabell concluded his testimony yesterday, telling why he recommended a settlement for $102,000. He told the committee that the solicitor general of the department of justice had told him that the government had no case.

A CHANGE OF HEART

British Commons to Receive Deputation of Suffragettes

London, Jan. 14.—The British government reversed its ban placed on the reception of deputations of suffragettes and agreed to welcome in the house of commons a body of working women and the representatives of the Women's Social and Political union, next week.

Premier Asquith deputed David Lloyd George to receive the women, and the chancellor of the exchequer probably will be accompanied by the secretary for foreign affairs, Sir Edward Grey.

Militant suffragettes claim their threats of a revival of the riots in parliament square were responsible for the government's change of heart.

NASHUA MEN IN COURT

Six Do Not Contend the Gambling Charges Against Them

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 14.—Six of the prominent men of Nashua who were indicted in the effort of Police Commissioner Gregg to clean up that city came into court and pleaded nolo, which in plain English is: "I do not contend."

The six men were charged with gambling. They were: Harold Stevens, Jr., five counts; Louis Pero, one count; J. H. Parent, two counts; Daniel O'Connell, two counts; A. L. Vining, one count; Philip Boucher, two counts; all of gambling.

Annuling Executive Order

Washington, Jan. 14.—An amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill to annul the executive orders which placed fourth-class postmasters and assistant postmasters and clerks of first and second-class postoffices under civil service was adopted by the house, sitting as a committee of the whole.

Two Young Coasters Killed

Livermore Falls, Me., Jan. 14.—Two children were killed and two hurt seriously in a coasting accident at Chisholm. A double-runner hit a train at the bottom of a long hill. The boy steering the sled saw the train too late to turn out of the way.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Nature Fakers Now Busy with Explanations of the Silly Conduct—Swearing on Boston Common has been Prohibited by Municipal Ordinance— Irate Bostonians Must now go Elsewhere to Indulge in Profanity— Suffragists are also Active.

The Boston suffragist headquarters at 585 Boylston street are teeming with plans and preparations for the women's share in the inaugural festivities at Washington in March. The pageant of women as planned will be something the like of which has never been seen in this country. The development of women through the different stages of civilization will be shown by groups arrayed in varying costumes, and it is a safe assumption that the suffrage parade will be by no means the least attractive spectacle of the occasion to men and women alike.

Take notice, members of the anti profanity league. One may not swear in Boston. There still are things to justify the use of expletives: wrong numbers at the telephone, bunching of street cars, slow moving crowds composed of people who seem to have no business in life. There are automobiles that blow out fuses and employers who blow off their heads. Yet whatever his vexations and irriations the Bostonian may no longer go to the Common or to Franklin Park to indulge in a little quiet cursing, for the city council has passed an ordinance prohibiting profanity in public places. It is undoubtedly a righteous regulation. Swearing is one of the most childish of pursuits. No one of well poised personality is guilty of so raw an offence against good breeding and biblical injunction. To swear, to curse, to mouth strange oaths is a mark of a crude, undeveloped individuality. Yet, bless us, how will the jails hold 'em all if this highly moral rule shall be enforced?

Boston nature fakers, who are always on the qui vive to show that animals and birds are possessed of human intelligence, are had put to it to explain the conduct of the feathered things of the Common and Granary Burying Ground on the recent dark day. It was hardly nine o'clock in the morning, and the silly pigeons who are fed all day by passers-by must have been conscious that their crops were not half filled. Yet as gloom settled upon the walks and pathways the birds silently one by one slipped away in the direction of their dove cotes. The sparrows made for their houses of straw among the stones of King's Chapel, and a wise old owl who has been haunting the cemetery came forth in search of prey. The intense blackness lasted only a few minutes. Yet it completely fooled a whole bevy of birds.

The Hub's artistic conscience has rarely been aroused as this season. Only one public spirited citizen of the Back Bay has thus far failed to write a letter to the Transcript or Herald explaining a new design for beautification of Copley Square. There are families whose members no longer speak because of disagreements as to where Dallin's statue of an Indian horseman shall stand. The echoes of a row concerning the proposed location of a high school of commerce in the Fenway have not yet died out. Now, to give a fresh cause for controversy, a temerarious architect and ambitious sculptor have worked out a plan for prettifying the interior court of the Public Library. The model of this scheme, exhibited at a local gallery, is arousing sarcastic comments from those who think that the original idea for the courtyard was of a restrained simplicity, broken only by the graceful Bachante whom Puritan scruples did not permit to be placed over the pool in the centre. The newst design would fill the court with banks of flowers between long alleys having bits of statuary at either end. A great sphinx like figure would loom on one side, and before him would be spread a pond of several times the size of the present pool. The whole conception is very Italianate; it is certainly enough unlike the rest of the library to give grounds for another of Boston's interminable controversies.

GOOD BILL PRESENTED

At the Kincaide Theatre For Public Entertainment

A full house crowded the Kincaide theatre, Monday afternoon and evening to enjoy a show of the excellent vaudeville standard. In addition to five photo plays a good booking has been secured by Manager Wardwell.

The Swain, Ostman trio of acrobats swing above many of the trios performing comedy roles, and with new departures from the old established line of workout they are sure to strike a responsive spirit in Quincy audiences.

Mabel Howard, with us for the first time, pleasingly sings, talks and dances her way to popularity.

The Charles Twins, who look and talk alike, but act differently in a character change skit make their initial Quincy appearance and Ted and Clara Steel cleverly entertain in the 12 minutes alloted to them.

Saturday, at the matinee and evening performances people were turned away because the house was sold out. The entire bill will be changed Thursday.

THAYER GIRLS' SCHEDULE.

The Thayer Academy Girls basketball team of South Braintree, of which Miss Dorothy B. Summers is manager, has arranged for the following games:

Jan. 18, Swampscott at Swampscott; 25, Sargent at Thayer. Feb. 1, Posse at Thayer; 7, Melrose at Melrose; 15, open; 21, Swampscott at Thayer, March 1, Posse at Posse.

DISTRICT COURT.

Solomao Borden was fined $3 cost for violating the automobile rules at Milton.

Michael O'Connor was sent to the state farm for drunkenness at Randolph.

Joseph E. Varville was fined $10. William Donahue $3 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Henry J. Haskins was sent to the state farm for being a vagrant at Quincy.

Edward Gleason was arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. Gleason was on probation when he was arrested. The new complaint was placed on file. The suspension of his first sentence was revoked and he was fined $15. Being unable to pay he was sent to Dedham jail.

Charles Erickson, John Hagbled and William Ahern were each fined $10 and Antti Mikkala and John McGilvray $15 each for drunkenness at Quincy. Sentenses suspended and the defendents placed on probation until Sept. 12.

Alley Legeh was arraigned for assault on Gustfin Lerne at Quincy. He was fined $25.

NOTICE.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MISS EMERY

Heart Failure Proved Fatal to Aged Atlantic Resident

The body of Miss Mary H. Emery, 80 years old, was found in her room at her home 75 Billings street this morning. Medical Examiner Fred E. Jones, was called and viewed the body. He said death was due to heart disease, aggravated by old age. The deceased was well known in Atlantic, having lived with her sister, the late Belle Emery, who died about six weeks ago.

BRIEFS

Leslie Rowe of Winter street, one of the apprentices at the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., spent the week end with his parents, in Malden.

The Democrats fearful that the Republicans would hold all the attention by the contesting came to the front Monday with their usual row.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Burgin of Presidents hill have returned from a visit to New London, Conn., where they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Doane, nee Mollie Rodgers.

Mrs. William L. Newell (nee Zita Pitts) has been confined to her home the past week with a serious attack of appendicitis, but by the quick work of her doctor, was fortunate enough to escape an operation. Her many friends will be glad to see her out again by next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Bailey and daughter Miss Christine Bailey of Front street, Weymouth, were guests over Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Newcomb of Winter street. Miss Miss Christine a young miss of five summers is quite a singer and entertained her hosts with some of the latest songs of the day.

Mrs. Henry M. Wright entertained a party of children on Saturday afternoon at her new home on Presidents hill in honor of the eighth birthday of her niece Gertrude Rogers, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Rogers of Hancock street. It was a most happy occasion for the young people as well as the hostess and her assistants.

Mrs. N. S. Hunting of Hancock street is to open her house tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock to any who may be interested in suffrage for women. An informal talk will be given by Mrs. Mary A. Howe of Newtonville, followed by discussion. It offers an opportunity to learn more of the needs and benefit to be derived by women and the community in which she lives if suffrage is granted.

☞Only 3 days to the Revels.

AWARDED $750.

Amelia J. Chisolm of Quincy, was awarded a verdict of $750 by a jury at Dedham Monday for felonious assault committed upon her by Charles H. Reviere at Quincy, April 30, 1911. She sued to recover $10,000.

EDWARD RILEY DEAD.

Edward H. Riley of 89 Taylor street, died at his home Monday in his 47th year. He was a machinist and was employed at the Tubular Rivet & Stud Co., for a number of years. He leaves a wife and three children. Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at his home.

BODY FOUND AT HUMMOCK

Supposed Victim of Drowning Washed Ashore

DIFFICULT TO IDENTIFY

Officer Brown of the Metropolitan Park Police found the body of an unknown man on the marsh between Rufe's Hummock and Gull Island, near the National Sailors' Home cemetery, at 11.30 Monday morning. The body was viewed by Medical Examiner Fred E. Jones who said the body had been in the water about two weeks. He ordered it removed to Hall's Undertaking rooms..

The man appeared to be about 50 years old. His face was considerably decomposed and identification will be difficult. He wore heavy felt boots, dark coat, red sweater, black outer shirt, white undershirt, had gray hair and gray moustache. The body was badly frozen.

Along the lining of the coat were rows of pins and needles and his pockets were filled with matches. It is thought that they indicated a man of a roving disposition.

The Boston police have been notified of the finding of the body but no one answering the description has been reported as missing. It is possible that he may have been a deck hand who fell overboard and was drowned in Boston harbor, the body being probably washed ashore by the extremely high tides of two weeks ago.

BROCKTON ODD FELLOWS

Will Be Given Royal Welcome By Their Quincy Brethren

Tonight will be a red letter occasion for Mt. Wollaston lodge, of Odd Fellows, when they entertain Massasoit lodge of Brockton. The brothers will assemble at the lodge room at 7.15 o'clock, and headed by a brass band and a delegation from the Patriarchs Militant will escort the visiting brothers from the depot to the hall. After the business session there will be an entertainment and collation.

CAT BOAT YACHTSMEN

Elect Officers and Agree on Rules For the Year

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Cat Boat association was held Monday evening at the office of Frank Fessenden Crane on Temple street and these officers elected:—

President, Wallace W. Arnold of the Dolly III.

Vice President, Herbert W. Robbins of the Clara.

Secretary and Treasurer, Dr. Frank E. Dawes of the Wanderer III.

Measurer, Ralph E. Winslow.

Executive Committee the above with Edgar W. Emery, Ira M. Whittemore, W. S. Hardwick and John Kitson.

It was voted to sail the coming season under the overall measurement which means overall and seven seconds allowance per foot figured by the Herreshoff table of an allowances.

It was also voted not to race as an association the coming season north of Marblehead or south of Hingham and Hull.

Considerable enthusiasm was shown in the movement to establish an additional class to be known as a second division of Class D which class will take in the smaller boats of the Cape Cat class. Herbert W. Robbins and Ralph E. Winslow were appointed a committee to confer with the owners of this class of boats to see if they will come into the class.

—The Brockton Enterprise says let "Everybody get together to make it a genuinely great year for Brockton, for the Bay State and for the nation and the world. Let's all be happy!" That is the right idea.

DAN HOWLEY TO BE A QUAKER

Former Weymouth Player Will Sign With Philadelphia Nationals

A recent publication in the sporting column says:

"It is reported that Dan Howley, the East Weymouth boy, who was a member of the Portland, Ore., team of the Pacific coast league last season, will become a Quaker. Howley played fine ball for Portland and did the bulk of the backstopping. Manager Charlie Dooin of Philadelphia made an offer to trade certain players for the clever East Weymouth boy and the probabilities are that Portland will arrange to send Howley "back East." Dan has been threatened a number of times with big league jobs, but they never have materialized.

Two years ago he was to report to Cleveland, but just before the start of the training season he was shipped out to the coast. Last season Bill Dahlen all but signed Howley, who is a far better catcher than any of those on the 1912 Brooklyn roster. Howley's friends on the South Shore and in Boston would be pleased to see him with Philadelphia and they would be out in force when he opened in this city against the Braves."

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Mrs. Henry M. Wright opened her new home on Goffe street Saturday afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock, in honor of the eighth birthday anniversary of her neice Miss Gertrude Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Rogers of Hancock street. Twelve of Miss Gertrude's friends were present, each of whom brought a little remembrance. During the afternoon games of various kinds were enjoyed by the young people in the enclosed veranda which was prettily decorated for the occasion the color scheme being red and green.

Before the guests departed they were invited to the dining room where refreshments were served. The table looked very pretty with the usual birthday scheme of decoration in the centre of which was a birthday cake which was cut by Miss Gertrude.

LIKE HIS MOTHER USED TO MAKE

James Whitcomb Riley.

"I was born in Indiany," says a stranger, lank and slim,
As us fellers in the restaurant was kindo' guyin' him.
And Uncle Jake was slidin' him another pumkin pie
And a extry cup o'coffee, with a twinkle in his eye.
"I was born in Indiany—more'n forty year ago—
An' I hain't been back in twenty—and
I'm workin' back'ard slow;
But I've et in ever' retaurant twixt
here and Santy Fee
And I want to state this coffee tastes like gittin' home to me!

"Pour us out another, daddy," says
the feller, warmin' up,
A-speakin' 'crost a saucerful, as uncle
tuk his cup.
"When I seed yer sign out yander," he went on to Uncle Jake—
"'Come in and git some coffee like yer mother used to make'—
I thought of my old mother and the
Posey County farm,
And me a little kid ag'in a-hangin' on her arm.
As she set the pot a-bi-lin', broke the eggs and poured 'em in."
And the fellow kindo' halted, with a trimble in his chin.

And Uncle Jake he fetched the feller's coffee back, and stood
As solemn, fer a minute, as a undertaker would;
Then he sort o'turned and tiptoed to'rds the kitchen door--and next
Here comes his old wife out with him a rubbin' of her specs—
And she rushes for the stranger, and she hollers out, "It's him!
Thank God we've met him comin'
Don't you know yer mother Jim?"
And the fellow as he grabbed her, says
"You bet I hain't forgot—
But," wipin' of his eyes, says he, "yer coffee's mighty hot!"

WILLIAM ROCKEFELLER.

Oil Millionaire Sought by Pujo Committee Subpoena Servers.

VOICE WAVERS AT TIMES

Rockefeller, Able to Speak, Bars Questions Concerning His Health

Miami, Fla., Jan. 14.—William Rockefeller, whose testimony is wanted by the house "money trust" investigating committee, left Miami last night for Palm Beach, Fla. He was accompanied by his wife, his two sons, and Dr. Chappell.

All members of the party refused to answer questions regarding the probability of Rockefeller appearing as a witness before the committee. Rockefeller declined to discuss his health. He spoke with little difficulty, although at times his voice wavered and sank almost to a whisper.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Lynn Woman Under $1000 Bail on a Charge of Arson

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 14.—Mrs. Rebecca Rickless Friedman, whose kissless, hugless courtship was aired in the Boston courts recently in a suit for breach of promise brought against her, and who was married to another man on Christmas eve, was held in $1000 bail in the district court, for the action of the grand jury on the charge that she set fire to her store in this city.

Mrs. Friedman had been under bail in the same amount, which was furnished by her brother-in-law. This bail was continued. Her case will come before the grand jury next week.

The case was a hard fought one, it requiring three days to try it. Judge Lummis heard the evidence and found probable cause.

CAMBRIDGE CHARTER.

The city charter of Cambridge is attacked in several bills proposing changes in it filed for consideration by the present Legislature. Senator Stearns for Prof. Lewis J. Johnson well-known in Quincy proposes a board of five supervisors to constitute a city council and school committee of five. This bill was turned down last year.

WORKED DEGREES.

Ave Maria Council, Knights of Columbus, under the direction of Grand Knight Bernard M. O'Neil performed the first and second degrees on several candidates at a regular meeting Monday evening in St. Joseph's hall.

OLD RESIDENT DEAD.

Mrs. Catherine, widow of John Russell of North and South street, died this morning, aged about 70 years. She was one of the very few surviving old time Catholic residents of Quincy Point and has lived in her homestead for a long time. She leaves two sons, Dennis F. and Charles J. and one daughter, Katie Russell.

—A Boston bank which advertised to accept deposits for the creation of a "Christmas fund," the initial deposit to be five cents and subsequent deposites to increase at the rate of five cents a week for a year, has received an astonishing number of accounts. The proposition appeals to persons of small means and the result of making such a deposit may end in many of the depositors getting the savings habit. The idea is a good one. The American people could save much more than they do, and any move which starts them on such a road is to be commended. It is understood that a bank in Connecticut which a year ago started a similar scheme, distributed some $35,000 at Christmas time to depositors. A bank in Harrisburg, Pa., distributed $350,000, one in Mount Vernon, N. Y., $100,000, and another in Plainfield, N. J., $70,000. Over 800 banks conducted Christmas savings clubs in 1912 and the idea appears bound to spread.—Banker and Tradesman.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

STEWED PRUNE DAINTIES.

THAT homely fruit, the prune, may be so disguised that those who once complained of it will welcome its reappearance on the table.

Suggestions for preparing stewed prunes are given here:

With Whipped Cream.

Stewed Prunes With Whipped Cream.—Wash and rinse nice large prunes and let them stand overnight in water. Stew them in this water and add enough sugar to make a rich sirup. Remove the stones when the fruit becomes soft and insert walnut meats in their places. Serve in a glass dish heaped with whipped cream.

Prune Sponge.—Take a pound of prunes, wash and let these soak overnight in water enough to cover them. In the morning stew them in the same water until tender. Add a cupful of sugar and put through a sieve to remove all stones and skins. To the pulp add half a cupful of water, juice of a lemon and an orange. Beat until foamy. Then add the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs and beat until all are thoroughly mixed. Serve with whipped cream.

Handsome Desserts.

Prune Mold.—Take a pound of prunes, three ounces of granulated sugar, an ounce of gelatin, the rind and juice of a lemon, a pint of water and six drops of cochineal. Boil the soaked prunes in the water and sugar until soft; then take out the stones and crack the kernels and add them, with the lemon juice and rind, to the cochineal and gelatin dissolved in a little water. Stir all until thoroughly mixed and then pour into a mold and put away in a cool place to stiffen. Turn out into a glass platter, garnish with whipped cream and serve.

Prunes and Apple Sauce.—Take half a pound of prunes, a slice of orange or lemon, a quarter of a cupful of sugar and as much water as is needed. Soak and boil, as usual. When cold remove the stones, fill the center with a teaspoonful of dry, tart apple sauce or with the same amount of nuts and jelly. Press two prunes together, leaving them spread apart after filling. This, if shaped a little with hands, will form a ball. Then use as center the ices known as bombes.

To make the nut and jelly filling take the meats from six English walnuts and chop these very fine. Mix with enough tart jelly to moisten and fill the prunes with this.

SOME SAVORY OMELETS.

OMELETS may be combined with cheese and vegetables to make exceedingly nutritious and attractive dishes. The lightness of the omelet makes it particularly appropriate to feed to children and those members of the family who are troubled with indigestion. If the ingredients are varied omelets may be served frequently without becoming monotonous.

Rich Omelets.

Baked Omelet.—Take one tablespoonful each of flour and hot butter, one cupful hot milk, a half teaspoonful salt, one-fourth teaspoonful pepper, six beaten eggs, one teaspoonful baking powder. Stir the flour into the butter and add gradually the milk, salt, pepper. Cool slightly and add the well beaten yolks of the eggs, then the beaten whites and the baking powder. Bake in moderate oven.

Cheese Omelet.—Take four eggs. Break these in a dish. Add four tablespoonfuls cold water and beat until light; add one-half teaspoonful salt. Put two teaspoonfuls butter or drippings into a pan, when hot pour in the eggs. With a fork lift the edges of the omelet to allow the soft portions to run underneath, shaking the pan constantly. Put in four tablespoonfuls grated cheese and then fold over half the omelet. Serve on a hot platter and garnish with parsley.

Made With Vegetables.

Tomato Omelet.—Take a half cupful of pulp of canned tomatoes. Beat three eggs without separating the yolks and whites and mix them with the tomatoes when the latter are well drained of juice. Make the omelet as usual, seasoning with salt and paprika. Fold and serve garnished with parsley.

Potato Omelet.—Take a cupful of cold mashed potatoes which have been passed through a sieve, three eggs, yolks and whites beaten separately, a scant teaspoonful of salt, a dash of white pepper, one-half cupful of sweet milk, a heaping teaspoonful of flour. Heat and butter a saucepan or frying pan and pour the mixture into it. Keep on top of stove at moderate heat till set and browned on under side, then place in the oven to brown.

Anna Thompson.

Poor Mamma.

The Dear Child—Oh, Mrs. Bloom, when did you get back? Mrs. Bloom—Bless you, dear, I was not away anywhere. What made you think so? The Dear Child—I thought you were. I heard my mamma say that you were at loggerheads with your husband for over a week.

Classifying Him.

"Brother Hardesty, can't you make your contribution for the education of the heathen a little larger than usual this year?"

"Dr. Goodman, I'm more than doubling it. I have just started that youngest boy of mine to college."—Chicago Tribune.

CITY SQUARE vs THE FORE RIVER

Two Team Match Arranged and Every One Strong

MONDAY NIGHT GAMES

Burke, with high single of 127 and total of 317 was high man in the Fore River bowling matches at the Coliseum alleys Monday evening. The Shipfitters, on whose team he bowls beat the Machinists Gallery, 4 to 0, and total pinfall of 1401 to 1276.

The Foundry beat the Hull Draftsmen, 3 to 1, and the Patternmakers beat the Electricians 4 to 0.

A busy session is scheduled for Thursday evening when Bliss and Grant roll Smith and Kiley of the Weymouth, Old Colony league team. Bliss is a Fore River bowler and Grant rolls with City Square. It is Quincy against Weymouth for a good sized purse. The match will be of 10 strings, high pinfall. The four men average from 95 to 98 and an interesting passage is expected.

A "Touching" Story.

The young lady who had sat for a crayon portrait was not altogether pleased with the result. "It looks like me, of course," she said, inspecting it doubtfully, "and yet I think there are some things about it that ought to be changed."

She suggested that the eyes should have rather more of an upward look, that the right hand should be a little less prominent, that the hair should be made more wavy and that certain changes ought to be made in the drapery.

"That would require a great deal of retouching," said the artist, "and I should have to charge you about $10 additional."

"Oh, dear!" she exclaimed, with a pout. "I shall have to give it up. Papa won't stand my 'retouching' him to that extent."

JOHN RUSSELL FREED ON MANSLAUGHTER COMPLAINT

Nothing in His Conduct to Warrant Court Finding Criminal Responsibility

When Machine He Drove Struck and Killed Mrs. McDonald at Wollaston

A hearing was held before Judge Avery in the district court this morning in the case of John Russell of the complaint charging him with manslaughter in causing the death of Mrs. Agnes McDonald, Jan. 2.

Russell was the driver of the auto truck of H. L. Kincaide & Co. which ran over Mrs. McDonald just north of South Central avenue on Newport avenue on the night of Jan. 2.

The evidence in the case showed that Russell was driving on the right side of the street toward Wollaston, going at a speed of not over twelve miles an hour. His lights with the exception of the search light were burning. He had sounded his horn in the crossing the intersection of South Central avenue and did not see the woman until the car was close upon her. The car was immediately stopped and the woman was found between the forward and rear wheel on the right side of the car, the front wheel having passed over her.

Russell and his helper John Warner pulled the woman from beneath the car and Warner ran to the office of Dr. Johnson who was soon on the spot and ordered the woman taken to the City Hospital where she died later.

Russell followed the ambulance to the Hospital and then drove to the police station and gave himself up to Chief Burrell.

The evidence showed no criminal responsibility on Russell's part. He was found not guilty and discharged.

DIED AT 89 YEARS.

Mrs. Rachel A. Joyce, widow of Noah T. Joyce, died at her home 26 Quincy avenue, Tuesday afternoon. She lived to the ripe old age of 89 years and has made her home with her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Martha M. Joyce.

GROUND BROKEN.

Ground was broken Tuesday by Contractor E. H. Sears, to whom the contract for the new addition to the Wollaston Baptist church has been awarded, and in a few months the rapidly growing Sunday school of this society will be housed in proper quarters.

4TH OF JULY ASSOCIATION STARTS MOVEMENT FOR ANNUAL CELEBRATION

Cleaned Up 1912 Event With a Balance in the Treasury Making a Fine Showing

Executive Committee Enthusiastic Over Enterprise. Banquet Planned in the Near Future

The Fourth of July Association has decided to enter upon the undertaking of another Fourth of July celebration this year and already plans looking towards that end have been entered upon. This year the association will have the advantage over last year of starting early in the season and accomplishing much of the preliminary work before the frost is out of the ground so to speak. This of course will mean more time and opportunity to perfect the program and make everything in ship shape so that there will not be any hurly burly rush and confusion which so often spells failure at the last minute.

However last year although commencing to plan late in the season the committee was fortunate in carrying out its plans and making good in all departments and details. This year things will be different.

Every member of the Executive committee is enthusiastic over the enterprise. The citizens in general after the success and experiences of the last three years are inclined to look upon a safe and sane local celebration as a good thing.

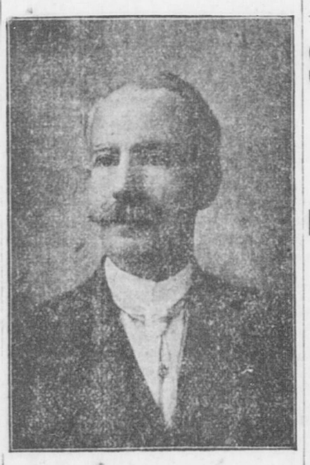
So where every one is agreed and satisfied, there is every chance for a good time and a successful celebration. Every detail will be looked in to with the end in view of providing recreation for every one.

In the near future, the executive committee will hold a small informal dinner, to which as many of the association as desire may be accommodated and then the plans for the celebration will be more fully discussed. This little event will be held within a few weeks, and Albert H. Whitman is chairman of the committee having it in charge.

MAYOR EUGENE R. STONE.
President.

EX-MAYOR WILLIAM T. SHEA.
Reception.

MAJ. FRED E. JONES
Parade.



A. W. STETSON.
Clerk.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Fourth of July Celebration Association was held Tuesday evening at the rooms of the Board of Trade with President Eugene R. Stone, presiding.

The secretary read the records of the last regular meeting held July 30, which were approved.

He then read the report of Clarence Burgin, treasurer of the association which showed all bills paid and a balance on hand of $113.53.

There were two outstanding bills against the association amounting to $10.65 which were ordered paid leaving a balance on hand to begin the year of over $100. The reading of this report caused much rejoicing.

The financial statement of the receipts and expenditures incident upon the celebration last year in detail was as follows:—

Financial Statement of the Quincy 4th of July Association for 1912.

| Sundries | 45.90 | |
| Typewriting | 24.00 | 1937.58 |
| Balance January 1, 1913 | | $113.53 |

Clarence Burgin,
Treasurer.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mayor Stone for his valuable services as president of the association as well as to all other officers and all who had in any way contributed to the success of the celebration.

A brief recess was then declared, while Mayor Stone was at the telephone and during this time George F. Elcock told of his days hunt for a fox, which was very interesting .

SUCCESSFUL OPERATION

Miss Elcock is Now Convalescent, Almost Recovered

The many friends of Miss Helen, otherwise known as "Nimrod," Elcock, who underwent a surgical operation at the Deaconess hospital some days ago, will be pleased to learn that she is now convalescent and that she will probably be at home by the first of next month.

"Nimrod" went to the hospital early in January for observation for stomach trouble. This disclosed the fact that an operation would be necessary which was performed a week ago. She recovered from the operation and as stated above is now on the road to recovery.

DRIVER CALLAHAN SERIOUSLY HURT AS HOSE WAGON TURNED TURTLE

Two Sleeping Children Rescued From a Blazing Apartment at Brewer's Corner

Fire in the House Occupied by Rev. Lillback. Damage $800

The overturning of a hose wagon, injury to Driver John T. Callahan of Hose wagon three, and the rescue of two sleeping children and a baby from a burning building provided an abundance of excitement at Brewer's Corner, this afternoon, shortly after 1.30 o'clock.

The fire was discovered in the two family dwelling house, at the corner of Granite and Centre streets. The lower tenement is vacant, but the upper tenement is occupied by Rev. John E. Lillback, pastor of the Finnish Congregation Congregational church.

Warren W. Nightingale who lives nearby looking out of his window saw smoke issuing from the roof of the tenement building and rushed there to see if the inmates knew of it and to warn them of their danger if they did not. He told Albert Martell to send in an alarm which he did from box 42 Mrs George P. Mead calling to Mr. Nightingale first apprised him of the fire.

Arriving at the house, Mr. Nightingale found that the inmates, Mrs. Lillback and her children were unaware of the fire in the house. Two of the children Gertrude and Beatrice who were asleep were taken to a place of safety by Mr. Nightingale,

ODD FELLOWS OF HIGH DEGREE

Enjoyed Hospitality of Mt. Wollaston Lodge

BANQUET AND SPEECHES

Mt. Wollaston Lodge, I. O. O. F. were hosts to visiting brothers from out of town Tuesday evening when the local members extended the hand of good fellowship to a large number at their lodge rooms.

Massassoit Lodge, 69 and Canton Nemasket of Brockton were escorted from the station by the local members. The route of march was Washington to Maple to Hancock street to headquarteres. It was planned to have the band on hand but sickness of a few of the members prevented. Canton Shawmut of Boston arrived about eight.

Among the invited guests were General Zenas W. Lewis of Brockton, commander in chief of the Massachusetts Department, Patriarchs Militant; District Deputy Grand Master, Harry G. Colett of Somerville, and suite. Remarks were made by guests and visiting brethern and a supper was served. S. Thompson Blood, on his first visit to Quincy, gave a characteristic sketch that was original in the extreme and was roundly applauded.

The lodges represented were Massassoit of Boston, Norfolk and Mt. Pleasant of Dorchester, Crescent and Wildley of Weymouth, Puritan of South Braintree, Rising Star of Randolph, Electric of Brockton and Neponset of Neponset.

Col. Edwards of Beverly of the Patriarchs Militant paid his first official visit to the Mt. Wollaston Lodge and was well received. Past Noble Grand Arthur Dunstan presided at the meeting.

Fully 250 were present during the evening and many members who have not attended of late were much in evidence. The jollification continued until midnight.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

At present Mr. Wilson seems to be what Disraeli said Gladstone was—"a man without one redeeming vice." —but the duties of his exalted office may save him.

Democrats who suggest automatically "relieving republicans" of office on July 1, evidently contemplate something special in the way of a Fourth of July celebration.

When the wife of a famous statesman says she loves to cook, it requires the most self-restraint to avoid hunting up a picture of her husband to see whether he looks dyspeptic.

Milwaukee has done away with socialism. Socialism was not really what made Milwaukee famous, anyhow.

The announcement that Castro is annoyed should be changed to the less classic "dumped," and it should be liberal.

Now that the senatorial job has been handed out the usual crop of Boston guessers will have to turn their attention to something else.

If the retail dealers have entered into a combine to put a false valuation upon their wares and blame it to the original producers, it would be logical for the latter to ferret out and expose the matter. As there does not appear to be much activity along that line at the present time, the chances are they are all tarred with the one brush.

Judge Archbold is down and out. He held sway too long.

And now they find that the indictment against Mr. Mellen contains a flaw. It may prove rotten to the core before the Lawyers finish their autopsy of the document.

Now that Tim Sullivan is down and out in New York there are some who would have a bang at him. Comparing him to many so called higher political lights. Considering the company that some of the higher plane artists keep the average citizen would sooner take his change with Sullivan, who was rough and ready, but open and above board.

The courts have decided that Chicago has the right to fix the size of a loaf of bread. If the measure is in proportion to the alleged size of the female foot of the windy city, the consumer need have no fear of quantity.

LAYING OUT STREETS.

If there is no provision at the present time, steps should be taken which would give public officials, a sort of supervision or a word to say as to the width of streets, which are laid out over private property with the idea of developing the same. Too often are examples of the harum scarum methods of laying out such streets, brought to public attention, in a great many ways.

A person or persons having property to develop lays out streets and avenues, and sells houselots along the lines of those highways. It is well understood that while the travelled way is really only for the immediate benefit of the dwellers along its lines, the ultimate object is to have the street accepted by the city as a public highway and then of course private care and attention to it ceases.

In many instances those streets are laid out originally, ridiculously narrow and then as if to add to the offence, the householders build as close to the street line as it is possible without actually tumbling over the line.

The result is plain on the day this is accomplished as later when the city is called upon to pay big money to improve this street, lay it out and accept it.

In a short time, the householder is dissatisfied with the attention which the private ownership applies to the street. The owner of the property has lost all interest in that locality, he has disposed of his property and moved to new fields to resume operations. Then of course the abutters get together. The usual program is carried out. The petition is presented to the City Council, referred to the committee on streets. The members from that ward, see a whole lot of votes going for or against them and they are of course in favor of the acceptance of the streets. A few members in other sections of the city are in the same dilemma. The result, you vote for mine and I'll vote for yours.

The City has to pay land damages for front land, moving back the house, building retaining walls, rebuilding cellar walls, and many other things which enter into the movement. Some times the claims are exorbitant, but they must be accepted, because there is no knowing what a jury will do in a suit against a city and if a compromise can be affected it is usually cheaper in the end that a law suit with its uncertain results.

If some city official had the power to approach every person who is laying out roads to develop property, and say that the road should be laid out a certain width and that all houses should be set back a reasonable distance from the street line, much good would result. The highways would be wider, better looking, more uniform and never show the crowded tenement house tone which has marred many a community and doomed certain well favored sections from holding their own in the land market of the community.

And again if occasion required a widening, relocation or layout of any section of the street, when it was finally taken over by the city, the expense would be comparatively small as compared with the costs under the present system.

If such a course was followed it would mean the saving of thousands of dollars to this city as well as any other city and would mean a reasonable tax rate. As the situation presents itself, those abuses are permitted to exist, the tax rate is high and the officials are blamed whereas the voter is the citizen, land owner, tax payer and voters are the ones primarily to blame because they know just how those things turn out, yet year in and year out in the development of property the same process is carried out with the same results.

WISE PRECAUTION.

The Fourth of July Association at its meeting Tuesday evening, very wisely decided to eliminate any air work, during the coming celebration. It is true that the past years there has been a balloon ascension committee and one year an event of this kind was successfully pulled off, but of late years there has not been so much enthusiasm for such displays. The two deaths of the aviators at Squantum, last July and the death of young Lawrence Safford, later in the season at Houghs Neck, under such thrilling and nerve racking circumstances somewhat dampened the public enthusiasm for such attractions. The risk to the operators is considered too great and then the shock to spectators who witness such tragedies is something which it takes them a long time to recover from, so on the whole, there will be no great loss and the association has displayed very good judgment in eliminating this rather hazardous sport from its program the coming celebration.

SENATOR WEEKS.

After an exhibition which lasted several days and threatened to disrupt their party, the saner guides of the Republican party got together and directed the break of the deadlock on the senatorship and John W. Weeks of Newton was the choice.

It is said that Thomas W. Lawson was around gum-shoeing for his relative by marriage Samuel W. McCall, but there was nothing doing. The people prefer to see Mr. Lawson in the open when he is doing political work. They like his strong, breezy, right from the shoulder way of delivering blows, and take a great deal of stock inn his utterances, but this alleged gum-shoeing on his part was new to the great mass of the public and so they were at a loss to know his attitude. That is the public was at a loss, undoubtedly the Republican legislators were well aware of what was going on.

But all that is over and done with. Mr. McCall will have to gracefully swallow some words, about arrogance and despotism with regard to the old machine, but it is quite evident the dose has been partaken of and something with it to relieve the bitterness. The fact is now that the storms which threatened have passed away the leaders and the rank and file as well should get busy and have a genuine get-together love feast, and be prepared to do battle as a united and forceful organization at the next election.

SUPPOSED THEY WERE CALLERS

But Hostess Later Found They Were Real Surprisers

A party of friends walked in through the front door of the home of Mrs. Herbert Griffin, Quincy avenue, Tuesday evening and proceeded to make themselves comfortable and happy. In an informal manner they entertained one another and towards the latter part of the evening Miss Catherine Houston took the floor and presented Mrs. Griffin with a traveling bag. Surprised that she had been holding a party in her home and not realizing that her friends had come to make more than a friendly call she was quite unable to respond to the presentation.

During the evening Coughlin Brothers gave an exhibition of jig and reel dancing and Thomas Clark and John Tracy performed a few eccentric twists of the "Lazy" dance. Music was furnished by an orchestra and refreshments were served. The committee in charge were Miss Agnes Griffin and Miss Mary Garbarino.

THE FIRST BEQUEST.

Lucy Tudor Hillyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Appleton R. Hillyer of Hartford, Conn., and granddaughter of Horace Bushnell, in a memorandum written about a month before her death this last summer requested that from her estate $5,000 be sent to the Playground and Recreation Association of America. She was a director in one of the Hartford social settlements and much interested in its work, fond of all out-of-door sports, and shared with her family the earnest desire for bettering all social conditions. She made this gift that the world she was leaving might be a happier place for those that remained.

TICKETS ARRIVE FOR WASHINGTON

Mrs. Marnock Makes the Largest Gain in Contest

MR. KESSLER ADDS 520

Today's vote was even larger than yesterday in the Washington inauguration contest, over 2,000 votes being cast wholly by coupons from the Daily Ledger.

Mrs. Emma Marnock, the Womans Relief Corp candidate, makes the largest gain today, some of her 845 votes coming from Mrs. William J. Tilley at Orange City, Florida, and others from Providence and all parts of Quincy.

Fred J. Kessler sought to regain his lost position of No. 7 with an increase of 520 votes, and would have been successful but Miss Nellie Morrissett added 130 and still leads him by 70 votes.

Richard A. Cole, the letter carrier, now has four figures in his total having jumped from 805 to 1090.

It was an off-day for Mr. Bowditch as he added only 95 votes, but he has a good grip on fifth place.

Angus Kerr of Trafford street gained 50 today, and the following a

4TH OF JULY ASSOCIATION

When the meeting was again called to order it proceeded to the election of officers. There was no contest for any of the officers in each case the clerk being instructed to cast one ballot for the party elected. The result of the election was as follows:—

President—Eugene R. Stone.
Vice President—James H. Elcock.
Clerk—Arthur W. Stetson.
Treasurer—Clarence Burgin.

CHAIRMAN OF COMMITTEES.

Finance—George B. Curran.
Publicity—Alfred N. LaBrecque.

Music—Albert L. Whitman.
Automobiles—Chester I. Campbell.
Athletics—James E. Neary.
Children's Sports—Charles H. Johnson.
Fireworks—George F. Elcock.
Decorations—Harry G. Studley.
Reception—Hon. William T. Shea, George E. Adams, Galen V. Bowditch, Daniel Scouler, Jr., John H. Johnson.
Secretary of Executive Committee—Arthur W. Stetson.
Refreshments—Charles W. Hanscom.

Mention was made of the death of James H. Burke, vice president of the association last year and it was voted that a committee of three be appointed to draft suitable resolutions on his death the same to be forwarded to his family and a copy spread upon the records. The Committee appointed was James H. Elcock, James E. Neary and Albert L. Whitman.

The executive committee was empowered to fill any vacancies.

The question of having a battleship in Quincy waters next Fourth of July was brought up and the general sentiment seemed to be that if possible a battleship should be secured and the President was instructed to take up the matter with Senator Lodge.

The president was authorized to appoint such special committee as he deemed best to provide for the entertainment of the officers of the battleship.

A. L. Whitman brought up the subject of a banquet by the officers in the near future to talk over the plans for the coming celebration. This idea met with immediate favor and Mr. Whitman was empowered to make the necessary arrangements for the banquet.

George F. Elcock spoke of the good work that the members of the local press had done in the way of publicity of last years celebration and said that it was owing largely to their work that the celebration had been a success. He moved a rising vote of thanks to the press which was unanimously carried.

A vote of thanks was extended to Frank S. Patch of the Meadow Brook Ice Co., for ice furnished at the celebration last year. It was then unanimously voted to hold a celebration this year as usual.

It was brought up that there was a possibility that the City would take official notice this year of its silver anniversary as a city, and it was the general opinion that if the city did celebrate it would be well to combine the two celebrations into one grand celebration. It was voted that the association tender its services to any

BOSTON WILL BE WORLD SEAPORT

Its Geographical Position Gives it Many Advantages

ACCORDING TO MR. McNARY

A greater Boston one of the large seaports of the world, was pictured by Hon. William S. McNary, chairman of the Massachusetts Harbor and Land Commission in his address on "Development of the Port of Boston" before the Wollaston Unitarian club, Tuesday evening. He said, "the city canot attract to itself the desired commerce unless it is willing to spend money in the improvement of its harbor and docks.

"While the city of New York owns all of the piers on Manhattan the city of Boston owns but a dumping wharf and the Commonwealth two piers.

"The New England railroads have had several chances to get in touch with the big western trade but have not availed themselves of the opportunity. Boston is the natural trading center for the Canadian Northwest, Canada is developing the St. Lawrence river but it is more or less dangerous at the best and Boston has the chance of becoming the winter port of two thirds of Canada.

"Boston can do business in the shadow of New York. At present that city is getting too much business and we are in a position to get some of that spill.

"Boston is nearer Europe. It is easier to get into the harbor and wharves and easier to discharge cargoes. With a quick passenger service to New York, Boston ought to get a large section of the passenger and immigrant trade as well as part of the export trade, but unless this port is placed in line as a modern developed port Boston will have no chance at all.

"Foreign nations are planning to take advantage of the increased trade coming with the opening of the Panama Canal. Boston is the nearest point for a port of call on this coast. Boston is also nearer the east coast of South America than any other United States port. South America is the coming field and Boston will either be in the process or out of it.

"Boston can only do it by making the city one of the great ports with all facilities. This can only be done by spending money. We need a 40 foot channel in the harbor and a 45 foot channel beyond. In order to get it we have got to show the National government what we are doing."

Mr. McNary told of the vast sums being spent in port development all over Europe, many places being much more difficult than Boston.

Boston capital he stated was going to other cities in the United States, notably New Orleans, to help develop their ports. He urged an increased interest in Boston's problem.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

Quincy Alliance met in the parlor of First church, Monday afternoon, the president Mrs. George G. Saville in the chair. Mrs. John Christiansen read extracts from religious intelligence, literature which were very interesting Mrs. Saville spoke very affectionately of the late Mrs. Edward H. Dewson, who was one of the founders of the Alliance, and had been a member for 25 years always taking an active interest in the work. Sympathy was expressed for Mrs. Preston Kittredge who has recently been called to part from her only and beloved daughter, Mrs. Fred Drake.

Mrs. W. B. Nichols spoke of the Cheerful letter work in which she is indefatigable, sending letters, magazines, and literature to remote parts of the country, and the replies show that her efforts are appreciated.

Miss Edith Hyland sang two songs, "Music and I" and "Sleep Song," Miss Eleanor Whittemore at the piano. Miss Hyland possesses a very sweet, clear voice and her selections were greatly enjoyed.

Mrs. Saville introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Rev. William Roswell Cole of Cohasset whose subject was "Jesus of Nazareth."

Mr. Cole said in part: "When one undertakes to sketch the career of a great leader of men, he must first of all decide what are the sources of his survey, and not only this but which of them are of first rank and of real historical value and authority.

"We are to attempt a sketch of the life of Jesus, the most remarkable and illustrious career in the annals of history, both for what it was and what it effected in the transformation of human value and civilization. For this purpose our sources are the first three gospels. These are by the common consent of scholars, the real basis and authority for his life and teaching. Apart from certain statements of Paul, everything we know, independently of these three gospels of Jesus' history and teaching, may easily be put on a small sheet of paper. The fourth gospel, known to us as John's cannot be taken as historical authority in the ordinary meaning of the word, only a little of what he says can be accepted as giving information of real value, and that little with caution. It is evident to one who reads it with attention that it is not a real portrayal of his career nor a close reproduction of his words.

"All of our first knowledge of Jesus comes from Christian sources. It is natural that we should deeply regret this lack of information, but since it is so, our satisfaction must be great that the first three gospels possess material of unusual kind and of historical value of the first order.

"The stability of Eastern civilization its changelessness, enables us to reproduce with tolerable preciseness, the home in which Jesus was born and grew from infancy to manhood. Anyone or two room house in Nazareth today will reproduce it. Within these narrow quarters they cooked, lived and slept, and when Joseph could not work out of doors, it served as workshop also. The furniture was as simple as the house. Mats for beds, big earthern vessels to contain supplies and water, a large chest which served for table, for wardrobe and general receptacle. Shelves on which the rolled up beds were placed, a lamp and a few cooking utensils. Such formed in the main the furnishing of the home of Jesus.

"The sum of Jesus' teachings, was his endeavor to set forth the manner of life men must lead who expect to become citizens of the Kingdom of Heaven. He was fond of the parables, some if his weightiest utterances were cast in this mould. Some of his utterances, seemed as contradictions as: "To him that hath shall be given, and from him that hath not shall be taken even that what he hath."

"His relations to outcasts of the synagogue, the common people, the publicans, harlots and sinners, the lost sheep of Israel is central to his character and career. It is indeed the key note to his position. The central idea of Jesus was that while social conduct was more important than ceremonial conduct, the most important was the inward disposition. It is character that gives to conduct its ability, grace and glory. To be clean, according to the law was not enough. One must be free from cruel thoughts, from impure desires, and then the thought of Jesus bursts forth into the perfect flower, the law of the higher righteousness.

"With his crucifixion and burial the life of Jesus as a character in history comes to a close but the influence and grandeur of his example and teaching lives forevermore with increasing and purifying uplifting power upon the lives of men and the civilization of the world. Jesus was the greatest teacher of the world because he brought about the profoundest transformation of human values the world ever experienced. He was the greatest reformer because of his radical reconstructions of old truths into new and vital truths of God, and through his intercourse with the common people and the outcasts, making them worthy of consideration, of love and of saving. He was the great servant of humanity, because he showed men how and where to serve, and the succeeding great honor and glory of service, and that the value of a truly great man consists in his increasing the value of all mankind.

"And this he truly did through his humane tenderness, his noble manliness, his supreme heroism in the cause of manhood, truth, faith, and loyalty to his Father's will."

The hostesses during the social hour, were Mrs. William Hodgkinson and Mrs. Minnie Manchester. Mrs. W. B. Nichols and Mrs. Manchester presided at the chocolate urns and Miss Hattie B. Pierce, Miss Miriam Marsh and Mrs. Hodgkinson served.

The next meeting of the Alliance will be Jan. 28, instead of the 27th as announced.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

Although the meeting of the Quincy Women's club Tuesday afternoon was announced to be held in the chapel of First church instead of the clubhouse, it was found that even the chapel was not large enough and the church was opened to the club.

The president Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard was in her accustomed place, and called the meeting to order and put through the business of reports and announcements. Among the announcements was a conference by the Civics department of the State Federation, in Memorial hall, Melrose on Jan. 22 at 2 P. M. by invitation of the Melrose club. Subjects to be discussed: Juvenile Court and Probation Work; City and Town Planning; Town and Village Planning; Playgrounds, etc. Club women are urged to attend. Train from North station 1.38 P. M. returning at 4.18 and 4.51. Mrs. Charles R. Safford and Mrs. John R. Richards will represent the Quincy club.

Mrs. Sheppard spoke of the National Federation endowment fund to which the club had contributed. The appeal for this fund comes in a new and beautiful way as it is to be known as the Sarah Platt Decker Memorial fund, for the brilliant and much loved club leader who passed away last summer at the biennial convention in California. Mrs. Sheppard hoped if any had not contributed they would feel it a privilege to do so now.

Department announcements were made by the Art committee of the Revels; Education committee of a Russian afternoon Jan. 25 at Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann's; Reception committee of the reception to the Quincy teachers at the clubhouse Jan. 22 at 8 P. M. Invitations had been sent to the teachers, club officers, and new members but that all club members were welcome to attend. Philanthropy committee that the Christmas party had to be given up at the City Home because of illness there, also a meeting to be held Jan. 21, in the Council Chamber, City Hall when Ralph Hawley would speak on opportunity club work, illustrated by stereopitcon. Every one was urged to attend.

Mrs. Sheppard spoke feelingly of the loss of a club member Mrs. Fred E. Drake, who had been active in philanthropic work, music and other club activities.

The Music committee announced the anual musicale at Music hall Jan. 27 (Monday) the attraction to be the Fisher Mason Trio and Miss Eckoff, soloist. Members must secure their guest tickets before the musicale and only one guest would be allowed each member. Seats would not be reserved accept a few at the front for the club officers and it would be a case of first come for a choice of seats.

Mrs. Tenney said it was gratifying to announce that $90 worth of baskets had been sold by the club for Mr. Hamilton, the blind man who did such fine work. She hoped the sum would reach $100.

A nominating committee for the coming club election was elected as follows: by the club Mrs. Albert N. Murray, Mrs. Frank J. Moore, Mrs. William F. Cummings; by the president Mrs. William H. Doble; by the executive board Mrs. H. H. Kitson.

It was voted that on Reciprocity day club members do not invite guests, the only guests to attend being club guests.

It was voted to send letters of appreciation to the pastor and parish committee of First church for their courtesy in giving the use of the chapel for the club meeting.

Before taking up the program Mrs. Sheppard said, "I feel that I am voicing sentiment of the club in evpressing appreciation to the pastor and parish committee of this church, who have so kindly opened their doors to us this afternoon. Every act of sympathy and co-operation of this kind means much to us. For many years the women of this club, and of our city have been foremost in the work of charity and education and of moral uplift, and any act or word of encouragement coming to us inspires us to press forward in the good work we are doing."

The program opened with a group of songs by Miss Ruth Henderson, soloist at the Unitarian church in Lynn, Miss Katherine Ruggles at the piano, she sang "Happy Song" by Del Reego; "The Sweetest Flower," by Batten and "Day Break" by Daniels, in full rich tones, calling forth hearty encores.

Mrs. Christobel Kidder who is widely known for her work in the reading of good literature, gave a reading of "The Blot on the 'Scutcheon" under the auspices of the Literature committee of the club. In her artistic yellow gown she made a picture with the fine old mahogany pulpit, damask curtains and Christmas greens as a background. She read Browning's dramatic story most interestingly, her delineation of the characters being well shaded. One could almost see each character, so well marked was Mrs. Kidder's portrayal of each. She is certainly a Browning student, not only getting the spirit but has the power to make others see with her. Her audience followed her closely for over an hour.

Tea was served in the church parlor the pourers being Mrs. Francis Abele, Jr., and Mrs. Eugene R. Atwood.

Guests from out of town were: Mrs. George Howard, Scarsdale, N. Y. Miss Maude Andrews, Augusta, Me. Mrs. Wineshank, Westfield, N. J. Mrs. W. G. Benham, Braintree. Mrs. Walter A. Poore, Braintree. Mrs. E. C. Tucker, Brookline, N. H. Mrs. J. G. Porter, Danvers. Mrs. Goldthwaite, Somerville.

D. A. R.

In spite of the severe weather, a larger number than usual were present at the January meeting of the Abigail Phillips Quincy chapter, D. A. R. of Wollaston. Mrs. Edward O. Woodward was the hostess Mrs. E. E. Jameson, the regent presiding. At this time delegates and alternates were appointed to the national convention of the D. A. R. also a committee to serve at state headquarters, Monday, March 24, in connection with the Old State House chapter. Two gifts to the chapter were announced: one of $10.00 from S. S. Crocker, the other of $5.00 from a friend whose name was with held.

The topic of the afternoon was "Agnes Surriage and Sir Harry Frankland." This was most ably handled by Mrs. W. A. Poore, who sketched the romantic history of the pair from their first meeting in Marblehead, to the earthquake in Lisbon, which resulted in justice being done to Agnes. At the close, she read from an article by a descendant of Sir Harry which shattered the romantic climax of their lives at Lisbon, by proving from diaries and other papers, that the marriage took place three months previous to the earthquake, on their voyage to England. A rising vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Poore.

Refreshments were served by the hostess in the dining room which was decorated with the national colors and lighted in old-fashioned style by candles.

UNIVERSALIST MISSIONARY SO.

The missionary society of the Universalist church met at the home of Mrs. Harriet Lombard, Cherry avenue Monday afternoon. At roll call each member responded with a poem or quotation from Longfellow.

Mrs. John Hyland read a very interesting paper on Missionary work which was full of results achieved by our missionaries and their enthusiasm in the work for the advancement, intellectually and morally, of a benighted people.

Rev. Fanny Austin spoke upon missionary work, and the eminent leaders engaged in both home and foreign missions. Our missionaries are strong and progressive, fine college men and women well equipped for the work, earnest and courageous.

At the close, a social, informal hour was enjoyed, during which the hostess served refreshments. Mrs. Lombard presided at the tea urn and Miss Etta Hanson, assisted in serving. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Elisha Hobart, Pearl street, Feb. 10.

GLEE CLUB IN FINE CONCERT

Wollaston Organization in Their Opening Presentation

MAKE GOOD IMPRESSION

The Wollaston Glee club held its first concert of the season in the Wollaston Congregational church, Tuesday evening, assisted by Mme. Wilhelmina Wright Calvert, soprano, Robert Fitz Gerald, tenor and William E. Weston, accompanist.

The large audience enjoyed to the utmost the well rendered selections. For the first time in a number of concerts the weather added it share in making the event a success.

Mme. Calvert charmed all with her numbers. She has a full clear soprano voice, under easy control and bids fair to be one of the leading soprano soloists of Boston.

The tenor solos of Robert Fitz Gerald were well received and William E. Weston was the usual excellent accompanist.

"The Cavalier's Song" by Werrenrath, by the full strength of the club opened the program. A group of songs "Joy of the Morning" by Ware, "In Seville's groves" by Van Lennele and "Modeal Marjorie" by Norton was sung by Mme. Calvert.

Osgood's "Listen Lordlings, unto me" was effectively sung by the club and "Oh! For a day of Spring" by Andrews was the offering of Mr. Fitz Gerald.

In "Spring night" by Filke the chorus was assisted by Mme. Calvert and a quartet consisting of Messrs. Capen, Wallace, Bates and Weston. This was well executed and furnished a fitting close to the first part.

"Wot Cher" a chorus by the club called forth the encore "Where shall we meet."

One of the sweetest pieces of the evening was the aria from Von Weber's "Der Freischutz" "How could I fain have slumbered" sung by Mme. Calvert. "When love lingers" by Podbertsky was rendered by the club.

Three songs "Oh; So pure" from Martha, "Thou are so like a flower" by Chadwick and "Love I have won you" by Ronald sung by Mr. Fitz Gerald was followed by the closing chorus "Praise God" by Kaun.

TWO KILLED, MANY INJURED

Four Buildings In Hazardville Powder Plant Blown to Pieces

Hazardville, Conn., Jan. 15.—Two persons were killed, several others seriously injured and considerable property damage was done throughout the village as the result of an explosion in one of the press mills of the Hazard Powder Works. The dead are Charles Blunden and Charles Stocker.

Dead and injured were employes of the company and were working either in or about the press mill. This building and three others were blown to pieces. The force of the explosion was terrific in the village.

Jack Johnson Is Taken From Train and Returned to Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 15.—Jack Johnson, who, while en route for Toronto, was taken from a train at Battle Creek, Mich., at the request of United States officials, arrived in Chicago last night in custody of Deputy United States Marshal Myers. Charles F. DeWoody, superintendent of the department of justice in Chicago, allowed Johnson to go home in custody of United States deputy marshals, who remained with him all night.

Johnson will be called on today to explain to Judge Carpenter why his bail should not be forfeited for leaving Illinois.

SHAFT IN HONOR OF THE "BLUE AND GRAY"

Georgia Town Will Raise First One In United States

Fitzgerald, Ga., Jan. 15.—Plans for a "Blue and Gray" monument here, believed to be the first in the United States raised in honor of both Union and Confederate Civil war heroes, have been accepted by the local commission in charge of construction. The monument will be of bronze, and will cost $15,000.

The shaft, which will rise 125 feet, will be surmounted by a winged figure representing Peace. Below, statues of Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis will stand together, and Generals Grant and Lee will be represented as clasping hands.

Many war relics will be arranged in the interior of the base of the monument, which will be fitted out as a museum.

SYMPHONY HALL CONCERT.

The succession of splendid Sunday afternoon concerts at Symphony hall, Boston is being brilliantly maintained. Boston has never had such a series of concerts by great artists and although those in the past would be hard to equal the future holds some which will be every whit as interesting and attractive. Next Sunday, the concert will be given by Elena Gerhardt and

ELENA GERHARDT.

Vera Barstow. Elena Gerhardt is the greatest singer of songs of our age. A lovely German woman, the possessor of an unusually beautiful voice, the protege of the renowned conductor Arthur Nikison, last season and this she has been one of the reigning sensations of the world of music in America.

Vera Barstow is a young violinist who is making her Boston debut at this concert. She is a native of Pittsburgh and the greater part of her musical education has been secured in America. Reports have it that she is easily a rival of the wonderful Kathleen Parlow. Miss Gerhardt will sing three groups of songs and Miss Barstow will play twice.

There will be no concert on Jan. 26 but Feb. 2 Madame Clara Butt, the sensational contralto and Kennerley Rumford will give their second and last concert in Boston.

ENCOURAGE MONOPOLY

Wilson Says Corporation Laws of New Jersey Need Alteration

Trenton, Jan. 15.—Woodrow Wilson, in his capacity as governor of New Jersey, sent his second annual message to the legislature. Foremost among the laws advocated are a radical revision of the statutes governing corporations, and better laws in the matter of drawing juries.

The governor recommends the commission form of government for cities, and speaks strongly in favor of economies in the state administration. In conclusion he expresses the hope that New Jersey will ratify the constitutional amendments providing for a tax on incomes, and the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

The governor calls attention to the laxity of the state's corporation laws and expresses the hope that New Jersey shall never again be called "the mother of trusts." The corporation laws of the state notoriously stand in need of alteration, he says. They are manifestly inconsistent with the interests of the people in the all-important matter of monopoly, and as they stand, far from checking monopoly, they actually encourage it.

EAST WEYMOUTH TRIMMED QUINCY

South Shore Experts Showed Splendid Form

CHANGE OF K. C. SCHEDULE

The East Weymouth council defeated the Quincy Council in the local Knights of Columbus rooms in their first clash in the K. of C. league Monday evening. The men came from the Monatiquot village as an unknown quantity and returned with five points to their credit, Quincy making but two points.

There has been some doubt in the minds of many of the local followers as to who had the best all round representation. Ave Maria visited last nights winners on Jan. 7 and defeated them. The only team that is left near the last place now is the Quincy team.

A large gallery followed the scalpers from the camping grounds and eagerly watched the assault on Quincy. The visitors were given a royal welcome and refreshments were served at the close of the tournament.

In Whist Timothy Ford and Russell Sullivan razooed Madigan and Keefe, 26 to 0 while, Coffee and McCarthy beat William and John Mahon, 4 to 0. T. McCarthy and Smith gently crushed James McDermott and James Parker, 16 to 0.

Michael Barrett was beaten in checkers, 3 to 0 and in pool White beat Keating, 50 to 37, while Leary beat Bliss by the close score of 50 to 48.

The cribbage match was coolly fought out by Edward J. Parker and Lawrence Kaeton who beat Gallant and Grant, the pick of the South Shore 4 to 3.

The points awarded Quincy were one a piece in whist and cribbage. East Weymouth secured two in whist, two in pool and one in checkers.

Jan. 21 a blood and thunder encounter is expected when Quincy and Ave Maria meet at the latter rooms. It is conceded that the match will be close, probably in favor of the younger council by one point.

A change was necessary in the schedule because in compiling the first list Braintree was included but has since dropped out. The corrected dates are as follows:

Jan. 21, Quincy and Ave Maria at West Quincy.

Jan. 28, Ave Maria and East Weymouth at West Quincy.

Feb. 4, Quincy and East Weymouth at East Weymouth.

Feb. 11, Ave Maria and Quincy at Quincy.

PEACE PARLEY IS BROKEN UP

Definitely Decided Upon by Envoys of Balkan Allies

WAR TO SOON BE RESUMED

Armistice Between Bulgaria and Servia and Turkey Will Be Terminated at Once—Great Bodies of Bulgarian Troops Facing Each Other at Adrianople—Fortress In Distress

London, Jan. 15.—The decision definitely to break up the peace conference in London simultaneously with the presentation to the Turkish government of the note of the European powers was reached by the chiefs of the peace delegations of the Balkan allies.

Every Balkan state is making active preparations to resume the war against Turkey, according to a statement by M. Venizelos, premier of Greece and chief plenipotentiary for that nation to the conference.

The resolution of the representatives of Bulgaria, Greece, Montenegro and Servia will be communicated to the porte in a formal note. At the same time it was decided to instruct the commanders of the armed forces of the allies in the field to terminate the armistice, which has been in operation since Dec. 3.

Since that date hostilities between Bulgaria and Servia, on the one side, and Turkey, on the other, have entirely ceased. Greece, who did not sign the armistice protocol, however, has continued fighting against Turkey, with varying success. Montenegro, also, has been engaged in many severe skirmishes with the troops forming the garrison of the Turkish fortress of Scutari.

Janina, in the south of Epirus, was made the rallying point for a large force of Turkish troops, who escaped from Monastir and other places in Macedonia and Albania.

Conflicting reports as to conditions in the great fortress of Adrianople are current, but it appears evident that the Turkish troops and inhabitants of the city are suffering greatly from disease and lack of supplies.

Before the Tchatalja lines defending Constantinople there is a great army of Bulgarians, strongly entrenched, and fronting them are large bodies of Turkish troops.

The representatives of the Balkan allies declare they are ready to face all eventualities. They say not less than 400,000 of their troops are concentrated around the fortress of Adrianople and along the lines of Tchatalja, while all their heavy siege batteries have been placed in position before Adrianople, not only from Bulgaria, but also from Servia, whose arms factories have been of great assistance during the war, in supplying guns and ammunition to the Bulgarian armies.

General Boyovitch, the Servian hero of Monastir, asserts that within two days Adrianople can be captured.

Although the mobilization of the Russian and Italian armies is denied, there is no doubt Austria-Hungary still maintains her armaments with the object of enforcing her claims in the Balkans, especially in Albania.

Observers of the situation in London express the opinion Turkey will reject the advice of the European powers and that hostilities will be resumed.

BIRDSEED FOR BREAKFAST

Dr. Kin Declares It Makes a Most Delectable Dish

New York, Jan. 15.—Birdseed makes a perfectly good breakfast food, according to Dr. Yamei Kin, who addressed a meeting of the New York State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, and told them of its delectable qualities.

Showing on the screen a picture of workers in the millet fields, Dr. Kin said they were gathering the grain which is a favorite breakfast dish in China.

"If you have never tried it, do so," she suggested, "and you will find it a delightful novelty. We eat a great deal of it at home."

COFFIN 1500 YEARS OLD

Found Where Shrine Had Once Been In Japanese Village

Yokohama, Jan. 15.—Scientists are interested in an ancient stone coffin unearthed by workmen in Okushi, which is said undoubtedly to be 1500 years old.

In excavating where a shrine once had been, the laborers came across the coffin, which had a heavy stone lid. It was opened in the presence of the chief priest and the head of the village, and found to contain many gold rings and ancient metal vessels.

Husband Divorces Fanny Ward

London, Jan. 15.—A decree of divorce was granted here against the American actress, Fanny Ward, on the petition of her husband, Joseph Lewis, the South African millionaire. The suit was undefended.

VOTING CONTEST

smaller number: William J. Decoste of Houghs Neck, William Allen of the Eagles, J. F. Gallagher and B. L. Smith of the shipyard and Karl W. Leaf of Brewers corner.

No gain was made today by the first three in the contest, Fred D. Williams, Sturgis Hunt, and A. R. MacKay.

The two Washington tickets for the successful candidate have arrived at the Daily Ledger office. Including all the extras offered during the eight-days' trip they are worth about $150. The diamond ring offered as a second prize valued at $30 or more.

Again it is necessary to remind candidates that all coupons should bear the name of the candidate. It is not sufficient that one coupon be filled out. A rubber stamp will be found very convenient, and all that is needed is the name. This cancels the vote so that it cannot be used again.

Candidates should look around for a few vote certificates good for 1000 votes. The Daily Ledger will be delivered to all yearly subscribers in any part of the city or outside the city.

THE LAST COUPON.

The last coupon in this contest will be printed in the issue of Saturday, Feb. 8, and the polls will close a few days later. A great hustle is expected during the last days of the contest.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

CANAL TOLL TALK RESUMED IN SENATE

Root Opposed to Exempting American Ships From Payment

Washington, Jan. 15.—Senator Root introduced a bill to amend the Panama canal act to eliminate the provision exempting coastwise ships from the payment of tolls. The bill is expected to reopen the entire question of Panama tolls, now at issue with Great Britain, and to pave the way for a new discussion of the subject in the senate.

Senator Root gave notice that on Jan. 21 he would speak in support of his bill, and it is understood several other senators will follow him with speeches both for and against the proposed repeal.

Senator Root opposed the free toll provision when the act was passed last summer and since then has favored either arbitration or striking out the clause.

BECOMES CARMELITE NUN

Helen Dwight Fourth of Her Family to Enter Holy Orders

Boston, Jan. 15.—Miss Helen Dwight, daughter of the late Professor Thomas Dwight of the Harvard medical school, has entered the novitiate of the Carmelite convent in Roxbury. She is the fourth daughter of Dwight to enter the holy orders, her three sisters, Mary, Katherine and Florence, having previously entered.

Miss Dwight, in entering the Order of Mt. Carmel, has chosen the most secluded order apart from the world. Once a woman has taken the vows of this order she can never return to the world.

Joseph Dwight, son of the late Dr. Dwight, went to a Trapist monastery, but returned after remaining there a year.

MEDALS WELL DESERVED

American Cross of Honor to Be Awarded to Captain Rostron

Washington, Jan. 15.—In recognition of his prompt response to the call of humanity in rescuing the passengers of the ill-fated Titanic, Captain Arthur H. Rostron, then in command of the steamship Carpathia, has been awarded the cross of honor by the American Cross of Honor.

It will be presented to him by British Ambassador Bryce on March 1. On the same day the medal awarded by congress to Rostron will be presented to him by President Taft.

A Stirring Story of Military Adventure and of a Strange Wartime Wooing, Founded on the Great Play of the Same Name

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

President Lincoln had called for 75,000 troops to suppress the rebellious combination of the southland and to "cause the laws to be duly executed."

"Lieutenant West," said Colonel Haverill, handing his young officer a stamped paper, with full military formality, "I have secured the necessary passports north—here is yours. I am ordered direct to Washington and shall start with Mrs. Haverill at once. You will report to Captain Lyon of the Second regiment in St. Louis."

With what a different manner of paternal tenderness did the colonel lay his hand on the shoulder of Lieutenant Robert Ellingham, as if he hated to speak the words that meant a long farewell.

Bob felt less restraint in going over the same ground again when the time of leave-taking came for him and Kerchival.

"Our state is to be the chief battle ground, according to present predictions," he said, with the weight of fifty years suddenly added to his stature as a Virginian. "But every loyal son of Virginia will follow her flag. It is our religion."

"That may be all right for you, Bob—I am not blaming you," responded Kerchival. "But my state is New York. If New York had gone back on the old flag—your father's and mine—well, New York might go to the devil. That's my religion."

They walked out, Robert and Madeline, along the battery wall by the sea, in silence, as if by mutual rendezvous.

"This is the last we shall be together for the present, anyway, Miss Madeline," poor Bob began.

"I'm afraid so," murmured Madeline.

"But we shall meet again—some time," he went on desperately; "that is, if we both live."

"If we both live!" repeated Madeline, in an awestricken tone. "Oh, Robert. You mean if you live, I suppose. So you are going, too, into this dreadful war, if it comes?"

"Yes, Madeline, I must. It is fate—yours and mine together—isn't it, dear girl? You don't deny it, and that gives me courage. You know what duty means. And you know what love means, too, don't you? Madeline, I do love you. I shall always love you, come what may. There, fate has granted me this much—allowed me to tell you how I love you—and nothing can take this moment away from us at least, thank God! And I have the strongest kind of faith in me now that our story isn't going to be cut short here. It may be interrupted. We've got to be tried by fire, maybe, but I can stand it if— You will think of me, won't you, Madeline?"

"I shall keep watch upon fate."

For the rest of their time together their silences were more eloquent than their words.

Lieutenant Kerchival West passed through one more dramatic scene before quitting Charleston.

In an obscure tavern by the water front he found Frank Haverill, a sincere, young desperado, whose bold dissipated look had something strangely attractive about it and whose gentlemanly speech and manner belied a certain affectation of hardihood and bravado.

All this latter was swept away by the sudden, violent wave of emotion that visibly rushed over his whole being when West delivered Mrs. Haverill's message and handed him the locket containing the portrait miniature.

With an oath on his lips and tears running down his hardened face he cried out hoarsely:

"I've been a fool, an ungrateful dog and I've deserved jail and worse. And I'll stand the gaff and not blame any one but myself either. But, by heaven I'm glad now that you settled with that Thornton before I got to him. And I came down here to Charleston to seek him as a friend! Now, listen, Lieutenant West, and I want you to tell this to my father and to my dearest mother, for she is that"—here he kissed the miniature fervently—"tell them that I deserve the worst that can happen to me, but that I didn't desert my wife.

"Poor girl! She only allowed that story to go out in order to throw them off the track and help me to escape, as I did. Now she will know that the colonel and Mrs. Haverill know the truth, and that will comfort her more than the money they are sending her. God bless them! And it would comfort me, too, if anything could, but nothing can, except one thing, and that is fight and plenty of it. I want to fight my way back to self respect, to honor, and show those who have stuck by me that I'm worth saving after all. No matter what happens, thank God I've still got freedom to fight!"

"Do you mean that you'll enlist?" asked West.

"Yes—yes, lieutenant. I can't get to Washington quick enough."

"In the Federal army, of course?"

"Surely—in the fight for the Union."

"Bully for you, Frank!" cried the officer, impulsively grasping the boy's hand. "That will be splendid news for the colonel."

The somber scowl overspread Frank Haverill's face again. He rose to his feet and said earnestly:

"No, Lieutenant West. I charge you, upon honor, not to tell my father—not to tell any one—but to keep this a secret between ourselves. It will be time enough for them to know when I have proved myself a man again, Lieutenant, I am going to Washington to enlist. But that is all that will be known about me for the present, perhaps forever. Even if you hear of me in the days to come it won't be under the name of Frank Haverill.

"I am going to start all over again under a new name, which won't have a spot of dishonor on it, and Uncle Sam and Father Abraham Lincoln will have a brand new recruit, born today. Do you understand, lieutenant? That sweet lady, heaven's own angel mother to me, has stooped down and grabbed me out of hell, and she shall yet have reason to be glad that she did so 'or my father will never set eyes on his son again!"

When Colonel Haverill arrived in Washington, which at that period had not yet outgrown the aspect of a shiftless, overgrown Virginia town, he found it transformed into a vast, chaotic military camp. Every incoming train from Baltimore or from the west brought its regiment of raw recruits, who were driven like cattle to the barracks and drill grounds on the Potomac flats, near the end of the Long bridge and within sight of the steeples and roofs of Alexandria, where on a clear day the southern flag could be seen from the very windows of the White House, floating defiantly.

While Washington was getting ready to send the Army of the Potomac to invade Virginia, Robert Ellingham reported to General Lee in Richmond, 115 miles to the southward, and found the new Confederate capital likewise seething with activity.

Lee was exercising all his energy, sagacity, skill and experience in the tour de force of sending an equipped army to Johnston and Beauregard in the field at the threatened points. From one of these points, the great valley of Virginia lying between the Blue Ridge and Shenandoah mountains, he had called Colonel Thomas Jonathan Jackson, an eccentric Presbyterian professor at the Virginia Military institute in Lexington, and who in the first brief month since the breaking out of the war had developed aggressive qualities calculated to attract the attention of the authorities at Richmond.

Lieutenant Ellingham, promoted to captain, naturally gravitated to the new brigade of Jackson, who was now elevated to the rank of brigadier general of volunteers. The regiments of his brigade were composed of the very flower and pride not only of the valley but of the whole commonwealth of Virginia, and even before Jackson's troops took the field they had already begun to receive the impress of the iron hand of their leader.

Their first destination was Manassas Junction, the point of union of the railroad coming into Virginia from Washington with a branch road leading into the Shenandoah valley. General Lee had pointed out that this strategic point would in all probability be the first battlefield in the move to check the Federal advance toward Richmond, and he now concentrated all available forces there.

On a small stream called Bull Run, some thirty miles southwest of Washington, Beauregard awaited the arrival of McDowell. The banks of this stream are abrupt and densely wooded, but it is fordable in numerous places, and at that time was crossed on the Centerville and Warrenton turnpike road, below Sudley church, by a stone bridge.

It was on a bright, sultry Sunday morning of mid-July that the two armies of brothers—disrupted members of a family republic that had held together for three generations—first emerged in serried battle lines six miles long from the mysterious Virginia forests on either side of Bull Run and rushed forward to fight breast to breast for victory.

The Federal plan of operations, credited to the still masterful Lieutenant General Winfield Scott, started with the planting of an entire division of fully 15,000 men in the rear at Centerville, to protect the communications. Colonel Haverill's regiment, to his intense chagrin, was here helplessly detained. Another division, in which General Buckthorn's brigade was included, marched ahead to make the opening demonstration at the stone bridge, while two others crossed at the Sudley and other fords, to concentrate on the southern bank of the stream and flank Beauregard's left.

This seemed an admirably clear and simple plan at 8 o'clock in the morning. Before noon it was an obliterated memory, and the wide arid plateau over which the battle spread like a fire in the brushwood swarmed with confused masses of northern and southern troops reeling to and fro, alternately taking and losing and retaking the same positions half a dozen times over, all lines indistinguishable in dense and lurid clouds of smoke, through which artillery guns and caissons dashed madly, while the thunder of cannon and the sustained crash of musketry reverberated in diabolical concert from the low lying hills around, and near and far arose, mingled with the human-like neighing of horses and the hoarse shouts, yells, cheers and commands, the horrible shrieks and groans of wounded and dying.

BOSTON CITY ELECTION

Watson's Defeat of Hewitt For Council Causes Big Surprise

Boston, Jan. 15.—The election of James A. Watson to the city council was the big surprise of the municipal election yesterday. Watson defeated Lewis J. Hewitt, the candidate of the Citizens' Municipal league, by 848 votes.

Councillors Attridge and Collins were re-elected. Attridge led the ticket with 33,974 votes, Collins was second with 32,680 votes, Watson third with 24,693 votss, and Hewitt ran last with 23,845 votes.

Miss Frances G. Curtis, the Public School association candidate for school committee, defeated Isaac Harris, the candidate backed by Mayor Fitzgerald and the Democratic city committee, by a majority of 5008 votes. Miss Curtis received 27,125 votes as against 22,117 received by Harris.

License was carried by a majority of 15,243 votes.

Prominent Men May Be Mixed In Nashua Vice Scandal

PROBERS ARE STILL ACTIVE

Will Ask For Inquiry by Committee of Legislature, With Power to Summon Witnesses—Six More Men Appear In Manchester Court and Are Fined For Gambling

Nashua, N. H., Jan. 15.—In an effort to snare the men "higher up" who are said to be responsible for the wide-open condition of affairs in this city during the past few years, it is expected a state investigation will be asked. A plan is under way to petition the legislature for the appointment of a committee with full power to summon witnesses.

Police Commissioner Gregg, who made the expose of conditions in Nashua and caused seventy-nine indictments to be returned, is reported to have spent $100 a day out of his own pocket for several months, in order to clean up the city.

It is predicted that what is yet to come in the crusade is of a most sensational character. Men who are high up in business, professional and club life are said to be involved. It is declared that the characters of many "leading citizens" will be blighted when the probe is ended.

Jennie Dufour, who assisted the detectives in securing evidence, is in hiding in a nearby city. She will not come out of seclusion until she is wanted in court. Her father says he has engaged a lawyer and intends to start proceedings against those who are responsible for causing his daughter to play the role of spy.

Despite many stories that are going the rounds to the effect that the dictagraph was used in trapping some of those indicted, the detectives say the simplest of old-fashioned methods only were necessary to make the roundup. They say that the town was so wide open it was a comparatively easy matter to procure evidence. They also say the same condition exists in several other New England towns and cities.

Five detectives were employed by the crusaders. They came from Boston and New York. They worked so cleverly that not once were they suspected by the men they were after.

Six More Surrender

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 15.—Six more of the indicted men in the Nashua crusade against vice rushed to this city and into court to plead to the charges against them and accept the decree of the court. This is the second half dozen who have decided not to fight the indictments. The others appeared in court Monday.

The men who came before Judge Chamberlin yesterday in the superior court were charged with gambling. They were George Poltra, Samuel Davis, Alonzo D. Berry, George Gazette, Albert T. Tobias and Daniel Mullen.

Poltras was fined $50 and $26 costs. Davis was fined $50 and $25 costs. Berry was fined $50 and $25 costs and sentence was suspended on two other counts. Gazette was fined $50 and costs of $25. Tobias was fined $50 and $25 costs.

David Mullen, indicted for keeping a gambling place, has been in the south for some time.

Frank H. Wingate, chairman of the police commission, charged with accepting bribes and selling liquor illegally in his drug store, and F. H. Wingate, charged with gambling, will fight their cases.

HUNT FOR NEW CONTINENT

Geographical and Natural History Societies Will Finance Trip

Washington, Jan. 15.—The National Geographical society has voted $22,500 toward financing the forthcoming voyage of Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the discoverer of blonde Esquimos, into the Banks island region in quest of the undiscovered continent which Dr. Rollin A. Harris of the geographical survey, Major General Adolphus K. Greely, U. S. A., retired, and other scientists believe exists there.

The American museum of natural history of New York will also contribute $22,500—making $45,000 in all. The expedition will cruise for four years.

To Attack High Price of Coffee

Berlin, Jan. 15.—The German government was asked to take immediate measures to counteract the high price of coffee brought about by the Brazil valorization. The budget committee of the imperial parliament passed a unanimous resolution calling on the government to take action.

Lobby to Fight Socialism

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 15.—The first lobby ever arranged in California, if not the first in the United States, with the single purpose of fighting Socialism, has appeared in the legislature. Charles H. Harwood is at its head.

POSTMASTERS RESIGN

Three Prefer to Hold Their Jobs In Maine Legislature

Augusta, Me., Jan. 15.—Three Republican members of the Maine house of representatives who are fourth class postmasters in their respective towns telegraphed their resignations as postmasters to the postmaster general at Washington last night.

Their right to seats in the house was attacked by Democratic members just before balloting began for the election of a United States senator to succeed Senator Gardner, Democrat.

On the vote for senator, Edwin C. Burleigh, Republican, secured a majority in the senate, but in the house he was tied with Gardner, each having seventy-two votes. The Republican leaders say they will have a majority of seven for Burleigh in joint convention.

INDIAN LANDS OPEN FOR FREE GRAZING

Homesteaders and Indians May Enjoy Full Benefit

Washington, Jan. 15.—Under a decision of the department of the interior more than 6,000,000 acres of Indian lands in several western states have been thrown open to homesteaders and Indians for free grazing purposes. At the same time rates have been established under which cattle men may use the lands for grazing and thus provide an income for the Indian owners until the lands have been sold.

The lands are designated as ceded Indian lands and are scattered throughout Montana, North and South Dakota and California. Under the decision each homesteader will have the right to free grazing for forty head of cattle or horses or 200 sheep, while the individual Indian may graze 100 head of cattle or 500 sheep.

BOILER ROOM DEMOLISHED

One Man Killed, One Missing and Seven Hurt In Explosion

Providence, Jan. 15.—One man was killed, seven injured, three probably fatally, and another man is missing as the result of an explosion of a steam economizer in the boiler room of the Glenlyon Dye Works in Lincoln. The dead man is Augustus Blanche, while Hassan Mamoth, fireman, is missing.

The cause of the explosion is a mystery, as the boiler was recently inspected. The wreck of the building, which is about 150 feet square and 30 feet in height, was complete.

PUSHING WORK AT FORE RIVER

Battleship Nevada Well Under Way---Keel Laid Last Year

TWO DESTROYERS ALSO

The monthly report to the chief constructor of the navy department shows that the battleship Nevada, building at the Fore River Ship yard was over 15 per cent completed January 1. The keel of the Nevada was laid Nov. 4 last year and work on her has been rushed.

The Fore River Co. is also building two torpedo boat destroyers, the Duncan and Cushing. The Duncan is over 60 per cent completed and will be launched in the early spring. Work on the Cushing, the contract for which was signed late in the year has not been commenced as yet.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

MRS. GURNEY'S LECTURE.

Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney of Wollaston delivered another of her interesting talks to the Young Women's Club Saturday evening at the club house. Taking as her topic, "The Art of Story Telling" she elaborated it from three points, action, familiar things patched with mystery and rhythm. During her talk she illustrated by telling stories of the nature best applied to her topic and concluded by relating an original story of historical events in Quincy, saying that it was possible to teach history in that way.

Mrs. Gurney's topic applied mainly to children and she received marked attention. At the close of her address she was warmly applauded. Refreshments were served by the house committee and dancing was enjoyed for a short while. Plans are afoot for the Gentlemen's Night which will be held Jan. 25.

NOTICE.

On and after this date, I shall pay no bills contracted by my wife, Mrs. Helen R. Carter.

BRIEFS

Dr. Richard Burton is to speak on "The Bible as Literature" on Friday evening at the Quincy Mansion school.

The spirited chargers to be used at the combat between the knights at the Twelfth Night Revels have arrived and are at the estate of Mrs. H. H. Kitson, Park lane.

Representative Michael T. Sullivan of Quincy did not attend the Democratic Legislators caucus at the State House Monday to nominate a candidate for senator.

Dr. Anna H. Shaw is to speak in New Colonial hall Monday evening Jan. 27 in favor of the Massachusetts Political Equality union, to give a forward movement in Quincy to secure the vote privilege for women.

At the dramatic and musical evening at Huntington chambers hall, Boston, next Monday evening, Mr. Enrico Barraja, accompanist, and two of his pupils, Mr. Barraja-Frauenfelder, bass, and Mr. Leone Stroppina, tenor, will take part. Eight artists will appear.

Roscoe R. Ricker, one of the Quincy students at the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, has a prominent place on the programme of one of the student recitals last Saturday afternoon. With Miss Ella C. Nord of Jamestown, N. Y., he gave a spirited performance of Converse's sonata for violin and pianoforte. This work, by one of the most famous of Boston composers, was highly commended by an audience that completely filled Recital hall of the Conservatory building.

WANT MONEY FROM MINT

Many People Are Misled by Humorous Newspaper Story

Washington, Jan. 15.—A newspaper story discussing the per capita circulation of money in the United States in a humorous vein has flooded the treasury department with applications for the $34.72 which, if the nation's wealth were equally divided, would be the possession of every man, woman and child.

The story, intended facetiously, advised those who needed the money to draw upon the government.

Director of the Mint Roberts has drawn a circular letter in which he must disappoint the applicants with the information that the treasury department monthly computes the per capita circulation on a theoretical basis and has no control over its distribution.

ROSEDALE CLUB FIRST PARTY

Telephone Boys and Girls Made Merry With Friends

The Rosedale Club, composed of employees of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Co. held their annual dancing party in Alpha hall Tuesday evening, with an attendance of 100 couple.

The guests of the evening were John F. Hyland, chief of the contract plant; William J. Hadley, distant wire chief; Martin Welch, district engineer.

Dancing was enjoyed until midnight, music being furnished by Wilson's orchestra. Punch was served in a decorated corner of the hall.

The floor was in charge of David K. Dackers and Edward F. Graham was assistant floor director. The committee in charge was Miss Marcella Little, Miss Alma LeClair, Miss Bessie Miller, Miss Florence Buckley, Miss Louise S. McLaughlin, Miss Annie Z. Farrell, Eliot C. Johnson, James A. Doyle, John D. Cunningham, John E. Greene, Michael A. McDonald, George F. Crothy and Charles Holmes.

DRIVER SERIOUSLY HURT

who also assisted Mrs. Lillback and the baby from the house, The other children, Edith, Agnes, Wolfred, Helen Eleanor and Cylenda were assisted by Mrs. George P. Mead. The fire was in the upper part of the house which was used as a sleeping apartment.

The blaze started in the bedding and made much progress through the quantites of bedding located in the room, before it was discovered. The fire men had some difficulty in fighting the flames owing to the distance at which the hydrants were located, not one of them being nearer than 1200 feet to the house.

Although seriously handicapped in this way the firemen fought the blaze with energy and before 2.30 o'clock had the blaze under control, although it swept its way through the eastern part of the roof and threatened to envelop the whole structure at one time.

The loss to the building is about $800 and probably Mr. Lillback's loss will be several hundred dollars.

The fire apparatus made a quick run to the fire. As the machines reached Brewer's corner, the big hook and ladder truck, was just ahead of the Three Hose wagon, the latter driven by Richard T. Callahan. Some one at the corner shouted that the fire was up Granite street. The turn is a sharp one and the apparatus was going at a good clip. The ladder truck swung out and made the turn in safety. Not so with the hose wagon. As it swung round it tilted on one side and then turned over throwing the driver to the ground. The horses came to a stop.

Dr. J. P. Reynolds who was close by took charge of Callahan. The police ambulance was called and the injured man was rushed to the Quincy Hospital where he was attended by Dr. Bruce. It was found that no limbs were broken but he sustained a severe injury to his knee which will incapacitate him from his labors for several weeks.

MINISTER BEATS A MAN

Declares He Will Not Pay $10 Fine, but Changes His Mind

Omaha, Jan. 15.—After saying he would "go to tophet rather than pay a $10 fine," Rev. Frank M. Weeks, owner of the Lafayette apartments, paid the fine levied for assault upon William Kuhn, a department store messenger.

Kuhn was delivering two suit cases to the apartment and, being unable to open the electrically operated front door, forced the lock. Weeks saw the act and ejected Kuhn with force.

When convicted, the minister wept and denounced Police Judge Foster. He declared he thought Kuhn was a burglar.

WIFE IS BOSS OF HOME

Judge Says She Has Right to Quit If Mother-In-Law Interferes

New York, Jan. 15.—A mother-in-law "can have no say whatever regarding the management and control of the home" which she enjoys with her daughter-in-law and her son, who provide it.

So held Supreme Court Justice Crane in Brooklyn in denying Gardner L. Field a separation from Adelaide Field, who had quit his home after alleged interference by her mother-in-law. Mrs. Field had offered to return if her mother-in-law was banished, but Field had not consented to this arrangement.

SQUANTUM PEOPLE TO APPEAL TO RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS

For Better Car Service. Railroad Company Grilled at Meeting of Citizens

Also Demand Noon Fares For School Children and Street Improvements

A decision to take the matter of street car service to the Railroad Commissioners, to petition the Quincy City council for the acceptance of Dorchester street, Huckins avenue and Bellevue road and to push the matter of securing noon fares for school children were the most important matters settled at a meeting of the Squantum Improvement Association Tuesday night at the home of the president, C. E. Carlson, Huckins avenue. There was a large attendance of members and much enthusiasm was shown.

Chairman W. N. Kenyon of the street railway committee reported that after over a year's work with the officials of the Bay State street railway company regarding a turn-out on Hancock street so that cars could be run to Squantum from Neponset bridge without the ridiculous practice of having passengers ride backwards from Neponset carbarn to Atlantic during the summer season and of the crews changing ends throughout the entire year, causing delay and hardship to passengers, he had received only evasive answers from the officials and in his opinion it was time that something beside persuasion be used with the company. He said the car service of the Bay State street

Mr. Gallup in addition to being president of the American Federation of Men's clubs is a member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the city planning committee.

He will speak on "What co-operation can do along lines of city wide improvements." Special musical selections will be furnished by the Wollaston Glee club.

A general invitation has been extended all men of the city and it is expected the meeting will resolve itself into a federation of the mens clubs and improvement associations in Quincy.

The committee includes William A. Mann, chairman, Edward O. Woodward, secretary, Edward J. Badger, A. B. Cassidy, Louis F. R. Langeller, George A. Vibert, Ralph P. Greene, Harry W. Dunmore and Frederick J. Kessler.

FENTON E. LOW.

Word has come from Hingham of the death of Fenton E. Low on Monday at the Massachusetts General hospital, after a few day's illness of pneumonia. He was for several years a resident of this city and employed as a compositor on the Ledger and Patriot later going to Hingham where he has been employed on the Hingham Journal for eight years.

He leaves there children, Russell, Emery and Mabel. His mother came on from Oneida, New York and the body was taken to Oneida where services were held. The burial was in the family lot.

ELECTED OFFICERS

The regular meeting for January of the Men's Club of the Congregational church, South Braintree was held in the chapel. Wednesday evening with a good attendance of members and invited guests. Shortly before seven o'clock all adjourned to the banquet hall where the following very excellent menu was served: Roast turkey with dressing, cranberry sauce, boiled onions, turnips, mashed potato, squash, rolls and coffee, apple pie and ice cream.

After supper smokes were enjoyed and a business meeting was in order. The report of the treasurer for the past year was read and accepted, also report of the secretary Frank C. Allen. Much to the regret of all the members, Mr. Allen at this time tendered his resignation owing to the pressure of other duties. He has served the club efficiently and faithfully for two years and retires enjoying the confidence and esteem of all his associates. At this time it was voted to make an important change in the constitution and reduce the minimum age limit from 20 to 18 years. It is believed that this move will result in bringing in many new members.

The election of officers for the year was held with the following results:

President—Ralph L. Wiggin.
Vice President—Frank A. Reed.
Second Vice President—Ralph B. Woodsum.
Treasurer—Robert E. Whitman.
Secretary—Dudley P. Howland.

Executive committee the aforesaid officers together with George W. Stevens, Louis W. Thayer, Edwin S. Loring, Harry A. Simonds, Louis N. Hathaway, Charles E. Gilman, Ernest C. Woodsum.

STRINGENT AND EFFECTIVE METHOD OF BANK EXAMINATION PROVIDED

If the Petition of Mr. Hingston and Accompanying Bill Becomes a Law

Records of Loans, Stock Given as Collateral and Market Value Open for Inspection

(Special to the Ledger.)

State House, Jan. 16, 1913. A petition attracting attention is that of William E. Hingston of Quincy, in which it is asked that legislation be enacted to bring about more effective methods of bank examination with reference to records of stock being kept. Rep. Leslie offers the following bill with the petition:

Sec. 1. All stock brokers, dealers or traders in securities of any description, shall keep in proper books of account prepared for the purpose, a complete memoranda of all securities whereon they have obtained loans from any National or Savings banks or any institutions receiving deposits. Such books of account shall be so kept that each loan shall appear under the heading of the bank or other institution making the loan and shall contain,

(1) the name of the stock given as collateral.

(2) the number of shares of said stock.

(3) the market or estimated value of said stock and total.

(4) the amount of loan obtained on the collateral, all subsequent changes in the colateral such as replacing one kind of stock with another, shall be kept and noted with the approximate value of the substituted stock in the same manner as used in the care of the original loan.

Sec 2. ## HOUSEHOLDERS SET AT EASE

Man Will Now Take Ash Barrels from Cellars

GOING AHEAD OF TEAM

The Board of Health is about to put a new scheme into operation that will be welcomed by many householders. Under the present arrangement for the collection of ashes the drivers of the ash teams are not allowed to bring barrels of ashes from the cellar. That is ashes that it is desired the teams to take must be placed on the edge of the sidewalk.

There are many who would like to have the men remove the barrels from the cellar and to meet this want the Board of Health are planning a new scheme, which is that the Board of Health will remove ashes from the cellars for five cents a barrel.

It is proposed to have tickets issued for this work which may be obtained at the City Treasurer's office, or of the foreman. Every morning a man will go over the route ahead of the ash team and would take the ashes from the cellars of those who desire this work done and place the barrels on the sidewalk edge where they will be collected by the team which follows. The plan will be fully cinsidered by the Board, Friday.

INSTALLATION OF MAPLE LODGE

Turkey Supper Proved Satisfying to All the Members

LOOKING FOR MEMBERS

With an installation of officers in Electa hall and a turkey supper in Protection hall, the members of Maple Lodge, Knights and Ladies of Honor, succeeded in combining business with pleasure Wednesday evening. The attendance was large.

The installation was by Deputy Mrs. Lotta McHugh of Somerville. She was assisted by a suite, among whom were Deputy Grand Guard Charles Prescott and Deputy Past Protector Mrs. Charles Prescott of Somerville, Deputy Vice Protector Miss Metz and Supreme Chaplain Mrs. Lillian McCarthy of Boston.

During a business meeting resolutions were adopted on the death of Mrs. Celia Baxter of North Weymouth who recently passed away.

It was reported that Mrs. Frances Moore of North Weymouth was confined to her home with illness.

Speeches were made by the visiting officers and the lodge officials, and all talked along the lines of increasing the membership to a much higher figure than that attained during the past year.

The turkey supper was prepared by a committee consisting of Mrs. Alberta Hewson, Mrs. Calvin G. Fletcher, Samuel Oxford, Fred Bennett, Mrs. Mary A. Jones, Calvin G. Gletcher and Biss Bella McBirnie.

The supper was entirely informal and consisted of every conceivable "fixing" that could be served with a nicely browned bird. At the conclusion the three-times-three cheer of the lodge was given with a will. The officers installed were:

Past Protector—Mrs. Nellie M. Cate.
Protector—Mrs. Sarah Williams.
Vice Protector—Mrs. Annie Gregnon.
Chaplain—Mrs. Emma Marnock.
Secretary—Mrs. Agnes G. Fletcher.
Financial Secretary—Miss M. Lizzie Furnald.
Treasurer—Mrs. Alberta Hewson.
Guide—Miss Bella McBirnie.
Guardian—Miss Fannie Grignon.
Sentinel—Samuel Oxford.

HANDSOME HOUSE AND LOT PRESENTED BETHANY CHURCH

Deacon and Mrs. Richard D. Chase Surprise the Congregation at Annual Meeting

By Giving Present Parsonage as Permanent Home of the Church Pastors

The annual supper of the Ladies' Circle of Bethany church, Wednesday evening, was a successful and large affair in every way, but that which stood out as the largest and most interesting event of this gathering was the presentation of a house and lot, as a gift to the church, for a parsonage. It came as a complete surprise to all which enhanced the value of the presentation.

The handsome and liberal manifestation of interest in the church and its prosperity, was the gift of Deacon Richard D. Chase.

About 200 sat down to the bountifully supplied tables, and were generously served with delicious ham, escalloped fish, cabbage salad, hot mashed potatoes, coffee, rolls and various kinds of pie. Mrs. Everett Crane, president of the circle was ably assisted in arranging the supper by the following ladies: Mrs. G. B. Bates, Mrs. A. F. Bromley, Mrs. E. L. Collins, Miss Christina Booth, Mrs. Frances Dunbar, Mrs. E. C. Brown, Mrs. Grace Carleton, Mrs. Edward Damon, Mrs. Frank W. Crane, Mrs. H. W. Beattie, Mrs. George L. Badger and Mrs. Samuel Ames.

The young ladies who served, members of the Junior King's Daughters, were: Misses Esther Beckford, Hortense Andrews, Flora McPherson, Wilma Wilson, Marian Keast, Alice Parker, Mary and Evelyn Stewart, Frances Murray, Florence Hart, Grace Fisher, Dorothy Lowe, Helen Damon, Esther Campbell, Ethel Beal, Elsie Burrell, Laura and Annie Jones, Mary Wilkinson, Louise Prout, Florence Sabean.

After supper the company assembled in the vestry where a business meeting was held, which resulted in the following officers being elected: Moderator, Frank W. Crane; deacons, Richard D. Chase, Ernest W. Branch, for three years; deaconesses for one year, Miss Amelia L. Bumpus, Mrs. Fairvilla A. Branch, Mrs. Annie M. Hayden, Mrs. Jane Murdock, Mrs. Margaret Ross, Mrs. Mary A. Sidelinger; clerk, John F. Hunt; treasurer, William F. Sidelinger auditor, Curtis W. Pierce; prudential committee for three years, John F. Hunt; finance committee for three years, Ernest V. Fitts, Henry P. Hayward, Herbert Pratt; music committee for three years, Mrs. Minnie Miller, John C. Pierce.

The reports of various committees were read after which Deacon Richard D. Chase sketched the earlier history of Bethany church, ending his remarks by presenting to the church society, in the names of himself and wife the very beautiful residence on Goffe street, now occupied by the pastor, Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott and family, as a parsonage.

Mr. Chase was extended a rising vote of thanks, and the assembled company manifested its pleasure and appreciation by a vigorous hand clapping. Such generous deeds as these, on the part of Mr. and Mrs. Chase, cement good fellowship between pastor and people and perpetuate a spirit of love and friendly relations on the church.

DEFERRED ELECTION.

The annual meeting of the Sunday school board of the Hall Place M. E. church was held in the vestry, Tuesday evening. Encouraging reports were received from each department. The nominating committee reported but by vote of the board the election of officers was laid over for another meeting.

The treasurer's report shows all bills paid and a good balance on hand.

DIED AT HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Mary Moore, wife of Edward Moore died at the Channing Hospital, Brookline, Monday. She was taken sick shortly after her marriage with tuberculosis. She will be buried at Mt. Wollaston cemetery Friday, following a requiem mass at St. John's church. Funeral will be held from the mortuary chapel of Undertaker Edward D. Barrett, 27 Revere road. The deceased was in her 26th year and leaves a husband.

☞The Contractors Mutual Liability Insurance Co., held their annual meeting at their rooms No. 10 Tremont street, Boston, Wednesday afternoon. Their report shows the company to be in a very prosperous condition with a large saving for policy holders. Andrew Milne of this city was elected a member of the board of directors.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The peace envoys after being in conference over a month, accomplished nothing. That lets them out on the Nobel prize for 1913.

A Fourth of July celebration is usually satisfying and keeps people at home, especially when it is conducted along the safe and sane lines.

The Atlantic ocean has certainly picked up more than its average of wreckage the last few weeks. The damage toll has been exceptionally heavy but the death rate has fortunately been kept low.

If those New Yorkers who are waiting for those beans by aeroplane mail get impatient, they can take a train and meet the aviator more than half way.

Maine Legislators who were postmasters resigned their jobs, in order to vote for senator. They should have been forced to resign one job or the other whether they voted for senator or not.

And now comes witness who says Dan Russell's car was frozen. By this time it would not be surprising if both Fresno and Dakota Dan did not have a shred of an ear left.

Professor Peck claims he is unable to pay the judgments of $150,000 secured against him by Miss Quinn and petitioned into bankruptcy. Now if he had been a base ball player or a pugilist he would have had an offer for the vaudeville stage long ago.

Uncle Sam is beginning to wonder already how he ever got along without the parcel post.

It is to be hoped that New York bulldog sent by parcel post did not like the goat sent by express, "eat up whar he's gwine."

For Mr. Bryan to accept the post of Ambassador to the court of St. James might be construed as a confession of plutocratic means.

Congress has appropriated $23,000 for the protection of life and property during the inauguration. What are those Democrats going to pull off anyway?

If all the people who flock to the White House receptions to shake hands with President Taft had voted for him, he would have been re-elected by an overwhelming majority.

Speaking of the difficulties in the way of Wilson's plans to obliterate sectional lines we have heard that some of those sweet Dixie Girls are such unreconstructed rebels that they won't even wear a union suit.

UNIFORM TAXATION.

The question of alleged tax dodging has been one which has been a source of worriment to many communities. Assessors in many cities have attempted to solve the matter, but so far none of them have registered a record of success. The man who lives in Boston or does business in Boston or any other place, where the tax is not below the average, who has the means and can afford a summer home in a small town where the tax rate is low, has a splendid chance to escape paying as much tax as his actual holdings warrant. He can readily sleep one night in his summer resort home and become registered as a citizen there and he has escaped the payment of a considerable amount while his less fortunate neighbor who has not so much of this world's goods is taxed to the limit of his holdings and at a higher rate than the man who is more wealthy. So that the small property holder or small business man is the goat what ever way you take it.

Then other men of great wealth are permitted to make a settlement of their personal holdings, which is accepted by the assessors and they are enabled to save a good slice each year. In some cases assessors hold out inducements to men of large means. In places where assessors have attempted to perform their duty as they saw it, and compel a truthful statement of personal holdings or an investigation to show the exact condition of affairs, there have been other loop holes for the tax dodger. He immediately apprises the assessors that he has decided to change his place of residence. This is very easily accomplished. Assessors in some other places have been sounded. They are willing to accept the statement of the mighty man of wealth without asking any questions. His presence in their town is considered an asset of far more consequence than the money which he should pay into the treasury. This system is nothing more or less than bidding on the part of one town or rather its board of assessors against a neighboring town. A way to overcome this would be to have a uniform tax rate throughout the state with penalties fixed for perjury in the matter of statements regarding to property to the board of assessors.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.

As previously announced in the Ledger, the present year marks the 25th anniversary of the incorporation of Quincy as a city. It is quite likely that members of the City Council have in mind taking some proper cognizance of that circumstance, which will later take tangible form. It has been suggested that as the Fourth of July Celebration Association has planned to celebrate the anniversary of Independence of the country, that it would be a good thing if both events were celebrated at the same time. It is quite proper that Independence day should be selected as the day to celebrate the city anniversary, as the first signer of the Declaration of Independence was by John Hancock a native of this city, who was likewise president of the Provincial Congress. The Fourth of July Committee while not desirous of clashing with the City Council or attempting to usurp any or its prerogative in this important matter, is willing to unite for a common celebration of both events and will tender its services to further that end if the proposition is agreeable to the City Council.

LACK OF INTEREST.

The city of Boston had an election Tuesday and the result is a disgraceful lack of interest on the part of the voters of that city and reckless carelessness in the exercise of a privilege which every one is supposed to hold so high and priceless. Of over 110,000 registered voters, less than one-half registered their preference upon the eight hour and the license question. The same condition prevailed in filling three places in the City Council and one place on the school committee. Undoubtedly much of this is due to the clever manipulation by which Boston elects only a certain portion of its representatives each year. Be that as it may it is not a creditable showing for a city like Boston. It is no wonder that when the voters show such a lack of interest that the politicians, ward heelers, workers, so-called leaders, and the like step in and take the reins right out of the people's hands and that is just what they are doing in Boston. It must be refreshing to the voters of Boston to see in the paper's every once in a while, Jim somebody's ballwick, Tom somebody else's ward, Joe's district and the like until the whole city is divided up among a certain coterie to dispose of as they will. And it is no wonder they have the power when the people will give such an exhibition of interest in public matters as they did at the election Tuesday.

BRAINTREE MEN'S CLUB

The retiring president, Foster F. Tupper thanked the members for their support during the past year and introduced the president-elect R. L. Wiggin who made a stirring appeal to the club to get busy to secure new members and to make the organization a vital force for good in the church and in the community.

The speaker of the evening was Rev. C. F. H. Crathern, formerly pastor of the South church but now pastor of the Park Congregational church of Worcester. Mr. Crathern delivered a masterly and magnetic address on the subject "Why are we upon the earth?" It was given with all the vigorous and polished diction, sparkling wit, brilliant metaphor and wonderful word painting of which the reverend gentleman is an acknowledged master

Mr. Crathern said that some people were here apparently only for their health, others for pleasure and the pursuit of happiness and others for business. He characterized the world as growing better and exhorted men to rally to the standard of the church and help along the good work. He affirmed that we would have only a short time longer either a churchless man or a manless church.

Like Emerson he counselled men to hitch their wagon to a star, to glory in their daily toil and to so live that they should have no vain regrets at leaving the world behind them.

He characterized death as a mere incident and affirmed that we should not fear it but rather fear lest we might fail in executing the responsibilities of life.

Among his epigrams were these: Christianity is not a feather duster but a vacuum cleaner. Some people call for a stick of candy when they really need a stick of dynamite. Others desire a linseed poultice when the diagnosis calls for a mustard plaster. Some folks buy theatre tickets but forget to pay their grocery bill.

The card table has displaced the family altar and Hoyle is consulted oftener than Moses. He contrasted the feverishness and bustle of present day with the marvellous workings of Nature which never hurries nor makes mistakes.

Mr. Crathern believes that all things are working together for good and for the ultimate bettermen of mankind and the world.

His remarks evoked loud and continued applause and he was accorded a unanimous and rising vote of thanks by the club.

Among the guests present were noted Hon. James T. Stevens, Dr. L. Paul Chapin, Rev. A. Lowell Ryan, Eben Prescott, Dr. F. H. Merriam, William A. Ross and Amasa S. Thayer.

The supper committee consisted of Harry C. Thayer, Louis W. Thayer, George W. Stevens, Robert E. Whitman, W. Austin Torrey, assisted by Mrs. H. C. Thayer, Mrs. G. W. Stevens and Mrs. W. A. Torrey.

The meeting was lively and full of interest and the year just beginning seems to promise great things for the club with its able set of officers and its enthusiastic spirit.

WEST QUINCY CANDIDATE

Makes Largest Gain in Washington Inauguration Contest

PLANS FOR GRAND PARADE

Miss Nellie A. Morissett of West Quincy made the largest gain in the Washington contest of the Daily Ledger today, and has obtained quite a lead over Fred J. Kessler her nearest rival. She may soon pass the Wollaston young man.

Second in gain is Miss Edith Cairns of Germantown, who has moved up from No. 38 to No. 17 with Miss Anna Gustafson also of Germantown. Perhaps we will have a Germantown contest now.

A friend of Conductor Kelley, who claims he is from Missouri, sends 55 votes and he moves up in the list. Mr. Bowditch, as usual makes a gain today, and has a total of nearly 7,000.

Gains were also made by Richard H. Joyce, Michael P. Barry and R. A. Falconer.

INAUGURAL PARADE.

General organization of the inaugural parade has been made public by Major General Wood, grand marshal. The first division will be commanded by General W. W. Witherspoon, U. S. A., consisting of representatives of the army, navy and marine corps, including the corps of cadets at West Point and midshipmen at Annapolis.

General Albert Mills, U. S. A., will command the second division, consisting of organized militia and cadets from schools and colleges.

The marshal for the third division, consisting of veteran and patriotic societies and organizations, including the Grand Army of the Republic and Spanish War Veterans, has not yet been selected.

Robert N. Parker will command the fourth division, consisting of civic organizations, clubs and societies. A thousand Princeton University students and a big delegation from the Woodrow Wilson College Men's League in New York will march in the parade, according to Joseph R. Truesdale of New York, secretary of the league, who conferred with inaugural officials.

Candidates should look around for a few vote certificates good for 1000 votes. The Daily Ledger will be delivered to all yearly subscribers in any part of the city or outside the city.

THE LAST COUPON.

The last coupon in this contest will be printed in the issue of Saturday, Feb. 8, and the polls will close a few days later. A great hustle is expected during the last days of the contest.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

EVENING SCHOOLS.

The Adams and Willard Evening schools will close the annual session Friday after a most successful year. A large number of certificates of attendance will be granted.

FUEL SUPPLY.

The semi-annual supply of fuel is now being delivered to the schools by the City Fuel Co. of Boston who were awarded the contract last June for all the coal used during the current school year. This contract made at the time when prices were lowest makes quite a saving over the former plan of contracting in the winter time for a half years supply. As the schools have all the coal inspected and analyzed and make payment on the basis of the analysis. The school department is assured of full value for its money.

THE SECOND HALF YEAR.

The second half year for the admission of new pupils to school will begin Monday, January 27. At that time children who are six years of age on or before March 1st will be admitted to the new first grades to be opened at that time and half yearly promotions will take place in the first three grades where the new plan of promotion has already gone into operation. In a number of the buildings, new classes much larger than usual are expected.

The average per cent of attendance of the Eighth grade for the term is 98.4 per cent.

The average per cent for the building is 93.5 per cent for the term.

The Eighth grade are using the reflectoscope in connection with geography. They are having some very interesting pictures of South America.

The pupils of eighth grade organized the "Class of 1913, Coddington School Association."

The following officers were elected:

President—Gertrude Beal.

Vice-President—Robert Allen.

Secretary—Dorothy Russell.

Treasurer—Russell Williams.

At the December meeting an entertainment committee was appointed with the following members,—Chairman, Ethel Anderson, Ruth Murphy, Phillips Innis, Mary Millar, Edmund Whittemore.

A pleasing entertainment was prepared for the January meeting, and the following program was carried out.

Duet — "That's How I Need You." Hazel Estey, Gertrude Baker. Accompanied by Mary Millar.

SOMERVILLE WALLOPED

Melville Made a Record Holding Duggan Down Hard

SECOND TEAM VICTIMS

With only four of its regulars in the line up the Quincy Y. M. C. A. first team gave the Somerville team the worst defeat it has suffered for years, last night as Somerville. "Jack" Melville played one of the back positions in place of "Pin" Johnson who did not show up and his work was a revelation to all. Jack not only held the crack forward, Duggan down to one basket, but his work in passing was of great assistance to the other players. If he can, continue his good work at this rate, he will wear a regular first team suit from now on.

Trask seemed to have regained his old time form for he scored 8 goals from the floor and also "played rings" around his opponent. Parker and Rich put up one of the prettiest games of passing ever seen on the Somerville floor and besides scored 10 goals between them. The score was 21 to 14 in favor of Quincy at the end of the first half but Somerville was unable to hold the fast pace of our local players and about the middle of the last half Quincy began to score at will, the final score being 40 to 24.

The second team still misses Harold Price who is not of the game on account of a death in his family. The game was nip and tuck all through the first half the score ending 10 to 9 in Somerville's favor. Quincy secured the lead about the middle of the second half but Ver Weivbe who is about six feet tall got away from "Tudie" Dineen and scored three goals in rapid succession and Somerville never let up for a minute after that.

Thomas only made one goal out of over 15 tries and it seems that "Al" must have left his "shooting eye" at Malden two weeks ago. Croucher and Pinel played the best games for Quincy.

The final score was 25 to 20 in Somerville favor.

The summaries follow:

| Quincy Y.M.C.A. | | Somerville Y.M.C.A. |
|---|---|---|
| Parker, rf | | lb Duggan |
| Rich lf | | rb Sullivan |
| Trask c | | c Sprigade |
| Kins rb | | lf Dixon |
| Melville lb | | rf McFadden |

Score, Quincy Y M. C. A. 40, Somerville Y. M. C. A. 24. Goals from floor, Sullivan 6, Duggan 2, Sprigade 2, McFadden, Parker 4, Rich 6, Trask 8 Goals from fouls, Sprigade 2, Trask 4. Referee, Stone. Scorer, Brosier. Timer, La Rose. Time 20m halves.

Planning Big Roundup of Crooks

Chicago, Jan. 16.—Officials at detective headquarters are preparing for a crusade against "crooks" with a known police record which is expected to result in 10,000 arrests on vagrancy warrants.

MARSHALLING THEIR FORCES

Suffragettes Strengthening Ranks For the Coming Battle

WHICH IS INEVITABLE

A group of representative women gathered Wednesday morning at the home of Mrs. N. S. Hunting, Hancock street to learn something definite about the Massachusetts Political Equality Union, its work in securing votes for women, its benefits etc. Mrs. Mary A. Howe of Newtonville gave a short talk telling what had been accomplished in this and other states and what it was hoped to accomplish in the futre. Her points were well taken and clearly presented, and were more fully brought out in the discussion that followed the lecture.

The Massachusetts Political Equality Union realizes that the time is near at hand when the legislature will submit to the voters a constitutional amendment granting equal suffrage and that more activity is needed at this time, such as can be better done by groups of workers. It plans to draw into membership in the groups working, professional and business women who are not already identified with the suffrage movement.

The groups have been divided into districts, same as the political parties. The first Norfolk is represented by Mrs. Wilson Marsh of Quincy who will be glad to give any information or literature to any desirous of informing themselves more fully on the subject of votes for women.

A lecture is to be given Monday evening, Jan. 27 at Colonial hall by Rev. Anna H. Shaw, to help forward the movement in Quincy. She is one of the ablest speakers and best exponents of the cause and it is hoped both men and women will attend the lecture, for undoubtedly it is lack of information rather than prejudice that does not recognize the equality of women and their right to suffrage.

HOLDS UP A TICKET OFFICE

Professional Bandit Takes Big Chance at Boston and Loses

Boston, Jan. 16.—William J. Clayton took busy Washington street at a time when it was thronged with people yesterday afternoon to enact a most daring attempt at holdup of a dozen men and women and robbing a big railroad office.

Entering the street floor office of the Boston and Albany railroad at 298 Washington street, Clayton, after buying a ticket to Pittsfield, suddenly turned on the entire office force with gun in hand, ordering everyone to retreat to the back of the store, as he was after the money in the cashier's cage.

At a time when it seemed that the daring invader would be successful in his undertaking, a visitor, George A. Titcomb, city passenger agent of the Canadian Pacific road, slipped through a back door to give the alarm, which resulted in Clayton taking to his heels, followed by the office force.

After a sensational chase, with hundreds of citizens in pursuit, he was cornered in a Summer street barber shop.

A diary found in Clayton's pocket at police headquarters shows entries of holdups at railroad offices in several cities and Clayton last night confessed to the depredations.

REMEMBER BENEFACTRESS

Members of Railroad Y. M. C. A. Send Unusual Gifts to Miss Gould

New York, Jan. 16.—It is learned that two unusual gifts are on the way from St. Louis for the wedding of Helen M. Gould and Finley J. Shepard at Tarrytown next week.

The Railroad Young Men's Christion association building at St. Louis has been done in a gold and bronze miniature and made into a clock.

The other gift is a gold and bronze jewel case, a miniature reproduction of the Gould private car "Atlantic." It is the gift of thirty railroad Y. M. C. A. branches scattered over the Gould lines in the southwest.

Operation on Actress Campbell

$20,000 FUND FOR ALL SOULS'

Braintree Church Benefitted by Mr. Wales' Generosity

INCOME ALONE TO BE USED

By the will of the late George O. Wales, All Souls' church, Braintree, is given the income of a large sum of money to be used for certain necessary expenses of the society. The donation is a generous one and emphasizes the high regard of Mr. Wales for this church and its work.

By the provisions of the will, the sum of $20,000 is given to the American Unitarian Association in trust upon the following trusts: Net income to be used for any or all of the following purposes:

To be applied semi-annually or oftener at discretion of the association for the benefit of All Souls' church so long as said church is maintained as a place of public worship and so long as such maintenance shall be considered by said association to be helpful to the religious life of the community.

To be used to keep the church building and any additions which may hereafter be made to the said building together with its furnsihings and fixtures including particularly the organ and the furnace in good repair.

To keep the church grounds neat and attractive.

To pay insurance on the building and other church property real or personal used in connection therewith. Generally at discretion of trustees to use income for the maintenance and preservation of church building and other church property used in connection with the church.

When the church ceases to be maintained as a place of public worship or when the association considers such maintenance not helpful to the religious life of the community further payments of such income shall cease.

Income shall be expended for legal public charities or the principal itself may be expended at the discretion of the association.

In case of the money going to charity it was Mr. Wales expressed wish that it should be expended for the advancement of religious life in the community in which All Souls' church was established.

CLOSING OF BOSTON PENSION AGENCY

Other Government Jobs Await Clerks Who Want Them

Boston, Jan. 16.—The pension agency in the federal building passed out of existence last evening. It closed in conformance with the act passed by congress last August abolishing eighteen pension agencies and concentrating the business in an agency at New York.

Out of the 350 clerks who will be affected in the eighteen offices, sixteen are Boston clerks and all of them women but one. Eight Boston women have been transferred to Washington and left for that city last night. Three more have secured Washington berths, but have not decided whether to go or not. Two have secured positions in the Boston postoffice and the others have decided to leave the government service.

Captain Augustus J. Hoitt, who has been in charge of the Boston agency for fourteen years, is legislated out of office. He loses a $5000 a year position. It is estimated he has paid out $10,000,000 to New England pensioners during his incumbency.

DROPS DEAD IN HOTEL

Connecticut Chief Justice Stricken With Heart Disease While Dining

Hartford, Jan. 16.—Chief Justice Frederic B. Hall of the Connecticut supreme court of errors died suddenly last night at a local hotel.

Mr. Hall was dining with two friends when he was stricken with heart disease and died before a physician could be summoned. He had been in the best of health and attended a consultation of supreme court justices during the day.

The chief justice was born in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., in 1843. He had been a member of the supreme court of errors since 1897 and chief justice since 1910.

"KING" ANSWERS DEATH SUMMONS

Alonzo Adams Dies at Boston After Short Illness

MONARCH OF SWAN ISLAND

Yankee Skipper Settled Upon Territory In Gulf of Mexico When He Discovered It Unclaimed by Any Power—Held All the Offices and Had Confidence of Natives

Boston, Jan. 16.—Alonzo Adams, the monarch of Swan island in the Caribbean sea, died at the Massachusetts General hospital of cardiac trouble yesterday, after an illness of five days. His body was taken in charge by relatives in East Hampton, Conn., for burial.

King Alonzo Adams, of whom much has been written, was a picturesque character, whose occasional visits to Boston were chronicled by the press.

Years ago, as a shrewd Yankee skipper, Captain Adams discovered that Swan island, off the coast of Honduras, in the Gulf of Mexico, was unclaimed by any power and that it was fertile and worth while. He squatted upon it. He did more—he became king of it. His family followed him to the island. The native blacks multiplied and took kindly to their new king's rule.

Cocoanuts and fruits were raised and shipped. His little fishing vessel was used thereafter to transport the island's produce to the mainland. Sometimes a trip was taken to Boston or New York.

These were veritable outings for the captain, though business always figured in the trips. The island was divided by a rocky channel. As a whole the territory is forty miles in circumference and five miles across.

On the more dangerous shore of the island, Adams caused to be erected, after some years of prosperity and home comforts, a lighthouse, to warn vessels of the perilous reefs, and also for signalling purposes. All skippers in those seas knew Adams personally, and would stop on signal.

The king's home was on a little eminence overlooking the harbor. Adams was the king, secretary, treasurer, boss farmer, board of trade and press agent, and there is every reason to believe he fulfilled every trust with credit and profit to all concerned.

King Adams entertained frequent visitors from passing vessels of peace and of war. Three sons and two daughters comprised the immediate family, who will doubtless continue the reign so auspiciously begun by their father.

One son and one daughter are married and live upon the island. At least one of his sons attended college in Massachusetts.

King Alonzo was a tall, thin-faced, weather-beaten personage. With his wife and family members, he made several trips abroad, so that he was a world traveler.

DONAHUE ASSUMES OFFICE

First Democratic Secretary of State Massachusetts Has Ever Had

Boston, Jan. 16.—Frank J. Donahue yesterday afternoon became the first Democratic secretary of state in the history of Massachusetts. He was sworn in by Governor Foss and the executive council. After he had qualified Donahue took possession of his office.

Donahue notified Captain Isaac N. Edgett, chief deputy in his office, of his intention to retire him on half-pay at the end of the present month. Edgett has served as chief deputy of the secretary of state for thirty-seven years.

Attorney General Swift and State Treasurer Stevens were also sworn in. State Auditor White was ill and unable to appear.

BURLEIGH BEATS GARDNER

Ex-Governor of Maine Elected to United States Senate

Augusta, Me., Jan. 16.—Ex-Governor Edwin C. Burleigh, Republican, was chosen United States senator by joint ballot, defeating Senator Gardner, Democrat.

The vote was as follows: Burleigh, 91; Gardner, 82; Thompson, 7; ninety-one votes were necessary for a choice.

The senate had favored Burleigh on a strict party vote, but the house of representatives was unable to reach an agreement, Burleigh and Gardner each receiving seventy-two votes in the lower branch.

Allens Are Refused Retrials

Richmond, Jan. 16.—The supreme court of Virginia refused new trials for Floyd Allen and his son, Claude S. Allen, convicted of murders at Carroll courthouse. Unless Governor Mann intervenes they will be electrocuted here next Friday.

Earl of Ashburnham Dead

Paris, Jan. 16.—The Earl of Ashburnham, who owned vast estates in England, died here. He was born in 1840.

EIGHTEEN FINNS WERE EXAMINED

Their Names Will Be Presented Saturday for Citizenship

As a result of Rev. John Lillback's crusade among the Finnish people of Quincy, 18 candidates were examined at the Finnish Congregational church Tuesday evening for citizenship by the Federal Examiners. All were passed. The witnesses were Rev. John E. Lillback and Konstant Tikka. Petitions will be presented to the Federal court Saturday evening.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

The Thomas Crane Public Library has recently added the following books to the reference collection.

Chambers—Book of days. 2 vol. "Under each day of the year, beginning January 1st., and ending December 31st., is given anecdote, biography, history, curiosities of literature and miscellaneous information. These volumes will be found useful in looking up facs abou Hallowe'en, Christmas, etc."

Deems—Holy days and holidays. This work is divided into two parts, the first treating the most important Saint's days and special days of the ecclesiastical calendar, and the second part devoted to the secular holidays such as Thanksgiving Day, New Year's Day etc. Under each division is given some of the best poetry and prose that has been written about the day, with references to other material.

Century dictionary, cyclopedia and atlas. This new dictionary has been thoroughly revised with an addition of 100,000 new words, definitions and phrases, also an addition of 1900 new illustrations. The cyclopedia of names has been enlarged bythe incorporation of a supplement containing about 2000 names and aditional items of information. The atlas contains many unique features such as steamship routes, discoverers and explorers routes, battle-fields marked with dates, submarine cables and depth of water in seas and bays.

LITTLE BOY BURIED.

Heavy Sacrifice Since Armistice Was Put Into Effect

FURTHER FIGHTING PROBABLE

Turkey Will Have to Pay Heavily For Renewed Hostilities—Now Facing Her Last Chance to Yield—Must Lose Adrianople Peacefully or by Resumption of War

London, Jan. 16.—Wednesday's meeting of the ambassadors of the European powers at the British foreign office was devoted chiefly to a discussion of the means of putting a brake on the threatened resumption of the war in the Balkans.

Breathing time has been given for effort in this direction by the decision of the plenipotentiaries of the Balkan allies, in the course of a meeting yesterday, to delay further action until the Turkish government had full opportunity for the discussion of the note to be presented this week by the ambassadors of the powers and also to reply to it.

It is quite evident that both sides would welcome the discovery of an acceptable way to avoid further fighting. The Turkish delegates argue that but for the fact that the European powers have shown bias in favor of the claims put forward by the Balkan allies they would have been able to compromise with their adversaries long ago.

The delegates of the allies deny the assertion that the European powers have raised an objection to their announced intention of breaking off the negotiations for peace and of renouncing the armistice. They point out that on Saturday last they notified Sir Edward Grey and all the European ambassadors of their intention, and none of them remonstrated.

The representatives of Bulgaria, Greece, Montenegro and Servia declare they must protect their own interests, especially in avoiding indefinite procrastination on the part of the Turks, as since the conclusion of the armistice in December the maintenance of the four allied armies on a war footing has represented an outlay of $200,000,000, which is a heavy sacrifice for countries that are not rich. This must come to an end, they say. Within a week Turkey must either cede Adrianople peacefully or lose it by a resumption of the war, which, in the end, would be less costly than this expensive peace.

If Turkey fails to yield the allies are determined to act. Their governments have agreed to call another sitting of the conference. They will then simply announce their decision definitely to break the negotiations and also thank England for the hospitality extended and the conditions of fair play under which the discussions occurred. Immediately afterward, Sofia, Belgrade and Cettinje will renounce the armistice, and the Servian, Bulgarian and Montenegrin commanders will notify the Turkish headquarters that hostilities will be resumed within ninety-six hours.

The allies say it is easy to predict the course of events. After they have stormed Tchatalja, they prophesy, Turkey will be ready to cede Adrianople. After their second resort to arms, the Balkan delegates assert, their peace terms will be different from those which Turkey is now rejecting. They declare Bulgaria will not be satisfied with a frontier line from Rodosto to Midia, but will draw it just before the gates of Constantinople and they suggest a war indemnity of $200,000,000 or more.

AT LEAST TEN YEARS

Sentence of Man Who Slashed Girl He Loved With Two Razors

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 16.—Angelo Barbuto of Waltham was sentenced to serve from ten to fifteen years in the state prison by Judge Chase in the superior criminal court here, when he pleaded guilty to assault with intent to kill Mariana Piccone at Waltham.

Barbuto was infatuated with Mariana and several times had proposed marriage. When his last proposal was refused, he drew two razors from his pocket and, taking one in each hand, slashed the young woman's cheeks.

Likes Warm Prison Bed

New York, Jan. 16.—Francis Valenti, a negro in the Tombs on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, refused in court to answer questions, saying he wanted to keep his warm prison bed for a while. He was accommodated.

Nine Seamen Perish In Wreck

Newcastle, Eng., Jan. 16.—Nine of the crew of the Russian bark California were drowned when the vessel was wrecked on the coast of Northumberland during a gale. Captain Eskbom and seven men were saved.

Smallpox at Baltimore

Baltimore, Jan. 16.—Twenty-two cases of smallpox are in quarantine in this city.

SQUANTUM PEOPLE TO APPEAL

railway was recognized in this section as the rottenest in the State. He referred to the remarks made the evening previous before the Quincy city council when the company's car service was condemned and further grants to the company held up.

James Hagan seconded the remarks of Mr. Kenyon. He said the dirty, cold storage cars of the company on its Squantum line were a disgrace not only to Squantum and to the city but to the state. He agreed that it was time that an effort be made to get redress elsewhere. John R. Neison voiced the sentiment that the company had been playing hide and seek with Squantum and that it was time that the citizens protest, that their voices might be heard where it would do some good.

Herbert A. Smith referred to that the fact that on several occasions when new cars had been ordered by the company they were invariably sent to Brockton while the discarded cars from that city were sent to Quincy and Squantum got the worst of the cars that were left from the city's service. He also called attention to the fact that the street railway company had about half completed its job of filling in on the Squantum boulevard and said he believed the company should be compelled to put their section of this causeway in as good condition as the rest of the road.

A motion was then carried that the entire matter of better car service be taken before the Railroad Commissioners and that every citizen of Squantum be requested to appear before the board at a public hearing. A petition for such a hearing was drawn up and signed by nearly 50 members.

Chairman Hagan of the street committee reported that the time had come to put a petition for the acceptance of streets before the city council. A meeting of the committee was held and it was reported that the committee was in favor of asking the acceptance of Huckins avenue, Bellevue road and Dorchester street. This would complete a circuit of the main residential section of Squantum so that there would be suitable streets to go and come by. The streets are now in fairly good condition and the committee referred to the fact that the expense of the acceptance of these three streets would not be a large item for the city in consideration of the fact that it would undoubtedly result in increased building in Squantum so that the valuation of property of that section would soon be doubled.

A question was raised if Dorchester street did not belong to the City of Boston. T. J. Callahan superintendent of the Boston sewage plant at Moon island said Dorchester street was not owned by Boston, that the city had never owned this thoroughfare and it was the property of the City of Quincy. He said he had repaired this street from time to time so that city teams would not be shut off from communication with Moon Island.

Vice President Smith made a report regarding the effort to secure naan school tickets for Squantum children who attend school in Atlantic. He said that the matter had been taken up with the Superintendent of schools and that it had been referred to the committee on transportation of the Quincy school committee. This committee is to report at the meeting of the committee on Jan. 28. The matter of securing noon tickets for the children was one of vital importance. It was a great hardship to the majority of Squantum citizens for families to pay 5 cents a day for each child to come home to dinner daily. The most rural districts of Massachusetts treated its children and parents with better consideration. He favored a large delegation from the Squantum Improvement association attending the next meeting of the school committee to protest against compelling children to eat their noon lunches in the school building or of paying 5 cents car fare to go home.

James Hagan seconded the motion and said that the matter was one of vital importance to the community. There were close to 100 children in Squantum and that in many families this noon day fare was a severe hardship. He declared that the rate of taxation in Quincy and the high valuation placed upon Squantum property were facts which should give Squantum citizens the right to demand that children be given noon day fares to and from school. He believed that if the City of Quincy was so lax as not to care for the needs of small children that it was time that matter be taken to some other authority.

Other speakers voiced the same sentiments and it was unanimously voted that a large delegation from the association attend the meeting of the school committee on Jan. 28 when the matter of noon day fares be settled.

Mr. Kenyon reported upon the matter of express service. He said that the company was looking for business and he felt sure that by the middle of April there would be an electric express car making daily trips to Squantum.

Chairman Anderson of the garbage committee reported that the matter of garbage collection was now in the hands of the city council and if the appropriation was passed Squantum would get year round collection of ashes and garbage.

The matter of additional street lights was reported by Chairman Kenyon of the committee. He said that Mayor Stone had promised to visit Squantum and see what could be done. A petition for 15 additional street lights is now before the city council. The location of the proposed lights was discussed at length.

On motion of Mr. Smith it was unanimously voted that a letter of endorsement and commendation be sent Senator McDevitt of Quincy in his effort to secure 80-cent gas. The secretary was instructed to write to Senator McDevitt promising the united support of Squantum residents in this movement.

The matter of police protection was taken up. Different members reported that there had been a series of serious breaks in unoccupied houses during the past few weeks. A stove had been taken out of one summer residence and carted away. The house boat of Assessor Folsom of the City of Boston had been broken into and marine glasses and other articles stolen.

Mr. Carlson reported that when he went abroad a month ago he had a load of lumber in his yard but that this had disappeared. Several residents reported thefts from their ice boxes. It was voted that a special committee be appointed to take up the matter of securing police protection. President Carlson appointed C. E. Watts, Joseph Allen and Carl Olsen.

T. J. Callahan gave a very interesting sketch of what the City of Boston soon hoped to do at Moon Island. He said that the plan of chemical treatment of 82,000,000 gallons of sewage a day and discharging nothing but pure water from the plant into the sea had been proven feasible and that it was now a matter of constructing a $250,000 plant, which he believed would soon be done.

Mr. Callahan was the first man to conceive this idea of chemical treatment of sewage at Moon Island and for 12 years he had been a zealous worker to have this plan worked out.

Members of the club who have yachts agreed that it would be one of the greatest things for Boston yachting that has ever been accomplished by the City of Boston if it successfully got rid of discharging sewage into the harbor. It was agreed that the united support of all yachtsmen should be given the promoters of this plan.

After some discussion it was voted that a committee of 10 take up the matter of increasing the membership of the association. It was voted that members joining between now and the annual meeting in June should not be assessed. The following committee was appointed by President Carlson; Chairman Herbert A. Smith, T. J. Callahan, John R. Neison, James Hagan, Roger Mason, John Marden, Joseph Allen, Mr. Upping, Mr. Jepson and Mr. Anderson.

Boston, Jan. 16.—Ex-Speaker Joseph Walker, the Republican candidate for governor in the last campaign, has left the Republican party, of which he has been a life-long member, and has joined the Progressives.

In a statement given out last night, he declared that in the election of John W. Weeks to the United States senate the Republican party showed that it is dominated by reactionary forces.

WILSON STANDS PAT ON CHICAGO SPEECH

Every Word In Complete Harmony With His Principles

Trenton, Jan. 16.—"I have nothing to say. I'll stand pat."

That was the comment of President-elect Wilson on the reports published that Wall street was panicy over his post-election speech at Chicago. His secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty, issued a statement in which he said:

"Every word that Governor Wilson has uttered is in complete harmony with the principles to which he has strictly adhered throughout his public career. If there is any surprise at this attitude it can be manifested only by those who fail to realize that the country has elected to the presidency an honest and fearless man, who means exactly what he says."

Wilson was not alarmed by the Wall street stories. He seemed amused at them. The statement followed reports that Wilson would have something to say in reply to the stories of Wall street hostility.

SUPPOSED TO BE POOR

Recluse Found to Have Possessed Estate of Over $200,000

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 16.—Horace W. Howard, formerly of Brockton and West Bridgewater, born in South Easton, died a recluse in Providence, after drawing a will providing for the disposition of his estate, said to be worth from $200,00 to $300,000.

His only relative is Mrs. Edward T. Goward of South Easton. His wife and daughter died here. A son died a few years ago in Leominster.

Howard lived alone in apparent poverty most of the last three years in Providence, where he paid $1.25 a week for his room and ate very sparingly, according to his landlady, Mrs. Amelia DuHaine.

He was supposed to be poor. Realizing death was near, he called Mrs. DuHaine Tuesday and astonished her by telling her he had a fortune of from $200,000 to $300,000.

ON GROUNDS OF PERJURY

Board of Inquiry Excludes Castro From the United States

New York, Jan. 16.—The special board of inquiry at Ellis Island decided that Cipriano Castro, former President of Venezuela, should be excluded from entering the United States. Castro's attorneys immediately announced that the decision of the local immigration authorities would be appealed to the department of commerce and labor.

The reason given by the board for Castro's exclusion was that during his examination he had frequently committed perjury and pretended ignorance of matters concerning which he had knowledge.

Act quickly in time of danger.
In time of kidney danger Doan's Kidney Pills are most effective.
Plenty of evidence of their worth.
Mrs. Ellen Lawler, 51 Meridian St., East Boston, Mass., says: "I praise Doan's Kidney Pills just as highly today as I did some years ago when I gave a public statement in their favor. The cure this remedy effected has been permanent. The principal symptom of kidney complaint in my case was a dull, heavy ache in my hips and back, often accompanied by pains in my loins. I became dizzy when I stooped and lost my strength and ambition. My entire system was run down and I did not know what to do for relief. Finally I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and it was not long before they restored me to good health."

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Before his horse was killed and hitself knocked senseless by the explosion of a shell Heartsease saw General Buckthorn fall in the grand charge that drove back the South Carolina legions of Hampton and Bee. He also became aware of another brigade near the enemy's center that did not give way, but stood its ground stubbornly and then turned aggressor. It flashed over Heartsease's mind at the time that one or two more commands like this one would make Beauregard hard to whip, not knowing that this was the unique First brigade of the Army of the Shenandoah, under Jackson.

Bob Ellingham, galloping along the little wooded crest on the other side of the stone bridge, knew all about this brigade. He saw General Bee check and rally his scattered forces by pointing with his sword and shouting:

"Look at Jackson there standing like a stone wall!"

Jackson's brigade on the artillery swept plateau of Manassas was playing the part of the Imperial guard of Napoleon at Austerlitz, but without the prestige or the inspiration of apparent success. At a late hour of the afternoon neither side knew whether it had lost or won. In point of fact, one had about the same right to be routed as the other. Beauregard was tearing about the field at every portion of the line. His dark creole face burning with excitation as he shouted encouragement to his grimy, savage looking troops, who responded with the blood-curdling "rebel yell" of the southern swamp rangers.

CHAPTER IV.

The Virginians.

GENERAL JOE JOHNSTON—the ranking Confederate officer, but who had intrusted the immediate command to Beauregard on account of the latter's familiarity with the country—was able to keep from his headquarters something like a general outlook over the field and received intelligence just as a fresh attack was preparing that "a Federal army" had come up and was advancing upon his rear. This should have been the Union reserves from Centerville, but it was not. It was General Kirby Smith of the Army of the Shenandoah arriving with 1,700 fresh infantry. The whole southern line now advanced to the charge, and the combined attack upon the Federal flank and front was decisive enough to turn the tide of battle from uncertainty to sudden panic. The lines of blue wavered and broke, fell back from the plateau, across the Warrenton pike and on toward the Bull Run fords. The recoil became a rout, the rout grew into an appalling avalanche of defeat.

The Federal advance on the southern side of Bull Run had seen a regiment moving toward them, but were told it was a New York regiment which had been expected for support, and the artillerymen withheld their fire. Suddenly there came a fearful explosion of musketry, which in an instant changed the scene into one of hideous carnage. Death stricken men with dripping wounds were clinging to caissons, which frantic horses dragged pell mell through the infantry ranks and over the prostrate bodies of the fallen. A caisson blew up and three horses galloped off with the burning wreck, dragging a fourth horse, which was dead.

Cannoneers lay limp across their guns, with rammers and sponges and lanyards still in their hands. Whole batteries were annihilated in a moment, and organization command was wiped out. Those who could run, walk, limp, or even crawl, waited no longer, but dropped everything and got away from there.

On his hill at Manassas, after the final victorious charge, General Jackson had come nearer to the actual truth of possibility than he or any other Confederate then knew when he cried out exultantly:

"Give me 10,000 men and I will be in Washington tonight!"

The dawn of Monday came, but the sun did not shine. In the hot, sullen, drizzling morning the defeated troops poured into Washington over the Long bridge.

Some good citizens—but they were not in the majority—put out steaming wash kettles filled with coffee or soup for the forlorn boys. Among these good Samaritans was Jenny Buckthorn, surrounded by a staff of colored servants. Her father, severely wounded and captured by the enemy, had been recognized by his former comrade, General Beauregard, and as a personal courtesy had been exchanged for a wounded Confederate officer and allowed to proceed to Washington in an ambulance, attended by Colonel Haverill.

Whole Batteries Were Annihilated.

"Where is Heartsease?" was the first question Jenny asked her father after having ascertained that that stern parent was not dead.

"Don't ask me," muttered the old warrior. "This is no time for picnics and dancing parties."

One especially miserable looking object drifted along about noon and stood as if dazed at the sight of food and drink and commiseration. His uniform might have been blue or it might have been gray—mud and smudge were the prevailing hues. His shoes were heavy brogans tied with twine, and his naked and sore ankles showed that he was without socks. An old slouch hat was pulled over his face, and a tobacco bag hung from a button of his jacket, the collar of which was turned up to the chin, evidently to conceal the condition of the shirt—or the lack of one.

"You poor fellow!" said Jenny. "Tell me, were you in the cavalry?"

"Yes, Miss Buckthorn. Is it possible you do not recognize me? I must apologize for my appearance, but"—

"Great heavens! Is it yourself, Heartsease?" exclaimed the girl, with a little shriek. "Why, you look like a bummer."

"Possibly this may serve to identify me," and he drew from the mysterious inner recesses a stained packet, which proved to be a large silk handkerchief enveloping a dainty lace one.

Heartsease received his captain's commission at the dinner table that same evening. After all, as the old general said, he was a regular and had fought before he ran, and that was a contrast to many of the pestiferous ready made shoulder straps who had betrayed the brave volunteers and lost the fight for them, and who were now standing about unabashed, bragging in the barrooms.

Kerchival West, shortly after his arrival at St. Louis, was assigned to the army of southwestern Missouri, where in a short time he saw hard service in almost every line except that of actual fighting. A large addition had been made to the regular army and to fill vacancies in the new regiments rapid promotions among the officers already in service had occurred. In a few months' time West rose from second lieutenant to the rank of captain of infantry—an advancement which a year before could only have been gained as a reward of perhaps fifteen years of continuous service.

As weeks and months passed on it was possible to find a certain encouragement in the fact that the defeat of McDowell's army, while not utilized by the Confederates to its full military effect, nevertheless flattered them into a feeling of strength and security, resulting in comparative inactivity in the field for the better part of a year. At the north the effect produced was exactly the contrary. While the south was planning the organization of a new republic and even putting up the name of General Beauregard as a candidate for the presidential succession in such a way as to incur for that officer the cordial distrust of Jefferson Davis forever afterward, the Federal government and the people of the northern and western states set to work with furious energy to counteract the reverses suffered in the beginning. Congress authorized the enlistment of half a million of men for three years, an increase of the navy and stupendous loans with which to strengthen the sinews of war.

Lieutenant General Scott, now past seventy years of age, hung up his laureled sword and yielded the command of the Federal armies to a younger and more active officer, General George B. McClellan.

With two Federal armies ready to move into Virginia—that of McClellan at Washington and that under General Banks opposite Leesburg—to say nothing of considerable bodies of troops harnessing the northern counties about the headwaters of the Potomac, the Confederate prospects for the spring of 1862 were decidedly threatening. To protect this portion of the state and to guard the lower Shenandoah valley against General Banks, the Confederate government determined to send a force to Winchester. This force, organized under the official title of the "Army of the Monongahela," was placed under the command of "Stonewall" Jackson, now advanced to the rank of major general.

This was great news to the Ellinghams, not only for the naive reason that it seemed to them like throwing an impregnable guard around Belle Bosquet and the whole valley, but also and especially because of Captain Robert Ellingham's part in the growing prestige of the "Stonewall" brigade.

BLACKMAILER GETS AWAY

Police and Intended Victim Shoot at Him Without Result

Brookline, Mass., Jan. 16.—Brookline officers exchanged shots with a blackmail letter writer in Brookline village shortly after 9 o'clock last night, but he escaped them.

The offender had tried to blackmail Edward D. Brandegee through threats to kill his stepdaughter, Marion Sprague. There had been made a rendezvous, and Brandegee and the police were awaiting the blackmailer.

He came and the police and Brandegee sought to capture him. They fired and the blackmailer fired back. He escaped.

$300,000 MAY BE INVOLVED

Serious Financial Tangle In Affairs of Defunct Bank

FIVE MEN SUED FOR $42,000

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 16.—What may be startling revelations of mismanagement of the financial affairs of the defunct City National bank of this city, which was controlled by the late Hon. William A. Pew, who acted as its president and cashier, have been brought to light by a suit brought against five Gloucester men by B. F. Fabens, president of the Naumkeag Trust company of Salem, and liquidating agent of the defunct bank. A financial tangle, which some believe will involve $300,000, has resulted.

Fabens, as liquidator, has brought suit to recover from County Treasurer D. I. Robinson, William G. Brown, Joseph C. Shepard, William F. Moore and James E. Bradley, the sum of $42,000, which, he alleges, they owe the bank by having endorsed notes of the dead president and cashier.

Previous to Pew's death the bank bore the reputation of being one of the best conducted institutions in New England, but after its head died, say Robinson and others, the directors were astounded at the condition in which they found the bank to be. Liabilities are said to have exceeded the assets by over $42,000.

This sum, it is stated, Pew wanted to borrow and was told that he had best borrow it of the bank. The men now sued by the liquidator were prevailed upon to indorse a note for the required sum.

It is declared that developments growing out of the suit are but the beginning of the unfolding of a tangle which will involve much larger sums. Robinson and others state that they think it doubtful if the stock of the bank has any value now.

"We have not begun to get at the bottom of the worst of this affair," said the county treasurer. "The condition as revealed is desperate. We were all astonished, as we had perfect confidence in Mr. Pew's ability and integrity."

HAD BONDSMEN'S CONSENT

Jack Johnson Not Jailed Because of Trip Toward Canada

Chicago, Jan. 16.—Jack Johnson will not be deprived of his liberty because of his departure for Canada Monday night. Federal Judge Carpenter refused the motion of federal authorities to set aside the pugilist's bonds of $30,000 and jail him as a fugitive from justice to await trial on the charge of violating the Mann white slave act.

The bondsman on Johnson's $5000 bond on the charge of smuggling surrendered him, however, and the pugilist was given two days at liberty to get another bond.

The court held that inasmuch as Johnson had obtained the consent of his bondsmen to leave the state and had shown evidence of his intention of returning, there was no necessity for jailing him.

"INCURABLE INDOLENCE"

Many Clergymen Afflicted With It, According to English Bishop

London, Jan. 16.—That the majority of his clergy are afflicted with incurable indolence is the charge made by the Episcopal bishop of Carlisle in a diocesan letter just made public.

"Two or three of the clergy are approaching the brink of exposure for their habits, and the balance seem to be afflicted with incurable idleness," says the letter. "The less they have to do, the worse they do it. They are dull and listless and their ministry of the word and sacrament is not ministry, but mechanism. Their churches are shut from Sunday to Sunday and on Sunday they are empty."

Sulzer to See Brandt

Albany, Jan. 16.—Disregarding precedents, Governor Sulzer has ordered that Folke E. Brandt, Mortimer L. Schiff's former valet, now serving a thirty years' sentence in Clinton prison for burglary, shall appear in person at the hearing in the executive chamber on Friday on Brandt's application for executive clemency.

Dogs Reveal Woman's Death

New York, Jan. 16.—The incessant howling of six pet dogs led to the breaking in of the apartment door of Miss Fannie Luff, 60 years old. She had been dead three days and her dogs were weak from hunger, but still able to howl.

4,150,000 Women Work in France

Paris, Jan. 16.—The working population of France includes 4,150,000 women and girls, according to official statistics, just published.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

LAND COURT.

To the City of Quincy, a municipal corporation located in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; John Morgan, Henry M. Faxon, Moses A. Boynton, Martha J. Barker and Arthur Agnew, of said Quincy; Harlow H. Rogers of Brookline, Susan A. Plummer of Milton, in said County of Norfolk; Nathaniel N. Thayer, of Boston, in the County of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth Administrator de bonis non of the estate of Angeline F. Page, deceased, and as Administrator of the estate of Henry D. Page, deceased; Richard Polson of Chicago, in the State of Illinois; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by William H. Faxon of Buffalo, in the State of New York, Ellen F. Passmore, of Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, Anne Page and Lilias Page, of Cambridge, in the County of Middlesex, and said Commonwealth to register and confirm their title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land situated in said Quincy, bounded northwesterly by Beale Street; northeasterly by Hancock Street; southeasterly by Webster Street and land of William H. Faxon; southwesterly by land now or formerly of John Morgan, Henry M. Faxon, Benjamin F. Dyer Hilda Carlson, Martha J. Barker and Richard Polson, containing about 476,900 square feet.

Petitioners claim as appurtenant to the above described land a right of way over said Webster Street.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the twenty-seventh day of January A. D. 1913, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this thirty-first day of December in the year nineteen hundred and twelve.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

FAST PLAYING WON AT FINISH

Bull Moose Brown Made Good in Game Against Wellesley

SECOND TEAM ALSO WINNER

In one of the hardest games played here for sometime the Quincy High defeated the Wellesley High basket ball team in the local gym Wednesday afternoon, 18 to 15. The second team beat a team of Y. M. C. A. boys 32 to 10.

The big game kept the small crowd of rooters on edge throughout the last minutes of play. The first half ended with the visitors 10 to 7. Quincy while playing hard, seemed to have lost their grip on the situation and only a spurt which came unexpectedly would enliven matters. Wellesley passed at will, working a circular formation in classy style but through inaccurate shooting lost the opportunity of rolling up a large score. Quincy started with a score in the first few minutes of play and the visitors came through with three in succession. Th score then alternated, Crane being withdrawn and Jenkins substitued.

The second had halved when Quincy commenced breathing deep. With the score 15 to 12, Sam Prout shot a goal from the centre of the floor. Immediately Quincy took a new lease of life, commenced covering their man, succeeded in makin.. passes which although crude were effective, and did very well in their offensive game. On a foul, Andrews rolled the ball into the netting and with the socre tie, Bull Moose Brown was sent in.

Sam Prout was taken out to make room for the Bull Moose and he had been playing but a short time before another spirit overtook the local boys. The formations of the visitors were shattered, the ball was in Quincy's territory most of the time and in a mass of struggling players, with no apparent chance to make a score, the Bull Moose ducked to one side and tossed a straight up and down basket. No further scoring was made during the balance of the period.

The second game was a good workout for the boys notwithstanding the big score. The summaries:

| Quincy H. S. | Wellesley, H. S. |
|---|---|
| Andrews rf | lb Stover |
| S. Prout lf | rb Hatch |
| Brown lf | |

RAND CLASS ANNUAL DINNER

Preceded By Election of Officers For the Year

C. W. PENNIMAN SPEAKER

The annual meeting and dinner of the Rand class of the Wollaston Baptist church was held in the chapel, Wednesday evening with a large number of young men in attendance. Prayer was offered by J. Arthur Sparrow, teacher of the class. President Charles M. Roach, presided.

Harold Neale read the secretary's report which showed an increase of 30 per cent in the club membership in its third year.

J. Arthur Sparrow was presented with a leather travelling toilet case as a token of appreciation by the class for his good work as teacher. The recipient responded fittingly.

Kenneth Albee read the report of the nominating committee and the following were elected:

Teacher—J. Arthur Sparrow.
Assistant Teacher—A. J. Luxton.
President—Charles M. Roach.
Vice President—E. Theodore Marceau.
Secretary—Lester Porter.

Devotional Committee—Kenneth P. Albee, Philip Wood, Harold Thomas.
Social Committee—William Bullick Max O. Pinkham, Nathan Drew.
Athletic Committee—E. Theodore Marceau, Payson Arnold, Ralph Barlow,.

The reports of various committees were read, among them that of the athletic committee by William Bartlett which caused amusement.

George W. Penniman of Mattapan spoke on a "challenge to the Twentieth Century man."

Mr. Penniman prefaced his remarks with a tribute to James L. Rand, for whom class was named and was its first teacher and who passed away last year. He urged his audience to be manly men this was not only a privilege but a duty. One of the most prevalent queries of this age, is that of "Is he making good?" He challenged those present to make good.

The talk was one of inspiration and was listened to with close attention by the members of the class.

The singing of hymns and other music followed the address.

CRANE WILL TALK ON DOCKS

GROCERS LIKE PRESENT LAW

Will Request Legislators to Oppose Any Change

BACK TO OLD SYSTEM

The Old Colony Grocers' Association at its 21st annual dinner Wednesday evening at the Quincy House instructed its legislative committee to oppose the bill to change the weights and measures law, enacted last year, back to the old law. Under the present law the use of measures is practically done away with, everything being sold by weight.

The officers elected were: President, A. W. Ames, Rockland; Vice President Ellis Pitcher, South Weymouth; Secretary, H. W. Mansfield, Braintree; Treasurer, Oakes A. Bridgman, Braintree.

MRS. PINKHAM ONLY PRESIDENT

Elected By the Eliot House Mission in 26 Years

TWO ORGANIZATIONS MET

The joint annual meeting of the Eliot Home Mission and the Women's Foreign Missionary societies of the Wollaston Baptist church was held, Wednesday afternoon, with Mrs. Charles E. Goodspeed of Grand View avenue.

The feature of the afternoon was the presentation to Mrs. George F. Pinkham of a beautiful azalea from the members of the Eliot Home Mission society. For 26 years, ever since the organization was formed April 13, 1887, Mrs. Pinkham has been its presiding officer. In the presentation speech Mrs. Joseph Walther told of the love and esteem with which she was held.

The officers elected by the Women's Foreign Missionary society were:

President—Mrs. Joseph Walther.
Vice President—Mrs. E. E. Bullock.
Secretary—Mrs. Elford L. Durgan.
Treasurer—Mrs. Amos D. Albee.
Collectors—Mrs. J. A. Jewell, Miss Laura Jones, Mrs. Moses Brown.
Helping Hand Committee—Miss Laura Jones.

The Eliot Home Mission society elected the following:

President—Mrs. George F. Pinkham.
Vice President—Mrs. Philip Dresser.
Secretary—Mrs. Charles MacFarland.
Treasurer—Mrs. J. Arthur Sparrow.

The members of the program and work commitee of the two societies are the same. Program—Mrs. George F. Pinkham, Mrs. Kimball, Mrs. Martha Bennett, Mrs. Martha Salsman.

Work Committee—Mrs. Jennie Hill, Mrs. F. R. Mills, Miss Laura Jones. A social hour followed the business session and refreshments were served by Mrs. Goodspeed.

WATER DAMAGE CONSIDERABLE

Rev. Mr. Lillback Heavy Loser by Spectacular Fire

CALLAHAN'S LUCKY ESCAPE

After the fire which gutted the upper floor of a two apartment house at Granite and Centre streets Wednesday, Rev. John E. Lillback and family who occupied the upper floor were obliged to sleep on the first floor which is unoccupied.

Through the kindness of J. Warren Nightingale who supplied bed clothing and necessary articles, they were able to pass the night fairly comfortable.

The water damage to the household furnishing of Rev. Mr. Lillback will be about $700 but they lost all their clothing.

CHOIR CHAPTER STARTING WELL

Young Ladies Have Picture Show For First Entertainment

A fine moving picture entertainment was held in the Park and Downs church, Tuesday evening, by the Choir Chapter.

Second Vice—Miss Natalie Scott.
Treasurer—Miss Gertrude Pletsch.
Secretary—Miss Mariam Breen.
Executive Committee—Miss Ella R. Mausaus, Miss Geraldine Scott, Miss Mabel Stewart.

AFFECTS 35,000 MEN

Eastern Railroad Engineers and Firemen to Ballot on Strike

New York, Jan. 16.—Efforts to mediate the dispute between the eastern railroads and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen over the demands of the roads' firemen for increased wages and better working conditions have failed and a strike ballot has been ordered. It was announced that mediation efforts had been brought to an end because it had become apparent that the controversy had not yet reached a stage where mediation offered much prospect of success.

About 35,000 men are affected, of whom some 25,000 are locomotive firemen, and 10,000 locomotive engineers, who recently have been promoted from the position of firemen, but who retain their membership in the firemen's organization.

Fifty-four railroads, including all lines east of Chicago and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers, are involved in the dispute.

CITY BOOK TO BE BUREAU OF INFORMATION ON TAX MATTERS

Practically a Transcript of the Assessors' Books to Be Transferred to It

Innovation Every Three Years will Cost Tidy Sum of $1,000

Under an order passed by the City Council of 1912 amending the Asesessors ordinance it will be necessary for the Assessors to publish this year in table form in the city book a list of all persons paying a real or personal estate tax. On real estate they must give the number of feet of land and value of same, the value of building situated on the land, where located, the total valuation and the tax. On personal estate similiar details must also be given. In fact what the ordinance now provides for is a complete transcript of the assessors books shall be published. It is estimated that the additional cost for publishing this particular part of the report of City Officials will amount over $1,000. Under the ordinance it must be published once in every three years.

Several clerks are now at work making a transcript of the assessors books for the printers.

LAID AT REST.

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine Russell was held Thursday morning from 334 South street. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. Fr. John J. Coan. The body was taken to Lawrence for burial. The deceased was the widow of the late John Russell and was about 70 years of age. She was one of the earliest Catholic residents of Quincy Point, and is survived by two sons, Dennis F., and Charles J., and one daughter Miss Katie Russell. The bearers were Michael O'Hara, William S. Sullivan, James Shea and John F. Donovan.

WATERWAYS OF IMPORTANCE

In the Future Development of This Vast Country

CLAIMS MR. CRANE

There was a very large attendance Thursday evening at the regular meeting of the West Quincy Improvement association. President Little presided. The speaker was Dock and Water Front Commissioner Frank Fessenden Crane. Mr. Crane proved himself thoroughly conversant with his subject and for an hour and a half he held the member's close attention.

He brought with him several maps showing the system of canals which when completed will practically make a continuous route from the far west particularly that from Fall River to Boston. He also exhibited plans of Boston harbor showing the takings that had been made of the water front by private corporations and by the Port of Boston. All of these he explained in detail furnishing the members of the association with a fund of information about this important subject.

Coming down to local affairs he showed plans of all the sites that have been mentioned for the public dock that is at present being agitated in Quincy. These he explained in detail also giving the depth of water at each of the sites and of the channel leading to them.

Quincy, he said, had a most caluable water front. A water front that was unsurpassed by any city in the Commonwealth, and it was a wise policy to see to it that some form of development was carried out.

After his talk he said that he was ready and willing to answer any questions and several of those present propounded questions which the speaker readily answered.

Several of the members of the association spoke in favor of the establishment of a public dock for Quincy. These included Dr. John H. Ash, Councilman Edward J. Sandberg and Overseer of the Poor James H. Elcock.

Refreshments were served after the meeting.

CONANT STATUE FOR SALEM

Set Up in Temporary Quarters in Museum Grounds

KITSON THE ARTIST

The massive bronze statue of Roger Conant, the first governor of the Salem or Old Planters Colony, was set in its temporary position on the grounds of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, Thursday.

The statue, weighing two tons and standing 10 feet four inches in height, is the work of the local sculptor, H. H. Kitson of Quincy, and executed at the request of the Roger Conant Family Association.

The statue will remain on the museum grounds until early in May when it will be transferred to Salem and set in position at Washington square, where it will stand as a memorial to the man who built the first house of that city and who was for two years the Governor of the colony.

The dedication at Salem will be marked by a large reunion of the Conant family and the Old Planters Association.

EDWARD RILEY BURIED.

The funeral of Edward H. Riley who died Monday in his 47th year took place Wednesday afternoon from his home, 89 Taylor street. Services were conducted by Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott. Burial was in Mt. ## MIDNIGHT TRAIN NOW ASSURED RAILROAD AGREES TO GRANT IT

West Quincy Will Figure in Changes, Getting More Desirable Evening Train

Other Arrangements Planned to Improve Local Service

William H. Teasdale, chairman of the committee on railroad transportation of the Board of Trade has been successful in obtaining several improvements in the train serivce between Quincy and Boston which it is expected will go into effect when the new timetable is issued about the first of February.

Mr. Teasdale has had several conferences with the railroad officials in regard to changes desired and this morning he received word of some of the changes that had been decided upon.

First and foremost is the announcement that a train making the Quincy stop will leave Boston at 12.05 midnight. Just what stops will be made other than Quincy has not been fully settled as yet.

A new outward train for Quincy is promised to leave Boston about 10 p. m. A train between the 9.25 and 10.35 has long been needed.

Another new outward express train will make the Quincy stop leaving Boston at 4.15. The train now leaving Boston at 4.12 will be retained but this is an accommodation train while the new train will be express to Wollaston.

For inward trains a new train is promised at about 1.05 P. M. in place of the train now leaving Quincy at 1.20.

There has been a demand for a long time by West Quincy residents for an inward theatre train. There is a train now leaving West Quincy for Boston at 7.19 but this is rather late to accommodate the people. Under the new arrangements this train will leave West Quincy about 7.05.

The accommodation train now leaving Boston for West Quincy at 5.22, will be held back to 5.32, and made an express train, arriving at West Quincy at about the same time as the present train.

Chairman Teasdale stated this morning that there were several other which he had asked for, which had not at present been fully decided upon by the railroad officials. He further said that the railroad officials seemed anxious to accommodate Quincy as far as possible and that the improvements desired would be made if it was possible without disarranging the train schedule too much.

MARY HOLMES EMERY.

Funeral services for Mary Holmes Emery took place at her late home on Billings street, at one o'clock Thursday, Rev. T. W. Davison, pastor of Memorial church officiating. A quartet composed of Miss Jordine Davison Miss Gertrude Fratus, Mrs. Albert Hall and Mrs. W. S. Hill sang, "Abide With Me," and "The Christian's Good-night." Miss Emery, before her illness, was one of the energetic workers for community betterment. She was a charter member of Memorial church. She is survied by one brother, her sister Miss Isabelle F. P. Emery passing away a few weeks ago.

PLANS EASTER BALL.

A regular meeting of the Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus, was held at Greenleaf hall, Thursday evening. A large attendance witnessed the first degree conferred on five candidates. Two new members were elected.

It was voted to hold the annual ball on Easter Monday. Plans were talked over and arrangements made to appoint a committee.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

One enthusiastic writier has suggested pensions for ball players. Here is a chance for the enthusiastic fan to separate himself from some of his money.

Joe Walker getting out of the old Republican machine has taken a step which his inclination dictated a long time ago.

The King of Swan Island is dead but we have not heard any moaning on the part of the birds.

King Alphonso has promised reforms which will make him the foremost ruler of his time if carried out, Evidently the young man has some good stuff in him if given a chance to develop.

In the meantime the little Portuguese monarch who figured as an attache to a dancer is nosing around the world, no one knows where.

Some of the alleged bon mots of leading men are pretty far fetched and the writer producing them has to not only stretch his imagination, but give the average reader a poor average of intelligence to pass it along as worthy of wit.

The home rule bill is now in its last stage says one paper. Wrong. The House of Lords will administer that stage.

If less publicity was given the movements of Mr. Ettor his prominence would soon diminish.

Senator-elect Weeks is already on record criticising our banking laws. After the recent exhibit in Washington, no doubt millions of people agree that there is ample chance for reform in this direction.

Congressman McCall in declining to become a candidate for the 13th district should not be accepted as having any superstitions prejudice in the matter.

Gov. Sulzer of New York has thrown precedent to the winds in his handling of a case which required his consideration and no doubt he was right in his position.

While Dakota Dan may have a frozen ear there was ample justification in the claim that the "frozen mit" was not handed out to him by one of his lady witnesses.

Big Tim Sullivan of New York believed in holding friends and making few enemies which is enough said with regard to his success. It covers the book from cover to cover.

Roosevelt and Wilson can console each other upon the Maine situation. Both said about the same thing, which was defeat the Republican candidate for senator but the legislature declined both mandates.

Gov. Baldwin of Connecticut was the only New England governor not to mention the New Haven road in his inaugural message. Perhaps he felt that the others covered the ground so well that they did not leave him even even a blind trail.

THE BOWLING FEVER.

The bowling fever appears to have struck Quincy stronger than ever this season and the aHeys are crowded each night with those who enthuse over the game both from actual participation or whose interest is engendered by that of friendship. There is nothing which can be offered against the spread of this fever. An epidemic would do no harm except that it would prove a trifle costly to those whom it attacked. Despite the fact that it is somewhat expensive there is no cleaner sport on the carpet today than bowling. It is unlike base ball and many other diversions. In those the players, get the real fun and excitement, the others those who witness the game, get the credit of being real fans, a rather doubtful emolument. But in bowling the players get all the fun, the excitement, the exercise and all that there is in the sport and that is why it is so much ahead of others where the person who pays the freight does not know whether he is being buncoed or not.

PHILLIPS BROOKS' STATUE.

A gentleman supposed to be an authority has come forward with the opinion that the Phillips Brooks statue in Boston was an artistic hodge-podge. Webster's dictionary says that hodge-podge is a mixed mess, or medley. An artistic hodge-podge might mean a great deal. The critic does not go far enough and explain whether it is a mixed mess or a medley that he means to describe. Medley, it is hardly necessary to analyze, or give the synonims for at this time. Some musical medleys have proven of considerable pleasing power, but ordinarily the term is accepted as a hodge-podge and again revertion is made to the original word. The Brooks' statue has withstood the cold and blast of many winters and the heat of many summers. Few have been so pronounced in their criticism of the work of art as the gentleman who suddenly appears on the scene to call attention to its short comings. Some one would be found to criticise the renowned Venus but it has stood for many ages as the embodiment of grace and perfection. Many works of art now exhibited in Boston would no doubt be severely criticised by some person of artistite temperament. In view of this fact it would be interesting to note the criticisms and opinions handed out when those works of art were first set up. The adverse criticism, if there was any was probably low toned and did not reach as but a whisper to a mighty roar when compared with the favorable comment. So it is with human nature. Many men have to die to have their true worth exploited and statues have to stand out in the cold world for years before their weak points are laid bare.

THE RAILROAD SITUATION.

Many well intentioned gentlemen have come forward with opinions regarding the settlement of the railroad situation as it exists in this state at the present time. All agree that there is ample need for reform if the interest of public service and up keep of the valuable plants are to be maintained.

It is not long since the public was assured that the Boston & Maine holding company would prove of great utility in modifying and improving conditions. Up to the present time this enterprise does not appear to have come up to expectations. In fact, it is claimed that things have not marched forward under this so called cure for the evils existing. As to the holding company, its functions, powers, ability, control or position to bring about a reform, not hardly a person in ten could give a proper explanation. It is doubtful if as many people could tell just what the holding company has to do with regard to the railroads in any capacity.

The fact remains and it cannot be lightly set aside that the conditions are not in accord with public sentiment. That there has been cause for complaint is accepted. President Mellen in a recent statement did not make any denial of the fact that an improvement would not be both desirable but necessary to meet the traffic conditions of the present day. Possibly too much attention has been given to branching out, absorbing, connecting railroads and the many other things necessary to bring into fair existence a complete chain of steam connection from one point to another, and during this enthralling period of concentration the demands of the public for freight and passenger service had been neglected, with the end of perfecting the entire systems involved.

Be that as it may the situation which has developed has created a great public clamor. The railroad has been banged right and left by press and public. Beyond a doubt there has been much cause on the part of the public in this demand for better service, but at the same time, there must be an admitted presence of agitators, to stir up things and keep the pot boiling at fever heat. It may be that some of these agitators were not squared entirely by public sentiment. May be a little selfishness or a desire to square accounts entered into their calculations. At present there appears to be a trifling tranquility spread over the railroad situation, which should augur well for future betterment of service.

Now that the heat of the contentions have been passed, and there is time for cool consideration it would be wiser for all concerned to get busy in a spirit of get-togetherativeness for the common good. When railroads, press and public reach this level there is strong hope for a better feeling existing which should operate to a common good and improvement all along the line.

MANY FINE SPEECHES

At Braintree Knights of Columbus Annual Banquet

Braintree Council No. 1462, Knights of Columbus gave almost enjoyable banquet in the Holbrook town hall, Wednesday evening. Music was furnished by Cuff's orchestra and the supper march was led by Grand Knight Joseph T. Shay of the local council and Miss Elizabeth G. Clark of Randolph followed by upwards of 150 couples.

Address of welcome was delivered by Grand Knight Shay and there were speeches by State Deputy Louis A. Watson of Boston, State Secretary Philip McMahon of Boston and District Deputy Daniel M. O'Brien of Rockland.

The address of the evening was delivered by the guest of honor Edward Mulready of Rockland, the State Deputy Probation Commissioner who had for his subject "The heart of the Commonwealth." Other special guests were Rev. Frs. Matthew F. McDonnell and Andrew J. Fitzgerald of the St. Francis church.

At the close of the banquet the floor was cleared and dancing was enjoyed until 11.30 o'clock. Knights and their ladies were present from many surrounding towns.

The committee of arrrangements was as follows: G. K. Joseph T. Shay, chairman, J. Frank Megley, secretary and treasurer, Past G. K., Dr. C. A. Sullivan, Joseph V. Cuff, Philip H. Sullivan, Arthur Levangie, Joseph Mulcahy, Andrew Nichols, Daniel Ryan, Oliver A. Cote, Kearn Devereux and Lucien Gaudreau.

SOUNDS GOOD TO US.

One of the newsdealers in the outlying wards dropped in to see us the other day with a request that we again increase the number of Ledgers sent him each day. He has increased his number steadily but has not been able to keep up with the demand. He says it is not because of the contest but just a natural steady demand.

His claim that he sold 500 more Ledgers in December 1912 than in December 1911 is borne out by our books which record the same testimony.

In looking over the records of other agencies we find the condition is the same—and ever inreasing demand for the Ledger, especially so in West Quincy, South Quincy, Squantum and Montclair.

The Ledger has the largest circulation of any paper in Norfolk County Is a clean, newsy, home paper. The people read it.

NEW RULES AT WHITE HOUSE

But Daily Ledger Candidates Are Still Hustling

BIG GAIN BY MRS. MARNOCK

It is not expected that any of the candidates in the Daily Ledger Inauguration contest will drop out because of the news which comes from Washington. A dispatch says:

"If President Taft were to comply with all the requests for kisses made by doting parents who wish their children to receive a presidential salute, he would have little time for public business. Since the publication of the story of how Mr. Taft kissed little Phyllis Wistrand of Laramie, Wyoming, there have been twenty-two fathers, mothers, grandmothers, aunts, and uncles who have brought expectant boys and girls to the White House for a similiar errand, and "Pat" McKenna, who guards the portals to the President's office, has been a busy man. The president has not had time to kiss any more children and Pat has had to turn away many disappointed relatives."

Perhaps President Wilson, who will be inaugurated March 4, will have different rules or would make exceptions if the person comes from the City of Presidents.

The biggest gain in the contest today is made by Mrs. Marnock, the Woman's Relief Corps candidate who adds 490 and has almost overtaken Mr. MacKay. Miss Morrissett of West Quincy also makes a good gain, and is close behind Mr. DeNormandie.

Mr. Bowditch added 285 votes, but failed to gain over Mrs. Marnock. Mr. Kessler sought to reduce the space between he and Miss Morrissett, but 110 votes were not enough.

Other gains were made by Edmond Roach, Miss Ruth Cahill and R. A. Falconer of the shipyard. The totals of Fred Williams, Sturgis Hunt and A. R. MacKay, the three leaders are the same as yesterday.

Candidates should look around for a few vote certificates good for 1000 votes. The Daily Ledger will be delivered to all yearly subscribers in any part of the city or outside the city.

THE LAST COUPON.

The last coupon in this contest will be printed in the issue of Saturday, Feb. 8, and the polls will close a few days later. A great hustle is expected during the last days of the contest.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN

BOSTON AND VICINITY

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

Mme. Frieda Hempel, from the Royal Opera Berlin, and in Europe considered the greatest coloratura soprano of today will make her debut at the Boston Opera House Monday evening, singing Rosina in "The Barber of Seville." The coming to America of this famous singer was several times deferred on account of illness. Otherwise she would have sung at the opening performances of the season in both New York and Boston. She made her initial appearance in New York on the night after Christmas as the Queen in "The Huguenots," and enthusiasm such as is witnessed but seldom at the Metropolitan was the tribute paid her singing, there being twenty curtain calls after the third act and a great profusion of flowers. Although it is only six years since Mme. Hempel first sang in opera, she has been an idol of the opera going public from the outset of her career. During her first engagement at Covent Garden, London, in 1907, one of the crowning honors of that particular season was bestowed her, for when a gala performance was "commanded" by the late King Edward in honor of his royal guests the King and Queen of Denmark, Mme. Hempel sang the music of Eva in an act of "Die Meistersinger."

When sung for the first time in Boston last week, Wolf Ferrari's "The Jewels of the Madonna" scored the most remarkable success in the history of the Opera House and so great is the interest taken in this truly melodious work that it will be sung twice next week, Wednesday night and again at the Saturday matinee with the original cast headed by Mme. Edvina as Maliella, Friday evening "Carmen" will be given its second subscription performance, with Mme. Gay in the title role, a part which seems to be hers alone today, as there is no other impersonation comparable to it.

Saturday night when the prices are haived, "Rigoletto" will be given its first hearing for the season. Mme. Evelyn Scotney, whose successes as Gilda have been the most sensational happenings of the season in Montreal, will sing the role here.

MRS. FISKE.

Mrs. Fiske and the Manhattan Company, under the direction of Harrison Grey Fiske, are to come to the Hollis Street Theatre in "The High Road," Jan. 20, for an engagement of two weeks which, contrary to Mrs. Fiske's usual custom, will include Wednesday as well as the regular Saturday matinees.

In "The High Road," his latest work, Edward Sheldon, author of Mrs. Fiske's former graphic success, "Salvation Nell," is said to have felt the pulse of the moment and to have written a play with a purpose but without a preachment. It is a story so to speak, of soul progression. From the ignorance and sordidness of her early surroundings, Mary Page starts upon an uphill journey and educates, broadens and develops a naturally great mind and heart. After a material experience of the beauties and luxuries of the world, there comes, not a moral awakening exactly, but a stage in her moral development when these things can no longer satisfy, and when her broadened vision and augmented understanding show her a great field of usefulness to humanity. This she enters and in it rapidly attains, through her ability, her zeal and her self-sacrifice, the devotion of hundreds of thousands of the overworked underfed and down-trodden for whom she has fought for better material conditions and a happier outlook on life. In the course of her work for others, there comes into her life a great love which finally leads her to her woman's crown of happinness, but she achieves it only after it seems to have been placed forever beyond her reach.

Dramatically, the greatest interest in "The High Road" lies in the triumphant battle waged by one woman against powerful men and powerful interests, with her own happiness and the political future of her husband as the issues that hang in the balance. Mrs. Fiske has probably never had a more wonderfully human or more appealing role than Mary Page and her presentment of it is conceded to be one of the most brilliant triumphs of her brilliant career.

PARK THEATRE.

A real dramatic treat is being presented by David Belasco at the Park Theatre, Boston. There is no man in America, who can equal Mr. Belasco as a producer and nothing he has ever done has held more of an appeal than "The Woman" now at the Park and which bids fair to remain there for a long time.

"The Woman," is an engrossing play of politics and the telephone written with strength and humor. It follows the attempt of the "machine" in Washington to stop the passage of a reform bill by ruining an insurgent leader, through a scandal with a woman. Mr. Belasco has mounted the play most illusively and assembled an excellent cast. The play has ideas as well as excitement. No play of recent years has contained such a tremendous appeal to women as does this. And the funny thing about it is that the men like it just as well, only for a different reason. Mr. Belasco has sent to Boston the original company that remained in New York all last season. In the company are such players as Jane Peyton, Mary Nash, John W. Cope, Edwin Holt, Cuyler Hastings, Carleton Macy, Harold Vosburgh, William Holden, Stephen Fitzpatrick, Eugene Stockdale, Jose Rossi and James Gerson.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The production of "Believe Me, Xantippe!" at the Castle Square next week will be an event of no little importance. For the third time, the John Craig annual Prize Play will be offered to the public, and all signs indicate that the latest one will repeat the success of "The End of the Bridge" and "The Product of the Mill." It is a strongly effective and original comedy from the pen of John Frederick Ballard, and it touches American life and manners with a light and sure hand. It never oversteps the bounds of legitimate humor and its dramatic moments are on a high and perfectly rational plane. All its happenings are possible, and the dialogue is lifelike and brilliant.

The opening act of "Believe Me, Xantippe!" takes place in New York City, and the remaining three acts have for their scene the picturesque mountain regions of Southern Colorado. The plot deals with the adventures of a lively young American who wagers that he can successfully escape capture by detectives and police officers after he has pretended to commit the crime of forgery. He makes a successful escape, and the chase continues for the greater part of the play, being developed with great originality on the part of the author in a manner that is sure to continously amuse the audience. The outcome of the play need not be revealed in advance, the audience being kept in suspense to the very end. Throughout it is laughter-provoking.

The scenic features of the play will be graphically portrayed by effective scenery, and the rough and ready costumes of the Rocky Mountains will give it an added picturesqueness. Mr. Craig will appear as the escaping hero; Miss Young will be seen as the heroine, a sheriff's daughter; and in the other leading roles will be Wilson Melrose, Donald Meek, Walter Walker, George Henry Trader, A. Roberts, Mabel Colcord and Laurett Browne.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Cecelia Loftus, the greatest of all mimics, who has not appeared in this country for several years, comes to B. F. Keith's Theatre next week at the head of one of the strongest and best balanced vaudeville bills ever arranged for this popular playhouse. Miss Loftus is one of the biggest stars ever brought to this country by Mr. Keith for his circuit. For this tour she has elected to give imitations of some of the best known and most popular stars on the American stage, including Nora Bayes, Billie Burke, Rae Samuels, Jane Cowl, Mrs. Fiske, and several others. One of the most notable features of her act is an impersonation of Maude Allan, in costume. Miss Loftus' engagement is positively limited to one week only. Another big feature of the week will be May Wirth, the Australian equestrienne, and the greatest bare back rider in the world. Little Miss Wirth is only eighteen years of age, yet she is the only woman who has ever been able to perform the feat of throwing a backward somersault from one galloping horse to another. She will be assisted by the Great Wirth Family, including several beautiful horses. Dan Quinlan and Vic Richards, who have just completed a triumphant tour of the world, will present their uproariously funny sketch, "The Quack Dentist;" and another act of a different type will be Dorothy Brenner and Joe Ratliffe, in "At The Flower Stand."

MOTOR BOAT SHOW.

Although two weeks of active preparations are well under way for the best Motor Boat and Engine show Boston has ever seen. Never before have so many interesting features been obtained by Manager Chester I. Campbell, and added to this the great interest taken in the eastern field by the prominent boat builders has lead them to make special preparations for this coming show. Big boats and little boats, hydroplanes, semi-cruisers large enough for a whole family to live on, down to the merry little chugchugs for river and lake at a price within the reach of all will be shown together with a line of accessories, comfort and safety devices, and practically every known make of engines.

Among the attractions will be the wonder of the world, the champion hydroplane Baby Reliance II, holder of all the world's records, and the beautiful display of trophies it has won, also the Reliance III, and a new boat by Herreshoff is promised. This year everything points to one of the most successful and interesting exhibitions ever held in Boston, and the week of Feb. 1 to 8, will bring with it the motor boat enthusiasts and lovers of marine sports from all over the country.

MANAGER RUSSELL HONORED.

Henry Russell, managing director of the Boston Opera Company has just been notified that he has been nominated as a member of the National Institute of Social Sciences, "in recognition of distinction attained in operatic production" as the official notification reads. It is the first time in the history of the society that an operatic impresario has been singled out for the honor, and accordingly particular significance is attached to this national recognition of Mr. Russell's attainments.

The Institute is composed of two hundred and fifty men and women, who by their recognized achievements in the social sciences and by the distinction which has come to them through service rendered to humanity, have made themselves eligible for nomination. President Taft is the honorary president and on the executive staff are Hamilton W. Mabie, Elihu Root, Joseph H. Choate, Miss Jane Addams and Miss Mabel Boardman.

Included in the membership in the deoartment of art and letters, with which Mr. Russell will be affiliated are David Belasco, David Bispham, Miss Geraldine Farrar, Mrs. Fiske Daniel Frohman, Miss Ellen Glasgow, William J. Henderson, E. M. Holland, Eben D. Jordan, H. E. Krehbiel, Robert B. Mantell, Miss Julia Marlowe, Mme. Lillian Nordica, Otis Skinner, E. H. Sothern, David Warfield, the Hon. James Bryce and Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin, a truly representative company.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LEAGUE.

The game between the First Presbyterian and the Bethany church teams in the Sunday school basket ball league has been postponed owing to the illness of Matheson and Marini of the former five. Christ church and Union chapel will meet as scheduled and the Wollaston Baptist and Wollaston Congregational teams will play an exhibition game. The first game will begin at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

SOLVED DUCK HOUSE MYSTERY

Alfred Papi, a Juvenile, Apprehended by Officer Avery

IS AN OLD OFFENDER

After watching and waiting for some time the police were able Thursday night to apprehend the person who has been robbing the duck house og H. H. Kitson near Merrymount park. For some time past Mr. Kitson has been missing his ducks and all about 30 disappeared. Thursday night Officer Avery in citizen's dress was stationed near the duck house and before the night was over he had arrested Alfred Papi of 25 Canal street as the offender. Papi although a juvenile has quite a record and Probation Officer Fahey when notified at 2 o'clock this morning of his arrest refused to have him released as he was wanted for violation of his probation period. He was bound over until next Tuesday for trial.

BRIEFS

Slips Handcuffs ad is Quickly Swallowed Up by Crowd

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 17.—Harry W. Reynolds, a convicted bigamist, shook off handcuffs as lightly as he had shaken off the bonds of matrimony and escaped from a chain gang returning from court to the county jail.

Reynolds was shackled in a line of prisoners last evening. The men had been sentenced in court during the day, and were being taken to the county jail. When the head of the line had almost reached its destination, a crowd of shoe workers came flocking out of a factory.

Reynolds seized opportunity by the forelock, slipped his wrists from the hitherto perfectly good handcuffs, and was swallowed up in the crowd.

LADIES' GUILD SUCCESSFUL

Made Lots of Money For St. Chrysostom's Church

DURING THE YEAR

The Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostom's church held its annual meeting Wednesday afternoon with a good attendance. In the absence of the president Mrs. George A. Vibert and vice president Mrs. Edward F. Parlee, Mrs. David L. Jewell put through the business of the afternoon in her usual efficient manner. The secretary and treasurer Miss Annie Clean read yearly reports giving a review of year's work which included all day sewing meetings held during Lent, the articles made were for the Visiting Nurse committee of the Quincy Women's club, the chairman Mrs. Albert N. Murray being a member of the Guild.

The different affairs have all been for the one object, the Parish house fund. During the summer, several Neighborhood food sales, netting $113.00 were held; the banner sale being at Mrs. Percy L. Davidson's which netted $28.00

Two suppers under the leadership of Mrs. Daniel C. Millier were served and a concert under the direction of Mrs. George B. Curran all netting goodly sums. The fair in October, was held at the rectory and supper was served in the parish rooms, and as in former years proved to be most successful. A sale and English tea party in the parish rooms in December under the leadership of Mrs. Alice J. Bainbridge was a social as well ac a financial success. Feb. 14, the Guild gave a supper for members and their husbands which proved an enjoyable affair. One afternoon Miss Marion DeC. Ward of the Massachusetts Correspondent of the Church Periodical Club gave a resume of her work and what could be done to help her in sending magazines and literature to remote parts of the country where it is so much appreciated. The annual Christmas box went to St. James parish, Warfield, Virginia.

During the year the Guild has given $599.12 towards the parish house fund and $75 to the vestry towards helping to make up the deficit for the year. The Guild has also promised $50 towards repairing the church organ. The Guild has gained eleven new members and thankfully records that none have been taken by death.

Mrs. David L. Jewell, chairman of the Missionary committee gave an account of work for Missions and read a list of the contents of the Lenten box, valued at $13.24 and Christmas barrel, valued at $25 which she packed and sent.

The officers elected were: President, Mrs. Daniel C. Miller; first vice president, Mrs. Howard D. Fowler; second vice president, Mrs. Frederick S. Waite; secretary and treasurer Miss Annie Clean. Before the meeting adjourned it was voted to give a supper Tuesday, Jan. 28.

RECREATION AND WELFARE

Effort in Behalf of Young Women Aim of Well Disposed Ladies

Nothwithstanding the storm which prevailed on the date set, there was a goodly number of ladies met at the home of Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann to discuss plans relative to recreation and welfare home in Quincy.

It has long been in the minds of those ladies interested in the Young Women's club and summer school that there was hardly room at the Women's club house, and that suitable quarters for the gym should be avilable, for those of our young women who may desire it. The cost of a club house of such dimensions and equipment as desired is almost prohibitive. But plans have been made to secure a place already equiped were discussed at this meeting. Saturday afternoon, Jan. 25, Mrs. George H. Pfaffmann will open her house for a Russian afternoon. It is to be hoped that the proceeds will be $100 or even more so that this may be used as a neucus of a fund for the starting of recreation and welfare work among the young women.

CHILDREN ARE HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER

Accused of Killing and Robbing a Japanese at Boston

Boston, Jan. 17.—Two of the youngest boys ever arrested in Greater Boston charged with a capital crime are held by the police in connection with the death of the Japanese whose body was found Tuesday night in an alleyway off Joiner street, Charlestown. Stripped of its legal verbiage the charge against the boys is manslaughter. One of the boys, Richard Powers, Jr., is of the tender age of 13, while the other, Frank Carroll, is 15.

Both boys were arraigned before Judge Bragg. The full charge against them was "being delinquent children, in that they committed manslaughter."

The boys were not allowed to plead, because of their age, and Bragg held each of them in $500 bail for a hearing Saturday.

The police say both boys have admitted they knocked the Japanese down and robbed him of abut $9.

GIVEN DIVORCE AND THE CHILD

Agnes M. Ansert Not Opposed in Her Suit For Separation

Before Judge Dubuque in the superior court in Boston, Tuesday, the case of Mrs. Agnes M. Ansert for divorce from Charles H. Ansert was heard. Mrs. Ansert testified that she and Charles H. Ansert married in Bath, Me., in March, 1904. The libellent told the court that she was only 18 years old when she was married. Her husband is a brass molder and works at the Fore River shipyard in Quincy. She said he paid very little for the support of her or their child, and frequently got home drunk and brought other drunken men with him, and when she refused to get up and wait on them he used to beat and choke her. Once, she said he pursued her through their rooms with a razor in his hand.

A certain house in Quincy was raided as being a disorderly place and her husband and an other woman were found there. Mrs. Pemberton, the landlady, and Officer Edward Johnson of Quincy testified. Judge Dubuque gave a decree nisi, with custody of the child.

TO HAVE NEW ORGANS.

Three Quincy churches are soon to install new pipe organs the First Presbyterian church, Water street, South Quincy, Rev. James Matheson, pastor; the First United Presbyterian church, South Quincy, Rev. A. M. Thompson, pastor and the Park and Downs Congregational church, Rev. William B. Ayres, pastor. Each of these new organs were made possible by the generosity of Andrew Carnegie, who is to pay a large part of the cost of each instrument. All of these organs are now being built by the Estey Organ Co., of Brattleboro, Vt., The organ in the First Presbyterian church will be installed in March, and in the First United Presbyterian and the Park & Downs churches in April.

SUN RISING---HOPE DROPPING

The ice men are beginning to have fears that they will not be able to harvest their crop of ice in Quincy this winter. At no time thus far has the ice been within several inches of being thick enough to cut and nothing but a week or more of freezing weather will do the trick. The sun is getting higher every day and the prospects of getting a crop of ice are growing slimmer. It is seldom that the ice men have been able to harvest any ice during the month of February.

COULD AFFORD TO LOSE MONEY

Railroad Offices Were Bandit's Special Point of Attack

TELLS HIS STORY TO POLICE

Elaborates on Each Separate Robbery as He Quotes From His Diary—Six-Foot Army Deserter, Who Resembles Business Man, Made Safe Getaways Until He Reached Boston

Boston, Jan. 17.—A remarkable story of crime, coming from the lips of a man who in many ways is the most extraordinary prisoner ever taken into the custody of the local police, was told yesterday after the arrest of William J. Manogue, the six-foot army deserter, who held up the clerks at the Washington street office of the Boston and Albany railroad and was captured after a chase. The hold-up was one of the boldest which ever occurred in this city.

Tall, straight, immaculately dressed and manicured, a typical debonair man of the world whom women would call handsome, Manogue accepted his arrest with good nature and, apparently throwing all reserve to the winds, launched forth on the remarkable story of his crimes to Officer Carey of Station 2. He seemed to enjoy telling the story.

A unique policy of crime, based on the belief that railroads could best afford the money he was determined to steal, a remarkable mental twist which prompted him to return money belonging to clerks of the concerns he said he robbed, thrilling Wild West "jumps" across the Canadian border after his first three crimes, figured in the tale.

Producing a little memorandum book, in which was jotted down bare details of his hold-ups and the sums secured, the prisoner then elaborated on each separate robbery.

One of these was in Cleveland, where he entered the Erie railroad office and secured $35 after "sticking up" the clerks. There he encountered only one employe, and this man he held at the point of his pistol. Finding no rope with which to tie up the clerk, he said, he ordered him to cut away the cord on the window shades, make a loop for his wrists and put his hands through. This the clerk did and was then trussed up by the intruder.

Telling of a Philadelphia hold-up, the prisoner said he found $1.35 in change outside of $127 in bills that he secured in the office of a railroad company. This change he handed back to a clerk, he said, and told the latter he would need a little money to open up the office next morning.

At Pittsburg, after he had held up the clerks in an office and secured $54, he related, he lingered to converse with the clerks, feeling that a safe getaway was assured.

In telling of his movements after deserting from the army the prisoner said he first went to Ayer, Mass., then to Toronto. He then went to New York and "pulled off" his first holdup in the Wells Fargo express office, immediately crossing the border again to Toronto.

On Dec. 23, he said, he went to Buffalo and held up the clerks in the Grand Trunk office there, again jumping back to the Canadian city. Then he returned to New York and robbed the Erie railroad office and other places.

"When you saw that Boston and Albany clerk scooting out the back door of the office yesterday, why didn't you shoot?" asked Carey.

Manogue replied that he would never shoot anyone unless they first pulled a pistol on him. It was his policy, he declared, to rob the railroads because they could afford to lose the money, and he would not take a cent from a person who needed it.

The police were impressed with the nerve of the man and his apparent lack of reserve in telling of his crimes. He stated calmly that he expected to get about twenty-five years in jail.

He deserted Dec. 11, after stealing the pistol from a former comrade, Sergeant Sterry of Fort Andrews. He said he had easily walked through traps set for him in New York, explaining that his appearance as a man dressed in the height of fashion was his safeguard.

Manogue waived examination before Judge Creed in the municipal court and was held in $5000 for the February term of the superior court.

$25,000 Fund to Defend Fox

COMMONS VOTES FOR HOME RULE

Irish Measure Passes Third Reading by 110 Majority

IS SENT TO HOUSE OF LORDS

Bonar Law and Birrell Principals In Climax of Debate Which Has Lasted Fifty-Two Days—Unionist Says Rebellion by Ulster Against Irish Parliament Would Be Justified

London, Jan. 17.—Amid scenes of fervid joy by the Irish Nationalists, which were shared by the other members of the government coalition, the home rule bill passed its third reading and the final stage in the house of commons last night by a majority of 110, and was sent immediately to the house of lords, where it was read for the first time.

It was the climax of a debate which lasted fifty-two days. Every possible vote had been whipped in and the house was crowded.

There were two divisions in the lower house. Mr. Balfour's motion for its rejection was defeated, 258 to 368, while the third reading was carried by a vote of 367 to 257, one member of each side having left the house in the interval.

Andrew Bohar Law, the leader of the opposition, and Augustine Birrell, the chief secretary for Ireland, were the principals in the final encounter.

The Unionist leader, while admitting he had nothing new to say, reiterated his deliberate conviction that no rebellion would be better justified than one by Ulster against the new Irish parliament.

He said he knew Ulster would rebel and she was bound to succeed because the Uuistermen were ready to give their lives for the cause. If a hundred men were shot in the streets of Belfast a thousand more would be ready to take their places and the responsibility of the shooting would be on the government.

Secretary Birrell criticised Bonar Law for attempting to belittle and almost deny the existence of the Nationalist movement, which for years had been the soul of Ireland. He did not deny the Ulstermen disliked the proposed idea of an Irish parliament.

He even admitted that, if the Unionist fears of oppression were verified, the Ulstermen would be justified in offering resistance, but, he asked, how could the present mode of government continue indefinitely? Nobody except Englishmen, he declared, would tolerate the present ridiculous state of things. Birrell appealed to the opposition to help the government in solving this tremendous problem.

The amendment of Balfour to reject the bill was then formally submitted and a division taken. The vote was 258 to 368 against the opposition amendment.

The moment the figures were announced the Irish Nationalists sprang to their feet and began cheering vehemently and the Liberals joined them in the enthusiasm. The Unionists sat very glum and silent.

The division on the third and final reading was then taken and resulted in a vote of 367 to 257 in favor of the passage of the bill. The announcement of this vote was received with a renewed outburst of cheers.

Prime Minister Asquith, on returning to his seat after the second division, was accorded a great ovation. Cheers for the late Charles S. Parnell, John Redmond and the British democracy followed.

CASTRO STILL FIGHTING

Seeks Release Under Bond Pending Final Decision In His Case

New York, Jan. 17.—Another application for the release of Cipriano Castro under bond, pending final decision as to his right to enter the United States, was made before the federal district court.

The renewal of this motion was due to the fact that Castro's case is now before the department of commerce and labor on an appeal from the decision of the local immigration autorities ordering his deportation. Judge Holt reserved decision.

CLEMENCY IS EXPECTED

Brandt Is Being Given Hearing by Governor of New York

Albany, Jan. 17.—Folke E. Brandt, Mortimer L. Schiff's former valet, was brought from Clinton prison to be present today at a hearing to be given by Governor Sulzer on Brandt's application for clemency.

It is the general opinion that the governor will exercise clemency in Brandt's behalf and that he will not be returned to prison.

Wants Indian Bureau Probed

Washington, Jan. 17.—"There are things in the Indian bureau which should be investigated," declared Senator Townsend, during a sharp fight in the senate over his resolution to have the attorney general investigate the affairs of the Crow Indians. Action was deferred at the end of a long debate.

Paris, Jan. 17.—A President of France will be chosen today by the members of the chamber of deputies and the senate sitting together as the national assembly at Versailles.

The joint caucus to nominate a candidate for the presidency ended without giving an absolute majority to either Premier Poincare or Jules Pams, the minister of agriculture, and it is impossible to forecast today's result, although apparently the election lies between these two officials.

COLEMAN SIFTING JUGGLED ACCOUNTS

Embezzler Leaves Jail to Assist Bank Receiver

Boston, Jan. 17.—George W. Coleman, the convicted looter of the National City bank of Cambridge, is in Boston, explaining to the receiver of the wrecked bank his forgeries, false entries and methods of covering his thefts. Coleman is again at work on the books he manipulated as cashier of the bank.

Guarded by a deputy United States marshal, Coleman has left his cell in the Franklin county jail at Greenfield for at least ten days, and all of this time will be occupied in assisting the bank's receiver, John L. Bates, in preparing his suit against the directors of the bank. Bates has charged the directors with criminal neglect and the responsibility for all losses suffered by depositors of the defunct institution.

Step by step the former cashier is sifting out the accounts which he juggled during his efforts to secure money to "buck" the faro game with "Big Bill" Keliher.

TRUST FUNDS INVOLVED

Further Startling Developments In Bank Tangle at Gloucester

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 17.—Developments in the tangle of the affairs of the late William A. Pew and the City National bank give indications that one invalid widow's trust fund has been depleted to the extent of nearly $100,000; that a trust fund left to the Addison Gilbert hospital by Rev. J. J. Healey may show an alarming shrinkage because of the worthlessness of several blocks of shares the priest held in the bank, and several women will lose a major portion of their savings, which had been invested in the bank stock.

The shrinkage in the fund of $250,000 left by Healey to the hospital comes to the people of Gloucester with tremendous surprise because of the knowledge of the life-long friendship of the priest and the cashier.

CARS RUNNING IN YONKERS

Had Been Completely Tied Up by Strike Since Dec. 31

Yonkers, N. Y., Jan. 17.—For the first time this year street cars were run yesterday afternoon in the streets of Yonkers.

Pending arbitration the striking motormen and conductors of the Yonkers Street Railway company agreed to go back to work and the first car left the barns at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The employment of a "green" motorman precipitated the strike on Dec. 31. About 300 men had been out.

NO SIGN OF FOUL PLAY

But Investigation of Death of Woman In Trunk Is Ordered

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 17.—District Attorney Attwill requested the police of this city and Medical Examiner Hurd to probe to the bottom the death of Mrs. Charles Victorine, whose body was found in a trunk at the foot of her husband's bed.

Attwill requested the investigation to be continued on the ground of the strange manner of the death. Hurd reported that nothing he could find indicated foul play, and that Mrs. Victorine had died of asphyxiation.

The trunk, in which the body was found after she had been missing for two days, has a broken lock and the mystery is how the woman could have died had she made the slightest effort to open the lid.

Last night State Officer Wells interviewed the husband. He reported that he did not think there was any evidence of foul play. The police claim the woman crawled into the trunk and then pulled the lid with its broken lock down on top of her.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

The valley of Virginia comprised within that section of the Appalachian plateau bounded on the east by the Blue Ridge and on the west by a range of the Alleghenies called there the North mountains, stretches from the headwaters of the Shenandoah near Staunton on the south to the Potomac on the north, a distance of considerably more than a hundred miles. At the upper end this valley is more than forty miles wide, while at Strasburg, fifty miles south of the Potomac, the extreme width is scarcely twenty-five.

A good macadamized road, the famous Valley pike, traverses the entire region from north to south, with lateral roads extending to the mountain boundaries on either side, those toward the Blue Ridge connecting through various gaps with the railroads of eastern Virginia.

This beautiful and fertile region called for protection for its own sake as well as for that of its patriotic population (of which the Ellinghams were a fair sample), its numerous black slaves and the rich supplies which its lush meadow lands and broad plantations furnished.

It was especially important from a southern military viewpoint that the valley should be held intact by a Confederate army. No portion of the region could be given up without serious detriment to operations north of Richmond.

"If this valley is lost Virginia is lost," was Jackson's watchword.

Early in January, 1862, Captain Ellingham wrote to his sister in Richmond: "We have only conjecture as to our destination. General Jackson keeps his secrets so well as to deceive not only the enemy, but ourselves."

Without losing any time Jackson now set out with fiercer energy than ever to surprise the Federal garrison under General Kelly at Romney. The weather was fearful, even for ordinary travel, to say nothing of forced military movements. Men and horses fell on the icy roads, their guns going off all along the line, the knees and muzzles of the animals lacerated, the men limping along, leaving trails of blood on the frozen snow. The march was comparable to Napoleon's passage of the Alps and not alone in its hardships, but likewise in its results, for before the 1st of February General Kelly had evacuated Romney, and for the moment there was no Federal force left in the entire lower valley.

With the opening of spring four Federal armies under Fremont, Banks, McDowell and McClellan respectively were ready to close in upon Richmond. Fremont and Banks in the north and west expected to unite their forces and drive Jackson up the valley, cutting the Confederate communications and then sweeping down upon Richmond from the mountains, while McClellan marched up the peninsula between the James and York rivers, and McDowell advanced from Fredericksburg.

Early in March "Stonewall" Jackson was back in Winchester with Banks and an augmented Federal force at his heels on the north, and Shields with another army reported at Strasburg to the southward.

Here Bob Ellingham first made the acquaintance of Colonel Ashby, commanding Jackson's cavalry—a wondrous cavalier from Fauquier county, mounted on a milk white blooded horse, the most dashing rider in the whole state of Virginia, and as a leader of partisans destined soon to rank among the foremost of his contemporaries. Ashby looked like a Moor and had the chivalrous soul of a Saladin.

They struck Shields near Woodstock, some forty miles up the pike, and on March 23 attacked him, at Kernstown, and were repulsed. This was one of the few setbacks Jackson encountered in his campaign, and the furious impulse of his rebound that followed immediately after made it a costly victory for his opponent. A frenzy seized "Old Stonewall" and his men and made them invincible, irresistible. The limitless resources of the now thoroughly aroused Washington government were brought to bear in earnest upon this bold secessionist.

The whole valley was alive with marching and countermarching, advancing and retreating armies. Jackson's desperate game was to present a menacing front in several directions at once, while awaiting re-enforcements sorely needed. General Banks came over from Manassas, bent upon his destruction. At the same time Blenker, on his way with 10,000 men to join Fremont, was instructed to report to him as he followed Jackson up the valley. Jackson stood at bay at Swift Run gap in the Blue Ridge mountains, with the Shenandoah river in his front and his flanks protected by the foothills. Ewell, with a handy Confederate force, was not far away, but on the other side of the mountains in Jackson's rear, at Gordonsville.

In this tight place Jackson called upon General Lee at Richmond to reenforce him with 5,000 men. Lee could not spare any from the defense of Richmond, but suggested that a union might be effected with General Edward Johnson and his 3,500 troops at Staunton. Ewell was expected to move eastward against McDowell's Federal army at Fredericksburg. Meanwhile Banks, with his large force, was watching General Edward Johnson at Harrisonburg. The Federal Generals Milroy and Schenck had moved up west of the mountains, in front of Johnson, awaiting the arrival of Fremont from the north.

It was now the end of April, and "Stonewall" Jackson started in to do the theoretically impossible. Evading Banks and Harrisonburg, he moved with incredible swiftness to Staunton, joined his force with Johnson's and defeated Milroy and Schenck at one fell blow. This great advantage had to be followed up, so Ewell marched over into the valley from Gordonsville, compelling Banks to fall back to Strasburg. Having disposed of the two Federal commanders, Jackson, with Ewell, now hotfooted it to Front Royal, where the north and south forks of the Shenandoah river unite, at the northern end of the Massanutton ridge.

CHAPTER V.

Grand Old Jack.

THE stunning successes of Jackson at Front Royal and subsequently at Cross Keys and Port Republic, on the Shenandoah, were achieved by a startling series of maneuvers, little understood by the world at the time, save that in a general way they meant that he "held one commander at arm's length while he hammered the other."

"I have seen grand Old Jack rattled, for once," Captain Ellingham wrote his sister from Front Royal. "We were opposite Port Republic and the general, with a part of his staff, had crossed over the bridge into the town when the enemy appeared in force, with the evident design of attacking the town, destroying the bridge over the Shenandoah and thus cutting off our army and getting in our rear. Jackson sent some hurried orders to Taliaferro and Winder for the defense of the bridge, but before these could be executed the advance Federal batteries had opened fire and their cavalry, crossing the South river, had swept into the town and taken position at the southern entrance to the bridge.

"You see, the general had not recrossed the river and so he was completely cut off, and we didn't know it. They do say he met the emergency with the most audacious display of nerve and presence of mind that you ever heard of—actually rode toward the bridge and, rising in his stirrups, called out to the Federal officer commanding the artillery: 'Who ordered you to post that gun there, sir? Bring it over here.' It fooled them long enough to enable Jackson to put spurs to his horse and dash on to the bridge at full gallop.

"Three hasty shots followed him, but they flew harmlessly over his head, and he reached our quarters on the northern bank in safety. And was he rattled? Well, at the moment of the scare I saw young Bob Lee (youngest son of General Lee, you know, who is only fifteen and left the university to join the "Stonewall" brigade as a private) going down to the bank of the stream to fetch up some water. He had the big camp kettle slung over his shoulder, and I suppose the general in his excitement thought it was a drum, for as he flew past he shouted out to Bob:

"'Hi, there, drummer, beat the long roll!'

"That was a close shave, dear Sis. But I believe—and so do we all—that our 'Stonewall' Jackson lives a charmed life while he has this job of clearing the valley to perform, and nothing can stop him. Do you know what the Yanks call him? The 'ubiquitous Presbyterian.' It seems like a wild dream, as I look back upon what has happened since you and I parted at Richmond. Our great commander, whom we were rather inclined to poke fun at in the beginning and whose recklessness many distrusted a long while after that, has bowled over the Federal commanders as fast as they could be hurled against him—Banks, Fremont, Shields, Milroy, with subordinates like Blenker, Sigel, Steinwehr and other able soldiers defeated and the whole upper valley regained.

"Why, think of it—in three months he—may I say we?—have marched, I suppose, 600 miles, fought four pitched battles and seven minor engagements, to say nothing of the regular daily skirmishes. And we have defeated four armies, captured seven pieces of artillery, 10,000 stand of arms, 4,000 prisoners and any amount of stores, besides fabulous sums (as I hear) of cash money.

"What our adversaries' losses in killed and wounded foot up I don't know, but they could not have been small. Ours were less comparatively; but, oh, Gertrude, we have lost our Ashby. He fell in a moment of triumph, and his last words were, 'Virginians, charge!' I am sure his name will always be remembered and honored by the people of Virginia.

"He was not a Presbyterian, like Old Jack, but he was devout and childlike in his religious faith and a regular attendant at the services of the Episcopal church, which was the church of his ancestors. He may have kept himself a bit aloof from the vulgar camp fun or moments of abandonment, though no man was more frank and gay on the march or in bivouac.

"Is it worth these sacrifices? Gertrude, in spite of all our successes I wish this nightmare of civil war were over and well over. But who can tell now when we shall be out of the woods?"

Washington, remembering Bull Run, had nervous prostration whenever "Stonewall" Jackson was reported in action anywhere within a hundred miles of the Potomac. For this reason it is probably historic truth to say that "Stonewall" Jackson saved Richmond to the Confederates in 1862—in the first place by diverting McDowell's army to the valley, in the second place by marching fresh from his own victories in that same valley to join Lee in the seven days' battle around the Confederate capital.

Can't Stop Wife Beating Husband

New York, Jan. 17.—In deadly fear of his wife, Adolph Brown applied for an injunction to prevent her beating him. The judge held that legally it could not be done.

Ban on "Dime Novel" Literature

Berlin, Jan. 17.—The municipal government has undertaken to suppress all the trashy literature of the "dime novel" order, together with French romances.

JESKA SWARTZ AND HUSBAND SEPARATE

Lived Together But Three Days Since Their Marriage

Boston, Jan. 17.—Jeska Swartz, the mezzo soprano of the Boston Opera company, whose elopement and romantic marriage to Arthur Wilson, a Boston newspaper man and musical critic, electrified operatic and musical circles a few mopths ago, separated from her husband after three days of wedded life together and both parties admit that the separation is final.

Wilson is living in the suite in Hemenway street, which he fitted up as their future home, and Mrs. Wilson, since her return from the transcontinental tour with Alice Neilson, has lived at the Hotel Lenox with her sister.

TWENTY PERSONS HURT

Pullman Car Jumps Rails and Is Sideswiped by Freight

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 17.—Eight persons were seriously injured and twelve others suffered minor hurts last night when a Pullman car of a passenger train, bound from Boston for Albany, jumped a switch at Charlton depot and was sideswiped by an east-bound freight.

The wrecked Pullman car was uncoupled and the train was rushed to this city, where the injured were taken to a hospital. J. N. Milton, a porter, suffered from a fractured skull and the hospital authorities said he was probably fatally injured.

MYLIUS IS TURNED AWAY

Declared by Secretary Nagel to Be an Undesirable Immigrant

Washington, Jan. 17.—Edward F. Mylius, the journalist convicted in London of libelling King George V., for which he paid a penalty of ten months in prison, was ordered turned away from the United States by Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel as an undesirable immigrant within the meaning of American immigration laws.

Nagel held that Mylius' offense was a crime involving moral turpitude, which barred his admission to the shores of this country.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

LAND COURT.

To B. Elizabeth Reid, of Cambridge, in the County of Middlesex, and said Commonwealth; W. F. Macy, of Medford, in said County of Middlesex, Joseph Derocher, Jr., of Newton, in said County of Middlesex; Gertrude E. Phillips, of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth, and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Thomas B McKeagney, of Boston, in the County of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth to register and confirm his title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Quincy, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point two hundred and seventy-six (276) feet easterly from a stone bound near the cottage named "Mignonette," on the northerly side of Babcock street thence running northerly at right angles to Babcock street along the boundary line of land now or formerly of Gertrude E. Phillips, two hundred (200) feet to Manet avenue; then continuing northerly across Manet avenue along the boundary line of land now or formerly of W. F. Macy, one hundred and seventy (170) feet more or less to low water mark in Quincy Bay, thence running easterly along Quincy Bay fifty (50) feet more or less to land now or formerly of W. F. Macy; thence turning and running southerly along land of said W. F Macy one hundred thirty (130) feet more or less to the southerly line of Manet avenue, then continuing and running southerly along the boundary line of land now or formerly of Charles E. Matthaurs et al and land now or formerly of Charles E. Matthaurs, two hundred (200) feet more to Babcock street, then turning at right angles and running westerly fifty (50) feet to the point of beginning.

Petitioner admits that the above described land is subject to the rights of the public to pass and repass over that portion of the above described land shown on plan filed with said petition as Manet avenue, and over that portion of said land between Manet Avenue and low water mark of Quincy Bay; and subject also to the further restrictions that no structure shall be placed on said land between Manet avenue and low water mark of Quincy Bay, which shall obstruct the view.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the tenth day of February A. D. 1913, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fifteenth day of January in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

CLARENCE C. SMITH,
Recorder.

BRIEFS

James L. McDonnell, assistant clerk at the district court is being showered with congraulations on the birth of a nine pound daughter which arrived at his home early Thursday morning.

Commissioner of Public Works Frederick E. Tupper who has been in New York this week attending the convention of the Civil Engineers association is expected to arrive home tonight.

There has been a great rush at City Hall for the past few days to pay water bills. Under the rules of the department if bills are not paid within a certain time water is liable to be shut off. Shut off notices will be sent out to delinquents this week.

There have been many enquiries as to whether there would be a parade today of the charges and combatants who take part in the contest of Knights tonight at the Twelfth Night Revels. Although groups of people gathered in City square they were not rewarded by a glimpse of the noble steeds or the armored knights. Evidently one has to attend to enjoy all the wonders of the Revels.

NOTICE

The annual meeting of the Corporators of the City Hospital of Quincy will be held at Union Hall (corner of Hancock and Cottage Streets) on Monday evening, January 20, 1913 at 8 o'clock, for the election of officers for the ensuing year and the transaction of any other business that many come before them.

WARREN W. ADAMS, Clerk.
8-11t

GRANITE TRUST COMPANY.

Quincy, Mass., Jan. 13, 1913.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Granite Trust Company of Quincy, Mass., will be held on Tuesday, January 21st, 1913 at its Banking Rooms, 1374 Hancock street, Quincy, Mass., at 4 o'clock P. M. for the election of Directors and the transaction of any other business that may legally come before them.

R. F. CLAFLIN,
Treasurer.

BRIEFS

Friends of Mrs. Mary Nichols will be glad to know that she is convalescing.

"The Bible as Literature" is to be the subject of Dr. Richard Burton's lecture tonight at the Quincy Mansion school.

Charles E. Cherrington has returned to his home on Clive street, having been on a short business trip to Philadelphia.

Charles H. Johnson is to give his illustrated lecture on George Washington, at the Quincy Mansion school, Friday evening, Jan. 24.

Mr. Brown is building a two-flat house on East Squantum street and the foundation is laid for a similar structure on Ocean street.

A strong smell of paint has penetrated every nook and corner of City Hall. The cause is that Jim Lally and his crew of men are applying a new coat of paint to all of the offices.

Perhaps after the present storm passes some real winter weather may be handed out by the weather department. The mild damp weather this week has resulted in much sickness.

Mrs. James H. Stetson who was to have a prominent part in the Twelfth Night Revels tonight will be missed as she is still confined to her room, convalescing from ptomaine poisoning.

A daughter was born Thursday to Mr . and Mrs. Rodney Dean of New York, N. Y. Mrs. Dean will be remembered as Louise J. Randall, daughter of Mrs. John C. Randall of Dedham, formerly of Adams street this city.

The night for the Twelfth Night Revels has arrived. Many well known society people will appear on the floor in costume, and more will watch the gay scene and frolic from the gallery. The program includes a good procession, coronation of king and queen, speeches, feasting, dancing, etc. The court jester will also be there.

CURLEY GOT THE FOUR FOOTER

Acknowledged Receipt of Protest of Immigration Bill

SENT BY QUINCY HEBREWS

Congressman James M. Curley, leader of the opposition to the proposed Burnett-Dillingham bill which purports to restrict immigration by forcing immigrants to pass a literary test, which bill has ben opposed by many organizations composed of foreigners and of descendants of foreigners, has acknowledged the receipt of the four foot protest from the Quincy Young Men's Hebrew Association which was circulated through the efforts of Joseph B. Grossman. Mr. Grossman is in receipt of the following letter:

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14, 1913.

Mr. Joseph B. Grossman,
Quincy, Mass.

Dear Sir: I am very grateful for the splendid support that has been given the ill-advised immigration bill by the Young Men's Hebrew Association of Quincy, and I trust you will extend your association my sincere appreciation of their kind service.

In my office I have on hand about 1500 petitions of approximately 200,000 signatures from Hebrew, Polish, Italian and German societies which are to be presented by me to President Taft, the voice of mutual note of remonstrance.

I now feel sanguine that President Taft will veto the measure.

With assurance of my regard and every good and sincere wish for the welfare of your association,

Faithfully yours
James M. Curley, Congressman.

A similar letter has been received from Representative Michael T. Sullivan, stating that he will do all he can to oppose the bill and support any state measure of protest.

LOOKS LIKE SOME FAST WORK

At the Y. M. C. A. Basket Ball Contests

BRICKLEY TO PLAY

The local Y. M. C. A., will have two good teams opposed to them Saturday night when the first team meets the strong Everett Independents and the second team line up against the Chelsea Y. M. C. A., first team.

The Everett team is composed of former Everett and Melrose High school stars, and a hard game is looked for. George Brickley, a brother of the famous Harvard football man, plays left forward, and the experts say that he is a far better man than the famous brother Charlie. Brickley is over 6 feet tall and weighs almost 200 pounds and whoever has him for an opponent in Saturday night's contest, is scheduled for some hard work. Bond, right forward, Brock right back and Menzie are also old Everett players, who have made names for themselves in foot ball, base ball, and athletics. Brock also played on the Melrose High school basket ball team four years ago when they won the State championship, Guy Bishop and R. Smith are two Melrose High school players who are doing good work.

The second team plays against Chelsea Y. M. C. A., first. Chelsea was supposed to have entered a team in the Y. M. C. A. league, but at the last moment, it was thought best to withdraw the team. This team which plays here is practically the team which would have played in the league, they have won four games so far this season and have lost none. Game at 8.15 o'clock.

DISTRICT COURT.

Charles L. Hanifer was arraigned on two complaints as a fugitive from justice at Quincy. He pleaded not guilty. He told the court that he did not desire a hearing here but was willing to accompany an officer back to Richmond, Va. He was then held in $1,000 until Wednesday.

Munroe Pafford was charged with abduction of Mary D. Lapennia from home. After hearing the evidence the court found the defendant not guilty and ordered his discharge.

John M. Curtis was arraigned for assault at Cohasset. Case continued on probation until Jan. 22.

ABDUCTION NOT SUSTAINED

Munroe Paffard Found Not Guilty of Serious Complaint

DISCHARGED BY COURT

Munroe Paffard who was arrested Thursday noon on the charge of abduction at Quincy, of Mary D. Lapennia, was given a hearing this morning in the district court. The court found the evidence against him not sufficient to warant his being held and he was discharged.

The girl was not present and it is claimed her whereabouts is not known. The mother of the girl testified that Paffard had ben paying attention to her daughter. That she left home on Dec. 16, and she had not seen her since. When her daughter went away she took some of her clothing with her also $3 which she took from a bureau drawer. She had been told that her daughter had met the defendant the day she went away.

Mrs. Mary Whitmarsh a neighbor and with whom the defendant boarded testified as to conversations between the defendant and the girl in her presence. She said that the defendant had urged the girl to run away from home and that he had stated he could hide her in Boston where she never could be found. On the day the girl went away the defendant had met her at the corner of Pearl and Liberty streets.

A few days after the defendant came back and said he knew nothing of the girl's whereabouts. That he had loaned her a diamond ring valued at $79 and that he had come out after it.

Chief of police Hunt of Braintree said that he had learned that the girl was on probation from a Boston court but he did not know which.

The court then said that there was no evidence upon which to hold the man and he was discharged.

FORGERY THE COMPLAINT

On Which Henifer Was Arrested For Richmond Police

GOT AWAY WITH CHECKS

Charles L. Hanifer, aged 23 years, an employee at the Fore River ship plant was arrested at the yard Thursday afternoon for the Richmond, Va., police who want him for alleged forgery of two checks aggregating $91.

The arrest was made by Chief Burrell and Officer Farrell of the Quincy police and Detective Collins of a Boston detective agency with the assistance of Chief William McLaughlin of the Fore River police. According to the police Hanifer has been in Quincy since early October and boarded at 19 Cherry street. He agreed to return to Richmond without extradition papers.

He was taken to the Quincy police station and locked up pending the arrival of officers from Richmond. Chief Burrell received a telephone from Chief Werner of the Richmond police later in the evening stating that officers would be sent for the man and that they would leave that night.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION.

Little Bessie Grocott, assisted by about twenty of her little friends, celebrated her fifth birthday, Saturday afternoon in a most enjoyable manner at her home on Ocean street. Judging from the laughter and sounds which prevailed, they all had a very pleasant time.

Games were played and refreshments, consisting of ice cream and cake were served. Each child received a favor before departure for home.

Among those who participated in the festivities were: Marion Marden, Dorothy Jarger, Mildred Gallagher and Marion Grocott, all of Dorchester; Mildred, Elizabeth and Lucy Morris of Wollaston; Dolly, Myrtle and Roger Ellis of Norfolk Downs; Margaret Sweeney of Atlantic boulevard; Florence Gynn of Atlantic street; Bethan and Frank Leavitt of Ocean street; Hilda and Carlton Spear, also Carl Rounds all of Conant road, and the youngest of all, "Brother" Grocott of Ocean street.

BOWLING

All classes of bowling were represented at the Coliseum alleys Thursday evening. The big match was the long expected contest between two of Weymouths and Quincys best men. Kiley who was scheduled to roll was not present and the team consisted of Herbert Smith and M. Connell. They beat George Grant and George Bliss by 208 pins. The only string of the ten that went to Quincy was the eighth which they copped by 18 pins.

Smith showed the best of form, six strings going over the century figure. Connell however made the high single of 122. Smith's total was 1006 and Connell made 984. Bliss was able to roll but 897 and Grant made 885. It was expected that the losers would put up a better fight.

The Manet Club beat the Bachelor Club and split with the Waseco Club. In the two matches, Wentworth was high man with a single of 113 and total of 279. This is the first club to undertake to roll two matches in one evening.

In the Foresters league Court Roger Wolcott beat Court John Adams, 4 to 0. Clislaghi was high man with 111 single and 287 for three string total.

A picked team from the Fore River was defeated by a picket team from the Tubular Rivet & Stud Co., 3 to 1. The match was the best of the evening in all departments. Gill with 121, was high man. His total was 317, the best total of the week on the alleys.

QUINCY EASILY TURNED TABLES

One Point Behind at End of First Period--No Handicap

SECOND IN RUNAWAY

The Greater Boston basket ball league opened its season at St. Mary's hall, Thursday evening and the Quincy A. A., first and second teams who won the championship of last years league made a flying start by defeating the North Dorchesters. The first team won 25 to 11 and the second by 50 to 6.

The lineup of both teams was practically the same as the champ teams. A large gallery welcomed the players and as they trotted onto the floor to warm up they were given a finehand. Singling out individual players the crowd yelled themselves hoarse as they cheered the fellows who made the championship possible.

In connection with this honor, it was announced that Secretary George Hepburn of New York of A. A. A. U. basket ball commission, is to have the basket ball centres vote on where the national championship match will be held. Both local teams are eligible and from the style of game put up Thursday evening, without any real preparation or training other than good habits to stand in back of them, they performed in snappy, top line style and would figure in the deciding game without a doubt.

The game had more local attraction than any scheduled because Powell of Cunningham Gym and Leary of the same place are on the North Dorchester lineup. It so happens that both belong to the N. D's. Both are good men, but Powell, because of the manner in which Kelley covered him, was prevented from getting an opportunity to even set himself to shoot, and it was a marvellous piece of work on the part of "Put," who by the way is some all round athlete.

The game commenced with the prospects bright for the visitors. The first half ended 9 to 8, in their favor. Dan Duggan did not do any scoring in this period because they laid for him, knowing his calibre. In the last period, with everybody displaying a dash spirit, and through the passing of the team, both Duggans were able to roll up the score for Quincy to win.

In the second period O'Rourke shot a basket from the extreme corner on a line with the netting and Dan slipped a clever basket from the centre of the floor. Sid came across with one of West Quincys famous one hand shots which was up to the requirements. Hebert was in the game on the offense and defense and Boyle bounced around effectively as ever. The combination is going to go to move some before March 1st.

But little can be said of the second team game. With no defense to overcome, and no attacking spirit of dangerous nature shown by the North Dorchester seconds, the game was nothing more than a practice game for the winners. Bill Manning shot 10 baskets and was mad clear through because he didn't get more. His flash of old style was unexepected and his eye is as sharp as ever. Bute Chapman, without a doubt the makings of one of the best basket ball players in the process of development shot six baskets.

Scollard, a nephew of Ex-Mayor Shea, and one of Braintree's coming athletic wonders, held the centre position. He plays this game as well as he does base ball, has the style of a crackerjack, and is fortunate in appearing in as fast a lineup as that of the Quincy A. A. second.

Frank Harmon, is as usual, a passer and one who knows how to do it. He made a pretty basket. Mil Chapman with two nets to his credit, was in the game. Both he and Harmon were fine on defense and kept the ball out of their territory.

POEHLER AND CHRISTOPHER

Matched For 20 Strings For Purse of $500

Paul Poehler and John Christopher, acknowledged to be two of the best candlepin bowlers in the world, will soon come together in a 20-string contest to determine, once and for all time, the mooted question of superiority. The man who wins, will not be questioned when he claims the honor of candlepin champion, special match style.

For some time the pair have been arguing and their followers have almost come to blows over the question of superiority. Thursday night the preliminaries were arranged and on next Wednesday evening Christopher and Poehler will meet in Boston at 6 p. m. when final articles will be signed.

The pair will go 20 strings, divided into two sessions of 10 strings each, for a purse of $500 which will be put up next Wednesday night. Ten of the strings undoubtedly will be rolled in Boston, but just where the others will come off will not be determined until next week. The rules of the National Duck and Candlepin Bowling Congress will govern the competition.

It is doubtful if there is any alley established in this vicinity large enough to accommodate the crowd that will watch the pair. Both are veterans at the match style and are cool under fire. Poehler is, perhaps the steadier of the two, but Christopher is a fighter and no matter what the odds are against him he battles every minute and never lets up until the last ball is rolled.

When it comes to floor space the Coliseum alley could provide accommodations for a bigger gallery than any alleys in Boston. With a proper arrangement and adjustment of seats with the idea of getting the best possible results both from spectators and management point of view, if all the strings were rolled at the Coliseum alleys arrangements could possibly be made to accommodate a large party.

Undoubtedly Quincy fans would like to see one of the matches pulled off in this city and as the accommodations are equal to any of the Boston alleys if not a bit better and able to seat a larger crowd, every one would be better satisfied at seeing them rolled here.

GYM GIRLS vs. NEEDHAM FIVE

Fast Game Scheduled for Tuesday Night at St. Mary's Hall

On Tuesday evening at St. Mary's hall the Quincy Gym Girls will play Needham Y. P. A. basket ball team. Quincy has been playing fine basket ball. Most of last year's players are showing a more advanced style of game, and although they were able to be classed with the fastest girls' quintettes in the state when the season closed, this year they are displaying a style which will undoubtedly place them again in the top place. A fact, which has been verified from reliable sources of information discloses that in all cases where Quincy is to be the opponents, special coaching and practice is generally indulged in. Dancing will follow the game.

—Washington's Birthday and Patriots' Day will both come on Saturday this year, but all the other holidays will give the school children—and the teachers—a vacation.

Wollaston Foundry Association Doing Splendid Work Among Its Members. 11 Years

History of the Foundry Industry By a Veteran Most Interesting

The annual session of the Wollaston Foundry Relief Association was held Thursday evening in Poland hall, when officers were elected for the year, Cornelius M. Duggan , being elected president. Much important business was also transacted, including action on reports of various officers.

The auditor's report showed a disbursement of over $2,500 paid in sick benefits, since the institution of the society, with a cash balance on hand of $250.

The following officers were elected for ensuing year:

President—Cornelius M. Duggan.
Vice president—Henry W. Sprague.
Recording secretary—George H. Broadbent.
Financial secretary—William A. Beattie.
Treasurer—John Golden.

After the business a social hour was enjoyed and a light luncheon served, many members contributing to the program, under the direction of Daniel A. Golden chairman of the entertainment committee.

Cornelius M. Duggan, feelingly read one of his poems, treating of his long connection with the concern, entitled "Thirty Years in a Foundry."

INSIDE HISTORY.

Wollaston Iron Foundry holds an important place among the various industries of Ward Six. It is almost 40 years since the plant was erected and operated by Annis A. Lincoln, a prominent and respected citizen of Wollaston, recently deceased. Mr. Lincoln came from a family who were closely identified with the foundry business in its pioneer stages

Royal Rooters and Loyal Subjects Javelled Him With Javelins and Bowled Him Over with Fowl Tips

Twelfth Night Revels One Boundless Ocean of Mirth, Revelry and Riot of Color With Artistic Setting

"If music be the food of love, play on,
Give me excess of it;"

Thus says the Duke in the opening lines of Shakespeare's Twelfth night and had his Lordship been present at Alpha hall Friday night he would have had his fill of music and frivolity.

It was the third annual Twelfth Night given under the auspices of the Art committee of the Quincy Women's club. The affair was in direct charge of Mrs. H. H. Kitson and Mrs. John D. Mackay assisted by Miss Georgianna C. Lane, Mrs. William E. Doble and Delcevare King.

While the two previous affairs measured success, that of Friday night was even more so. The attendance was very large something like 125 couples being in costume in the grand procession of the populace which opened the festivities.

Without doubt the revels may be called the most unique and entertaining event of Quincy's social season. It is a pageant, vaudeville and festive dance all in one, where the spirit of carnival reigned supreme. Everybody seemed imbued with the spirit of the occasion and out for a good time and they evidently had it.

The hall itself was very prettily decorated for the occasion. About the sides and end were pine boughs which served to heighten the effect of the throne which was set up on the platform. The throne itself was a gorgeous affair of crimson, and the King and Queen surrounded by a score of court ladies made a pretty scene to look at.

It was but a few minutes past the hour of 8 when the sound of the bugle and the cry of the Beadle summoned the revelers into line for the procession of the populace. They more than circled the hall twice, making a scene that is almost indescribe. Pool's orchestra furnished the music for the march and the dance that followed. At the conclusion of the procession, the Beadle read the proclamation. This was original with Mr. King and as usual was full of spirit. The reading was accomplished with some difficulty as every sentence was greeted with deafening shouts of the populace. He managed however to make them understand that the great cake was about to be brought on and the persons who found the ring of red gold and the Boston bean were to be crowned King and Queen.

The massive cake borne on a table by Bruce Saville and John Kitson appeared and the Beadle promptly cut the cake and all were bidden to come forward and partake. One bold reveler sought to steal a march by claiming that he had found the bean but his act was promptly discovered and he was placed under arrest to be later brought before the King for sentence.

The coverted trophies fell to Col. Edward Anderson and Mrs. Dexter E. Wadsworth and they were promptly proclaimed King and Queen. They came forward arrayed in gorgeous robes and were promptly crowned by the Cardinal, Carroll Bill.

The coronation procession was a very pretty affair. First came two acolytes bearing their candles aloft. The crown bearers, with the crowns resting on a velvet cushion. The cardinal guarded by four banner bearers in white with coats of arms on their breasts, The King and Queen with pages, train bearers and more acolytes.

The crown bearers were Richard Blackmur and Robert Davis. The train bearers, Fred Atwood and Norbit McAnareney and the acolytes, banner bearers and pages were, Walter Nichols, Todd Elwell, Osborne Rogers, Fred Schenkelberger, Richard Crane, William Westland, Chester Bennett and Abbott Johnson, Knights, John Simmons and Fred Thayer.

The King and Queen escorted to the throne and were proclaimed to the populace by the Cardinal.

There were cries for a speech from the throne and Col. Anderson responded in his usual happy strain addressing them as his loyal and disloyal subjects, and urged them to enter into the spirit of the occasion.

One of the first acts of the King was to deal with the culprit who stole the bean.

The sentence was that the culprit should walk the streets of Boston, visit Faneuil hall and the Meeting house and learn beans.

This unpleasant duty over the Beadle announced a vaudeville program for the entertainment of the King and Queen. This opened with a song by the double quartette from the High school under the direction of Miss Emma Perkins, supervisor of music. The double quartette were Tenors, Richard Larkin, Elton Chase, Lawrence Martin and Carnelius Fuller, Bass, Raymond Cassidy, Alvah Innis, Clifton Young and William Westland. They wore tennis suits and straw hats.

Then came the Minuet which was danced by Misses Helen Richards, Dorothy Stevens, Theodosia Park, Gertrude Lacy, Irvin Page, Horton Page, Edmund Taylor and Stanley Cummings under the direction of Miss Lacy and was a very pretty number.

The Wandering Minstrel, Emery L. Crane, gave a recitation closing with a topical selection containing a number of local hits which the populace were not slow to apprehend and applaud.

The Jolly Warblers, included, John McLeod, William P. Thompson, George E. Pfaffmann, Paul R. Blackmur, Paul Blackmur, John Pfaffmann, Ira M. Whittemore, Herbert Kearns, Walter Rogers and William Weston, gave several choruses with solos by John McLeod , J. E. Green, William P. Thompson and Herbert Kearns. A feature of this number was the fancy dancing of Mr. Pfaffmann who received a well deserved encore.

Miss Grace and Jesse McDonald in Highland costume, gave an exhibition of fancy dancing accompanied by their father A. D. McDonald on the bag pipes.

A whistling solo by Mrs. J. J. Crain, was one of the features of the program and responded to an encore.

The last feature on the program was a battle royal between two mounted Knights, John Simmons and Fred Thayer. The Knights rode two lively hobby horses and made a decided hit. Eventually one of the Knights received a death thrust and down he went and lay stiff in his armor. Some even thought that he had been injured and there was a call for a Doctor and one was soon on the spot. The way the cow boys and devils gathered about and dragged him from the floor however soon quieted all fears. It was a most dramatic close to the number.

Another call was made for the Highland Lassies and Miss Jesse McDonald gave another number.

Sheets were distributed and everybody united in singing the choruses of such familiar airs as "Put on your old gray bonnet," "Beautiful Doll," "Take a little tip from father," "I want to be," "By the light of the Jungle moon," etc.

General dancing was in order until 11 o'clock when a procession was again formed for a march to Union hall for refreshments. This hall was also decorated with pine boughs resembling a grove. In the centre was a long table upon which were great piles of doughnuts, crackers and cheese and a barrel of cider.

Lunch over dancing was again resumed until midnight. Just before closing however there came the confetti dance which of course was the occasion for renewed hilarity.

Among the many present and the characters impersonated were the following:—

UNION MEETING OF MEN'S CLUBS DECIDE ON CITY WIDE FEDERATION

300 Men From All Sections of City Listen to Talk On City Planning

Committee Selected to Nominate Officers and Prepare By-Laws

At a union meeting in the Wollaston Grammar school hall Friday evening attended by 300 men representing the men's clubs and improvement associations of Quincy it was unanimously voted to form a federation of men's clubs and improvement associations.

George Brewster Gallup, president of the American Federation of Men's clubs and a member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and His Honor Mayor Eugene R. Stone, spoke.

William A. Mann, chairman of the movement and president of the Wollaston Congregational club, presided. The Wollaston Glee club under director J. A. Crowley rendered several selections which were enthusiastically received.

George Brewster Gallup, member of city planning committee of Boston, spoke on "What co-operation can do along the lines of city wide improvements."

He said in part:

"I am glad to come to Quincy and find you have so many new ideas. This is true or you would never be meeting in a cosmopolitan group in a school hall.

"I believe the school house will be

MYSTEROUS EXPLOSIONS SHOOK THE EARTH FOR MILES AROUND

Windows Rattled, Houses Rocked and People Trembled With Apprehension

Fire Alarm Sounded to Add to the Prevailing Excitement

What was supposed to have been a series of heavy explosion Friday night was accepted this morning as an earthquake shock. The first rumble was at 6.05 and the second at 6.10. Windows rattled and a slight tremble alarmed people in different parts of the city. The seat of the disturbance seemed to be in the southwest.

Telephone inquiries were sent out to surrounding cities and towns and it was reported as far as Brockton that the force of the disturbance had been felt.

Many thought that some powder house or fire works factory had blown up but nothing definite along that line was determined. Just after the second shock box 42 was sounded. The box is situated in the stone district, Granite street, and many started for the fire.

In responding, combination 1, three horse hitch, driven by John Faircloth smashed into an express wagon of Bruce & Warner that was standing unattended near Water and Quincy street. The wagon carried no lights and the place was dark. One of the horses, Mose, struck the wagon and a smashed whiffletree turned and ripped the night flank. A number of firemen were shaken up.

Driver Faircloth left his seat, stood talking to his horses while the other apparatus passed and then gave the horse his attention. Bleeding freely, and trembling from fright, the horse was hard to manage but the return to the central station was uneventful.

Dr. Abele was summoned and took seven stitches in the wound. The horse is known as Mose and is valuable. He was also cut over the eye.

The fire was in the house of the Misses Ellen and Frances Sullivan and was extinguished before the apparatus arrived.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Neither the ice man nor the coal man are deriving much pleasure from this kind of weather, while the householder is able to keep warm in anticipation of the ice prices next summer.

And now comes a Pittsburg man who declares Sarah Bernhardt was born in this country. Rather a smoky accusation.

Even if the House of Lords reject the Home rule bill, the Commons can in two years pass it over that veto by two votes. But if the government should be dissolved in the meantime there is another chance of delay and possible upset.

The poor little traveller in the Boston Globe is having harder lines than the wandering Jew.

It must be mighty cheerful reading for the base ball fans to wade through a batch of letters from the base ball players, about all of which commence: "I am taking things easy, right here at home, resting up for five months for the season to open." While the poor boob fan has to dig around the whole twelve months to help provide this ease and luxury.

There are plenty of people besides the war department who would like to get some one's goat.

President-elect Wilson has put in an oar for the abolition of the usual jam commonly called the inaugural ball. As a dancing proposition the function has never been up to the standard and even as a promenade it had its drawbacks.

Matthew Hale says Mr. Bird will again be the Progressive candidate for governor. Have the much tooted plain people no word in the selection of the candidate?

Now that Jerry Watson is on the top of the heap so to speak those who formerly derided hom are doing an American marathon to sound his numerous virtues.

That boxing Kangaroo has some kick to him when he launches out both hind flippers.

Dr. Woods Hutchinson advices people to eat what they like. But how about the fellow with the beer salary and champagne appetite and the other fellow with a stomach as delicate as tissue paper.

There were some thrills at the sound of box 42 again last night, but they were soon calmed by the all out signal.

The Turkey Trot and the other monstrosities are said to be all right if properly danced, but who injected the undesirable or the key in the Turkey trot?

The suffragette parade at the inauguration will be on hand foot and horse. It might be unkind to inquire what would happen if an army of mice was let loose about the same time.

One vaudeville performer gave a nerve racking desription of what might happen if a lady president should be elected to the White house.

The Revels were compounded with revelry all right.

THE LIMIT OF TRUST.

Mr. Jacob Schiff, the New York banker gave some interesting side lights on banking, banking laws and things pertaining to those enterprises before the Pujo committee. Mr. Schiff is credited with saying he would trust man but not corporation. It is somewhat difficult to draw the line as to where he would place the limit. Men and individuals combining form corporations. Corporations are inanamate except as they follow the will of the men or individuals who direct them. Then why should it be more desirable to trust the man or men, individually than the corporation which those men direct? It might be inferred that he meant to convey the oft repeated expression that "Corporations have no soul." But as directors of those corporations there are the men who form, create and are part and parcel of it. If the men banded as corporations are open to distrust, wherein should the same men as individuals be susceptible to a greater degree of trust or confidence? Mr. Schiff, like the other financiers told the committee just as much or as little as he pleased. So far as getting any great degree of enlightment, much beyond what apparently every one knew before the investigation started, there seems to be some ground for doubt.

ICE PROSPECT POOR.

The prospect of an ice crop this year grows beautifully less as the winter advances. Here is January more than half gone and Jack Frost has shown no decided inclination to clinch matter to the satisfaction of the ice man. The continued mild weather has no doubt made it easier for poor people, because the demand for fuel has not been so great as if an intense cold spell had prevailed. But while congratulating themselves upon the saving in coal, there is still a cold chill prevailing, paradoxical as it may seem, when the warm wave of the coming summer months is anticipated and the price of ice goes soaring upwards. Visions of that situation loom up and will not be downed despite the plentitude of comfort over the mild winter which prevails at the present time.

It is seldom that an ice crop is harvested so late in the season. Of course there have been exceptions, but the sun is getting higher every day and every mild day that passes deepens the gloom over the ice prospect. That there has been severe weather, the past few weeks, is evidenced by the terrific storms which have swept the Atlantic ocean and created abnormal wreckage and great loss of life.

In this more than in any other winter of the past few years the storm zone has appeared to follow the course of the Gulf stream. All up and down the Atlantic ocean, the weather has been most disheartening. And the tempest of winds and waves have lashed the England, Ireland, Scotland and the western shores of Europe. Mid Atlantic, the northern lanes traversed by the liners and freighters have been beset by storms of great magnitude and huge ships have been tossed like corks upon the mountainous billows. Is it that the seasons are gradually changing, and that we of the northeastern part of the North Atlantic continent are getting calmer winters and less heat throbbing summers? From the manner in which the elements have conducted themselves it would seem as if this might be true. It is much in evidence that while there have been land storms along the New England coast the past few winters the continued inclemency of weather and protracted cold spells have not been the rule and on the other hand while there have been periods of excessive heat in summer, those have not been so extended as in past years.

It may be a change. The change is welcomed by many people but like everything else, there are some people who can never be satisfied and this class would be fault finding even if the weather conditions the year round were of the most ideal character. But that has got nothing to do with the ice box next summer and while we may be hugging ourselves over the saving in the coal bin this winter the thoughts of the ice bill before us keep us still worrying somewhat.

ARE THEY SINCERE.

At times one might be pardoned for pausing and questioning the sincerity of some people when they make statements about one thing and another. This applies more particularly to men who have attained national and even international reputations. Their sayings are heralded from one end of the land to the other. Do they mean what they say, or say what they mean, or just fishing about to find a popular phrase which rings good, to gain plaudits which are sure to come. "Some people never open their mouth but what they put their foot in it," is a homely old saying as true of the present day as it was in its first utterance. Those people are passed along in silence, no heed is given to their talks and so one hears but little of them. But in the case of the great or near great, men who have gained a reputation in some way or other, either by travel, research, scholarship, oratory, or as oracles, their words and phrases are handed along as mountains of wisdom for those less fortunate to consider and make the most of. But alas in some cases the oracle falls far short of his pedestalled place. A speaker the other day speaking on conditions, uttered words and convictions with regard to certain recent labor disturbances which were hardly compatable with the facts and conditions. If his idealistic views had been followed in the letter and the spirit the labor men concerned would still be kicking their shins against a cold world and licking their paws, to use a not too elegant expression, to keep them warm.

BETHANY CHURCH.

The pastor has prepared a special message for young men to be given at the Pleasant Sunday Evening Service. "Young Man, stand on your feet." The praise service is for all the people and every one enjoys to share in the singing. At the morning service the message will be entitled, "Things worth while."

PLEASANT TIME PLANNED.

A very pleasant time is looked forward to by the members of the Quincy Womens Riverside club on Wednesday afternoon at the club house when they will be entertained by readings by Mrs. S. Isabell Davis interspersed with music.

WILLIAMS IS GAINING

And So Are Mr. Bowditch and Miss Morrissett

IN WASHINGTON CONTEST

Eight of the candidates for the free Washington inauguration trip of the Daily Ledger made good gains today. Fred D. Williams, the leader who has been taking it easy of late, thought he would show the other candidates that he was still in the game. His addition of 510 is the largest gain today.

Mr. Bowditch comes next with 395, and hopes to have five figures in his total soon.

Miss Morrissett, the West Quincy candidate, made a good gain and is overhauling Mr. De Normandie of Wollaston.

Ted Keohane added 80 today and has a total of 440.

Walter Mead has increased his total 100, and has passed Joseph Barber, Richard Larkin and other High school candidates.

With a gain of 50 George Powers of the Fore River shipyard has moved up 13 numbers. Edmond Desmond of the Copeland club has moved up 23 numbers, and T. F. Flaherty of Currier's has passed 11 candidates today.

It is reported at Washington that the Inauguration ball may be postponed in deference to the wishes of President-elect Wilson, but in that event there will be a brilliant reception by the President and Mrs. Wilson in the rotunda of the Capitol building, which will be more popular and more largely attended. Mrs. Mannock should not cancel her order for a ball gown, even if the grand ball is postponed, as it will be needed for the reception.

The vote coupon will appear in only eighteen more issues of the Daily Ledger.

Candidates should look around for a few vote certificates good for 1000 votes. The Daily Ledger will be delivered to all yearly subscribers in any part of the city or outside the city.

THE LAST COUPON.

The last coupon in this contest will be printed in the issue of Saturday, Feb. 8, and the polls will close a few days later. A great hustle is expected during the last days of the contest.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

Rev. and Mrs. William McGlaugflin of Billings street spent the week in New York.

Mrs. and Mr. Nathan L. Wood and their son, Alton, who have made their home in Braintree for many years, and who are widely known and very popular here, will leave Boston Tuesday next, for Los Angeles, Cal. They go seeking the balmy air of that beautiful southern land, and the larger opportunities it possesses. They are certain to be greatly missed by their many Braintree friends, but the sincerest good wishes of all for a bright and happy future will go with them to their new home. Their son Charles will remain in the east at least until June of this year, when he will complete his four years' course in civil engineering at the Mass. Institute of Technology.

The Quincy Women's club is to have a social evening next week, the Reception committee having arranged a reception and entertainment for the teachers of Quincy for Wednesday evening at the clubhouse. Frederick W. Bancroft will be the entertainer. Although announcements of the affair have not been sent to club members they, and their husbands also, will be welcomed and an enjoyable evening may be looked forward to.

One of the most interesting affairs promised for next week is the Russian afternoon on Saturday at the home of Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann, Presidents hill. Mrs. Aline Delano, a Russian lady and well known in American literary circles is to give some of her Memoirs of Russian Life and there will be Russian music and a Russian tea with the participants in Russian costume. A unique entertaining, and thoroughly enjoyable afternoon is anticipated and it is also hoped to start a fund for a recreation home for Quincy young women.

An announcements of interest to many friends, comes from Beverly of the engagement of Miss Esther W. Stickney, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George A. Stickney, to Walter L. Alley. An engagement luncheon was given last Saturday at the family home on Cabot street. The decorations were in yellow, with daffodils prettily arranged. The individual plate decorations were baskets of yellow flowers. After luncheon bridge whist was enjoyed followed by a delightful musical program. Miss Stickney is well known in younger society circles, is a graduate of Abbott academy and is a favorite with Beverly young people. Mr. Alley is employed in one of the Boston banks and is prominent in yachting circles, having commanded some of the fastest racing yachts along the North Shore.

DR. BURTON DELIGHTFUL

In His Wonderful Word Painting of the Bible

Friends of the Quincy Mansion school enjoyed Friday evening in Livermore hall with the pupils and teachers when Dr. Richard Burton lectured on "The Bible as Literature." The bible meant for human liberty, bringing it to the common folk. The first translation of Wickliffe then the King James in 1611, to read it is a joy. The greatest in modern literature so called by those who know values in expression, Shakespeare is a secondary.

When we read it from conpulsion or duty we fail to get the splendor and beauty and the spiritual value, love, there is faith, everlasting Trinity, from it we judge whether we have failed or succeeded.

He brought out the beauty, historic and artistic value of Joseph and his brethren and for simplicity nothing finer as well as dramatic and capable of great scenic effect. Dr. Burton touched on the wonderful book of Esther, sympathetic life in a splendid arena, and that white pearl Ruth, classic story, that instrument of destiny, clinging to her mother. Song of Solomon, spiritual songs, a marvellous collection, love poetry in fine out of door sense, classic language appreciated in its place, private worship of a great man. The Psalms were natural poetry. The Apocryphus which was sometimes doubtfully thought of contained some superb literature, some great passages, nothing more perfect, and Dr. Burton read a passage which he said was one of the twenty-five golden sayings.

BIG TIME FOR PROTECTION

Quincy Lodge Enjoyed Installation, Supper and Social

READ LEDGER ADVS.

C.F.ADAMS 2ND FOR MARSHAL

Will Fill That Post at Harvard College This Year

GRADUATED 25 YEARS AGO

Hon. Charles Francis Adams, 2d of Boston, formerly of Quincy has been appointed marshal for Commencement day at Harvard College next June. It is the custom to select the marshal from class which at Commencement is celebrating the 25th anniversary of its graduation and the appointment of Mr. Adams continues that tradition, for he was a member of the class of 1888.

CHARLES F. ADAMS, 2nd, Harvard Marshal.

Mr. Adams was president of his class all the time it was in college and was first marshal on class day. After graduation he entered the Harvard Law School and three years later received the degree of LL. B. While he was in the school he was coach of the Harvard University crew of 1891, which won one of Harvard's few victories over Yale on the water at that period. A dozen years ago or so he was chosen treasurer of Harvard University, and is the holder of that office became a member of the Harvard Corporation.

BRAINTREE PHILERGIANS.

Last Monday afternoon was the first of a course of lectures and readings which Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney will give before the class in modern literature, under the direction of the department of literature and library extension. Mrs. Gurney spoke on literature as such, dividing good literature into two parts—the outer and the inner, characterizing them the body and the soul. The qualities of the outer part are good language and style; the quality of the inner part is truth. In the discussion following Mrs. Gurney's talk, she brought out the relation of literature to the problems of life. The hostess to the class at the first meeting was Mrs. H. W. Davenport; the next will be Mrs. H. R. Drinkwater, 132 Park street, Jan. 22, and Mrs. Gurney will read from Ibsen, "A Doll's House," and "Ghosts."

Miss Mildred Maddocks will lecture to the club on "What to Eat and Why" at the regular meeting next Tuesday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock in Cochato hall.

A limited number of guest tickets are with Mrs. George W. Stevens for gentlemen's night, February 4. Members must procure tickets in advance, as none will be sold at the door. Members of the waiting list have no guest privilege.

The annual dramatics, to have been given at the meeting which was omitted, January 7, will be given on the afternoon of February 11th, under the direction of Mrs. Caroline A. Bill.

MR. DUGGAN'S POEM.

Respectfully dedicated to the past and present employers and employees of the Wollaston Foundry Company, Quincy, Mass., where the author has been continuously employed since May 5, 1881.

Thirty years in a foundry toiling and moiling away
Thirty years with their smiles and tears
And raven locks turned gray.
Thirty years in a foundry, fashioning moulds in the sand
Plying the trowel, on cope, cheek and nowell
With plastic, sensitive hand.

Displaying Herculean form, those molders of days long past
Enormous muscle and brawn to hustle
Preparing the molds for the cast,
Using the old fashioned pinch bar, windless and double block ropes
In making the lifts, the rolls and the shifts
Of cumbersome nowells and copes.

Thirty years in a foundry, O' what a wonderful change
'Tween now and then, in the shop and the men
As seen through a three decade range.
The pneumatic rammer and sifter, vibrator and compressed air
Electric cranes, power pulleys and chains
Are evident everywhere.
The click of the pneumatic chisel displaces the snagging by hand
There's a patent machine in the pickle house seen
Divesting the castings of sand.
Progress marks every department, the grinder excepted alone,
For thirty years, 'tis assailing our ears
In the same monotonous tone.

A golden chain of memories recall the chums of yore
Who wrought 'neath the winch, on the floor and the bench
And down by the core-oven door.
Today awaiting the molten fluid, new faces surround the stack
While the old ones sigh for the days gone by
And friends who will never come back.

Such is the transformation of Time's unvarying pace,
Of the old shop crew there are only two
My seniors in the place.
At rest is our kind employer, Annis A. Lincoln, by name,
With his three brothers, Dan, Dave, and Luther, the man
'Neath whom I a molder became.

'Twas ever thus in the battle of life, since man on earth first trod
And so it will be, 'til the last decree
Of our Heavenly Triune God.
Mortality finds its bourne in dust, that's part of Creation's plan
The immortal soul will find its goal
In the light of Eternity's span.

Thirty years in a foundry, I'm fond of the dear old shop
Where I've earned my bread in the years that have sped
I'll stay 'til the bottom will drop
Content with congenial labor, the evening of life to pass
In daily task with sand heap and flask
In Wollaston Foundry, Mass.

UNION MEETINGS ENDED.

The last of the special union meetings at the Wollaston M. E. and the Hall Place M. E. churches the past two weeks was held in the Hall Place M. E. church, Friday evening with a good attendance though not as large as previously. Rev. Wesley Wiggin of Wollaston preached a stirring sermon from Psalm 18-19, "He brought me forth also into a large place." Mr. Painting of Wollaston sang a solo and Mr. Goucher of West Quincy lead the music.

Sunday morning there will be a roll-call of members and probationers, followed by Holy Communion, each member being asked to respond by a verse of scripture or a letter.

At 7 P. M. Mrs. F. W. Morgan of Wollaston, who has preached some excellent sermons during this course will preach at the Hall Place M. E. church and it is hoped by the pastor that she will repeat a sermon given at the Wollaston M. E. church last week. A special effort is being made to get a large attendance to hear Mrs. Morgan, who is an interesting and inspiring speaker. All are cordially invited to attend.

WOLLASTON FORUM.

At the meeting of the Forum of the Wollaston Unitarian church, Sunday noon, Fred H. Bishop will speak on "The Social service we might render Quincy."

DIED ON WAY TO THE HOSPITAL

William J. Donovan, a Victim of Acute Pneumonia

SICK ONLY FEW DAYS

William J. Donovan, age 45, died from acute pneumonia at about 3.30 Friday afternoon while he was being taken to the Quincy City Hospital in the police ambulance. He was a former employee at the Hodgkinson farm, Germantown. He returned to the premises Monday and lived in the barn.

Tuesday he complained of illness and Dr. John H. Ash, was summoned Friday. His condition was critical and he was ordered removed to the hospital, but he was not strong enough to sustain the journey.

He leaves a brother John M. Donovan of 503 South street. He is a former South Boston resident and his body was claimed by Undertaker Lavery of that place and removed to the home of his brother for burial.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

The engagement is announced of Miss Mary Gertrude Sass, daughter of Mrs. William H. Sass of Hamilton street, Wollaston, to Chester E. Roukes. Mr. Roukes is the son of H. A. Roukes of Leominster and is in the employ of a Boston concern, being a graduate of Burdett Business college. Miss Sass attended the Quincy High school and Cushing Academy.

GETS CORDIAL RECEPTION

Senator-Elect Weeks Welcomed by Both Branches of Congress

Washington, Jan. 18.—Senator Crane presented in the senate the credentials of his successor, Representative John W. Weeks, who was elected by the Massachusetts legislature.

Mr. Weeks reached Washington yesterday afternoon. When he entered upon the floor of the house the members, regardless of party, broke into applause, following which the senator-elect was honored with an informal reception, during which every member left his seat and shook him by the hand. Weeks then crossed over to the senate chamber, where he was received with equal cordiality.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

"I am going back home," said Gertrude Ellingham with determination. "I long to see the valley once more, and I can do just as much good at Belle Bosquet as I can here, perhaps more, now."

It was not because of the anxious outlook in Richmond, with McClellan's army almost within gunshot. On the contrary, that in itself would have kept her in the threatened Confederate capital had not stronger ties of both duty and sentiment drawn her homeward.

As Gertrude read in northern newspapers the accounts of the desperate fighting and of the suffering of Jackson's troops she exclaimed:

"Let them send the whole population of the north down here if they will, but they can never conquer us! When they have killed off our men we will shed the last drop of our own blood."

Captain Kerchival West of the Union army of southwest Missouri, as he read the account while alternately burning and shivering in the ague stricken camps of the lower Mississippi valley around Corinth, thought in feverish fancy that he could hear Gertrude saying just such words as these. Her hate, as he imagined it, was like his love—an unreasoning, all consuming passion. He felt himself ominously fortified with the double strength of hope and despair, for love is a flame that feeds upon despair and takes a lurid halo of glory most of all when lavished wildly and in vain.

One sovereign solace he had, that he was wearing the blue and fighting loyally for the old flag in a campaign sufficiently remote from the valley of Virginia. After all, fate had been kind to him, he thought, as he recalled his farewell words with Bob Ellingham, at Charleston—was it ages ago, or only a little more than a year back? "All right, Bob. I only hope we never meet in battle, that's all."

And then they both saddened as they added:

"Who knows?"

Who knew, indeed? What a tangled skein of lives it was, anyway! One thing was certain—he may have been glad he was not fighting in Virginia, and yet his heart was there all the time.

Meanwhile Gertrude's decision to leave Richmond and go home to the valley was put into execution with characteristic impulse. It was a bad time for such a journey. That made no difference about her embarking upon it, but it did lead to some very complicated and roundabout arrangements for the accomplishment of the trip.

Her Confederate war office friends, for reasons essentially their own, decreed that if she went at all it must be by way of Baltimore and Harpers Ferry. For the last named barrier, a Federal pass would be required, this to be procured at Baltimore. And to get to Baltimore, by water, of course, it was necessary to run the Federal blockade.

Harpers Ferry.

But this would be comparatively easy under the plan agreed upon, by which Gertrude was to have a traveling companion—a mysterious southern lady who knew the routes intimately and who seemed to be rather closely in touch with the executive departments at Richmond for one who confidently promised to arrange the little matter of Federal passes at Baltimore.

This young person—she seemed not over twenty—was introduced somewhat vaguely as Mrs. Smith. She was well dressed, fairly good looking and a bright talker, particularly with the men. Her self confidence was perhaps a trifle excessive; but then this would not come amiss for two unprotected females abroad in Dixie in wartime.

On the first stage of the journey overland as they stopped overnight at Petersburg Gertrude said to her fascinating roommate:

"Mrs. Smith, I have told you what little there is of interest about myself and my plans. I do so wish you would tell me something of your own adventures."

"I don't mind, my dear, now that we are off and on our way," laughed the other as she saturated a handkerchief with eau de cologne and washed her face with it. "By the way, my real name is Belle Boyd."

"Belle Boyd of the secret service?"

"Yes, honey child. That's what we are on now."

"But if they should suspect us after we cross the lines they would arrest and detain us, would they not?"

"They hang spies," Miss Boyd replied. "But I don't reckon they will get us. Of course I won't be Miss Boyd and you won't be Miss Ellingham from now on."

A civilian met "Miss Page and Mrs. Smith" at the Light street wharf in Baltimore. He took them to a Federal captain, and the captain sent them to his superior officer, General Fisher. Belle Boyd, now "Mrs. Smith," stated their case.

"We are southerners, general, and we wish to go south by way of Harpers Ferry," she said, handing him a note which the captain had given her.

He read the note, looked at the pair with a quizzical expression and then nodded his head.

"Very well, ladies. I will make out your passes, which will take you to General Kelly at Harpers Ferry. My jurisdiction ends there, but you will find General Kelly a courteous and considerate gentleman. Beyond that I can make no promises for him, you understand. If everything is all right, why—you will be all right. You will have an escort as far as Harpers Ferry, and an officer will be sent this afternoon to your boarding place to examine your baggage."

The baggage searcher found them duly prepared and no obstacle came up to prevent the girls from taking the westward bound train on the Baltimore and Ohio road at noon the next day. Their escort was a flirtatious young lieutenant, whom "Mrs Smith" —newly widowed for the occasion—engaged in an instructive conversation about Federal military matters, which lasted until toward sunset. The slow train drew up under the shadows of the frowning Virginia heights and heights of Maryland at the historic point where the Shenandoah river breaks through the mountain wall and falls into the Potomac—and they had reached their destination.

Evidently there was a riot going on in the little shutin town at the end of the long railroad bridge across the Potomac, where the old arsenal and the engine house which had been John Brown's fort lay close upon the railroad tracks, with dwelling houses, barracks and taverns straggling up the hilly streets behind.

They held a consultation in the parlor of a "hotel" full of drunken soldiers and decided to go out and make inquiries of any one who might seem sober enough to answer as to where they could hire a vehicle to forward them on their journey. All uncertainty was promptly dispelled—they could not get out of Harper's Ferry that night.

QUINCY BOY MAKING GOOD

And Receiving Honors in His New Home in Cleveland

Richard Tappenden, a Quincy boy for eleven years and now living at Cleveland is evidently making good in his new home. He carried the Ledger for several years, was active in his school and so well liked that it was generally regretted when the family moved to Cleveland.

Richard is a senior in the Technical High school, plays in the school orchestra, also the orchestra of St. Paul's Sunday school. He has been a member of the Cleveland Boy Scouts for a little over a year, making many friends.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer of Jan. 13 tells of the annual meeting of the Boy Scouts in that city at the close of which Richard Tappenden was called forward and presented with the first class badge in reward for his work with the scouts; the first Cleveland boy to receive this rank.

Although he knew he had passed all the required examinations for a first class scout the presentation of the badge before a big rally of 1000 boys was a great surprise to him. He however accepted the badge and saluted Horatio Ford, vice president of the Cleveland district council, Boy Scouts of America, who made the presentation. The gallant old scout Capt. Jack Crawford who was present and addressed the boys, also shook hands with him and congratulated him before he left the platform. Three cheers for Dick.

NEW LECTURE.

Charles H. Johnson has added another interesting lecture to his group, "The Life of Jesus," illustrated by 28 beautiful colored slides reproduced from the famous pictures of the artist Henri Hoffman of Dresden. Mr. Johnson will give the lecture for the first time in Quincy at the meeting of the Y. P. R. Union of the Wollaston Unitarian church Sunday evening.

☞Any candidate in the Ledger trip to Washington to the inaugural can take a look at the ticket by calling at the office. It looks good, as does also the companion ticket. The winner in the contest has the privilege of selecting a companion to go on the trip. It's a very complete trip costing $75 each ticket.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

In Praise of the Elevator Man—A Modest Hero Stuck to the Lift Whence All but He Might Flee—Whether City Shall Run Theatre Interest Bostonese — Northampton's Example may prove Contagious—Grandmothers Get it again—Baby Sharp Says They's Chief Factor in Spoiling Promising Youngsters—Japanese prints at the Boston Art Club for those Who Like Them.

One was prepared for it by experiences with many elevator men. When a great fire broke out in a downtown building the other day it was the ever faithful guardian of the lift who rose nobly to the occasion and to the upper stories of the building where panic stricken stenographers and bookkeepers were wondering if the scenes of the triangle building fire were about to be repeated. Although the corridor and elevator well were filled with smoke John Dignan operated his car as calmly as under ordinary conditions and safely brought down about 120 people from the upper floors. After all the rest had fled he still stuck to his lift from which he was driven out only when a deluge of water from above almost drowned him in his cage Dignan, having had this opportunity, may receive a Carnegie medal; yet he presumably was not an exceptional elevator man. Any business woman familiar with urban office buildings knows that a majority of the rough and ready individuals secured for this service, are precisely the kind who would behave like heroes under similar circumstances. The work on the elevator seems to require—and it perhaps also develops—a certain sublime faithfulness and unquestioning following of the duty that lies nearest. A marvel of civilization, anyway, is the number of heroic souls who earn their daily bread at ten dollars per.

Will Boston have a municipal theatre? This is a question many people are asking in train of the arrangement for presentation by the Northampton Players of "The Little Town of Bethlehem" by Katrina Trask. This event at one of the local theatres on the afternoon of Jan. 14, was duly set forth in the municipality's recreation bulletin as "under the patronage of His Excellency Eugene N. Foss, Governor of Massachusetts, and His Honor John F. Fitzgerald, Mayor of Boston." The Northampton theatrial enterprise has been widely advertised as the first municipally conducted theatre in the United States, of a kind that is more or less common abroad. Performances began there on Oct. 1, 1912. It is understood that municipal operation of the theatre has been successful from the start and that the enterprise is already on a paying basis at the popular prices of 25 and 75 cents. It would not be strange, in the circumstances, if in the fertile brain of Boston's energetic mayor a scheme for a Hubbite municipal theatre were germinating. Offhand it might not seem that the Athens of America needed any more playhouses. A chief amusement of the drama magnates in the past half decade has consisted in planting new theatres in Boston. No American community is better supplied with amusement opportunities in this direction. Yet it may be that there is a class in the municipality which would like to witness legitimate drama at rates lower than those charged by existing houses and that, as at Northampton, such a theatre would go from the outset. Certain it is, at any rate, that the performance of the spectacular Bethlehem has interested Bostonians as few recent dramatic events have.

Hit grandmother again. She stands in the way of the health and strength of the rising generation. So at least says Dr. John Lovett Morse, who is a baby specialist at the Harvard Medical school. Before a gathering of young mothers this authority said: "One of the greatest obstacles to the proper feeding of children is the grandmother. It is a strange fact that no matter how sensible a mother she may have been she wants her grandchildren to be spoiled and brought up improperly. If the mother attempts to do the right thing she is silenced by being told that her mother has brought up many more children and really knows." One would hate to say that there isn't some truth in all this. Yet it is a courageous person in the average family who would try to take away from grandma her cherished privilege of being dispenser in chief of injudicious advice.

New Englanders in the Japanese print stage of development now have their special opportunity at the Boston Art Club. Every day during the rest of this month there is free admission to a display of colored prints from Nipponland formed by the painter Charles Novey Pepper. This is one of the three or four great collections of this neighborhood. It is sufficiently popular to meet the tastes of people who have not yet advanced to an appreciation of the pictures of devil worship executed by Tibetan monks in the middle ages. Strange Lamaist, Buddhist and Taoist representations, as exhibited currently at the Museum of Fine Arts and at the Fogg Museum, Cambridge, are for those who have got beyond the elementary stage; who understand about Zennism, Shintoism and every other queer cult of the far East; who have followed Fenollosa and Lafeadio Hearn through their glorified word fests; who in brief are true blue Bostonians. For beginners, like most of us, the Japanese prints are right.

FEARS DICTAGRAPHS AND POISONED FOOD

Doctors Report on Delusions of Big Tim Sullivan

Albany, Jan. 18.—The principal delusion of "Big Tim" Sullivan, the Tammany leader, is that he is continually surrounded by dictagraphs, according to a report filed with the state hospital commission by Drs. Herrity and Pritchard of New York, upon whose certificate Sullivan was committed to Dr. Bond's sanitarium at Younkers.

"Big Tim," the physicians say, insisted that conversations be carried on in whispers, foreboding exposures that might result from the "room being full of dictagraphs and telephones." He feared also that he and his relatives were being "doped," and that poison was being put in his food and drink.

CHORAL SOCIETY CONCERT.

As the date of the seventh concert to be given by the Quincy Choral society draws near, Jan. 28th, more interest and enthusiasm is felt by members and musical people in general. The Society has been extremely fortunate in the selection of solists, Mrs. Marie Sundelius of Boston soprano and Benjamin E. Berry of New York. tenor having been engaegd.

To those who have not heard Mrs. Sundelius a rare treat is in store. She is the possessor of a marvelously beautiful vonce of wonderful purity and smoothness, which she uses with unaffected charm. Mr. eBrry is a young American tenor whose progress has been watched by musical critics, and has a pure lyric voice of fine quality. His attractive personality and idgnified stage presence at once bring him into favor with his audience.

One o fthe most exquisite numbers on the program will be given by the noted player of the violin cello, Carl Webster and as the chorus work is nearing perfection as rehearsals progress an evening of extraodinary enjoyment awaits those who can be brought into touch with the harmony of heaven's greatest art music.

OLD COLONY LEAGUE UPSETS.

A surprising change has occured in the standing of the Old Colony bowling league. Within a week Norfolk Downs has dropped from first to third place, Weymouth has jumped into first from second place, the Coliseum has dropped to the cellar position from third and the City Square has jumped from the bottom to second place. The change is most interesting and has been the talk ofthe alleys. Weymouth also leads in pinfall, with the Coliseum second. Gillen of Norfolk Downs has high string of 124 and high three string total of 322. The best team total is held by Weymouth, 1421 and the highest team single is also held by Weymouth at 510.

This showing certainly gives the grip to Weymouth for their all round showing is as good as any team in any league in the state.

The standing is as follows:

| | Won | Lost | Pctg. | Pinfall |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Weymouth | 13 | 11 | .542 | 8125 |
| City Square | 12 | 12 | .500 | 7797 |
| Norfolk Downs | 11 | 13 | .458 | 7771 |
| Coliseum | 11 | 13 | .458 | 8016 |

BELYEA—BATES.

Mansfield Albert Belyea, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Belyea of Mount Vernon avenue, and Miss Elva Spencer Bates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Bates of Sampson avenue, Braintree, were united in marriage at the Baptist parsonage on Sunday afternoon at five o'clock, Rev. J. A. Mitchell, their pastor, officiating. Only the immediate relatives were present.

The happy couple have lived near the Baptist church for years and were quite active in that church, the bride being a fine pianist and a member of the choir. It seems only a short time since that they were attending the public schools and graduating from the High school.

Recently the groom opened a little grocery store opposite the Monatiquot school and trade increased so rapidly that he was forced to seek more room. He has purchased the homestead of the late Miss Saltenstall on Washington street, corner of Robinson avenue, and will occupy same. On the street corner adjoining the house he is having a one story addition built for his new store. Mr. Belyea is a member of Puritan lodge, I. O. O. F.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Belyea wish them a happy and prosperous future.

SOUTH BRAINTREE

Tuesday evening, Mrs. Ralph Woodsum of Academy street entertained the members of the Matrons' whist club. At the conclusion of the game prizes were awarded to Mrs. George E. Snow, Mrs. J. Porter Witherell and Mrs. A. A. Palmer.

Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Hannaford of Hancock street gave a musicale at their home. Mr. Hannaford has recently bought an auto piano of a New York make which is a most beautiful and satisfactory instrument. The guests present Wednesday evening were Mr. and Mrs. Seymore Scott and son Richard Scott of Wollaston, Mrs. Bertrand Christopher, Miss Eliza Christopher of Allston and Mrs. William Ring of South Boston.

Thursday afternoon the members of the Ivaloo whist club were entertained at the home of Mrs. D. A. Brooks. Mrs. William A. Kane was the hostess of the afternoon.

Thursday evening, the members of the Knights of Columbus and their friends held an enjoyable whist party in their club rooms on Holbrook avenue. There were sixteen tables in play. The souvenirs were secured by Thomas Weston, Jerimiah McCarthy, John L. Fay, Mrs. H. B. O'Connell, Mrs. Nellie White and Miss Bessie DeNeil. A social period followed the game.

The regular monthly meeting of the Braintree Catholic Women's Club was held at Knights of Columbus hall on Monday evening. The election of officers resulted in the re-election of the entire board of last year. Eight new members were received. The club begins its second year of existence under most favorable auspices.

BRAINTREE

Letters remain in the postoffice for Nicolo Albanese, Miss Selm Lilja and William P. Kennedy, Esq.

Miss Miriam B. Hatch of Cheshive, Mass., has just gone south after spending a month with Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Lawley of Lemoine street.

Mrs. S. E. Stoddard of Bridgewater a former resident of Braintree has been the guest this week of Mrs. Flora Mathewson of Washington street.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Arnold of Washington street, observed the 25th anniversary of their marriage Sunday. The affair was very quiet owing to the illness of Mrs. Arnold's mother Mrs. Lucinda Torry.

Mrs. M. Wendell who has been visiting her daughter Mrs. F. A. Bower, left Tuesday for Poukeepsie, N. Y., to spend the rest of the winter with Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Triller.

Miss Anna B. Thompson of Thayer Academy made a monthly visit Friday with her Greek History class to the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. They were accompanied by Miss Fannie Phillips.

The many friends of Carleton Beale of Braintree will be interested in his appearance upon the stage at the Globe in February, and other Boston theatres later. He has taken prominent parts in local theatricals and of late toured New England and appeared before select audiences. In every place he has met with great success, his last appearances being in Maine.

RATHER HARDY INFANT

Will Probably Live After Being Used by Boys as a Football

New York, Jan. 18.—A dozen boys laying football with a pasteboard box n a vacant lot in Brooklyn sat down o rest after half an hour's play.

"That's a funny looking box," said ne of them. "Let's see what's inide."

The untied the strings. A 4-dayd baby boy, naked and to all appearances dead, rolled to the ground. A policeman took it to a hospital. alf an hour later it was crying lusty. It will probably live.

Edmonton, Alberta, Jan. 18.—Six lives were lost in a fire that swept the business section of this city. The damage, it is estimated, will total $309,000.

UNION MEETING

used in the near future every night in the week for just such meetings as this. I believe it should be used for dancing, games and amusements of a wholesome variety. It snould be used to get together men as brothers to assimilate the foreigners.

"But we are getting away from antiquated ideas and there is fast forming a regeneration of those ideas set forth in that compact signed aboard the Mayflower.

"We are knit together by the most strict bond and covenant of our law, of the violation of which we make great conscience, and by virtue of which we do hold ourselves strongly tied to all care of each others good and of the whole by everyone.

We are getting together all over the world in church clubs, improvement societies, boards of trade and the like in a cooperative line of effort that is diminishing the wrong kind of competition.

"We have progressed very fast in the last few years along lines that have revolutionized, to a very great extent, methods of thinking.

"We have to adjust ourselves to the quick step of science. We older men are a little behind the times in some things. Boys of the high school age and a little older are better fitted to comprehend some of the propositions that come abqut. We should include them in our meetings.

"City planning today is talked of all over the land. We are some 15 to 20 years behind Europe in this respect but with Yankee sagacity we are claiming to have been the first to discover it.

"It is beginning to draw men and make them realize that all men will be benefitted by a project which benefits the city. The trouble is we don't know our part and don't know how to do it.

"It is necessary to get together and organize along scientific lines. We must find what we want, how much it will cost and get experts to plan it in the right way.

"We should secure an engineer to lay out plans looking 25 or 50 years in the future with the idea of promoting business interests to be sure but primarily of promoting human life.

"We should take up the health question. This involves the industrial situation, the homes, the child.

"The health situation is not properly looked after when the average city spends $1.63 for fire protection to 30 cents for the protection of public health.

"City planning takes up health questions as well as the fundamental conditions for regenerating the city. It takes up the question of reduction of losses by fire.

"The industrial situation gives rise to another important question. We are losing out to the western and southern cities in this respect.

"In the South 200 cities have the commission form of government and 120 have taken up city planning. A large number have instituted water power development.

"We are sometimes too severe in our criticism of city officials. We elect a man to office because of his worthiness, his character, his ability as a business man and set him at problems he has never had a chance to study and expect him to solve problems that would give experts a hard time. When he does not we criticize him.

"In city planning you should drop petty jealousies and get a committee of the whole. A committee of citizens to investigate, make inquiries, to travel.

"But when you pick your citizens, use care to pick those who will give their time and effort and will not consider the honor but the service to the community. Those who are more anxious to carry out a righteous program than to wear badges."

Mayor Stone said:

"In his position as mayor he knew the truth of the statements made. In his inaugural he had emphasized the need of city planning.

"There were many streets that ended up against a field or some house. There were many cellars built and sometimes the first floor below tide water. These people expect the mayor and the fire department, every time there is a flood tide to come and pump out their cellars. (Laughter.)

"We should not criticise the mayor or the city government but all pull together—that's the thing—pull together. This puts us in position to satisfy all and in a short time we will not only have a well laid out city but plenty of money to run it."

Among those speaking in favor were president Edward O. Woodward of the Wollaston Park Improvement Association; President Eric H. Ewertz of the Wollaston Methodist club, President John L. Hamilton of the Quincy Board of Trade, President Louis F. R. Langelier of the Wollaston Unitarian club, Henry W. French of the Houghs Neck Associates and others.

After voting to form a federation a committee of one from each society to draw up by-laws and nominations for the necessary officers and report at a later mass meeting was chosen in part as follows:

Bethany Men's Club—Ernest L. Colins, Wollaston Methodist club—Albert N. Murray, Montclair Improvement Association—N. E. Gould, Wollaston Unitarian Club—Eugene H. Sprague, Montclair Improvement Association—F. J. Kessler, Wollaston Congregational Club—Irving L. Shaw, Houghs Neck Associates—Franklin G. Saylor.

The president of each society will also be a member, William A. Mann remains temporary chairman.

Chester I. Campbell called attention to the mass meeting to be held next Friday at the school with the project of a community house in view.

ALUMNI LOST TO REGULARS

Game Close and Exciting at That Score 35 to 33

EXTRA PERIOD NEEDED

Quincy High defeated the alumnae in an extra period in a good game of basket ball in the gym Friday afternoon, 35 to 33. The game was hard played and showed a development in the high school team which was surprising.

When the alumnae learned of the open date they sought a game and Captain Larkin, with thoughts of his future desires to play against the school team in mind, readily consented.

Coach LaRose was given the whistle and he started the game with no thoughts of victory. He was as surprised with the outcome as were the boys themselves.

The alumnae was the Quincy A. A. 2d team, which is considered very fast. Trask was the only outsider. Thursday evening they had defeated North Dorchester 2d 50 to 6 and were rather played out. They were also on a larger floor.

The first half ended 17 to 12 in favor of the alumnae. In the second half both scored freely and shortly before the close of the period Safford was sent in and the game was tied up as the whistle blew, 33 to 33.

It was decided to play until the deciding two points were made, and it fell to the lot of Capt. Larkin to cap the victory.

Trask made 10 baskets, slipping them through after the good passage of the alumnae. Several good plays were made by both teams.

The game demonstrated the possibilities of correct coaching, and L. LaRose will certainly rouud the Quincy High into a fast and furious bunch.

POLICE AID SOUGHT IN EFFORT TO LOCATE MISSING NELLIGAN BOY

Left Home Wednesday With $10.50 In His Pocket After Getting Through His Job

Worked For Gas Co. May Have Gone to Providence or South Boston

The Quincy police have been requested by the mother of Edward T. Nelligan, Jr., to assist in the search for the boy who has been missing since last Wednesday noon and has not been heard from since. The boy is but 16 years old and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Nelligan of 209 Main street. He has been employed by the Citizens Gas Light Co. but got through work Wednesday noon.

He went home to dinner as usual and then went out. Since then nothing has been heard from him. It is known that when he left home he had $10.50 with him which he had received for his weeks work. He was a boy of excellent habits and a steady worker. He was 5 feet 5 inches in height, about 135 pounds weight. He had dark hair and wore a blue golf cap, a dark overcoat and striped trousers. He also had on tan shoes and brown stockings. He has relatives both in South Boston and in Providence, R. I. and inquiries will be made at both of these places for him, as it is thought possible that he may have gone there for a visit.

CAPT. McKAY UNDER KNIFE

Operated Upon For Gall Stones After Attending Court

PATIENT DOING WELL

Captain Daniel R. McKay of the Police Department went to the City Hospital Saturday afternoon and was immediately operated upon for gallstones. Capt. McKay has been a sufferer from gallstones for several months. He has been treated for his ailment but it was decided by his physician that the only hope of relief lay in an operation. Saturday morning he appeared in court, in a case in which he was interested, after which he went to the Hospital and later in the day was operated upon. He passed through the operation successfully and this morning was said to be as comfortable as could be expected. Fully 500 gall stones were removed from the patients body.

MRS. BENZIE DEAD.

Mrs. Jessie F. Benzie, 109 Liberty street, widow of John W., died Sunday at her home, age 72 years. She was a long time resident of South Quincy, coming here from Scotland. She was the mother of a large family, among whom are Mrs. Jessie McLean, Mrs. Elsie Campbell and Mrs. Margaret Decelle. The funeral will take place from her home Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

JEWS OPPOSE THE NEW LAW

Making Literacy a Test of Entering This Country

HARD ON THE RACE

A mass meeting of protest against the passage of the Burnett-Dillingham Immigration Act, which provides for the establishment of a literacy test for immigrants, was held Sunday night at the Congregation Avath Achin School street. The chairman, Louis Berman introduced the speaker, Dr. A. Levin, manager of the Hebrew Immigrants' Aid society of Boston. H. Phillip Levowich was appointed temporary secretary by the chairman.

Dr. Levin spoke in vivid manner of the trials of the Jews in Europe, especially in Russia. He said that the Jews had been persecuted all over the world and considered America their haven of refuge. To take that hope from them because they could not read or write was little short of a crime. It was enough that they were sent back to Europe heartbroken because of a slight physical fault.

The chairman received many proposals for membership to the Hebrew Immigrants Aid society, whose purpose it is to assist the Hebrew immigrant entering this country. It was unanimously voted to send resolutions protesting against the immigration act to President Taft and the representatives from this section. A committee of six was appointed to draft and send the resolutions. It was also voted as recommended by Dr. Levin to send Congressman James M. Curley a separate resolution, thanking him for his services in fighting the Burnett-Dillingham Act.

The meeting was a final protest of Quincy Jewish citizens against the passage of the bill. It was a final appeal to President Taft to veto the measure which has already passed both houses of Congress. In a word Quincy Jews have seconded the efforts of the Quincy Young Men's Hebrew Association to strongly protest against the immigration act.

RULE COMMITTEE SUBMIT REPORT

Council Will Then Be Able to Proceed With Business

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held tonight and if anything can be judged by the previous meetings this year it will be a busy session. The main question that will come up will be the report of the special committee appointed last Monday to consider the revision of the rules of the Council. This committee met Saturday evening and finished its work.

There is considerable business pending before the council much of which came over from last year. As soon as it settled what the rules of the council shall be these matters will probably be taken care of by President Bryant.

STUBBORN FIRE IN SMITH HOUSE

Basement Enveloped in Flame When Firemen Arrived

DAMAGE WAS ONLY $250

The alarm from Box 19 at 7.51 this morning was for a lively blaze in a story and a half house at Rock Island owned by George W. Smith. The house is laid out on the upper floors for one family. In the basement is a suite of four rooms which was occupied by the owner of the building. The family of Mr. Smith were at the house Sunday and built a fire in the kitchen stove. When they went away they elft the fire burning. The remains were evidently hotter than was anticipated for they eventually set fire to the wood work. The floor under the stove was burnt through causing the stove to tip over sideways in such a manner that most of the smoke from the burning wood passed out of the chimney. The house being closed up the blaze did not break through the outside and when the department arrived it looked to be little more than a chimney fire.

The fire had probably been burning some time for the firemen found the four basement rooms burning briskly on the inside and it was some time before the fire was fully under control. The fire did not get above the basement floor. Chief Litchfield says that the loss will not exceed $250.

OPPORTUNITY PRESENTED

For Contact With Great Southern Distributing Centre

Fred B. Rice of the Rice & Hutchins shoe Co., was one of the committee that made up the itinerary of the South American tour of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. They will leave Boston April 25 and will be home by June 28. The party as yet is not known but it is thought that many representative business men will take the opportunity of coming in close contact with a distributing centre which is only in its infancy. The object is business from the start until the return and while women are not discouraged from making the trip they can join the party on the condition that they will not be especially looked after.

QUINCY SEWER BILL IN HOUSE

HEPTASOPHS' CANDIDATE MAKES A JUMP OF 7,265

A. R. MacKay Is Fast Overhauling Messrs. Willlams and Hunt In Contest

Mrs. Emma Marnock of W. R. C. Is Second In Gain

A. R. MacKay, the Heptasophs candidate, causes a big revival of interest today in the Daily Ledger contest for the free Washington trip, for he has made a gain of 7265 and increased his total to 23,555. This serves notice on Messrs. Williams and Hunt that he is in the race to win, either the Washington trip for two persons, or the beautiful diamond ring. Mr. MacKay is now less than 6,000 behind Mr. Hunt, the Y. M. C. A. candidate, who is also a popular High school boy.

Mrs. Emma Marnock, the W. R. C. candidate was second in gain today with 1430 and her total is larger than the total credited to Mr. MacKay on Saturday. The Woman's Relief Corps, members of Clan McGregor, and old neighbors are giving her loyol support.

Fred D. Williams was third in gain today with 1005 and his grand total of 42,205 continues to look good, especially as Sturgis Hunt did not gain today.

Galen V. Bowditch made another good gain today, adding 655, and his total is now over 8,000. Where other candidates put in votes once or twice a week, Mr. Bowditch is gaining daily, and has recently taken a position with the leaders. He is well established in fifth place.

Gains were also made today by Angus Kerr, Shirley F. Nutting, Lloyd Lewis and Richard H. Joyce.

OFFICER SHAY ALMOST BLINDED BY A BOTTLE HURLED BY DEMARCO

Heavy Missile Struck Him Fair on the Bridge of the Nose Breaking His Glasses

Metal Gouged a Piece of Flesh From the Face

Officer Frank P. Shay of the Braintree police had a narrow escape from serious if not fatal injury at Braintree Sunday when a bottle thrown by Camillo Demarco struck him between the eyes smashing his eye glasses and cutting a deep gash in his forehead and gouging a piece of flesh from the front of his nose.

Demarco who is but 16 years of age stood on a street corner with a lot of other young men when Officer Shay came along and ordered them to move on. All did so but Demarco who seemed to be rather defiant. A minute later he stepped back and drawing a bottle from his pocket deliberately threw it at the officer It struck him on the upper part of the nose, and as stated above cut a gash that required several stitches in his forehead while the bow of his glasses gouged a piece of flesh out of his nose. Although almost blinded by blood the officer grabbed the boy and placed him under arrest. He then went to the office of a physician and had his injuries dressed. It was somewhat remarkable that the blow did not cause the officer to lose his eye sight. The young man was in court this morning, charged with assault and disturbing the peace. His case was continued to Tuesday, the 28th. Young Demarco was allowed to go in the custody of his parents.

The American Lady Shoes

I wish every woman who understands the art of clothes could visit the factory where the "American Lady" Shoes are made.

I would like to show her what a lot of care and best materials mean in making a pretty and serviceable shoe. Made by people who thoroughly understand the making of fine shoes.

The American Lady Shoes have a character all their own. They are first cousins to custom-made shoes. Different kinds for different occasions.

Come and let me show you a really beautiful shoe—one that is comfortable and gives more service than any other shoe sold in Quincy.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Remember dear good people if it gets very very cold around here you can order your coal right from the coal mines by parcel post, so don't worry about the weather any more.

It is against the law to send booze by parcel post, as postmen have all the temptations they can withstand now.

Inauguration crowds may depend on finding Washington provided with an abundance of safe and helpful traffic regulations.

A New York street car horse committed suicide the other day by leaping off a dock. Probably couldn't stand the disgrace any longer.

Gov. Sultzer of New York had to approach ten men to get one as legal adviser at $5,000 a year. But maybe the other nine knew the Governor dislikes advice.

Thus far no way has been discovered to make the parcel post shake down the furnace mornings and carry out the ashes.

So patriotic is the average citizen that he will not express even an onion, preferring to send it by parcel post.

Uncle Sam was Santa Claus to Europe to the extent of $100,000,000. No wonder there are some persons who think that streets in America are paved with gold.

The rumor that hoop skirts are coming back next year may be only a wicked plot to discredit the Democratic administration.

The proposal to name new ships of the navy after the famous vessels of the republic's early days will meet with general approval.

Before Gov. Wilson adopts 13 as his lucky number he should count the letters in the name of William J. Bryan.

Lives of great men remind us that it is sometimes better to remain obscure.

South Carolina is planning to adopt a compulsory education law. Well, Gov. Blease is an excellent argument in favor of it.

Reforming the Stock Exchange will be about as easy as the reformation of the N. Y. Police Department, and will take as long.

Every public man, however great is obliged occasionally to admit a distinction between what he believes is to be done and what he finds himself able to accomplish.

If Miss Curtis had announced that she was not a suffragette before election perhaps she would not have received such a large vote from her own sex.

Hobson is to lead the suffragette parade in Washington. Is there to be more osculatory demonstration?

The wind howled some Saturday night and many were fearful that their roofs would clatter down about them.

Charlestown residents are divided as to the conditions there. It is rather a poor showing for a community to have a trio of hold up and manslaughter offenders under 16 years of age.

Federal prisoner claims that the seven year term in jail according to nature has changed him completely. Maybe made a worse criminal of him than before.

Gov. Dix closed his term with a pardon. Gov. Sulzer opened his with ditto, so they are about even up to date, but the public is not satisfied that either case was one where executive clemency should be exercised either in the interests of mercy or justice.

Minister Cady councils people to leave liquor, tobacco and football alone. He is not alone in his views on those subjects.

Weather experts say the real winter is coming but they do not know when. To date most people are satisfied and would not kick if the weather man kept on serving out the same brand to the end of the season.

The man who proposes to dam up the Atlantic ocean to avert iceberg peril has quite a contract on his hands.

That peace conference in London has been a prolonged session of "do nothing."

Boston has to go hunting the country over for heads of departments, but Tech wanted something big done they stayed right at home and local product was equal to the emergency.

Revere is to settle the question of being a city or ward 27 of Boston. The Revereites have a hard proposition to decide between the two evils.

The New Haven road has been for the time being side tracked while that Maine railroad is having its little bit of trouble.

Helen Gould is to be married and not a word on the subject from that Colorado minister.

Some Watertown boys rather put it over on the "old boy," by building a club house on his land, then inviting him to become an honorary member. Such courtesy could hardly be met with eviction.

The new federal children's bureau claims that 150,000 babies can be saved annually by proper care. By proper care, possibly twice that number of adults could be saved in the same period.

No doubt the bureau of agriculture would accomplish more lasting benefits by evperimenting with staples rather than freak productions.

FRANKLIN AND BURNS.

People of the world over the present month, honor the memory of Benjamin Franklin and Robert, or "Bobbie" Burns. This month marks the natal day of both. Their memory never appears to grow dimmer. While occupy different spheres in the game of life, both were useful. They each performed something in their day and period that has lived after them and will continue to live while the world lasts. The songs of Burns will be sung unto the end of time, and more especially by the people of his native land and their ancestors in all parts of the world. They have helped to cheer and stimulate.

Franklin's inventions, his writings, his quaint advice and marvelous powers of diplomacy will likewise endure. They both had their failings, but those are obscured and forgotten by the great work they have done for humanity, amusing, instructing, lightening burdens, cheering, providing measures for the betterment of mankind, and it is those brighter sides of those two unique characters in history which will live long in memory.

USELESS RESEARCH.

Congressman Moss, chairman of the house committee on agricultural expenditures believes that the department is expending money freely on freak experiment and research which could be used to better advantage in the investigation of staple crops. Undoubtedly he has good grounds for his contention. The average person cares very little for the production of spineless cacti and similar stunts. On the whole it is not quite clear that cacti of any kind, whether humpbacked, straightbacked, chicken breasted or otherwise is of very great use or import. Farmers are losing great sums annually through the ravishes of cereal diseases. The money wasted on this freak experiment could be used to better advantage in seeking some remedy for the evil noted which would save the farmer and at the same time lessen the price to the consumer and thus add another wedge to the solution of the problem of high cost of living.

HARD ON THE BABIES.

According to the first report of the new federal children's bureau, 300,000 babies die in this country every year, and half of this number might be saved if simple methods known to science were applied. Those are startling figures which are presented. They must be accepted because this board has devoted the time and research necessary to gather the statistics and they have made a nation wide campaign. The bureau further says that to apply those methods, it is necessary to have good statistics and immediate reports of births. In other words the contention of the bureau is that in cases where people are poor, uneducated, not conversant with the proper treatment of children, the death rate might be decreased if proper authorities were notified in time to take the matter in hand. Physicians and others who attend child births, and who of necessity be made aware of the conditions surrounding the infant and the proper degree of ability of its parents to care for it should immediately report the case to some body armed with authority to take the matter in hand. Admittedly the board of health would be a proper body to act in such cases. A measure which would require immediate reports to the board of health or some other body to whom the power of supervision and action is granted, with the right to take proper measures to insure the healthful care of each infant would lessen this enormous death rate, which the board claims is not justifiable in this enlightened age.

Massachusetts Laws now provide that birth returns must be made with the board of health or its agent, within 30 days of the birth. In many cases even this provision is not lived up to as strictly as the law requires. But even this falls far short of meeting an emergency pointed out by the national bureau. Under the facts which they have gathered and the conditions pointed out the report should be immediate to be of any good.

Such a loss of life as pointed out is criminal and careless in the extreme. The poor little one who enters this world should have just as much chance as those who have preceded him or her. The subject is one that will no doubt be given country wide attention which may lead to a uniform measure which will tend to prevent such a whole sale death rate due to ignorance, carelessness and lack of proper utility.

THE RETENTION OF ADRIANOPLE

nsisted Upon by Turkey as an Imperial Necessity

PORTE'S DECISION MEANS WAR

Communication In Form of Ultimatum Will Be Drawn Up by Allies, Who Are Reported to Be In Good Trim For Resumption of Hostilities—May Come This Week

London, Jan. 20.—Turkey's decision, as indicated by dispatches from Constantinople, refusing to cede Adrianople and the Ægean islands, will, it is believed, lead to the resumption of hostilities within a week.

The Balkan allies had already decided to wait until the middle of this week for the answer of the porte to the joint note of the powers, and, if then the reply was not received or was unsatisfactory, to address a communication to the Turkish delegates in the form of a definite ultimatum, allowing Turkey forty-eight or seventy-two hours for a final decision.

Should Turkey at that time be unable or unwilling to come to the allies' terms the Balkan plenipotentiaries decided that a rupture of the peace conference was inevitable. Sofia, Belgrade and Cettinje would renounce the armistice and four days later the war would be resumed.

The allies do not see the possibility of such proposals from Turkey or the powers as would allow of a resumption of the negotiations here, unless the porte openly declared its readiness to give up Adrianople. So far, the instructions of the Bulgarian delegates are categorical on this subject and do not admit of a discussion of the proposal that Turkey retain Adrianople even after dismantling the fortifications, or of continuing the negotiations on the other conditions of peace, leaving the question of Adrianople to be disposed of last.

Servia, Montenegro and Greece all support Bulgaria in this attitude. The success of Bulgaria would mean an easier accomplishment of their wishes, especially in the case of Greece, which, in the conquest of Adrianople by Bulgaria sees the Greek occupation of Salonica less likely to be disputed. In addition the allies feel that the time will never be more favorable for them to act.

From the reports received, it is evident that the Turkish resources are not in the best of condition, while, on the other hand, the allies, as the result of their long preparation, are nerved to a high pitch. The seven weeks' armistice has restored their armies and they have been gathering their forces at important points.

Throughout all the Balkan states, according to the plenipotentiaries in London, from the largest towns to the humblest hamlets, only the one cry goes up: "War to the bitter end—until our eternal emeny is driven out of Europe forever."

Reply to Powers' Note

Constantinople, Jan. 20.—The Turkish foreign minister submitted to the council of ministers a draft of the reply to the note of the powers. It is understood that it insists upon the retention of Adrianople for the following reasons:

First, because the Bulgarian inhabitants are in the minority in Adrianople, not only in comparison with the Moslems, but as compared with other Christians; second, because of the splendid defense of the garrison; third, the loss of Adrianople, containing the temples of the caliphs, would ruin the prestige of Islam; fourth, the loss of Adrianople, which is the gate of Constantinople, would endanger the existence of the empire.

"The porte therefore prays," continues the reply, "that the powers take consideration of the vital necessities of the empire and make representations to the Balkan states with a view to peace. Turkey sincerely desires to find a common ground of understanding and will even consent to fresh sacrifices."

Regarding the Ægean islands, the reply declares that Turkey refuses to abandon the islands near her coasts, but is ready to continue pourparliers respecting the distant islands.

NICKEL IN TICKET BOX

Woman's Mistake Eventually Yields Her Sung Sum of $3500

New York, Jan. 20.—Miss Marie Dobbs dropped a nickel by mistake into a ticket chopper's box of the Interborough Rapid Transit company a year ago, and is $3500 richer as a result. She was awarded that sum for damages for false arrest, when, upon the refusal of the ticket agent to return her the coin, she took another ticket from his window.

Haled to court, the young woman was honorably discharged. Then she sued the company.

Of the Craft Home Rule Bill Passed By the Commons

IRISH GOAL IN SIGHT

So much interest is manifested in the home Rule Bill for Ireland which has just passed the British parliament that its principal provisions, which follow will be of general interest:

"Irish Parliament to consist of a Senate of 40 members and a House of 164 members.

Control of constabulary to be transferred to Ireland.

Power of appeal to Privy Council or home rule bill itself may not be altered by new Parliament.

Religious liberty assured.

Power of veto placed in lord lieutenant, the executive.

Senate composed of nominated members; Representatives to be elected by constituencies of 27,000 or over.

Collection of taxes to be in hands of imperial service.

Imperial exchequer to pay to Irish executive an amount equivalent to expenditure on Irish service at time of passage of the act.

An additional sum of $2,500,000 to be paid Ireland the first year; this will diminish by $250,000 yearly until it is reduced to $1,000,000.

The postal services are to be handed over to Ireland.

The Irish Parliament is to have the power to reduce or to discontinue the imperial taxes, excepting the income tax and the stamp and estate duties.

The Irish representation at Westminster is to be 42 members, one for every 100,000 of the population."

WHEN THINGS ARE ASLEEP.

Wilbur D. Nesbit.

When I wake up in bed at night
The house looks very queer,
The hall lamp makes a sleepy light
An' ever'thing seems near.
The chairs an' things are all asleep
In such a weary way,
As if they'd like to fall a-heap
But simply have to stay.

The chairs look tired as tired can be,
Their backs all seem to ache;
The one that plays the game with me
Looks as if it would break.
The bureau sleeps as calm an' still—
I almost hear it snore;
The rug spreads out an' trys to fill
The bare place on the floor.
The window curtains sag 'way down
An' hardly e'en sway—
They're tired from showin' all the town
How straight they are all day.
The picture will not look at me,
For all their eyes are closed.
Except my papa's one—an' he Looks like he only dozed.

My clo'es are sprawled out on a chair
As quiet as can be—
They're tired from runnin' everywhere
All through the day with me.
An' ever'thing's asleep, except
The clock out in the hall.
It ticks away as if it kept
Awake to call us all.

—Father, mother and two sons will be students at the same time at Washington State college. W. W. King, a wealthy farmer living near Ritzville, Wash., accompanied by his wife and two grown sons, have enrolled. The men will take a short course in agriculture, and Mrs. King will "brush up" on theoretical cooking in the domestic science department.

HAVERHILL DOESN'T NEED DETECTIVES

Cannot Interfere With the Work of the Local Police

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 20.—More than a score of private detectives who have been employed by members of the Shoe Manufacturers' association in coping with the strike were withdrawn as the result of the ultimatum of City Marshal Mack that he would not allow imported detectives to interfere with the work of the local police.

Following a conference between Mack and Commissioner of Public Safety Bartlett, the municipal council, the board of trade and the Manufacturers' association, the former declared he was amply able to cope with the situation and would not tolerate private "sleuths."

The marshal declared the strikers were all able-bodied men, for the most part natives of the city, capable of taking care of themselves, and presenting no such problems as the followers of the I. W. W. standards.

SHOOTS TWO, STABS SELF

Bridgeport Man Uses Revolver on Wife and Her Mother

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 20.—In a fit because his wife would not consent to reconciliation after a year's separation, Steve Sos, aged 25, wounded her and her mother, Mrs. Mary Sincola, aged 52, with five 32-calibre revolver bullets.

Later, when policemen sought to arrest him, he plunged a pocketknife six times into his abdomen. All three are expected to die.

Sos had called upon his wife at her mother's home, but she would have nothing to do with him. He put on his best clothes and called again, and upon his wife's continued refusal to be reconciled he opened fire.

LAMP BURNS FORTY YEARS

Beacon of Love Finally Explodes and Fatally Burns Its Ownehr

Salt Lake City, Jan. 20.—John Miller is dying as the result of the explosion of a lamp which he kept burning to guide a sweetheart to the home he prepared for her forty years ago.

The lamp was kept in a window as a beacon beckoning the way for a girl from Sweden, who, though drowned, has never ceased to exist for him. The lamp was surrounded by paper roses, and in attempting to extinguish the flames Miller was fatally burned.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

HALL PLACE M. E. CHURCH.

At the morning service at the Hall Place M. E. church Sunday in place of the sermon a roll of the resident members was called, each responding with a verse of Scripture.

A letter was read from Rev. J. H Humphrey, a past pastor of the church, which was received too late for the anniversary services, and a postal card was read from Mrs. Peterson, widow of a past pastor.

Messages were read from the shut-in members of the church, Mrs. Martha Loud, the oldest member, Mrs. E. V. Trask, Mrs. Emma Francis and letters were read from Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Richards.

The choir led by Charles A. Goucher, sang "Come unto me." The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered to a large number. A letter from Bishop Hamilton concerning the church paper the Zion's Herald was read.

The Sunday school met at 12 M. with a good attendance and a good interest.

Rev. T. C. Martin had charge of the Juniors at 3 P. M. Mrs. J. M. Francis led the Epworth League devotional service at 6.15 on the topic "As it is in heaven."

Mrs. Rev. F. H. Morgan of Wollaston preached at the evening service on the text "Prepeare to meet thy God." She said, "we see God all about us if we look into the sky on such a beautiful night as this and see the moon and the bright stars, 'the forget-me-nots of the angels,' we cannot fail to see God. God is manifest in nature, in the seed, the bud and the flowers, the trees and the grass. We see God in His Divine Providences. What we call calamities are oftentimes the means of turning us Heaven-ward and God-ward. We see Him in the sick room, in the death of a loved one. There is need of preparation in the life to meet God and we should take notice of the warnings given us. If we were engaged in a law suit we would get someone, the best one possible, to handle our case for us. So also we should be preparing a case for our Advocate, Jesus Christ, that when we are called before the Judgment bar of God we may have someone to plead our case for us," and she urged all to surrender their lives entirely to Christ and begin their preparation for enternity now. The choirs any "Come unto me."

The monthly business meeting of the Epworth League will be held in the vestry of the church this evening at 7.45 followed by a social hour and "Candy Pull."

The Ladies Aid will hold a quarter social at the home of Mrs. James McCormick Friday evening. The annual business meeting will be held at 7 P. M.

Wednesday evening the fourth number in the course of entertainments of Boston wil be the reader.
will be given and Miss Laura Walker

Prayer meeting Friday evening at 7.30.

After the evening service at the Hall Place M. E. church, Sunday an adjourned meeting of the Sunday school Board was held. The Secretary's report covering the reports of the various reports of the officers was read and accepted.

The following officers were elected: Superintendent—Alexander Stewart. Assistant superintendent—Julius Fuller; Secretary, Camille Fuller; Treasurer, J. M. Francis; Librarian, Harold Norris; Pianist, Miss Rita Hunter. The election of the Sunday school committee was laid over until Feb. 11.

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S CHURCH.

The Junior auxiliary meets this afternoon at 4 o'clock and the Men's club meets in the parish rooms at 8 o'clock.

The Woman's Guild will meet in the parish rooms at 2.30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and the choir will rehearse in the evening.

Friday evening the Girl's Friendly Society will meet in the Parish rooms at 8 o'clock.

The regular monthly missionary meeting of the Guild will be held in the parish Rooms on Wednesday afternoon at half past two o'clock. Officers for the year have been elected as follows: President, Mrs. D. C. Miller; 1st Vice president, Mrs. H. D. Fowler; 2nd Vice president, Mrs. F. Waite; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Annie Clean.

Tuesday, Jan. 28th, the Woman's Guild are to have a supper in the parish rooms under the direction of a supper committee of which Mrs. Miller is chairman. This means a supper of the usual high standard of excellence.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

"For the invisible things, of Him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and Godhead" (Romans 1:20) was the text of a thought-provoking sermon on "God known by his Works" by the pastor. Rev. Mr. Horst said: "Every piece of work in the world implies a worker and every creation a creator. There is no part of man's nature which does not speak to him of a power beyond and above himself. In our study, wherever we may begin we are led to the realm of the infinite. Examine a grass blade or a flower or a stone, trace its origin to the utmost and you are brought face to face with God. Every effect must have an adequate cause. A stream does not rise higher than its source. Nothing is evolved which was not first involved. What then do we know of God? Can the finite comprehend the Infinite? It is not in human power to comprehend the nature and being of God, for 'no one has seen God at any time,' but we apprehend him through his manifestations and through these manifestations we know him. God is the Spirit who surrounds and interpenetrates all worlds and all existences—as St. Paul says 'above all and through all and in us all.' As it is of the very essence of Spirit to express itself, God reveals himself in the outward world, in the history of the human race, in the lives of men and women. The highest development of the human is always the nearest approach to the divine. Jesus is the most perfect flowers that has sprung from the garden of humanity. In him we have the highest manifestation of God in man. It is our privilege to be like him and so help make human life divine."

A number of former members, who have moved away, have accepted hospitality during the three days celebration. Rev. W. S. Key of Wortha, N. C., the first minister, Rev. D. M. Wilson of Kennebunk, Maine, who was the first to hold liberal services in Wollaston, Rev. W. R. Lord of Dover, formerly pastor of the Wollaston Congregational church, and Mrs. James E. Bagley of Toronto, widow of the second pastor, and many others have signified their intention to be present.

A special collection to help defray the expenses of the silver anniversary will be taken next Sunday morning.

The annual business meeting of the church will be held Monday evening, Jan. 27. Any member of the church, failing to receive an invitation to the anniversary will please notify Frank A. Page, 103 Grand View avenue.

There will be an interesting exhibit in connection with the 25th anniversary this week. Among other things will be found a bound volume of "The Sounding Board and the Angelus," published monthly the former by Rev. D. M. Wilson and Rev. W. S. Key, the latter by the late Rev. James E. Bagley, ten volumes of the dial, founded by the Rev. Frank W. Pratt, frame containing the invitation to form a liberal church, frame containing the call to organize the Wollaston Unitarian church, pictures of Wollaston forty years ago, picture of interior of the church at the time of the first children's Sunday service, Wollaston Unitarian scrapbook, cabinet containing the silver trowel used at the laying of the cornerstone, the official seal of the church etc.

Rev. Edward A. Horton of Boston has written a hymn for the 25th anniversary. It will be sung at the Saturday evening service, Feb. 1.

While the Friday evening meeting, Jan. 31, is open to only members of the church the Saturday evening and Sunday morning services Feb. 1-2 are open to all.

Special mid-week Lenton services for the deepening of the moral and spiritual life will be held as usual. Among the preachers are Rev. Chester Arthur Drummond of Somerville, Rev. Roger S. Forbes of the First Parish in Dorchester and other well known clergymen.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Bishop sail for England tomorrow.

Every woman in the parish should attend the meeting of the New England Associate Alliance in the church of the Disciples, Boston, Thursday, at 10.30 A.M.

Plants and cut flowers for the celebration are solicited by the Flower committee.

Rev. Henry Hervey Barber, D. D., Professor Emeritus in the Meadville, Pa., Theological school has written a hymn for the celebration. It will be sung Sunday Feb. 2, at the morning service.

At the Forum meeting at noon yesterday Frederick H. Bishop gave an instructive address on "Social Service here in Quincy."

Charles H. Johnson of Quincy gave his illustrated lecture on the "Life of Christ" last evening under the auspices of the Y. P. R. U.

One of the anniversary gifts are earphones, which will be ready for use at the Saturday meeting, Feb. 1.

HOLY NAME SOCIETIES

Of Three Catholic Churches United in One Service

SERMON BY FR. GRADY

The Holy Name societies united in a joint observance of Holy Name Sunday at Sacred Heart church, Atlantic, Sunday afternoon. Fully 400 attended, delegations being present from St. Mary's, St. John's, and Sacred Heart churches. Members were transported to and from the church in special cars.

The Vesper service was celebrated by Rev. Fr. John J. Coan, pastor of St. John's church, with Rev. Fr. J. P. Cuffe of Sacred Heart church as deacon and Rev. Fr. John J. Casey of St. John's church as sub deacon. The master of ceremonies and preacher of the afternoon was Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady, pastor of the St. Mary's church.

Father Grady spoke on the text, "These things are written that you may know that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing you may have life in his name," from St. John.

He said that Jesus Christ is our great teacher which of course brings us to his knowledge, and from the knowledge of him to his love and obedience. Thereby he becomes our model through life, our goal which we must reach only through following the good example of our teacher and the one whom we must love, honor and obey in order that we may be happy hereafter.

He devoloped the acquisition of knowledge in general with the knowledge of God as revealed in the Bible, pointed out how far seeing his truths are, how even though they are as old as ages they apply to the present day life, and urged in the Name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, all the young men of the city to aid in dispensing the adoration of the members of the Holy Name Society to others, that the spirit of reverence and obedience might be communicated to all who come within their range, that their sphere of life might be broadened, their life made happier and the death peaceful, secure in the knowledge that in life God had been found.

Music for the service was by the members of the societies under the direction of Miss Louise Costello, organist of the church.

SUNDAY BATCH BEFORE COURT

Drunks Not So Numerous As From Some Saturdays

George Brien was fined $10 for drunkenness at Braintree.

Owen Teevens was arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. Teevens was already on a suspended sentence of $10 for drunkenness. This morning the suspension was revoked and he was committed. The new complaint was placed on file.

Frank Mali a was fined $10 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Thomas E. Abele was brought in on a default warrant for failure to pay a fine of $100 for practicing medicine without a license at Quincy. Abele had paid $25 on his fine and on his promise to pay the balance the case was further continued until Sept. 12.

Camillo Demarco of Braintree was arraigned for assault on Officer Shay and for disturbing the peace. Cases continued until Jan. 28. In the meantime Demarco was placed in the custody of his parents.

The continued drunk cases of George F. McLaughlin and William Kelley of Quincy were called and further continued until March 20.

HANIFER WILL GO TO RICHMOND

Virginia Officer Arrived Today to Escort Him South

Capt. McMann of the Richmond, Va., police police department arrived in Quincy today to take Charles L. Hanifer back to that city where he is wanted for forging checks. Hanifer was arrested at the Fore River yards last week and was arraigned in court as a fugitive from justice. He agreed to waive extradition papers and return to Richmond. The case was then continued until next Wednesday to await the arrival of an officer from that city. Inspector Goodhue went to Boston and met Capt. McMann and escorted him to Quincy. Although continued until Wednesday the defendant will be brought into court Tuesday morning.

KILLS MAINE CONSTABLE

Woodsman Then Kills Self After Being Chased by Posse

Passadumkeag, Me., Jan. 20.—Maurice D. Bean, a constable, was shot and killed while attempting to arrest Harry Robertson, a woodsman wanted on a charge of forging orders for supplies. Robertson escaped to the woods, and his body was found later. He had killed himself with a shot in the head.

The body was found by pursuers who were close upon him. He had used his revolver upon finding that he was hunted from every side, and there was little chance to escape. He had traveled nearly fifteen miles through the woods and along the railroad, there being very little snow in the woods to retard his progress.

MAIDEN AWAKES TO THE TRUTH

Revelers Rondeau Makes Many Mysteries Plain to Her

At the Twelfth Night Revelys, Friday night, City Clerk Emery L. Crane inflicted a poetical effusion upon the victims present, which they all appeared to like so much that they demanded it be presented to the public and the chance has been taken so here they are:

It was a country maiden
Green as a leek was she
And she has come to Quincy town
Strange actions for to see—to see
Strange actions for to see.

She sees our well kept sidewalks
And in them much delights
And strolls around about the town
For to behold the sights—the sights
For to behold the sights.

What is that rapid wagon
That threatens all with harm
That is the Fire Chieftain
Out on a still alarm—alarm
Out on a still alarm.

What church is yonder edifice
Where all that great crowd go?
O maiden—'tis no church at all
'Tis a moving picture show—ture show
'Tis a moving picture show.

Why is the depot crowded
While loud the clock strikes ten?
The crowd awaits the nine five train
For it is late again—again
For it is late again.

Why is it that the people
All to that mud flat flock?
They are trying to find a place in the mud
That will hold a public dock—lic dock
That will hold a public dock.

Why loudly does that whistle blow
And why the bells two taps?
'Tis curfew—now the boys and girls
Will all go home—perhaps—perhaps
Will all go home perhaps.

Why do those mad folks jump about
And shriek like very devils?
They all have paid a plunk or two
For to behold the revels—revels
For to behold the revels.

Then the little country maiden
Went home and wisely said,
"Methinks a proverb I do recall
Not yet are all fools dead—fools dead
Not yet are all fools dead.

WATERWAYS DEVELOPMENT

To Be Considered at Conference of City and Town Officials

A conference is to be held of representatives of the various commercial bodies of cities and towns of Massachusetts interested in the development of inland waterways is to be held under the auspices of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, a recommendation to that effect by the committee on maritime affairs having been indorsed by the directors.

Last year several bills were proposed in the legislature for the improvement of waterways and they will again be sought this year. These matters will be taken up and discussed at the proposed conference.

ABELE DID NOT MAKE GOOD

So Goodhue Hiked Down to Lynn to Jog His Memory

Inspector Goodhue went to Lynn Sunday and arrested Thomas E. Abele of that city on a default warrant. Some months ago Abele was in court in Quincy charged with the practice of medicine without a license. He was found guilty and a fine of $100 imposed. His sentence was suspended until Dec. 31 in order that he might have time in which to pay his fine. He did not pay up however and on Dec. 31, when the case was called he was defaulted. He was brought to Quincy Sunday night. He was arraigned in court this morning.

MURDERERS IN UTAH

Judge Favors Permitting Them to Take Tehir Own Lives

Salt Lake City, Jan. 20.—The method to be used hereafter in executing criminals in the state of Utah has become a topic widely discussed since the legislature convened two weeks ago. The latest idea expressed is that condemned criminals be allowed to take their own lives after they have exhausted every means to have the death sentence set aside.

The state law now provides that condemned criminals be executed either by shooting or hanging, the choice to be made by the person to be executed. Governor Spry in his message to the legislature recommended that the state adopt the electric chair. Judge Marioneux of this city has issued a statement in which he sets forth the advantages of the Chinese custom permitting a condemned criminal to commit suicide.

HOLDS UP MAIL TRAIN

Lone Bandit Makes Big Haul and Successful Getaway In Alabama

Anniston, Ala., Jan. 20.—A lone bandit rifled the mail car of Southern Railway passenger train No. 12 near Riverside, Ala., and escaped with what is said to be valuable registered packages. Only one mail clerk was in the car, E. L. Cragman, and he was cowed by the robber with a revolver.

It is believed the bandit boarded the train at Lincoln, Ala., when a stop was made for water. Soon after he gained entrance to the mail car through an end door and covered Cragman with a revolver.

The robber demanded that Cragman hand over to him all the registered mail. As the train slowed down for the Riverside stop the robber leaped from the car and escaped. Railroad detectives, aided by residents of the Riverside section, searched the country but without avail.

Engineers and Firemen on Strike For Higher Wages

NO FREIGHT TRAINS RUNNING

Passenger Service Partly Maintained by Strikebreakers—Three-Quarters of Bumper Potato Crop Awaiting Shipment to Tide Water Points—Paper Cars Are Held Up

Bangor, Me., Jan. 20.—Strike-breakers are in the cabs of the Bangor and Aroostook railroad engines and an attempt is being made to keep the passenger trains on time despite the absence of the regular 150 engineers and firemen who are on a strike. Freight trains are not moving.

The striking enginemen and firemen ask an increase in wages from 12 to 24 percent. For instance, the engineers get $3.75 to $4.30 per hundred miles. They want 17 percent more. They claim this increase is not more than the scale adopted by all other eastern railroads. They also want shorter working hours and more comfortable accommodations at the terminals.

No violence is reported. The strikers have already asked mediation, but were told that the railroad's "pocketbook is empty."

It is feared the strike-breakers, not experienced in operating trains on the long grades and sharp turns of the Bangor and Aroostook system, cannot move the freight. President Todd admits it will be several days before any attempt can be made to try to start the freight trains. He is sure, however, that the strike-breakers can keep the passenger traffic on the move.

If the freight of Aroostook county cannot be kept going it will mean that New England housewives will have to pay more for potatoes. Only a quarter of the Aroostook bumper crop has been taken to the tide water points, ready for shipment to the markets of New England.

The big newspapers of the country will soon know if freight on the Bangor and Aroostook is not moving. The Great Northern Paper company's big mill is located at Millinocket. This mill supplies many large dailies with white paper. Every working day in the year a carload of papers is hauled out of the Millinocket freight yards. Should freight traffic on the road cease these paper-carrying freight trains could not leave Millinocket.

Sheriffs and deputies yesterday swept through the towns and villages bordering the lines of the railroad and closed every barroom and 'speak-easy," seizing considerable liquor and leaving orders that any resumption of business will mean trouble as long as the strike of the engineers and firemen lasts.

It is feared that in the event of a shutdown of the mills and factories through the suspension of the freight service the idle workers might become riotous.

At Millinocket there are large Italian, Polish and Lettish colonies, and it is feared that in this and similar mill places any shutdown might be followed by the workers taking sides with the men on strike.

Both sides stoutly maintain they are certain of victory. In opposition to the statements of the railroad officials the strike leaders say that within a week there will be no wheels turning on the Bangor and Aroostook.

The strike, in a roundabout way, involves the sale of this big railroad system, built a long while ago by F. W. Cram of Bangor. It seems Cram was forced out of office by financiers of the road. Arthur Holland of Concord, Mass., took his place. Many Aroostook people resented the forcing out of Cram. They have been on the warpath ever since.

Their time for revenge has come. They won't give the strike-breakers food or lodgings and the railroad fears that many of the imported men will have to sleep and eat in the railroad cars.

SHOT BY A PROWLER

Night Watchman In Railroad Yard Perhaps Fatally Wounded

Boston, Jan. 20.—Alexander Dewar, night watchman for the New Haven road, was shot and dangerously wounded by a prowler about the railroad yard last night, near the South Bay tower. at the junction of the Midland and Plymouth divisions in the railroad yards. He may die.

Nearly a dozen policemen hunted the railroad yard and guarded all the outlets of the railroad terminal up to a late hour. They searched for a man 25 years of age, 5 feet 6 inches tall, of stout build, wearing a black overcoat and derby hat, but could not find him.

Death of Inventor Blake

Weston, Mass., Jan. 20.—Francis Blake, inventor of the Blake transmitter, and a prominent engineer and scientist, died suddenly at "Keewaydin," his country home here. He was 62 years of age and a native of Needham, Mass. He leaves a widow, a son and a daughter.

VOTING CONTEST

certificate was offered as a prize, but today the Contest Editor offers a big one, a certificate good for 1,000 votes, which will be awarded on Monday, Jan. 27 at 9 A. M., to the candidate making the largest gain for the week of Jan. 20-27. For example, if the largest gain for the week is 2,000 the candidate will be credited with 3,000 votes. If the largest gain is 2,500 he will be credited with 3,500.

THE LAST WEEKS.

But two weeks more of the vote coupon after this week. The last coupon will be printed in the Daily Ledger of Saturday, Feb. 8, which is near at hand. Are you ready for the final spurt?

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

WEDDING GIFTS ARE SELECTED

Men of Navy Have Rose Bowl of Gold For Miss Gould

LOVING CUP FROM OFFICERS

Soldiers Stationed In Forts and Railroad Men Also Prepare to Send Tokens of Esteem—Simplicity Will Mark Nuptials of Rich Woman—The De Sagans Arrive In New York

New York, Jan. 20.—The dimes and quarters which the enlisted men of the Atlantic squadron chipped in for something for a wedding present to Miss Helen M. Gould have been used to buy a gold rose bowl.

The selection was made by a committee selected from the crew of the battleship Delaware, now in the Brooklyn navy yard.

The bowl stands about ten inches in height, is something on the lines of a loving cup and has three handles. The amount collected by the men was about $3000. Each ship's collection was forwarded to the Delaware. The Marine Corps is represented, too.

The officers of the Atlantic squadron, who think just as highly of Miss Gould for all she has done for the men of the navy, have also taken the opportunity of showing their appreciation.

The officers of every ship of the squadron have joined in, and each ship's contribution has been forwarded to the paymaster of the Delaware. A gold loving cup has been decided upon and will be sent to Miss Gould.

The soldiers stationed in forts about New York harbor have decided on what they wanted to send Miss Gould, too. The first to act were the men of Fort Slocum. Up there pay day came two weeks ago and was the chance the men wanted. In a day or so, they had nearly $300 collected, and with this a committee of sergeants bought a silver service.

The men of Forts Jay, Wadsworth, Hamilton and Totten, the Forty-ninth artillery at Fort William, Me., the Seventeenth infantry at Fort McPherson, Ga., and the men of the proving grounds at Sandy Hook have got together something like $500. Colonel Maus of Fort Jay is the head of the committee, which will today decide on what to get. It is likely that a painting will be chosen.

The railroad men are not hurrying with their contributions, and whatever they unite on for Miss Gould will be sent her after the wedding. This is because the men connected with the Y. M. C. A. headquarters here are on the road, all the way from Maine to Buffalo.

Two days late and reporting a series of trerific gales in mid-ocean, the steamship Mauretania of the Cunard line arrived yesterday with many prominent persons known on both sides of the Atlantic.

Among the passengers were the Duke and Duchess of Talleyrand-Perigord, best known as the Prince and Princess DeSagan, with their young son, Prince Helie DeSagan. They are here to attend the wedding of Miss Gould, a sister of the duchess, and were met on the pier by Howard Gould and his family and representatives of George Gould. Within a few minutes the duke and duchess and their son, who is 3½ years old, had entered automobiles and were driven to Castle Gould, on Long Island, where they will make their stay.

For a rich young woman, Miss Gould will have about the simplest wedding that has occurred in these parts in a long time. As already has been formally announced, her wedding to Finley J. Shepard, assistant to the president of the Missouri Pacific system, will take place at Miss Gould's beautiful semi-country place, "Lyndhurst," at Tarrytown-on-the-Hudson, Wednesday afternoon.

"Lyndhurst" is referred to as Miss Gould's semi-country place because Tarrytown is really hardly more than a suburb of New York.

While "Lyndhurst" is a farm of 102 acres, with a wonderful manor house set on a slope overlooking the Hudson, and while it is true that there Miss Gould is very much of a dairymaid, her real country place is away back in the Catskills, in the sleepy old town of Roxbury, where her father was born and reared. So it happens that when Miss Gould sure enough goes to the country in summer, she goes to Roxbury.

The wedding service will be read by Rev. Daniel Russell, pastor of the nearby First Presbyterian church at Irvington. The wedding will be simple and sylvan, even to the one who ties the knot. Miss Gould's New York pastor is Rev. Dr. Evans, but Miss Gould apparently believes in harmony in weddings as in colors; hence a country parson for a country wedding.

Engineer Dies at End of Run

New York, Jan. 20.—Maurice Leahy, an engineer employed by the New York, New Haven and Hartford, brought his train into the New York Central station, took his motor engine to the roundhouse and died a few minutes later, supposedly of heart disease.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

NICE POTATO SALADS.

POTATOES make one of the most useful salads on the winter bill of fare. Should it have to appear often on the table it may be varied from time to time, now being served with mayonnaise, now with a boiled and again with a French dressing.

The ingredients of the salad should always be thoroughly mixed. It may be garnished with radishes, sliced or cut in roses, or with sprigs of parsley or watercress.

Two Novel Salads.

Hot Potato Salad.—Take small potatoes, wash and peel these and take off the skins and slice. Pour over them a hot dressing made of one-half cupful of bacon grease, one-quarter cupful of vinegar, one teaspoonful of salt, pepper or paprika to taste, onion juice or chives, if desired.

Savory Potato Salad.—Boil small firm potatoes and when they are cold cut them into dice. Put a layer of them into a salad bowl, sprinkle with a small quantity of blended oil and vinegar and a little finely chopped onion; add a thin layer of sliced radishes and pickled gherkin, then more potatoes, and so on until the bowl contains the required quantity, finishing with potatoes. Around the edge put a border of cress, from which the stalks have been removed. Scatter some finely chopped parsley and the sieved yolk of a hard boiled egg over the potatoes, and the salad will be ready to serve.

Tempting Combinations.

Plain Potato Salad.—Take four cold boiled potatoes which have been sliced thin, one teaspoonful of finely chopped onion, one teaspoonful chopped parsley, one tablespoonful diced bacon, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and one-half cupful vinegar.

Put bacon into a frying pan, add the onion and fry until light brown, then add the vinegar, salt and pepper. Mix the potato, chopped parsley and the hot vinegar dressing together and serve.

Rich Potato Salad.—The yolks of four eggs are used in this. The other ingredients are one teaspoonful salt, one teaspoonful sugar, one teaspoonful mustard, one of flour. Mix well together and add one-half cupful vinegar. Cook slowly until thick. Slice six good sized boiled potatoes thin and mix two onions, chopped fine with them. Thin the dressing with sweet cream and one tablespoonful melted butter. Pour over potatoes and onions, stir well and let stand fifteen minutes before serving.

GAVE FALSE FIRE ALARMS

Yale Senior Spurns Bail and Goes to Jail to Await Trial

New Haven, Jan. 20.—Edmund Pendleton, a Yale senior, has gone to jail, awaiting trial for pulling fire alarm boxes just to witness the excitement. Pendleton was arrested after he had been detected in pulling one box and after he had been frightened away in attempting to pull another. Several boxes in the same locality have recently been pulled, and Pendleton is suspected of having rung in the false alarm in all of them.

Pendleton makes no secret of his act and says he wishes to take his medicine. Several Yale professors and two local business men offered to furnish bail, but he refused it. He is one of the scholarship leaders of his class, but has worked his way through Yale. He is believed to have a mania for pulling fire alarm boxes.

ONLY ONE "BEST"

Quincy People Give Credit Where Credit is Due.

People of Quincy who suffer with sick kidneys and bad backs want a kidney remedy that can be depended upon. The best is Doan's Kidney Pills, a medicine for the kidneys only, made from pure roots and herbs, and the only one that is backed by willing testimony of Quincy people. Here's a case:

Charles J. Somers, barber, 17 Newcomb street, Quincy, Mass., says: "It is a pleasure for me to tell of my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills, for the benefit of other kidney sufferers. This remedy worked wonders in my case. Lame back and weak kidneys bothered me for ten years and nothing helped me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills. The promptness with which this remedy cured me was astonishing. My strength and energy was restored and my health improved one hundred per cent. I shall always endorse Doan's Kidney Pills when I have the opportunity." (Statement given September 2nd 1908.)

LATER ENDORSEMENT.

Several years later Mr. Somers was interviewed and he said: "I am only too pleased to verify my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. I still take this remedy occasionally and it keeps me in good health."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

YOUNG SLAYERS GO TO REFORM SCHOOLS

Three Boys Under Sixteen Caused Death of Japanese

Boston, Jan. 20.—Richard Powers, Jr., 13 years old; Frank Carroll, 15, and Timothy Lucey, 15, charged with manslaughter in causing the death of an unidentified Japanese whose body was found in an alley near Joiner street, Charlestown, were given indeterminate sentences at reform schools by Judge Bragg in the Charlestown court.

Powers was sent to the Lyman school and his companions will be confined at Rainsford island. The boys will probably be kept in confinement until they are 21.

Powers testified that the Japanese attacked him. "I pushed him away with my hand," he said, "and later I went through his pockets and got $8.11. Included in the money was a $5 bill which I changed in a store by buying 5 cents' worth of candy. Then I gave Carroll $4.50."

FOR LOSS OF SCALP

Senate Allows Census Bureau Employe $8000 For Injuries

Washington, Jan. 20.—Miss Alice V. Houghton, the census bureau employe who was scalped by the revolving shaft of a tabulating machine two years ago, was allowed $3000 for her injuries by the senate. Of this sum, $2000 is to be paid down and the remainder in instalments of $75 per month.

Some time after the accident Miss Houghton was given $4200 in a bill passed by the senate. This was considered insufficient and Senator Martin at once entered a motion for reconsideration.

Oyster Yields $400 In Pearls

New York, Jan. 20.—Henry Smith of 411 Catalpa avenue exchanged two pearls he found in an oyster in a West street restaurant for $400.

A Stirring Story of Military Adventure and of a Strange Wartime Wooing, Founded on the Great Play of the Same Name

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Meanwhile they had discovered that General Kelly's office adjoined the place where they had been marooned. as it were. They sought out the commanding officer, who received them courteously, heard them with wonderful patience—under the circumstances—and on the whole was quite sympathetic. But what could he do?

"I can give you your passes," said he, "but I don't see what you are going to hire to travel in, unless an ox cart or a broken down wagon, and the roads are almost impassable, even for stanch vehicles. Besides, it is unsafe for you to travel without military escort, and that I have no authority to furnish. If you ladies were prisoners, now, I might send you through our lines under escort all right."

"That may happen to us before we get home," whispered Gertrude flippantly, though she felt like crying.

"And this is hardly a fit place for ladies to spend the night in," continued the general, in his role of Job's comforter.

"Do you mean that we ought to go back to Baltimore?" asked Belle Boyd energetically.

"Well, you see, ladies, you are in the difficult position of southerners sent south. The present policy of the government is to send all southerners below the line to stay, but they must be well vouched for. I am only explaining the situation to you. I can't very well send you back without authority. Perhaps the best thing for you to do is to hold out at the hotel until I can telegraph to General Fisher. My orderly will notify you as soon as I hear from him."

"We will go back and wait," said Gertrude's companion determinedly.

They noticed among the groups thronging the tavern a half dozen gray coated Confederates who had been captured the day before. One of these, evidently an officer, paced restlessly up and down the room, while the guard kept an eye on him. He peered closely at the two girls as he passed them and they returned his gaze with interest. Gertrude was wondering if she had not seen that face somewhere before, when suddenly, without stopping or turning his head, the man dropped these words in a stage whisper:

"Are you going south?"

"Yes," answered Belle Boyd like a flash.

At the next turn he muttered:

"Take a word?"

Another affirmative.

"Get message to General Johnston at Richmond"—across the room again—"that you saw Captain Thornton here a prisoner."

Captain Thornton! Then it was he—Edward Thornton, Gertrude's Charleston acquaintance of a year ago last spring.

"What shall you do?" she whispered Belle Boyd.

"That will depend on what they are going to do with us here," was the nonchalant reply. "I know this officer. He is an important man. If I can help him out I shall do so."

CHAPTER VI.

Shenandoah's Daughter.

PRESENTLY an orderly came in with a telegram from General Fisher to General Kelly. Its purport was that the ladies had been sent south at their own request and no further intervention would be practicable.

"A pretty plight we're in!" exclaimed Gertrude, more loudly than she was aware. "We can't go south, we can't return north, and we can't remain here."

"I'll tell you how you can get sent on," said one of the Federal guard. "You jest holler for Jeff Davis, and you'll get sent on quick enough."

"Hurrah for the Confederate flag!" cried Belle Boyd in shrill, sheer bravado.

Then, as nobody came in response, she led the way back to General Kelly's office.

"It was just as I feared, ladies," said that officer gallantly. "Now, the only thing I can suggest is that maybe you would be willing to take the oath of allegiance. That would simplify matters. What do you say?"

They said nothing, but followed the general into an adjoining room, where a couple of staff officers sat at a writing desk. Federal soldiers were lounging all about, smoking and noise making. A man at the desk started to read the oath aloud. Before he had finished the first sentence Belle Boyd cried out:

"Great saints! It's the 'Ironclad!'"

"We won't listen to it!" declared Gertrude promptly.

With that the two turned and marched out of the room. A loud roar of laughter went up, in which General Kelly joined.

"Just as I expected," said he. "I thought you were game."

"Now, what next, general?" asked Belle Boyd cheerily.

"If we must be hung, please notify us," added Gertrude.

"Another alternative presents itself," the general went on, seriously enough now. "Strange to say, there appears to be a Washington end to this affair, and I am expecting shortly to get word from headquarters. In any event, you will have to stop here over night. So if you will make yourselves as comfortable as circumstances permit we will hope for the best and await developments."

It was late in the evening when next they saw General Kelly. He handed them a telegram which he had just received from Washington. It read:

Miss Page and Mrs. Smith are friends of mine. See them through if you can. If not, will send on an officer to Harpers Ferry tonight. Answer.

BUCKTHORN.

"It is from Major General Buckthorn," explained General Kelly. "And here is a copy of my answer to him:

Will see them through. You need not send. KELLY.

As soon as they were alone together Belle Boyd asked Gertrude:

"Who on earth is Major General Buckthorn? I have never heard of him."

"I have," replied Gertrude, "and he is an influential Federal commander, as you may well believe. But how he ever knew of my being here in a scrape at Harpers Ferry and why he comes to my rescue as a friend in time of need, seeing we have never met personally, I can't for the life of me understand—unless, unless— Oh, I wonder? But, tell me—I am dying of curiosity about that Confederate prisoner who spoke to us—Captain Thornton, was it not?"

"Yes. You know him?"

"The Edward Thornton whom I knew in Charleston did not have that horrid scar on his face."

"It comes in very well as a disguise, then," laughed Belle Boyd, "for Captain Thornton is in the secret service. He is a comrade of mine, and I am going to help him. This meeting has changed my plans, so you won't mind going on alone from Berryville, will you, dear? I mean Miss Page."

"No, except that I shall miss your companionship and the confidence you inspire in me—Mrs. Smith."

Here General Kelly's orderly came to announce that an ambulance would be ready to take the ladies at daybreak, and would they mind sharing their room for the night with a lady and her three children on their way to Charleston?

The remainder of Gertrude's journey was comparatively uneventful, though it did seem odd at one point to have the Federal cavalrymen who escorted the ambulance called into requisition to protect her against southern stragglers as they neared the lines. She was still nominally a Federal prisoner. Nearing Winchester, a sentry demanded the young lady's papers.

"I have no papers and need none," she answered. "I am at home now. I am Miss Ellingham, and I am going to Belle Bosquet. My brother is in General Jackson's First brigade."

The Federal captain who had escorted her opened his eyes at this and said:

"I am sorry to release you, Miss What's-your-name. You might have more chance for enjoyment if you were to remain north. I mean," he added, catching a dangerous gleam in Gertrude's eye, "that you must find it dull in the south, with no beaux nor nothing."

"Our beaux are in the field, where they belong, sir," retorted the girl haughtily.

The captain bowed gallantly and made his adieu. Then Gertrude asked the gray garbed sentry where General Jackson's army was located at the moment.

"Lawd bless you, miss, nobody knows. He mought be in Richmond by now or he mought be in Washington. They do say as how a letter come along once address to 'General Jackson, Somewhere,' and he got it at Woodstock. But that was 'way back two weeks ago."

Mrs. Haverill, the colonel's wife, had an anxious and busy time of it in Washington. Seeing little of her husband and that little at moments when he was overworked and morose, she found congenial distraction in the companionship of Edith Haverill, Frank's wife, for what the fugitive had told Kerchival West at Charleston was confirmed when the elder Mrs. Haverill went to New York and found the unfortunate young woman suffering in silence, full of loyalty, courage and gratitude, but in reality knowing no more about Frank's whereabouts than any one else did.

At the warm insistence of the Haverills, Edith came on to Washington and took up her home with them. Here her baby boy was born and they christened him after his father, so that the name of Frank Haverill should still be familiarly spoken in the household.

Then the two women, like so many others both of gentle birth and of lowly station, but above all sisters in affliction, engaged in the work of ministering to the sick and wounded soldiers who filled the wards of the improvised hospitals in the patent office building and elsewhere.

At irregular intervals during the year Edith had received sums of money from an anonymous source, carefully concealed, but somewhere in the army. She knew it was from her husband, but the only time any word accompanied the envoy was shortly after the birth of her baby, when a brief loving message filled the young mother's heart with joy and gratitude.

This communication afforded no tangible clue as to the writer's whereabouts, but it was the means of setting on foot a systematic search on the part of Colonel Haverill, who beneath the mask of Spartan indifference had in reality rejoiced at hearing of his son's resolution to make atonement by enlisting as a soldier, as reported by Kerchival West after the farewell secret interview at Charleston a year ago.

Knowing that Columbia college, New York city, had furnished a large number of recruits to the local volunteer regiments at the first call of President Lincoln, Colonel Haverill directed his inquiries among such of Frank's former classmates as he could locate in the army. He was sucessful to the extent of ascertaining that his son had taken special pains, in enlisting, to avoid any possible comradeship with those who knew of his disgrace, under an assumed name he had in all probability gone south and joined the Union army of the Missouri.

With sinking heart Colonel Haverill thought of the unknown dead of the great battle of Shiloh, on the far Tennessee. And then, remembering that all evidences of his son's existence in so far as the anxious young wife and mother in Washington were concerned, had ceased some months back, he only shook his head when Edith and Mrs. Haverill asked him daily if he had learned any tidings.

The colonel and his wife were none the less fond of their southern wards, Gertrude and Robert Ellingham, now that of necessity they no longer stood toward them in loco parentis.

Whatever stern military aloofness the Federal military officer may have felt obligatory upon him was compensated by a new tenderness on the part of Mrs. Haverill, particularly toward Gertrude, whom she regarded as the innocent victim of a most unfortunate political misunderstanding. This feeling Gertrude reciprocated and equally without a suspicion of resentment.

Mrs. Haverill and Gertrude, as has been intimated, maintained a practically continuous correspondence. Gertrude wrote regularly to her Confederate brother, Robert Ellingham. Madeline West, on the other side of the Mason and Dixon line, also wrote to Robert, her "rebel" sweetheart, in a nonpartisan way, which also was quite different from sisterly. Of course, Bob wrote to both the girls, and it would have been highly embarrassing if he had ever got the epistles mixed. Madeline answered the copious letters and inquiries of her brother, Kerchival West, as best she could.

Jenny Buckthorn was heard to remark that Captain Heartsease's pen was mightier than his sword, so there must have been some epistolary interchange between these two also when the captain was away from Washington. As for General Buckthorn, still at home slowly recovering from his wound, and Colonel Haverill, preoccupied with active military responsibilities, these two old soldiers stuck doggedly to their respective duties and kept their own counsel.

Such was the complicated, unorganized system of "grapevine telegraph," which in civil war time poetically did the service of what in latter days would be called the wireless.

Sheriff of New York Says He Is Prepared to Handle Ettor

HARBURGER'S WARNING

Learns What "Sabottage" Means and Prepares to Take Action

New York, Jan. 20.—Should Joseph Ettor attempt this evening in Carnegie hall to outline a drastic I. W. W. program he will be promptly squelched by Sheriff Harburger and a force of fifty men. Harburger said:

"I do not believe in sabottage. At first I did not know what the word signified, as it is not in the dictionary. I learned the definition through inquiry and if that method of bringing employers to terms is advocated by Ettor or any other speaker I shall take action.

"I have 1600 men whom I can call upon for duty," continued Harburger, "but I am satisfied that fifty well-armed men and myself will be able adequately to handle this 'sabottage' matter."

With a year to plan out the events, costumes and having a larger hall the affair promises to be an event of even greater fun and frolic.

ITALIANS CELEBRATING

With Bombs Caused Disquieting Disturbances Friday

MYSTERY NOW CLEARED

The earthquake theory commonly advanced by those who heard the mysterious Friday evening explosions which puzzled Quincy residents has also been exploded. Investigation finally located the rumblings as being aerial bombs sent up by Randolph Italians in celebration of Jan. 17, St. Anthony's day.

Frank Dianto, was the leader and with his fellow countrymen used an elaborate display of fireworks in Depot Square, Randolph.

The bombs, heavily charged, evidently ascended to unknown dizzy heights and were borne rapidly towards Quincy by the Southwest wind. Two of them at least exploded while over Quincy Point and fired a train of inquiries.

The celebration outrivaled many of the more expensive Fourth of July celebrations and attracted a large crowd.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

Interesting services were held at the Wollaston Methodist church Sunday. In the morning Rev. Wesley Wiggin, the pastor preached on "True Guidance" and in the evening on "The Reasons for Trusting God." The Sunday school was in charge of Mr. J. A. Sedgwick, the superintendent who summed up the lessons as follows: There are six downward steps is sin. He made use of the flag as taking tempting and suffering. There is bound to be suffering where there is sin. He made use of thee flag as he held it up he asked what it stood for. After several replies he said it stands for something. If any foreign foe should tear down the flag the peope would fight in its defence. Eve hurled defiance to God and God would not stand for it. When Eve defied God there was suffering. If the hand should be tied to one's side it would soon become paralized. We should keep the mind in the right channel. Boys and girls should choose right things. Eve didn't choose right things. There was a large number present. Mrs. Dewsnaps class took the banner for perfect attendance for the month of December. Mr. Belcher's and Mr. Murray's classes were well represented as was the Royal Daughters and the Wiggin classes.

The Primary Department was in charge of Mrs. Belcher. The New Library adds much to the convenience of those having it in charge.

At the prayer meeting Thursday evening An Outline of the Plan for Agressive Work in all the churches as presented by Bishop Henderson will be considered.

The finance committee are arranging for a lecture course to begin soon with Bishop Hamilton's great lecture on Boston's Four Hundred.

A large number was present at the Junior League service which was led by Miss Florence Palmer with Miss Marjorie Fownes as pianist.

Walter Sutermeister led the Epworth League meeting. Miss Helen Cobb presided at the piano. Frank Dunham and Raymond Cassidy sang a duet.

The music for the day was in charge of Mrs. F. G. Bennett, the organist. The preludes and postludes weree wisely selected and well rendered. The choir sang for a response "Almighty God, in Humble Prayer" and for the evening solo, Miss Marguerite Louise Holbrook sang "Like as a Father." F. A. Sutermeister led the praise at the evening service.

Queen Esther Circle will meet with Miss Florence Bennett Wednesday at 7.45 o'clock. Next Sunday Rev. Harold Mohn of Norwood will preach at the morning service.

FINNISH CHURCH.

Rev. A. E. Hart of Worcester cooperated with Rev. John E. Lillback in officiating at the Sunday services at the Finnish Congregational church. New classes were organized in the Sunday school and Rev. M. Hart addressed the Christian Endeavor Society.

Wednesday evening the officers of the coming yedr will be chosen. Thursday evening there wil be a short sermon by Rev. John Lillback, followed by testimonials and prayers.

CAPT. LARKIN PROBABLY LOST

Owner of Fortune Believes Skipper One of Ill Fated Men

REPORTED MISSING

The tern schooner Future, owned by R. R. Freeman of this city, which was abandoned off Cape Hatteras in the heavy gale of Jan. 2 and 3 probably carried down with her three of a crew of eight, according to marine reports and Mr. Freeman is of the impression that Capt. A. C. Larkin of Jamaica Plain was lost with two of the crew.

A dispatch was received from Brow Head, Ireland that the steamship Asuncion de Larrinaga, bound for Manchester, had picked up five of the crew of the Future. The names of those rescued is unknown and the captain was not mentioned in the dispatch.

No relative has received any word regarding those saved and Mr. Freeman this morning had no definite information, other than the report from the Larringa.

Capt. Larkin succeeded Capt. Angus McDonald who left the Future at Tampa because of ill health.

The Future was built at East Boston by John Brooks in 1900. Of 600 tons register, she carried a crew of eight. She has been in trouble a number of times, was delayed being launched by low tides, went ashore on Chatham Bar and finally abandoned.

The Norwegian steamer Dageid on a voyage from Hayti to Philadelphia reported sighting the Future with boats missing, crew not on board and seas breaking over her and settled well in the water.

IS TIRED OF TRYING TO EVADE ARREST

One of Pepperell Bank Robbers Promises to Surrender

Pepperell, Mass., Jan. 20.—The release at Calgary, Alberta, of Louis Gibson from a thirty days' imprisonment for vagrancy will be followed soon, it is expected, by his arrest in Montana on a charge of being concerned in the sensational $14,000 robbery of the National bank in East Pepperell on Dec. 2, 1908.

From telegrams and letters received by the Pepperell police from the Calgary authorities it was learned that Gibson had confessed to being one of the robbers.

He said he had been in Germany, had spent his share of the loot, and he was tired of trying to evade arrest. He said he would leave for the States as soon as he was released, and would give himself up at Sweet Grass, Mont., the first town across the border.

EVERETT TEAM FALSE ALARM

Quincy Five Walked Away From Them at Basket Ball

OTHER GAME A CORKER

The much heraldeed Everett Independent Team did not prove to be up to expectations Saturday night at the Y. M. C. A. Gym. Brickly and Brock did not appear with the team and no doubt their absence handicapped the visitors quite a bit. No reason could be given by their manager for their non appearance, but it was learned this morning that Brock had played against the Quincy Silent Five at Melrose and had no idea of coming to Quincy, although his name was forwarded as a player.

The game was so one-sided that it was most uninteresting. The local players proving to be so far superior in all parts of the play. Piercotte, the Everett High School foot-ball star, was the only one of the visitors who showed any form at all and he marred his good playing by insisting on playing dirty every opportunity he had. Wallace Kemp of Quincy filled in for the Everett Team as they had only four men on the floor. He played well, but plainly showed lack of practice.

The Second team game was a banner game. The Chelsea Y. M. C. A. team was supposed to be an easy proposition for most 2nd teams but evidently they have been greatly underestimated for they put up a fine game.

The first half was rather one-sided, the score ending 23 to 10 in Quincy's favor, but at the beginning of the second half the visitors showed that they had become acquainted with the floor and they commenced to score goal after goal. Dineen and Thomas had been taken from the Quincy lineup and Miller and Corthell substituted. The change no doubt affected the local players team work, as the visitors had pulled the score up to 23 to to 25 before their scoring was stopped. Price and Pinel then got busy and Corthell and Miller decided to take an interest in the game, and with 7 goals between them the game ended 39 to 27. Floyd and Burke did some fine work in this session. Floyd's passing and dribbling being the features of the game. This half ended 17 to 16 in favor of Chelsea.

GERSTEL LOST.

Billy Gerstel, a familiar figure in all athletic events of the Quincy A. A. lost to H. Duffy of Jamaica Plain in the 158 pound class bouts at the B. A. A. Saturday night. Weighing in at 156, Gerstel disposed of J. Harmon, 160 pounds, in three rounds. Duffy drew a bye and entered the finals in fresh condition, while Gerstel was considerably slowed up by his previous bout. It is thought that a 12 round bout will be arranged between the two.

All of Quincys boxers are priming themselves. At the North Qiuncy A. A., "Webb" McDonald, known as Eddie Reagan, Young Mullanson, known as J. McDonald, Bob Gerstel and an unknown aspirant for fistic honors, are working out for a belated season.

—The New York Press tells a story about a man in a small New England town. Somebody praised Longfellow whereupon the man in question said: "Well, I can't see as he's so much. Nobody would ever have known nothin' about him if he hadn't married Roosevelt's daughter."

RESOLUTIONS TO PRESIDENT

Protesting Against the Proposed Immigration Bill

COMMITTEE TO CARRY THEM

At a meeting Sunday morning at Hotel Bellevue, Boston, called by the New England Immigration Conference Committee, plans were completed to send a committee to Washington to present to President Taft petitions against the Burnett-Dillingham Immigration bill. These petitions were signed by thousands of Massachusetts citizens representing all nationalities and creeds. The committee will consist of about twenty and it is probable that Joseph B. Grossman, secretary of the Quincy Young Men's Hebrew Association will be a member. Delegates of the local Y. M. H. A., at the meeting were J. B. Grossman and Joseph Szathmary.

At a meeting Monday night of the committee appointed Sunday at a mass meeting to protest against the Burnett-Dillingham Immigration Act, the following resolutions were drafted and sent to President Taft and the representatives of this district in Congress.

"Whereas a certain bill, known as the Burnett-Dillingham Bill is now pending in the United States Congress, and whereas such legislation is entirely contrary to principle, and entirely contrary to the United States Constitution, and more especially to our Declaration of Independence, and is entirely contrary to all principles of our American institutions,

Be it resolved, that we raise our voices in protest, and let our voices ring and be heard in Washington, remonstrating and protesting against such legislation as non-American;

And Whereas our forefathers, the founders of this country, consisting mainly and in bulk, of a foreign element, and whereas this country today is at the height of its prosperity, education and enlightenment, the fact is that it is still made up of chiefly a foreign element, and whereas we have been liberal and lenient in thr admission of immigrants, and we have always opened our gates, to some poor, oppressed refugee, who was fleeing from his oppressors, it was not detrimental to us, but on the other hand, beneficial. We have grown and are growing richer and richer; there is production enough and room enough for countless numbers of immigrants yet in our country, and according to the conditions and situations of our country, the larger the population, the

WOLLASTON PEOPLE BUSY

Everybody Interested in Community House Movement

WILL FILL MANY WANTS

A joint meeting of the Wollaston Community House Committees was held Monday evening in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian Church. A public Mass meeting on this movement will be held in the Wollaston School, Friday evening at eight o'clock.

Many details were brought out last evening by the committee in regard to the various features of the proposed building. A well appointed lodge room will be included, of ample size to accommodate the fraternal organizations of Wollaston, and this feature will fill a long felt want. A large assembly hall will also be provided, where the various social gatherings, literary and musical entertainments and all meetings incident to a closely united community may be held. A small hall will provide for dances, club parties and the smaller social gatherings and also large and small dining halls, retiring rooms, and anterooms.

The building will be thoroughly fire-proof throughout, with ample exits, stairways and corridors, while the sanitary features will be on a par with the most modern ideas of high-class architecture.

The proposed site is on the corner of Beale and Greenwood streets, centrally located and readily accessible to residents of Wollaston Park, the Plains, and Hill district.

A summer roof garden is included conveniently located to the smaller hall.

The committee have worked hard and with honest efforts to provide for this growing section a social and fraternal meeting place of high order, which has proved so decided a success in the best residential communities of this country.

The committee hopes and confidently expects every one to attend the mass meeting and give their moral support toward making this what it should be, a success. It should be the duty of every loyal citizen of Wollaston to take an active interest in this great undertaking, a duty to his city, his family and to himself.

All details will be given at this meeting. The desire is to have a building not only adequate for present ideas, but one that will fill all future requirements and one that every citizen of Wollaston may well be proud of.

The movement is at present directed by an informal committee of which Chester I. Campbell is the acting chairman. They have been considering and investigating for two years.

The need of such a building has been felt by a number of organizations who have had individual committees at work on the matter. These committees are now combined and the whole force of the several ideas will be centered on the mass meeting, Friday evening.

Representatives from the men's clubs, fraternal orders and the local Improvement association, attended the meeting Monday night.

DEAD AT EAST WEYMOUTH.

Mrs. S. Bosilla Marden of East Weymouth is dead at her home, 12 Hillside court. She was the widow of Lewis C. Marden, was 76 years of age and a member of Steadfast Rebekah lodge, I. O. O. F. Three daughters and a son survive.

STILL IN HOSPITAL.

Driver Richard Callahan of the West Quincy combination is still at the Quincy City Hospital and is doing well.

A tendon in his knee was strained and he received other bruises when the apparatus tipped at Granite, Copeland and Water streets while responding to a fire Wednesday and threw him from the seat.

NO MORE RUSHING STREET ORDERS THROUGH COUNCIL AT LAST MINUTE

Revision of Rules Has Checked That Practice and Relieved Members From Sectional Pressure

Now Questions Can Be Considered on Their Merit. Batch of Matters Referred to the Mayor For Consideration

Public hearings and a debate on the adoption of the amendment to the rules of the Council reported by the special committee served to prolong Monday nights meeting of the City Council until after 11 o'clock.

A larger part of the city officials were present occupying the seats inside of the rail alloted them and it is understood hereafter that the provision of the City Charter which requires city officials to attend the Council meetings will be enforced. Before entering upon the business of the evening the city officials present were announced by the clerk.

The only member absent was Councilman Richards.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing Benson Myatt a special constable at the auditorium theatre Confirmed.

Under unfinished business Richard R. Freeman was elected by ballot as a member of the managers of the Woodward Fund and Property.

Supt. Conway appeared before the council to answer questions as to the relocation of poles petitioned for on Maple and Franklin streets. He stated that his company had no wish to remove the present poles but an abutter on Maple street desired the pole there changed as it was directly in front of an entrance to a store. That the pole on Franklin street had been changed at the request of the Commissioner of Public Works. The relocations were granted later.

A petition was received from residents of Houghs Neck asking that the name of the postal station at that section be changed from Houghs Neck to "seagirt." This was laid on the table until later when Councilman Ericson offered a resolve requesting the Mayor to petition the proper authorities to change the name of the postal station as petitioned for.

After some discussion it was referred to a special committee consisting of Councilman Ericson, Bailey and Whiton, the new rules having at this time been adopted.

A petition was received for the changing of the grade of Elm avenue from Hancok street to Huntington square and to change the location of the tracks from the centre to the side of the street. To be referred later.

Petitions for the apportionment of street betterment assessments were received.

A license as an auctioneer was granted to Thomas F. Phillip and his bond was appraved.

Several other petitions for minor licenses were later in the evening referred to the Executive for a report on them from the Chief of Police.

The special committee appointed to revise the rules reported recommending the following amendments.

Rule 1. Strike out the figures "7.35" and insert in place therefor the figures "7.45" so that said rule shall read:

Rule 1. Regular meetings of the Council shall be held on the first and third Mondays of each month, at 7.45 P. M.

Strike out Rule 23 and insert in place therefor the following:

"Rule 23. Special Committees may be appointed, at any time, to consider such matters as the Council may refer to them."

Rule 25. Strike out the word "shall" at the beginning of the seventh line and insert in place therefor the word "may."

Add the following words after the words "passage to be ordained" in the thirteenth line "three days shall intervene between the second reading and passage to be ordained" so that said rule shall read:

Rule 25. Every ordinance and every order which involves the appropriation of money shall have two several readings, with an interval of at least three days between the readings, and may after the first reading, be referred to an appropriate committee, and every such ordinance or order shall pass through the following stages before it shall be considered as having received final action of the Council, viz: First reading, Second reading, Passage to be Ordained, three days shall intervene between the second reading and passage to be ordained, and they may be rejected at any stage of the proceedings.

Strike out Rule 26.

Also add the following new rule.

"No appropriation shall be made for the rebuilding, or construction of any street after the first day of July, and any committee having such matter before them shall report to the Council not later than May 15.

All petitions, or orders offered, for street rebuilding or construction, involving the appropriation of money, after May 1, shall be referred by the President to the Council of the next year.

The Clerk of the Council shall advertise in January, notice that petitions, for street rebuilding or construction, received later than May 15. will not be acted upon during the current year.

This rule shall not be suspended, repealed or amended unless by the affirmative vote of three fourths of all members of the Council, taken by roll call."

And it is hereby Ordered:—

That the Clerk of the Council be and is hereby authorized to make such changes in the numbering of the rules, as may be necessary to insure uniformity.

Report accepted.

Councilman Sandberg moved to lay on the table. Motion lost on rising vote of 7 yes and 14 no.

Councilman Duffy saw no reason to defer action. They should be given a fair trial.

Councilman Griffin did not see the necessity of laying on the table.

Councilman Sandberg believed in fair play. He had not had an opportunity to study the changes. He believed in the old committees, except possible the Finance Committee.

Debate on the question was suspended at this point owing to a public hearing on petition of the Electric Light Co., for a location for poles.

Supt. Austin appeared for the company and stated why the poles were needed.

A. M. Parker appeared in opposition There were too many poles now on Dixwell avenue.

Mrs. Parker appeared as a tax payer and a registered voter to protest against any more poles. She objected to the idea of having her view from her piazza obstructed by a line of poles. She could not see the sky clearly because of the wires and the land view because of the poles. There was no necessity of so many wires or poles.

Supt. Austin was asked several questions about the poles and wires. Hearing closed. Later in the evening the order granting the location was given a reading and ordered to a second reading.

At 8.15 o'clock a hearing was held on the petition of the Gas Co., to extend its mains. Manager Nichols appeared for the company and stated that the extensions were to supply people who had asked to be given the opportunity to use gas.

George O'Brien appeared in opposition. He claimed to have been an inspector for the gas company when they were laying mains and having discovered things that were not right reported them and lost his job.

Mayor Stone replied that O'Brien had come to his office and made threats that if he did not get work he would do certain things. He had told the man to go to the City Council. Later he had given him a hearing and the charges were not proved.

There was quite a lively cross fire of questions and answers during which it appeared that O'Brien was not an inspector but was an employer hired by the water department to turn on and shut off water used by the gas company in puddling trenches.

The hearing was then closed and later in the evening the order granting the locations petitioned for, was given a reading.

The question of amendment to the Council rules was again taken up at this point.

Councilman Little said that the committee had spent two hours discussing the proposed amendments and that the committee was practically unanimous. He believed better results would be obtained The idea was to do away with all standing committees but matters could be referred to special committees It would give more publicity, which was to be desired.

Councilman Griffin thought we could act on the rules intelligently. If we do not like them they can be easily changed back again.

Councilman Barker thought that if it took the committee two hours to consider them that more time should be given the Council.

Councilman Thompson did not see how under Rule 33 they could be adopted at this meeting.

Councilman Devaney wanted more time to consider the changes. Later in the evening, after he had received more enlightenment he was in favor of giving the new rules a trial.

Councilman Whiton spoke at length on the question. Possibly there would be no harm by deferring action. He however did not think it necessary. He believed in all progressive movements and he considered this one. It simply means that we are willing to give the new rules a trial. It not satisfactory a majority of the Council can vote to go back to the old committees.

They will give a better opportunity for questions to be settled on their merit. It will force more publicity and will prevent any councilman getting up to say that he does not understand the question for if he keeps his ears open he will hear. It will also stop log rolling especially before election when orders are sometimes put through in a rush for votes.

Councilman Farquharson thought it

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The annual bargain period has arrived and between rushing through the advertisements and hustling through the stores the average bargain hunter is sore pressed for time.

President-elect has accomplished one good thing in eliminating the costly and useless inaugural ball, but the Washington merchants are now wondering where their guarantee fund is coming from.

Another would be reformer has gone out of his way to advocate a law for aluminum hats for women. Where there's a will there is always a way to plunge into the limelight no matter how ridiculous the proposition.

The dissolution of the steamship pool may mean a rate war, which will make it cheaper to run across the pond, but there is nothing said about the tipping pool being dissolved.

The allies may accept one half of Adrianople on the policy that half a city is better than none.

Kites are the latest live saving devices for ocean steamers. Plenty of people do not need to go to sea to go up in the air.

And we thought that big black cloud was eliminated yet here he is as usual getting yards of space in the papers and for what reason no one in the world can understand.

President Taft believes that if the Democrats are too hasty in granting independence to the Phillippines that a mess and muss will be made of it and a great many people share that well grounded belief.

The suggestion that the state buy coal and store it for the benefit of householders is not a half bad idea, but what have Gov. Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald been doing along the lines they promised to bring about a reform some weeks, aye, months ago?

The immigration like a good many other measures has its little joker. If passed in its present state it would prevent political offenders from landing on our shores, while it makes it comparatively easy for dishonest and criminal immigrants to land.

The Indians in Colorado are defying the government in refusing to give up one of their number wanted for violation of the law. Uncle Sam has periodical spasms of trouble with his red wards.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon leaves congress in a happy mood. Most any one would who had come to the millionaire class while laboring hard for the downtrodden voter.

If there was more action and less talk, much of the present "white slave" operation would soon be severely nipped by the frost of police interference.

Dr. Frank H. Parker gives a splendid manifestation of self sacrifice in taking charge of the leper colony in Penikese island.

If Congressman Curley is correct in his history we may have been worshipping false idols, for something over 10 years.

THE STUDENT'S TICKET.

The edict of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad to withdraw the reduced ticket to students is creating no end of a stir among all classes. It is difficult to understand the attitude of the railroad in this move. Of course it costs just as much to haul a passenger on a student ticket as it does a passenger travelling on a regular ticket. The practice to permit students reduced rates has been in operation a great many years, on practically all the railroads operating in New England. To withdraw that privilege at this time, will undoubtedly work a great hardship to many deserving students, who desire the advantages of advanced education in certain branches which are not obtainable in their own particular place of residence. To the rich and affluent of course the price in the transportation can make very little difference, but to thousands of less fortunate students, this ticket reduction meant a great deal during the period they were engaged in study. Under this system, it was cheaper for students to make daily trips to some college and live at home than to live in the city where the school or college they attended was located. The activity towards pursuading the railroad to withdraw the objectionable order is widespread. It has not been confined to those who are actually benefitted but to others who are ever ready to exert their voice, money and influence in the interest of those whom they think deserve them. The movement is so stupendous and so far reaching, that it seems as if the railroad would eventually modify its present stringent regulations and grant some concessions which would meet the situation.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL.

City planning, with the idea of beautifying any locality has secured a hold which it will prove difficult to shake off until some tangible and beneficial results are secured. Mammoth sign boards facing on a main thoroughfare and especially at the very entrance gate of a city doese not tend to improve a city or elevate it in the opinion of those who pass through it or make a trip to a place with the idea of making it a permanent home. Sign boards with properly designed and artistic fixtures are not particularly desirable, but they are not so objectionable as some of the screaming atrocities which are presented to the eye. Take a trip along Hancock street, some day down as far as Neponset bridge and look at some of the signs which adorn, (save the mark,) same vacant lots. Can any one agree that they add to the beauty of the scene. All sorts of advertisements are displayed, from the stage to and beyond that point. But when it comes to have a roaring tempest in coloring, announcing the beauties of this or that blend of whiskey, or the excellent qualittes of certain brews of ale or beer, hobnobbing with fancy pictures of favorite brands of cigarettes, then one wonders why Improvement Associations and the like do not get busy and enter upon a crusade against such undesirable exhibits. Of course people must advertise, but when the mania is carried to the extent of making a splendid thoroughfare, cheap and tawdry in appearance it seems time that some kind of reform was inaugurated.

THAT IMMIGRATION BILL.

The Jewish people in all parts of the country are bending every energy to bring about the defeat of the proposed immigration bill, or at least a modification which will not tend to discriminate against their race. Undoubtedly there has been in some years a class of undesirables permitted to enter this country, under the laxity of the prevailing laws and it is to prevent a further abuse in this direction that the present bill is aimed. But at the same time is there not danger that thousands of industrious and well disposed persons would be prevented from landing on those shores if the bill as at present constructed is permitted to become a law. Even at this late day it is claimed that there is a joker in the bill which would prevent so called political offenders in Europe and other countries from landing here, yet at the same time, a wide open door is in sight for criminal and dishonest characters. If such is the case then the bill should be reframed to wipe our such unjust provisions. Dr. Levin who spoke before a gathering of Jewish residents of Quincy Sunday, made a very reasonable arguement for his people. He pointed out that the Jews had been persecuted all over the world and considered America their haven of refuge. He asserted that to take that right away from them because they could not read or write was nothing short of a crime.

If those who could not read or write had been barred from this country during the past 50 years, it is certain that many of the cities of the country would be much smaller than they really are, and many of the now flourishing cities of the west would still be bordering on the wilderness. Those illiterate immigrants have done much to build up the country. Learning the lesson from their own limited education how many of them have scraped and saved and endured hardships untold that their sons and daughters might not grow up in the ignorance by which they were handicapped and darkened. That was empire building just as certain and strong as any of those who traced their ancestory from the Mayflower.

The danger, if any exists to this country, will not come from the immigrant who cannot read and write, but from the educated disturber, agitator, soldier of fortune, fanatic, and others of that ilk who are never happier than when stirring others to deeds of violence and bloodshed and shielding their own cowardly bodies by the subtlety which their education prompts and enables them to practice.

Complaint is made that many people come here only to secure enough wealth to enable them to live in peace and contentment in their own land. That class is of no benefit in the building up of this country. To prevent the operations of this contingent it might be well to question them as to their intent. If their purpose is only to reap and retire then they should be retired before the reaping process begins. Every one who comes here should be compelled to make known his intentions, and if later he desired to return to his native country he should forfeit naturalizaton in this country.

This should apply to the rich as well as the poor, so that the accumulator of great wealth by means of the common process of watering which has developed to such a tremendous stage at the present day, could be debarred from flirting with the naturalization of this country on the one hand and that of titled land owner and lord of extensive domains in another.

The immigrant who comes here should become a citizen of this country to share its prosperity or its set backs, and not be privileged to make his pile at the expense of the daily toiler and then fly away with his wealth, that it may be spent and enjoyed in another clime. This class can be of no temporary or permanent benefit to this country, and if it is possible they should be the ones barred and not those, who plan to come here for the balance of their lives, bring up their children in the customs and under the constitution of the country and to stick to the land through weal or woe whatever the consequences. Such a class make desirable immigrants and to debar them because they lack the ability to read and write yet possess respect and offer willing obedience to our laws and customs, would be to deprive the nation of many who would add materially in the future constructive work going on in this great country.

DOROTHY AND HELEN

Could Children Will Be Flower Girls at Aunt Helen's Wedding

FOR WEDDING REHEARSAL

Miss Gould, Her Fiance, and Flower Girls Are at Lyndhurst

Tarrytown, N. Y., Jan. 21.—Miss Helen M. Gould, her two little nieces, who are to be flower girls at her wedding, her fiance and Shepard's brother came to Lyndhurst today for the final preparations for the wedding tomorrow.

Two important details are being settled today. The marriage license must be procured and the wedding is to be rehearsed. Miss Gould and Shepard must get their license from the town clerk of the town of Greenburgh.

After the rehearsal there will be a dinner at Lyndhurst. Only seventy-five guests are to be present at the wedding, including the members of the Gould and Shepard families.

HUNT ACCEPTS THE CHALLENGE

Defies MacKay to Win in Washington Contest

ADDS AN EVEN THOUSAND

Yesterday, A. R. MacKay with a gain of 7,205 served notice on the other candidates in the Washington Inaugural contest that he wanted one of the two capital prizes. It certainly was a splendid gain for one day, but today Sturgis Hunt defies him to win. Votes count and today Mr. Hunt makes the biggest gain. He has increased his total by an even thousand, and has passed the 30,000 mark. He is still 12,000 behing Mr. Williams, but is 6,460 aheac of Mr. MacKay.

Mr. Bowditch continues to make a daily gain, adding 165 votes today.

Miss Morrissett, the West Quincy candidate, makes a good gain today, and says she has a few hundred reserved. She will remain in the contest to the end and expects to move up in the list.

Gains were also made today by Dan Scouler. Helen King, Peter T. Failon, Clara Stoddard and J. McCullough. Who will make the biggest gain tomorrow?

PRIZE CERTIFICATE.

It is three weeks now since a vote certificate was offered as a prize, but today the Contest Editor offers a big one, a certificate good for 1,000 votes, which will be awarded on Monday, Jan. 27 at 9 A. M., to the candidate making the largest gain for the week of Jan. 20-27. For example, if the largest gain for the week is 2,000 the candidate will be credited with 3,000 votes. If the largest gain is 2,500 he will be credited with 3,500.

THE LAST WEEKS.

But two weeks more of the vote coupon after this week. The last coupon will be printed in the Daily Ledger of Saturday, Feb. 8, which is near at hand. Are you ready for the final spurt?

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

OUTCOME OF STORY IN MAYOR'S PAPER

Boston Man Wants Election Inquiry by Legislature

Boston, Jan. 21.—Representative Gordon of Boston has started a move for a legislative inquiry into the charges that some members of the legislature were guilty of wrong-doing in connection with the election of Congressman Weeks to be United States senator. The charge was made indefinitely and without naming anyone, and appeared in The Republic, Mayor Fitzgerald's newspaper.

In the house Gordon offered an order that

"Whereas, statements have been made and published to the effect that some members were guilty of corrupt conduct in the matter of the recent election of the United States senator; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That a committee of five members of the house be appointed by the speaker to investigate said charges and to report their conclusions thereon to the house. The committee shall have power to administer oaths and to require the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents."

The order was referred, without debate, to the house committee on rules.

MAN AND WOMAN DROWN

Two Other Skaters Reach Shore Safely After Thin Ice Gives Way

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 21.—The second drowning accident of its kind in four days took place last evening when Miss Pearl Poreous, 17 years old, and R. G. McGrath lost their lives in Cook's pond while skating.

Miss Louise McGrath, a sister of the young man, and Earl Harvey were also precipitated into the water when the ice broke beneath the combined weight of the party, but Harvey managed to get Miss McGrath safe ashore.

Harvey then struggled to rescue the other two young people, but was unsuccessful. Last Friday two brothers were drowned in the same pond.

SISTER'S GRAVE FOUND IN QUINCY

Visiting Southern Officer Related to Quincy People

McMAHON LIKES THE NORTH

Capt. Thomas E. McMahon of the Richmond, Va., police will start back home this afternoon with his prisoner Charles L. Hanifer who is wanted for alleged forgery. Capt. McMahon was met in Boston by Inspector Goodhue who piloted the visiting officer about Boston's crooked streets and showed him many of the points of interest. This morning many of the places of interest about Quincy were shown him.

During the conversation with Capt. McMahon it was learned that he had a sister who married a Quincy man the late James Beahan, who was at one time a member of the police department. Both Mr. Benham and his wife are dead and Capt. McMahon was very anxious to find the grave of his sister who left home 35 years ago and whom he had not since seen.

He was taken to the St. Mary's cemetery at West Quincy where his sister's grave was located. Capt. McMahon said it would please his aged mother who lived with him when he returned to learn that he had visited her daughter's and his sister's grave. He desired to arrange for the perpetual care for the grave but learned that this had already been provided for.

He also has a relative in Boston whom he had never seen. The home of this party was located through the Boston police and this afternoon he will make a call on this relative.

Capt. McMahon who is captain of the Detective department of the Richmond, Va., police was more than pleased with his reception. He had no idea of what a pretty place the north was and was only sorry that he could not visited this section of the country at a more favorable period of the year.

On his way to Boston this noon he was taken for a trip over the Quincy Shore boulevard at which he was very much impressed and said that it indeed must be a beautiful spot in the summer time.

RESOLUTIONS TO PRESIDENT

greater the extension of prosperity. And whereas, in view of the facts above mentioned, the bill, if passed, will serve absolutely of no advantage to us, but on the other hand, is absolutely useless, and tends to high-handed bribery and corruption. Be, it resolved, therefore, that we protest against the passage of this bill.

If the object and purpose of the sponsors and supporters of the bill, be to keep out from our country criminals and undesirables, the Literacy Test can and will not certainly accomplish the purpose.

The Literacy Test is not a proof of character, because on our criminal records and annals, we find men of the highest education involved in the most atrocious and gruesome crimes. Be it resolved, therefore, that our voices reach the legislative and executive powers of this nation, to stay the passage of a bill bringing no advantage to us whatsoever, but on the other hand, which might be detrimental to us, and also contrary to that noble cause of Americanism, by spurning and turning about upon many a noble, but illiterate person, who cries for admission, and who, if admitted might turn out to be, with the advantages which we offer, the model type of an American citizen.

Louis Berman Chairman, Hyman Edelstein, Samuel Castleman, Henry Litchman, Moses Swartz, Harry Phillip Levowitch, Secretary, Committee on Resolution.

A letter was also sent to Congressman James M. Curley thanking him for his work against the bill.

BRIEFS

CITY COUNCIL

only fair that time should be given for the members to get an understanding of the proposed changes.

Councilman Ross opposed passage at this meeting. It can do no harm to lay over a week. He had rather come to City Hall three nights a week than come one night and stay until 3 o'clock the next morning.

At this point Councilman Cunningham was called to the chair.

Councilman Whiton said that he had seen matters in the street committee that had been passed along for the reason that it was known that it would be killed by the Finance Committee. Under these new rules there will be no star chamber proceedings. This will put matters before the public. If you want the citizens of Quincy to understand how business is done this is the way. There will be no, you scratch my back and I will scratch yours He hoped that they would be given a trial.

Councilman Little spoke about the work of the License committee. It would relieve them of much disagreeable work. Under the old rules councilmen were very much bothered by having people come to their homes on the granting of licenses. Under the proposed change they will be referred to the Chief of Police and he will report back to the council on them.

Councilman Bailey spoke at length in favor of the proposed amendment. He could see no reason why they should not be accepted. It simply means wide open publicity on all matters. He believed in talking out in meeting. Any question pertinent to the matter under consideration can be asked in the council. Rather come to the council one night a week and remain until midnight than come several nights and stay until after 11 o'clock. The facts should be brought out in the council. The Mayor has stated that he did not want to cover up anything, neither did the speaker. Under the proposed rules it is provided that special committees may be appointed on any matter. He believed it will be a benefit to the city. Matters should be as far removed from election as possible. Under the proposed new rules, relative to streets there could be no street matter rushed through just before election.

President Bryant went into the changes and explained them thoroughly. There were many things that could be cleaned up without the necessity of going to a committee. Much time is often wasted in committee work. He believed that all matters should be considered as far as possible by the whole council. Take for instance when the budget comes in. It usually goes to a committee and is thrashed out there night after night and then the report comes back to the council and the same thing is gone over again. He did not believe there was ever a council where all the members knew just what the different departments had asked for. The council and people are entitled to know all of the facts.

If you have the old plan of committees and happen to be on two of three committees it may mean two or three nights a week. Then the old rules provide for possibly a committee consisting of one from each ward and one at large. Under the proposed rules the matter would be disposed of more intelligently. It would be referred to a special committee and the men considered best fitted to handle that subject would be appointed on that committee. Under this method he believed that the council would be better satisfied. Then when matters are considered by the whole council you understand what you are voting for. The old way you are making the machine do double work. The plan is simply this, a matter comes to the council and any member can move that it be referred to a special committee and if he desires he can name the committee in his motion. If after a fair trial it is found that the new plan does not work we can go back to the old rules.

Councilman Thompson while rather inclined to favor would not vote for the amendment tonight. He believed that it should go over to the next meeting. It seemed a bad policy to rush it through.

Councilman Sandberg argued that the question should lay over until the next meeting. It would lose nothing by laying over. There are some people who will come before a committe who will not come and talk before a council. Last year the street committee looked at every street. He did not believe in railroading things through.

Councilman Beeman favored the proposed changes Last year he was on three committees Many times his committee went into matters thoroughly and then sent the orders over to the Finance committee where they were changed all over again, so that he felt that his time had been wasted.

Councilman Gauthier thought the part of the new rule relative to streets where it required three fourths vote to suspend the rule too strict and he moved that this be amended by having it read two thirds. The motion was voted down.

The rules were then adopted on roll call 15 voting yes and 6 no as follows:

YES—Bailey, Bass, Beeman, Boyd, Bryant, Corcoran, Devaney, Duffy, Ericson, Gilliatt, Griffin, Hadlock, Johnson, Little, Whiton:—15.

NO—Barker, Farquharson, Gauthier, Ross, Sandberg, Thompson:—6.

Absent—Richards.

Not Voting—Acting president Cunningham.

A motion to reconsider by Councilman Sandberg was lost.

The special committee on Rules reported ought to pass on the order directing the clerk to have the rules printed. Adopted.

Councilman Hadlock offered a resolve requesting the Mayor to have private way signs placed at the junction of private and public ways. Adopted.

Councilman Gauthier moved and it was voted to suspend rules 33. He then moved that Rule 32 relative to licenses be amended by adding a clause which provided that applications for licenses shall be accompanied by the fee for said license the same to be returned if license is not granted. Adopted.

Councilman Ericson offered an order for lights on Parker and Carlson street. Referred to Executive.

Councilman Devaney offered a resolve that the Commissioner of Public Works have the location of the telephone pole on the corner of South and Elm streets changed. Adopted.

Councilman Whiton offered a resolution that the Mayor be requested to have the Tax Collector advertise for sale all real estate tax for 1912 uncollected Sept. 1. The resolve was adopted after it was shown that the Mayor considered that it would be a help.

The rising vote was 11 yes and 9 no.

Councilman Boyd offered an order for $6,000 for the purchase of an auto chemical and hose combination for West Quincy. Referred to a special committee consisting of Councilman Bailey, Ross, Ericson, Boyd, Griffin.

The order for a fire alarm box on South Walnut street went to the same committee.

Councilman Boyd offered a resolve that the Mayor petition the legislature for authority to pay the reward of $500 offered by the city for the apprehension of Louis G. Restelli, the murderer, to Patrick A. Milford and James R. Qualey the two officers who fond the body. Adopted.

At this point the President referred all applications for licenses pending to the Executive.

He also referred the hundred or more petitions and orders for street lights that had come over from last years council to the Executive.

The order for a fire alarm box at Montclair also went to the Executive.

The resolve that the several departments include in their estimate the cost of water used by that department was taken from the table and adopted.

Councilman Hadlock offered an order for street lights at Norfolk Downs. Referred to Executive.

The petition for the removal of the old building on Beale street was taken from the calendar and the petitioners given leave to withdraw as the building had been removed.

Adjourned at 11.10 until Feb. 3, at 7.45 o'clock.

A MOUNTAIN ROSE.

"I reckon it's true that there is at least one romance in every life. From personal knowledge I can only cite my own case, but I'll venture that there was never a good, strong story written that did not find its inspiration in truth."

The author of this oracular deliverance sat with his children and his grandchildren on one of those great, vine-shaded verandas that belong to every pretentious country home in Tennessee. He was a giant slowly going down under the weight of years, yet to live in the past was to recall some of its vigor. Now his eyes brightened, his form straightened, his broad shoulders went back and his voice was without a quiver.

"You look the picture of her," he said to the little tot on his knee as he stroked her curls. Then it took a request for the story to recall the old man from his dearest memory "In those days," he began, "there was more family pride than there is now. Perhaps I should say that family prejudices were stronger. We had a caste as well defined as that in India. For one to marry in a 'lower' class was social suicide, and my folks, being of the so-called aristocracy, were among the stalwarts of the stalwart in upholding this intolerant creed. I became something of a heretic while completing my education, but it takes time and experience to get rid of a hereditary bias.

"We were fairly well off for those times, but I had an ambition to do something more than cumber the world as a mere consumer. This inclination rather troubled the family, but after numerous consultations it was reluctantly admitted that I might superintend the development of some coal and iron interests that we had in a mountainous section of the state, and still maintain my social prestige.

"I went at the enterprise in earnest, bringing a lot of men from Pennsylvania that understood the work and founding a primitive village of log cabins in a region as desolate as any encountered by the original pioneers. The miners had their families with them and all supplies had to be brought fifty miles through the mountain roads. The foreman was a big-hearted but shrewd and fearless Scotch-Irishman who was just to the men and loyal to my interests. His home was looked after by a daughter who had lost her mother years before. The men used to call her the Mountain Rose, for she had all its delicate colorings and was just as fresh and dainty and graceful. Though strong and lithe because of the manner of her life, she looked the patrician from head to foot, and had an innate refinement of character that no culture can supply. Her voice was musical, and, to me, her simple songs were more charming than the usual efforts of a prima donna. Her education was of her own acquiring and was strangely out of the conventional lines. Her knowledge in some directions only surprised you less than her tact in acquiring information in others. But I would never tire of talking of her.

"After our rough colony had become settled and was progressing finely, undesirable characters were attracted to the vicinity. Some men put up a shanty just off my land and stocked it with mountain dew. Numerous rough looking characters came there for the ostensible purpose of hunting and fishing, pitching their tents in our vicinity. I heard stories of gambling and the men were not as regular at their work as they were before these interruptions. Rosser, the foreman, wanted to adopt heroic measures for getting rid of these pests, but I saw no way but to wait for some breach of the law and then secure the intervention of the authorities.

"Our pay day came every two weeks and I brought the money from the nearest bank, in a town some distance away, having two good men go with me as guard. On one occasion, Nettie, the foreman's daughter, met us ten miles from the settlement, guiding us in a circuitous route, for she had learned through a wild young girl at the drinking den that there was a plot to waylay and rob us. Nettie had promptly pushed her way through the dangers of the mountain paths to warn us, fearing that delay in securing some other messenger might be fatal to us and at the same time endanger her informant. On the way in I learned more of the girl and her life than I had ever known before and she aroused that interest which is so likely to eventuate in love.

"It was a month later before we were freed from the snow blockade and the next time I went to the bank it was for double the usual amount. I took more men and we returned without accident. Even this did not give me the pleasure afforded by the joyous welcome of the girl who had so evidently been in dread while I was gone.

"It was just coming dark when I tossed the canvas bag containing the money to the foreman, for he was the custodian and would pay off at the noon hour the next day. I never felt afraid when he was on guard. That night the storm was upon us again, and with a view to making some arrangements for the better protection of the mines I sent for him. I never thought of the money till he appeared at my door shortly before eleven o'clock covered with dripping snow. Then he assured me that the treasure was safe with Nettie as no one would think of injuring her.

"We had been talking nearly an hour when there was the sound of a muffled cry and a body falling against the door. Rosser reached it with a spring and threw it open to find a woman stretched across the step. Quickly he lifted her in his strong arms and laid her gently on the rough couch, I had pulled before the blazing logs. It was Nettie, unconscious and apparently more dead than alive. Her long, waving hair was loose, disheveled by the wind and wet with snow that melted to glittering drops in the warm glow of the room. Her upturned face with its perfectly chiseled features had the unattainable beauty of the artist's dream. Through all that terrible storm she had made her way for half a mile without a wrap or even the slippers in which she sat while awaiting her father's return, for they had been lost in the first few steps. As I grasped the pretty hands to chafe them they tightly clutched the canvas bag to her bosom.

Trying to rise she said rapidly: "Hurry, father hurry. It was Black Joe. He's locked in the strong closet. I brought the money. You said you knew I would protect it. There it is. How Black Joe did curse and swear to kill us both. But I captured him," and her unnatural laugh told how intense had been the strain upon her nerves.

"We found the villian vainly trying to batter his way out, and in due time a long sentence put him out of the way. He had stolen in upon Nettie shortly after her father left. No threats could induce her to betray the hiding place of the money till she suddenly devised a scheme to keep both it and the robber. Appearing to yield, she told Joe to look behind the chest in the closet which Rosser had built of strong oak planks as a place of safety for his few valuables. He made her hold a candle while he searched. As he leaned over the chest, Nettie summoned all her strength and courage, threw the door shut, clapped the hasp over the staple and closed the hook that was attached. This she strengthened with an iron poker, and then, seizing the bag from under the hearthstone, hurried from her prisoner and his blood-curdling threats.

"I loved her and told her so. But she was as courageous morally as physically. She was not fitted for my station in life. Wait two years and see if I still wanted her. Her father was going to send her away for a time. I protested, but she went and I only heard occasionally through her father that she was well and happy. One night some eighteen months later I was at a pretentious social gathering in Memphis. I was not a society man, but had gone as an old friend of the family. Some one sang and I thought it the divinest music I had ever heard. As the singer rose from the piano I got a view of a regal beauty that seemed familiar to me, but I only knew her when the voice I had learned to know so well in the mountains responded to an introduction. It was Nettie, who had been getting her education, and never had woman accomplished more in the same length of time. She was the belle of the aristocratic circle in Memphis, but when I had drawn her apart she laughingly admitted that I had the refusal of her and that she was just the same honest girl she used to be. I protested so vigorously that we cut the probation period short. And she was your beautiful grandma, little one."

MILL WORKERS AND TRAINMEN

Offer Sympathy Strike to Aid Engineers and Firemen

NO FREIGHT TRAINS RUNNING

Potato Market of Entire Country Will Be Affected by Conditions In Aroostook Territory—Passenger Trains Are Run Under Heavy Guard—Coal and Pulp Shortage In Mill Towns

Bangor, Me., Jan. 21.—A sympathetic strike in big industries along the lines of the Bangor and Aroostook railroad, in support of the action of the engineers and firemen, is a possibility.

Officials of the unions, whose members are mostly mill workers, have sent word to the engineers and firemen's headquarters that they are ready to go out in sympathy upon notice.

The conductors and brakemen have also signified their willingness to assist by striking. All the offers have thus far been rejected by the Brotherhood of Engineers' officials.

Information received here shows that if the strike continues for any length of time the potato market of the entire country is bound to be affected, and prices for this staple will soar.

The Aroostook territory is admittedly the greatest potato growing country in the world, and it has long set the standard and price in the potato marts.

Extraordinary precautions are being taken in Aroostook county to protect the potatoes against the coming of extreme cold weather, which descends so unexpectedly on Maine. The growers are protecting the shipments already on the cars by stoves and are preparing for a strenuous campaign against tubers freezing in the storehouses while awaiting shipment.

All but one of the regular passenger trains, under heavy guard, left the Bangor and Aroostook terminals yesterday. Several trains were late, some four hours behind time. But no effort was made to move the freight cars, in spite of the protests of the manufacturers and potato shippers.

Although denied by the railroad officials, there are persistent rumors that some of the potato shippers are making threats of bringing suit against the company if their crops are not moved. Thousands of barrels of potatoes are standing in the freight cars.

Stoves have been installed in these cars, and fires kept burning, but the weather conditions are becoming such that the shippers are worried.

Not only is Boston affected, but the shippers hold contracts for seed potatoes that the south is waiting for. They declare that unless this stock is shipped this month, the planting will be delayed.

Aside from this, there is a growing shortage of coal in the mill towns to the north, and the paper mill people are getting low in stock.

No effort was made yesterday to move freight. The train crews had their hands full with the passenger service and running the mail trains. The Maine Central crews are taking the mail from Bangor to Northern Maine Junction, where it is left for points along the Bangor and Aroostook.

Both sides in the struggle take optimistic views of their positions.

IN COSTUME OF HERALD

Miss Milholland Will Lead Suffragette Parade In Washington

Washington, Jan. 21.—Miss Inez Milholland of New York city, whose designation as "the most beautiful girl in the suffrage movement" is said to have caused some heart-burnings, is to lead the suffrage parade on March 3.

Wearing the livery of a herald of mediaeval times, Miss Milholland will ride down Pennsylvania avenue ahead of a woman's band, which, in turn, will lead a troop of "petticoat cavalry."

Several hundred women garment workers from New York and Baltimore will march in tatters and rags behind a float depicting the injustice of the "sweat shop" system.

TWO YEARS FOR SULLIVAN

Former President of Brooklyn Bank Misused Funds of Institution

New York, Jan. 21.—David A. Sullivan, formerly president of the Mechanics and Traders' bank of Brooklyn, was sentenced to not less than two years nor more than four years and three months in Sing Sing by Supreme Court Justice Crane.

Sullivan was convicted of applying a note for $20,000 to his own account to pay off another note.

Heavy Snow Hits Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 21.—A heavy snowstorm greatly impeded traffic in this city. With trolley wires and third-rails coated with snow and sleet, street cars barely crawled over their routes. Telegraph wires were affected.

CEDE ONE HALF OF ADRIANOPLE

Reported Offer of Turkish Government to Allies

IS SATISFACTORY, SAYS DANEFF

Envoys Given Power to Order Hostilities Whenever Further Peace Negotiations Become Useless—Adrianople Said to Have Several Months' Food For Garrison

London, Jan. 21.—Unverified dispatches from Constantinople state that the porte will ask for a resumption of the peace conference and offer to cede to the allies one-half of Adrianople, Turkey to retain the Moslem section which Ottomans call the "Holy City."

"I have no official knowledge of the Constantinople suggestion to give up half of Adrianople," said Dr. Daneff, leader of the Bulgarian delegates here, "though I have heard the rumor. But I can say if such an offer is made the allies would certainly accept it, as it would be a step toward the acquisition of the entire city."

Diplomats were pleased by the reports from Constantinople and Daneff's declaration. It appeared that if the rumor were true it would offer a basis upon which the peace negotiations could be reopened, in which event, the experts said, peace would surely be brought about.

Full power to declare the resumption of hostilities against Turkey was telegraphed to Daneff and his colleagues by the Bulgarian premier, J. S. Guechoff, who told them to exercise it whenever in their opinion further peace negotiations became useless.

The representatives of the Balkan allies will, therefore, directly notify General Savoff, the Bulgarian commander-in-chief, that the armistice has come to an end as soon as it becomes apparent there is no hope of the peace plenipotentiaries reaching a mutually satisfactory arrangement. Hostilities may then begin in four days.

Bulgaria, Servia and Montenegro yesterday presented an ultimatum to Turkey giving the Ottoman government fourteen days in which to make a favorable reply to their demands.

The Bulgarians have discovered they have been completely misled in regard to the conditions prevailing in the beleagured Turkish fortress of Adrianople, and have consequently decided that a prompt change in their policy is necessary.

Two weeks ago they were informed the fall of the fortress could be expected hourly, but a recent council of war held at Mustapha Pasha, under the presidency of King Ferdinand, came to the conclusion that Shukri Pasha, the Turkish commander in Adrianople, had been able to economize the supplies in the fortress to such an extent that the garrison would be able to resist perhaps for several months more.

Bulgaria has determined to force a speedy solution, either by concluding peace or resuming the war, so as to put an end to the heavy expenditure and to permit the men under arms, who comprise virtually the whole of the able-bodied male population of Bulgaria, to return to agricultural work.

The Servians have decided to present today to the powers the memorandum they have drafted detailing their desires in regard to territorial changes arising out of the war. Servia will ask to be permitted to occupy permanently the eastern part of the district of Novipazar bordering on the Servian frontier, and also the entire region eastward from the river Drin to Lake Ochrida, as well as the fortress of Monastir, which the Servian troops captured from the Turks after a severe fight.

DEMURRER THROWN OUT

Lunn Must Stand Trial For Inciting Strikers to Riot

Herkimer, N. Y., Jan. 21.—The demurrer filed by Mayor Lunn of Schenectady to the indictment charging him with incitfig to riot was thrown out of court. Feb. 17 was set as the date for Lunn's trial on the indictment.

The indictment on which Lunn will be tried charges him with inciting striking textile workers to riot during the recent disturbances here.

Utes Prepare For Last Stand

Cortez, Col., Jan. 21—Without leaving a clue to their destination, the band of fifty Ute Indians who left the Ute reservation Saturday rather than deliver to the civil authorities or the Indian agent Big Rabbit, who shot and seriously wounded a sheepherder, left their retreat in the mountains yesterday for what probably will be the last stand of the Indian against the white man's rule.

A Story From France

Beziers, France, Jan. 21.—A cemetery sexton's wife cleaned a figure of the Virgin with her apron, and, according to report, when accidentally she touched a paralytic child with the apron, the child was cured.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

VALENTINE DAY RECIPES.

SPECIAL dishes for Valentine day entertainments need only be got up in pink and white or pale green and white and molded in heart shapes to be timely and acceptable.

As for table decorations, heart shaped baskets filled with spring flowers are the simplest and prettiest embellishments. If you have no wicker baskets cut them out of cardboard and cover with crape paper.

Luncheon Delicacies.

Creamed Sweetbreads In Heart Shaped Cases.—Make a shortcake dough and roll it to about an inch thick. Cut out heart shaped pieces; brush each piece with melted butter and lay together in pairs. Bake in a quick oven. When ready to serve remove the top biscuit, cover well with creamed sweetbreads and replace the top. Garnish with parsley. Serve with or without a mushroom sauce. Calf's brains, chicken or veal may be substituted for the sweetbreads.

Valentine Salad.—Take red apples uniform in size and shape. Cut off evenly at the stem end and scoop out the interior without breaking the skin. Wipe off the apple cups and polish them carefully. Take equal parts of apple, shredded pineapple and blanched almond meats. Moisten them well by tossing all together with mayonnaise dressing. Just before serving fill the apple cups with this mixture, placing on top a spoonful of whipped cream that has been tinted pink with maraschino. Garnish with a maraschino cherry topping the whole and serve on a heart of lettuce leaf.

Appropriate Cakes.

Valentine Cakes.—Take half a cupful of butter creamed with a cupful of powdered sugar, half a cupful of milk, whites of four eggs whipped light, two and a half cupfuls of flour sifted with one and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, bitter almond flavoring, spinach juice and cochineal. Cream the butter and sugar, add the milk and flavoring, the whites of eggs and flour. Divide the batter in three parts, bruise and pound a few leaves of spinach in a thin muslin bag until you can extract the juice. Put a few drops of this in one portion of the batter, color another with cochineal, leaving a third white. Put a little of each into small round or heart shaped pans or cups, giving a light stir to each color as you add the next to vein the cake prettily. Put the whites between the pink and green that the tints may show better. Pistachio nuts pounded for the green will make the cakes much nicer. Ice on sides and top. The icing can be colored if desired.

If the cakes are to be used for a valentine party motto candies can be used to decorate them.

WHEN SERVING HAM.

WHEN a whole ham is to be cooked scrub it, trim off the hard dark parts, cover with cold water and let it simmer slowly, allowing a half hour for each pound. When it is taken off the fire let it stay in the water until the liquid is nearly cold, then peel off the skin and sprinkle with sugar and cracker crumbs.

Some suggestions for cooking ham, which is a favorite cold weather food, are given here.

Substantial Viands.

Ham With Cream Sauce.—Trim the edges off a slice of ham, put into a hot frying pan with one teaspoonful of drippings, put over a hot fire and keep turning the ham constantly. When nice and brown on both sides remove to a hot platter. Put a tablespoonful of flour into pan, mix well and add one cupful of cold milk. Stir and boil three minutes. Pour over the ham and then serve.

Broiled Ham.—Take ham sliced rather thick. Freshen it by soaking in cold water overnight or by parboiling it in water. Wipe dry, place between the bars of a gridiron and brown slightly on both sides. Season with pepper and serve very hot.

Novel Recipes.

Baked Ham In Crust.—Take a ham and allow it to remain in water over night. Wipe it dry, trim away any rusty places and cover with a simple crust, taking care that it is thick enough to keep the gravy in. Place in a moderately heated oven and bake for nearly four hours. Take off the crust, then cover with breadcrumbs and garnish the knuckle with a paper frill. Serve plain or with sauce.

Canapees of Ham.—Take three ounces of cooked lean ham, place in a mortar and pound it for several minutes until it is a smooth pulp, then add half an ounce of butter, two tablespoonfuls of Worcestershire sauce, half a saltspoonful of cayenne pepper and half a teaspoonful of French mustard. Pound the whole well together for five minutes more, then place the paste on a plate. Toast six slices of bread, two inches in diameter and a quarter of an inch thick. Spread the ham evenly on the six toasts and with the knife give the paste a nice dome shape.

DIES FROM BULLET WOUND

Haverhill Striker Succumbs and Non-Union Man Is Under Arrest

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 21.—Joseph Harris, a shoe worker, died yesterday from a bullet wound received during a strike disturbance here last Thursday. Charles A. Eaton, who had refused to join the shoe workers' strike, is under arrest on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the case.

It is alleged that Eaton, angered by the taunts and threats of a crowd of strikers who had been following him, fired his revolver at the crowd, the bullet striking Harris in the abdomen.

Campaigning Costs Woman Her Life

Salt Lake City, Jan. 21.—Mrs. Edith E. Read, member of the Utah legislature, died last night of nervous prostration. She was elected on the Republican ticket at the last election and her condition became critical as the result, it is said, of an exciting campaign.

A Stirring Story of Military Adventure and of a Strange Wartime Wooing, Founded on the Great Play of the Same Name

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Gertrude had been home in the valley perhaps a fortnight when she received the following illuminative epistle from her brother:

Charlottesville, June 15.

Dearest Sister—We have left the valley. I suppose to join in the defense of Richmond. You know what that means under Jackson. This is the first moment I have found to write to you since you decided to quit for home. I know what you have passed through, but do you know how it came about that you got through as luckily as you did? Probably not. Now, I will tell you. It was all very well for the Richmond department to send you in certain company by way of Baltimore, but when it came to the pinch at Harper's Ferry influence at Washington had to be brought to bear. Whose influence? General Buckthorn's. General Buckthorn must have acted at the prompting of some other Federal officer, presumably Colonel H. And how did our dear colonel happen to be so alert in behalf of a couple of southern women traveling at their own risk?

Gertrude Kerchival W. is, or was, in Washington either on sick leave or on some confidential mission. He must have moved heaven and earth and even strained a point or two of discipline for your sake. I don't know the exact circumstances, but I do know old Kerchival God bless him! He can't help it if he is a Unionist.

You know what he did for you and perhaps you will understand the ugly look it must have taken for him at Washington when I tell you that your dangerous traveling companion took advantage of the situation to wheedle the Federal cavalry at Berryville into making an exchange of prisoners with our guard and thus rescued a certain secret service officer whom you and I know only too well and who is now back again in the Confederate service. What is to come of it all I don't know, but, sis, be careful. Keep this closely to yourself and never forget it.

When you will next hear from me and what you will hear no mortal can predict — except that I shall be found in the line of duty. May heaven bless and keep us all is the constant prayer of your errant brother. BOB.

CHAPTER VII.

"He's a Yankee Spy!"

WHILE Gertrude Ellingham read and reread and pondered and cried over this letter and kissed it furtively, as if in concealment from her very self, the five army corps of McClellan, having encountered the defensive Confederate forces now under direct command of General Robert E. Lee, had fought the indecisive battle of Fair Oaks, otherwise called Seven Pines, and were lined up along the Chickahominy stream, almost within gunshot of Richmond.

They thought Lee had detached a corps and sent it westward to re-enforce Jackson in the valley. Instead, Jackson was sweeping eastward to join Lee, who more than a year after the commencement of the war was at last to take active command of a large army in the field.

General McClellan on the threshold of his grand opportunity at the gates of Richmond opened his assault upon Lee's lines of defense at Beaver dam, near Mechanicsville, on the Chickahominy. It was the first of the Seven Days' battles, soon to go into history.

There was fierce fighting every day that week—at Gaines' Mill, Savage Station, Glendale, all through the dark and desolate White Oak swamp and along the sluggish, noisome Chickahominy. Jackson, in his old time fighting form again, in the field with Lee, Stuart and Longstreet, strove to make up for lost time and did his full share in forcing the enemy steadily back from Richmond. But that enemy was McClellan, a foe of different caliber from any the Virginians hitherto had faced.

McClellan was indeed doggedly falling back toward the James river, but as soon as he got into communication with the Federal gunboats on that stream he concentrated his artillery on Malvern hill and made a stand which demonstrated that his so called "change of base" from the York to the James river, whatever necessity may have dictated it, was a military movement executed in masterly fashion.

Amid the horrors of that retreat—in which were included thousands of sick and wounded who could not have stirred but for the dread of the tobacco warehouses in which the southerners penned their prisoners of war—a young lieutenant clad in the remnants of a blue uniform which at first opportunity he exchanged with a dead soldier for a suit of dingy gray, crept off into the thickets of the Willis Church road along the slope of the hill.

Parched with fever and crippled with a wounded foot, he lay there all night in the feverish damps, then pressed on at daybreak in what he thought to be the direction in which the Federal troops had moved off the night before.

As he drew near what looked like a deserted cabin in a lonely gulch, an old, dilapidated looking negro ran out, and, glancing at the fugitive's uniform, implored him to "jest send a 'spatch to Charleston that old marster was sick and los' in de wilderness, an' den mebbe somebody would send or come to git him."

The young wayfarer would have been glad to get off a dispatch somewhere else in his own behalf, but that signified nothing. He followed the gaunt old negro into the cabin.

There, on a bed of juniper boughs lay gasping and choking a Confederate soldier with a ghastly bullet hole in his forehead, and the stamp of death on his livid face. An elderly, gray haired man, evidently a surgeon, knelt on the ground and made feeble efforts to minister to the comfort of the dying one, while his own teeth chattered and his hands shook with ague.

"Dat's Dr. Ellingham," the negro whispered, "and he's one of de richest men in Charleston, when he's home. But we ain't got no money now, and here's poor Sam Pinckney shot—I reckon de Yanks have done for him, sho'. De doctor's a little bit out of his haid, too, on 'count of de fever, but he reckoned he'd stick to Sam, an' of co'se I sticks to de doctor."

"Pete," said Dr. Ellingham in his dazed way, "you might ask the gentleman if he has anything besides water in his canteen."

The young man drew a small wicker flask from his pocket and handed it over. The surgeon reached out a shaking hand, then said:

"You had better give him a little; you are steadier than I am."

Here the wounded man made a sound as if choking.

"Mebbe it's phlegm in his throat," said the faithful old slave. He poked a black finger into the poor fellow's mouth and pulled out a quid of tobacco that must have been there ever since Sam was shot. Then a small quantity of liquor was poured between the pallid lips, but the case seemed hopeless.

At that instant loud voices were heard outside, and then a Confederate captain and two soldiers rushed into the cabin.

"Ah, here they are!" shouted the captain. "Major Ellingham, I've been been searching for you everywhere. You shouldn't have left the ambulance in your condition. Pete, you black scoundrel, is that the way you take care of your master?"

"I am glad you have come, Captain Thornton," said Dr. Ellingham, feebly. "Here is Sam Pinckney, in very bad shape."

"And whom have we here?" asked the captain, staring at the young stranger who had proffered the flask and paying no attention to the wounded man.

"Great God! Ed Thornton—I thought I knew you!" exclaimed the young man addressed, peering into the insolent, scarred face of his questioner. "And I presume you know me as well."

"I know you're in a pretty ticklish position with that Union belt on under a Confederate uniform and inside our lines. Men, search your prisoner. He's a Yankee spy."

"That's a lie, Thornton, and you know it. I was in the fight, open and fair, and I wouldn't be here now only that I stopped to try to help your comrades. Let me alone, I say."

He struggled so fiercely, despite his weak condition, that the efforts of the two soldiers were required to hold him while Thornton minutely searched his person.

"Letters—Washington and New York postmarks—and—ah! What have we here? Pretty little sentimental keepsake, eh? Where have I seen the lady's face? Pardon me if I read this inscription on the back of the case."

What he had found was a miniature, the portrait of a lady, carefully protected in a morocco case. The owner resisted so desperately the taking of this treasure that he finally sank to the floor, livid, panting, foaming and cursing, as Captain Thornton mockingly read the lines inscribed on the back of the picture:

The flashing light may liven thy form
In living lines of breathing grace,
May give each tint a tone as warm
As that which melts o'er thy dear face
But in my soul and on my heart
With deeper colors, truer aim,
A loftier power than meager art
Hath graven thy image and thy name.

"He is dead," said Dr. Ellingham, letting the hand of poor Sam Pinckney, which he had been holding, fall limp and lifeless to the ground.

"Well, major, that relieves you from duty here. I'll have an ambulance sent around at once. As for the Yankee gentleman, I will take good care of his valuables while he is escorted to Richmond and put up at the Hotel de Libby."

With these taunting words Captain Thornton laughed diabolically, then lit a cigar and stood in the doorway of the cabin gazing reminiscently upon the miniature which held the fair features of Mrs. Constance Haverill.

* * * * * * *

The old warehouse of the Libbys, down on Carey street, near the James river, was the largest structure of its kind in Richmond. It was a vast, dingy, four storied red brick building, with nothing but naked walls, bare timbers and low raftered drying rooms, whose small windows were not intended primarily to admit light. A few iron bars on these windows and a flimsy partition here and there to divide the floor space into "rooms," had sufficed to transform the pungent smelling old shell into a capacious military prison for Federal captives whose official rank saved them from the unsheltered pens and stockades of Belle Isle or of Salisbury and Andersonville farther south.

Only officers were immured in Libby prison, and most of the time there were from 1,500 to 2,000 motley, ragged, pale faced men pining there, cramped and squalid and liable to be shot down relentlessly if they crossed a "dead line" within two or three feet of the barred windows. Some of these poor fellows listlessly carved crucifixes and wooden toys with their jackknives; others played cards squatted on the floor or checkers on boards marked off in rude squares on these same rough, unswept planks. All hoped against hope and conversed endlessly on two topics—"exchange" and "escape."

Letters from home were rare, gifts and provisions still rarer. Nevertheless some fortuitous combination of circumstances and outcropping of ordinary human kindness did on certain memorable occasions permit a suit of clothes or a box of sweets and other creature comforts to escape Confederate confiscation and get past the drawbridge of the military bastile.

One of these occasions that brought seasonable rejoicings to a certain loft of Libby occurred just before the date of national thanksgiving, in the latter part of November.

The blood red rays of sunset were streaming through the one small, high, grated window that lighted a bare room where some men were dejectedly playing cards for scraps of tobacco, while others sat around on rough benches and watched or smoked or dozed. One who was either sick or wounded lay on a couch, with a coarse blanket over him. Two or three of the card players joined their unmelodious voices in crooning an old fashioned Methodist hymn.

"That's right, boys," said the hymn leader, an unctuous looking Hoosier whom they addressed sometimes as "chaplain" and again as "deacon," "cheer up a bit. If you can't be cheerful, be as cheerful as you can. Think—think of your heavenly home."

"Too far off," muttered Captain Cox, a Kentuckian.

"Well, then, think of your earthly home—of the apple trees in blossom when you left it, of the afternoon sunlight fallin' on it this minute out there in Kentuck or Ohio or wherever it is. Mine's in Injiana, thank God! I remember when I was"—

"Deacon," protested the sick man, "I'm not feeling very chipper today."

"Oh, you'll come round all right. Tomorrow's Thanksgiving. As I was saying"—

"That's what poor Ralph's afraid of, deacon," interposed Captain Cox. "Monotony is what's killing him, and I'll leave it to you if the novelty isn't long since worn off these endless reminiscences of the time when you used to be"—

"Rear admiral on the Wabash canal," chimed the chorus.

"All right, boys, poke all the fun at me you like, smite me on the other cheek. You know I'm meek and lowly. Darn this hand o' cards anyway. But with all your cuteness I'll bet $5 none o' you can tell how we used to take in sail out there on the Wabash, eh?"

"Well, sir, they go out aloft on the towpath and knock down a mule."

"Ho, ho! How's that, Ralph?" laughed Cox, rising and going over to the sick man's couch. "Come, brighten up. Are you sick in mind too?"

Hunt sighed impatiently. Deacon Hart rallied again.

"Look on the bright side, what may happen any minit. Suppose, first thing you know, you git called out and exchanged, jest as soon as our army captures some of the Johnnies, if it ever does. Then you can go home on crutches, and the neighbors'll bring in a dozen different things at once to kill or cure you."

"I don't seem to care about anything," said Ralph Hunt, gloomily. "If I can't die on the field it may as well be here as anywhere else."

"It's a good thing I'm here to give you spiritual counsel," interjected Deacon Hart, turning away from his cards for a second. "Oh, is it my deal?"

DOOMED TO REJECTION

No Hope of Confirmation of Appointments by Taft

Washington, Jan. 21.—No chance whatever exists that the senate will confirm any but military, naval and diplomatic appointments during the remainder of the session. The Democrats have made it clear they will not yield and the Republicans are standing firm in their position, but they can enter into no agreement that Republican nominations shall rejected. If the postmasters are to be sacrificed, they say, the Democrats must take the responsibility.

This decision probably marks the abandonment of the Republican plan for a fillbuster in the interest of the nominees, but it is believed that further than this the majority will not yield. The Taft industrial commission probably will share the fate of the postmasters.

HOWARD LEAVES ABOUT $400,000

Recluse Was Supposed to Have Been Poverty Stricken

WILL OMITS HIS ONLY SISTER

Sets Apart $185,000 For Home For Aged Men and Substantial Amounts For Other Worthy Objects—Estate Consists of Stocks, Numerous Other Holdings, and Cash In Banks

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 21.—Bequests made by Horace W. Howard, once of Brockton, who died in Providence Jan. 14, in his 70th year, aggregate nearly $400,000. They were made on his death bed.

This sum was in possession of a man who spent $1.25 a week for a room in Providence, who dressed poorly, who seldom spent over 15 cents for a meal and who loitered about parks until someone discarded a daily paper rather than buy one.

Howard lived a mysteriously lonely life. When he became fatally ill, he sent for Mrs. Sarah J. Burns of Brockton, an intimate friend of his dead wife. She was the only person near him when he died two weeks ago.

By the terms of the will $185,000 is set apart for the establishment and maintenance of a home for aged men in Brockton, $40,000 is bequeathed to the Brockton hospital, a similar amount to Howard seminary at West Bridgewater and $35,000 to the Wales home.

Mrs. Sarah J. Burns of Brockton is the largest individual beneficiary, receiving $20,000, certain personal effects and the residue of the estate. Her daughter, Miss Ethel L. Burns, a saleswoman, receives $5000.

Mrs. Georgianna Jones, with whom Howard once boarded here, receives $15,000. A clause in the will is to the effect that the recluse "purposely omits from the will" his only sister, Mrs. Maria H. Goward of South Easton, and other relatives, believing that they have sufficient to provide for themselves.

The estate consists of stock in the General Electric company, in the Pullman Palace Car company, in the Utilities Improvement company of New York, and shares in the big cotton mills of Fall River and New Bedford, realty in Brockton and numerous other holdings and considerable cash in banks.

Even before the will had been filed and the contents definitely known preparations had commenced for a legal battle, Mrs. Maria H. Goward suspecting she had been left out.

Trade Records Shattered

Washington, Jan. 21.—All previous records for American trade were shattered during 1912, according to statistics just issued. Total imports were $1,817,662,340 and exports $2,092,746,000.

LONG AN EYESORE OLD BARN GONE

After a Conference Between Owners and Citizens

NOW FOR SIGN BOARDS

Residents of Wollaston, especially those of the Park district, are congratulating themselves on the demolition, now completed, of the deserted barn near the corner of Beale street and Greenwood avenue.

For a number of years the building has been an eyesore in the last stages of decay. The Council was petitioned for its removal, but in the meantime the owners and some citizens held a conference, and as a result the barn is removed. If some of the hideous sign boards could be eliminated by the same process, welcome more conferences.

ASH STREWN APARTMENT

Has No Terrors for Finnish Couple Desirous of Plighting Their Troth

Rev. John E. Lillback responded to a hail from his yard Monday evening and opening the door saw a Finnish couple standing arm in arm on the steps. They said they were Miss Hulda M. Laasonon of Waltham and Joshua Talo of Springfield and that they wished to be married. Explaining that his house was in an unsettled condition, after a fire which destroyed practically all of his furnishings last Thursday, he remonstrated with them and asked that they postpone the ceremony.

They said that they had come from Waltham, were very much in love with each other and Mr. Lillback standing in a room the floor of which was strewn with ashes, married them. The couple left after the ceremony.

BRIEFS

MRS. SHAW ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Brilliant Advocate of the Measure to Speak at Colonial Hall

More than usual interest is being taken in the announcement that Rev. Anna H. Shaw is to speak in Quincy, Monday evening at Colonial hall. She is president of the National Suffrage Association and the most brillaint speaker of her time. Those planning to attend the lecture may be sure of getting considerable information about suffrage as her subject is a very comprehensive one viz: Are Votes for Women a Necessity?

As there are men and women who think the vote privilege should not be extended; others that think it should, and many indifferent as they do not know enough about it for or against, this meeting should be one of importance in placing the subject more clearly before our people.

Dr. Shaw is to speak under the auspices of the Massachusetts Political Equality Union. Rupert F. Claflin, treasurer of the Granite Trust Company, will preside. Among those in charge of the meeting are Col. Henry L. Kincaide, Delcevare King, Paul R. Blackmur, Mrs. Wilson Marsh and Mrs. Nathaniel S. Hunting.

The public is invited to attend the meeting Monday night in Colonial hall Hancock building at eight o'clock.

PRETTY PARTY FOR BIRTHDAY

Dorothy Green Hostess to Young Friends at Her Thirteenth

Miss Dorothy Green, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred F. Green of Hancock street, entertained friends Monday afternoon in observance of her thirteenth birthday with games and dancing, and Miss Dorothy was assisted in entertaining her guests by Miss Alice Parker and Russell Green, who played for the dancing. About half-past five the guests were invited to the dining room marching to the music played by Mr. Green. The table, daintily decorated with pink crepe paper, was bountifully laden with good things to eat, sandwiches, delicious cakes, confectionery, frappe, and in the centre was a very handsome birthday cake, beautifully frosted, adorned with thirteen candles and inscribed 1900—1913. The hostess received many pretty gifts.

Among those present were: Norma Barnard, Clarice Jones, Ruth Jones, Esther Hanson, Sabra Ryder, Natalie Ryder and Abigail Carcanio, a young Miss from the Argentine Republic, whose father is superintendent of the Argentine battle ship, the Rivadavia.

The guests departed for their homes with expressions of delight for being so happily entertained, and wishing their hostess many happy returns of the day.

LOST THEIR LITTLE BOY.

$100,000 DAMAGES ASKED OF RAILROAD

Cooke Seeks Balm For Injury to His Character

Cincinnati, Jan. 21.—The trial of the suit for $100,000 damages brought by Edgar S. Cooke of Chicago against the Big Four railroad and its chief counsel, L. J. Hackney, has begun here. Cooke was an employe of the railroad company in this city.

During the trial in which Charles L. Warriner was convicted of embezzling $643,0000 of the funds of the road Cooke claimed the company and Hackney caused to be circulated a report that he, too, was an embezzler.

One of the witnesses who is expected to testify in the case is Mrs. Jeanette S. Ford, who, during the Warriner trial, was designated as "the woman in the case."

Warriner, who is serving a six years sentence in the Ohio penitentiary, will not be brought to Cincinnati, but a deposition he made in prison will be read at the trial.

GOES BACK TO CONFERENCE

Senators Attack Character Certificate Feature In Immigration Bill

Washington, Jan. 21.—Control that Russia and other countries might exercise over emigration to the United States led the senate to refuse to accept the conference report on the Burnett-Dillingham immigration bill.

The bill was sent back to conference with the senate's disapproval of the provision requiring certificates of character from immigrants coming from countries where such certificates are issued.

This feature of the bill was attacked by several senators as dangerous to the future of American immigration. The provision had been recommended by the federal immigration officials.

It was claimed that Russia, by refusing to issue certificates of character to Jews or other citizens, could practically stop emigration to the United States.

DOPE FOUND HIDDEN IN POSTAL CARDS

Embossed Variety Barred In Massachusetts State Prison

Boston, Jan. 21.—To prevent the smuggling of drugs into the Charlestown state prison, Warden Bridges has forbidden the delivery to prisoners of embossed postcards sent by friends and relatives.

It was discovered that attempts had been made to send in powdered morphine and cocaine by cleverly concealing the drug within the raised surfaces of embossed postals and fancy Christmas and New Year's cards.

It is charged that a woman in New York manufactured the cards and supplied the drugs. The police there are trying to locate her. Convicts who have since confessed say she charged 25 cents each for the cards and extra for the drugs, obtaining a large revenue from the traffic.

All picture postcards, except those on a single thickness of plain paper, are now held by the officers who examine the Charlestown prison mail.

STEAMER FOUNDERS

Goes Down With All on Board Off the Coast of England

Charleston, Jan. 21.—Another tragedy of the sea was recorded here when Captain Ree of the Dutch steamship Phecda reported the sinking of a large Danish tramp steamer about fifty miles off Plymouth, Eng., during a hurricane. The entire crew perished. The name of the vessel is not known, but officers of the Phecda believe it probable was the Ivar or Copenhagen.

The vessel was sighted by the Phecda on the afternoon of Dec. 26. Ree signaled to the steamer, offering assistance, but received no reply. The Phecda continued to approach the distressed steamer, but before she was reached a high sea broke over her and she sank.

BOILERS BLOW UP

Two Men Killed and Others Injured In Pulp and Paper Plant

Howland, Me., Jan. 21.—Two men were killed and three others injured when the boilers at the Howland Pulp and Paper company's mill exploded. The boilerhouse, containing seven boilers, was situated some distance from the mill buildings.

Fire followed the explosion, but was confined to the boiler building, which was wrecked. The monetary loss is estimated at $20,000.

Cinder Starts Sawmill Fire

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 21.—Fire starting from a glowing cinder pulled from beneath the boiler at the John Walker sawmill at Newington totally destroyed the mill. The loss is $5000.

TWENTY-ONE CANDIDATES

Will Appear Before Federal Court For Citizenship

Saturday morning, 21 candidates who were examined Jan. 14 at the Finnish Congregational church for citizenship by Examiner Farrell, will present their petitions at the Federal building. The number is the result of active work on the Part of Rev. John Lillback who is now translating into the Finnish languages the arguments he uses in favor of the Americanization of his congregation. A school will be started under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and on Friday evening, Secretary Bromley will address the prospective students on the methods to be pursued and on citizenship.

SILVER TRAY FOR MRS. ASH

St. Andrews Court, M. C. O. F., Has 100 Members, and Plans Celebration

A presentation and plans for celebrating the attainment of a 100 mark in membership were the principal features of a meeting of St. Ambrose Court, M. C. O. F. at St. Joseph's hall Monday evening. Past Chief Ranger, Mrs. Alice T. Ash was presented with a cut glass set with silver tray and a cut glass vase by Chief Ranger Mrs. Catherine O'Brien.

The celebration will take place at the regular meeting Feb. 11, and a banquet will precede a varied program.

WINONA CLUB FIRST SOCIAL

The first annual dance of the Winona Social Club was held at Alpha hall, Monday evening. Many out of town dancers attended.

One of the club members is Sherman D. Hayden who heroically stopped a pair of runaway horses in City Square after they had trampled on Officer Henry Corbett and broke his leg a few months ago.

With 16 numbers on the order a quiet knock, the party were busy enjoying themselves until midnight. About 150 couple attended.

The floor was in charge of Martin E. Anderson. Stephen Eaton was assistant and Allan Eaton chief of aids. The aids were Sherman D. Hayden, H Kemp and E. Stewart.

SUCCESSFUL FINANCIALLY

The year has witnessed the completion of the nurses home, the fine gift of Henry M. Faxon also the establishment of the new surgica lward in a full running order. We congratulate ourselves on these much needed improvements.

Financially we have ben very successful in our campaign for Hospital week colections resulting in pledges amounting to $35,000. Additions to the endowment fund have been bequest of Joseph L. Whiton, $495.85; Anna R. C. Backman $2500. The fund now amounts to $95,251.18.

It was voted that committees be appointed to draft resolutions on the death of James F. Burke and on the resignating from the secretaryship of the trustees of Timothy Reed.

EDITOR CELEBRATES.

Members of the Massachusetts Press Association assisted Editor and Mrs. Charles S. Parker of Arlington observe their golden wedding anniversary Monday evening. Mr. Parker is publisher of the Arlington Advocate, a successful weekly, and is also prominent in Grand Army circles. About 200 of the prominent citizens of Arlington and vicinity attended the reception.

Reports from the City Hospital this morning are that Capt. McKay of the police department, who underwent a surgical operation Saturday night is doing nicely. Near his bedside is a bottle containing over 300 gallstones which were removed by the operation.

SHIPFITTERS BAD SLUMP

Fore River Leaders Lost to Machinists Floor

PLENTY OF ENTHUSIASM

With the cheering section of the Coliseum alleys filled with rooters overflowing with enthusiasm, the Fore River League matches Monday evening were most interesting. As usual in bowling the unexpected happened. The Shipfitters, leaders of the league with the reputation of having done no worse than splitting even, lost three points to the Machinist Floor who lost the fourth point by making two pins less than the leaders.

The Pipefitters beat the Foundry, 4 to 0, and the Electricians did the same.

High single was credited to Gallagher who made 118 and his high total was 310, the best of the evening.

In a match between Birnies South Quincy Pets and Walsh's West Quincy Colts, the former won by 129 pins, making all four points. Birnie made high single of 102 and three string total of 287.

GRANITES VS. MANETS.

Usual scores were made in the City League match at the City Square alleys Monday evening. The Granites beat the Manets, 3 to 1. The highest string, 92, was made by Howley and high three string total went to R. Olsen with 261. The matches in this league draw a large gallery because the bowlers are good amateurs, several of them exhibiting style that may develop a champion streak.

ASKS FOR DOCK COMMISSION OF FIVE MEMBERS WITHOUT PAY

To Have Entire Charge of the Disbursement of All Funds For Dock Construction and Development

Also to Control Wharf Rates, Receipts and Everything Else

(Special to the Ledger)

State House Jan. 22. A bill which will prove of interest to Quincy readers came to the House this morning. It is Representative Leslie's bill which is accompanied by a petition of Frank Fessenden Crane dock commissioner of Quincy and asks that the proper legislative authority be given to the Mayor of Quincy whereby he may appoint a commission of three men who shall serve as a dock commission. It is stipulated that the commission so appointed is to be an unpaid one and the term of office shall be five years.

The duties of the Dock Commission so appointed, shall be to take entire charge of the disbursement of all funds which shall be appropriated by the city for the purchase of lands for the building of development of a municipal dock in Quincy. The commission is also given the management and control of the proposed dock including its rates of wharfage, receipts railways, methods of transportation, leasing of its buildings and land, and all other matters connected with either its management or development.

Under the terms of the bill the city treasurer of Quincy is restricted from paying only such bills as the Dock Commission may approve out of any funds appropriated by the city council that is available for dock expenditures. The commissioners are obliged to pay to the city treasurer all receipts and income that they may collect from the dock or any railway or freigh-handling appliance or from any other source connected therewith.

A full and detailed account of any information connected with their work or duties is to be furnished on request by the Mayor, the city council or any committee of the council. Further the commission is to make a complete report annually in February to the Mayor which shall contain a detailed account of all business transacted by it during the previous year. The books of the Dock Commission are to be accessible during office hours to the Mayor for his examination and copy.

The petition will be given a hearing before the committee on cities att an early date.

NEW LABOR ASSOCIATION FORMED WHICH SOLVES THE LABOR PROBLEM

Employers and Employed Have Worked Out a Scheme Which Operates Successfully

William Sayward Gives Interesting Talk Before First Church Men's Club

By far the most interesting of any of the meetings thus far of the First Parish club was that of Tuesday evening when the speaker was William Sayward, of the Master Builders Association of Boston. As usual the members gathered in the basement rooms shortly after 6 o'clock where there was a social hour until 6.30 when an adjournment was made to the chapel where the dinner was served. The menu included hot roast beef, mashed potatoes, macaroni, rolls and coffee, and ice cream and jumbles.

At the head table on the platform were seated ex-Representative Walter E. Piper, Councilman Joseph L. Whiton, Clarence Burgin, H. G. Smith general manager of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., Rev. Dr. Hudson, president of the club, the speaker, William Sayward, Harry L. Rice, Joseph A. Sedgwick, treasurer of the Fore River Co., and Rev. Wesley Wiggin of Wollaston. The dinner was over at 7.30 and before introducing the speaker of the evening Dr. Hudson took up the business of the evening.

The dinner was over at 7.30 and the first business was the consideration of the proposed amendments to the constitution. The first of these was to raise the membership limit from 200 to 225. This amendment was voted down. The second amendment was that anyone joining the club after the December meeting should pay pro rata dues for the balance of the season. This amendment was adopted.

In introducing the speaker of the evening Dr. Hudson spoke briefly of the environment of mankind and how years ago the mistake was made in supposing the unfit would die out.

They did not however so that today instead of an ideal order of things there is much disturbance. He believed that the underlying purpose through life was to bring out a unity that in the long run will bring us to a better world. We are a part of a great universal life and must do our part. He then spoke briefly of the approaching great social war.

In opening his address Mr. Sayward said that it was the plan of managers of magazines to plan ahead for the year's program. That is the program toward which the magazine should direct itself.

Mr. Sayward spoke of a magazine manager who is planning the year's program decided to take as his leading matter the servant girl problem. He had found however that this did not create the interst expected for the reason that it developed that there were only rising eleven per cent who employed one servant and only rising three per cent who employed more than one. He had come not to talk about the servant girl problem but about the labor question and the great unrest which effects the whole body politic.

Before doing so however he wished to qualify himself. When he was born 45 years ago his father was a brick layer earning a dollar a day so that his whole youth was surrounded by toil, and he had been taught he had got to earn his own living. He then spoke of his early occupation until at the age of 24 he took up the business of a builder with his father and he had been at it ever since. For the last 15 or 20 years he had been the principal officer of the Master Builders asociation of Boston. This had thrown him against people engaged in the complex business of building. The building business is larger than all the manufacturing industries of the country. It is split up into small parties. There are a few who do a large business but a large portion is the small man concerns scattered throughout the country. It is cut up into 30 or 35 different branches making a complex proposition, so extensive that it was difficult to handle.

If any one of these trades so essential to producing one product becomes blockaded it ties up all branches. He did not pretend to know all about the labor problem but he knew something about it. He believed that he had a message and that was why he was here.

What seems like chaos in the building line is not so. If we can get up high enough it will fade away. But we are on the earth and we must try and make the path smoother as we go along. Many say that there is not as much chaos as we who are near it claim.

He then spoke of a recent meeting of the Economic club where four of the best known speakers were heard. The first speaker was Prof. John Graham Brooks who had made a study of the Nash; Financial Secretary—Past Grand Arthur W. Stetson; Treasurer—E. Frank Mitchell; Trustee for three years—William J. Williams.

GROCERY BOYS IN MERRY DANCE

Atlantic Clerks Hold Their First Annual Party

The first annual dance of the grocery clerks of Atlantic was held at Alpha hall, Tuesday evening, and was largely attended by residents of ward six. The feature of the evening was the singing of one of the latest popular songs, "If you ever go to Heaven," by Arthur Sullivan, during a moonlight dance. Music was by Cuff's orchestra. The floor was in charge of Louis E. Barry, assisted by Joseph H. Sullivan. The aids were Richard Haley, Henry Budd, Edward Golden, Edward McCall, Arthur Sullivan, John J. McGuerty, William Coughline, John Phinney, William Barry, Timothy F. Sullivan.

BRIEFS

A whist party is to be given tonight by Mrs. John H. Starr at Faxon hall.

W. G. Shaw has gone over to New York to attend a meeting of furniture dealers.

Friends of Samuel Grabowsky of Main street will be pleased to learn that he is slowly recovering from two operations for a cataract on the left eye.

Mrs. William Bogorod, of Franklin street has gone over to New York to spend a week or two with her parents.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Associated Charities at the Women's clubhouse the president Mr. Thomas Fenno expressed the opinion that the work of the secretary saved City of Quincy much more than society paid her in salary, beside the better co-operation secured the preventing of duplication and fraud and the wiser methods of giving relief.

CLEVER AMATEURS MAKE BIG HIT NEAT COMEDY-DRAMA VEHICLE

Bar Haven Affords Ample Opportunity For Display of Latent Histrionic Talents

Dramatic Club Makes Good on Stage, Ending with a Dance

"Bar Haven," a three act comedy drama was presented by the Quincy Order of Eastern Star Dramatic club at Music hall, Tuesday evening. An all star amateur cast carried out their parts in a remarkably clever manner and the production was easily one of the best ever given in Quincy.

Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis directed the piece and she was showered with congratulations on her marked success.

To place any of the cast as the topliner would be exceedingly difficult although Mrs. Clara R. Catarius as Kate Wardell, the central character, was beyond expectations. Mrs. Katherine T. Macdonald, as Mrs. Wardell was a fine, jealous hearted selfish woman and Miss Annie E. Rose as Spray Hopper who laughed at love, cleverly worked out her lines to the enjoyment of the audience. Miss Ruth Kemp performed ably and well as a rustic eager to be loved.

Arthur L. Thomas as Hardy Stone, and ambitious to learn and love developed from a restive youth into a self contained successful boat Captain and Richard D. Wetherell as Gideon Graham a wealthy rascal was cold hearted and vindictive in the extreme.

The sublime feature was the part of Rev. William Watkins, taken by William E. Tarbox, which later became ridiculously funny when he landed helpless on the platform with the boards of a broken table around him.

Cy Brackett was presented by Henry P. Hayward in a comical fashion and Leo Bradley a bearer of good news was Robert King. Miss Clara E. Call did well as Florence Wardell and the cast was assisted by carol

$100 RAISE IN SALARY ASKED BY ELEMENTARY GRADE TEACHERS

Petition Before the School Board Signed by 82 Members of the Corps

High Cost of Board Leaves Little for Teacher Out of Salary

The teachers of the seven grades of the elementary schools of the city have asked for an increase of $100 in their annual salary.

The request is in the form of a petition which has been presented to the school committee for consideration. The teachers contend that while the salaries of teachers of these grades in other parts of the Metropolitan district have been advanced there has been no change in Quincy. The scale of board has remained down in Quincy and they claim that they have to pay as high as $7 per week. This with car fares makes a big hole in their $12.50 per week. The salary is $650 a year which divided into 52 makes the weekly stipend as mentioned. The argument for a raise in salary is eloquently set forth by the teachers who have united in this matter and authorized one of their number as spokesman for the whole.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Up go the price of potatoes.

While some of those people are howling for a retention of the duty on food products, coal and the like they should harken to the call from the wilds of Maine.

Business generally bids fair to be rather dull until after the inauguration of President Wilson and the settling of some of the problems that naturally come with the change in administration. Some merchants are cutting down their expenses by reducing their clerking force, others are economizing on advertising, while still others are advertising more extensively than usual hoping to make quick sales and to catch what trade there is.

Cambridge was lucky that the strike in the lighting plant occurred on the full of the moon. The household and commercial inconvenience was fortunately only of brief duration.

The Sheppard-Gould nuptials for a simple affair is getting more newspaper space than the most ardent press agent could desire.

And now they claim there is bribery in the New Hampshire legislature.

And now a person in masculine garb will ask to have the "free lunch," in saloons removed as a lifting of the burden of the retail liquor dealer. It has been the contention that the "free lunch" was anything but a burden, in fact an invention of the liquor before, ever the victuallers' license went into effect, and instead of being a burden the briney and pickled eatables have added to his income by adding to the thirst of the customers and hangers on.

There are plenty of undiscovered places bad enough on the known continents without seeking for unknown ones along the Arctic circle.

Some people might exclaim that damming up the Atlantic at the Grand banks might be, a,—well a good thing.

Gasoline takes another skyward movement, which probably means that John D. plans another college contribution. On the whole it would seem as if the public rather than John D., is subsidizing the colleges when you come to sit right down and think it over.

Quincy lost the first game but that does not mean, they will not be in at the finish.

It cost Harris $3013 to be beaten for the school committee and Miss Curtis, just 70 cents to be elected. That is going some. Being a lady of course, Miss Curtis did not have to pass around any cigars, cigarettes and the like, and not favoring woman suffrage, she wisely kept that under her bonnet or hat.

While Gen. Sullivan did not fire the first shot of the Revolution he guided the first over the act against British authority in the capture of Fort William and Mary. Score one for Curley. Next.

And praise be, but announcement is made that a slow fire makes food tough and it might be inserted that too swift a fire makes the same thing brittle and breakable to the touch, in other words a cinder.

Pomeroy if he gets another chance will not wear a red mask. The last one scared the cat.

And some people are still paying that one cent toll in the East Boston tunnel.

DISEASE DISTRIBUTORS.

The search for disease distributors has ceased to be a rational movement in the interests of health on the part of some people. It has come to be with them a mania, a fad, and, if the term might be used without the accusation being tendered that a pun was intended, a disease, on the part of those people. It is too bad that some people cannot find in their own business or affairs sufficient to keep their minds actively engaged upon those or their particular personal appliances during their waking hours. If such could be accomplished what a good many pleasant moments would be handed out to persons afflicted with ideas which this idle and busy body class distribute free of charge at every minute of the day. The amount of energy which they cast upon desert air might furnish motive power to perform a great many useful things, but as it is, this class is nothing but a bore and nuisance to the ordinary individuals who find enough to concern them in the pursuit of their own affairs without forever diving into those of other people. This is somewhat digressing it is true, but it leads, if in rather a round about way, to the main question, and in part explains it and makes it a little clearer.

There is trouble brewing for the hotel proprietors. Some of those microscopic minded people have discovered that the finger bowl is a disease distributor. The same clan of "Herlock Shomes" have by their peculiar investigation discovered that nearly all the hotels are armed with only about half a dozen finger bowls, and as those have to be used for all the guests, horrors! just imagine the wide distribution of disease which is sure to follow such carelessness.

The explorers who discovered this condition, have a first hand claim to undying fame. Monuments should be erected to them on every hand. And as a starter, suggested for a design is that of a pudgy faced waiter, with an inverted finger bowl for a helmet and a soiled napkin for a breast plate.

The only thing is that those single minded, public spirited citizens should go further. They should find out the percentage of the spread of disease in families where finger bowls are not so numerous and immediately apply to the legislature for an act to have people, every one, use individual finger bowls. Then to help along the crockery man and put the dish washer out of business they should demand new plates and other dishes for every one dining at a public restaurant. They might have some grounds for a movement in this latter direction judging from some of the work of the machine dish washer, as some dishes when returned from that mangler remind one of the remark of the old man, who laughed when washing the dishes was suggested, remarking, "What's the use, we've only got to use them again."

Then to help along the poor bath trust, they should advocate individual bath tubs as there may be danger in the family vessel. Again how about people trying on shoes in a shoe store Every pair a person tries on they do not purchase and some one else does the same thing. There has been no movement calling for a fumigation of those shoes between the trial of every possible purchaser. The same might apply to coats, hats, wraps, in fact almost any garment worn by man, woman or child.

A judgment might be rendered against the rubber door mat as every one has or at least should have a scrape at it.

Barbers might be compelled to use, individual razors, strops and mugs, and sterilize their hands after each patient.

All those things are only in keeping with the suggestions thrown out by people who have little else to do except ferret out things which will only prove expensive and burdensome for others. It leads to the conclusion that in this purity movement which has started some people, if let alone would create such restrictions and make such a fuss that the whole thing would be looked upon as ridiculous and a really humane movement would thus lose much of its effectiveness in actual ojeration.

ROASTED ON POTATOES.

Hardly had the echoes of the Maine railroad strike reached this section than there was a roast, it is called a raise, on the price of potatoes. Before it was known that the strike would last one day, one week, one month, or one year, or be ended in a minute by the stroke of a pen, a noticable advance in the price of potatoes was established by the wholesalers This was followed by the announcement that proportional, if not larger raises, would follow daily as long as the strike lasted. Cheering news indeed, when combined with the already high cost of living, the unnecessary high price of coal, an advance is hustled on the potato.

This advance is not on any lots that have cost any more to receive or handle than those of any others, but simply because there is a possible shortage. It seems hardly creditable that a city like Boston, is dependent upon one section alone for its potato supply. Then again it must be remembered that Maine ships to other places, and a pretty good sized lot of the Maine potato crop has already found its way to market. This strike is made the grounds for an advance in the price. It does not matter whether the conditions, the supply on hand or the available supply from other sources warrant it or not, the wholesalers have boosted the price. So far as can be learned they are the only ones who will profit. Once the price goes it will stay up for some time, and even the moving of the trains will not serve to bring about a reduction, but further increase the profits of the dealer.

A fine condition of things truly. Here is according to all reports, a large stored crop of potatoes almost at our very door and just because, about 100 men are on strike, millions of people must pay an exorbitant price for a staple and ordinary product.

That the potato men did not permit much grass to grow under their feet in seizing the main chance to squeeze the public is established, beyond a doubt. The only hope of succor, would seem to be an embargo on the potato, but the worst of this embargo thing, is that if people embargo everything in the effort to reduce the cost of living, they will freeze to death, starve to death and be reduced to the condition of living skeletons in their martyrdom.

singers, rustics and a fife and drum corps.

The plot is woven around Kate Wardell, who is left at Squire Wardell's home by her mother who dies shortly after. The squire by marrying secures a cold blooded wife ambitious for her daughter at the expense of others, death having no terror for her crabid nature.

The story runs along the usual line of comedy where love and mystery is concerned and gradually unravels in a most clever way. Kate Wardell is of course proven to be the rightful heir to a large property, Hardy Stone becomes a boat captain and her husband, other marriages follow and as the villian is taken into custody by the police force the others immediately commence planning their future.

Dancing was enjoyed by nearly 400 until one o'clock.

The cast of characters:

Captain Hiram Hopper—An old Fisherman, Albert E. Sargent
Hardy Stone—His helper, with ambition to be Kate's Arthur L. Thomas
Leo Bradley—In search of an heir, Robert E. King
Gideon Graham—A wealthy rascal, Richard D. Wetherell
Rev. William Watkins—Parson at Bar Haven, William E. Tarbox
Cy Brackett—Who is fishing for fish and Arbella Henry P. Hayward
Mrs. Wardell—Of "The Manor" Mrs. Katherine T. Macdonald
Florence Wardell—Her daughter, Miss Clara E. Call
Kate Wardell—Who comes into her own, Mrs. Clara R. Catarius
Spray Hopper—The Captain's daughter, who laughs at love Miss Annie E. Rose
Arbella Wortendyke— Between the devil and the deep sea, Miss Ruth Kemp
Carol Singers, Rustics, Fife and Drum Corps.

BOYNTON ASKS ONLY $5,000,000

For the State to Finance His Bicycle Railroad

TAKEN UNDER ADVISEMENT

(Special to the Ledger.)

State House Jan. 21. Despite the fact thatt he E. Moody Boynton bill concerning his bicycle railway has been before the Legislature for some fifteen years, the hearing granted him this morning at the State House by the committee on railroads brought out a large gathering of hearers. Mr. Boynton's bill this year asks that the state appropriate the sum of $5,000,000 for the purpose of investing in bonds of the Boston, Quincy and Fall River R. R., the proceeds of which are to be devoted to the construction of that railroad. The bill also provides that the state shall have a lien on the railroad with the option of purchasing it at any time.

Engineers who had conducted thorough investigations into the practicalities of the project testified that in their opinion this railroad, if given the opportunity would completely revolutionize modern railroading. They pointed out that if the state has not given its aid to the pioneer railroads in this state, especially the Boston and Albany, that those railroads would not now be in the flourishing condition that they are. What the Albany has done for the cities and towns along its road, the Boston Quincy and Fall River would do a hundred fold for Quincy, Braintree etc The cities and towns along the proposed route would develop beyond the most sanguine hopes of their "boosters," one of the engineers said.

No opposition to the bill appeared and the committee took the matter under advisement.

MRS. BENZIE BURIED.

The funeral of Mrs. Jessie F. Benzie took place from her home 109 Liberty street Tuesday afternoon. Services were conducted by Rev. A. M. Thompson of the United Presbyterian church. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

There was a profusion of floral tributes from the family and from Mrs. John Ross, William Farquharson, William Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Ross, Kings Daughters Circle, Congregation of the United Presbyterian church.

The bearers were William Williams, John Stronach, Charles A. Ross and William Farquharson.

She is survived by Mrs. Ducard of South Boston, Mrs. Samuel McLean, Mrs. Boheauy of Worcester, Mrs. James Campbell, P. Benzie and Mrs. Margaret Decelle and James Benzie of Westerly. Mrs. Benzie was in her 72nd year and an old time South Quincy resident.

The death of Mrs. Benzie occured, Sunday just four years to the day after the death of her husband.

DEATH CHAIR IN VERMONT

Measure In Its Favor Is Passed by Both Branches of Legislature

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 22.—Only one more legal hanging will be carried out in Vermont if Governor Fletcher signs a bill passed by both branches of the legislature.

By the provisions of this bill, if it is enacted into law, electrocution will displace hanging as the legal form of death in this state.

The bill passed yesterday will allow one more hanging, as it excepts cases where sentence has been passed prior to the passage of the bill.

MISS NELLIE MORRISSETT

Has Passed the 5,000 Mark in Washington Contest

GALEN SECOND IN GAIN

West Quincy may show up strong in the final spurt of the Washington Inauguration contest, as the people of that ward have united on Miss Nellie Morrissett of Crescent street who has already made a good showing. Today she adds 355 votes and has passed the 5,000 mark. Her total of 5,110 is only 435 less than Mr. DeNormandie of Wollaston, so that she may soon jump into sixth place.

Mr. Bowditch hopes to have five figures in his total soon; he now lacks only 1,545 of 10,000, having added 165 votes today.

None of the other leaders made gains today, but down the line there were votes for Miss Ruth Cahill of the Odd Ladies, William J. DeCoste of Houghs Neck, Charles H. Finn of the Buffaloes, J. F. Gallagher and B. L. Smith of the shipyard, and William Erickson of the Foresters.

All candidates with less than 100 votes have been omitted from the published list, but a record of their votes will be kept just the same.

CAPITOL RECEPTION.

At the request of President-elect Wilson it has been decided officially to abandon the Inaugural ball. A grand public reception at the Capitol building will be substituted, the arrangements to be made by a committee of Congress. It should be popular. The members of the joint congressional committee on the inauguration are Senators Crane of Massachusetts, Bacon of Georgia and Overman of North Carolina, and Representatives McKinley of Illinois, Rucker of Missouri and Garrett of Tennessee.

PRIZE CERTIFICATE.

It is three weeks now since a vote certificate was offered as a prize, but today the Contest Editor offers a big one, a certificate good for 1,000 votes, which will be awarded on Monday, Jan. 27 at 9 A. M., to the candidate making the largest gain for the week of Jan. 20-27. For example, if the largest gain for the week is 2,000 the candidate will be credited with 3,000 votes. If the largest gain is 2,500 he will be credited with 3,500.

THE LAST WEEKS.

But two weeks more of the vote coupon after this week. The last coupon will be printed in the Daily Ledger of Saturday, Feb. 8, which is near at hand. Are you ready for the final spurt?

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this

WOMEN'S CLUBS

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

Mrs. Arthur W. Hall of Upland road entertained the Junior Friday club at her home Monday afternoon. Goldsmith and Steele were the subjects of the program of which Mrs. Perry Lawton was chairman. It was a pleasant meeting, social as usual, with most of the members present.

* * *

A change has been made in the date of the next meeting of the Quincy Women's club, the musicale being announced for Monday Jan. 27 instead of Tuesday. It will be at Quincy Music hall at 2.30, admission by membership tickets and no seats reserved. Only one guest will be perimtted each member and no one can attend who has already been a guest at the club this year.

* * *

Atlantic Shakespeare Society has finished the study of King John and at its meeting tomorrow will begin The Tempest, taking up act one with Mrs. Elijah G. Hall, chairman. Mrs. Lyndon Gurney will sing "Come unto these yellow sands."

* * *

This week Friday Mrs. Zenas S. Arnold of Coddington street will be the hostess for the Friday club meeting and her sister Miss Edith Randall will have charge of the program.

* * *

The fact that Mrs. Charles M. Bryant has consented to become chairman of the committee which will give the children's valentine German for the Day Nursery on Feb. 8, assures the success of the annual event.

* * *

The make-up of the Fisher-Mason trio which is to be the main attraction at the musicale of the Quincy Women's club on Monday afternoon at Music hall is, Claude Fisher, violin; Carl Webster, 'cello; Stuart Mason, piano. Miss Myra Louise Eekhoff, soloist is to assist the trio, making up a fine program, which promises to be one of the best musicales in the history of the club.

* * *

It is hoped the Russian afternoon on Saturday at the home of Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann will give a forward movement and create a nucleus for starting a club home for young women of the city similar to what the Y. M. C. A. is doing for the men. Mrs. Aline Delano, a Russian lady and personal friend of Mrs. Pfaffmann, will give some of her memoirs of Russian life, which are soon to be published and there will also be Russian music, a Russian tea, and Russian costumes. The Philanthropy committee of the Women's club is aiding Mrs. Pfaffmann and well known Quincy ladies are also much interested in the afternoon and the cause.

There promises to be a large gathering tonight at the Women's clubhouse, the affair being a reception by the club to the teachers in the public schools. Frederick W. Bancroft has been secured as the entertainer and the arrangements are being carried out by Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham, chairman and Reception committee.

* * *

A letter has gone to the officials of the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. from the Quincy Women's club asking for a train to Boston at or near 1 P. M., Quincy women desirous of attending concerts or matinees find the present schedule very unsatisfactory.

* * *

Not only members of the Quincy Young Woman's club are looking forward to the next meeting of the club but many young men as well for it is to be gentlemen's night at the clubhouse.

* * *

A course of readings and discussions under the auspices of the Literature and Library Extention committee of the Philergians of Braintree is being held at the homes of members of the club, the lecturer being Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney of Wollaston. The reading today is at the home of Mrs. Horace R. Drinkwater, 132 Park street; subject: Isben's "A Doll's House" and "Ghosts."

* * *

Junior Alliance of First church meets in the social rooms of the church on Monday evening at half past seven.

Pratt's Oat Bread

Better than animal foods —more wholesome for the children. Try a loaf today.

GROCERS TAKE ORDERS

The mid-winter meeting of the State Federation will be held in Boston, Feb. 12 at the Arlington street church with morning and afternoon sessions.

* * *

By request Mrs. Helen Weil who was to have read "Paolo and Francesca" at the meeting of the Quincy Women's club on Feb. 25, will read instead one of the Irish plays by Lady Gregory. Mrs. Weil is now in Washington and on her return announcement will be made of the subject of her reading.

* * *

Owing to the musicale of the Quincy Women's club the date of the meeting of Quincy Alliance has been changed to Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 28 in First Church chapel. Mrs. Daniel Munroe Wilson, of Kennebunk, Maine, wife of a former pastor of First church is to be the speaker of the afternoon, subject "Twentieth Century Renaissance." It has been several years since Mrs. Wilson has been in Quincy and she will doubtless receive a cordial greeting from many former friends.

* * *

Rev. Abraham M. Rihbany will speak on "How I became a Unitarian at the meeting of Wollaston Alliance on Jan. 29 in the Wollaston Unitarian vestry. A social tea will follow the lecture.

* * *

The Kathryn Crane Memorial club is to meet next Wednesday with Harriot Barbour of Linden place.

* * *

Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney of Wollaston, president of the Quincy Women's club in 1909-1911 has a great many lecture engagements this season, giving a series of literature talks before The Philergians of Braintree, the Monday club of Weymouth, the Quincy Women's club, Shakespeare society of Atlantic, the D. A. R. of Wollaston and several gatherings of women interested in good literature.

* * *

The Boston Wellesley club will present Shakespeare's comedy "The Tempest" in Jordan hall, Boston, Jan. 31, for the purpose of raising funds for a student building on the college ground Among the cast will appear Miss Minnie Packard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Packard of Chestnut street. She will take the part of Gonzala. Miss Packard received her degree in 1909. Other Quincy girls who will take part in the dancing are Miss May Harvey of Houghs Neck, Miss Carlena Walker of Thayer street and Miss Louise Steele, niece of Mrs. N. S. Hunting.

As Music hall seats less than 900, preference is to be given to ticket holders at the musicale of the Women's club, Monday afternoon. Membership tickets (which are not transferable) will be honored and also guest tickets purchased in advance. Those who delay in securing guest tickets until the afternoon of the musicale will have to take their turn and be admitted if there are any seats unoccupied at 2.30 As there are 450 club members and each is entitled to a guest it behooves them to be prepared with tickets for their guest.

* * *

A conference of the Civic Department of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs was held Tuesday afternoon at the New Memorial hall in Melrose. Among others, a talk on the Juvenile Court and Probation Work was given by Mrs. W. G. Shaw, a member of the State Civics department. They were entertained by the Melrose Women's club. Several ladies from the Quincy Women's club attended.

D. A. R. PRESIDENT GENERAL.

In the coming campaign of the National Society, Dahghters of the American Revolution, Manhattan chapter, New York, is taking a leading part in promoting the candidacy of Mrs. William Cummings Story for the office of president general now held by Mrs. Matthew T. Scott. The election of national officers will be a feature of the next annual continental congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, to be held in their own building, Memorial Continental hall, Washington, during the week on which falls Patriot's Day, April 19, as has long been the custom. Manhattan chapter, in standing sponsor for Mrs. Story, has issued a statement, which in part, is as follows:

"Mrs. Story stands for the highest ideals of the organization. If elected she will promote to the best of her ability the immediate liquidation of the debt of Memorial Continental hall, in order that it shall be preserved clear and free to the National society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

"She believes it is unwise to introduce into organizations such as the Daughters of the American Revolution dividing subjects such as religion, politics or suffrage. While she feels a sincere interest in reverence for the sentimental work of the society, such as the marking of revolutionary graves, the preservation of historic spots, etc., and will advance this work to the best of herability, she enthusiastically indorses what might be known as practical patriotism; that is to say, patriotic education, southern mountain school interests, child labor and other now existing committees of the society.

"If elected she will give her undivided attention and service to the society and pledges herself to do everything in her power to preserve harmony and dignity in the National society, Daughters of the American Revolution."

"THE WOMAN WHO SPENDS."

Mrs. June Richardson Lucas gave an interesting talk before the members of the Milton Woman's club at a recent meeting, her subject being "The Woman Who Spends." The speaker stated that the family income may be increased by proper adjustment, and this means careful and intelligent choosing on the part of the woman who handles the income. It is well to keep accounts, for from them we gain much information. Then comes the problem of the elimination of the unnecessary. One way of doing this is by ceasing to imitate so extensively. Mrs. Lucas stated that until a woman can do her very best with what she has, an increase of income is not going to be of any great benefit. A woman of today has a great responsibility, in managing for a family, but if she takes this seriously and gives it intelligent consideration, much can be accomplished.

In order to save money Mrs. Lucas did not recommend attending bargain sales. She stated that few of them are legitimate and most of them are made possible by the fact that those employed in making the "bargains" are miserably paid for their labor.

GENERAL FEDERATION NOTES.

Mrs. R. C. French, chairman of the press committee of the Oregon Federation of Women's Clubs, writes thus:

"The most vital word that the club women of Oregon send is that, on Nov. 5, by a majority of over 3000 votes, suffrage was granted to the women of the state. Many clubs for the first time made suffrage their main issue for the past few months. There has been a state-wide active campaign carried on and in such a dignified manner as to disarm criticism. Our most sincere thanks are sent to the splendid men and women who have visited our state during the campaign to help in the work, and also for the help and encouragement received from hundreds of others. And now the attention of all is turned to the departments of political science, in order that we may be as well prepared as possible for our new duties and responsibilities."

THE GENERAL FEDERATION.

An authoritative article gives much information to club women and appeared in the current number of the Federation Bulletin over the signature of the chairman of the press committee. The following quoted paragraphs from the special article outline something of the importance of the great organization:

"What is the General Federation of Women's Clubs? Astonishing and superflous as this question may seem to many, especially those earnest souls who for years, have devoted themselves to the actual work of the organization, it is quite true, that to many others it is utterly unknown, while to a great number, even of club women, the name suggests something dim and far-off, with which they have no necessary relation. It is with the view of presenting the General Federation definitely and rather intimately to the public that we have undertaken a series of articles briefly setting forth from time to time the personnel of the present administration and the plans of the departments having in charger the activities of the organization.

"At that birthday party of Sorosis, held in 1889, when the idea of a national club federation was first proposed, the delegates present were urged to 'work for a common cause—the cause of womanhood throughout the world.' With this end in view the General Federation of Women's Clubs was organized the following year, and it has steadily gained in numbers and in strength. It long ago realized that in working for womanhood it was necessarily working for humanity, and so its field now takes in almost every aspect of social service. There are in its constituency individual women's clubs, state federations of clubs, and kindred organizations. These constituent bodies must not have sectarian or religious tests for membership, must not be secret, and must have no members who are affiliated with organizations tolerating any violation of national or state laws.

"There are at present at least a million women in the General Federation, and it has a standing and influence second to no other organization, either of men or women, in our country. Hence it is very important that it maintain its solidarity, its breadth and catholicity of spirit and aim, its 'unity in diversity,'—for that is its motto.

"Presidents of the federation have been Mrs. Charlotte Emerson Brown of New Jersey, Mrs. Ellen M. Henrotin of Illinois, Mrs. Rebecca Douglas Lowe of Georgia, Mrs. Dimies T. S. Dennison of Colorado, and Mrs. Phillip N. Moore of Missouri. The present incumbent is Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker of Texas, elected at San Francisco in July, 1912, a woman of marked executive ability, sound judgment, keen sympathies, real eloquence, and rare charm of manner. A native of Virginia, Mrs. Pennypacker married a teacher and went to live in Texas years ago. She is devoted to her adopted state, where she early identified herself with all that makes for the improvement of the life of the people, and is the author of a history of Texas which is a textbook in all the schools of the commonwealth. Left a widow in 1904, Mrs. Pennypacker has since given her time largely to the education of her three children, but has also been active in club work, having been president of the Texas Federation and treasurer of the national body .

"Two years ago, when it was decided to establish an endowment fund of $1,000,000 for the General Federation of Women's clubs. Mrs. Pennypacker was made field chairman, and she did such splendid work in starting the fund that the entire amount will undoubtedly be secured before the close of this administration.

"The women at the head of this great organization not only serve without pay, but they travel from club to club, and from state to state, they send letters and telegrams by the thousand, they do an incalculable amount of clerical and other work in the interest of the federation and nearly all at their own expense. This need not be so after the endowment is secured and much more can then be done along all lines of federation activity.

"The General Federation of Women's clubs stands for conservation, not only of natural resources, but of human life as well. It is for temperance not only in drinking, but in eating and dress, and social entertaining. It is for peace and arbitration as opposed to war. It has arrayed itself against child-labor, that is robbing the world of its tomorrow, against the awful white slave traffic that disgraces our age and nation and against unjust discriminations in the industrial world.

"It is for every good thing, and it is a million strong. Can any club afford to hold itself aloof from this great national body?"

RELEASED ON $10,000 BAIL

Alleged Chief In De Luxe Book Frauds Arraigned at Boston

Boston, Jan. 22.—Glen F. Farmer of New York, said to be the brains behind the numerous "edition de luxe" book frauds throughout the country, was arraigned in the Suffolk county superior court, and after pleading not guilty to an indictment charging him with the larceny of $87,075 from Mrs. Mary L. Rogers of 966 Beacon street, was held in $10,000 bail for trial. The bail was furnished and he was allowed to depart with Joseph Dennison, his attorney.

Farmer has been fighting extradition for three weeks, but he lost his legal battle and was brought to Boston from New York. Upon his arrival here, a member of a casualty company was on hand to offer bail.

Farmer is also wanted in New Hampshire in connection with the alleged book frauds there.

☞The photo plays and vaudeville at Quincy Music hall drew another full house Saturday evening. As a special attraction for Wednesday evening of this week the spectacular photo play of "Queen Elizabeth" will be presented with Mme Sarah Bernhardt in the title role.

OPPORTUNITY CLUB FILLS GAP

Members Have Wide Range of Subjects to Choose

The Philanthropic committee of the Quincy Women's club held a most interesting meeting in the council chamber at City hall, Tuesday afternoon, through the courtesy of the mayor and Council.

The presentation of the subject of Opportunity clubs gave those present an idea of what might be done to reach and give larger opportunity for our young people who leave the grammar schools, by talk and pictures showing the work carried on in East Boston by the Women's Municipal League last year, and by an appropriation from the City of Boston this year.

Music was considered of first importance drum, corps, orchestras, and bands. Dramatics ranked next, then physical culture, folk dancing, gymnastics, literature, sewing, etc., etc.

The citizens of East Boston are thoroughly interested and very proud of the work being done in their school buildings. There are three others like centres in Boston. D. A. Mann has also begun a similiar work.

These workers were so interested that they were glad and willing to come to Quincy's giving their services, not only the speaker Mr. Ralph H. Hawley, but a man with lantern and pictures also gave his time to illustrate the talk making it much more forceful and effective. Quincy needs to be alive to her opportunities.

LABOR ASSOCIATION

labor question for years who said there was no remedy for the existing conditions.

John F. Tobin of the Boot and Shoe workers said the remedy was only obtainable through the American Federation of Labor, and trades unions. These trade unions as managed today make and unmake political parties.

friction and a little better feeling on Shoe club said there was only a little friction and a little beter feeling on both sides would wipe it all out.

Then came the climax of the meeting when Senor Giovanitti was introduced and the statements he made made his blood run cold. He could imagine what it would mean for a man like him to be turned loose among a lot of people of his own nationality. Giovanitti disagreed with all the other speakers and said the solution was near at hand. That the trade unions were weak things and that the A. F. L. was worse. That the solution was only through the I. W. W. It means that everything belongs to the workers and they are going to have it whether you like it or not.

People are in the habit of saying that the employer, or the man who employes the help is responsible for the work. This is a mistaken idea. We are simply the producers for some one else who is the real employer. He employs the contractors to hire the help and produce the product. We therefor as employers are shirking our responsibility. The contractor is nothing but the director of labor for the man who wants the product.

There is another misconception. That is most men think that the only trouble with labor is, the matter of wages and hours of labor. When you get down to that we do not care a rap about wages and hours of labor, because we can easily shift that from our shoulders to yours. The trouble is the other things which we can not know in advance. There are a great many of these things which he could numerate but he would only mention one. A plumber who carried on business who tried to do a little work with his own hands had his business held up for from seven to nine months. He was having some work done in his own house and started to do some of the work himself when he was informed by the men at work that they were liable to a fine of $5 if they continued to work with him as he was a non union man. He also spoke briefly of another similar case where 26 jobs were tied up simply because of some trouble with one of the different unions.

The trouble is that you people who want the product will not wait for your product but are willing to be blackmailed in order not to be delayed These are the things which make the trouble and not the wages and hours of labor.

When men comes to learn to hate the work which they are doing they are becoming pretty well gone. Yet that is what the trade unions are teaching these men. To hate their work. All they care for is the money they get. He was a believer in trade unions but the sort of unions that will construct and not be destructive. Many of the members of this union are seeking release from the leash but can not get it. It is that gradual growing feeling of indifference of the man for his job that is working the harm. Trade unions are made up of only one factor, made out of the manuel working men. It is not a properly directed organization.

The two elements are separated as far as it is possible to get them. As a result they have become abnormal and dangerous and we have no right to expert anything but danger, which we have got.

Who is to blame? He did not think the men were to blame but the people who direct the labor, whatever you call them. They have been left almost hedpless men to be destroyed. Unless the men whom I am working for take it in hand we can not hope for peace.

Collective bargaining had been tried as a remedy but had proved to be a case of collective sandbagging.

The speaker then spoke of what he considered the real trade union which he had started five years ago. This was composed of two factors, five employers and 26 bricklayers. We provided a real union. That is one family. We have found no discord simply because we have really got together. First we had the bricklayers, then the carpenters and now we have the painters. From 30 we have grown to between 2000 and 3000. If we had 15 such trades we could force the A. F. L. to knock at our doors.

The reason for our success is because we have been able to classify our men. A lever wage is the weapon of the union. In our association we have the craftsmen and the associate members. We try to regulate the delicate human machinery which in the hands of Giovanitti is destroyed. Are we doing our duty when we neglect the care of this human machine.

The way out of the trouble is to make men real partners with the men engaged in manufacture. If we can convince you to lay aside and get together and grapple this question we will find a way out.

In our association the men fix their own wages and the wages for the year are fixed by them at the annual meeting. Then there is a board of five craftsmen and five contractors who comprise the directors. We have an office with a commissioner in charge. His work is to act as a sort of clearing house for men out of work and men seeking workers. We know just what each man is and what he is capable of performing, so that when a foreman comes to the commission for men we can send him just the kind of help he desires.

When a man applies to become a member we give him literature and he must agree not to be a member of any body that antagonizes us, and he is given to understand that it is under open shop conditions.

The application is considered by the board of directors and if we do not know anything about him he is given an associate member's card until he becomes known and it is learned what he can do. We want all to become craftsmen and encourage them to become so. The wage is determined by what a man can do and as he determines his own wage there is no trouble at all. We get together and talk over about the wage, where we are free from contaminating influences.

There is not one of the great leaders from Samuel Gompers and John Mitchell down that any one would trust with $5000 cash capital.

The plasterers' union was the most closely allied and made the most trouble of any class. This is gotten over by our association by each contractor contributing one half cent per hour which goes into a fund which maintains a supply of plasterers that can be had at any time.

Then another thing we fight the affairs of members and we have made even Mayor Fitzgerald crawl. He then read from the quarterly report of the plasterers' union showing that during that quarter $69,251 in fines had been imposed. There was nothing to show what became of these fines when paid, and he knew from personal experience that the fines were paid and the conclusion was that they went into someones pocket. These fines ranged from $50 to $500.

After the address an opportunity was given for asking questions and several availed themselves of the opportunity, which brought more clearly some of the facts noted above.

These served to prolong the meeting until near 10 o'clock but before it closed a rising vote of thanks was extended to the speaker for his highly entertaining talk.

FLIGHT TO NORTH POLE IS POSSIBLE

Opinion of Amunsden, Who Pays Short Visit to Boston

Boston, Jan. 22.—"It would not be impossible to discover the North Pole by means of flight in an aeroplane," declared Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian discoverer of the South Pole, at the City club. "I don't see why it should not be accomplished."

Captain Amundsen was given a rousing reception at the City club. He talked freely of his experiences in the Antarctic regions and expressed himself as much interested in the plans of Captain Bartlett, who was with Peary in his dash for the North Pole, to fly around the pole in an aeroplane.

More than 1000 people, including delegations from several Norwegian societies, greeted Amundsen on his arrival at the South station.

Captain Amundsen called on Governor Foss at the state house and Mayor Fitzgerald at city hall just before noon and had a five-minute chat with each of the two executives. He expressed himself as exceedingly gratified at the cordiality of the greeting he received in Boston.

Previous to his lecture at Tremont temple Amundsen was given a dinner at Young's by the Viking club. He returned to New York on the midnight train last night.

QUIET WEDDING OF MISS GOULD

Noted Woman Becomes the Bride of Finley J. Shepard

SIMPLICITY IN THE DETAILS

Broken Only by Elaborate Musical Program by Large Orchestra—Two Little Nieces Only Attendants of Bride, Who Is Given Away by Brother—Honeymoon at Tarrytown

New York, Jan. 22.—Miss Helen Gould was married today at her country home, Lyndhurst, in Tarrytown, to Finlay J. Shepard. The ceremony took place at 12:30 in the flower-laden south parlor of the big house, to which only the intimate relatives and a very few intimate friends were invited.

The wedding party formed up stairs and came down led by Rev. Dr. Russell. Then came Miss Gould's two little nieces, Dorothy and Helen Gould, and her brother, George Gould, who gave her away.

Miss Dorothy Gould held Miss Gould's bouquet while the ring was being placed on her finger, and Miss Helen saw that Miss Gould's train was kept unruffled.

Miss Gould chose this date for her wedding, which is the anniversary of the marriage of her father and mother, and which despite the fact that she insisted on the greatest simplicity in the details there was an elaborate musical program by an orchestra of fifty players, which played, while the wedding guests were assembling, compositions by Elgar, Schuman, Wagner, Mendelsshon, Massanet and Goddard, and during the marriage ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Daniel P. Russell, Handel's "Largo." The wedding music included the nuptial march from "Lohengrin" and the familiar wedding march from Mendelsshon's "Midsummer Night's Dream."

FINLEY J. SHEPARD

Miss Gould had as her only attendants her two nieces, Helen and Dorothy Gould, the little daughters of her brother, Frank J. Gould. Louis J. Shepard acted as his brother's best man, but there were no ushers.

Miss Gould's wedding gown of ivory white satin was embellished by rare point lace, the gift of her sister, the Duchess De Talleyrand-Perigord, and her veil was also of point lace. She entered the drawing room with her brother, George J. Gould.

Immediately after the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served by Delmonico. The wedding cake boxes were heart-shaped and embellished with white satin and ornamented with sprays of lillies of the valley, the bride's favorite flower.

The wedding certificate is a product of the village of Irvington, having been done on sheepskin by Miss Lucille Townsend, librarian of the town library. When the library was built Miss Gould saw that the interior was properly decorated and it was thought Miss Townsend could in this manner show the appreciation of the town. The illumination was done by Miss Helen Lewis.

At the bottom of it is the following verse from the fifth chapter of Ephesians: "Let every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself, and the wife see that she reverence her husband."

The various rooms of Lyndhurst were decorated with American Beauty roses and other flowers from the conservatories of Lyndhurst, and there were quantities of lillies of the valley. Shepard and his bride will pass the early part of their honeymooon on the estate, although later they may sail for Europe.

None but the wedding guests were permitted to enter the grounds of Lyndhurst, and cards of admission were issued even to the nearest relatives of the bride and bridegroom, and also to the musicians.

Some of the wedding gifts received by Miss Gould were:

LIBERALS CREATING MORE CUBAN STRIFE

Unrest Is Being Closely Watched by Washington Officials

Washington, Jan. 22.—Various reports of the intention of the Cuban Liberals to prevent the inauguration of President-elect Menocal and their wish to force a new election continue to reach officials here, who are watching the situation.

It is said the Liberals seek the annulment of Menocal's election by a decision of the supreme court. Some of the negro malcontents involved in the revolution of last summer are reported to be threatening to renew hostilities to attract the attention of the United States.

Liberal members of the Cuban house of representatives are reported to have caucused and called upon Conservatives to consider a joint resolution of congress to annul the recent election and to impeach General Monteagudo, commander of the government forces, for alleged interference in the election and the troubles following which resulted in some deaths—assassinations, some allege.

GETS LIFE SENTENCE

Son Is Chief Witness Against Farmer Who Killed His Wife

Exeter, N. H., Jan. 22.—George B. Caswell, a Plaistow farmer, was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of his wife last May.

Caswell's son, Bertram, aged 13 years, told the court how his father had sent him with a message to his mother, the parents having lived apart, asking for a meeting at the Plaistow cross-roads.

At this meeting Caswell discharged the contents of one barrel of a shotgun into his wife's body with fatal effect and then turned the other barrel on himself.

Caswell was permanently disfigured and barely escaped with his life.

PENDLETON FINED $200

What It Cost Yale Student For Pulling False Alarm of Fire

New Haven, Jan. 22.—Edmund R. Pendleton, Yale '13, of Scranton, Pa., was fined $200 and costs in the city court after pleading guilty to sending in a false alarm of fire. His fine was paid by friends.

Pendleton is under probation by the Yale faculty for an infringement of the college rules. His counsel pleaded intoxication on the part of his client in asking for a light sentence.

Coal Barge Sinks

New London, Conn., Jan. 22.—The coal barge Massachusetts, one of four in tow of the tug Sarah McWilliams, bound up the coast, sank about 400 yards west of New London light. The tow was bound here for shelter.

Admiral von Holliman Dead

Berlin, Jan. 22.—Admiral von Holliman, German minister of marine from 1890 to 1897, died here, aged 73 years.

Princess Victoria to Wed

Potsdam, Jan. 22.—The engagement is announced of Princess Victoria Margarete, daughter of Prince Friedrich Leopold of Prussia, to Prince Henry of Reuss.

COPYRIGHT, 1912, BY G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

CHAPTER VIII.

Libby Prison.

CAPTAIN COX sat beside Hunt's couch and conversed with him in low, earnest tones.

"There are other places," said he, "besides the field of battle, where a man can be brave."

"Oh, no doubt," was the bitter reply. "You find it easy to keep up your courage when I am in despair."

"What do you mean?"

"You know. We were boys together, and I have always put up with second best. You've always stood in front of me, Tom Cox—at school, at sport, in business, in love."

"Tell me one thing," urged Cox. "Have I ever played you false?"

"No, you haven't. You haven't needed to. Your cursed fatal good luck does it all for you."

"Now you talk like a whining child."

"No, I don't. At this moment your heart's inmost thought is identical with mine. Marie Mason—great God! How my heart beats at the speaking of that name! Marie—she was the one woman in all the world to me. Why did you cross my path there, too, when it was as sure as fate that her preference would fall on you?"

"If it was fate, what's the use of talking about it now?" retorted Cox doggedly. "And to what avail to either of us now can that girl's favor be? You know she is an irrevocable southerner, like all the rest of her family. You know that I came out for the Union, as you did, when the first gun was fired on Sumter. Perhaps you don't know, but I will tell you now, that when I left Lexington she—Marie Mason—said she would rather see me lying dead on the battlefield wearing the southern gray than marching against her people in the blue uniform of the north. That was our parting. Well, you and I have drunk from the same canteen. We have fought side by side in the same battles; we have both won our captain's swords—and lost them. Now, in misfortune, we are still together. And yet, on the petty pretext of disparity in our lots, you would banish the one ray of sunshine penetrating these prison walls—our old comradeship."

"You are well and strong. I am ill," pleaded Hunt.

"I don't forget that, either," murmured Cox, softening.

"I've talked too much, I suppose. It's all over now. Here's my hand, if you will take it."

Cox did not take it immediately, but answered:

"It's all right, Ralph. Only give me a little time to get over it, for you cut deep, old fellow."

At this moment a sudden silence fell, and a general movement and whisper made themselves manifest. Enter Captain Jackson Warner, the prison commissary.

"Evening, Yanks," was his gruff but not unkindly greeting. "What devilry are you up to now?"

"Talking over old times and old comrades, captain, that's all," replied Cox gently.

"Well, you may have an opportunity of seeing some more o' them 'ere old comrades o' yourn, I reckon, before long."

"What? Are we going to get out?"

"No; they're coming in here. I suppose you've heard the news?"

At these words a young lieutenant who had sat silently in an opposite corner reading a copy of the Richmond Dispatch weeks old, threw down the paper and listened attentively.

"Let us know the worst, Captain Warner," urged Cox. "We're used to it—haven't got feelings any more, you know. What's the news?"

"Oh, some more fighting in the valley, you know. Yanks licked out o' their boots again, as usual. More prisoners, more hard luck stories."

"What's that?" cried Deacon Hart. "Another fight? More prisoners? Oh, Lord!"

"You're on the religious, aren't you?" inquired the commissary scoffingly.

"I'm a shouting Methodist these forty years, thank the Lord!" answered the deacon, holding his hand of cards behind his back.

"Well, your shouting hasn't benefited Abe Lincoln nor yourself very much so far. You'd better swing around and pray for Jeff Davis, I reckon, and be on the safe side."

"Never, till this right hand"—putting out his left with the cards, then jerking it back and holding up the right—"shall lose its cunning."

"Oh, go ahead, deacon, and pray for Jeff Davis if they want you to," suggested Cox. "He'll need it before this war's over."

"You can talk with your friends just from the front about that," retorted Warner gruffly. "Here's one of 'em coming upstairs now."

A measured tramp was heard approaching outside. The commissary opened the door, and the new Union prisoner was marched in between two guards. He saluted and introduced himself.

"Gentlemen, permit me. I am Colonel Coggswell of the Forty-second New York."

"The Tammany regiment of New York city!" exclaimed Lieutenant Bedloe, sotto voce.

Captain Cox returned the newcomer's salute and responded:

"We have heard of you, colonel, and we are right proud to meet you. My comrades here are Captain Hunt of Kentucky, Chaplain Hart of Indiana and Lieutenant Bedloe, from—well, from your own state, I believe. I am Captain Cox of the Tenth Kentucky."

Colonel Coggswell shook hands all around and said:

"I am fortunate to have the honor of sharing your quarters. I don't suppose you find it exactly lonesome here."

"The place is quite populous. It seems as if the fortunes of war had picked out the flower of our army to pine away in infernal holes like this. Oh, for an hour of action!"

"Just wait till the exchange," said the hopeful Hart. "With a dozen men like us they might redeem a whole Confederate regiment."

"I understand," said Ralph Hunt gloomily, "that their idea is to get the well kept Confederate prisoners back from the Union camps and send us as living skeletons in exchange."

"Do you think, Colonel Coggswell," asked Cox, "that things are going as badly with us in the valley and elsewhere as they try to make out?"

"Yes, and a sight worse, I should say, at the present moment."

"Then," interposed Hart tragically, "all is lost save honor."

The colonel drew himself up proudly, glanced around to make sure that the commissary and guard had retired, then with a superb dramatic gesture opened the coat of his uniform, which had been tightly buttoned up to his chin, and displayed the stars and stripes wrapped around his body.

"Not all lost, sir. Our colors, by God!"

The prisoners rushed forward, their eyes bulging and cheeks glowing with patriotic ardor. Even poor Hunt rose excitedly from his couch.

"Three cheers, boys," cried Cox. "All together—let her go!"

They gave a rousing round of cheers that brought Captain Warner rushing back into the room.

"Come, come, gentlemen! Remember where you are. This ain't Washington. What are you feeling so ornery about?"

"We were just welcoming an old friend," explained Cox.

"And, besides, cap," interposed Hart, "ain't this Thanksgiving eve? How about them pumpkin pies we ordered and paid for in good United States money?"

"That's a fact," answered the commissary. "Well, the cook tackled 'em according to directions. They ought to be pretty nigh done by this time. Queer grub, that."

At this juncture the door opened and immediately a joyous commotion ensued.

"Pie, pie! Oh, pumpkin pie! Attention, all! Salute the pastry! Let the noble pumpkin approach its doom with military honors."

The prisoners drew up in line opposite Captain Warner, while in marched a dignified old negress with a red bandanna turban on her head, bearing aloft in both hands a platter containing an enormous pie. This she solemnly deposited on the table, then turned and made her exit in silence, saluted profoundly by the company.

"Chaplain Hart will ask a blessing—will you join us, Captain Warner?"

"No, thank you," replied the commissary, making his exit. "The atmosphere's getting too Yankeefied to suit me, and I'll beg to be excused."

Knife in hand, Hart stood in an attitude of devotion at the head of the table.

"All I can say is, Lord bless this 'ere pie"—then, as an expression of horror and disgust overspread his homely face—"and the Lord help us after we've eaten it! Why, durn my skin, if they ain't gone and put an upper crust on a pumpkin pie! And the pumpkin cut into hunks as big as your fist, without no milk nor sugar, and not half baked, neither."

"The devil! Those Virginia darkies are good cooks, but they don't know what pumpkin pie is."

Deacon Hart carved the pie and distributed slabs all around, remarking philosophically:

"The blacks must be freed and educated. Think of a whole race in such benighted ignorance as this!"

The attack had scarcely begun when Captain Warner once more appeared at the door, making a sign which all the imprisoned officers instantly understood.

"Stir up the animals, boys!" whispered Hart. "Visitors coming."

"Petticoats, too," added Cox, looking out.

A pretty, vivacious young woman, escorted by a sinister looking Confederate officer, who singled out Lieutenant Bedloe with a malicious sneer and received a flashing look of silent scorn and defiance in return, were shown in by the commissary.

"This is the Potomac room, Miss Mason. Gentlemen, a southern lady pays you the honor of a visit."

Captain Cox bowed courteously, while all his comrades stood in the background.

"Madam, be assured of our grateful appreciation. It is a long time since we have seen a woman's face. We are not exactly fixed up for company, but"— At this point he looked into her shining eyes and in sudden overwhelming recognition exclaimed: "Great heavens! Marie—Miss Mason—I am not mistaken?"

"No, Tom," she answered sweetly, "you are not mistaken. Oh, what a horrid place!"

"Yes, you find us at a disadvantage. I say 'us,' for, as you see, Ralph is here too."

"Oh, dear; how terrible! You poor, foolish boys! And how is it with you, Ralph?"

"Thank you—not much worse than when I parted from you at Lexington."

"What a pair of rash, headstrong boys! Why did you desert the south?"

"Wasn't it the south that did the deserting? Oh, but don't let us talk politics."

"It just breaks my heart to see you here, both of you—yes, all of you," said the young woman, looking around sympathetically. Then she took from under her cloak a cigar box and a couple of bottles wrapped in a newspaper and set them on the table beside the sorry looking wreck of the pumpkin pie. "I've brought you a few cigars and things to cheer you up. Wasn't I thoughtful?"

"Bless your pretty face and gentle heart, miss," Deacon Hart said fervently. "What a pity you're secesh!"

"Well, she seems to lean toward the Union side anyway," whispered Colonel Coggswell, as Captain Cox and the fair visitor conversed in low, earnest tones, with their heads very close together.

REPEAL OF FREE TOLL

Demanded by Root In Vigorous Speech on Panama Canal

Washington, Jan. 22.—"Shall we inform the world that the United States is false to its agreements, false to its pledged word? Shall we have it made known the world over that you must look out for the United States or it will get the advantage of you? That it is astute, cunning, slippery?"

With this vigorous denunciation of the attitude of this country in the Panama canal controversy with Great Britain, Senator Root closed a two-hour speech in the senate with an appeal for the submission of the Panama canal question to arbitration, or the repeal of that section of the canal law that would give free passage to American coastwise ships.

Senator Root delivered the most vigorous attack on the present attitude of the United States that has been heard since the Panama controversy with Great Britain arose.

Call Upon Bangor and Aroostook Railroad Company to Make Settlement With Employes—Governor Endeavors to Ascertain Merits of the Dispute—Taken Up In Legislature

Bangor, Me., Jan. 22.—Business interests throughout the line of the Bangor and Aroostook railroad are seriously disturbed over the situation resulting from the strike of engineers and firemen.

The suspension of the freight service, if it continues, will very soon tie up the freight steamer operations at Stockton, from which point great shipments of print paper and potatoes are ordinarily shipped every week to New York.

Three hundred men have been laid off at Searsport, where the fertilizer plants and coal pockets are idle through the inability of the railroad company to man the yard locomotives.

The mail service dependent upon the railroad has also suffered severely. The boards of trade of Presque Isle and Houlton have called upon the company to make a settlement with the men and also have urged the county officials to give the road adequate police protection for the safe movement of the trains now being run by non-union men.

The most hopeful development was the action of Governor Haines in directing the state board of arbitration and conciliation to use its good offices in determining the merits of the dispute.

The railroad officials continue optimistic and announced that they were operating their passenger trains on a practically complete schedule. It was said arrangements to restore the regular passenger service out of Caribou, from which point one of the regular trains failed to start, had been made.

The company announced further that twenty-one new men who had been engaged to replace the strikers were sent to Milo Junction to take the examination for positons as engineers and firemen. Twenty-five or thirty other new men are now on their way here, it was stated, and if they are successful in passing the necessary examinations they will increase the working force to practically 75 percent of the normal number, according to the management.

F. J. Thrasher of Portland, chief clerk of this division of the railway postal service, was in Bangor trying to improve the disorganized mail service. The withdrawal of the Bangor and Aroostook trains from the tracks of the Maine Central railroad seriously impaired the mail schedule.

Considered by Legislators

Augusta, Me., Jan. 22.—The serious situation in Aroostook county in consequence of the Bangor and Aroostook railroad strike occupied the attention of the members of the legislature. Senator Hersey of Aroostook introduced an order, which was laid upon the table, that it is the sense of the legislature the strike be arbitrated. Senator Hersey praised the strikers as being worthy citizens.

The Aroostook county delegation of senators and representatives met and adopted the following resolution, which was wired to President Todd of the Bangor and Aroostook railroad and to the union officials:

"Resolved, that it is the sense of the Aroostook county delegation in the Seventy-sixth legislature that the strike on the Bangor and Aroostook railroad should be speedily settled by arbitration or otherwise,"

Representative Irving of Caribou received a long letter from President Cleveland of the Aroostook Potato Shippers' association, in which he claimed it is the opinion of his county that Todd made a mistake in refusing to arbitrate. He also stated that unless freight traffic is resumed immediately it will result in a wholesale cancellation of the orders from the south for seed potato stock.

Rev. Anna H. Shaw who speaks in Quincy Monday night at Colonial hall on why give the franchise to women is an eloquent lecture and a very busy woman. Monday was the only date she could give Quincy as she speaks at Brockton, Tuesday and in Boston Wednesday.

The announcement last week that Miss Elizabeth Deane of Whitwell street was going over to New York to study for the stage seems to have been a joke, but without point or humor, for Miss Deane hasn't the least idea of going on the stage and has been busy denying the rumor.

At a meeting of the Quincy Young Men's Hebrew Association, Tuesday evening, plans were completed for the opening of the new rooms, Feb. 2. The following committee has charge of the affair, Edward Berman, chairman, Joseph B. Grossman, Isodor Abrams, Samuel Grabowsky, H. Phillip Levowich, Joseph Szathmary and Samuel Kadets. Plans were also completed for the first annual ball in aid of the building fund, to be held at Music hall, April 1.

TWO KILLED IN CRASH

Meagre Message of Rear-End Collision of Trains In Maine

Brownsville Junction, Me., Jan. 22.—A rear-end collision between trains on the Canadian Pacific railroad at Onawa station last night caused the death of two men and injuries to several others.

One of the men killed was Dr. Daniel W. Hayes of Brownsville, who was returning from attendance on a patient.

The other victim was Fred Crandall, also of this town, who was engineer of one of the trains. The names of the injured are not known.

The meagre message received here said the accident was a rear-end collision, and from this fact railroad employes expressed the opinion that the passenger train probably ran into a freight. The officials of the railroad would give no information.

WHIST PARTY.

A whist party was given by the Abigail Adams Circle, No. 11 I. C. of A. in Doble's hall, Tuesday evening after the regular meeting. Souvenirs were secured by Mrs. Charles Nicholl, 46 points; Mrs. Moriarty 44 points; J. Ford 42 points; Joseph Cavanaugh 42 points; Mrs. Dawson 41 points. The consolations went to Mrs. M. O'Neil, 13 points and Harold Warmington 12 points. The whist was the first of a series of three given by the Circle, the second of which will take place Feb. 18.

SURPRISE PARTY.

Mrs. Ida Erickson was tendered a birthday surprise party by some of her friends, on her 37th birthday. She was presented with a set of sterling silver spoons. The evening was very pleasantly spent and refreshments were served. Among those present were Mrs. Augusta Ericson, Mrs. Asklund, Mrs. Gustave Pearson, Mrs. John Johnson, Mrs. Swan Johnson, Mrs. Oscar Almquist, Mrs. Otto Gelotte, Mrs. John Olson, Mrs. Anton Thompson, Mrs. Gustave Lundberg, Mrs. Frank Gullickson, Mrs. Cecilia Ericson, Miss Elvira Thompson, Mrs. Peter Johnson and Mrs. Otto Peterson.

—Milford licensed liquor dealers are said to have given away $2000 worth of liquor as Christmas gifts to customers. A mistaken "kindness," and one that is being stopped in many license cities to the advantage of customer and dealer alike.

MAY NOT COUNT AS LEAGUE GAME

Quincy A. A. Beaten Three to One at Dorchester

SECOND TEAM MADE GOOD

The Quincy A. A. team lost to the North Dorchester basket ball team in the Vine street church 32 to 10 and the second team beat the N. D's., 20 to 7 Tuesday evening.

The first team game ended at 18 to 8 at the first period. The winners piled on 14 more points in the second period while Quincy made but two additional points.

The feature was a shot from the extreme left corner the length of the hall, by "Putt" Kelly. He played in fine form at centre.

The Quincy team was weakened without the services of the Duggan Brothers. Rein at lleft back was given a tryout and played creditably. He made one basket. In the absence of Dan Duggan, Boyle was acting captain.

The hall was dimly lighted and the floor space required compliance with the outside line rules.

When the North Dorchester second team appeared many asked if they were the first team. They outweighed the local boys by at least 10 pounds.

For the second the first period ended with 6 to 3 lead for Quincy. They came back strong in the second period and through passing "Boot" shot four and Manning two. "Boot" made both fouls.

BRAUN FOUND GUILTY OF BREAK

At the Branch Post Office at Quincy Point

SENTENCE DEFERRED

William Braun who was arrested on Dec. 26 by Officer Thorne who discovered him in postal sub-station 154 located in the store of H. H. I. Smith, Washington street, was convicted by a jury in the United States District Court Tuesday. Judge Morton suspended sentence pending investigation of his character. He was charged with breaking and entering a postoffice.

Braun was discovered about 2 A. M. and surrendered at the point of a revolver. He was a Fore River employee and claimed a residence on Union street.

USED TO STIR UP FIRE.

Old Gun Loaded Over a Century Ago Shows It Has a Kick Left

Bloomsburg, Pa., Jan. 22.—A load of shot, probably intended for the British in Revolutionary days, narrowly escaped causing the death of Thomas Sitler of Briar Creek township.

It was last spring, while plowing, that an old muzzle-loader was unearthed, eighteen inches below the surface, so deep that ordinary spading had never struck it. The exceptionally long barrel made the rusted gun a good instrument to stir up the fire, and so it has been used.

Last evening there was a loud explosion. Sitler cried out he had been shot, but it proved only his hat had been shot into shreds.

REINDICTMENT OF RAILROAD MEN ASKED

New Haven Case Comes Before New Federal Grand Jury

New York, Jan. 22.—A new federal grand jury, sworn in yesterday, will be asked to reindict Charles S. Mellen, president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, and E. J. Chamberlin and Alfred W. Smithers, president and chairman, respectively, of the Grand Trunk railway of Canada, for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

This plan was decided upon by the government to cover technical objections raised by counsel for the defendants as to the qualifications of a member of the jury which first indicted them.

The taking of testimony in support of the government's contention that the three railroad men violated the Sherman law in connection with an alleged traffic agreement was begun as soon as the new jury was selected.

ARTIST FATALLY SHOT

Attacked While Asleep by Man Who Was Infatuated With Her

Indiana, Pa., Jan. 22.—Mrs. Belle Clark, an artist, was shot three times and probably fatally wounded by Harry Spense, while asleep in her apartments. Spense, aged 50, attempted to escape but was arrested.

Mrs. Clark is the wife of a Dubois, Pa., hotel proprietor, and Spense, it is said, was infatuated with her.

Pearson May Be Senator

Concord, N. H., Jan. 22.—The Republicans of the New Hampshire legislature, following the fourth formal ballot by that body for United States senator, held a caucus, at which it was voted to make Secretary of State Pearson the caucus nominee. There was only one dissenting vote.

—No sensible man can be particularly proud of the fact that the House has voted to make literacy a test for the entrance of those foreigns who knock at our doors and ask permission to enter the land of religious and political liberty and make their home. The action does no credit to the congressmen voting for it. One may venture to assert that in doing so many of them have cast aspersion upon their own ancestors, for the poor and the illiterate whom Columbia welcomed with open arms in the first half of the last century founded a democracy which is now the boast of the civilized world. It would put them to shame if they could know the present attitude of the men they begot.—Rochester Herald.

Little Likelihood of Resumption of War In the Balkans

POWERS' ADVICE ACTED UPON

Porte to Make Final Decision by Thursday, but Hopes to Obtain Direct Intervention Under Form of Mediation, Thus Sparing Humiliation—Will Cede Adrianople

London, Jan. 22.—Increasing optimism is displayed in telegrams from Constantinople regarding the possibility of the acceptance of the advice of the powers by the Turkish government. It is regarded here as practically certain that peace will be concluded between the Balkan allies and Turkey without a resumption of hostilities.

Even should the Ottoman government's reply be not altogether satisfactory, it is thought the European powers, having taken hold of the situation, will not allow the belligerents to resume warlike operations.

A telegram from Constantinople stated that the porte would probably make a final decision by Thursday, accepting the advice of the powers. Under these circumstances, it was said that the national assembly would not be convened in Constantinople.

Word from Vienna said Austria was still mobilizing her reserves, although the peace party there was in the ascendancy.

Rechad Pasha received a long cipher message from Constantinople and it is asserted he was instructed to confer with Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign secretary, with the object of obtaining direct intervention by the powers under the form of mediation, or in another way, if more acceptable, so that Turkey might be spared the humiliation of ceding Adrianople at first hand. Rechad Pasha, accompanied by Tewfik Pasha and Osman Nizami Pasha, visited Grey, but the nature of Gray's reply has not been disclosed.

Unofficial conversations have begun among the allies regarding their inter-Balkan delimitations. Dr. Daneff, head of the Bulgarian delegation, and the Greek premier, M. Venizelos, are engrossed in this task. As no agreement yet has been reached concerning Salonica, the Greeks hope to find no difficulty in retaining the town when the Bulgarians get Adrianople.

A Bucharest dispatch says it is expected a settlement between Roumania and Bulgaria will be effected before Feb. 1 by an agreement providing for rectification of the frontier. Roumania, however, will not get as much as she wanted; Bulgaria will cede some of the forts in the neighborhood of Silistria, but not the town itself.

The Greek general, Sapountzakis, operating outside of Janina, reports that he made a general attack Sunday along the whole front. Artillery firing continued throughout the day. The Greeks finally dislodged the Turks from the hills in front of Bizani, the Turks retreating in disorder toward that place.

Major Munro McFarland, U. S. A., has concluded an inspection of the Servian battlefields in behalf of the American government. He speaks in high terms of the courtesy of the military authorities and the excellence of the Servian soldiers.

TOO OLD TO BE SPANKED

Court's Decision In Case of Girl of 19 Who Wears Hobble Skirt

Elgin, Ills., Jan. 22.—"A girl who wears a hobble skirt, does her hair up in a knot and answers to the title of 'Miss' is too old to be spanked."

This was the decision of Police Magistrate Thompson when Charles Junghaenal was arraigned in his court upon the charges of his daughter that she had been whipped.

Miss Elizabeth Junghaenal, 19 years old, appeared to prosecute her parent. The court imposed a fine of $1, and Junghaenal confessed that he had acted hastily when he found his daughter spending the night at a neighbor's instead of coming home.

STRAIN TELLS UPON HIM

King Peter of Servia Seriously Ill From Nervous Exhaustion

London, Jan. 22.—A special dispatch from Zemlin says King Peter of Servia is seriously ill. The king, journeying a short distance from Belgrade, fainted and was rushed back to Belgrade to the care of court physicians.

Nervous prostration, resulting from the strain of the war, is said to be the cause.

BOWLING

Bowling throughout the city Tuesday evening was confined to the Coliseum alleys only, and aside from new records by McLean and O'Neil other good, bad and indifferent scores were made.

McLean rolled with the Litchfield Sports who beat the Tubular Rivet & Stud Co. four points. Making 139 he set a new mark in team showing. O'Neil made 336 for a record total. He is led only by Poehler who did not make his marks in team rolloffs.

Both men roll in the dark horse class and fans are considering matching them against Smith and Connell of Weymouth who beat Bliss and Grant Jan. 16.

Beach's Alleys of Weymouth Landing was represented and rolled a picked Fore River team, beating them 3 to 1. Downton with 112 as single and a 288 total was high man.

The regular Heptasoph match drew considerable attention. Captain Brown beat Captain Dackers 3 to 1; Captain Gibney beat Captain MacKay 4 to 0; Captain Irving beat Captain Mullen by only two in the pinfall and succeeded in splitting the honors.

Healey made high string of 112 and he and Robinson tied at 296 for best total.

He claims to have a team which can roll some and if he can secure other men he desires will have an aggregation that will bear watching.

HEAVY SEIZURE OF JEWELS

Alleged Smuggled Diamonds Held Up In New York Postoffice

New York, Jan. 22.—Smuggled diamonds worth more than $20,000, government agents say, were found in a package received from Amsterdam, Holland, by Nathan Groen, a New York diamond dealer.

Groen was arrested as he got the package at the registered mail window of the general postoffice. Inside the package special treasury agents found a photograph, but hidden in the wrappings were the diamonds.

Groen is a member of the firm of Groen Bros. Immediately after his arrest government agents went to the firm's place of business and seized diamonds valued at $60.000.

—Broke, but worth $22,000, which he cannot touch till 27 years of age, John Harlon, aged 21, will join the army at the Spokane, Washington, recruiting office to satisfy his thirst for adventure during four of the six years of waiting. When he was 16 years old he accompanied a circus out of his home town, Creston, Iowa, without giving his family notice of his change of residence. He went from place to place, finally landing in Spokane two years ago, where he has remained. Meanwhile, his father died, leaving a will which with holds the youths share until he is 27 years old. He says he will not ask his relatives for money, and chooses the army as a means of seeing more of the world before he finally settles down.

People of Christ Church Took Matters of Business

GOOD REPORTS RECEIVED

The annual parish meeting and supper of Christ church was held in the Parish house Wednesday evening with a splendid attendance. Supper promptly at 6.30 was provided and served by the members of the Woman's guild. There were six long tables, seating about 156 and every available seat was taken.

When all were seated and a prayer had been offered by the rector, Rev. R. E. Armstrong, the parishioners partook of the bountiful repast spread before them. The menu included: Ham, Mutton pie, Potato salad, Egg salad, Salmon salad, Macaroni, Escalloped Oysters, Pickles, Ice cream, Cake, Coffee and rolls.

Immediately following the supper the tables were removed and the seats arranged preparatory to the annual meeting which was opened at 8 o'clock with a prayer by Mr. Armstrong, followed by the reading of the Clerk's report and roll call by Henry C. Hallowell. The minutes of the last annual and the special meeting were read and accepted. The report of the nominating committee was read by the chairman, C. Theodore Hardwick and was also accepted.

The election of warden, clerk and treasurer for one year, five vestrymen for two years, delegates to the Diocesan Convention and Arch-Deaconry resulted in the following:—

Warden—W. L. Thomas.
Clerk—H. C. Hallowell.
Treasurer—B. C. Miller.
Vestrymen—C. M. Chase, E. P. Ricker, W. F. Torrey, Merton A. Turner, Walter E. Burke.
Diocesan Convention — W. L. Thomas, A. L. Barbour, G. H. Brown.
Arch-Deaconry—William H. Deacon H. H. Bemis, W. H. Haslett.

QUINCY FINEST READY FOR FRAY

But This Time it will be a Social Riot They will Indulge in

The annual ball of the Quincy Police Relief association will be held tonight at Music hall and from present accounts will by far succeed any of the previous events. Every officer that can secure a substitiute to cover his beat will be on hand, but this occasion brass buttoned uniform will be laid aside to be replaced by the more conventional cutaway coat. The ever smiling face of Capt. Daniel R. McKay will be missed from the gathering but while unable to be with them in person he will be there in spirit. Dan is on the road to recovery at the City Hospital and will be about again soon.

Arrangements have been made with the street railway so that special cars for all points will leave the hall after the ball is over.

The program includes a concert by the orchestra from 8 to 9 o'clock with a grand march which opens the ball and then general dancing.

MESSENGERS' BANQUET.

The annual meeting of the City Messengers club of which City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell is vice president will be held at the Revere House, Boston, Saturday afternoon.

VITAL STATISTICS.

According to the returns received at the office of the City Clerk the total number of marriages recorded in 1912 was 392 and the number of deaths 477. The number of births cannot be given at the present time as the birth enumerators are still at work.

BUSINESS INCREASING.

Owing to the rapid growth in his business, the heating and ventilating firm with which Mayor Stone is connected, Stone-Underhill Co., has moved the Boston office from 17 Milk street to 139 Pearl street where they have taken an entire building.

Quincy, Mass., Jan. 22, 1913.

On and after January 27, 1913, this Board will remove from the cellars of all householders who desire such service, barrels of ashes at the rate of five (5) cents per barrel.

Tickets must first be obtained from this office. Apply for tickets by mail, enclosing check, money order or money, or apply in person.

This is to obviate the necessity of the householder removing his barrels of ashes to the sidewalk and does not interfere with but will supplement the regular ash collection.

LETTERS THREATENING VENGEANCE RECEIVED BY STONE AND SHEA

Present Mayor Warned of Dire Consequences If He Reappointed Certain City Officials

Missives Bear the Initials and Words I. W. W., No God, No Boss---Officials Not Very Much Worried

Sometime ago it came to the knowledge of the Ledger that Mayor Stone and other city officials and prominent men had been receiving what are commonly known as black hand letters. For obvious reasons however these facts were not given to the public.

MAYOR EUGENE R. STONE.

The first letters were received shortly before the last Municipal election. Not only did Mayor Stone receive letters but Ex-Mayor William T. Shea also received a letter as did also Mike Shea the street superintendent. None of the parties paid much attention to the letters other than to turn them over to the Police department.

Comparison of the letters showed that recived by the three gentlemen did not compare although they were all signed alike, that is "I. W. W. No God, No Boss."

The letter received by ex-Mayor Shea accused him of infidelity to the Democratic party. Those of Mayor Stone however were relative to some of his officials. The letters were of a threatening nature, violence being hinted at in case he reappointed certain officials. Along about Christmas came another letter in the same strain threatening him with death in case he should reappoint a certain official.

One of the letters said that "Bill Shea was the Mayor, McAnarney the Treasurer and Mike Shea the Commissioner." That they must be kicked out of City Hall or dire results would follow.

Early in January the appointments of the Mayor were announced and it was apparent to anyone familiar with the case that he had not heeded the threats.

Then came another letter which stated that he had been marked for murder and that his time had come. That shortly the avenger would appear and there would be one less enemy in the world. This letter like the others was signed "I. W. W. No God, No Boss."

Mayor Stone is anything but timid and he paid little attention to letters other than as stated above to turn them over to the Police department.

Fram their appearance there was no attempt made to disguise the handwriting although they were evidently not written by one very well educated, Mayor Stone dislikes any publicity on the matter and had rather nothing was said. He said that he had no fears of his life and that he was of the opinion that they had been written by some crank or some one who had a grudge against some of his officials.

The letters were also placed in the hands of William E. Hingston the handwriting expert.

At first the Mayor was rather inclined to be worried somewhat and safely deposited in a drawer in his desk, where it could be easily reached was a gun which would have barked had an attempt been made to carry out the threat. The Chief of Police is still making an investigation.

In regard to the letter of ex-Mayor Shea it might be stated that at the time of the Restelli murder and while his whereabouts was yet unknown ex-

EX-MAYOR WILLIAM T. SHEA.

Mayor Shea received a threatening letter inclosing a bullet.

LOOKING AFTER HEALTH.

Renewed agitation towards a bettering of conditions in the so called foreign section of Quincy Point has been again started by Councilman Frank J. Duffy. He has been in touch with Chief of Police Burrell and the Board of Health and says that the flagrant violation which have existed for sometime must be recognized as sufficient opportunity for prosecution.

PROPOSED WOLLASTON COMMUNITY HOUSE.

Much interest is aroused over the mass meeting in the Wollaston school hall, Friday evening to discuss the building of a Community House in Wollaston. Frank A. Page, the father of the idea will preside. Chester I. Campbell will describe the new building and discuss the question of ways and means.

It is proposed to locate the building at the corner of Greenwood avenue and Beale street which while favorable to residents of Wollaston Park is easily accessible from other parts of Wollaston.

It is the plan of the committee to purchase ample land in the rear to provide for future development. It is possible in time that tennis courts and other features will be included. The committee favor a 3 story building of stone and terra cotta to cost, including the land, $40,000.

The proposed building is one of beauty and would be a great credit to Wollaston if erected. E. W. Campbell is the architect. With the support of the large representative committee and the impetus of the large mass meeting Friday it is generally thought that the project will be carried through to completion.

TURNED HANDLE PREVENTED BAR PIERCING FOREMAN BELL'S BODY

Thrown Back Against Massive Hammer. Right Elbow was Torn and Bone Splintered

Foreman's First Thought was His Inability to Play Billiards

John W. Bell, foreman of the forge shop at the Fore River Shipbuilding plant met with a severe accident at the plant Wednesday afternoon and the only wonder is that he was not even more seriously injured. The accident was almost a duplicate of that which happened to Richard Tappenden whom Mr. Bell succeeded as foreman. The accident to Mr. Tappenden drove a red hot iron clear through his body. In the case of Mr. Bell the iron bar had a turned handle on the end which served somewhat as a shield.

Mr. Bell was working at the twenty ton hammer when in some way the iron tool which he held in his hand was struck in such a manner as to drive it backwards against his body. The curved handle on the end struck Mr. Bell on the chest driving him backward and throwing him unconscious against one of the massive legs of the hammer.

The full force of his body came upon the elbow of his right arm out of which a piece of flesh was torn and some of the bones crushed. He was taken to the Red Cross hospital on the grounds in an unconscious condition but soon revived. Here his injuries were treated after which he was taken to his home.

While Mr. Bell will be able to be about in a few days it will be three or four months before he is able to use his arm again.

Mr. Bell is an enthusiastic billiard player and there have been but few nights for a long time when he can not be found enjoying his favorite pastime at the rooms of the Granite City club, and one of his first words after the accident Wednesday were that he would be unable to play any more billiards for some time yet.

FURNALD RIGHT THERE WITH EATS

When the City Club Whisters Needed His Aid the Most

There was a good number of participants Wednesday evening at the weekly whist tournament at the rooms of the Granite City club. While the members were busy at their whist Henry P. Furnald was equally as busy in the kitchen and at the conclusion of the twenty-fifth hand served fried scallops with tartar sauce, French fried potatoes, rolls and butter, cocoa and crackers and cheese.

The best scores for the evening were made by Dr. Daniel B. Reardon and W. O. Wellington.

WOMEN'S CLUB PLEASANT TIME

Riverside Organization Enjoyed Readings, Songs and Social

The Ladies of the Quincy Womens' Riverside club enjoyed a most delightful afternoon at the club house, Wednesday and the committe in charge of the affair were:—Mrs. Robert Cranshaw, Mrs. Annie E. Betts, Mrs. Sarah D. Blanchard.

The entertainment was opened with a group of songs by Edward E. Bullock of Wollaston interspersed with readings by Mrs. Isabelle Davis. Mr. Bullock possesses a fine tenor voice which was in excellent condition and his selections were heartily applauded. Mrs. Davis pleased everyone. After the entertainment a social hour was spent and refreshments served. Wednesday the club holds a public matinee whist.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

There is some fluttering in the part of society as royalty is soon expected to make a descent on this side of the water.

Last year when potatoes were imported from Scotland, there was no decided increase in the price. Why should a small railroad strike, as yet uncertain as to its length almost double the price of the product on hand.

A unity of action on city official reports might produce better results.

Evidently the candidates for city office were a lucky crowd as none of them have filed any expense account.

The Jewish people would find it hard to make a landing anywhere if every country demanded a certificate from the Russian government.

Amundsen looked quite summerish floating around Boston in a crash suit.

There hardly seems any excuse for drowning accidents hereabouts this year. At no time has there been cold enough to freeze the deeper ponds to the safety degree.

Tax reformers are putting the matter pretty plainly when they ask why should a man be penalized for improving his property. And there is a good deal of reason in the query.

Ready to wear clothing makes a hit but the short man who by mistake takes home a six footer's suit indulges in something besides gladness.

Maybe the size of that dressmaker's bill for four new inaugural ball dresses influenced the president-elect in making his pre-veto message.

The parcels post has had nearly a month's trial and nothing but praise is heard of it on every hand. The only kick registered is that we have been too long without it.

Those who are so eager and insistent with their suggestions, relative to changes and additions of articles to come in the class, should give the infant a chance to grow, the parents are undoubtedly carefully watching developments and will improve as rapidly as time and opportunity offer conditions.

What's the good of the coal without the "spuds" to bake them in and what's the good of the "spuds" without the coal, so which ever way you look at the average citizen as usual gets the double cross.

The finest will throw dull cares to the wind and trip the light fantastic tonight. May their shadows never grow less.

Considering the several accidents to fire apparatus lately, the drivers have shown themselves cool headed and self possessed to escape as easily as they did.

If President Wilson wants a glove that will take the pressure of the hand at the handshake, all he has to do is go to the foundry and leave one of his old gloves with the man in charge of the blast furnace.

Springfield might just as easily have embraced the entire state in the co-operative coal club scheme. Every one would have been willing to take a place on the ground floor.

THE BOYNTON RAILWAY BILL.

At a hearing before the legislative committee on railroads, not a single person appeared in opposition to the Boynton railway bill, so called, otherwise known as the bicycle railroad. There were many advocates of the measure, however, who set forth in glowing language the advantages which would accrue from this undertaking to the district through which it would pass, namely, that lying between Boston and Fall River, which would include Quincy and adjacent cities and towns.

This is not a simple matter of franchise, but pledges the state to take up $5,000,000 worth of bonds of the Boston, Quincy and Fall River railroad. Virtually a financing of the enterprise The men in favor of the measure were very optimistic in their expressions of the wonderful benefits which the district would derive when direct communication was made with the ocean steamers and the continental railroads.

If their views on the subject are correct and based on knowledge rather than theory, then this would prove a splendid investment for the state, but an undertaking which promises so much should interest private capital.

Little is known of this bicycle or one rail railroad. Boynton has been before the legislature for a good many years with his railroad plans. He has made very little progress, but much time has been consumed by legislators and money expended in advertising hearings each year. It is not known that there is any single railroad operated in the United States.

Some years ago a similar railroad was tried in Germany over a short stretch of rail. The speed attained was remarkably high, but if we understand the situation correctly the train operated met with disaster and little has been heard of the single railroad in that country since.

There is no doubt strong opposition to the state lending its finances to any such enterprise. This is wholly a matter for private capital to finance. Supposing the road should not come up to expectations. Supposing it should result in flat failure, who is to reimburse the state for the amount which is invested.

Yet despite the known opposition to the scheme, not a single person appeared before the committee in opposition. Yet men are continually harping about their interest in public affairs. In this particular case maybe the opponents may be lulled by the continued failure year after year to interest the legislature to pledge the state to any backing of the enterprise. But it must be remembered that persistency is eventually rewarded, and this may be one occasion where this persistent and aggressive injection of this matter may lead to unexpected results. Under circumstances, with no one appearing in opposition, the committee could not be blamed for reporting favorably upon the matter, and then people would wake up to the importance of keeping a keener watch upon legislation and give more tangible proof of their opposition to measures before the legislators. No doubt the Quincy representatives and senators will be heard on this subject if it ever reaches the legislature.

PUBLIC DOCK COMMISSION.

Another measure before the legislature which Quincy has a decided interest in is the bill for the appointment of a public dock commission of five men to serve without pay. This body according to the provisions of the bill is to have full charge of the disbursement of all funds for the development of a Quincy dock, to have the management and control of the proposed dock including rates or wharfage, receipts, railways, methods of transportation, leasing of land and buildings and all other matters relating to management and development.

It is certainly very nice to have a body of citizens willing to devote their time and energy to this work and would be highly commendable on their part to serve without pay. The city by an act of the legislature two years ago is authorized to expend $100,000 for a public dock. The City Councils have never up to the present time taken advantage of this privilege.

What may be done this year is wholly problematical. Yet despite the authority which the City Council has in the matter, it appears to be a subject in which the entire city is vitally interested. It is not certain that the expenditure in this direction would end with the $100,000, which is evidently anticipated by the bill under discussion and in view of the existing conditions it seems a matter which should be submitted to the people.

THE NEW COUNCIL RULES.

While it is yet somewhat early to make any intelligent prediction as to the outcome of the new move of the City Council in abolishing all standing committees and referrring all matters to special committees, there is one point at least on which all will agree that it will serve a very good purpose. That is the obstacle which it places in the way of rushing through street orders during the last few weeks of the year. This is not a practice which has been confined solely to Quincy but has found splendid demonstration in other cities of the commonwealth, not always to the advantage of the municipality.

Some streets are pushed through at the last minute for political effect. Under the new rules there will be a check to this sort of municipal legislation which will prove beneficial. Street building and layouts should, like every other measure depend upon the conditions and the public demand for them. Under the new rule there will be no steam roller tactics permissible. As to the manner in which the new rules will work for the betterment of other things, remains as yet an unsolved problem, but it is the common belief that the new order of things will work out most satisfactory in all the details and if improvement can be shown at the close of the year, then the present City Council will have at least laid up one thing to its credit.

FLOOD DROWNS PILGRIMS

Three Hundred and Fifty Lost When Caravan Is Overwhelmed

Suakim, Egypt, Jan. 23.—Three hundred and fifty Mohammedan pilgrims from India to Mecca were drowned by a flood which overwhelmed the entire caravan at its encampment midway between the sacred city of Medina, Arabia, and the port of Yembo, on the Red sea.

A sudden avalanche, accompanied by great torrents of water, swept down the mountains in the neighborhood of the camp, carrying away in its path people, animals and tents. Only fifty of the 400 pilgrims comprising the caravan were saved.

THE LATEST DANCE FADS

They Meet With the Approval of Haverhill's School Board

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 23.—The Haverhill school board approves of the turkey trot, the grizzly bear, or any of the latest dances, for high school students.

The matter came up at a regular meeting of the board when Walter Head, principal of the high school, submitted a petition from the senior class asking that the dances be allowed at a party soon to be held.

The principal said he saw no harm in the dances, if properly supervised. He expressed the opinion that "some teachers would believe a dance vulgar if it was anything more than an old-fashioned hop waltz."

BEYOND MADERO'S CONTROL

Washington Hears That Mexican Revolt Is Becoming More Serious

Washington, Jan. 23.—A veritable "French revolution" whose fury can only be appeased by distribution of land to starving peons, is the picture of the present Mexican warfare conveyed in private information to members of the senate committee on foreign relations.

Industrial revolt, inspired by widespread faith in the preaching of "industrial Socialism," is declared to be utterly beyond control of the Madero government.

EFFICIENCY FOR FIELD SERVICE

Affected by Discharge of American Army Teamsters

FILIPINOS IN THEIR PLACES

Horses With Field Batteries In Santiago Campaign Fourteen Years Ago Now Doing Service In Philippines—Menace to American Success In Event of Campaign

Washington, Jan. 23.—Wornout cavalry horses and inefficient Filipino teamsters would prove a menace to American success in the event of a campaign in China or the Philippines, in the opinion of Brigadier General Funston, commanding the department of Luzon of the Philippine division of the army.

Discussing these questions in his annual report, Funston says:

"The recent substitution of many of the American teamsters by Filipinos on the score of economy, is, from the standpoint of efficiency, most regrettable."

He points out that even where Filipino drivers have the courage, they lack self-confidence, strength and skill, so that they will plunge down a bank and into a stream "with a fatalism characteristic of their race, trusting more to their mules to get through somehow than in their own efforts to control them."

"The American teamsters discharged," says Fuston, "have now left the islands and in case of an insurrection, or invasion, or the necessity of sending an expedition to China, will not be available. This is believed to be one of the most serious questions affecting the efficiency for field service of the troops in the Philippine islands."

Commenting on the fact that there are still in the service horses that were with the field batteries in the Santiago campaign, fourteen years ago, Funston declares.

"It is no exaggeration to say that a two weeks' campaign in actual war, when but little attention could be paid to husbanding the strength of the animals, would put half our guns out of action and see half our cavalry marching on foot or guarding wagon trains."

BILL MAY BE SHELVED

$2,000,000 Memorial to Lincoln Is Sidetracked In Congress

Washington, Jan. 23.—Opponents in the house to the bill passed by the senate to appropriate $2,000,000 for a memorial structure to Abraham Lincoln in Potomac park here conducted a successful filibuster late yesterday against the submission of a favorable committee report on the meaure.

Adjournment finally was forced, and Representative Garner of Texas gave notice that parliamentary technicalities would be exhausted to prevent the report getting before the house next Wednesday.

Earlier in the day, President Taft had conferred with thirty or more Republican members of the house and urged them to support the senate bill.

GALEN THE TOP LINER

Makes the Largest Gain Today in Washington Contest

FRED WILLIAMS ADDS 300

Over 1,100 votes were cast today in the Daily Ledger contest for the free Washington trips, and 445 of these went to Galen Vinton Bowditch, who now has a total of 8,910. He is nearing the 10,000 mark.

Second in gain today is Fred D. Williams, who finds it easy to maintain his hold on first place.

Miss Morrissett of West Quincy continues to gain, and is only 285 behind Mr. De Normandie of Wollaston.

West Quincy has another candidate in Richard H. Joyce, who adds 110 today and moves up from No. 44 to No. 22.

Other gains are made by William Wolf of the Young Men's Herbrew Association, T. F. Flaherty of Currier's market, and Michael P. Barry of the Fire department.

The vote coupon will appear in only fourteen more issues of the Daily Ledger.

CAPITOL RECEPTION.

At the request of President-elect Wilson it has been decided officially to abandon the Inaugural ball. A grand public reception at the Capitol building will be substituted, the arrangements to be made by a committee of Congress. It should be popular. The members of the joint congressional committee on the inauguration are Senators Crane of Massachusetts, Bacon of Georgia and Overman of North Carolina, and Representatives McKinley of Illinois, Rucker of Missouri and Garrett of Tennessee.

PRIZE CERTIFICATE.

It is three weeks now since a vote certificate was offered as a prize, but today the Contest Editor offers a big one, a certificate good for 1,000 votes, which will be awarded on Monday, Jan. 27 at 9 A. M., to the candidate making the largest gain for the week of Jan. 20-27. For example, if the largest gain for the week is 2,000 the candidate will be credited with 3,000 votes. If the largest gain is 2,500 he will be credited with 3,500.

THE LAST WEEKS.

But two weeks more of the vote coupon after this week. The last coupon will be printed in the Daily Ledger of Saturday, Feb. 8, which is near at hand. Are you ready for the final spurt?

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

WHIPPING IN HOSPITAL

Charged In Affidavits Presented to Lynn Municipal Council

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 23.—Charges of children being whipped, patients given no attention and a matron in whose hands the superintendent was but a "puppet," were made against the Lynn Smallpox hospital at a hearing before the Lynn municipal council.

Affidavits were presented in support of these charges, which were primarily made against the board of health, and the hearing was continued until Wednesday in order to afford the board time for investigation.

TEACHERS RECEPTION.

The reception given the teachers of the city by the Women's club, Wednesday evening, was greatly enjoyed by the large number of teachers present who deeply appreciated the spirit of co-operation that has always been extended in educational matters, between the club and the teaching force.

AMONG THE TEACHERS.

Miss Maude Amsden the newly elected supervisor of music is expected to come to Quincy next week to begin her work as she has just been granted a release from her contract with the towns of Orange and Athol.

Dr. J. Gardiner Smith, who has nearly recovered from his recent operation will resume work very shortly as physical director.

Many of the grade teachers are taking a visiting day during the present term and Miss Eliza Sheahan, long at the Adams school, is doing substitute work from day to day in different rooms.

Principal J. Asbury Pitman of the Salem Normal school was in the city Wednesday and called at the office of the School Department. His purpose was to visit the pre-vocational classes at the Willard school.

BEGINNERS.

From present indications, the beginners class which will enter next Monday will be by far the largest of any yet received at this season of the year. At the same time the semi-annual promotions will be made in the first three grades. This plan of semi-annual promotions as thus far carried out seems to be working with much success and has added considerable flexibility to the school programme.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

Humane exercises were held in the Assembly Hall last Monday morning Harold Ewertz is President. The regular meeting is held the second Monday of each month.

Through the kindness of Mr. Ewertz the boys of Grade VIII in charge of Mr. Goodspeed visited the Fore River Ship yard on Friday afternoon. The boys were especially interested in the construction of the submarines.

The Wollaston Free Kindergarten is planning to give an entertainment in the assembly hall Feb. 13 and 14, to raise funds for current expenses. Tickets are on sale by the children of the school.

During the past week ten colored prints of birds by John James Audubon the great naturalist, have been presented to the school by a parent. The pictures are beautifully framed to harmonize with the coloring of the building. They are to be hung in room IX, grade VI which is to be known as the Audubon Room. The school is very grateful for such a gift and hopes other parents and friends may remember the school in a similar way.

A list of the pictures—Meadow Lark, Pied Oyster Catcher, Downey Woodpecker, Fork-tail Petrel, Dusky Petrel, Goshawk, Stanley Hawk, Common Gull, Goosanders, Raven Tern.

MASS. FIELD.

Much interest is being shown in the school paper published by Grade VIII, under the name "Weekly Events."

Editor in chief—Miss Ruth Taylor.
Assistant Editors—Russell Sears, Muriel Matlack.
Sporting Editors—Brayton Blake, Sumner Vibert.
Illustrator Editor—Ira Gilliatt.
Printing Editor—Gilbert Fox.

The editors are proving themselves very efficient in their work.

The large Morris chair, presented to the teachers by the Parents-Teachers' Association, has been placed in the Teacher's Room and is very much appreciated.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The returns from the Adams and the Willard evening schools just closed show a substantial increase in attendance over last year. It is interesting to more that there were 17 different nationalities represented at the Adams school and only three at the Willard school. The former was predominantly an Italian school; the latter a Finnish school.

BABY WRAPPED IN BLANKET

Washed Ashore Two Days After Disaster Overtakes Steamer Veronese

Oporto, Jan. 23.—A 10-months-old baby, which was washed ashore wrapped in a blanket from the wreck of the steamship Veronese two days after the disaster, is alive and well.

The latest computation is that there were forty-four victims of the wreck. These include three first and three second-class passengers, thirty-three Spanish emigrants and five members of the crew.

SCHOOL CENTRES.

Ralph E. Harley lectured at City Hall Tuesday afternoon on Opportunity Clubs which derive their name from the opportunities offered by school centres. Boston appropriated $28,000 for the work and there are four centres in the Boston district.

Among other things Mr. Harley said:

"Boston is farther advanced than any city in the country in respect to school centres.

"Our experience in East Boston last winter showed us that we had the support of the entire community behind us, first, last and all the time.

"The work with the young people was so successful from the beginning that it aroused at once community interest and united the adults of the neighborhood, through their common interest in the object of the centre.

"They began to help. This resulted in a more general acquaintance. Mutual confidence was established Civic pride was awakened. The people of East Boston, professional men and women, business men, working people, all are enthusiastic in favor of the opportunity clubs.

"With the school buildings that have been opened this year in different parts of the city, we shall in a short time have a new force in municipal life—a force of which it is impossible to estimate the far-radiating influence.

"All young people living in the district over 14 years old who are not in day school are invited to join one or more of the numerous clubs that are connected with the centres.

Each of the clubs fixes its own dues, the usuaul fee being 5 cents a week. The money thus obtained is used in the sewing and game clubs to buy materials, and in the gymnasium clubs for various expenses connected with the work.

Mr. Harley said he doesn't think it fair to expect that clubs of working boys and girls under 21 can ever be self-supporting, but that the aim should be to make them as nearly self-supporting as possible.

"Aside from the actual financial help to the work there are many other advantages in the system of dues," he said. "The dues, which in every case are very low, encourage saving, tend to make the boys and girls take proper care of the furnishings of the school-houses and the material they use in their work, and to increase the degree of the self-respect of the members of the clubs.

The members of the opportunity clubs have a wide range of subjects to choose from. If they are interested in music there is a band for experienced players, an orchestra for beginners and opportunities for instruction on various instruments if they are utterly untrained.

There is the Junior Civic Council, a practical civic club, paterned after the Boston City Council. This club offers an opportunity for young men over 18 years of age to become acquainted with parliamentary law and to learn to consider the various civic problems from the standpoint of the community's good.

The young men have a civic club of their own, where they discuss various local problems that are met in every community and the larger problems that affect the entire city and country.

The older men have a club known as the Men's Civic and Economic Club, where lectures by recognized experts are frequently given.

One of the most successful of the different clubs is that of the Mothers and Home Makers, which meets on Wednesday afternoon. The programme at these meetings is not unlike that of other women's clubs. A social hour is generally followed by an illustrated lecture or musuical entertainment.

The girls have quite as many opportunities as the boys. They have mandolin clubs, sewing clubs, literary clubs, dancing clubs, glee clubs and art clubs.

One of the most popular of the girls' clubs is that of folk dancing, where there is often a waiting list. The other dancing classes are also very popular.

At the East Boston Centre last winter the dramatic club gave "Tom Pinch," which is founded on Dickens' story of "Martin Chuzzlewit." This play was given in a manner that would have done credit to any amateur dramatic organization.

Even the "movies" have not been omitted. InI each of the four Centres there is a lecture every Saturday evening, which is generally illustrated with moving pictures.

The pictures shown represent the highest type of the moving picture art and illustrate scenes in foreign countries or matters of current interest that are of real educational value. Any club member is eligible to attend the illustrated lectures.

New as the school centre scheme is, many prominent educators believe that it bridges an important gap in the public school system.

It is no disparagement to the excellent evening schools in Boston that the school centres have proved such a success. Mr. Harley says: "While many take advantage of the opportunity for evening study, there are thousands of boys and girls between 14 and 20 years old, who are unable or unwilling to study, in the ordinary sense of the word, after a hard day's work in store or factory, but who are willing and eager to belong to one or more of the clubs that are connected with the school centres."

TEACHERS WANT RAISE.

A petition, signed by eighty-two teachers of the first seven grades of the elementary schools of Quincy, asking for a one-hundrer-dollar raise in their maximum yearly salary, has been filed with Supt. Barbour, Secretary of the School Committee.

While the salaries of teachers of these grades in other towns and cities of the Metropolitan district have been going up, these teachers of Quincy have faithfully and cheerfully continued to teach for their small salaries of $650 per year, many for much less, they not yet having reached the maximum rate.

The scale of board in Quincy has not stayed down with the teachers' salaries, many of them being obliged to pay $7 per week, and when this amount and carfares are deducted, the remainder of the $12.50 weekly wage is indeed small. This rate of $12.50 per week is quoted on the basis of a fifty-two-week year, because teachers are obliged to reckon on this basis in order to meet living expenses during the summer vacation. In most cases teachers are too worn out to teach summer school, even if they could find the opportunities; and lack of training makes it almost impossible for them to engage in other fields of work during the summer vacation. However, the low salaries in Quincy compel many teachers to find employment in order to live, with a resultant loss to their teaching energy (and thus to the community) when school opens in the fall.

Teachers who have homes in Quincy may not suffer as much from the present scale of salaries as teachers who do not enjoy this blessing (Question—IS it a blessing to have a home in Quincy, with the present tax rate?) Teachers who have no homes anywhere, and are entirely dependent upon that salary of $650, most of all deserve redress from Quincy's thoughtlessly unjust treatment of her teachers who are engaged in what is acknowledged to be an eminently noble, but underpaid profession, and one of the most nerve-racking in practice.

Parents, grandparents, aunts and uncles who find difficulty in getting a moment's rest or peace until the children are off to school, at play in yard or nursery, or asleep in their little beds, should be able to vaguely imagine the life of a teacher who has forty, fifty, or even more children in one room all day, not only to control and keep happy, but to teach a required curriculum.

Dr. John Lovett Morse, in a recent lecture at the Harvard Medical School, said that the best teachers should be used in the primary schools, and the poorest in the colleges.

Many of these petitioners are taxpayers in Quincy, and fully realize the impecunious condition of the city, hence their long-continued endeavor to be patient and silent and await a more propitious time for asking for an increase in salary, but they have seen money spent in certain departments during the past year which they feel might better have been expended for that increase in their salaries.

The teachers are preparing for publication a list, comparing the maximum and minimum salaries paid teachers of the first seven grades in cities and towns of the Metropolitan district, and beyond, with those paid Quincy teachers of the same grades. They believe that such a comparison will surprise the citizens of Quincy who may not have had occasion to investigate the matter.

Help the teachers to win their raise! There are cities near by which have come to the realization that teachers cannot be paid too much; and surely Quincy, whose schools have always maintained a good standing, can do a little better for her teachers who have made this reputation possible.

WOMEN'S CLUB AS HOSTESS

Extended Cordial Welcome To The Educators of City

It was recess time for the Quincy teachers Wednesday evening. School lessons, reports, promotions, even the approach of mid-year examinations were forgotten. The members of the Women's club realizing that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull dog," invited the teachers of Quincy to come and meet the club members in the clubhouse.

Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard president of the club not only extended a hearty welcome to the teachers but with it sincere appreciation of their effective labors which she said were ever devoted to the welfare of the children in the public schools and also for the splendid co-operation with the Women's club. Over the threshold of every woman's clubhouse might appropriately be inscribed the motto "Not for ourselves alone," and that spirit should unite us here as the basis of all our work together.

Mrs. Sheppard introduced Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham, chairman of the Reception committee who also graciously welcomed the guests and introduced Frederick Bancroft, who entertained with old ballads in a most delightful manner, accompanying himself on the piano. He sang:

The Bailiff's Daughter of Islington.
Jolly Red Nose.
The Wraggle Tagle Gypsies, O!
Jeannette and Jeannot.
Villikins and His Dinah.
My Old Dutch.
The Hundred Pipers.
Will Ye no' Come Back Again?
Come under my Plaidie.
Green grow the Rushes.
The Exile's Return.
Brennan on the Moor.
Blackbirds and Thrushes.
The Harp that once.
Rory O'More.
Wearing of the Green.
Phil, the Fluter's Ball.

He divided the ballads into three groups, old English, Scotch and Irish. Between his singing he gave a few words about teh historical significance the origin and author of the song. It was a great musical treat and very instructive. He had the Yorkshire dialect, the Scotch burr and the Irish brogue to such a degree of excellence that it was difficult to say in which he was at his best, although one seldom hears the Irish folk lore so perfectly interpreted. He explained to his audience that his method of perfecting himself in these old Irish ballads was by visiting the Halliseys, an old Irish music-loving couple, who had brought from their native country just what he needed for his work upon ballads of the English speaking people.

Mr. Bancroft explained that "The Wearing of the Green" is a song full of sadness and regret rather than the dashing rollicking song that it is usually considered.

The entertainment was the sort that refreshed and rested, and was thoroughly enjoyed by the two hundred and fifty or more teachers who were present.

The receiving line consisted of the president, Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, Mrs. Wilson Marsh, first vice president, Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham, second vice-president, Mrs. John W. Sanborn, chairman of the Education committee, Mrs. Geo. Badger, recording secretary, Mrs. Percy Holman, corresponding secretary, Mrs. Herbert Pinkham, treasurer, and Mrs. Thomas Fenno, auditor. Each of the teachers was presented to the club officers by an efficient corps of ushers acting under the direction of Mrs. C. R. Safford. Refreshments were served. They were in charge of Mrs. Herbert Albee and Mrs. Carroll Bates.

The ladies who presided at the tables were Mrs. A. E. Avery, Mrs. W. H. Doble and Mrs. Geo. E. Pfaffmann

Besides club members and their husbands, many of the new club members, admitted this past month, were present. Superintendent Albert L. Barbour and Mrs. Barbour, Judge Avery and many other familiar faces were seen at this gathering.

Members of the Quincy Women's club recognize that the Quincy teachers are giving the best that is in them to the children; they are a very earnest body of faithful workers who under the wise and skilful leadership or our Superintendent, are doing their utmost to mould the boys and girls of the city into good strong men and women.

The reception given to the teachers by the Women's club was in recognition of their untiring efforts for the uplift of humanity and to bring together the home and school. The credit for this most delightful affair is due to the Reception Committee of which Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham is chairman.

The ushers were: Mrs. E. E. Jameson, Miss Margaret L. Thomas, Mrs. George H. Brown, Mrs. Albert M. Parker, Miss Emily C. Wild, Mrs. Alfred Jelenick, Mrs. Alfred P. Thompson, Mrs. John D. Mackay, Mrs. John O. Short, Mrs. Herbert Barker, Mrs. Charles R. Safford.

PARISH MEETING

The budget wasthen read by H. C. Hallowell and adopted. New business was then in order and an amendment to the Constitution, concerning the filling of a vacancy of any office by the vestry without a special parish meeting was adopted.

The reports of the various organizations were read by the president of each.

Sunday school, — Superintendent Arthur Newton. There are 283 scholars and teachers and officers in the school. On the teaching staff there are 5 men and 13 lady teachers and 5 officers. There is a training class for men under H. C. Hallowell and for women under Edith Fox. There has been a change in the curriculum of the Sunday School this year which has proved very successful a gain being made in atttendance, offerings and instruction. Prof. Wrigley presented the primary department with an organ which was a very acceptable gift.

The Woman's Guild report by Mrs. Mabel L. Brown, secretary was read by Mrs. Newcomb and showed the Guild to be in a good financial condition.

The Reapers' Circle report by Mrs. Mary B. Wilson was read by Mrs. Armstrong. They help the poor and needy.

St. Margarets' Guild, report by Marion Bolster, is starting its 14th year of good work with 70 members and is in a flourishing condition.

Junior Auxiliary—Margaret Hogan, secretary is a missionary society of younger workers under the leadership of Mrs. Haslett, Mrs. Turtle and Miss May Opie. Their object is to study work and pray for missions.

The Laymen's Club, formerly Galahad Brotherhood, Harry M. Nicholson, secretary is for the promotion of the social civic and moral interest of the city. This club has been running but four months under its new name and is in a flourishing condition.

Galahad Club, formerly Boy's Club, under the leadership of Mr. Attridge of the Episcopal Theological school of Cambridge.

The rector's report was then read and accepted. His motto was to look on the bright side of life. There is a man teacher for every boys class but one which is a very rare occurrence. During the past year there has been 58 baptisms, 32 confirmed, 12 marriages and 26 burials. There has been several gifts to the church. It has met all its requirements of offerings to Benevolences, retired clergy etc. His message was to take courage, thank God and go on.

The meeting adjourned at 10.45.

MRS. SHAW ON SUFFRAGE

An Able Exponent of That View Will Speak

There are many excellent people who doubt the wisdom of granting suffrage to women. There are some of these who are willing to admit the justice of giving the right to vote to women who hold property. There are others who think very little about it one way or the other. But, as the question is part of the great world movement toward the emancipation of women in every direction, one should hear the best and latest word on the subject. Selma Lagulof in her little pamphlet "The Home and the State" says that the object of those who desire to see that enfranchisement of women is not that in the organization of the state they might usurp the special province of man but that they might join with him in carrying through this larger work as they had joined with him from time immemorial in carrying through the making of the home.

The home is the most perfect organization existing among men because it is the work of both man and woman. building together in the most perfect state of co-operation anywhere to be found. Co-operation is the keynote, not antagonism and the thought of equal suffrage is gaining ground every day all over the world. Every one should hear Dr. Anna Shaw next Monday evening at New Colonial hall.

EVERYTHING C AT C SUPPER

Curious Compounds That Tickled the Palates of Good Diners

A "C" supper prepared by the "Cautious Catering Company" attracted a large number to the vestry of the Park and Downs church, Wednesday evening.

The menu, although difficult to decipher was appetizing. Everything on it commenced with the letter "C." It consisted of cold carved creature, creamed comentators, cooked cider creators, cordial cheer, cereal compound with churned cream, condjments, cold clear chrystal, cream curd, cook's curious compound.

During the supper music was furnished by an orchestra consisting of Miss Henrietta C. Gram, Miss Emily Bjorkman, Ernest Pletsch and Charles A. Richardson.

The supper was by the Ladies Missionary society and in charge of Mrs. Charles A. Richardson, Mrs. Alonzo Bissett and Mrs. Frank Knowlton, assisted by Mrs. A. R. Muir, Miss Mildred Podbury, Miss Natalie Scott, Miss Marion Brown, Mrs. A. J. Podbury, Mrs. Blaisdell, Mrs. L. I. Mosman, Mrs. Baxter, Mrs. W. G. Day, Mrs. Waite and Mrs. H. A. Letson.

FAVOR ADVICE IN FIRST CASES

Correspondent Believes That All Law Violations Are Not Willful

Editor Daily Ledger:

My observation of certain cases has led me to the conclusion that not every infraction of law should be prosecuted in the first instance but only those involving moral turpitude, I would be in favor of making every police officer report to his Chief when he finds a citizen is violating the law in a manner which does no positive injury to others, letting the Chief have the right to warn or admonish the party. In most cases the warning would be heeded and no prosecution would be necessary at all. The expense of the prosecution would be saved. Then if the act is repeated, let the law be enforced. The police of a neighboring town a few years ago prosecuted a man, so I am informed, for killing a pig on his own premises. It seems the law required him to get a license or send the pig to a slaughter house to be killed, but the defendant didn't know he had violated any law until he was brought into court. He had come from a farm in Maine where every man did his own slaughtering. I am afraid his respect for the law was diminshed rather than increased by his experience with our zealous officers. Perhaps the same reasoning would apply to a case where a person is violating the medical practice act without realizing it. In such a case also, I think prosecution should be started only after a warning had been given and disregarded. By the way, I think the "irregulars" are doing more good than the "regulars" who are trying to put them out of business. On the other hand, if a man is selling rum or gambling, or doing anything else which he knows is unlawful, let him take the consequences of the first offence.

NON-COMBATANT BEGS TO DIFFER

With Mr. Sayward Upon Some of His Views on Labor Problem

Editor Daily Ledger:—You have kindly consented to give me space for about one hundred and fifty words in which to make comment on the admirable address of Mr. Sayward before the Unitarian Club last evening. There were errors in his contentions, and I trust your report will be full so that some labor leader who knows whereof he speaks may be able to make suitable reply. I shall have to content myself with just one criticism on account of the lateness of the hour (12 noon) and the consequent pressure on your space.

M. Sayward sent that large audience away with the belief that without the assistance of the labor unions wages would be maintained where they justly belonged. With all due respect to our honored guest, I beg to say that was sophistry, pure and simple. Let us apply a simple test based on human nature:

Would any one of us be likely to pay a wage earner, whether carpenter or washwoman or shop-girl, any more than the going rate as a mere matter of justice? Is it ever done? Assuredly not. We are likely to accept the worker's toil at the lowest price going, even though it be starvation wages. If this be true, (and true it undeniably is) isn't the labor union absolutely necessary to "club" us into paying what is fair and equitable? Have wages been raised voluntarily by the employing class in the past? Have the hours of labor been shortened as a matter of justice by the employing class or have those beneficent changes been wrought by the strong arm of those bad men, the labor leaders? To ask these questions is to answer them. To answer them fairly and truthfully is to argue in favor of the labor unions, despite their arbitrariness in some instances.

Non-Combatant.

AMUNDSEN ACCEPTS HONOR

His Vessel Will Be First to Pass Through Panama Canal

New York, Jan. 23.—Changes in the plans originally formulated by Captain Amundsen for his dash to the North Pole and exploration of Crocker Land have been necessitated by a signal honor to be paid the Norwegian explorer and his vessel, for the United States government authorities at Washington have decided that the Fram is to be the first ship to pass through the Panama canal.

Captain Amundsen announced his acceptance of the honor as the result of assurances from the government officials that the canal will be ready to accommodate the Fram in August or September. With him on his ship, which holds honors for having journeyed both farthest north and farthest south, will be Rear Admiral Peary, it is believed, as well as several other explorers of note.

COURT DEALS BLOW TO "LOAN SHARKS"

Additional Sums Squeezed From Borrowers Are Illegal

Albany, Jan. 23.—The court of appeals dealt a severe blow to the so-called "loan shark" business when it held as illegal the practice of exacting additional sums from borrowers under the guise of payments for expenses incurred in drawing up papers and examining the title of property.

The court says that under a law recently enacted persons or corporations engaged in loaning money on personal property cannot charge more than 2 percent per month and not more than $2 for expenses incurred on loans of less than $200.

BIG MEN AMONG UTES

Census Shows Names of Elihu Root, Champ Clark and Ward Beecher

Washington, Jan. 23.—The Indian bureau census recently taken of the Ute Indians in southwestern Colorado, who, a few day ago, defied the state authorities when they tried to arrest one of the band, shows that the red men have in their tribe of less than 500 persons a remarkably large number of celebrities. They have an "Elihu Root," also a "Champ Clark" and a "Ward Beecher."

One of their men has been given the name of Virgil Clark, while Japanese heroes have given rise to "Oyama Coyote" and "Togo Weeks." One of their women is Kate Field.

CHARACTER CLAUSE IS OUT

Proposal In Immigration Bill Would Bar Many Jewish Entrants

Washington, Jan. 23.—Conferees on the immigration bill agreed to eliminate the certificate of character clause of the bill which, it was claimed, would bar many Jew immigrants from Russia and Roumania.

The conferees did not share the view of those objecting to the clause, but conceded the point in the interest of expedition. Several other minor changes were agreed upon.

COUNCIL OF EMPIRE SUBMITS

Agrees to Surrender of Adrianople, Salonica and Scutari, and Will Probably Cede Islands In Ægean Sea to Greece—Way Now Seems Clear For Establishment of Peace

Constantinople, Jan. 23.—The grand council of the empire, more commonly known as the national assembly, decided at a secret session to accept the proposals put forward by the powers for the purpose of concluding peace between Turkey and the allies.

Eighty notables, representing all the Moslem districts of the Turkish empire, were present. Chiefs of the non-Moslem precincts were not invited.

The joint note of the powers advised Turkey to cede Adrianople to the allies and to leave the fate of the Ægean islands to the powers for future determination. In return the powers promised their benevolent support so long as Turkey deferred to their counsel.

The meeting of the grand council, which was fraught with such grave importance, was of brief duration, and the decision in favor of accepting the views of the powers was an almost unanimous one.

As a result of the decision it is expected peace negotiations will soon be renewed in London, when Adrianople will be ceded to Bulgaria.

The vote in favor of peace and against war means that hostilities will not be resumed in the Balkans unless an unexpected break occurs.

This surrender by the national assembly is believed to mean not only the surrender of Adrianople but the cession of Salonica and Scutari to Greece, the autonomy of Albania under Turkish suzerainty, the probable cession of the islands in the Ægean sea to Greece and the territorial limitation of Turkey in Europe to Constantinople and a small strip bounding it on the north and west.

With the signing of the treaty Turkey in Europe becomes to all intents and purposes a thing of the past. The "Terrible Turk" will be no more outside Asia. Thus the Balkan allies' victory is almost unprecedented as the fruits of so short a war. The whole map of southern Europe is changed by the sublime porte's downfall.

There has been a notable change in the tone of the Turkish press. The newspapers almost unanimously declare the porte had no option but to bow to the wishes of Europe. They, therefore, advocate the immediate summoning of a national assembly to give moral support to the government in concluding peace under the best possible terms, as it would be a mistake to continue the war in opposition to the wishes of Europe.

QUESTION OF INDEMNITY

Crucial Point of Difference Which Remains to Be Settled

London, Jan. 23.—The plenipotentiaries of the Balkan kingdoms are immensely pleased over the decision of the grand council at Constantinople to accept the advice of the powers.

While it had become increasingly certain in the past forty-eight hours that the Turkish elder statesmen were prepared to face the bitter fate that ends the empire's history as an European nation, it was hardly expected they would register their decision so quickly and so definitely.

This is so unlike the customary Turkish tactics that some suspicion is entertained, without supporting proof, that Turkey might still have some cards up her sleeve.

One crucial point of difference remains to be settled in the question of indemnity. The allies propose to levy a heavy payment upon the defeated nation. They speak of $200,000,000 as an adequate sum. Their minimum is an amount equal to the Turkish debts attached to the territories which they will annex under the treaty.

The Turks are likely to contest the indemnity strongly, and the bankrupt condition of their country furnishes them with a potent argument for an appeal to the powers.

Protection of Moose In Maine

Augusta, Me., Jan. 23.—Provision for a closed time on bull moose in this state for four years from Oct. 15, 1913, is made in a bill presented to the legislature by Representative Mathieson of Rangeley. The present law permits the killing of bull moose from Oct. 15 until Dec. 1, of each year.

Strikers In Hour's Riot

New York, Jan. 23.—Mobs of striking garment workers and their sympathizers demonstrating on the East Side last night fought the police when the latter interfered, and a series of riots that lasted for an hour resulted. Ten men and ten women were arrested.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Thornton escapes, captures Lieutenant Bedloe and takes from him Mrs. Haverill's miniature.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

The Union men had gradually dropped behind the screen of a wooden partition at the far end of the room, while Captain Warner and the other Confederate officer stood just outside the door.

"Why, they have all gone," said the young woman, blushing slightly.

"Yes, we do that when any one has a visitor. Marie, we are alone for a moment."

She buried her face in her handkerchief and began to weep.

"To think we should meet again like this!"

"You didn't come here just to say that, Marie. You are fickle, but not deliberately cruel."

"It is you who are cruel, when you talk like that, Oh, Tom! You know I love you."

"Do I? How?"

"I have come here to save you."

"To save me?"

"Yes—or to tell you how you can be saved, I think. General Winder is coming."

"General Winder, the provost marshal of Richmond? You say he is coming here to Libby prison?"

"Yes, right now—this evening. I coaxed him to get me permission for this little visit first. You know he is an old friend of father's, and he wouldn't refuse me anything."

"Then, there's something in the wind?"

"It's an exchange of prisoners, I think. Anyway, I heard some talk about selecting six officers from your room here. It must be for exchange. You shall be one of the six, Tom."

"And Hunt?"

"Yes, poor Ralph too. That's what I told General Winder. He shook his head and looked very serious, but I know he won't refuse me this, especially as it makes no difference to him whom he selects."

"Good for you, Marie! What can I say to you, now?"

"Hush, they are coming!" she said, pointing to the door.

"Then, goodby, Marie! God bless you."

"I'm sorry," interrupted Captain Warner, "but the time is up."

The girl smiled jauntily through her tears.

"Oh, dear! Goodby, Tom. Goodby, Ralph. Gentlemen, goodby, all of you. I'm so sorry! But you'll try and make the best of it, won't you?"

"Of course we will, bless your kind little heart," responded Colonel Coggswell, coming forward again. "And let me tell you, mademoiselle, you've completed the Johnnies' work—by capturing our hearts."

"Three cheers for the American girl, anyhow!" proposed Hart.

They were given with a will, and Marie Mason, going out with honors, was rejoined by Captain Edward Thornton of the Confederate secret service, who had watched the scene with a peculiarly cynical smile.

General Winder, provost marshal of Richmond, in full uniform and accompanied by a staff officer, entered and stood at the head of the rough table.

General Winder then briefly announced the intelligence that a Confederate cruiser having fallen into the hands of the Federal authorities, the latter proposed putting the officers and crew on trial for piracy, threatening them with summary execution.

"Under these circumstances," continued the general, "the Confederate States government has felt constrained to give notice that we will hold an equal number of Union men of corresponding rank, chosen from among the prisoners at present in our hands here in Richmond as hostages, to be dealt with in the same manner as Mr. Lincoln shall decide to deal with those of our compatriots now in his power.

"My requisition calls for six officers out of perhaps four times that number from this division. Are there six among you who, knowing the gravity of the situation—and I do not deceive you as to its import—are there six among you, I say, who are willing to offer themselves as hostages?"

Every Union man in the room stepped forward, including Ralph Hunt, who arose feebly from his couch.

General Winder was visibly affected at the manifestation, but he pretended to be only perplexed and annoyed.

"What! All of you? But I only asked for six. I see that some definite plan of selection will have to be followed. You shall draw lots."

He took out his notebook, tore some slips of paper from it and directed Captain Warner to pass them around and have each man write his name on one. The slips were then all placed in a hat, from which Captain Cox was unanimously chosen to draw out six names. He did so, one at a time, handing each slip to Captain Warner without looking at it. Warner read the names aloud, and the general repeated them after him, at the same time writing them down in his notebook. They were as follows:

"Major Paul Revere, Thirtieth Massachusetts."

"Colonel Alfred Wood, Fourteenth New York."

"Lieutenant Frank Bedloe, —— Pennsylvania."

"Colonel Michael Corcoran, Sixty-ninth New York."

"Captain Alfred Ely, Thirty-seventh New York."

"Captain Ralph Hunt, Tenth Kentucky."

Instantly upon the completion of this list Captain Cox spoke up and said:

"General, the last name I have drawn by an unhappy fatality is that of my old friend and comrade, Captain Ralph Hunt. He is a sick man and not in condition to go as hostage. With your permission, general, I will go in his place."

While General Winder was deliberating his reply a woman's scream was heard outside the door, and Marie Mason rushed wildly in.

WOULD DO IT AGAIN

Roosevelt Repeats Old Testimony Sanctioning Steel Trust Deal

New York, Jan. 23.—No matter what might have been the motives behind the United States Steel corporation when it absorbed the Tennessee Coal and Iron company five years ago, Theodore Roosevelt as president would have sanctioned the deal.

He so testified at a resumption of the hearing in the government's suit to dissolve the so-called steel trust. He repeated his testimony given two years ago before the Stanley steel investigating committee, saying his action was prompted by a desire to "save the country from disaster."

William E. Corey, former president of the United States Steel corporation, who was a witness, furnished the government with the first testimony it has been able to obtain in support of its allegation that the corporation participated in an international steel rail pool.

GOVERNORS' TALK ON RAILROAD MATTERS

Pothier Thinks It Will Do Much to Clear the Situation

Providence, Jan. 23.—Governor Pothier is enthusiastic over the coming conference of governors on the New England railroad situation, which is to be held in Boston next Saturday. He believes the conference will result in devising ways and means of clearing the atmosphere with respect to the situation and hopes that a better understanding and mutual cooperation for the benefit of the New England people may be the outcome.

The governor, while he had been strongly instrumental in bringing about the work done by the Grand Trunk interests on the Palmer to Providence line, which has now been halted, entertains no feeling of hostility towards the New Haven road. The transportation problem is the problem of New England.

Kidney Troubles Attack Quincy Men and Women, Old and Young.

Kidney ills seize young and old.
Often come with little warning.
Children suffer in their early years.
Can't control the kidney secretions.
Girls are languid, nervous, suffer pain.
Women worry, can't do daily work.
Men have lame and aching backs.
If you have any form of kidney ills
You must reach the cause—the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys—

Have brought relief to Quincy people.

Quincy testimony proves it.

Mrs. W. H. Lowe, 246 Washington street, Quincy, Mass. says: "We still recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as strongly as we did in 1907. A member of our family was afflicted with kidney complaint. He suffered from lameness through his back and the least exertion tired him. Finally he began using Doan's Kidney Pills and they improved his condition in every way."

If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mrs. Lowe had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

NOISY SCENE IN COMMONS

Asquith Called a Traitor When Suffrage Measure Is Brought Up

London, Jan. 23.—A small sample of the passions which will be loosened when the house of commons begins the debate on the amendments to the franchise reform bill was given yesterday afternoon.

Shouts of "traitor!" were hurled across the floor of the house because Premier Asquith refused to lock up the government "guillotine" and allow the suffragette amendments to the bill to be debated without any restrictions as to time.

The lobbies and precincts of the houses of parliament as well as the political clubs and rowing rooms are seething with intrigue. Forecasts vary as to the probable fate of the amendment which eliminates the word "male" from the first clause of the bill, and which, if carried, opens the way to the enactment of amendments which will enfranchise a numerically varying army of women.

BOWLERS BUSY ON ALL ALLEYS

Three Leagues in Action in as Many Alleys

VARIETY OF SCORES

The Old Colony major league held two roll offs Wednesday night. At the Norfolk Downs alleys the Norfolk Downs beat the Weymouths 4 to 0. At the Coliseum alleys the Coliseum beat the City Squares, 3 to 1.

Carlson was high man with 125 and beat the league record by Gillen of 124. He also made best total of 296 in the league. Most of the bowlers changed from their usual gait and averaged small strings.

The Gilt Edges beat the Melon Chopees 3 to 1 at the City Square alleys. The losers needed one pin to tie and two to win the second string which would have split the points. High string was by Murray who made 98. Erickson got 274 for best total.

The Wollaston Tennis club rolled at the Coliseum alleys. Hillman beat Litchfield, 3 to 1 and McLean and Bishop split even. Bishop, with team E. rolled its first match. Hoxie was high with 110 single and 270 for best total.

HANLON WON CLOSE MATCH

In Three Cornered Contest with Kelly and Duncan

For the supremacy of the South Quincy section, Hanlon, Jack Kelly and Frank Duran rolled a ten string match at the Coliseum alleys Wednesday evening. Hanlon was high man with 917 total. Kelly rolled high string of 113. The three are amateur bowlers and a average of more than 90 was maintained. Kelly lost first place by four pins and settled in second place six pins ahead of Duran.

ALL STARS CAME BACK STRONG

Turned Tables on Colonials and Now Look For Deciding Game

On the St. Mary's Alleys Wednesday evening the Colonials met their first defeat of the reason at the hands of the season at the hands of the All-Stars.

It was the second meeting of the two teams, Colonials winning the first leg. The All Stars came back strong and are now anxious for the deciding match. Much rivalry exists between the teams and the rooters hope the Colonials won't back down now that their string is broken. Morrisette and Elcock were high men for Colonials. Welch was high with single string of 105 and total of 284. Sweeney's rolling had a telling effect and he rolled consistant throughout.

BALL CAGED AS WHISTLE BLEW

Not Allowed and Quincy Lost by One Point to Milton

IN TOUGH LUCK GAME

Quincy High lost its first game of the season to Milton High Wednesday afternoon, 21 to 20. The game was played in the local gym and a large gallery cheered excitedly throughout the contest.

The scoring of a basket by "Bull" Moose" Brown just after the whistle blew upset the calculations of the Milton rooters who thought the basket counted, but the ball was not in the air when the period closed. A second sooner and Quincy would have been on the winning end.

The first period was decidedly Milton's. Inaccurate shooting lost them a big score in the half. Quincy passed around the ball in a manner which was not intelligent and the blind passing usually resulted in Milton securing the ball, slipping it around to each other and then missing a shot. The period ended with Milton leading 10 to 7.

In the second half Quincy's lineup frequently changed. A number of men were sent in but the result did not seem to be really effected. In their anxiety to score each team resorted to rough house tactics, some of the players going the limit in their efforts to nail the ball. The number of ofuls called were but few.

The summary:—

| Milton H S | Quincy H S |
|---|---|
| Kelly rf | lb Yarkin |
| | lb Crane |
| Carder lf | rb Jenkins |
| Adams c | c White |
| | c Brown |
| O'Heron rb | lf Safford |
| | lf Brown |

| Stanley lb | rf Andrews |

Score, Milton H. S. 21, Quincy H. S. 20. Goals from floor, Kelly 4, Carder 2, O'Heron, Stanley 3, White 2, Safford 2, Andrews 4. Goals from fouls, eKlly Andrews 4. Reefree, Gordon. Umpire, Roach. Scorer, Mansur. Timer Atwood. Time, 20 and 15m periods. Attendance 300.

BASKET BALL.

The Quincy A. A. first and second teams will play the St. Mark's representations from Boston at St. Mary's hall Thursday evening. The game is scheduled under the new dates arranged by the N. E. A. A. A. U. basket ball commission at a meeting Monday evening. It will be the visitors first appearance in Quincy this season. Last year they were one of the strongest contenders and gave Quincy A. A. some of the stiffest battles of the year. It is expected that they will figure as conspicuously this year.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary society of Bethany church, was held at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Benjamin A. Willmott, Presidents hill, Wednesday afternoon, with a large attendance about fifty being present. The meeting was opened by Mrs. Witherell, vice president, after which Mrs. Frank J. Moore sang, "Ninty and Nine," "Mission of a Rose" and "The Parting." The president Mrs. Miller called for the yearly reports, the treasurer's report being exceedingly encouraging. The old board of officers was re-elected.

The speaker of the afternoon was Dr. Harriett E. Parker, of the Woman's Hospital in Mandura, India. She gave a most interesting account of her work among the women and children in the Harriet Newell hospital. Native girls are taught nursing and to become doctors and to continue the good work being done and increase and develop new oppotrunities.

During the social hour all had the pleasure of greeting Dr. Parker. Refreshments were served, the hostess presiding at the chocolate urn, Miss Marjorie Welch, Miss Esther Beckford, Miss Addie J. Park and Miss Mary Upton, serving.

In the Eating Line By the Davis Class with Hobart as Host

Chester Hobart gave a banquet to the Davis class at his home in South Quincy, Wednesday evening as a result of a hard fought contest between the Reds and Blues which the Blues won by a very small margin. However, a miss is as good as a mile. So hats off to the valiant Blues. A very enjoyable time was had and the way the boys put away pie and many other good things which were in abundance, proved that they were prepared to do justice to themselves and to prove to brother pie that they were worthy foes, and the president, Mr. Hobart, prayed that he would never become the father of eighteen boys with similar appetites. After the banquet Rev. C. C. Tilly acted as toastmaster and all responded. Solos were sung by George McDonald and Lindsey S. Smith, accompanied by Mrs. Lindsey Smith. Mrs. F. Beaulieu also sang, and all regretted the hour of departure, and it was with heavy hearts they sang, "Good Night, Ladies."

Those present were C. T. Hobart, F. Beaulieu, L. S. Smith, A. V. Hoffman, Norman Blake, Albert Hoffman, S. H. Shellman, George McDonald, F. Gullickson, H. Morton, Z. F. Brown, O. Downey, Alfred Neil, Cecil Nix, J. E. Mundie.

Mr. Neil gave a few readings from "Uncle Rufus Rastus" that were a scream.

MISS MAHON TO TAKE THE VEIL

She Will Enter Novitiate At Canton As Probationer

Miss Celia Mahon, daughter of Mrs. James Mahon of Upland Road has made all preparations to become a member of the Catholic Order of the Sisters of St. Joseph. She will immediately enter the Novitiate at Canton where she will remain for a probationary period.

Miss Mahon is a well known Quincy young lady. She is a graduate of the Adams School, '07 and entered the Quincy High School where she attended two years.

Always a faithful attendant at the St. John's Catholic Church, she has gained many friends throughout the parish. She is a sister of John Mahon, organist of the church.

FORMER PASTOR PASSED AWAY

Rev. William J. Heath, dead at Pittsburg, Pa.

Rev. William J. Heath, formerly pastor of the Wollaston M. E. Church died Wednesday at Pittsburg, Penn., at the home of a daughter. The funeral will take place Friday and interment will be in that city. He leaves a widow, two sons and two daughters.

Mr. Heath was pastor here for six years and has been a minister for at least 54 years. He was a member of the New England Conference. He retired from active work about three years ago.

General regret was expressed throughout this city when he resigned. He was succeeded by Rev. Wesley Wiggin who this morning learned of the death of his predecessor.

STATE AND MILITARY AID.

The biennial examination of recipients of state and military aid will be held at City Hall next week Tuesday and Wednesday.

CLASS INITIATION.

A regular meeting of John Adams Aerie of Eagles was held at Electa hall, Wednesday evening. The members are planning to hold a class initiation at Electa hall, Feb. 19. The secretary eceived 20 applications for membership.

LONG SERVICE AS CONSTABLE

Napolean B. Furnald, 84 years, Appointed 46th Time

Napoleon Furnald, one of Quincy's best known residents was sworn in as a constable this morning for the 46th time. The oath was administered by City Clerk Emery L. Crane.

Mr. Furnald, although 84 years of age is hale and hearty, retains all his faculties and has fine knowledge of current affairs. July 8, Mr. and Mrs. Furnald celebrated their 62nd anniversary.

Mr. Furnald received many congratulations from friends whom he met in the corridors of city hall and met them with the firm grip of a younger man.

BRIEFS

Mr. Curtis of Franklin street is recovering from his recent illness.

Mrs. C. W. Guy of Butler road visited friends in Melrose the first of the week.

Edward Turner of Union street is in New York for the wedding of his sister tonight.

Morris Gove, of Revere, has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. L. Berman of Franklin street.

Miss Helen Gates of Franklin street has returned from a few days visit to his sister in Revere.

Mrs. Zenas H. Sidelinger of Presidents hill was the guest this week of friends in South Hanson.

Councilman John R. Richards has returned from a two days' trip to Hartford, Conn., where he acted as a granite expert in a trial.

Friends of Reuben Berman of Franklin street will regret to learn that he is confined to his home, suffering from a serious kidney trouble.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the Hall Place M. E. church is to be held this Friday evening at 7 o'clock at the home of Mrs. James McCormick.

Miss Angela McCarthy, of Chestnut street, sang at a concert given at Steinert Hall, Boston, Tuesday. Madame DeBerg Lochren, a teacher of opera, directed, and a number of the pupils were on the program.

The presentation of "Queen Elizabeth" by Mme. Sarah Bernhardt and company in photo play drew a full house at Quincy Music hall last evening. It was all very realistic and one of the big hits in photo plays. Vaudeville was introduced between the parts.

Michael Kiley of West Quincy will be one of the players on the Boston Checker team when they play their annual match with the New England team at the American House, Feb. 22. He will also play in the tournament for a purse offered by Melvin Brown of Brooklyn, N. Y. The best in New England will play.

The Boston terrior "Mischief" of Michael F. Griffin was purchased by Mrs. Dr. Darling of New York after the recent show at the Copley Square Hotel. The dog was the centre of an admiring throng wherever it appeared with Mr. Griffin. He will exhibit three pups at the next meeting of the Boston Terrior Club of which he is a member.

ELKS' MEETING.

The regular meeting of Quincy lodge of Elks Tuesday evening will be held at the New Colonial hall where meetings of the lodge will hereafter be held.

P. J. Barret, P. E. R. of New Bedford lodge, District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler of Massachusetts Southeast, will officially visit the lodge accompanied by a large suite. A banquet and entertainment will follow the visitation.

The brothers at the present time are bending every energy to make the annual ball which takes place Friday evening, Jan. 30, at Music Hall one of the social events of the season. The hall for this occasion will be magnificently decorated, and as the genial secretary says all of the arrangements are very alluring.

DELIGHTFUL ENTERTAINMENT

The fourth in the popular lecture course at the Hall Place M. E. church was givn Wednesday evening, and in no way was it a disappointment to the large number who had gathered. Miss Helen Martin, the popular soloist of the church sang several well rendered selections, well adapted to her strong sweet voice.

Miss Laura Walker of Saugus, a pupil at the Deaconess Training School, Brookline, gave several fine readings. Miss Walker gave her selections with a naturalness true to life.

The Enery quartet, Quincy High school, Elton Chase, Raymond Cassidy Camille B. Fuller and J. Lawrence Martin evoked well deserved applause in their songs.

Rev. T. C. Martin also gripped his audience in his reading of "The Pilot's Story," a tale of the days of slavery, and other selections.

Miss Zula Doane of Brookline was the accompanist.

The next in the course on Feb. 19 will be by the Copley Square school of music, Prof. Davis and his ensemble of 15 musicians.

O'GORMAN REPLIES TO ROOT

Urges Free Tolls For Coastwise Vessels Using Panama Canal

Washington, Jan. 23.—Declaring that railroads had consistently fought the Panama canal enterprise because "cheaper water transportation would rob them of the monopoly which they sought to obtain," Senator O'Gorman of New York replied to Senator Root's speech and opposed the repeal of that section of the Panama canal bill providing free tolls for coastwise vessels.

Senator Newlands of Nevada, who followed O'Gorman, declared the United States had the right to levy on the remainder of the world to reimburse itself for the enormous investment of $400,000,000 in the Panama canal.

TAFT LIKES TO TRAVEL

Has Covered 113,659 Miles as President, and More to Come

Washington, Jan. 23. — When President Taft stepped down from his private car on his recent return from New Haven, the total mileage of his travels in his four years in the White House reached 113,659—enough to take him four and a half times around the world, or an average of about seventy-five miles for every day he has been president. The total is exclusive of the hundreds of miles the president has traveled by motor.

By March 4, Mr. Taft will have traveled in his term about 125,000 miles, or five times the distance around the earth at the equator.

Mr. Taft has made about 25,000 miles of the total on his two "swings around the circle." He has visited every state in the union with the exception of Oklahoma and North Dakota, and has stood as near the four corners of the country as it is possible for a man to get.

"A TACIT UNDERSTANDING"

Steamship Lines In Pool Pact Careful Not to Cut Rates

Washington, Jan. 23.—More testimony intended to show pooling and rate fixing among Atlantic steamship lines was given to the house shipping trust investigating committee by Christian J. Beck, freight traffic manager of the Hamburg-American lines operating to the United States.

He described the practices of the lines between New York and Cuba as "independent, but careful not to under-quote rates."

Beck produced a pooling and rate agreement between the Hamburg-American and the Royal Mail steam packet line in the United States trade between Jamaica, Central America and South America. A "tacit understanding" that rates should not be cut existed, he said, between his company and the United Fruit company.

TRADE AGREEMENTS, ARBITRATION, BACKBONES OF LABOR MOVEMENT

Building Up of Labor Organizations Along Strike Lines is Sure of Failure

John F. Tobin Makes Some Claim About Gasoline Consumption

John F. Tobin, president of the Boot and Shoe Workers Union, at the Norfolk Downs Improvement Association, Thursday evening, declared he would drink a quart of gasoline if oil had advanced from 10 to 17 cents in a single day, or had been sold as low as 10 cents in the last five years. This was made in answer to statements of certain of the audience which Mr. Tobin did not agree with.

Mr. Tobin in his address said: "The labor question is the most prominent and important before the world today and the more we learn about it the bigger it seems and the less able we are to understand it.

"The question grows out of the fact that wages cannot and do not remain stationary. Organized labor has developed out of that fact. Employers have sought by the open shop to destroy the labor movement. Labor, however, has continued to grow, thriving on the necessity that compels men to organize for self protection.

"We have growing up in this land a certain class of men known as 'high brows.' They are not working men and have never soiled their hands with labor. They are students and professors of economics who by reason of their book knowledge attempt to outline the plan by which the labor question should be solved. They do not permit the workers to decide the question but regardless of them the workers will decide the question and decide it right.

LEDGER'S EXPOSE OF BLACK HAND LETTERS CAUSED BIG SENSATION

Police Believe They Are on the Track of Offenders and Will Soon Round Them Up For Their Offense

Mayor Stone Not a Timid Man, But Felt It Would Be Safer to Have an Automatic Handy in Case of Emergency

The exclusive announcement in the Ledger, Thursday that Mayor Stone Ex-Mayor Shea, Mike Shea and even others had received so called Black hand letters threatening dire vengeance to them if certain appointments or policies were carried out, was a source of surprize to the general public and sent a thrill of horror through the community, at the bare thought that there could be people so reckless and regardless of law and order in this city who would stoop to such measures as those letters pregnate.

Steps have been taken to ascertain the writer, and when he is discovered he cannot cover his tracks or his folly that only a joke was intended. Joking of this kind is not good form and then the Post Office authorities are not in line as the dispensers or distributors of such form of fun and amusement of certain classes of would be jesters. When the offenders are discovered and apprehended as they certainly will be as the net is already closing around them, they will have a chance to think over this matter and maybe their experiences with the post office department will cause them to hesitate to make use of the mails, either in jest or earnest to circulate such unwarranted threats and un-American literature.

One of the first things done was to place the letters in the hands of William E. Hingston the well-known hand writing expert, and while William is a wizard in his way, he was somewhat handicapped in his examination of the letters from the fact that he did not have in his possession a copy of the hand writing of the person who is supposed to have written them for examination and comparison.

The letter received by ex-Mayor Shea was written in a clear and legible hand, much more so than those received by Mayor Stone, although it is the opinion in police circles that the author of one was the author of the other.

There has been some question as to why the Ledger held back the information for some weeks, but to any one who understands police methods the reason will be clear.

Had the Ledger made the matter public when it first became aware of it the chances are that it would have prevented the police from successful-

Two Concerns Wanting Financial Backing Would Come

IF SAME IS OFFERED

A meeting of the chairmen of the several committees of the Board of Trade was held Thursday evening, the gentlemen having been called together by President John L. Hamilton for an informal talk on Board of Trade affairs. There was no set program for the evening the chairmen entering into a general discussion of things that may come up for discussion during the coming year.

Two matters however were considered at length and will probably be taken hold of at the regular meeting of the Board. These matters were relative to two industries that desire to locate in Quincy.

One of these industries is a chocolate manufacturing concern. A Mr. Minot representing the company was

Fund Campaign Deferred Owing to Hospital Movement

WORK OF ORGANIZATION

The financial campaign to secure funds to carry on and to extend the work of the Associated Charities, was interrupted this year by the special effort to raise money for the City Hospital. It was thought best to defer to a later date, the attempt to secure a large number of annual members of the society. It is hoped within the coming month that a plan may be put in operation which will make it possible for everyone interested to become a member of this society, and to have a voice in its management. It is the purpose of the society to more and more serve the community by assisting toward a wiser distribution of necessary relief, by preventing pauperization and by increasing co-operation between public and private charity, thus advancing the social welfare and the civic betterment of the whole community.

The co-operation in the work at Christmas, between churches, private individuals, other societies, overseer of the poor and this office was excel-

INSPECTOR ALFRED W. GOODHUE

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Editoial Comment

Do the plain people of Boston stand behind Mayor Fitzgerald in his advocacy of the city subsidizing grand opera?

Maine may have to hold another legislative election for United States senator, owing to the fact that some of the members voting in that body are postmasters. It has long been understood that federal office holders could not hold state or city positions even when the latter did not carry any salary.

The base ball manager who claims he does not owe his ability to newspaper publicity may be correct in part, but that he owes much to the newspapers in his ability to gather in a big salary he should not fail to recognize.

And now the state is to import a man to reorganize the state prisons. Of what kind of timber are the several hundred thousand men in this state that not one can be found among them equal to handling a big job? There are several elective jobs possibly that could be filled with outside material to the great benefit of the masses.

John L. Sullivan addressing the Abington Board of Trade on the post of Boston is good. No doubt Mr. Sullivan's ring experience made him a past master in the art of navigation.

One of the Boston nationals lives in Boston while the others are scattered all over the country. About the usual average.

A Brookline pastor promises to tell his audience about "Hell and those who are going there." Why travel so far. Many a one taking a glimpse around the Hub could point out a few with a through ticket without travelling way out to Brookline to gain the information.

That colored sprinter out Springfield way is bound to keep in the glare some way. Just now he claims the B. A. A. discriminates against the colored man.

And still the so-called sporting public is nightly falling for those near championship events, which tell nothing but permit a good many young men to pull down a lot of easy money. Some of them land in the dump. Others retire when they have made a good stake and open a cafe.

That Maine railroad president who will not arbitrate is a strange bird. Possibly he has forgotten that the great public has some rights to be considered.

That summing up of the great English barrister that the "United States courts are dilatory," is mild but it has a sting which should whip some one into action. When it is considered that a case is hanging fire 18 years and then an English lawyer has to be called over to expound the English common law on the subject, "dilatory" hardly fits the case.

Now that the mischief has been done to a great extent, many newspapers who were loudest in their attacks upon New England railroads are drawing in their horns and taking a different tack.

A WARNING NOTE.

Any one who read the testimony of Simon D. Chase of Fall River before Ways and Means committee of congress could not fail to be impressed by the frank manner in which he expressed his views, upon the tariff reduction on cotton. He admitted that a reduction in the tariff might be feasible and if not too steep, it could be deducted from profits, but a too radical reduction would probably mean a reduction in wages. This Mr. Chase indirectly pointed out was a possibility which would develop. In view of the fact that there has been an almost continuous movement for increase in wages, and that New Bedford only a short time ago had labor troubles of a serious character and that Lawrence is hardly recovered from the effects of its uprising of a year ago, Mr. Chase has conveyed a warning to congress which should not be permitted to pass unheeded.

Another thing which he pointed out and which furnishes food for thought is that congress may be defeated in the very object it most heartily desires, and that is the reduction of cost to the consumer. Mr. Chase contended that the price to the consumer was not regulated by the manufacturer but by the jobbers and retailers and there was nothing to indicate or provide for this class to give the consumer the benefit of the reduction created by a reduced tariff.

Two very important matters to consider in truth.

First, if the reduction is radical so that the manufacturers cannot maintain the present standard of wages and pay dividends, the natural sequence will be a wage cut. How will the mill operators stand this? With the cost of living already at the breaking point, a reduction of the tariff on any single commodity cannot be expected to revolutionize the prize of every other commodity and even the reduction in the particular product engendered in the change cannot immediately bring about a change in the price of that article to the consumer. It seems that before any tangible reduction in the price of commodities is reached, under the inferences of Mr. Chase, the lower wage will be the first thing felt. That it will fall heavily upon those who depend upon a daily wage and live from one week end to the other is quite evident. What will be the result? The question appears superfluous in the light of recent events. It will undoubtedly mean more labor difficulties and hardships to the working people.

Second, who is to regulate the prices to the consumer, providing Mr. Chase's deductions are correct. The matter is one that can not be passed over lightly. It will demand deep, serious, painstaking thought on the part of able men; who are qualified to unravel such problems. Hasty ill advised action, productive of nothing more ambitious than a desire for change may lead to commercial disaster and serious labor difficulties.

Mr. Chase's evidence should give the committee some idea of the magnitude of the problem they are to handle. A false move would be disastrous in many ways. The people would look to the congress which brought it about as responsible for any mischief, which may result.

Congress has received a timely note of warning. It would do well to heed it and not rush blindly against an invisible foe which may bring about tumult, ruin, and unsettled state for commerce and labor and serious complications which it would require may be years of toil and effort to straighten out.

UNIFORM FOR LOBBYISTS.

The Missouri legislature has a bill which fixes a uniform for lobbyists; consisting of a brown suit, red hat, and green tie. A Boston paper suggests the transposing of some of the colors and additions which would make the lobbyist indeed look like an escaped rainbow.

Are the Missouri legislators so innocent and guileless that they cannot smell this particularly unnecessary production a mile off? In the cast the legislators know the brand from the mud up. They know everything about them, know by whom they are employed and when entertained at dinner or some other function know pretty near who is paying the freight and what particular legislation is desired to be cogged or railroaded by reason of this entertainment.

The lobbyist has come to be a recognized adjunct of the legislature, in fact it has been styled the third house. There is a provision of Massachusetts law which provides for an annual declaration on the part of lobbyists as to the amounts they received and the sources each year. Have the lobbyists been so busy with present day matters that they have forgotten this little matter?

THE GOULD WEDDING.

The wedding of Mr. Shepard and Miss Helen Miller Gould has demonstrated that the people all over the country take an interest in the welfare of the lady. The bride has won popularity through her thoughtfulness for others. She was in a position to do much or little with her money. She chose the former and has made practical demonstrations of her interest in many welfare enterprises which has endeared her to millions.

Even in the great happiness which came to her on her nuptial day she did not forget that there were some who might be aided by her kindly ministrations. A dinner was served to several thousand people in New York. They cheered the bride and wished her long life and happiness. If the hopes of all who have thought of Helen Miller Gould on her wedding day are sustained she is due for a happy wedded life, around which there will be no clouds to mar the calm serenity and peace which has marked her life since she first undertook to follow the dictates of her heart and conscience.

POLICE BALL

spectors O'Day, Petterson, Rooney, McCauley and Kilday of Police Headquarters Boston, members of the local press and others.

The decorations of the hall were confined entirely to the platform. These decorations were in charge of Derringer who did his work well. The entire front was a mass of fernery and potted plants. In the centre on a stand was a regulation police signal box, attached to which was a large gong upon which the magic note was sounded which set the ball in motion.

Wilson's orchestra of eleven pieces furnished the music, which was exceptionally good. From 8 to 9 o'clock an excellent concert was given by the orchestra their selections being:

March, "Police Parade," Lincke
Overture, "Figue Dame," Suppe
Concert Waltz, "Verschmahte Liebe," Lincke
Selection, "The Red Rose," Bowers
"The Butter Flys," Bendix
Duet for Flute and Clarinet
Messrs. Rossi and Sigleman
Finale, "Stars and Stripes," Sousa

While the concert was in progress the guests and active participants were arriving so that by 9 o'clock, the hour for the grand march to start, the balcony was packed to suffocation while on the floor proper the crowd was so large that it looked at one time as if it would be impossible to carry out this part of the program.

"Form for the grand march" was the announcement made by the promptor and a few minutes later the party were in line. Then it was that the first novelty of the evening was apparent. This was the appearance on the platform of master Herbert Leon Farnum, son of George Farnum of West Quincy. Master Farnum wore a full policeman's uniform, with Sergeants stripes on his coat sleeve. On his left breast was aregulation Quincy Police badge of small dimension, while on the front of his cap in the half wreath were the letters "Sergt." To complete the outfit Master Farnum carried a full length night stock which was almost as long as he was tall. The uniform had been especially made for Master Farnum that afternoon by Orlando Pace.

Stepping to the front of the platform he opened the police signal box and sounded the regular police call, 3-3-3. He then stepped to the floor and taking his position at the head of the line, waved his night stick to the orchestra leader and the next instant the first strains of the opening march, which began with "Should Auld Acquaintance be Forgot" sounded throughout the hall.

Master Farnum led the marchers once around the hall and then took his position near the head of the ball beside Leo J. McMaster, who resplendant in an elaborate badge directed the march. When the march was half over a brief hall was made while a flash light picture of the marchers was taken.

There were not as many in the march as usual, for most of those who planned to actively participate preferred to watch the others march. It was however a very pretty affair and admirably executed. It was led by Inspector Alfred W. Goodhue, the floor Marshal and Mrs. Goodhue.

Mrs. Goodhue looked charming in a lavender messaline gown with spangled net overdress and corsage bouquet of sweet peas.

Closely following Inspector and Mrs. Goodhue were Mayor Eugene R. Stone and Miss Mildred Gray Huston. Chief of Police Frank E. Burrell and daughter Miss Elsie Burrell, Associate Justice Louis A. Cook and Mrs. Charles P. Gould, Sergt. John T. Larkin, the floor director and Mrs. Larkin, Assistant Floor Director, Patrick A. Milford and Mrs. Milford, Daniel H. Doran and Mrs. Doran, Henry F. Riley and Miss Donahue of Roslindale and Jeremiah Hinchon and Mrs. Hinchon. Following them were many of the aids with their ladies, each of the aids being distinguished by an elaborate and handsome badge.

The march over, the ball actively opened with a waltz which was dedicated "To our Seventh."

Shortly after 10 o'clock there was a brief lull in dance program during which several artists from the Kincaide theatre appeared. These numbers were given through the coutesy of the manager of the theatre. It was intended that they should occur at the intermission but as the artists were obliged to take a train for Boston they were given earlier. These members included a duet by Mr. Silver and Miss Gray, selections by the Comedy quartete and a musical artist.

Dancing was then resumed and continued until 2 o'clock at which time special cars were found in waiting at the door for all parts of the city.

A continuous lunch was served in the annex from 10.30 by H J. Seiler.

The order contained some twenty numbers. On the front page of the program were the portraits of Judge Albert E. Avery, Associate Justices E. Granville Pratt and Louis A. Cook.

It is said that over 1700 tickets were sold for the ball, which is ahead of the record of last year which at that time held the palm.

The several officers and committees in charge of the affair were as follows:

Marshal—Inspector Alfred W Goodhue.

Floor director—Sergt. John T. Larkin.

Assistant Floor Directors—Patrick A. Milford, Jeremiah Hinchon, Daniel H. Doran, Henry F. Riley.

DAILY GAINS IN CONTEST

Mr. Bowditch is Nearing the 10,000 Mark

MISS MORRISSETT 5,410

Again today Mr. Bowditch makes the largest gain in Daily Ledger contest for the free Washington trips and the diamond ring. He says he would very much like to attend the inauguration of a Democratic President, and if possible he would enter the inaugural parade. He is glad the inaugural ball has been abandoned as he is more at home at a reception, but would like to have the "committee" with him.

Nellie Morrissett of West Quincy makes another good gain today. She says she would be satisfied if she could only beat Mr. Bowditch.

None of the first four in the contest made gains today, but Richard Larkin of the High school has passed his schoolmate Walter Mead, and has nearly overtaken Harry Burr. There is an effort to secure the united school support for Sturgis Hunt, who is a High school boy although entered as the Y. M. C. A. candidate.

Other gains were made by W. C. Luther of the shipyard, Richard J. Gray of the Foresters and John T. Cain of the Knights of Columbus.

There is considerable speculation about town as to the number of votes the two prize winners in the contest will receive. Some say 50,000 to 60,000, while others put it at 75,000 to 80,000. Some put it nearer 100,000 and a few put it over that figure for the first prize—the Washington trip

VICTORY FOR FISHER

Action of Secretary of Interior on Oil Land Lease Is Sustained

Washington, Jan. 24.—The "greatest moral victory in the history of the Osage tribe," was the way Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs Abbott characterized the election of a new tribal council to succeed that deposed recently by Secretary of the Interior Fisher on the charge that "undue influence" had been exerted over it by the Uncle Sam Oil company in trying to obtain leases to Osage oil land.

The District supreme court here, to which the old council appealed against Fisher's action in deposing them, refused to reinstate them.

The house committee on Indian affairs, which investigated the matter as a result of charges by the Uncle Sam company that Fisher was trying to aid Standard Oil interests, is expected to make its reports in a few days.

RECLUSE HOWARD'S ESTATE

Appraisers Find He Left $110,000 Less Than His Bequests

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 24.—The report of the appraisers of the estate of the late Horace W. Howard, Brockton and Providence recluse, just made public, shows the value of the estate is $110,000 less than the total of Howard's bequests to charities and individuals. Howard left $260,000 to Brockton charities, and $100,000 to individuals. His estate amounts to but $250,000.

If is the hope of the administrators that the estate can be straightened out without legal complications. Mrs. Maria Goward, sister of the recluse, who was ignored in the will, is to contest the document.

LOWER CHARGES FOR LONG DISTANCE

Other Changes Are Expected In Parcel Post Rates

Washington, Jan. 24.—Within the next few days Postmaster General Hitchcock, it is expected by those who are in touch with him, will, by executive order, materially change the present parcel post rates and classifications. Books will probably be admitted at the new rates, and there will undoubtedly be a reduction of charges on other articles on the longer distances.

It is known that the postmaster general hopes, before his term expires on March 4, to have greatly extended the benefits of the parcel post system. Under the act of last August he has the power to enlarge the field almost arbitrarily, and those who are close to him are aware of his contention that the express companies should be bought by the government and that their business should be taken over in toto and run through the postoffice department.

CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION

Organized at Braintree to Reduce Cost of Living

EVERY ONE ENTHUSIASTIC

A largely attended meeting of the Braintree Co-operative Association was held in G. A. R. hall, Thursday evening for the purpose of effecting a permanent organization. The meeting was called to order at 7.30 P. M. and A. B. West was elected chairman and E. W. Gerry was the choice for temporary secretary. Julius Heurlin, Andrew Duchar, James D. Fox, Charles Custance and James Levangie were appointed a committee to present a set of by-laws. These laws with some amendments were approved by the meeting.

An executive committee of the following gentlemen was elected: Paul Monaghan, Nelson E. Hayden, Herman Waldecker, Mrs. Lena Heurlin, A. B. West, Alonzo A. Smith and William Bates.

The members of the auditing committee are as follows: Scott Haseltine, Albert F. Hollis and Percy F. White.

The association plans to secure a suitable store as soon as possible and sell groceries, provisions etc., to members only, at cost plus a small per cent for handling.

An entrance fee is charged each member, entitling him to all the privileges of the association. More than one hundred names have already been secured. The meeting was adjourned at 9.50 o'clock until next Wednesday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

NEW BRIDGE ADVOCATED

For the Neponset River Connecting Present With New Boulevard

The Neponset River is coming in for a great deal of attention during the session of this year's legislature. There are no less than four bills in the House all of which tend towards the improvement of that river. One of these bills provides for the dredging of the Neponset so as to make it navigable from its mouth to Milton. Another makes it possible for a new bridge to the north of the present railroad bridge, which will connect the Quincy Shore Drive with the proposed new boulevard from Neponset to South Boston which was provided for at last year's legislature with an appropriation of $400,000. The erection of this bridge would greatly reduce the necessity of a new bridge in place of the old one now in use connecting Hancock street with Neponset avenue it is claimed.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN

BOSTON AND VICINITY

SHUBERT THEATRE.

Robert B. Mantell, the recognized leader of the American stage in the interpretation of the great roles of Shakespeare and the classics, comes to the Shubert Theatre, Boston, next week for an engagement of two weeks, in the following repertoire.

Jan. 27, King Lear.
Jan. 28, Hamlet.
Jan. 29, matinee, Merchant of Venice.
Jan. 29, Richelieu.
Jan. 30, Othello.
Jan. 31, Kink Lear.
Feb. 1, matinee, Macbeth.
Feb. 1, Richard III.
Feb. 3, Louis XI.
Feb. 4, Julius Caesar.
Feb. 5, matinee, Richelieu.
Feb. 5, Macbeth.
Feb. 6, Othello.
Feb. 7, Julius Caesar.
Feb. 8, matinee, Merchant of Venice.
Feb. 8, Macbeth.

Mr. Mantell is the only American actor now living who can be regarded as the legitimate successor of the long line of tragedians that included Forest, Kean, McCullough, the Booths and Mansfield. He is the only actor fitted by voice and physique and long, hard training in the classics for such great roles as King Lear and Othello, and is the only one who has dared re-create these personages and include them in a permanent repertoire. His success in the interpretation of the big classic roles led William Winter in 1907 to proclaim Mr. Mantell leader of the American stage, and since then many other critics of note have echoed this opinion. Mr. Mantell's readings of certain of the tragic speeches in Macbeth are regarded by Mr. Winter as the best readings of Shakespearean lines since the days of Edwin Booth. Professor H. H. Hay of Girard College, Philadelphia, recently went a step further even than Mr. Winter and declared Mr. Mantell the superior of Booth in natural qualifications for Shakespearean tragedies and quite his equal in most points of art.

MRS. FISKE.

The week of Jan. 27 will be the second and last of Mrs. Fiske's engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre, in her striking and highly successful Edward Sheldon play, "The High Road," which in its first week put the breath of life into Boston's attitude toward virile, prejudice-effacing and up-to-the-moment stage treatment of vital American questions, as it has not been in many a day. Edward Sheldon and "the people who go to theatre" have a joint heritage in the young playwright's youth. It gives him courage, vigor and strength; it gives them advanced, tense and epoch-marking drama. He has some of the faults of immaturity but he has none of the short-comings of senility.

In "The High Road" he has seized boldly upon a question that daily grows more important to the women and, through them, to the men of the country, and he has handled it with the most modern sense of justice and right. When eugenics becomes known in every American home, when selfishness disappears before universal kindliness, when struggling minds are allowed every possible outlet, when parental authority bears no trace of hardship, when the love of beauty is encouraged and not strangled, when, in short, children are, first well born and then well reared, then will there be no cause for argument about Mary Page and her sisters.

Mrs. Fiske has rarely appeared to better artistic advantage than as the ill-treated child of the farm who at 17 starts upon her eventful pilgrimage, and she surely has never appeared to more appealing or sympathetic advantage. Nor is Mr. Sheldon's play a dry-as-dust thesis on a moral question. On the contrary, it teems with the tensity and interest that are so frequently lacking in the stage offerings of today. The play is Edward Sheldon's best and Mrs. Fiske's characterization of Mary Page is one of the triumphs of her career.

BOSTON THEATRE.

No more gorgeous and varicolored picture book has ever been unfolded than the stage form of the famous romance of the desert, which is being presented at Boston Theatre, before large and deeply interested audiences The play stands alone among similar dramas of the moment in spiritual elevation, for the book from which it is taken has produced a profound impression among all those who have read it. Mr. Hichens, author of the novel, and Mary Anderson, who assisted him in the work of dramatization, have proved remarkably expert as playwrights. A monk (Boris Androvsky), tired of the restraint and solitude of his cell, and possessing all the robustness, passion and vigor of men who live to love, and love to live, breaks his vow, escapes to the desert, meets a beautiful woman (Domini Enfilden), who seems to fill every desire of his body and soul, and who upon discovering his identity, forsakes her at her command and returns to seclusion to atone for all that has gone before.

In selecting the dramatic episodes for this stage version of "The Garden of Allah" the authors have laid the first scene in the courtyard of the Hotel du Desert at Boni-Mora, in which Boris makes the acquaintance of Domini and apoligizes for his conduct at the railroad station. Then we have a street at the Ouled Nails, in which they are sent on their way to dance-house in the same thoroughfare, where a quarrel between two jealous Arabs over the same dancer arises from which melee Boris rescues Domini and escorts her back to the hotel. The famous garden of the Count Anteoni follows, with its massive palms stretching in aisles to their sunlit outlet far away in the desert, its crimson exotics and scarlet blooms—the zenith, in short, of the entire spectacle beautiful as the rest of it is, in sharp contrast to this oasis is the grim stretch of desert which comes after. This scene begins with an actual sandstorm, which blows in blinding eddies to the foreground, and finally reveals the tent of Boris and Domini, dimly visible through the moving clouds. The concluding scene—the exterior of the Trappist Monastery at El Largini, with the blue Mediterranean in the distance, and a second peep into the Garden itself, are equally characteristic vistas of entrancing loveliness.

B. F. KEITH'S

The event of the season from a dramatic standpoint in Boston vaudeville will be the appearance at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week of David Belasco's masterpiece, "The Drums of Oude." This is a one-act playlet by Austin Strong, dealing with the days of the terrible Indian mutiny of 1857. The scene is laid in the tower of a fort in Northern India, occupied by several English army officers and their wives, beleaguered on all sides by the rebellious Sepyos of their native regiment. Beneath the floor of the tower is located the magazine, containing forty tons of gunpowder. The Englishmen plan to drop a candle into the magazine when the last hope is gone, rather than to prevent their loved ones falling into the hands of the lustful, fanatical Hindus. "The Drums of Oude" is staged with all that finesse and genius of stage craft that have won for David Belasco the title of "The Wizard of Stageland." The setting was painted from actual photographs of a fort in India, and the costumes of the English soldiers are from plates borrowed from the British War Office. Real Hindus are employed for the native parts, while the company engaged to present the play is of the all-star variety. "The Drums of Oude" will be presented for one week only. Surrounding it is one of the best bills of the year.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The second week of the John Craig Prize Play, "Believe Me, Xantippe," will begin at the Castle Square on Monday. The interest in it is by no means confined to Boston and its vicinity. Playgoers are coming from miles around, as they did also a year ago and year before last, to see the play with which a young dramatic writer gained a prize of $500. "Believe Me, Xantippe" is genuine comedy from beginning to end. It seems its dialogue and its incidents are humorous, and in fact it is designed for laughter. Its action takes place mainly among the mountains of Colorado, and it is filled with quaint turns of speech. Moreover, the plot keeps the audience continually in suspense, and there is no guessing what the outcome will be. It is a complete surprise. Mr. Craig, Mr. Melrose, Mr. Meek, Mr. Walker, Miss Colcord, Miss Browne and Miss Young are acting the leading roles in "Believe Me, Xantippe."

LYCEUM COURSE.

Not a few people who have attended the first two entertainments of the Y. M. C. A. lyceum course have expressed themselves as having received their money's worth already. When one really stops to think of the money value of the attractions offered and the price charged they can see a great many tickets have to be sold to make expenses even. As has been said as plainly as it has been possible there is no attempt, for it would not be possible to do so, to make any money out of the project.

In order to increase the receipts for the remaining attractions it has been decided to sell reserved seats for the three for one dollar. When it is remembered that these are the lecture Monday evening by Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, the second by Dr. Steiner, easily the most popular lecturer on the platform to day and the Imperial concert company which has gained a first class reputation, this offer really partakes of the "January bargain sale" plan so much in vogue at this time of the year.

Mrs. Booth is the highest paid woman lecturer on the platform today. She is a mite of a woman and "Little Mother" is her name among convicts from Maine to California, and she calls them all "My Boys." But she is so brim full of fire and energy, that you can think of her as one who could easily move mountains—which she frequently does. A mass of dark brown hair is constantly making bold dashes for freedom, encroaching on the smooth, broad forehead, and even, on the straight dark eyebrows, which emphasize the effect of brilliant, dark brown eyes. It is a face that is supremely earnest—lovingly earnest—its instinctive tendency strengthened by a life-time of labor among outcasts and outlaws.

Such is the woman that the people of Quincy and vicinity will be privileged to hear. She is ever sought by the various colleges for their Sunday meetings, and while it may seem hardly possible such men as John R. Mott and Robert E. Spear have to share their popularity in this field with this Woman of God who has done so much good in the world.

TWO BIG GAMES ON SCHEDULE

Quincy First will Try to Retrieve Laurels

FROM NEWTON TEAM

Although the Greater Boston N. E. A. A. A. U. basket ball league started its season Thursday evening, minor details were not adjusted until Monday evening's meeting which was held at the rooms of the St. Joseph A. A. The fans of this city are doubly interested in the schedule workout since it is the home of the 1912 champions.

Four of the fastest amateur teams in the state now, when at the start, many good quintetts were entered. Some acquired cold "feeters", others had no hall to play in and they gradually dropped out.

North Dorchester was handicapped with no floor space, but in all probability the Vine street church will be their future battle ground.

The matter of rearranging the schedule was considered by the commission. Thomas J. McMakin of the St. Mary's, Joseph V. Commerford of the St. Alphonsus, William H. McVicar of the North Dorchester and William H. Flynn of the Quincy A. A.

Between the halves two West Quincy teams will play and on the floor will be, among others, "Nedzo" Bennett.

The revised schedule follows:

Jan. 21—Quincy at North Dorchester
Jan. 23—St. Mary's at Quincy.
Jan. 24—St. Alphonsus at St. Mary's
Jan. 25—North Dorchester at St. Alphonsus.
Jan. 28—St. Mary's at North Dorchester.
Jan. 30—St. Alphonsus at Quincy.
Jan. 31—North Dorchester at St. Mary's.
Feb. 1—Quincy at St. Alphonsus.
Feb. 4—St. Alphonsus at North Dorchester.
Feb. 6—North Dorchester at Quincy.
Feb. 7—Quincy at St. Mary's.
Feb. 8—St. Mary's at St. Alphonsus.
Feb. 11—Quincy at North Dorchester.
Feb. 13—St. Mary's at Quincy.
Feb. 14—St. Alphonsus at St. Mary's
Feb. 15—North Dorchester at St. Alphonsus.
Feb. 18—St. Mary's at North Dorchester.
Feb. 20—St. Alphonsus at Quincy.
Feb. 21—North Dorchester at St. Mary's.
Feb. 22—Quincy at St. Alphonsus.
Feb. 25—St. Alphonsus at North Dorchester.
Feb. 27—North Dorchester at Quincy
Feb. 28—Quincy at St. Mary's.
March 1—St. Mary's at St. Alphonsus.
March 3—Qiuncy at North Dorchester.
March 5—St. Mary's at Quincy.
March 6—St. Alphonsus at St. Mary's
March 7—North Dorchester at St. Alphonsus.
March 10—St. Mary's at North Dorchester.
March 12—St. Alphonsus at Quincy.
March 13—North Dorchester at St. Mary's.
March 14—Quincy at St. Alphonsus.

present and explained what his company desired. He had plans of a manufacturing building he desired to erect for his business and said that he would give employment to from 150 to 200 hands, two thirds of whom would be girls. He wanted capital to go ahead and establish the business and erect the building and he asked the assistance of the Board of Trade in interesting local moneyed men to invest in the scheme.

The second matter was from a concern who desired to manufacture brick from stone dust and cement. The concern had done considerable in this line in other places and believed that Quincy with its extensive granite fields, and its tons of granite chips, that are now practically not utilized could be made to pay a revenue.

Both propositions were fully discussed and they will be brought to the attention of the Board at its next meeting.

It is probable that the Board will lend its assistance to help the concerns to raise the capital desired.

PROTEST IS BASED ON PRESUMPTIONS

Knox's Reply to England Concerning Panama Canal Tolls

Washington, Jan. 24.—Secretary Knox's reply to the British protest against the exemption of American coastwise shipping from Panama canal tolls assures the British government that domestic coastwise trade will not be permitted to extend operations into foreign competitive fields and that increased tolls will not be laid on foreign shipping, to balance the remission to American ships.

Secretary Knox says the British protest, made in advance of the president's proclamation fixing the tolls, is not applicable and rests upon apprehension of things that may happen in the future which in all probability never will occur.

When the United States actually subjects British vessels to inequitable tolls, and not before, it will be time to talk of arbitration.

"FEED BARLEY" SEIZED

Federal Authorities Take Three Carloads Because of Adulteration

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Three carloads of barley were seized by federal authorities here under a court order charging violation of the pure food laws. The barley was in transit from Minneapolis to Newport News, Va., for export.

The grain is what is known as "feed barley." It is supposed to be placed on the market solely for stock food, but the federal authorities say there is nothing to prevent it being sold for human consumption.

The government charged that the barley was adulterated with screenings and weed seeds, in violation of the pure food and drug act.

ELECTIONS IN NOVEMBER

Vermont May Cease to Be Political Barometer of the Country

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 24.—Vermont, called for years the political barometer of the United States, soon may lose this distinction.

The legislature adopted an amendment to the constitution which provided that state elections be held in November and that the legislature meet in January.

In past years the elections have been in September, about two months earlier than in most states, and the first session of the legislature in October. The voters will be asked to decide on the amendment at the next election.

BUILDING COLLAPSES

Thirty-Five Shoppers Perhaps Killed In Dry Goods Store

McKinney, Tex., Jan. 24.—Seven persons are known to have been killed and many injured when the three-story Odd Fellows building, occupied on the lower floor by a dry goods and men's furnishing establishment, collapsed last evening. The death list may be increased to forty, but Mayor Finch estimates the number of dead at thirty-five.

The number of shoppers unable to escape from the building before its collapse has not been learned. A special sale was in progress and the store is said to have been crowded.

The police have a fairly good idea of the offenders and are biding their time as to setting the matters before the grand jury.

The general impression is that the letters did not originate with any member of the I. W. W., but that their initials and known motto were signed in order to throw the police off the true scent.

For a time after receiving the first letter Mayor Stone had an automatic revolver in the drawer of his desk at City hall where he could readily reach it in case of necessity, but as stated Thursday he is not one easily frightened and does not fear an attack.

Captured by Brother Officers In Basement of a Convent

Holyoke, Mass., Jan. 24.—Patrolman Walter Murray, connected with the police force for eleven years, and who has been ill for a long time and returned to work yesterday, went violently insane and took refuge in the basement of the Mt. Carmel convent.

The strange actions of the policeman caused considerable excitement in the convent. Policemen were sent to take care of Murray. It became necessary finally to put handcuffs on him. He was taken to the hospital at Northampton.

POPULATION GAINED 2000

Big Jump in the City in Past Two Years

According to the State Board of Health the estimated population of Quincy on January 1 was 34,670. This is quite an increase from the figures of the census of 1910 which gave the population as 32,642.

BRIEFS

Miss Dorothy England of High School avenue has successfully undergone an operation at the hospital.

The many friends of J. B. Sutherland will be glad to know that he is greatly improved and will be able to attend to his duties in a few days.

Charles H. Johnson of Quincy gives his lecture on "George Washington," illustrated by stereopticon, at Quincy Mansion school this evening, at 7:45. Personal friends of the school are cordially invited to attend the lecture.

This evening the Ladies Aid of the Hall Place M. E. church hold another of their quarterly socials at the home of Mrs. James McCormick, Hall Place. These socials are helpful financially and socially and it is hoped a large number will be present. A pleasing program has been arranged.

Following the very interesting discussion by Mr. Sayward at the First Parish Club last Tuesday evening on "The Way out of the labor Chaos," Rev. A. L. Hudson will preach at the First Church, Sunday morning on "The way out of the labor chaos—the religious phase of the question."

Fred Mullaney and Segard Almquist aged 16 years each and Harold Beaton aged 14 years, were arrested Wednesday afternoon by Officer Murray charged with insulting a woman on Coddington street. It was during the early part of the afternoon when the lady was walking up Coddington street. As she passed the three young men she says that they used the vilest of language to her. Passing on she told her story to Judge Avery who was just leaving the court room. Officer Murray was informed and after considerable chasing about succeeded in rounding up the three youths. They were brought into court Thursday and bound over until next Tuesday. It is also said that these same boys have been stealing jars of milk.

SNOW PLOW MEN DINED

The men who run the snow plows of the Bay State Street Railway on the Old Colony division were the guests of the company Wednesday evening at Thompson's cafe where they were served a turkey supper. Superintendent Gammons presided. There were 27 present.

HOT ASHES SET FIRE.

Alarm from Box 52 at 12.59 Thursday was for a fire in the basement of a house on Farrington street, Wollaston, caused by a barrel of hot ashes setting fire to some of the woodwork.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Wednesday evening, at the home of Mrs. Leon A. Rhine, 111 Granite street, a pretty party was given, the occasion being her birthday, there being an number of friends and relatives present from Dorchester, Malden and Milton.

Cornet solos, piano selections and vocal solos were given and enjoyed by all after which a bountiful collation was served all departed wishing the hostess many more happy birthdays.

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES

lent. Bethany church, Park and Downs, First parish, Presbyterian, Episcopal, Baptist church, Wollaston, consulted us before aiding, as did also the Elks, Salvation Army and several private individuals. Opportunities were given to suggest the names of needy families for aid. A gift of toys from one of our directors to a family where there was sickness and wherefor other reasons, Santa Claus was not expected, was much enjoyed and has called forth numerous expressions of gratitude. A gift of toys and a dinner for one family from a Sunday school class in Wollaston, and two dollars for one nice old lady also gave much happiness.

By preventing duplication, at least 25 or 30 families received aid at Christmas who otherwise would not have had it. The good co-operaiton with Salvation Army was especially pleasing, and the association was very glad to help by investigating their applications for relief., A number of appeals to Santa Claus, South Pole, were forwarded from the post office. These were carefully looked up but in no instance did the family circumstances appear to justify outside aid being sent in. As was the case with the appeals to the Salvation Army, the letters were from people already fairly well provided for. Not a single instance of destitution was revealed in this way.

Seventeen families came in the month of December from eight sources of reference. One young man who came from the Social Service at one of the Boston Hospitals, came to Quincy to work at Fore River; worked there two months, when he was found to be suffering from a serious eye trouble. His boarding mistress kept him two months without pay. When she could do so no longer, the association was called upon. He had a home in a nearby city, and was welcome to return there and his fare offered. He agreed to go home, but when the time came he refused to go and went to Boston to visit a friend. A society in Boston was interested in the young man and they succeeded in returning him to his home.

Several instances were given by the Secretary of problems which come to the society for consideration and which are considered at the weekly conference—and sometimes solved. This is intended to show the importance of the work, its possibilities where families are concerned and its value to the community. A large number of families continue to come up for duscussion at the conferences. These families requiring constant attention and add to the volume of the work, but it is not possible to make this appear in any report, or in any record of work done.

The volunteers continue faithful. In addition to the four who have been working, the association has been fortunate in having this month Miss Lillian Abele, a sister of Dr. Abele, who is a trained nurse, and whose assistance on this account is especially valuable in families where there is sickness. Miss Abele is taking a special course in medical social service at the school for Social Workers, in Boston.

Navy Officers In Opium Traffic

Paris, Jan. 24.—French police who are investigating opium traffic unearthed three more opium dens in Toulon. They charge that opium was furnished to the proprietors by officers in the French navy.

Prince Adalbert Seriously Ill

Berlin, Jan. 24.—Prince Adalbert of Prussia, third son of Emperor William, is suffering from a complication of measles and pneumonia.

FEBRUARY MAGAZINES.

Lippincott's Magazine —February Lippincott's is a well-rounded, ripe, and rich magazine, full of varied fiction and papers adjusted to the season. As usual, every feature in it is complete, there being nothing continued but the entertainment, which never flags. The novel, "Miss Phoenix," is by a new writer, Albert Lee. While its theme is entirely unlike that of Mary Roberts Rinehart's "Seven Days," the reader is reminded of that now-famous story, because of its originality, humor, brisk action, tangled but quite plausible complications, and general breeziness. The plot hinges upon a young wife's well meaning attempt to deceive her husband in a small matter and thereby avoid a family quarrel. But an untoward fate twists things up, and one prevarication leads to another, till a half-dozen or more people are involved and much trouble is threatened—trouble from which the author adroitly—— and very naturally —frees his characters in the end. Most readers will feel rather surprised at his cleverness in doing so, because for a time things seem hopelessly enmeshed."Miss Phoenix" is one of the fununiest yarns which have appeared print for a long time.

SUBURBAN LIFE—The Countryside Magazine—for February, is called "The Advance Spring Building Number," "Successful Houses of the Half Timber Type," "Houses that Fit Into the Landscape," "Remodelling an Old House Effectively" and "Four House Entrances that are Attractive" will prove of great suggestive value to the man who is planning to build a house this spring. In this issue a prize winning kitchen arrangement is published. It shows a woman's idea of an ideal kitchen for a suburban home. There is also a well illustrated article on "The Importance of Cupboards and Closets" which will especially appeal to women who have tried to solve the problem of ample closet room. "How to Know the Furniture of Chippendale" is the second article of a series on period furniture which is attracting much attention. For the garden enthusiast, there are "Gilt-Edged Perennials for Early Spring," "How I Planted My Home Grounds," "A Florentine Garden in California," "My Backyard Garden," and "What I Am Getting from My Coldframe." "Americanism" is another of the popular Margaret Woodward papers.

AMERICAN MAGAZINE—The February American Magazine contains wonderful letter by Allan Pinkerton, never before published, in which the famous detective relates his connection with the first plot to assassinate Lincoln. Lincoln was on his way to Washington in February, 1861, and the plan was to kill him in Baltimore while he was passing through that city on the way to Washington where he was to be inaugurated. Pinkerton discovered the plot, saved Lincoln's life, and tells the whole story in this letter which was written in 1866 but never reached the public until The American Magazine got hold of it.

An excellent assortment of fiction, together with four departments filled with good reading, completes an unusual number.

WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION—An article of great interest and value to women is published in the February Woman's Home Companion. It is an account of the Housewives' League, an oragnization of 500,000 women, which, in two years, has developed to the point where it is actually assisting hundreds of thousands of housewives in the United States to reduce the cost of living. One of its great contentions is that women should study the market reports in the newspapers in order to get information about prices which will enable them to buy intelligently when they come to deal with tradesmen. The article shows how the plan may be carried out in any town or city in the United States. It also presents a dramatic picture of the origin of the League.

Lively fiction is contributed by Georgia Wood Pangborn, Mary Hastings Bradley, Annie Hamilton Donnell, Justus Miles Forman and Fannie Heaslip Lea.

The regular Cooking, Fashion, Home Decoration and Young People's departments are unusually interesting and helpful.

UNCLAIMED LETTERS.

Mahoney, Margaret Margines, Miss Susie Mosher, Mrs. Reardon, Mrs. W. Reardon, C. Rutlschi, E. S. Saunn, Janne Tiainen, Mrs. S. Urquhart.

VOTING CONTEST

for two. During inauguration week, when Washington is crowded, this prize which includes all extras is worth about $150.

PRIZE CERTIFICATE.

It is three weeks now since a vote certificate was offered as a prize, but today the Contest Editor offers a big one, a certificate good for 1,000 votes, which will be awarded on Monday, Jan. 27 at 9 A. M., to the candidate making the largest gain for the week of Jan. 20-27. For example, if the largest gain for the week is 2,000 the candidate will be credited with 3,000 votes. If the largest gain is 2,500 he will be credited with 3,500.

THE LAST WEEKS.

But two weeks more of the vote coupon after this week. The last coupon will be printed in the Daily Ledger of Saturday, Feb. 8, which is near at hand. Are you ready for the final spurt?

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Thornton escapes, captures Lieutenant Bedloe and takes from him Mrs. Haverill's miniature.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

CHAPTER IX.

A Bold Escape.

"YOU shall not do it, Tom!" she cried. "It is not to freedom, but to death, they would take you. Don't go, Tom! The lots decided it fairly, and your name was not drawn. You shall not"—

Here the silent Confederate officer, Captain Thornton, who had followed closely after her, caught her in his arms as she sank back fainting and, at a sign from the general, carried her, with the assistance of Warner, out of the room. Then, turning to Captain Cox, General Winder said:

"Your proposition is out of order, sir, and I cannot consider it. The six men whose names have been drawn will report at once in the commissary's room."

The general and his staff officers retired, while Captain Warner and the guard took up their positions at either side of the doorway.

Hunt, the sick man, who had been helped by Lieutenant Bedloe to a chair, now got up again and grasped Captain Cox's hand, saying:

"Tom, you are the better man of us two—you have proved it in every way. I'm glad Winder wouldn't take you, as it is far better that I should go. All the same, you meant it, old fellow, and it was sublime."

"Why, Ralph," said Cox chokingly, "we are comrades—old comrades. Say no more, but I wish to heaven I could go in your place."

"Attention! Fall in!" commanded Warner.

The six doomed men fell into line, after silently shaking hands with those left behind. Hunt leaning on the arm of young Bedloe, and followed Warner into the outer darkness, for night had fallen and the fitful glare of a couple of lanterns intensified rather than dissipated the surrounding gloom.

Cox paced up and down the forlorn room, with bowed head and hands clasped behind his back, for full fifteen minutes in the awed silence. Then he muttered:

"This is the last blow. Deacon, do you ever despair of what they call Providence?"

"Never did yit," protested the sturdy Hoosier. "I can't and won't believe they are going to sacrifice those boys in cold blood. Such things ain't in the bounds of civilization."

"I don't know. How about war itself? Here you have it, the deadliest kind—brother against brother. I tell you, Hart, we haven't seen the worst yet, though God knows there's enough to make the angels in heaven weep already."

"Well, one thing is certain—these hostages won't be sacrificed unless the Confederate prisoners are executed first—so our side will have the first move anyhow."

"What sort of consolation is that to the fellows who get shot or hung?"

Here another violent commotion interrupted. Marie Mason entered—a lone, disheveled, bright eyed apparition.

"Oh, Tom!" she gasped breathlessly.

"What—you poor child, are you still here?" Cox exclaimed, this time gathering her unreservedly into his arms. "You must leave this accursed place or you will go mad—if you don't drive us so."

"I've come back to tell you there's more news."

"Of what? Of whom?"

"From Washington—of the Confederate prisoners. General Winder has just received a dispatch."

"Great Jehosophat!" ejaculated Hart. "Didn't I tell you so?"

"What does the dispatch say?" asked Cox.

"I don't know, but it is favorable, I am sure—that is, there aren't going to be any executions. I heard the general say that much."

"Here comes the commissary," announced Hart.

"For God's sake, Captain Warner," said Cox, as that official reappeared, "don't keep us in this horrible suspense another minute! What's the latest news?"

"There's a woman about—what more do you want?" replied Warner. "She overheard a secret about a minute ago and as a natural result it's all over the place by this time."

"I beg of you, cap, on my bended knees," pleaded Hart, suiting the action to the word.

"Well," said the commissary captain, very deliberately taking a paper from his pocket, "I suppose you-uns may as well be put out of your misery. Here's a copy of the dispatch General Winder has got from Abe Lincoln. I thought the Washington government would back down."

He handed the paper to Cox, who read eagerly aloud:

President learns from New York trial of Confederate cruiser prisoners resulted in disagreement of jury. Leniency to be shown. Proposed holding of Union hostages in jeopardy at Richmond unnecessary. Question of exchange referred to separate negotiations pending on that subject. SIMON CAMERON,
Secretary of War.

"You see, I was right this time," said Marie triumphantly.

"Hooray! Here come the boys back!" cried Deacon Hart. "What did I say about faith in Providence? This is going to be a blessed Thanksgiving, even if we ain't exchanged yit."

"Oh, Tom, this is your last chance!" whispered Marie as the tramp of approaching footsteps was heard outside.

"Last chance for what?" asked Captain Cox, with exasperating stupidity.

"Why, to kiss me."

Such was life, as it wore along in the Libby warehouse prisons. Sometimes as in the instance just related, the emotions of years were crowded into a single hour. Ordinarily, the heavy days dragged so that each one seemed a weary lifetime. The hope of exchange was ever hope deferred. Plots and plans of escape served to beguile the intolerable ennui of captivity and to bring a passing flush of excitement to wan cheeks—and that was about all.

A warm brotherly affection had sprung up between Captain Ralph Hunt, the weak but courageous consumptive, and Lieutenant Frank Bedloe, the youthful spirit of that sad community, who was more or less a mystery to his closest comrades, yet who bore a sort of "daredevil" reputation even among those who knew him but slightly or not at all. Bedloe fairly burned to be free and fighting again, and he lost sleep straining at the idea of escape. He had been in every forlorn hope of the kind since his arrival and was under special surveillance, perhaps on this account, perhaps at the instance of a certain Confederate secret service officer, Thornton by name.

TRADE AGREEMENTS

"There are those who think the labor millennium will follow in 12 months certain reform. But the older we grow the more we become convinced that the evolution will not come by revolution. Evolution will not come with speed. Evolution to be successful, to be right, to be logical and safe must be of slow growth. The working class of today have in their hands the solution as a necessary condition and will solve it in their own way out of ripe experience.

"It is not wise to have this change come about too quickly. Would the present, poor conditions be improved if we immediately put property rights to the rear and brought human rights to the front? If we did there would not be enough people to legislate wisely and designing persons would again take possession of the machinery of government because the people themselves were not ready to.

"We are not ready for a personal democratic government in the broadest sense.

"The final outcome will be however the abolishing of private interests and the public ownership of the means of production transportation and exchange.

"With the segregation of the trusts the concentration of power and money increases more and more and the avenues by which men may rise are being fast closed. The money trust investigation has been an eye-opener to many people.

"The tide will turn in the other direction however and the reconstruction of society will begin along new and practical lines.

"The building up of labor organizations along strike lines is a failure. While this form may mean a few years of prosperity it means soon a setting back further than the point of starting. Trade agreements, arbitration contracts and the maintenance of integrity are the back bones of the labor movement.

"Trade unionism would be a hopeless problem if it continued along the present lines of indifference. But there is an increasing number every day looking forward to a better future. The fact is becoming recognized that those who build houses pay rent, that those who make garments wear the poorest clothes and so on down the line. The people who produce are not enjoying the products of their labor. These will rise up until they take back the product of their labor and create a distribution which is more equitable."

Superior Court. Norfolk, ss.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court next to be holden at Dedham within and for the county of Norfolk. Respectfully libels and represents Harriet R. Morgan of Quincy in said county that she was lawfully married to Ellsworth E. Morgan now of Jersey City in the state of New Jersey at Rutland, Vermont on the sixth day of October A. D. 1886, thereafterwards your libellant and the said Ellsworth E. Morgan lived together as husband and wife in this Commonwealth to wit, at Boston, Massachusetts and in Quincy, Mass. for twelve years in the latter place, that your libellant has always been faithful to her marriage vows and obligations but the said Ellsworth E. Morgan being wholly regardless of the same at said Quincy on or about the eighth day of June A. D. 1909, without just cause wilfully and utterly deserted your libellant which desertion has continued from such time to the date thereof, being more than three consecutive years next prior to the filing of this libel and that the said Ellsworth E. Morgan being of sufficient ability to do so, grossly, wantonly and cruelly refuses and neglects to provide suitable maintenance and support for your libellant.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Elizabeth E. Morgan and that the libellee may be decreed to pay such alimony to your libellant as to this Honorable Court may seem just and reasonable and that the real and personal estate of the said Ellsworth E. Morgan may be attached to the value of one thousand dollars in order to secure a suitable support and maintenance to your libellant.

Dated the fifteenth day of January A. D. 1913.

HARRIET R. MORGAN.

Norfolk, ss. Superior Court.

On the foregoing Libel, it is ordered that the Libellant give notice to the said Ellsworth E. Morgan the Libellee, to appear before the Justices of this Court, to be holden at Dedham, within and for said County, on the first Monday of March next, by causing an attested copy of said Libel, and of this order thereon, to be published once in a week for three successive weeks, in the Quincy Daily Ledger, a newspaper printed at Quincy in the County of Norfolk, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before the said first Monday of March next, and further, by sending through the mail, as soon as may be, by a registered letter addressed to the last known residence of the said Ellsworth E. Morgan an attested copy of said Libel and of this order thereon that the said Ellsworth E. Morgan may then and there show cause why the prayer of said Libel should not be granted.

By the Court,
LOUIS A. COOK, Clerk.
Jan. 20, A. D. 1913.

A true copy of said Libel, and of Order thereon.

Attest,

LAND COURT.

To B. Elizabeth Reid, of Cambridge, in the County of Middlesex, and said Commonwealth; W. F. Macy, of Medford, in said County of Middlesex; Joseph Derocher, Jr., of Newton, in said County of Middlesex; Gertrude E. Phillips, of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Thomas B. McKeaguey, of Boston, in the County of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth, to register and confirm his title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Quincy, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point two hundred and seventy-six (276) feet easterly from a stone bound near the cottage named "Mignonette," on the northerly side of Babcock street, thence running northerly at right angles to Babcock street along the boundary line of land now or formerly of Gertrude E. Phillips, two hundred (200) feet to Manet avenue; then continuing northerly across Manet avenue along the boundary line of land now or formerly of W. F. Macy, one hundred and seventy (170) feet more or less to low water mark in Quincy Bay, then running easterly along Quincy Bay fifty (50) feet more or less to land now or formerly of W. F. Macy; thence turning and running southerly along land of said W. F. Macy one hundred thirty (130) feet more or less to the southerly line of Manet avenue, then continuing and running southerly along the boundary line of land now or formerly of Charles E. Matthaurs et al and land now or formerly of Charles E. Matthaurs, two hundred (200) feet more to Babcock street, then turning at right angles and running westerly fifty (50) feet to the point of beginning.

Petitioner admits that the above described land is subject to the rights of the public to pass and repass over that portion of the above described land shown on plan filed with said petition as Manet avenue, and over that portion of said land between Manet Avenue and low water mark of Quincy Bay; and subject also to the further restrictions that no structure shall be placed on said land between Manet avenue and low water mark of Quincy Bay, which shall obstruct the view.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the tenth day of February A. D. 1913, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fifteenth day of January in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen.

Attest with Seal of said Court.
CLARENCE C. SMITH,
Recorder.

SOME PIN BUMPING BY FORE RIVER AND Y. M. C. A. IN SPECIAL MATCH

Former Swept the Decks By Four Points and Total Score of 1494 with One 520

Latter Not Slow with 1389. Other Games. Ham and Eggs Turned

The Foresters League rolled at the Coliseum alleys, Thursday evening. Monatiquot and Wolcott courts split even with two points each and John Adams and John Ericson did the same. Riepke secured high string of 104.

A match between a picked team from the Fore River League and the new Y. M. C. A. five upset bowling calculations. Making a team total of 1494, a single total of 520, high individual scores and snappy shots they easily beat the Y. M. C. A. 4 to 0. Even then the losers were well up the score boards with Wilson hitting for a single of 128.

The Electricians after weeks of jollying secured a match with Hayes Ham and Eggs and turned them over for a 3 to 1 score. The first string was tie at 431 but the smoke from the pace set by the winners smothered the losers. Lincoln with a single of 113 and a total of 297 was followed by Porter who scattered the pins for a total of 282.

LOCAL RUNNERS IN ABUNDANCE

Will Figure in Coast Artillery Games Saturday Night

Quincy will be represented in the Coast Artillery Corps annual indoor meet in the South Armory, Boston, Saturday night. Most of the local boys fly the colors of Boston organization.

Among those entered is "Fay" Phelan, who will run in the 75-yard handicap and also with the North Dorchester relay team against Brookline Gym and Newton Y. M. C. A.

E. Marceau will be near the scratch mark in the half mile. He lives at Wollaston and runs for the B. A. A., having many good marks to his credit.

George Sullivan of the Quincy Post Office is also entered in the sprints. George withdrew from contests sometime ago because of a leg injury but has recovered and is in good condition.

John McLaughlin will be in the jump. He is a member of the South Boston A. C. and has also been awarded many tokens.

BASKET BALL.

The biggest games of the season are scheduled for Saturday night when the Newton and Quincy Y. M. C. A. first and second teams meet at the local "gym." This will be the second time these two associations have played this year and Quincy will work hard to reverse the result of the first game when Newton won by the score of 18 to 15. The game was a hot one from start to finish and was only won in the last two minutes of play when Jacobs scored the winning goal.

Quincy has been greatly strengthened by the addition of Jenkins who from now on will hold down one of the back positions, Trask going back to centre, his old position on last year's High school team. The contest between Trask and Muir of Newton ought to be a pretty one as both men are fast and aggressive. Trask has a shade the better of it on paper, for he is playing on his home floor. Muir, however is a much heavier man and will doubtless try to cover his opponent as much as possible and in this way wear him out.

Newton is now leading the Y. M. C. A. league by one game. Somerville and Quincy being tied for second place.

Newton has been defeated by Brockton and Somerville and Quincy has been defeated by Newton and Somerville.

The lrst teams will tine up as follows: Quincy: Parker, rf; Rich lf; Trask, center; Jenkins, lb; and Kenn rb.

Newton will have Middlemas and Wiley as forwards, Muir as center and Jacobs and Cady as backs.

The second team game will be just as fast as the big game. Quincy defeated Newton by a score of 31 to 29 the last time they met, this being the only game the Newton lads have lost.

Harry Stone of Somerville will officiate at both games. The first game called at 8.15.

POEHLER AND CHRISTOPHER

Matched For 20 Strings and a Purse of $500

MANY BIDS FOR CONTEST

Preliminary arrangements for the match between Paul Poehler and John Christopher for a purse of $500 are completed.

It was decided that the 20 strings would be bowled the latter part of February, 10 on the night of the 24th, and 10 on the night of the 25th. Bids were received from Sharrott's Alleys, Worcester; Coliseum Alleys, Quincy, and two Boston establishments. It will take a week to settle the matter and at that time the remainder of the purse will be put up and referee selected.

NEW FREIGHT TERMINAL PLANS

At South Quincy Submitted by the Railroad

TO GRANITE MEN

An important meeting of the Granite Manufacturers' Association was held Thursday evening. The meeting was called to consider plans that had been submitted by the officials of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad for the new freight terminal, to be located on the Granite branch off Liberty street.

From what study the association could make of the plans it would seem that the long sought for solution of the shipping facilities for the granite men had been solved. The location of the new freight depot is near the location of the old crushing plant, which already has a siding and spur track leading to it. Under the proposed plans additional sidings will be put in, large enough to accommodate a large number of cars.

The plans were sent out by the railroad officials to see if they met with the approval of the manufacturers' association. After some study of them it was voted to appoint a committee to visit the site with the plans that a better understanding might be had.

The following were appointed as that committee; President, Alfred O. Diack, Frank Morrison, Thomas Bishop, Edward D. Marnock, William L. Jackson, John C. Murray , William Deacon, Alex. Cowe, Alex. Falconer, Andrew Milne, Sr., and Thomas J. Dunphy.

It is understood that the committee will visit the site on Saturday afternoon.

From what can be learned it seems to be the intention of the railroad to commence work immediately upon the new freight yard so that it may be ready for use the coming spring. While it has not been so stated the general supposition is that the present yard at South Quincy will be abandoned when the grades at this crossing are separated.

The proposed new location is an ideal one. It is reached on the southerly and by Liberty street, an accepted street, and on the northerly end by Vernon street which is at present unaccepted. It is easily accessible to all of the yards as at South Quincy, and if anything much more easy of access than the present yard.

BRIEFS

A theatre party of six popular members of the Y. M. H. A. saw "Disraeli" at the Plymouth theatre, Boston, Thursday night.

At the annual meeting of the Boston Post officer superintendent's association, in Boston, Wednesday evening, Superintendent Charles L. Hammond of Quincy was elected a director.

A lecture on physical culture and smoke talk interested a large gathering at Hibernian hall, Thursday night. Prof. Thompson lectured and gave an exhibition of club swinging. Mr. Grant, of Quincy gave a clever exhibition of step dancing and vocal and instrumental duets were rendered by popular Quincy young men.

A committee of children, after a study of how the Boston school children appealed to General Gage to be allowed to skate on the common, immediately organized a committee and asked Councilman Frank J. Duffy to make arrangements with the proper authorities to have Glidden meadow at South street flooded. Commissioner Tupper granted the request and all that is needed now is cold weather.

The Russian afternoon tomorrow at the home of Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann Presidents hill is interesting a great many. Mrs. Arline Delano who is to read from her Russian Memoirs, soon to be published, is a Russian lady who makes her home in this country and her charming personality has gathered about her many friends in literary, art and social circles. She is a personal friend of Mrs. Pfaffmann and is glad to give her services toward a club home for Quincy young women. There is also to be a program of Russian music and a Russian tea.

G. Hayes will report for the delegates who attended the United States League at Atlantic City. The invited guests will include Gov. Foss, Lieut. Gov. Walsh, Bank Commissioner Thorndike and others. Herbert W. Pinkham, the treasurer of the Wollaston bank is secretary and treasurer of the league.

MAY BURN 6000 DEAD

Contractor's Announcement Causes Stir Among Jewish Societies

Philadelphia, Jan. 24.—Horace P. Moore, a contractor of Narberth, has announced that he intends to disinter and burn the bodies of 6000 Hebrews which are buried in the abandoned Har-Hasetim cemetery.

The contractor bought the land and wants to use it for building lots. The Jewish societies, which formerly owned the plot, were unable to keep up their payments on it. When it was sold they asked for time in which to repurchase the ground. They have not done so.

As it is a violation of the old Mosaic law to disturb the dead, there is considerable feeling against the contractor and the societies have called a meeting to see if some settlement cannot be arranged.

LEGISLATION URGED BY BAY STATE MEN

Senate Passes Bill Protecting Migratory Game Birds

Washington, Jan. 24.—The McLean bill, providing protection for migratory birds, which has commanded much support in Masaschusettts and was favored by both the Massachusetts senators, passed the senate.

Representative Weeks of Massachusetts is championing the measure in the house, where it has been reported from committee. An early vote on the bill there is anticipated.

Salem D. Charles, street commissioner of Boston; W. T. Adams of the Boston Gunners' association and George W. Field of the state fish and game commission have urged the legislation.

QUITS VERMONT CENTRAL

Fitzhugh Resigns as President and Chamberlin Takes His Place

St. Albans, Vt., Jan. 24.—President E. H. Fitzhugh of the Central Vermont railroad resigned and E. J. Chamberlin, president of the Grand Trunk railroad, was chosen as his successor. Fitzhugh was particularly active during the projection and partial construction of the Southern New England railroad.

The directors also elected E. C. Smith of this city as a member of the executive committee, and placed E. A. Chittendon of St. Albans on the board to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Fitzhugh.

Fitzhugh was the personal representative of the late Charles M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk railroad.

ROUGH HOUSE AT BASKET BALL

Games Between Quincy A. A. and Boston Teams

LOCALS WON TWICE

The most exciting basket ball game ever played in this city was at St. Mary's hall, West Quincy Thursday evening. Rough playing throughout kept the fans on edge and towards the last of the evening the West Quincy fans swarmed onto the floor to lick a West Quincy man but cooler judgment prevailed and averted a rough and tumble bare knuckle fight.

Quincy A. A. first team beat the St. Mary's of Boston, 42 to 30. The local second team also won 18 to 6. The games were in the Greater Boston League schedule and both teams are working hard for first place.

In the second team game Denafio roughed it with Manning, who naturally returned the compliment. McGuinness had been watching the visiting players and decided to remove both men. The game finished with four men on both teams.

St. Mary's second team was shy a man and "Nedzo" Bennett substituted. He received prolonged applause, particularly when a foul was called soon after the half started and he caged the ball for the only score of the first period for his team.

The first half for the big team ended in the locals favor, 12 to 9. The visitors started the playing right off the bat and made two baskets, both swell shots. The Champs come right back and in order to keep the lead had to meet the visitors half way, sometimes rather rough but, at the same time good naturedly. McLaughlin was most formidable and Weiss played his usual star game. Flaherty shot a basket and Hebert snapped a rich one over. The other scores were all of the difficult order.

In the second period Joe O'Rourke retired in favor of his brother Frank who made four baskets the first time he had played in fast companw. Dan Duggan also went in, Boyle retiring. Joe O'Rourke slowed up towards the last of the half because of a heavy fall he took while after the pig skin.

It was towards the closing minutes of the second half that the spectators started. A fair explanation advanced by witnesses was that the fellows sitting around the hall became excited while two men were tugging for the ball in the corner and that one passed a remark about a Quincy player which the latter resented and both reached for each other, threatening a serious mixup, but the clouds soon cleared away and the game was resumed.

In the second game "Nedzo" was the hero, but the playing of the Quincy boys was fine and Manning until he was expelled was in good fettle. "Bute" made the prettiest shot of the game and Scollard shot three. Mil Chapman and Frank Harmon were there with the passing that brought the results and the game was one of the fastest ever played on that floor.

The matter of fights, rough house and other matters will be taken up at a meeting of the basket ball commission Saturday evening. In most cases the aggressor is usually suspended and if such happens one of the teams will be without the services of a good man.

Of Bonnie Scotland Paid Tribute to Memory of Burns

UNDER CLAN McGREGORS

The annual concert, supper and dance in observance of the 154th anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns under the auspices of Clan McGregor No. 5, O. S. C. and Loyal Ladies Clan McGregor, No. 1 was held in Music hall, Friday night.

At the head table were the present and past officers of the clan and Loyal Ladies and Mayor Eugene R. Stone, a guest of the evening.

Chief Angus D. Martin welcomed the large assembly and exhorted those present to co-operate in making it an entertainment worthy of the name and memory of the national poet, after which he introduced the various entertainers. The program was departed from so that the speaker of the evening, Rev. Alan Hudson of Brockton came last.

Dr. Hudson after a few humorous remarks, said that he would rather be the author of "A man's a man for a' that," than Napoleon, the Czar of the Russians, or heir to John D. Rockefellers millions. "True Democracy" he said, ""as we have it in America, France and England at the present day was foretold by Burns in his deathless songs. Burns, was the prophet of Democracy."

According to Dr. Hudson the greatest love poem on earth is "Highland Mary" and the greatest song dedicated to friendship was "Auld Land Syne."

In following Dr. Hudson, Chief Martin said that among the great men, kings, statesmen and soldiers, Scotland boasts of there is one figure towering above them all, and whei the name of Burns is mentioned every Scotchman shows his colors and claims kinship.

Oh, Whitsle and I'll come to You" was sung by Miss Janet McGregor Cuthill of Somerville. She also sang "My Love is like a Red, Red Rose" and other scotch songs.

Alex Peddie of Charlestown sang the "The Lass of Ballochmyle" and "Afton Water" and the Misses Mary and Emily Forbes, pupils of Mrs. Georgia C. Flynn gave an exhibition of dancing which took in the Highland Fling, Broad Sword Dance, Irish Jig and Jack O'Tar Hornpipe.

Dancing was enjoyed until 2.30 o'clock, music being furnished by Provost's orchestra. The dance officers were as follows:

The floor director was Alex Maver and floor directress Alice F. Joss.

—All this talk about reducing the cost of living by the formation of leagues and the use of the parcels post, comes down to this: that the individual who will expend a little intelligence and time on saving a little money at a time, can do it; those who are impatient with the small things will continue to find the cost of living high. It would perhaps astonish most of those who make so much fuss about the high cost of everything, if they knew how well and how cheap some families live who are careful in their buying and in the preparation of what they eat.—Banker and Tradesman.

ELKS PLANNING RECORD TIME

In the Way of Decorations and Sociability

AT ANNUAL BALL

The members of Quincy lodge of Elks, and their hosts of friends are looking forward with pleasure to the annual concert and ball of the lodge which will be held at Music hall on Thursday evening of the coming week. The affair is in the hands of a most efficient committee and neither pains or expense will be spared to make it eclipse any previous events. While the decorations of the hall last year were admitted to be the most elaborate ever seen in Quincy, the committee promise this year to even exceed last year's effort.

Exalted Ruler, Philip H. Sullivan, backed by a large and hustling committee are holding frequent meetings and reports from them are to the effect that everything is going along nicely. From the returns already received from the sale of tickets it is also evident that the attendance will be exceptionally large.

YOUNG HEBREWS NEW QUARTERS

Will Be Formally Opened With Speech Makirg

STOCK FOR COMMUNITY HOUSE EAGERLY TAKEN UP AT WOLLASTON

Plans of Two Years Reach Maturity and $4,605 Pledged First Night

Mr. Bishop Crossing the Ocean Wirelessed $100 to Enterprise

At an enthusiastic mass meeting in the Wollaston school hall Friday evening, attended by several hundred men and a few women, nearly $5000 was raised and action taken to launch "The Wollaston Community House, Incorporated and an incorporation committee appointed consisting of William M. Chase, Thomas Lacey, Walter S. Pinkham, Frank A. Page and Eugene H. Sprague.

Chester I. Campbell, chairman added much enthusiasm and lead the cheering when extra large contributions of $250 or $500 were discovered.

Frank A. Page, the father of the movement opened the meeting with a resume of the work thus far accomplished. He said:

"About two years ago a few citizens met in Odd Fellows hall and talked over the matter of a Community House. Things were in an indefinite shape then and the whole question was referred to a committee, which has held a great many meetings and discussed many plans. The original plans have been enlarged upon and changed but many features are embodied that were talked of at the first meeting. It seems in many respects a new departure—the undertaking to provide ourselves with a building of this kind, and it will bring many good things if the work is carried on in the harmonious way that the committee has worked in the past."

Russell T. Anthony acted as secretary.

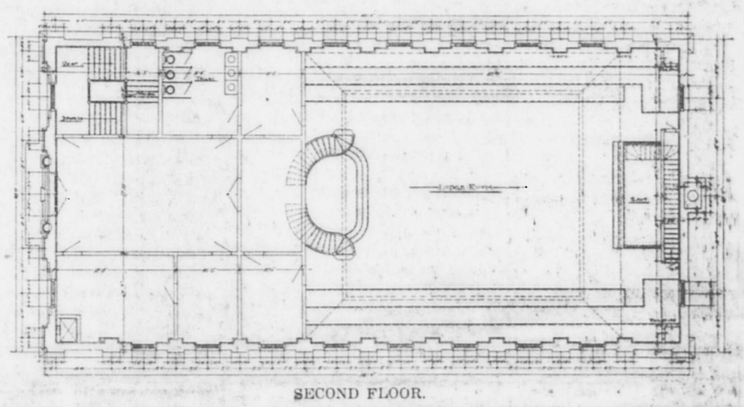
Chester I. Campbell on taking the chair said: "I only wish I could tell you how I personally feel in the matter of a Community House. I believe in it. I believe it should be built and I believe it will be built. Wollaston is a residential district. We are separated to a certain extent from Quincy proper, partly by poor transportation facilities and partly by a vast extent of land that is undeveloped so that it is a barrier to walk that way after midnight. We all want entertainment at various times. Ninety five percent of us here would rather go to Boston than to Quincy square for any sort of an entertainment.

"We need something of the kind here The churches of Wollaston as a whole are liberal in their views on entertainments. I personally believe that entertainments in churches should be of a character in keeping with principles upon which the church was founded. There are a great many lecture courses for which there is no place. The fraternal orders must of necessity have rooms that will be proper for them.

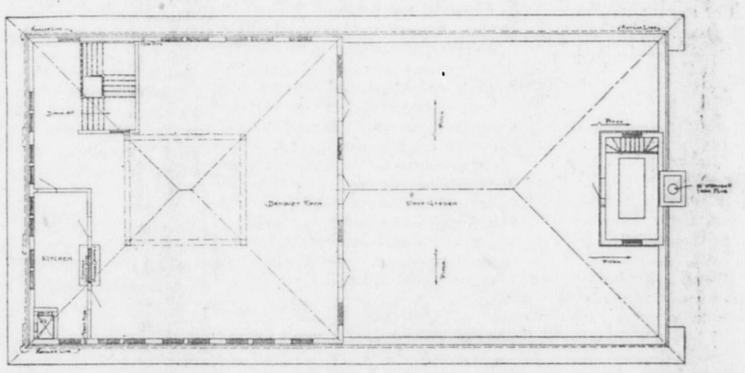
"About a year ago there was a revival. Brother Page was the evangelist. The matter was revived in good form. What every other committee had done was gone over and new ideas added.

"One of the first things done was to get the co-operation of several mens clubs and the Wollaston Park Improvement association as well as the fraternal orders. The committee numbers 32. When a band of 30 business men agree on one scheme that will benefit the community you may feel sure that is the best plan.

"After preliminary matters the serious question of location came up and it was finally decided to secure option on the land at the corner of Greenwood avenue and Beale street on the side toward Hancock street."



SECOND FLOOR.



THIRD FLOOR, SHOWING ROOF LINES.

Mr. Campbell described the plans subject to change.

The ground floor contains a hall seating 500 with stage and dressing rooms, mens coat room, ladies coat room, ladies parlor and box office. On the second floor lodge rooms and small committee rooms which may be rented for a nominal price. The third story is divided between a small hall, for dances of about 100 and other purposes, and a roof garden opening out of it.

Plans for the basement are undecided as yet but a branch public library among the possibilities.

"The building" said Mr. Campbell, "will be as nearly fireproof as we can make it. There is in Wollaston to-

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

"When thieves and rogues fall out, honest people come by their own." If the congressional committees now probing, go deep enough something of this kind may develop in this day and generation.

And the poor steel trust figured to soak "Uncle Sam," for steel armor plates while all the time they were selling the article cheaper abroad. How much would this country have saved to have gone abroad and bought the same article, accepting of course that the government would not have to pay duty on what it needed for government use?

It is rather a poor commentary upon respectable men and women of Boston, if they cannot be permitted to take a moonlight walk under municipal auspices.

"Bobbie" Burns, may his memory never grow less green or endearing than it is at the present day.

Rhode Island is continuing to add to its leaning to electing trust men to the senate.

The plumbers have not had much occasion for jubilation this winter, as the pipes burst by the frost have been away below the record mark.

A scrubwoman in the New Jersey state house has been unable to collect her pay because she did not show an average in the civil service examination. It is not surprising that people at times get peeved at the absurdities which are crowded under the head of sensible civil service by insensible red tape and officialdom.

January has done very well so far, but then there are a few days left in which she may not show such a clean pair of heels.

What a lot devolves upon on February and March to maintain the standard of the old fashioned New England winter.

One might seriously ask when those women who are continuously in the limelight in the woman suffrage movement get any time to do a little dusting and dishwashing at home?

And still Mr. Todd claims there is nothing to arbitrate in the railroad situation in Maine. There are none so blind as those who will not see.

If the Young Turks have their way there has been six weeks of time wasted in those peace negotiations, all of which points to the fact that the Turk as heretofore must have a card up his sleeve which he has yet to play in the war game.

Let a college man have a good hoof, an ability to throw the hammer, and a few other athletic attainments and he gets all that is coming in the way of publicity, but little is heard of the men of brains who go forth in many hundreds each year, a credit to their alma mater in their great achievements.

The Duc De Tallyrand thinks New York is a poor place to live in because of the lack of contentment. Any place it seems would be a region of barren wilderness for the duc but for the money which finds its way to him through New York from the Gould fortune.

FITZHUGH RETIRES.

Earl H. Fitzhugh has resigned as president of the Vermont Central railroad, and of necessity must step down and out from the vice presidency of the Grand Trunk. Whether Mr. Fitzhugh has retired of his own volition or has been forced out is not germane to the points at issue at the present time. It is claimed that Mr. Fitzhugh was heart and soul tied up in the project to have the Grand Trunk enter Boston. The discontinuance of the construction of the road several months ago, according to the retiring president, was accomplished without his knowledge or consent. He acknowledged himself completely ignorant of the program outlined until the blow had been struck. In view of his former attitude, his retirement at the present time and other conditions which exist, he may be able to furnish considerable light on the inside operations which created such a furore a few months back as he has promised the Federal grand jury of New York to tell freely all he knows with regard to the situation.

ARBITRATION.

John F. Tobin gave a most interesting talk before the Norfolk Downs Improvement Association, on the labor question. As a labor leader Mr. Tobin was well qualified to speak upon this most important subject which has so largely entered into the life of the country at the presnt day. The address of Mr. Tobin, as reported was temperate and reasonable to a marked degree. He plainly showed that he is no advocate of violence or intemperate measures during a period of labor disturbance. And by labor disturbance is not meant, riot, hoodlumism or anything of that kind, but a situation which has developed a strike, carried on peaceably and with a due regard to the rights of all. His reference to the class known as "high brows," contained much that was reasonable and pertinent. Many in this class without any actual knowledge of existing conditions, dive into a discussion of problems which is as far from their sphere as the North pole is from the South pole, and endeavor to pose as adjusters or reformers. Yet they are quoted and looked up to as students of economics. It is like reading a story of a couple of shoppers who endeavor to enlighten the people as to the means of lowering the cost of living. They visit the market, pick out certain things which appeal to them, buy of them, relate how many people the market basket will feed and how many meals, can be juggled from the lot of spinach they have purchased.

The price is within bounds to be sure, but horrors, when the purchases are picked to pieces and the menu laid bare, one would think that it was a spread for a couple of canary birds which had been secured at the market instead of several meals for several husky growing people. This is only by way of comparison as to the value of many of the so-called authorities upon subjects of which they have nothing but a book reading and theoretical knowledge.

Mr. Tobin further stated "That trade agreements, arbitration and the maintenance of intergrity are the back bones of the labor movement."

Being a practical labor man, with years of experience behind him, his words and sentiments must carry great weight. People of Quincy have only to look back a few months to find the logic, truth and power of this summing up. In several of the large concerns of the city only a few months ago, there was a demand for higher wages and maybe some other things which are not necessary to go into now. There was no outside interference. Everything was peaceable between employer and employed. Confrences wer held, and th trouble had hardly blossomed into growth before it was swept aside. Both sides got together, the differences were settled and the men were at work without any trouble or engendering of hard feeling. Thus Quincy people, employer and employed showed that they could settle their differences without outside interference and it was accomplished in a peaceful and orderly manner.

MR. TOBIN'S DEFI.

Liquid known as "chain lightning" has been known to many by reputation for many years, and to others to their sorrow by actual experience with the product, but little is known of gasoline as a beverage and the few who have partaken of it by mistake found a stomach pump a most desirable utensil for relief purposes.

Many a person has spoiled a good dinner by an injudicious use of tabasco sauce. This table luxury is splendid for flavoring purposes providing just the right quantity can be measured out to give the eatable the proper degree of palate appreciation, but let the dose be over the right standard and then the poor diner has to suffer. All that comes after is unappreciated. It has no taste or flavor and you can say as much as you please about a certain amount of food being necessary to satisfy hunger, that hunger satisfaction has to be augmented by a proper sense of taste to reap the full enjoyment of the meal. Recourse to water only makes the case worse. There is momentary relief but the sting returns with renewed vigor when the temporary effects of the copious draughts of water only too speedily pass away. But that has little to do with the gasoline libation. John F. Tobin, before the Norfolk Downs Improvement Association declared he would drink a quart of gasoline if oil had advanced from 10 to 17 cents in a single day or if it had ever been sold as low as 10 cents at any time within the past five years.

Probably Mr. Tobin meant the price to the consumer. Without doubt John D. Rockefeller gets his oil at less than 10 cents, and maybe some who buy it in car loads or ship loads reap a similar benefit. Without doubt Mr. Tobin knows pretty near what he is talking about or else he would never pledge himself to indulge in that gasoline refreshment. He will find it somewhat different from a Bronx cocktail or a Roman punch, providing he as ever tasted of these seductive beverages and there are many other concoctions contained in the Bar Tender's guide which have it double crossed four ways for Sunday when it comes to smoothness. Up-to-date we have not noted any one accepting Mr. Tobin's challenge. If they do, and he should lose the wager, which is hardly probable, we should like to be around and witness the performance purely from an editorial and scientific standpoint so that we may be better qualified to describe the effects of a quart of gasoline upon the human system, to an interest and curious public.

BRAINTREE PHILERGIANS.

Miss Mildred Maddocks in a lecture on "What to eat and why," said at the meeting on Tuesday that 20 percent of the people of the United States are producing the food for the whole country, of necessity causing food stuffs to advance in price. Also that in these days when the clerk lives as the merchant of a few years back, articles that were formerly looked upon as luxuries have come to be considered commodities. Quoting from scientific tables that have been prepared, Miss Maddocks said that ih the theoretical family (two adults and two growing children) 45 percent of a $500 yearly salary is considered a fair proportion for food alone, and 25 percent of $2000 or more, but she added that few American housekeepers stay within this because of a limited knowledge of the relative food values. Assisted by colored charts Miss Maddocks showed the proportion in foods of proteins, carbo-hydrates, minerals and water. She attaches much importance to the proper use of cheeses, fruits and nuts, the last named being rich in food value and should be treated as a concentrated food. Miss Maddocks is an associate editor of "Good Housekeeping" magazine, and this lecture is highly practical.

The first vice-president, Miss Jane F. Edgcomb precided, in the absence of the president, Mrs. George O. Wales. Miss Edgcomb spoke appropriately of the death of a member Mrs. Carmichael and also of Mr. Wales

A committee consisting of Mrs. William F. Rogers, Mrs. Harry W. Hall and Mrs. Benjamin J. Loring, prepared the following resolutions concerning the death of Mr. Wales:

WHEREAS our all-wise Father has deemed it best to remove from our midst our loved and honored citizen, Mr. George O. Wales, always a loyal friend of the Philergians,

BE IT RESOLVED that we, as a club, desire to do honor to the memory of Mr. Wales by the expression of our appreciation of the numberless courtesies extended to us by him, and of our deep regret that his useful life is ended, and we extend our sincerest sympathy to his family in their bereavement;

RESOLVED that a copy of these resolutions be sent to our beloved President, Mrs. Wales, and spread upon the records of the club.

MABEL S. ROGERS,
ROWENA L. HALL,
CARRIE F. LORING,
Committee on Resolutions.

The next meeting of the club will be Gentlemen's Night—February 4, when "Pe-ahm-e-squeet" (Floating Cloud) will entertain with "Indian Life, Legends, Music and Dances, with Melodies on the Harp." A limited number of guest tickets are with the custodian Mrs. George W. Stevens and must be procured in advance, as no tickets will be sold at the door.

On February 11, there will be an extra meeting for the annual dramatics—two short sketches will be given by members, and there will be music, the afternoon is in charge of Mrs. Caroline A. Bill.

The class in modern literature was entertained by Mrs. Horace R. Drinkwater on Wednesday, when Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney conducted an Ibsen afternoon. She gave a few facts about Heinrick, Ibsen, who was born in Norway of a German mother, his father came of a long line of sea-going Norwegians. Ibsen hoped to be a doctor, and so became an apprentice with an apothecary, but later he became director of a theatre. He first wrote legendary and historical essays, then love poems, and finally social dramas, in these prophesying the industrial problem and the woman problem of today. Ibsen was the father of problem literature. Mrs. Gurney sketched "A Doll's House" to the climax then read to the end. She told the story of "Ghosts" reading only a small portion of it. An animated discussion followed, showing deep interest in the subject. The next hostess will be Mrs. Albert E. Avery February 10, and Mrs. Gurney will speak on Maeterlinck, reading from "Ardiane and Barbe Bleue" and "The Blue Bird" and "The Sightless."

Thursday morning at the home of Mrs. Eugene L. Webber, the class in parliamentary law had an open debate, into which members and guests entered with zest. An advanced class is being formed continuing with Mrs. Fifer, information regarding this may be obtained from Mrs. Webber.

The appeal signed by John Burroughs and Ernest Thompson Seton—men known to all lovers of the creatures of the great out-of-doors—and lately published in the Post, should find an echo of approval in every heart. This message is sent especially to the school children, urging them to get their parents and friends to write to their members of Congress and ask them to favor the bill now pending to place all migratory birds under the protection of the federal government.

There is sad and ever-increasing need of such a measure. Surely, and not slowly, the birds of this country are being slaughtered out of existence. States vary in their defence of them and many give them little aid. It is time for Uncle Sam to put forth his strong arm and say: "The birds must be saved."

SQUANTUM WOMEN'S CLUB.

A meeting of the executive board of the Squantum Women's club was held Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. E. Carlson, Huckins avenue.

Mrs. Hiram Morse, chairman of the finance committee made a very favorable report in regard to raising funds for the proposed clubhouse to be erected on Huckins avenue this spring. The committee is to begin soliciting among members and friends at once. The new finance committee consists of the following ladies: Mrs. Hiram Morse, chairman, Mrs. James Foster, Mrs. Helen McGowan and Mrs. Matthew McGrain.

After the business meeting the ladies sewed on a silk quilt to be sold at a bazaar to be held in the near future. Mrs. Carlson served a dainty lunch assisted by Mrs. John R. Nelson and Mrs. Henry Guild of Newton who acted as pourers.

OUR FOUR GREATEST MEN

Washington, Lincoln, Lee and Davis Are Named by Cannon

Washington, Jan. 25.—Appealing to the house to pass the senate bill for a $2,000,000 Lincoln memorial structure in Washington, former Speaker Cannon declared that it was a profanation of Lincoln's name to use it in connection with the promotion of a road project.

"There are certain great characters that will dwell in the history of the country," said Cannon. "First, and barely first, Washington; second, Lincoln; third, Lee, a great man, a great general who did his duty from his patriotic standpoint; fourth, Jefferson Davis, a great man performing a great service for the republic as he saw his duty."

LADIES' DAY IN THE CONTEST

Mrs. Marnock, Mrs. Lamont and Miss Morrissett

MAKE THE BIGGEST GAINS

Jan. 25 will go down in history as ladies' day in the Daily Ledger contest for the free Washington trips during Inauguration week. There are three ladies among the first ten candidates in the list, and all of these excelled the gentlemen in gain today.

Mrs. Emma Marnock, the W. R. C. candidate, added 745 and is leaving Mr. Bowditch far behind.

Mrs. Annie Lamont, the Loyal Ladies candidate, was a close second with 700 votes, and now has a total of 2,410.

Miss Nellie Morrissett, the West Quincy candidate, was third in gain with 245, and is happy because she has passed Mr. De Normandie of Wollaston, and is now in sixth place. She needs 3,730 to overtake Mr. Bowditch.

Although it was ladies' day Mr. Bowditch was around today with a few votes. He added 120 and is still hopeful. Harry Burr of the High school also gained 50.

Monday will undoubtedly be the banner day since the contest was inaugurated, as there is keen interest among the first ten candidates to secure that prize certificate good for one thousand votes, awarded for the biggest gain during the week. It looks good to all of them.

Candidates are reminded that certificates good for 1,000 votes are issued by the publishers of the Daily Ledger on the payment of a year's subscription to the paper, either by old or new subscribers. Also that a limited number of Ledgers with coupons may be purchased at the office of publication at $1.50 per hundred, or $12.50 per thousand.

PRIZE CERTIFICATE.

It is three weeks now since a vote certificate was offered as a prize, but today the Contest Editor offers a big one, a certificate good for 1,000 votes, which will be awarded on Monday, Jan. 27 at 9 A. M., to the candidate making the largest gain for the week of Jan. 20-27. For example, if the largest gain for the week is 2,000 the candidate will be credited with 3,000 votes. If the largest gain is 2,500 he will be credited with 3,500.

THE LAST WEEKS.

But two weeks more of the vote coupon after this week. The last coupon will be printed in the Daily Ledger of Saturday, Feb. 8, which is near at hand. Are you ready for the final spurt?

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

KNOX ON CANAL TOLLS

His Reply to Grey Not Pleasing to the British Press

London, Jan. 25.—Secretary of State Knox's reply to Sir Edward Grey on the question of the Panama canal tolls is found unsatisfactory by those newspapers here which comment on it. The Westminster Gazette, generally looked upon as the mouthpiece of the government, says the reply does not bolt the door, but leaves the door open to a long series of bickerings which would do much to undermine the good relations of the two countries.

The Pall Mall Gazette says that "coming from any other country than the United States, the tone of Secretary Knox's reply would be deeply resented in this country."

Much interest is manifested in the charming annual Children's German Valentine party which will be held in Alpha hall, Saturday, Feb. 8. Last year, Mrs. Charles M. Bryant, decided that she would no longer undertake to conduct the affair, but now that the time has rolled around, and those interested realize how very successful Mrs. Bryant has been in those undertakings, have pursuaded her much against her will to continue her efficient direction of the enterprise. Accordingly Mrs. Bryant has finally consented to conduct the affair and has entered into the spirit of it with her usual enthusiasm and painstaking desire to make the affair a success with the result that already the plans have so far advanced that everyone is looking forward to the German with keen anticipation of pleasure Usually about 200 children participate in this function and there is no reason to believe that the number will be lessened this year, in fact it is believed that the attendance will be even greater than ever before.

ERUPTION OF JALISCO

Drives Wild Animals Through Deserted Villages Near Mt. Colima

Guadalajara, Mex., Jan. 25.—Driven from their haunts by lava and live embers, many wildcats, mountain lions, deer and other wild animals are passing through the deserted villages around the foot of Mount Colima, the Jalisco volcano, which is in eruption.

Hunters, daring death from the eruption, are venturing nearly to the base of the mountain in pursuit of game.

☞Quincy is fortunate in having so fine a series of entertainments as the Lyceum Course. Monday evening the third event will take place. This will be the lecture by Maud Ballington Booth at Music hall.

WASHINGTON A MIGHTY FIGURE

Mr. Johnson Told of the Great Man at Quincy Mansion School

One of the most interesting patriotic meetings held in this city in a long time was enjoyed Friday evening at the Quincy Mansion school by the faculty, pupils and friends, when Charles H. Johnson gave his illustrated lecture on George Washington.

The fine pictures shown by the skilful hand of W. F. Perry, who operated the lantern and the earnest stirring words of the lecturer coupled with the singing of patiotic songs, illustrating the lecture, filled in an evening enjoyed by all. The enthusiasm of the pupils in joining in the choruses and the spirit of patriotism seemed contagious.

YOUNG PEOPLE HAD GALA TIME

Assisting Thair Chum in Celebrating Her Birthday

Miss Roxanna Schenkelberger, daughter of Albert F. Schenkleberger of Goffe street, observed her thirtenth birthday Friday afternoon, at the home of her cousin, Miss Fremetta Shepherd, Mill street, by entertaining her young friends. Various games were enjoyed by the young people, the peanut hunt, the peanut carry, and the peanut road, especially causing much merriment.

At six the guests were invited to the dining room, where a fine spread awaited them, the table being generously supplied with refreshments of all descriptions, including dainty confections, candy, ice cream, not forgetting the central attraction, the very handsome birthday cake decorated with thirteen candles. The hostess was the recipient of many delightful reminders of the day. Among those participating in the pleasures of the anniversary were: Mr. Schenkelberger Mrs. Augusta A. Harlow, Hazel Livingstone, Winsor Harlow, Natalie Saville, Maria Schenkelberger, Ruth Hamblett, Alice Miller, Harlow Schenkelberger, Norma Johnson, Mary Whitton, Lilian Schenkelberger, Dorothy Hall, Frances Ward, Doris Sampson and Ethel Chapman.

The guests departed with many expressions of delight for the hospitality of their hostess and wishing her many happy returns.

HELD UP BY OPEN WATER

Relief Party Unable to Seek German Scientists In Spitzbergen

Chrisuania, Jan. 25.—The Norwegian expedition, sent to the relief of the German scientists reported to be stranded and suffering terrible privations in a remote part of Spitzbergen, left Advent bay, Spitzbergen, Monday, according to a wireless dispatch.

The expedition was forced to return three days later, as the water was found to be open and occunication overland was impossible. The relief of the German scientists will be impracticable until new ice has formed. Captain Ritzschel, one of the explorers, brought to Advent bay the first news of the plight of his comrades whom he had been compelled to leave behind, exhausted with cold and hunger, on Wilde bay.

Several others of the party had not been heard from since August, when they had gone on a sledge journey.

Gems In Bail of Rags

Cornwall, Ont., Jan. 25.—Uncut diamonds in a loosened bale of rags were found by sorters of waste matter at a paper company's mill here. The bale was one of a number that arrived a few days ago from New York.

$250,000 For New York Harbor

Washington, Jan. 25.—Senator Berman introduced a bill providing for the appropriation of $250,000 to improve the channel in the upper bay of New York harbor opposite the government anchorage grounds.

Suicide In Picture Theatre

New York, Jan. 25.—Samuel Newberger, a retired jeweler, who had lost all his savings in Wall street, close a moving picture theatre to drink a cyanide solution in. He died as an usher caught him

Answered the Last Roll and Taps Are Sounded

Lucius Longendyke formerly of West Quincy and the oldest member of Paul Revere Post G. A. R., died at the home of his daughter Mrs. Eastman on Holbrook street, Neponset, Friday aged 93 years. During the civil war Mr. Longendyke served his country in the 18th Mass. infantry. He resided for many years in West Quincy, but on the death of his wife several years ago he made his home with his daughter. His death was due to infirmaties incident to old age. Funeral services will be held from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Eastman 7 Holbrook street, Neponset, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and will be attended by members of Paul Revere Post in a body.

BRAINTREE

Mrs. George O. Wales and Miss Mary Wales are to occupy Mrs. Wheeler's house on Charles street.

Mrs. W. B. Arnold of Dorchester, is spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Arnold of Middle street.

Miss Annie Maher of Jersey avenue, celebrated her 15th birthday Thursday by entertaining a few of her friends.

Mrs. Anna P. Loring of St. Louis, Mo., has been visiting her brother, Mr. F. H. Palmer, 114 Hollis avenue, the past week.

The members of the Thimble club will meet at the home of Mrs. Minnie Legg next Thursday evening for election of officers.

Letters remain in the post office for Joseph Bennan, Delap Hill Farm, Charles Holmes, Charlie Shackford and Miss Maude Smith.

The Altar Guild of Emmanuel church held a meeting, Tuesday, Jan. 21, at the home of Mrs. Caroline A. Bill, 91 Hollis avenue, President of the Guild.

Mr. C. E. Farrington, principal of the Hollis School with his estimable wife royally entertained the teachers of the Hollis school at dinner on Wednesday evening.

The music by the First Church quartet tomorrow will be as follows: Anthem, "And It Shall Come to Pass," Rogers, Offertory, "Comfort Ye My People," and "Surely He Hath Borne Our Griefs," from Messiah.

Mrs. George Wales of Randolph, formerly of Braintree and mother of the late George O. Wales is today quietly celebrating her ninety-second birthday. Several Braintree friends will call during the day and others have remembered her with birthday cards.

The many friends of Alfred R. Clark, formerly of Braintree may be interested to know that he has been transfered from Fall River, where he held the position for the past five years of wire chief with the Southern Mass. Tel. Co., to Nantucket, where he will have complete control of the service there at a much larger salary. Mr. and Mrs. Clark, leave a host of friends in Fall River who wish them success in their new home and business.

Free public lectures, with lantern slides, are being given in the lecture hall of the Boston Public library. Thursday evening, Jan. 23, the lecture was by Mr. F. H. Palmer of Braintree and his subject was "The Hawaiian Islands, past and present." The hall was filled with an enthusiastic audience. Mr. Palmer has visited the Hawaiian Islands and given many illustrated lectures since his return. He has recently added a large number of new slides and material.

day no fireproof building. Even this school building is far from it.

The euipment will cost between $35,000 and $40,000. The committee believes there is no question in carrying on the building in a way to be made to pay. It would not convey the idea that there would be a big payment on money invested or any actual cash return. They are convinced that expenses can be paid out of the earnings of the building. In reply to questions Mr. Campbell estimated the income at $4,500 a year and expenses of from $3,500 to $3,700.

It was planned to incorporate for $50,000 and issue stock at $10 a share. It would be necessary to raise from $20,000 to $28,000 in cash before the building was started.

Walter S. Pinkham spoke of the advantages of the basement of the proposed building for a polling place. The present quarters in the cellar of the hose house are not decent and are often filthy. High class moving pictures for the hall were also mentioned as a means of support.

Rufus B. Tobey spoke of the project as a means to bring together more closely the people of Wollaston and Atlantic. He also advocated a branch public library in the building.

The motion of William M. Chase for the appointment of a committee to organize the corporation was carried unanimously. The committee as named above was appointed.

Applications for stock were then passed by the ushers and the results chalked on the blackboard. The amounts ranged from $10 to $500, the larger amounts being greeted with loud applause and continued cheering.

A wireless message from Frederick H. Bishop on the Maurefania, Europe-bound was read. He registered himself heartily in favor of the project and subscribed $100.

Amounts came in rapidly until a grand total of $4605 was reached.

William M. Chase spoke of the sentimental side of the proposition and John L. Hamilton tendered the moral support of the Quincy Board of Trade. He proposed a whirl wind campaign to raise the balance.

William M. Burrell moved the appointment of a building committee of seven to be headed by the chairman of the meeting.

Chairman Campbell appointed H. T. Whitman, Charles M. Bryant, Albert N. Murray, William A. Mann, George W. Stone and Louis S. Cleaves.

The general committee will meet early next week to consider plans for future lines of action.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

One of the most notable weeks of the entire opera season will be that beginning Jan. 27 at the Boston Opera House. The coming of Felix Weingartner, the eminent composer and pre-eminent operatic conductor of day, who has obtained a brief leave of absence from the Royal Opera at Vienna, in order that he may assume charge of the orchestral forces in Boston, will lend especial distinction to the second half of the season which begins on Monday. Mr. Weingartner's initial bow will be made on Friday night when Wagner's great love drama and masterwork, "Tristan und Isolde" will be sung with Carl Burrian and Olive Fremstadt, both from the Metropolitan Opera House, New York in the titular parts. There is no greater Isolde known to the stage of today than Mme. Fremstadt and her appearances in the Ring operas as well as in "Tristan and Isolde" have been the sensations of the present season in New York. Mme. Maria Gay will assume Brangaene for the first time, the Kurwenal will be Hermann Weil and Edward Lankow will sing King Marke.

☞Any candidate in the Ledger trip to Washington to the inaugural, can take a look at the ticket by calling at the office. It looks good, as does also the companion ticket. The winner in the contest has the privilege of selecting a companion to go on the trip. It's a very complete trip costing $75 each ticket.

The midnight train from Boston to be put on by the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. at 12.05, goes into effect Monday night, Feb. 3. It will stop at Wollaston at 12.19 and at Quincy at 12.23. It is to be given a three months' trial and if the patronage warrants it will be continued.

Rev. E. Harold Mohn will have charge of the Wiggin Bible class Sunday at the Wollaston M. E. church subject, "Cain and Abel." All men not connected with other schools are cordially invited to attend. The Royal Daughters Bible class meet in the Ladies' parlor every Sunday at 12 o'clock. They are having large attendance and interesting lessons. Mrs. Wesley Wiggin is the efficient teacher. A. N. Murray is having a large attendance of young men each Sunday. They have a room in the vestry which adds much to the interest and profit of the lesson hour. Mr. Murray is alert and knows how to attract and hold young men. Every young man not attending elsewhere is invited to come in Sunday and join the class. Mr. Belcher's class of young ladies thoroughly appreciate the faithfulness of their teacher who has taught the class for the past ten years with great acceptance and profit to all who have attended. Large attendances greet the teacher from Sabbath to Sabbath. The Sunday school is growing steadily under the efficient leadership of J. A. Sedgwick superintendent. It has the largest enrollment in its history . The school is well equipped with officers and teachers who show their interest in the work by the faithful discharge of their various duties.

Rev. T. W. Davison is planning a series of evangelistic talks on Sunday evenings, from now until Easter. The topic Sunday evening will be "What is it reasonable to expect from a church member?"

The annual business meeting of the parish of the Wollaston Unitarian church is to be held Monday night.

FITZHUGH'S RESIGNATION

Montreal Men Lay It to Grand Trunk Turning Down Promises

Montreal, Jan. 25.—The news of the resignation of E. H. Fitzhugh from the presidency of the Central Vermont railway has caused consternation in railroad circles here, and it is considered the reason is the direct refusal of the Grand Trunk to enter Boston, which was contrary to Fitzhugh's ideas and promises.

So far the Grand Trunk office here has not given out any information on the significance of Fitzhugh's action and its prompt acceptance.

A Stirring Story of Military Adventure and of a Strange Wartime Wooing, Founded on the Great Play of the Same Name

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Thornton escapes, captures Lieutenant Bedloe and takes from him Mrs. Haverill's miniature.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Other Union prisoners in Libby were allowed occasional visitors and received presents of food and clothing from home. No such remembrances ever reached Lieutenant Bedloe. No letters came to him, nor was he known to write any. It was even uncertain to what state he belonged, and if he had a home, relatives or friends he never made any allusion to them. War was war, not a picnic, he said. Once a soldier, it was "all off" with other ties. His one object was to win military distinction, meaning rapid promotion for conspicuous gallantry.

Precisely the opposite of this fierce and somber obsession was the character of Ralph Hunt—frank, gentle, confiding, childlike in some qualities as well as in some weaknesses. But he loved Bedloe, and his own ambitions, as the tide of a blighted life slowly but surely ebbed, merged into one grand desire to do something for the strong, high spirited, dashing comrade who had contributed so much to cheer the horrible gloom of prison existence.

The opportunity came in an odd and unexpected way. Hunt's kind southern friends had the happy thought to replace his dilapidated uniform with a new suit of clothes—citizen's clothes, of course, and of the good homely material known as "butternut." As a matter of fact, the whole Confederate army, especially after the first year of the war, was sprinkled with butternut of various shades. The "uniforms" were anything but uniform. A gray coat, a gray pair of trousers, or a gray hat, sufficed to mark the followers of Lee and Jackson, and some soldiers went through all the campaigns clad in their home garb as farmers or mountaineers. A supreme service was devised for Ralph Hunt's new suit the very day it arrived.

"You are the man to get away with it, Frank," insisted the owner of the clothes. "The opportunity is wasted on me."

"Ralph is right," declared Captain Cox. "You can make as good use of your liberty as any officer here. Lieutenant Bedloe. No, don't think of me. I have something else in view for myself."

So it came about that one morning when Captain Warner had been replaced by a subordinate named Turner as acting commissary and the guard for the Potomac room had been newly changed, a gawky youth in butternuts (Frank had contrived to shave off his beard and mustache) slipped out behind the officer who had perfunctorily counted the prisoners and in a twinkling was mixed up with the free southerners who lounged about the place on one pretext or another, though he was still on the wrong side of the railing that constituted the dead line. Here Turner was stationed, sitting at a desk just within the pale.

"Hello, cap—do they keep you busy?" drawled the youth in butternuts, matching his clothes with the assumed accent of a North Carolina tarheel.

"Who the devil are you?" demanded the official, glancing up from his records, "and what are you doing here?"

"I'm from No'th Ca'liny, and I followed the gyard in so's as to git a look at them 'ere Yankee prisoners. I'm goin' to the front tomorrow an' I thought before I went I'd like to see what these Yanks looked like."

"Go to the front and be cursed, and there you'll see more Yanks than you want to. Now, get out of here and stay out."

"All right, cap, you needn't be so sassy abaout it," retorted the supposed tarheel as he lurched out through the wicket and made for the door, where rolling a quid of tobacco in his cheek he winked at the armed guard and passed out.

Here was where Lieutenant Frank Bedloe, daredevil, demonstrated his old self again. Instead of disappearing with all possible celerity, as any man of ordinary nerve would have done, once escaped from Libby prison, he deliberately crossed the street to the vacant lot opposite and stood there a minute or two with his hands in his pockets, gazing up at the barred front windows of the big brick building to see if any of his late comrades in captivity had ventured across the dead line to catch a glimpse of his actual departure for "God's country."

A few pale faces could be dimly discerned within. To these Frank waved a parting salute, murmuring, "Goodby; I hope we'll meet again somewhere else."

Then he slouched off in the direction of the Rocketts, down the bend of the James river.

CHAPTER X.

Lights and Shadows.

THE Federal army had been repulsed from Richmond, but the southern capital was still its objective. The Confederate forces in the meantime could play their trump card and by menacing Washington draw McClellan's formidable army away from the banks of the James.

The setback of McClellan prompted Mr. Lincoln in the first place to gather up the armies which "Stonewall" Jackson had scattered in the valley and put them all under the command of one officer, who should be charged with the protection of Washington, and, secondly, to fortify his own council by the appointment of a supreme military adviser, who should be commander in chief of all the Federal armies.

For the first named commission Major General John Pope was the unfortunate choice. For the second Major General Henry W. Halleck was brought out of the west, and the whole land force of the United States was saddled with a bureaucrat whose own soldiers could not help ridiculing the bombastic declamations from his "headquarters in the saddle," enjoining the troops who followed him to take no account of strong positions, lines of retreat or bases of supply, but to keep always on the flank of the enemy, of whom thus far he had seen nothing but their backs.

He saw their faces presently at Cedar Run, where Jackson administered a signal defeat, and later in Augusta, when Lee and Jackson and Longstreet, who had taken his measure from the start, finished him at Manassas on the old battlefield of Bull Run in a series of quick actions.

Antietam's day of carnage passed into history as a drawn battle, because on the day following neither side felt strong enough to renew the struggle. It really amounted to a disaster to the Confederate army, having abruptly checked what had looked like a victorious invasion and demonstrated Lee's present resources were entirely inadequate for offensive operations.

Three days after the withdrawal of the southern army from Maryland President Lincoln issued his proclamation of emancipation to the negro slaves. This measure, in its war relation, was expected to fan reactionary flames in the south and so aid the Federal arms in crushing the rebellion. Its immediate result was to precipitate heated political discussion at the north.

General McClellan's suggestion to his army that the remedy for past errors was at the polls in the next presidential election naturally aggravated the growing breach between him and the Washington administration. The final outcome was that early in November McClellan was relieved from the command of the Army of the Potomac, to be succeeded by Major General Ambrose E. Burnside, fourth successive commander in the field of the Union forces in Virginia, third to head the superb Army of the Potomac organized by McClellan hardly more than a year previous.

Burnside conceived the idea of concentrating his army on the Rappahannock river, opposite the historic Virginia town of Fredericksburg.

Lee ordered Jackson and Longstreet to Fredericksburg and intrenched his army on the heights back of the town, on the same (right) bank of the river, knowing that the enemy, changing his line of communication with his base of supplies, would require time before assuming the offensive. The plans of Burnside were indeed unfathomable, but the calculations of the Confederate chieftain were fulfilled to a nicety.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Moonlight Hikes for Young People are Now Arranged by the Hubbite Municipality—They Quite Surpass the Country Parlor in Popularity—Mistake in Peter Faneuil Tablet is Hideous Discovery, Distressing to Many Pious Pilgrims—Art Exhibitions from Abroad and Suffrage Demonstrants Home-grown Keep Things Lively in Staid Old Boston—A New "Votes for Women" Organization Makes its Debut.

Moonlight meanderings under municipal auspices is the latest Hub diversion. Privately organized courting parlors are not in it with these. The Municipal Athletic Association, formed for the purpose of popularizing Boston's recreational facilities, has been for some time conducting park walks of an interesting and beneficial if not specially romantic nature. The January moon, however, inspired an arrangement for a moonlight hike through the parkways under two groupings, one to do the walk in record time and the other to take its leisurely pace at its own sweet will. Mothers and fathers will probably regard this ensemble sort of stroll with favor, but whether it will prove as popular with the young folks as the time honored custom of "twosing" remains to be seen.

Horrors! Trusting visitors to the Hub have been deceived. The tablet on the corner of Summer and Washington streets, indicating that the home of Peter Faneuil once stood on that site, is found to be misleading thousands of patriotic pilgrims daily. Peter didn't live there at all, nor his father Benjamin Faneuil, but another Benjamin Faneuil of much later time. It is inconceivable that such a terrible mistake should have been allowed to take place. Who knows now but that all the other tablets of which Boston is so proud may be equally untrue, and that the poor hoodwinked descendants of famous personages may be pointing out to visitors supposedly historic spots which are at least ten feet removed from the real spot. A commission to investigate this state of affairs should be appointed instanter, that the New Englander, returning to show his devotion to his forebears, may be perfectly assured on just which paving stone his pet ancestor rested his walking stick.

Proposals of marriage in writing, as desired to be made a matter of law by a Massachusetts legislator, might well be supplemented by the acceptance or denial in writing, if the lady in question accepts or refuses the proposition. The temptation to change one's mind, after a half hearted refusal, sometimes leads to breach of promise suits, and it would be a matter of protection for the young man to have an affidavit of the turn-down. Some girls don't really make up their minds until they find out how the man would take a refusal, and if he is too light-hearted over it they are very apt to discover that they intended to marry him all the time. Then the trouble begins.

The progressive policies of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts arouse the appreciation of patrons of the arts and of artists alike. The big institution is not only following broad lines in building up its permanent collections but is generous in its efforts to bring to Boston the temporary exhibitions of paintings and sculpture of other countries which prove an education and continuous pleasure to frequenters of the Museum. The latest exhibition of this nature is that of the paintings, decorative cartoons and engravings by Albert Besnard, who, since the death of Puvis de Chavannes, has been generally recognized as the foremost figure in French decorative art. His cartoons have popular, artistic, and sentimental appeal, his essays in landscapes are interesting, and he is a distinguished portrait painter. The presence in Boston of representative exhibitions of the best artists of other countries gives an excellent opportunity to Bostonians to judge of the comparative merits of their works and those of local men. The comparison leaves one with a sense of the completeness and subtlety of the American painters, many of the best known of whom are centered in Boston and known as the Boston impressionists, as compared with the slap-dash painting of men who were trained under the same influences. This characteristic is notable in Besnard's paintings as it was in Lavery's works recently shown at the Museum, and the study of such artists is valuable from the fact, if nothing else, that it induces a keener appreciation in the local mind of the restrained brilliancy and legitimate finish in the works of the Boston painters.

The debut of still another suffrage organization is planned to take place at a monster mass meeting at Tremont Temple on Saturday evening, January 25. The Massachusetts Political Equality Union is the bud. Leading suffragists have developed this new branch of the suffrage work with a view to reaching large bodies of working and professional women who are known to be interested in the cause, but not actively participating. The Union doesn't compete with the established suffrage organizations but is designed to help them, and representatives of these bodies are to be present on the platform at the great meeting in Tremont Temple. Rev. Anna H. Shaw, president of the National Association, will speak, and a prominent feature of the evening will be the speech of Miss Mary Louise Chamberlain, the young Vassar graduate, who has been carrying on interesting investigations into the conditions of employment for women in the factories in New York state. Hon. Joseph Walker, of Brookline, will preside, and there will be addresses by Ignatius McNulty of the National Tile Maker's Union and Miss Mabel Gillespie, chairman of the Executive Committee of the newly organized union. The ushers for the occasion will be telephone girls. Meetings of a like nature will be held in Quincy, January 27, and Brockton, January 28, with others to follow throughout the state. A preface to the Tremont Temple meetings will be a noonday rally in Pemberton square for business men, at which also Miss Shaw will speak. Mrs. R. Y. Fitzgerald, well-known to all followers of suffrage matters, is secretary of the Union and has already gathered a large following from among the business women. The activities now under way are conducted with a view to perfecting the support and organizing the latent interest in the movement in anticipation of the time when the Legislature will submit to the voters of the state a Constitutional Amendment granting Equal Suffrage.

HOUGHS NECK WOMEN TOOK SCALPS OF EVERETT LADIES IN BOWLING

Fair Sex Showed Great Proficiency and Skill During the Exciting Match

Fore River and City League Games and Copeland Tackled Quincy A. A.

The first real ladies bowling match ever rolled in this city attracted a large gallery to the Coliseum alleys Friday evening when the Houghs Neck Five met and defeated the Everett five. Monday evening the local quintet will go over to Everett the second match will be rolled.

Among those appearing in the line-up of the Houghs Neck five was Mrs. Paul Poehler, wife of the champion. She secured a total of 232. Miss G. MacLellan made the best score of the evening making the high string of 87 and best total of 248.

Most of these bowlers have been following the game but a few years and some show fine possibilities.

In the Fore River league matches the Patternmakers beat the Machine Floor 3 to 1 and the Yard beat the Machinists Gallery 4 to 0. The best string of this league was made by Tirrell who rolled a single of 110 and Smith reached high total of 296.

In a City league match at the City Square alleys the Cranch easily defeated the Telegrams, 4 to 0. The best string was made by Barry= Jepson, a new face in bowling circles made a total of 263 for high place.

An interesting match was rolled between the Copeland Club and the Quincy A. A. The best string of the evening bowling was made in this match by Badger who secured a single of 116. Desmond made 285 for best total. The Quincy A. A. were a little off color, some of the rollers attention being attracted by the girls match on the next alley.

ARTIST RUINED HER LIFE

Claim of Woman Arraigned at Boston on Forgery Charge

Boston, Jan. 25.—Charges made by Mrs. Abbie L. Moulton that her life had been ruined by William F. Terry, whose name appeared on three checks that she was found guilty of uttering a week ago, created a sensation in the police court, where the young woman appeared at a hearing before Judge Bennett on a new forgery charge.

Mrs. Moulton's attorney bitterly arraigned Terry, who, he declared, had brought the girl from her home in Maine to Boston. Last night Terry was placed under arrest on a statutory charge. He was taken to a station house, booked and locked up.

Terry, who is a magazine artist, is married and has two children. He gave his testimony in the case just before Mrs. Moulton made her charge against him.

UTAH'S ELECTORAL BALLOT DEPOSITED

Mrs. Witcher the First Woman to Act as an Elector

Washington, Jan. 25.—Mrs. Margaret Z. Witcher, the first woman to bring an electoral ballot to Washington and the thirty-second electoral messenger to report, presented her credentials and documents to the secretary of the senate and afterwards called at the White House to pay her respects to President Taft. Mrs. Witcher, who is just retiring as county clerk of Salt Lake county after several years' service, was one of the four Taft electors of Utah, the three others being men.

"They were very gallant," said Mrs. Witcher, smilingly, "and unanimously elected me to be the messenger. The time for filing the papers will expire next Monday and Senator Smoot began telegraphing out west for fear I would not get here in time, but he needn't have worried."

INQUIRY IS VOTED DOWN

Mayor of Boston Is Rapped In Debate In the Legislature

Boston, Jan. 25.—The order for a house investigation of the charges made by Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston against certain unnamed Democratic members of the house, in relation to the recent senatorial election, was defeated in the house by 36 to 100.

There was a long debate, however, in which the mayor was scored by many speakers. Representative Gordon of Boston, who presented the order, said every Democratic member is put under a cloud by reason of the article and that the mayor should be forced to indicate what members are meant.

The rejection of the order ends the incident.

PRETTY EVEN FIRST PERIOD

Change of Rules Then Operated Against Quincy Boys

PROUT HAS USUAL LUCK

Quincy High lost to Franklin High in the local gym Friday afternoon 31 to 22. The star of the game was Housman of the visitors who made seven baskets. Difficult shots were made by players from both teams. The game opened with a bang, with Quincy High team expecting that they were due to a severe trimming. Close playing was not much in evidence and the outside rules were observed during the first half.

When the period ended Quincy was leading 18 to 17. Throughout the half the game had alternated, one scoring only to be topped by a man on the other side. This kept an interested small gallery of fans on edge.

In the second half Franklin seemed to take another hold upon themselves By opening up a series of passes which would result in a pretty basket by the forward they easily crept ahead of the Quincy boys.

Sam Prout, who is known as the hard lucker got good breaks Friday, making four baskets. Had he netted all he shot for the score would have been different but Sam Prout is the victim of fate.

"Bull Moose" Brown was at centre and was equal to the occasion. Against a player of wide experience he met him half way in all points of the game and showed that he was a live one for the position.

Andrews, because of an injury received in practising was not in the game. It is thought that a small bone has been fractured in the arm which if so will keep him out for the balance of the season.

During the second half, playing without observing the outside rules, Franklin were able to make a better showing. Quincy men, never having played that way very often stopped short when reaching the side, only to start again when they realized that they were all right.

The schedule has been added to with three dates filled.

Feb. 4 Mansfield will play here and Feb. 11 Quincy will play Rockland on their floor. A return game with Rockland at Quincy will be played March 14.

Jan. 31 is an open date and an effort is being made to secure a dating with a team which will give standard basket ball. The summary:

| FRANKLIN H S | | QUINCY H S |
|---|---|---|
| Cody rf | | lb Jenkins |
| Corbett rf | | |
| O'Connell lf | | rb Larkin |
| Shattuck c | | c Brown |

Score, Franklin H. S. 31, Quincy H. S. 22. Goals from floor, Cody 2. O'Connell, Shattuck 2, Murray 2, Housman 7, Brown 2, S. Prout 4, Safford 4. Goals from fouls, O'Connell 3, Larkin 2. Referee, Gordon. Umpire, Roach. Scorer, Mansur. Timer, Atwood Time, 20 m periods. Attendance, 300.

MAKES SERIOUS CHARGES

Mother Asks That Daughter Be Released From Training School

Pittsburg, Jan. 25.—Making serious charges against W. F. Penn, superintendent of the Morganza training school, Mrs. Barbara Boris of Homestead has filed petition for a writ of habeas corpus for the release of her daughter Barbara, aged 16, from that institution.

Mrs. Boris charges that her daughter is forced to work in unsanitary rooms, that she is beaten on the bare back and fed chemicals which are eating away her vitality.

Death of Composer Luders

QUINCY GETS PART OF MATCH

Ten Strings in Poehler-Christopher Contest

AT COLISEUM ALLEYS

Ten strings of the big bowling match between Paul Poehler and William Christopher, will be pulled off at the Boylston alleys in Boston and the other ten will be roleld at the Coliseum alleys in Quincy. This arrangement was entered into Friday night at a meeting of the principals and their representatives in Boston.

The first ten strings will be rolled at the Boylston alleys and the finish will be made in Quincy. Over 600 people can be accommodated at the Coliseum alleys. The management made a most liberal offer to the contestants, which evidently met with their approval.

It is planned to put in sloping or circus seats so that every one present will have a good view of the alleys.

The alleys are fast, well lighted and capable of producing record speed.

It was in the match with Hintze on those alleys that Poehler made such a remarkable run two weeks ago. The local manager would like to have staged both nights.

Another thing which recommends the Coliseum alleys would be perfect order which would be maintained. The contest between Poehler and Hintze was unique in this respect, while there was little side line coaching and suggesting during this match it was of a character that was not offensive to any one. The same conditions would prevail in the Poehler-Christopher match. Christophere is no mean antogonist and on one realizes this any better than Poehler. If the former maintains his pace and the latter bowls true to his mark in the Hintze match then New England bowlers are in for a rare treat in this sport those two artists meet.

DRANK THE EVIDENCE

Detectives Fail to Carry Case In Alleged "Red Light" Prosecution

Exeter, N. H., Jan. 25.—Detectives in the recent Portsmouth "red light" house-cleaning raids drank up the evidence in the case of Charles Marotta of Portsmouth, and consequently Marotta drew a disagreement from the jury that tried him.

The detectives swore they had purchased liquor after 11 o'clock at Marotta's place, but, unfortunately for the state's case, it was consumed on the premises and not preserved for the consideration of the jury.

Marotta himself explained that the girls who went to the place were lured there solely by their longing for his particular brand of spaghetti and tomato sauce, and that the "beer," which sailors and marines drank from teacups was not beer at all, but something or other which he called "uno."

KILLED WOMAN WHO REJECTED HIS LOVE

Chartier Sentenced For Assault With Dangerous Weapon

Salem, Mass., Jan. 25.—Noe J. Chartier, who shot and killed Amelia Lavelle, a divorcee, at Lawrence, was sentenced to two years and a half in the house of correction for his crime, although he was brought up for trial on a homicide charge.

The prosecution said Chartier met Mrs. Lavelle and became so ardent a suitor that she promised to marry him when she was divorced. Meanwhile she became fickle, met another man whom she loved more and jilted Chartier. Chartier shot her.

District Attorney Attwill told the court he was willing to accept a plea of guilty of assault with a dangerous weapon.

EITHER PEACE OR NEW WAR

Expected to Result From Conference of Railroad Men

DEMANDS OF THE TRAINMEN

President of Bangor and Aroostook Will Be Asked His Intention Toward Them—State Board Begins Probe of Strike Situation—Todd Promises to Get Freights Moving

Bangor, Me., Jan. 25.—At a conference to be held today between President Todd of the Bangor and Aroostook railroad and the officials of the conductors' and trainmen's organizations, peace or the opening of a new struggle may be determined.

Vice President Berry of the conductors and Vice President Murdock of the Brotherhood of Trainmen will ask Todd his intentions toward the demands of the members of these organizations, the time limit on which expires next Monday.

Upon the stand of the road's chief executive will doubtless rest the entrance of a new factor in the railway war now in progress.

They will also probably discuss the strike situation, so far as it affects the trainmen riding with inexperienced engineers. Neither side will discuss probabilities. The only fact standing prominently out is that the trainmen on the Bangor and Aroostook railroad are ready and willing to help the striking engineers and firemen on that road.

Yesterday was a day of many conferences in the rooms of the various brotherhood headquarters. At the Penobscot Exchange hotel the state board of arbitration and conciliation began its examination of the strike situation. President Todd of the road detailed the position the road has taken. Then followed the testimony of the engineers and firemen's leaders.

Todd stated that he expected to move at least half of the freight trains standing on the iron of the road by Sunday night. He said he intended to put the crews of passenger trains on freights Monday and discontinue several of the regular passenger runs. He says there are men enough to man the regular trains and some freights and he will have enough to go around by the middle of the week.

SAID TO HAVE ELOPED

Moscow Beauty Reported to Have Captured Ex-King Manuel's Heart

Vienna, Jan. 25.—A special dispatch from St. Petersburg says former King Manuel of Portugal has run away with a noted Moscow beauty, the daughter of the richest Jew in the city.

This latest love affair of Manuel, who forfeited his crown for the night life of Paris, is said to have begun in Paris. It was a case of fascination at first sight, according to the story, and Manuel followed the girl to Moscow. He is said to nave been seen with her, and their simultaneous disappearance led to the story of an elopement.

KILLED BY HIS WIFE

Noted Doctor Receives Full Contents of Double-Barrelled Shotgun

Lake Providence, La., Jan. 25.—Dr. James F. Booth, owner of the Lake Providence sanitarium, and one of the leading physicians of Louisiana, was shot and killed by his wife. She fired both charges from a double-barrelled shotgun, one striking him in the head and the other in the upper part of the body.

Mrs. Booth was a nurse before her marriage. There had been rumors that she was about to sue for divorce.

AVIATORS FALL TO DEATH

Inventor Nieuport and His Mechanician Are Killed In France

Etampes, France, Jan. 25.—M. Nieuport, one of the best-known aviators in Europe, and his mechanician, were killed during a flight near here when their monoplane crashed to earth.

Their deaths make 242 fatalities since heavier than air machines came into use. M. Nieuport was the inventor of a type of monoplane.

BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. John McDonald of Bigelow street welcomed a son into their family today. Their first born were twin daughters now in their third year.

NO MORE HANGINGS IN GRANITE STATE

Bill Providing For Electrocution Is Signed by Governor

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 25.—Electrocution was substituted for hanging as the official form of capital punishment in Vermont, when Governor Fletcher signed a bill to this effect yesterday afternoon.

The use of the electric chair has been advocated since the execution of Elroy Kent at the Windsor state prison on Jan. 5, 1912. The rope used to hang Kent broke when the trap was sprung and the body fell to the floor.

The prison physician said Kent suffered "no conscious thought" after the trap was sprung, but in order to complete the execution the broken end of the rope was fastened to a balustrade in the rear of the gallows and the body was allowed to swing for many minutes before it was taken down.

ALFONSO MAY VISIT US

We May Look For Him Next Summer If Spanish Politics Permit

London, Jan. 25.—It is stated there is a probability that King Alfonso of Spain will pay a visit to the United States, probably next summer, should the political situation in his kingdom permit of his doing so.

It seems Alfonso has been greatly interested on the subject of a trip to the United States since a visit to that country by his war minister's son, and often has expressed a desire to make a journey there.

☞Maud Ballington Booth delivers her famous lecture "Lights and Shadows of Prison Life" at Music hall Monday evening at eight o'clock.

BRIEFS

James Donovan, formerly of Quincy is greatly improved after a serious operation at St. Elizabeth's hospital, Boston.

Monday will be an off night for the City Council, as the next regular meeting will not occur until Monday evening, Feb. 3.

A meeting of Pride of Quincy Lodge, No. 443, I. O. B. A. will be held Sunday afternoon when Second Deputy Grand Master J. L. Simon, of Salem, will be present.

The C. A. A. Girls, of South Quincy are to meet Sunday afternoon at the home of Miss Anna Lubarsky, on Water street. A social hour will follow the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. John Maloney, Jr., of 964 Hancock street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a little daughter, who arrived Wednesday, Mother and child doing well.

The people of Quincy are very fortunate in being able to have Maud Ballington Booth in their very midst. She is to deliver her famous lecture in Music hall Monday evening, entitled "Lights and Shadows of Prison Life."

A meeting of Court John Adams, F. of A. was held at Dobles hall, Friday night. After the meeting there was a rehearsal of the "Irish Detective," which is to be given by the Court at the drama and dance at Music hall, Friday night.

Several Quincy people are interested in the mass meeting tonight at Tremont Temple, Boston when Miss Chamberlain, the Vassar college graduate who recently exposed the bad conditions in the canning indsutry in New York state, will be the speaker.

The committee having the tickets in charge for the musicale of the Quincy Women's club at Music hall, Monday afternoon, has decided not to open the ticket office until 2.20 thus insuring members and those having guest ticket seats. After 2.30 the tickets will be honored up to the seating capacity of Music hall.

OVER FORTY THOUSAND VOTES WERE CAST TODAY

Surprisingly Large Gains by Messrs. Williams, Hunt, MacKay and Mrs. Marnock

Prize Certificate of 1,000 Votes Goes to Fred Williams

All records were broken in the Washington contest today!

Over forty thousand votes were cast; yes, over 41,000!

All the leaders shared in this tremendous gain!

Fred D. Williams not only maintains his lead, but made the largest gain, adding today just 15,945 votes. This secures for him the prize certificate of the week, and therefore increases his total of Saturday by 16,945 votes, making his grand total today 59,450.

Sturgis H. Hunt made a grand rally adding 10,400 votes, which strengthens his claim to second place, and puts his grand total over the 40,000 mark.

A. R. MacKay was third in gain with 9,095, and continues a formidable candidate for one of the capital prizes—the free Washington trip for two persons, or the brilliant diamond ring. His total is now 32,650.

Mrs. Emma Marnock, the W. R. C. candidate is doing better each week, having added 4,415 today. This carries her total to 21,520.

Mr. Bowditch does not do all his voting on Mondays, in fact he does not make any special effort on that day. His gain today was 500, but his gain for the week was much larger.

Miss Morrissett is still hopeful that she may overtake Mr. Bowditch. Her gain today was 415, and her total is over 6,000.

Letter Carrier Cole added 315 votes today and Mrs. Lamont 300. Others made smaller gains.

Another prize for best gain during the week ending Feb. 3 will be announced tomorrow.

Accompanying 1,000 votes today for Fred D. Wiliams was a poem which will be printed tomorrow.

Remember, the last coupon in the contest will be printed Saturday, Feb. 8, a week from next Saturday.

COUNTRY AND AGE OF BLACK HAND ALREADY FIXED BY TESTS OF EXPERT

Mysterious Visit to the City Vaults at Dead of Night by Officials and Others Interested in the Case

Offender May Yet Have a Chance For Leniency by Coming Forward. Samples of His Handwriting Have Been Compared

The coils are slowly but surely tightening around the perpetrator of the Black hand letters, to Mayor Eugene R. Stone, Ex-Mayor William T. Shea and Mike Shea of the Highway department. There was a mysterious visit of certain officials and investigators in the case to the vaults in the basement of city hall, late Saturday night, to make another examination of the now precious documents.

The papers are kept in a secret drawer and only one person knows their exact location. When the examinations necessary to get a line on them were completed they were returned to this personage who is responsible for them and he put them in their secret hiding place.

So far advanced has the examination of the Expert William E. Hingston, that he is able to tell the nationality of the writer and the period in which he learned to write.

The guilty persons have reason to be apprehensive for the future, as they are now almost as good as known. The handwriting of certain suspects was easily obtainable and thus one link in the chain of evidence was speedily welded. When asked if they had determined from an examination of the Black hand letters and samples of writing under consideration whether they had decided upon the person responsible those in authority have positively declined to answer. They say that every one must wait and they will learn the true facts in the case within a short time.

It may seem rather odd that so much publicity is given with regard to the attitude of the officials at this time, but there is no danger of those under suspicion having a look in in the way of escape. They are closely watched and any move on their part to clear for parts unknown would immediately lead to action being taken to demand their remaining as a guest of the city or county.

The evidence may be presented to the grand jury and a secret indictment procured, or it may be that a simple bench warrant be obtained and have the offenders bound over to the superior court.

At any rate judging from what is heard, there is no escape for the guilty ones. They will be rounded up as sure as fate. The only chance they might have for leniency would be coming forward, and acknowledging their guilt and the purposes for which they engaged in such practice. If it was for a joke, or if they were in earnest they better make their peace with the authorities and in this way they may be able to save themselves and their friends some worry and trouble.

BURGLARS STILL KEEP HAND IN

Evidences of Their Work at Currier's Market

BUT NOTHING MISSING

Granite and Hancock street buildings still continue to be the stamping ground for persons with burglarious intent. Officer McNamara reported to the police station that about one o'clock Sunday morning he found evidences of an attempt to enter a store house in the rear of tht Currier market.

An examination showed that no goods had been taken but that the door had been jimmied and a window forced. He made a close search of the vicinity but discovered no traces of further efforts. He made his tour of the buildings shortly after he went on duty.

HURLED OVER GATES AND KILLED AT THE QUINCY ADAMS CROSSING

Joseph Delase Had Almost Passed to Safety in Front of Approaching Train

Frank Dalli, a Companion Had a Narrow Call at the Same Time

With an inward bound express train in sight, Joseph Dellase, age 22, of 29 Penn street, tried to cross under the gates at Quincy Adams crossing Sunday evening, was struck by the advancing engine and tossed clear over the gates. He landed in a heap on the ground and witnesses hurried to the spot. He died at the Quincy City Hospital at 11.15 o'clock last night.

In company with Frank Dalli, Dellase, started across while the train that goes by Quincy Adams at 6.50 was approaching. Dalli succeeded crossing in safety. Dellase had but one more step to take to escape. Just as he was taking the last step the engine struck him a glancing blow throwing him clear over the gate. He landed in Water street, receiving a fracture of the left arm bone between the elbow and the shoulder and sustained a severe scalp injury and also received internal injuries.

The Police Headquarters ambulance responded to a telephone message and reached the spot before a physician arrived. Dellase was taken to the City Hospital where he was treated by Dr. Nathaniel S. Hunting. He retained consciousness all the way to the hospital. Dellase was unmarried and has a brother in Washington, D. C. He boarded in South Quincy with Angelo Bardini. The body is now at Hall's undertaking rooms.

Frank Dallasarri, or as he is known in English as Dalli, who was with the young man called at the police station and told his story of the fatality. He said both were on their way to Quincy and that the southerly gate was either wholly or nearly all the way down. He said the bell was sounding and that a number of others had crossed safely. He appeared to be suffering from a slight nervous shock and acted as though he took thes udden death of his chum very much to heart. He said the dead man was employed at the Fore River yard.

MISS FURNALD SURPRISED

Presented with Ebony Screen on Return From Hospital

Several friends of Miss M. Lizzie Furnald gave her a surprise party Saturday night at her home on Washington street. She recently returned from the Hospital and is convalescing from an operation. Her friends planned the surprise to show their pleasure because of her recovery since she is able to be with them again.

It was a complete surprise to Miss Furnald but the moment found her equal to the occasion and the surprisers received a cordial welcome. The unexpected came in the presentation of a handsome ebony screen.

An enjoyable evening was passed not the least important feature being the spread prepared by the surprisers.

Wandered Into a Hot House and Could Not Wander Out

PRISONER SOME HOURS

After a search of three hours Saturday the two year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Poffley of Harbor Villa, East Braintree was found imprisoned in a hot house on the Moody estate. Saturday morning while at play with his ten year old brother the boy strayed into the hot house when a gust of wind had blown the door too and the little boy was unable to open it. When the little fellow did not return home a searching party was formed and after a long period his whereabouts was discovered to the great joy of his parents and the relief of the community.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt is to erect a hotel for working girls, with room and board at $3.50 per week. That is a practical way to do good with great wealth and far more to the point, than building libraries and handing out slush about saving the pennies.

A Virginia bride to be, sends a letter to the weather bureau asking for good weather on her wedding day. It would be more to the point if she offered up a few prayers to a Higher power and performed some Christian work in line with the teachings of that Higher power.

Annapolis cadets are to be barred from receiving gifts of sweets. Perhaps they will take the sweets in another form.

Those people who are advocating an aftermath inaugural ball are displaying pretty poor taste. An alleged inaugural ball promoted by some ambitious society dodgers should receive the attention and patronage it deserves.

While dead and buried in the vaults of the Steel trust, Tennessee Coal and Iron still seems to bob up like the ghost that will not be downed.

Boxing is now advocated in the schools. It might be well to ask what hours will be devoted to study if a few more outside lines are introduced in the schools.

Now that it is settled that Quincy is to have a slice of that Poehler-Christopher match, local bowling fans once again breathe easier.

The largest ship afloat is soon to make her maiden trip. May her vayoge be freed from any such terrors as that with which old ocean greeted her predecessor the Titanic.

E. Gerry Brown's only complaint when making a speech is that he must at some time bring it to an end. Gerry was always a pretty long winded talker.

That Worcester member of the legislature who has such an official record is certainly the Pohbah of that section.

Many present ladies will take exceptions to the claim that the new woman is at her best at 60. By that time she has passed the meridian.

Florence, N. J. has suspended boys from schools who use cigarettes. The movement should become more general.

Simmons college girls arm themselves with long hat pins to defend themselves from mashers. A good club wielded by some of the strong arm brigade would be more effective.

The court who was asked by an attorney to turn over a masher to him for a few minutes no doubt felt just like performing the service, but his position prevented an open concession.

A national law with a national board regulating railroads would be more to the point.

According to all accounts that lucky Baldwin fortune which was saved so assiduously is being made ducks and drakes of by the present possessor.

RAILROAD SUPERVISION.

The idea of Gov. Foss for united action on the part of the New England states, with the purpose of solving of the railroad problems in view is worthy of consideration. His aim is to have those states regardless of politics unite in a policy of railroad treatment and supervision, which would prove as effective in one state as another. The selection of state officials on the directorate is among the things advocated. Such a proceeding would undoubtedly prove of material worth, but it could even be carried further. The utter absurdity of different laws and regulations, governing railroads was amply illustrated only a short time ago. Massachusetts laws provide that healthful water and drinking cups shall be maintained on the railroads. In many cities the health authorities within the state were close watchers of the railroad to see that this regulation was observed. In one of the interior cities of the Commonwealth the health officer boarded a train and could not find a drinking water tank or a single cup. Here was a chance where vengenance swift and dire would stir that railroad corporation from one end to the other. The health official approached the brakeman—the conductor not being in sight—and inquired where the water tank and cups were located. Come to find out there were none on the train. "Don't you know,—" started in the indignant official, but he got no further. The smiling brakeman interrupted, "Yes WE know all about your water and drinking cup law, but WE do not operate 26 miles of road in your state."

And the health official realized that there was nothing further for him to do. While that particular road did not operate the legal number of miles within the state lines to compel enforcement of the law, it was a matter of common knowledge that this particular road was under the control of the road which operated hundreds of miles of road within the state.

This is a very good illustration of the poor effects from co-operative action with regard to regulations covering railroads. But at the same time this co-operation need not stop at railroads. The railroads are not the only offenders or rather not the only corporations who take advantage of this lack of co-operation on the part of states. Many concerns, not doing a business to be compared with the railroad in public service, but simply incorporated with the idea of getting something for nothing, profit by this condition.

Instead of having railroads and other corporations regulated by sectional laws, would it not be better to have a common federal law which would embrace all conditions and prevent much that is not good for the people as a whole. Many of the so-called state regulations could be wiped off the books for all the good they do or for all the harm which would result from their complete elimination and a general law which would meet all such emergencies would prove more efficacious.

But in the advocacy of such a measure the railroads should not be picked out as the only ones needing restrictions.

THAW CASE AGAIN.

Mrs. Mary C. Thaw deserves all the honor that is due motherhood in the manner she is fighting for the release of her son. No one can find fault with the spirit which animates this good woman in the contest she is making. But in this as in other cases there is something higher and beyond the claims of motherhood which must be taken into consideration. Gov. Horace Boies of Iowa has written a letter in which he condemns the present restriction of the use of the Habeas Corpus act to one single performance, and further says that Thaw was not sent to the asylum for punishment but for humane purposes, and that the very day he recovers his reason he is entitled to his liberty. Very well put on the part of the governor, but his very argument is shattered by his free use of the word humane. There are other humans beside Thaw who must come into that circle of humane treatment. Providing Thaw is now sane, how long will he remain so? How long will it be before he imagines that he is the accepted righter of some other wrong, and then how about the humane consideration of those who may come within the range of adjustment of things. If Thaw was put away for humane treatment, humane consideration for other people should be weighed in the treatment of his present condition. The tamer of a wild animal may have that animal under marvelous control but at the same time he never relaxes his vigilance realizing that any time it may be the cost of his life.

PRACTICAL USE OF WEALTH

Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt is providing a good example for people of great wealth to follow. She plans to erect a fine hotel for working girls, where the cost will be reasonable and within the reach of all. The girls will be able to secure board and room at $3.50 a week. Here is an illustration of the practical use of wealth which should appeal to others and should be productive of much good. Millions of dollars are given annually to colleges, foundations and other institutions, which in the main are pretty well provided for. Carnegie also has the land dotted with his libraries. All of them very good in their way, but Mrs. Vanderbilt's way is more practical, more liable to fill a long felt want, and no doubt will be the means of performing a great Christian work, beyond that which was originally planned. It will provide a place for girls to live in comfort, with nice rooms, good food and proper care and attention. It will also allow of an intercourse, an interchange of ideas, a meeting, a sociability, which is not found in the little closet like room, so many working girls are forced to accept as their only home in a big city. It is true that Mrs. Vanderbilt is not the first in this movement, but her intentions are good. It points out the way to others at this time, and an investigation will no doubt lead to the knowledge that there is a greater need than the supply provides for just such hotels.

OPPOSE PLAN TO SELL WATER FROM THE BRAINTREE BASIN

Residents in Vicinity Claim Removal of Dam Would Spoil Beauty of Place

Mayor Headed Delegation Who Favored Disposing of Supply

(Special to the Ledger.)

A delegation from Quincy including Mayor Stone, Representatives Leslie and Sullivan, Dock Commissioner Frank Fessenden Crane, City Solicitor McAnarney, Commissioner of Public Works Tupper, President Hamilton and Secretary Hall of the Board of Trade and Henry M. Faxon, H. T. Whitman and Albert L. Whitman attended the public hearing at the State House, Friday, on the matter of allowing the city to sell water from its reservoir in Braintree. The city wants to sell some of the water from the reservoir to certain manufacturing concerns for mechanical purposes only. At present the reservoir is of no practical use and a nominal tax is paid to the town of Braintree for the property. In aid of the petition, it was agreed by those in its favor, that an amendment might be added to it so to provide that if the Metropolitan Water Board deems it necessary at any time to take over the reservoir it might do so without additional legislation.

The supply of water that Quincy gets at present from the Metropolitan system is often insufficient in pressure to fill the needs of the city's fire department.

The manufacturers will pay the cost of piping.

Several residents of the neighborhood objected. They thought the beauty would be marred if the proposed work were to be carried out. John Q. A. Field, of Quincy, opposed on the ground that the water flowing from the pond at present is needed by the brooks which serve as the outlet. He argued that without the water in the brooks, they would become polluted.

MORSE IN GOOD HEALTH

Prepared to Return Home and Plunge Into Financial Affairs

Florence, Italy, Jan. 27.—Charles W. Morse, who was pardoned from the Atlanta federal prison by President Taft, is physically fit to remain in business indefinitely, according to Dr. Marchiafava, physician to Pope Pius X.

Morse said he came to Italy solely to consult the famous specialist, and would return soon to America, to plunge again into financial affairs. Marchiafava came from Rome at the request of Morse and made a thorough examination of the financier.

He pronounced him sound and entirely well, and said he attributed Morse's recovery to his will power, which the physician said was gigantic.

The baby, a boy weighing 10¾ pounds, just within the 11-pound weight limit, is the child of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Beagle, living in Glen Este. The "package" was well wrapped and ready for "mailing" when the carrier got it. Its measurement reached seventy-one inches, also just within the law, which makes seventy-two inches the limit.

Lytle delivered the "parcel" safely to the address on the card attached, that of its grandmother, Mrs. Louis Beagle, who lives about a mile from its home. The postage was 15 cents and the "parcel" was insured for $50.

SEEK REDEMPTION OF WHITE SLAVES

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Explains Purposes of Bureau

EXPERT STUDY OF PROBLEM

George J. Kneeland, Who Directed Chicago Vice Inquiry, and Abraham Flexner, Medical Examiner, Preparing Reports—Social Hygiene Organization's Fight on Social Evil

New York, Jan. 27.—Among the foremost men of the country who have given serious and critical consideration of the social evil with a view toward its humane and scientific abatement is John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Ever since he sat as foreman of the grand jury in New York about two years ago Mr. Rockefeller has been keenly interested in discovering a sensible plan for curtailing the white slave traffic. He was largely instrumental, both financially and personally, in the organization of the bureau of social hygiene, started with the deep and earnest purpose of thoroughly investigating the present conditions of the social evil and of eradicating them in so far as possible. Mr. Rockefeller now makes public the following interesting and important statement as to the origin, work and plans of the bureau:

"The bureau of social hygiene came into existence about two years ago as a result of the work of the special grand jury appointed to investigate the white slave traffic in New York city, which served during the first half of the year 1910. One of the recommendations made by it in the presentment handed up at the termination of its labors was that a public commission be appointed to study the social evil. The foreman of that body subsequently gave careful consideration of the character of the work which might properly be done by such a commission and the limitations under which it would operate.

"So the conviction grew that in order to make a real and lasting improvement in conditions a permanent organization should be created, the continuation of which would not be dependent upon a temporary wave of reform nor upon the life of any man or group of men, but which would go on, generation after generation, continuously making warfare against the forces of evil.

"Therefore, as the initial step, in the winter of 1911 the bureau of social hygiene was formed. Its present members are Miss Katherine Bement Davis, superintendent of New York state reformatory for women at Bedford Hills, N. Y.; Paul M. Warburg of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; Starr J. Murphy of the New York bar and John D. Rockefeller, Jr. As the work develops new members may be added.

"One of the first things undertaken by the bureau was the establishment at Bedford Hills, adjacent to the reformatory, of a laboratory of social hygiene under Miss Davis' direction. In this laboratory it is proposed to study from the physical, mental and moral side each person committed to the reformatory.

"Arrangements were made, therefore, in the early part of last winter to secure the services of George J. Kneeland, who had directed the Chicago vice commission investigation. Since that time Mr. Kneeland, with a corps of assistants, has been making a thorough and comprehensive survey of the conditions of vice in New York city.

"At the same time the bureau was fortunate in securing the services of Abraham Flexner, whose reports on the medical schools in this country and in Europe are so well known, to study the social evil and the various methods of dealing with it in the leading cities of Europe.

"Based upon all of these studies, which will probably be published by December of this year, it is the hope of the bureau that there may be devised a practical plan for dealing with the social evil in New York city, a plan which public opinion can be brought to support."

SPECIES OF THE FEMALE.

Sidney Low.

When the Soul of Man awakened,
when the Woman that God gave Stood revealed as wife and sister, not his chattel or his slave,
Then he formed his own conception of what Woman ought to be,
And he made a Plaster Image, and he told her it was She.

For the Woman as God made her wasn't good enough for Man.
He invented large improvements upon
Nature's cruder plan.
And he washed that image nice and white and set it on the shelf,
Where he kept assorted virtues that he did not want himself.

Man might govern, fight and reason,
to his perfect satisfaction:
Soothed by Woman at the season when his mind was out of action;
Woman, good and kind and clinging,
timid, soft, anaemic, pale,
For the female of the species was an adjunct to the male.

But the Woman as Man made her scarcely suits our modern notions
With her regulated instincts and her neatly trimmed emotions;
We have dropped the weaker vessel
and the tame domestic pet,
And our taste finds something lacking in that saintlike statuette.

So our literary gentlemen have modelled it afresh;
And the tera cotta fairy is a Demon of the Flesh,
Half Mother-Fiend, half Maena; she wolf's tooth and wildcat's nail;
"Armed and engined," fanged and poisoned, for the hunting of the male.

With the morals of the hen coop, with the Jungle's code of law,
With the mercy of the tigress when she rips her quarry raw.
Such the bard's vivacious vision; but the woman who can judge
Knows that much of it is fiction, and a good deal simply fudge.

And Man knows it, Mr. Poet! Knows your singular ideal
Does not bear the least resemblance to the Woman that is real;
For Woman ain't no plaster saint and she ain't no tigress, too,
But an average human being, "most remarkable like you."

DELIGHTFUL SOCIAL EVENT

Pfaffmann Home Thrown Open to Aid a Good Cause

GIRLS' RECREATION ROOM

Some times things anticipated do not come up to expectations but this was not the case at the Russian afternoon on Saturday at the home of Mrs. George Eaton Pfaffmann for it far outran the pleasures of the weeks of anticipation.

For several months Mrs. Pfaffmann has thought something should be done for the young women of Quincy similar to that for men by the local Y. M. C. A. and to get a mucleus to start a fund for this object, the Russian afternoon was planned, Mrs. Pfaffmann being assisted by Mrs. John W. Sanborn of the Education committee and Mrs. Chandler W. Smith of the Philanthropic committee of the Quincy Women's club and a corps of interested ladies.

There were several men in the large gathering of ladies and the spacious house seemed unlimited as guest after guest arrived. In a very happy manner Mr. Pfaffmann welcomed the guests and told of the object of the afternoon, after which the following program was rendered:

Meditation Glazounow
Mrs. Thomas Weston, Jr., of West Newton
Selections from Recollections of Russian Life
Mrs. Aline P. Delano
Pilgrim's Song Tschaikowsky
William P. Thompson
Since First I Met Thee Rubinstein
Mrs. Francis E. Shaw of Brockton
Mazurka Wieniawski
Mrs. Weston
But Lately in Dance I Embraced Her Arensky
Herbert Kearns
Ah! Qui Brula D'Amour with violin obligato Tschaikowsky
Mrs. Shaw Mrs. Weston

A fine musical program was given, every participant receiving and responding to encores. Interest centered in Mrs. Aline P. Delano who gave some of her personal recollections of Russian life. She said she had two countries—the land of her birth, and America her home by adoption.

She was fortunate to remember personally many incidents of an interesting period in Russian history in the sixties. Her charming personality, keen sence of humor, and the personal atmosphere of her talk was most entertaining as she told of her life as a young girl; of the long ride across Russia for her to attend school; of the visit to the large estate of her uncle en route; of the life of the peasants as well as of the people in her own station, even to the details of things to eat and how to prepare them. The journey and mode of travel was all very interesting and also the life at school—the customs of the country.

Mrs. Delano's talk was al' too short. Many now look forward to another glimpse of this interesting country through the memoirs of Russian life soon to be published.

As a fitting close to a most harmonious program; tea was served from Russian samovars, also dainty confections, sandwiches and cake from a beautifully appointed table presided over by Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, president of the Quincy Women's Club, and Mrs. Chandler W. Smith. There was a bevy of beautiful waitresses in Russian costume, among them being Misses Marguerite Davis, Ninon Lacey Gertrude Lacey, Helen King, Gertrude King, Mollie Brown, Beatrice Morrison, Mary Faxon, Elizabeth Ellsworth, Clarice Doble, Mrs. Ralph H. Hall and Mrs. John Leavell.

An after feature much enjoyed was the dancing of the Polish dance Krakowiack in costume by Mlle. Kokoszynaka of Dana hall, which was enthusiastically applauded.

Suffragists Win a Point

Washington, Jan. 27.—The senate committee on public buildings and grounds favorably reported the amendment to the inauguration bill giving the suffragists the use of the public stands near the treasury department on March 3.

CATHOLIC CLUB WHIST PARTY

Mid Winter Event of Organization Proved Successful

The mid-Winter whist party of the Quincy Catholic Club was held in New Colonial hall Saturday afternoon and was one of the most successful ever conducted by the organization.

Souvenirs were awarded to Mrs. M. F. King, Mrs. Rednor P. Coombs, Miss Frances Talbot, Mrs. J. B. Picard, Miss Nellie O'Connell, Miss Julia Ford, Mrs. Maurice Powers and Mrs. D J. Griffin. Dainty refreshments were served after the play.

The affair was in charge of a committee consisting of Mrs. Daniel J. Deasy, chairman; Miss Elizabeth Moynihan, Miss Elizabeth Walsh, Miss Minnie Donovan, Miss Mary Keating, Miss Agnes Deasy, Miss Agnes Crowley, Mrs. J. J. McAnarney, Mrs. Robert E. Foy, Mrs. Thomas Carey, Mrs. Michael E. Cook, Mrs. George H. Norris and Miss Loura Biganess.

The young ladies who assisted the committee were the Misses Anna Dinegan, Lillian McDonald, Helen Brogan, Agnes Reardon, and Annie Heaney.

QUINCY LOOMED PROMINENTLY

In Exceptional Hibernian Installation Exercises

A joint installation of five divisions and four auxiliaries in the presence of National President, Mrs. Ellen Jolly of Providence, R. I. signalized the material development of Weymouth Hibernianism Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Jolly, a native of Weymouth, delivered a stirring address on "Ancient Irish History."

A touching appeal to keep always uppermost the golden qualities of a true Irish heart was made by Rev. Fr. J. J. Chittick of Hyde Park. Other speeches were made by the installing officers.

The suite consisted of County President, Patrick J. Ferguson; State Secretary, Thomas J. Welsh; County Director of the Ladies Auxiliary, Miss Catherine Barry; Financial Secretary, James M. Cantfill of Div. 5; President, James M. O'Dowd of Div. 22, all of Quincy and State Treasurer Dennis J. Slattery.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

Editors of Ledger:

If every man and woman who today opposes the extension of suffrage to women would take the trouble to attend the meeting tonight at Colonial hall and listen to such arguments as the friends ofthis movement may offer, he or she would perhaps have a cleaner perception of the truths involved. It is a good thing for us all, to take off the shelf our prejudices—give them a dusting and hold them up to the windows—perhaps we will find instead of a fragrant rosy affair we have a mal-odorous old root.

In our male suffrage we have all grades of intelligence. Still it is believed that we are really getting some better from year to year. Is it not a safe inference that the addition of women's influence would accilerate the rate of progress?

To night's meeting is free to every one and all will be most cordially welcome. Justice.

COOPERATIVE BANKS FLOURISH

The Massachusetts Co-operative Bank League held its annual meeting and banquet on Saturday at Hotel Brunswich, Boston over 200 delegates being in attendance. It will surprise many to learn that there are 167 of these banks in the state, with 175,000 shareholders; and assets of $75,000,000. While the assets have tripled, the amount held by foreclosure is not half as large as fifteen years ago, not quite $200,000.

The following officers were elected during the afternoon session: President, J. Frank Wellington of the Somerville Co-operative Bank; vice-president, W. G. Hayes; secretary and treasurer, H. W. Pinkham of the Wollaston Bank. Mr. Pinkham is also assistant secretary of the National association.

The speakers at the banquet included Lieut. Gov. Walsh; retiring president, J. Warren Barley; Bank Commissioner Fay. Senator A. L. Thorndike, and Vice-president W. G. Hayes. Music was a feature.

IN SOLID MARBLE CRYPT

Body of John Paul Jones Laid In Its Final Resting Place

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 27.—With simple but impressive ceremonies the body of John Paul Jones, first admiral of the American navy, was placed in its final resting place in the new crypt under the naval academy chapel.

Escorted by a brigade of 700 midshipment, at whose head was the naval academy band playing a dirge, the casket was transported from Bancroft hall to the chapel on a car drawn by a squad of bluejackets. It was then carried into the crypt, lowered into a receptacle chiselled out of solid marble, and a heavy marble lid placed over it. Afterward memorial services were held in the chapel.

The body of the famous sea fighter had lain in the rotunda of Bancroft hall since it was brought to this country from France several years ago.

VICAR IS SHOCKED

Discovers Bishop Smokes a Pipe and Makes Public Protest

London, Jan. 27.—The discovery that Dr. Carr Glyn, bishop of Peterborough, uses a pipe, disgusted the vicar of Brigstock, one of his clergy, so much that the latter has written to the press making public protest.

The bishop recently took tea with some of his flock, and the vicar felt himself called upon to give him "some wholesome advice against the pernicious habit" of tea-drinking. The bishop calmly produced a tobacco pouch and pipe and started smoking.

The vicar, in his letter to the press, declares no smoker is fit to minister to any congregation. The bishop formerly was honorary chaplain to Queen Victoria. He has so far not troubled to reply to this letter, but continues to smoke.

FREIGHT IS MOVING ON AROOSTOOK ROAD

Trainmen Await Answer to Demands For Higher Wages

Bangor, Me., Jan. 27.—A considable movement of shipments of potatoes and other freight on the Bangor and Aroostook railroad is reported.

A delegation from the local unions of the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen will wait upon President Todd of the road today for a final answer to their demands for an increase in pay.

Todd has announced that the road could not afford to grant such an increase at the present time. Other railroad officials say Todd has not changed his mind on this matter, and that his answer to the demands undoubtedly will be a refusal.

In that event the local unions will meet, receive the report of their delegations, and then decide what further action they shall take.

PICKETS AROUND CHURCH

Members of Striking Choir Keep Many People From Attending Services

Trenton, Jan. 27. — Eighteen Princeton students brought here yesterday in the capacity of strikebreakers sang at the morning and evening services of St. Michael's Episcopal church in place of the members of the regular choir, who had struck because, they declared, the rector was interfering with them and their organist. The organist also had walked out with his singers, and a substitute had to be engaged.

The strikers emulated their brethren in labor disputes by picketing on the outside of the church, and as a result of their talk with intended worshippers, many of the latter did not attend the services.

SLAVE FOR EIGHT YEARS

Girl Says She Was Sold by Orphanage Head to Gypsy For $8000

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 27.—Startling charges that she was sold when 7 years of age by an orphanage superintendent to a gypsy for $8000 and that for eight years she has served him as a slave were made to the police and humane officers by Alice Mitchell, 15 years old.

She declares she has since been compelled to pose as a fortune teller and dancing and singing girl, giving her earnings to the man and suffering frequent beatings.

Conditions Improving In Mexico

Washington, Jan. 27. — Consul Letcher, at Chihuahua, Mex., reports that peace negotiations between federals and rebels are progressing favorably. Conditions are more tranquil in northern and central Mexico.

Mrs. Patrick Seriously Ill

St. Louis, Jan. 27.—Mrs. Albert T. Patrick, wife of the noted former Sing Sing prisoner, has been ill of valvular heart disease for several weeks and her condition is reported as serious.

Quake Shakes Constantinople

Constantinople, Jan. 27.—Severe earthquake shocks were felt here. Buildings were shaken, walls fell and superstitious Moslems regarded this as a sign from heaven.

IN NEW YORK.

New Colors Popular—Nellrose named for Miss Wilson—Frocks and Furbelows.

A new note has been introduced into New York's social scale this winter, when "Daughters of The White House" have been present in unprecedented numbers at most of the smart festivities. Miss Cleveland, tall and fair seems likely to rival her mother's popularity. Miss Taft the reigning "Daughter," Miss Ethel Roosevelt and the three daughters of the President-elect have all added to the attraction of the season's gaieties, and, as if in celebration of this galaxy, half the girls one sees are garbed in "Nellrose" or have a dash of it somewhere in their costumes. The true Nellrose is exactly the shade of the outer petals of the American of the American Beauty rose and the name was given in honor of Miss Eleanor Wilson, daughter of the coming head of the nation. As the tone is universally becoming the smart shops find it difficult to supply the demand for the correct shade, which is what everyone wants.

DEBUTANTES.

Debutantes are, of course very much to the fore and for their youthful gowns accordeon plaited skirts with puffy overhanging draperies are especially smart. Sashes of all sorts are immensely popular, and it is wonderful how many variations are possible in their arrangement. One of the newest ideas is to tie the bow just at the left of the front in small loops, and catch the ends under the drapery of the skirt below the knee. Another novel way is to use the sash as a panel from the line of the shoulders to nearly the foot of the skirt, in the "watteau pleat" style that older women will recall. Ribbon six to nine inches wide is used doubled, so that there are two ends on the skirt. A dress in plain tone will have this sash-panel in flowered ribbon, or if the dress is figured the sash is plain.

THE TOUCH OF FUR.

A touch of fur is the mark of style on any costume from gauzy evening dress to trig street get-up. On the latter a wide band of fur at the foot is especially smart. This matches the other furs worn usually, but not always for a melange of fur is not objectionable, is indeed rather chic than otherwise, and New York women are not a whit behind Parisians in their desire for as many varieties of fur sets and coats as their purses will permit. Just now when all the smartest shops are showing wonderful bargains in imported models one can get furs that sold at prohibitive figures for quite moderate sums and nothing pays better as a dress investment. At C. C. Shayne & Co. the other day I saw fox and mink sets which are always standard at prices that would have been astonishingly low before Christmas , and it was evident that I was not the only buyer so impressed.

ROBESPIERRE BUNCHES.

I don't recall whether Robespierre was a grind or not, but certainly his name has been worked to death this winter whether or not the things so named had or had not, any relation to him or his decade. The little Robespierre nosegays put up in miniature bandboxes, that were such popular Christmas favors, are being worn on everything. Nestled in fur, pinned on sashes, opera bags, hats, and in fact anywhere that fancy suggests these perky, frankly artificial flowers defy heat or cold in a way to make their natural prototypes green with envy.

SLASHES AND SLASHES.

Now that Frenech models have been modified to show only a dainty foot and ankle, slashed skirts are increasingly worn, and are especially pretty for girlish dancing frocks. Where preferred contrasting materials are introduced in hollow pleats under the slashes, showing only with the motion of the wearer. Slashes in sleeve and doublet introducing similiar contrasts are prevalent as in the time of Good Queen Bess. In fact contrast both of color and material is a dominant note on all sides.

Men's Furnishings

IT is a self-evident truth that the thoroughly well-dressed man is never conspicuous in his appearance. Your attention is attracted by the absence of jar—which on closer analysis, proves to be correctness of detail. The faultless style and perfect harmonizing of the minor accessories of dress contribute quite as much to the general effect as does the suit itself. They give the finishing touches. It is a great help to have such a fine Men's Furnishing Store as this to fall back upon with its carefully selected stocks of whatever a man needs from Shirts and Scarfs to Suspenders and Collars.

You owe it to yourself to investigate.

USE OF "TURKISH" WORDS.

Ottomans Themselves Don't Know the Meaning of Them.

"Sublime porte" is one of those European expressions for Turkish institutions which are never used by the Turks themselves. The Ottoman government's official title for itself is Hukyumet-i-seniye, the glorious government.

Turks do not speak of "the sultan," but of the "padishah," a Persian term meaning the father of monarchs.

Turkey is a geographical expression used outside the land it denotes, but unknown to those who dwell in it. The Turks talk of Roumelia Anadol. The foreign residents may speak of Anatolia, Albania or the Lebanon. They will tell you they live at Smyrna, Saloniki or Beirut or elsewhere, but the word Turkey never crosses their lips. In the realm itself there is no collective name for the territory of the sultan.

Albania, Bulgaria and Roumania, although contiguous to one another, speak three totally different languages. The Bulgarian tongue is that of ancient Russia, and Roumanian resembles that of ancient Rome more closely than modern Italian does. Albanian has no marked affinity with any other language, though philologists have discovered in it some slight traces of Basque and Hungarian influence.—New York Sun.

M'GINNIS IS PAROLED

Convict Proves Himself Wizard In Solving Numerical Equations

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 27.—Michael A, McGinnis, whose bewildering achievements in the field of mathematics have attracted widespread attention among educators, has been paroled from the Missouri penitentiary by Governor Hadley. McGinnis was serving a ten-year sentence for forgery. Drink led him to prison.

McGinnis declares he has found the exact ratio of the diameter of a circle to its circumference, the long-sought formula for "squaring a circle." He says he has discovered the exact root of all numbers and that imperfect squares will be no more.

JOSEPH CHOATE IS 81

Celebrates Birthday by Giving Check For $1000 to Favorite Charity

New York, Jan. 27.—Joseph R. Choate, former ambassador to Great Britain, celebrated his 81st birthday by a gift of $1000 to a favorite charity. He is an honorary vice president of the Legal Aid society, which began the year facing a possible deficit. The following letter from him to Arthur von Briesen, president of the society, was given out.

"I see by the morning papers that your society needs $10,000, and to celebrate my 81st birthday, I am glad to enclose my check for $1000 toward that, and hope you will find nine more to do the same."

Salary of Professor Taft

New Haven, Jan. 27.—The salary at Yale for President William H. Taft as Kent professor of law, with other duties annexed, will be $5000, which is the maximum now paid to the upper grade of full professors.

Skater Gets World's Record

Christiania, Jan. 27.—A new world's record was established in the international skating competitions by Oscar Mathiesen, the Norwegian champion, who won the 10,000 metres in 17 minutes 36 3-10 seconds.

FATAL BLOW ON HEAD

Lynn Man Killed In Domestic Quarrel and Wife Is Held

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 27.—William Power, 65 years of age, who lived at 977 Western avenue, West Lynn, was killed in his bedroom yesterday by a blow on the head, and the police are holding his wife, Elizabeth, on a charge of murder.

Mrs. Power declared her husband had been drinking and threatened to stab her Saturday night. She stated she had been badly abused during her twelve years of married life.

She claimed that yesterday he threw a pail of dirty water at her and then advanced toward her in a threatening manner. After that, she says, she cannot recall just what happened, but states that she must have delivered the blow that ended his life. She is 42 years of age and has six children.

SISTERS BURN TO DEATH

Coals Ignite Clothing of One and Other Tries to Save Her

Hingham, Mass. Jan. 27—Miss Lizzie Caryl, 83 years old, of this town, was burned to death in her home, and her sister, Mary Caryl, aged 81, died a few hours later from burns she received in a brave attempt to save the other.

Coals from a stove in the sleeping room dropped on the clothing of Lizzie Caryl and she was enveloped in flame. Her sister rushed to her aid and her clothing also was ignited. Their shrieks attracted the attention of neighbors, who ran to the house and found both the women literally clothed in fire. With rugs and shawls they managed to quench the flames, but not before both had been fatally burned.

EXTERMINATION OF CATS IN BERKELEY

California Town Won't Allow Felines Within Its Borders

Berkeley, Cal., Jan. 27.—War to the death on all cats was declared here by the police department in the interest of public health. A theory that cats are responsible for spreading smallpox caused the campaign against them.

The order has gone out that if it is possible to rid a town of cats, Berkeley shall be the first catless town in the country.

Policemen armed with small rifles are shooting cats on sight without regard to pedigree or ownership.

OFFER OF $1,000,000

Banker Willing to Pay That Sum For Cure of Tuberculosis

New York, Jan. 27.—Declaring he will pay $1,000,000 for a tuberculosis treatment that will cure ninety-five out of a hundred patients, Charles E. Finlay, president of the Aetna National bank, proposes to hire a sanitarium in New York and have Dr. F. F. Friedmann of Berlin come here to treat 100 tubercular cases free of charge. This test will cost $40,000.

The first of the patients will be his son-in-law, Rex L. Paris, a Princeton athlete of the class of 1908, who married his daughter, Neva E. Finlay, and subsequently developed tuberculosis.

Finlay says his interest in the cure had its origin in his consideration for his son-in-law.

BRIEFS

An entertainment for members and friends was held Sunday night in the room of the Y. M. H. A.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Rapraport entertained friends Sunday night at their home on Newcomb street.

Friends of W. N. Spencer will be glad to know that he has recovered to the extent of being able to get about on crutches.

Henry F. Prario, a former resident of South Quincy has recently been elected superintendent of the First Baptist church in Lexington.

Miss Beatrice Rothwell, teacher at the Adams school and Miss Mary McConnel, last week visited Miss Lucy Mitchel who is teaching in Newton.

Miss Lillian Deacon who was taken to the hospital with an attack of appendicitis a few weeks ago is convalescing at her home on Franklin street.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Christensen of 312 Quincy avenue are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a young son. The little stranger arrived Sunday. Mother and child are doing well.

T. Archie Levangie of this city was one of a considerable party entertained last week Wednesday afternoon at Battle Creek, Mich., by the Postum Cereal Co., on a tour of inspection through its factories. The art collection of C. W. Post was an attractive feature of the visit, the collection including many notable paintings, statues and rare relics.

TESTED AND PROVEN

There is a Heap of Solace in Being Able to Depend Upon a Well-Earned Reputation.

For months Ledger readers have seen the constant expression of praise for Doan's Kidney Pills, and read about the good work they have done in this locality. What other remedy ever produced such convincing proof of merit?

J. Fortin, 512 N. Montello St., Brockton, Mass., says: "I was troubled for over two years by attacks of backache. If I arose from a sitting position or stood any length of time, I was caused great pain. There was a feeling of weariness and if I did a hard day's work, I was bothered by lameness and soreness across my back. I finally saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised for such complaints and I got a box and began to use them according to directions. They went directly to the seat of my complaint, relieving me of severe backaches and restoring me to good health. It has given me pleasure to recommend this remedy on several occasions." (Statement given June 13, 1905.)

A SECOND STATEMENT.

GOVERNORS OF NEW ENGLAND

Plan to Solve the Railroad Transportation Problem

COMMISSION OF TWELVE MEN

Two Experts From Each State May Submit Recommendations In Time For Their Consideration by Legislatures Now In Session—No Salaries, but Expenses Will Be Paid

Boston, Jan. 27.—At the end of a conference in this city lasting nearly five hours the five New England governors present agreed upon the appointment of an unpaid commission, to be made up of two citizens from each state, to make an inquiry into whole subject of railroad development and operation in the New England states.

No expression was taken as to the attitude of the governors on any matter of railroad policy. They went no further than to agree to get all the information possible and to suggest topics for specific study. The result of the investigation will be transmitted to each of the governors for the information of himself and of the legislature of his state.

Governor Foss' suggestion for the creation of a permanent commission to be composed of the chairmen of the commissions that regulate transportation in each state and for state appointed directors of the railroads were included among the topics to be inquired into.

While the conference confined its discussion to matters affecting New England as a whole, the situation in Boston was held to be of vital importance in the solution of the railroad problem. The abolition of the Boston Railroad Holding company, connection of the New Haven and Boston and Maine by tunnel or belt line and the electrification of the terminals in this city were among the subjects specially mentioned for study.

The governors were agreed that there should be an early report, and they expect the recommendations may be made in time for their consideration by the legislatures now in session. To accomplish this it is proposed to appoint as members of the conference men who are familiar with the transportation situation.

The only absentee from the conference was Governor Haines of Maine, who sent his regrets that, owing to illness, he was unable to attend. Governor Baldwin of Connecticut, by reason of seniority, was invited to preside. The conference opened with a lunch, served in room 130 at The Touraine. No one was present except the five governors while railroad matters were discussed.

Following is the vote passed by the conference:

"Voted, that the governor of each New England state be requested to appoint two citizens of his state as members of a New England railroad conference to consider and report on the best modes of developing and operating the New England railroad system; the members of said conference to serve without compensation, but their necessary expenses to be paid by the state appointing them."

A copy of these resolutions was telegraphed to Haines for his consideration.

Home Rule Approved by Lodge

Washington, Jan. 27.—Senator Lodge has put the stamp of his approval on home rule for Ireland. His declaration was in response to a letter from Patrick Ford, editor of the Irish World of New York.

EVERYBODY SATISFIED

At the Plans to Dredge Basin at Houghs Neck

MARKED UNITY OF ACTION

(Special to the Ledger.)

No one opposed the Houghs Neck dredging bill, given a hearing before the committee on Metropolitan Affairs at the State House, Friday.

Representative Leslie explained the object of the bill to be a purely business proposition. The water provided for the accommodation of the steamboat company, the yacht club and the numerous landings, he said, is not at all deep enough to meet the present needs. The appropriation of $10,000 to cover expenses of the work is not to come out of the State Appropriation Fund of $9,000,000 which the Port Directors are guarding so zealously, but rather from the old fund known as the Commonwealth Flats fund which is now available for use by the Port Directors.

Frank Fessenden Crane produced a map showing the proposed work at the Neck. He told the committee that Hough's Neck has a summer population of 20,000 and that is augmented by 2000 more on Saturdays and by 5000 more on Sundays throughout the summer. Most of these people travel too and from Houghs Neck via the electric cars whose facilities for handling the immense throngs are not any too good. To help the steamboat company would alleviate the conditions to a great extent. The steamboat company dredged the channel some years ago but it has filled in again, he said, and since the State had never spent any money down here, he thought it a fair proposal to ask that it do so now.

Fred Tupper, Commissioner of Public Works, urged the especial need of the public basin. He pointed out that small craft have great difficulty in avoiding the steamboats and are often in danger and always inconvenienced. This was corroborated by Mayor Stone, who told the committee of an experience he had last summer where in avoiding the steamboat he was thrown upon the flats and obliged to remain that way for several hours. This could have easily been avoided if the basin had been built.. The Mayor called the attention of the committee that the city has spent a goodly amount of money in erecting and maintaining a public landing at Houghs Neck and also had erected a sea wall for the protection of the yachtsmen, of whom there are some 200 who use the bay during the summer months. The bill is a business proposition for Quincy and urged favorable action on the part of the committee.

Representative Leslie invited the committee to take a trip down to Houghs Neck and inspect the scene of the proposed work. Recorded in favor of the bill besides the speakers, were Henry M. Faxon, John L. Hamilton, prsident of the Board of Trade and John O. Hall, secretary of the board, Ex-Rep. Walter E. Piper, Rep. Michael T. Sullivan and about 20 others who stood up when the question was asked if there were others favorable. The committee took the matter under advisement.

A Stirring Story of Military Adventure and of a Strange Wartime Wooing

Copyright, 1912, by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Thornton escapes, captures Lieutenant Bedloe and takes from him Mrs. Haverill's miniature.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

On the morning of Dec. 13, having brought his army across the Rappahannock on pontoons directly in Lee's front, Burnside opened attack with misdirected valor upon an impregnable position, strong by nature and made doubly so by impeccable military art. A dense fog overhung the river, town and plain until after 9 o'clock, when the sunlight burst through, revealing in terrible splendor the spectacle of 100,000 men in line of battle, their bristling bayonets gleaming through the mist, while the roar of 300 cannon shook the earth and sent red meteors flashing along the sky.

"It is well that war is so dreadful," said General Lee as he looked upon the unparalleled pageant from his position on Telegraph hill, "else we should become too fond of it."

On came the lines of blue, the golden harp flag of Meagher's Irish brigade in the van, charging across an artillery swept plain in heroic but futile attempts to scale the Marye Heights, until the field as far as eye could reach was covered with Union dead and wounded, among which the survivors ran to and fro, their ranks decimated by the most withering fire that ever brave troops charged upon undaunted.

In vain, alas! Again had Lee and Jackson, Stuart and Longstreet fought a defensive battle to the finish and won with absolute ease at comparatively little cost. Burnside recrossed the Rappahannock at night under cloak of a violent storm, with a loss of more than 12,000 of the superb soldiers of the Army of the Potomac.

The spring of 1863 approached with brighter prospects for the Army of Northern Virginia than those which had confronted it a year previously. The victories of Cold Harbor, Cedar Run, the second Manassas and Fredericksburg had inspired new enthusiasm. In Virginia two years of hard struggle had passed, and still the Federal armies held no ground below the Rappahannock.

The Confederates lay intrenched along the southern banks of that river, their long lines of pickets on the qui vive to give warning that any attempt to cross would be met as Burnside's had been in December. Meanwhile Burnside had been replaced in the command of the Union forces by General Joseph Hooker, sometimes called "Fighting Joe."

Hooker's well conceived plan for the spring campaign was to flank the Confederate left with four of his seven army corps at Chancellorsville, some eight or ten miles up the Rappahannock west of Fredericksburg, while the remaining three corps crossed the river in Lee's front, a la Burnside, at Fredericksburg, and Stoneman's cavalry made a wide detour around the southern left and rear, throwing 10,000 sabers between Lee and Richmond, cutting his communications, stopping his supplies, and being in a position to obstruct the Confederate retreat while Hooker administered the coup de grace.

"Don't stop him," said Lee to Jackson. "When the enemy is busy making a blunder, he must not under any circumstances be interrupted."

They readily perceived that with Hooker at Chancellorsville and Sedgwick three miles below Fredericksburg the two wings of the great Federal army would be thirteen miles apart, with Lee's army directly between them.

On May 1 Hooker, having crossed to the south of the Rappahannock, started to lurl his army of four divisions on the enemy's flank, but Lee was too quick for him, and after a sharp encounter at Tabernacle church, halfway between Chancellorsville and Fredericksburg, Hooker was forced back into the woods, there to adopt the defensive tactics that were to lead to his destruction. For then and there the Confederates conceived the bold idea of turning the tables upon him by flanking his right. Jackson was to march with nearly 30,000 troops along the entire front of the enemy, and in close proximity to their lines, without being discovered—to make his way by unfrequented roads and through dense thickets to their flank and rear, there to attack the force of General Hooker, three times outnumbering his own.

General Lee meanwhile was to hold Hooker's front with only 14,000 men.

General A. E. Burnside.

Such was the bold strategy of the Confederates at Chancellorsville.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon Jackson's van had safely reached the plank road three miles to the west of Chancellorsville. The march had been observed by the Federals, but owing to the roundabout direction it had purposely taken they supposed it was a retreat, not an advance.

Toward 6 o'clock in the evening all was in readiness, and Jackson ordered his advance. Like an avalanche the Confederate rush descended upon the Union line, driving everything before it, capturing cannon before they could be reversed to fire, rolling up whole divisions and hurling them back upon the enemy's center until the Wilderness was an inferno of smoke and flame, of roaring guns and trees crashing down, riderless horses and men without arms running about frantically; mules carrying ammunition that exploded as they fled; guns, caissons, forges, ambulances and wagons tumbled in a mad, terrified scramble as it became apparent that the brilliant tactics of Lee and the dashing execution of Jackson had succeeded and Hooker's right had been irresistibly forced back upon his center.

"If only I had another hour of daylight!" cried Jackson. He would have completed his work by surrounding the enemy's army in the tangled woods and cutting off its retreat to the fords of the Rappahannock. As it was, the Federals finally checked their flying columns and made a stand at Chancellorsville, where they were pouring an appalling artillery fire of double canister up the line of the plank road. Darkness or no darkness, flight or resistance, the fury of battle was unchained in Jackson's soul, and his cry was still "Press on!"

"General," one of his staff finally said as they moved cautiously down the shadowed road toward Chancellorsville, "don't you think this is a pretty exposed place for you?"

"No," he replied quickly. "The danger is over, and we must follow up the enemy. Go back and tell A. P. Hill to press right on!"

After this no one presumed to offer further remonstrance, and they rode on in silence, peering uneasily through the half darkness, until suddenly a volley of firing ahead seemed to indicate that they had run upon a Federal skirmish line. The general turned his horse, but unfortunately went off the route and toward the front of some of his own troops who were lying on their arms and who had no idea that their commander had passed beyond the lines.

They fired upon the party, killing one engineer officer and wounding two or three of the signalmen. Jackson turned about and recrossed the road to enter his lines at another point when another company of Confederates belonging to Pender's North Carolina brigade delivered a volley at short range in the confusion and darkness.

Jackson's horse bolted, a limb of a tree struck the rider in the face, and he reeled in his saddle. Bob Ellingham rushed forward and caught the bridle rein, while Captain Wilbourn helped the general to dismount. His left arm hung limp, and the officers removed his gauntlets, which were filled with the blood streaming from three wounds which he had received simultaneously. General Hill rode up at this moment and asked Jackson if he was seriously hurt.

"I think my arm is broken," was the feeble reply. "I wish you would get me a surgeon."

An ambulance took him to the rear. At the field hospital at Wilderness Tav-

"General Jackson moved cautiously down the shadowed road."

Early the next morning a note came from General Lee at the front saying:

"I cannot express my regret at the occurrence. Could I have directed events I should have chosen to be disabled in your stead. I congratulate you upon the victory which is due to your energy and skill."

"General Lee should give the praise to God," said Jackson, fervently happy at the receipt of this message.

It still remained for General Lee to complete the victory which Jackson had begun, and he did so in a series of operations which occupied two strenuous days and involved risks fully as great as "Stonewall" had taken in his great flanking movement.

General Jackson meanwhile had been removed to the Chandler house, near Guinea Station, on the railroad from Fredericksburg to Richmond. Here his wife and child joined him, and he was not only comforted, but seemed to share with those about him the hope of recovery. Then came a change for the worse and pleuro pneumonia developed. His last words were:

"Let us cross over the river and rest under the shade of the trees."

ABE GOLDMAN'S MISTAKE

Costs Him $100 to Borrow Irish Name In a Chicago Court

Chicago, Jan. 27.—It cost Abe Goldman a $100 fine to borrow the name of "Mike Hogan" in Desplaines street court. Judge Mahoney was astonished when Goldman responded to the name "Mike Hogan."

"Mike Hogan!" thundered the court. "How did you ever come to take that name?"

"Because, your honor, it is a good name," replied the culprit.

"It's an outrage," replied the court. "Stealing Irish names is one crime I intend to abolish. You are fined $100 for contempt of court. Call the next case."

DRAFTING A NOTE TO TURKS

Arguments as to Why Adrianople and Ægean Islands Should Be Surrendered Are Repeated—Envoys Favoring Temporizing Policy Triumph Over Those Advocating War

London, Jan. 27.—The Balkan plenipotentiaries, who have received full power from their respective governments, appointed a committee to draft a note to the Turkish plenipotentiaries explaining why the peace conference must now be broken off.

The action of the allies is part of a series of well-considered forms of pressure with which the Balkan delegates hope to obtain their object without resuming the war.

The meeting Sunday lasted for an hour and a half, and the course to be followed was given earnest consideration. Two distinct views were manifested—one for the immediate rupture of the negotiations, leading to a resumption of the war, and the other favoring a temporizing policy, in order to avoid irrevocable steps. The latter course triumphed and a committee was appointed consisting of one member from each delegation, as follows:

Michael Madjaroff, Bulgarian minister at London; Professor Georgios Streit, Greek minister to Austria-Hungary; Count Voynovitch, chief of King Nicholas' cabinet, representing Montenegro, and Dr. M. R. Vesnitch, Servian minister to France, with the addition of M. Politis of the Greek delegation, owing to his knowledge of French and his thorough acquaintance with international law.

General lines were laid down on which the note is to be drafted, comprising the arguments already set forth many times as to why the league demands the surrender of Adrianople and the Ægean islands as an indispensable condition to the conclusion of peace.

That the policy of the allies is to gain time is patent, and does not deceive anybody. The delegates decided that the advantage to be derived from the resumption of hostilities would be in proportion to the risks they ran, and that they would not take that step unless absolutely forced to do so. It is realized that even a partial reverse would have grave moral and material consequences, apart from the loss of thousands of men.

In addition, the fact is not overlooked that there is danger of Roumania advancing from the rear and of Austria imposing on Servia and Montenegro her conditions for remaining neutral.

The only disadvantage in delaying decisive action is in keeping large armies inactive and on a war footing for a long time, thus heavily taxing both the financial and agricultural resources of the countries.

HOME LIFE HAD MORE CHARMS

For Walter Lonergan than the Base Ball Glory

SETTLED IN POST OFFICE

Walter Lonergan, the former Red Sox player, will not be in the game this season. A position at the Boston Post Office with evenings at home are more appealing to Walter than a successful baseball career.

Lonergan, after playing amateur ball, appearing with the Quincys in the Old Colony league broke into semi professional ball. Spending a couple seasons here, he gained the approbation of fans where ever he played. The next time he appeared in the limelight was when he was signed up by Manager Flanagan for Brockton. He and Olaf Henrickson were placed in New England ball at the same time.

During 1911 he played with Jersey city and was drafted by Lowell. While playing there he received an injury to his back and was out of the game the last month of the season. With the Red Sox he displayed a fine knowledge and ability and was on the road to diamond honors. His many friends regret that he is retiring.

BRIEFS

One of the largest contracting firms in Boston has this week secured an option on quite a large tract of land on Quincy Town river, consisting of upland and beach and running to the channel.

Mr. William T. Donnely of New York, the consultating engineer of the Grand Trunk Pacific R. R. and his daughter Gladys were the guests of Water Front Commissioner, Frank F. Crane for the week-end.

Mendelssohn's Hymn of Praise will be sung by the members of the Quincy choral society tomorrow evening. The society will be assisted by Mrs. Marie Sundelius, soprano, Benjamin E. Berry, tenor, Carl Webster, 'cello, and the Boston festival orchestra.

BRILLIANT LECTURER.

After 18 months of investigation of conditions in the factories of New York state, 32 bills are to be recommended for passage by the legislature of that state. One of the most important is that limiting women's work in canning factories to 60 hours a week with an increase to 65 hours between June 25 and Aug. 5, the busy season, at the discretion of the industrial board.

Women have been active in this work to better conditions under which women labor in New York, one of the most active being a Vassar college graduate, Miss Chamberlain, who spoke at Tremont Temple, Boston, Saturday night at the Equal Suffrage mass meeting. Rev. Anna H. Shaw one of the other speakers who was received with much enthusiasm, is to be in Quincy tonight and speak at Colonial hall. Dr. Shaw is one of the best lecturers on the paltform today and her visit to our city promises to be a notable one.

RELATIONSHIP CUT NO FIGURE

With Officer Olson When It Came to Doing His Duty

ARRESTED NEPHEW SATURDAY

Ralph Olson, a young West Quincy lad learned Saturday night that just because his uncle happened to be a police officer he could not make a nuisance of himself and get by. It was about midnight when the young man came out of a City Square restaurant and was making a nuisance of himself. Officer Charles Olson, who happened to be an uncle of the boy came along and giving him a shove told him to get along home. Young Olson walked along as far as City Hall when he turned and begun to abuse the officer by calling him some hard names. Officer Olson then grabbed his nephew and placed him under arrest for creating a disturbance. This morning in court he entered a plea of nolo contendre and was fined $10. The sentence was then suspended to give him time to raise the amount in the mean time he is in the care of the Probation Officer.

MESSENGERS TO CELEBRATE

City Mesenger Harry W. Tirell, vice president of the Massachusetts City Messengers' club and Ezekiel C. Sargent, City Engineer attended the fiftieth semi-annual dinner of the City Messengers' club at the Revere house Saturday afternoon. It was voted that the silver anniversary of the club should be celebrated in Quincy Saturday June 28. Plans for this celebration are not as yet complete but it is planned that a shore dinner at Norteman's, Houghs Neck will be one of the attractions of the afternoon.

DELEGATE TO CONVENTION.

Past Grand Knight Edward Darcy Barrett of Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus, was chosen as a delegate from the Bishop Cheverous Fourth Degree Assembly to the district convention at Faneuil Hall on Washington's birthday. The assembly comprises 1300 fourth degree knights and one delegate is chosen for each hundred. Mr. Barrett is one of the local councils popular members.

DISTRICT COURT.

Antonio Perry of Holbrook was arraigned for alleged neglecting to send his minor children to school. Case continued until the close of the present school term.

James Sullivan of Quincy and Lawrence Sullivan of Weymouth were fined $5 each for drunkenness.

James E. Holbrook was fined $5 costs for neglecting to have his automobile lights lighted at Quincy.

The liquors seized from Filomena Jeff at Weymouth were ordered forfeitted.

Joseph A. Sherman was fined $25 for disturbing the peace at Weymouth.

John Cullen was fined $15 for drunkenness at Quincy.

STRUCK BY AUTO KNOCKED DOWN

John MacGibon Rushing For Train Has Narrow Escape

INJURIES ONLY SLIGHT

John MacGibon of 88 Turner street Houghs Neck was struck by the automobile of George E. Williams of Middle street, Braintree, in City Square shortly after 8 o'clock this morning but fortunately escaped without serious injury. MacGibon had just alighted from a Houghs Neck car and started across the Square toward Saville street, intending to take the train for Boston. Just at that time the car started toward Saville street and MacGibon in trying to dodge the car got in front of Mr. Williams automobile which was going toward Boston.

The automobiles truck MacGibon a glancing blow throwing him to one side so that the wheels did not pass over him. One of his legs was somewhat strained but he was otherwise uninjured. He was taken into Dennen's restaurant and later taken to the office of Dr. Burke. His only injuries consisted of a bad strain of some of the ligerments of his leg.

MISSING BOY RETURNED HOME

Young Nelligan Went to Providence to Visit Aunt

FAILED TO LOCATE HER

Edward T. Nelligan, Jr., the 16 year old son of Edward T. Nelligan of 209 Main street who has been missing for a week returned home Saturday night. The young man said that he had been in Providence on a visit to his aunt but had been unable to find her. He then sought work but without success. Nearly all of his clothing was stolen from him in a boarding house. Friday night he boarded a freight train for Boston. Hardly had he left when his father arrived in Providence looking for him.

On arriving in Boston he was without money and he walked to the home of his aunt in Atlantic from whence he was sent home Saturday evening. Later in the evening the boy's parents returned home from Providence having been unable to locate their son. They were overjoyed on their return to find him at home.

HALL PLACE CHURCH.

S. H. Wentworth, local preacher, occupied the pulpit of the Hall Place M. E. church, Sunday in the absence of Rev. T. C. Martin. In the morning he preached from the text: "Who went about doing good," Acts 10-38.

Sunday school was held at the close of the morning service. The Junior league was omitted. Alex Stewart very ably led the Epworth league service at 6.15, on the subject: "The temptation of Jesus."

Beginning this week the weekly prayer meeting will be held at 7.30. Friday evening instead of Thursday.

Next Sunday at the devotional service of Epworth league the second vice-president, J. L. Martin will continue the study of Mormonism.

HALL PLACE LADIES' AID.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the Hall Place M. E. church was held Jan. 24, at the home of Mrs. James McCormick. Reports for the past year showed good work done by the ladies in various ways. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. Wm. McCormick.
Vice President—Mrs. T. C. Martin.
Secretary—Mrs. F. L. Badger.
Treasurer — Mrs. James MCcrmick.
Directors—Mrs. David Thomas, Mrs. E. Williams, Mrs. Robert Newcomb, Mrs. Charles Jose, Mrs. Geo. Hawes, Mrs. Wm. Loud.
Flower Committee—Mrs. Fred L. Badger.

Following the business a quarter social was held program consisting of selections by the Chartulas quartet; violin sols by Miss Pauletta Kristofferson, and readings by Miss Hilda Francis. A very pleasant social hour followed. Refreshments were served by the ladies.

ONE GAME ENDED WITH TIE SCORE

Three Stiff Game in Sunday School League

GREAT INTEREST IN LEAGUE

Three stiff games in the City Sunday School basket ball league were played Saturday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. The stiffest contest was between the teams of the Wollaston Congregational and Christ Churches which was called off with the score 8 to 8.

Toward the close of the second half the score was tied and remained so when the whistle blew. Referee LaRose supposed the game could be speedily finished in a few minutes. At the end of five minutes the score was still tied and with both teams panting after the extra exertion Referee LaRose called the game. Each team played with four men which made the contest a much harder one.

The Union Chapel defeated the Wollaston Baptist 11 to 3 and the Bethany Congregatonal beat the First Presbyterian 19 to 4.

The interest in the league has been stimulated because of the close wins of all teams and the players, with little or no knowledge of the game have showed astounding signs of development. Beyond question the league will prove to be a most valuable asset to future Quincy High basket ball seasons.

CURIOSITY LOST THE RACE

Phelan Turned His Head at Yell of Trainer

Curiosity probably cost Fay Phelan of this city a place in the finals of the 75 yard dash in the Coast Artillery games at the South End Armory Saturday evening, for when a trainer yelled lock out Fay turned his head, interferred with his own stride and saw Charlie Rice of Powder Point romp in ahead of the bunch. In the first heat he made 8 1-5 seconds and two seconds slower in the semifinals. When Fay turned his head he was leading Hiney of the B. A. A. who finished in second place. Powell of Milton was on the North Dorchester relay team which beat the Brookline gym and the Newton Y. M. C. A. Other local athletes did not succeed in worming their way to the fore owing to the large number of entries. Rice running from scratch made the 75 yard dash in eight seconds.

NEWTON WON BOTH GAMES

But Matter of Supremacy is Still Element of Doubt

HARD LUCK FOR NO. 2

Newton Y. M. C. A. had all of the luck in the games at the local association Gym on Saturday night, winning out in the big game by the score of 21 to 19 and the second team game by 13 to 12.

The games were even more exciting than those which these teams played earlier in th season and so evenly matched were the players that it is yet an unsettled question as to which is the better team.

Quincy had many chances to run up a large score in the second half, but the players seemed to have lost their "shooting eyes," with the exception of "Big Ed" Jenkins, who dropped in two pretty goals just when they were needed to keep the team fighting. Jenkins not only held his man, Cady to one goal from the floor, but aided greatly in the team work of the local five and from now on his game ought to greatly improve.

Trask, as usual was high score man, getting 13 points out of the 19 scored by the team. Parker and Jacobs had a great match all to themselves, "Jake" coming out on top with one goal to his credit. Rich was outscored by his guard MacKenzie; the former getting one and the latter two goals. Miley slipped one over on Kenn during the first half, getting three field baskets; but in the second half Kenn woke up and shut his man out. "Pin" Johnson went in the last few minutes of the game and it looked as if Quincy would tie up the score, for Pin made a high shot for the basket which struck the rim and then joggled around a while before dropping off.

The game was remarkably clean for such a hard fought contest; although Jacobs lost his head in the first half and struck Ken during a mix up. Referee Stone called 26 fouls in all, most of them for holding.

The Second team contest was also a "hummer" the score standing 7 to 6 in Quincy's favor at the end of the first half. Quincy quickly put it up to 12 to 6 and up to the last five minutes of the game it looked like a victory for the local lads. Bill, Chievers and Niles quickly made goals and the score was tied at 12 each with only a minute to play. Pinel made a foul, which Niles shot and Newton had won 13 to 12.

Thomas' work at center was the best seen on the second team this season and he will probably be kept in that position. Price was not able to get away from his man and consequently was able to score only one basket. Croucher did good work in shutting out his opponant.

THIS MORNING'S FIRE.

The alarm from Box 723 at 9.45 this morning was for a slight fire in the parlor of the house of Frank J. Wade at 479 South street and was caused by Francis Wade, his four year old son playing with matches. The little fellow was alone in the parlor playing near a work masket and in some manner set the articles in the basket on fire. The boy's mother was at a neighbor's house at the time but an elderly lady who was in the Wade house rushed into the room and rescued the lad and threw some sofa pillows that had taken fire out through the window. But for the promptness of this lady a more serious fire would have resulted. The loss was very slight.

BOWLING

Manager Forbes of the Coliseum alleys is making a bid for the Duck and Candle Pin Congress roll off which is due within a few months. A meeting of the association will take place at the offices of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., Boston, Monday afternoon. The Boston proprietors are making an effort to secure the congress. Worcester, Springfield and Lynn are also prospective.

At the congress the best men in the country roll for national honors. Records are usually equalled, but the present standing is so high that it is not always easy to make a new mark.

Within a year Quincy has blossomed into state wide prominence as a bowling centre. With Paul Poehler living here and spending much time at the Coliseum alleys a new impetus was given the game. All in all, the installation of the alleys where a new department in local sporting limits.

Should the congress be turned over to Quincy, the city will go on the National sporting map and the one favorable point that is admitted by all managers is that the alleys and their accommodations are sufficient to stage any kind of a match that can be planned in bowling.

Manager Monsey of the Worcester alleys refused the congress because he could not see his way clear to handle it, and he will be again considered with regard to it and probably be given the classic.

HEPTASOPHS STANDING.

The standing of the Heptasophs shows C team in the lead, with a percentage of 750. They have also made the best pinfall of 10,983. Their showing is by far the best. Canty is still high man with 122 for single and 303 for total. The highest team total is 1313, to the credit of A.

OLD COLONY STANDING.

Plugging from last to a first place tie with Norfolk Downs in the Old Colony league has been the change in the standing this week. Norfolk Downs in making the same jump surprised many fans. Weymouth dropped from first to a tie in third place with the City Square five who were in the second lineup last Saturday.

Carlson has the best string of 125, passing Gillen of Norfolk Downs who had 124 but who still retains the three string total of 322. Weymouth still holds the best team total of 1421 and the highest team single of 510. The Coliseum is today credited with the largest pinfall, outnumbering Weymouth by 55 pins.

The standing:

| | W. | L. | Pctge. | P.F. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Coliseum | 15 | 13 | 535 | 9371 |
| Norfolk Downs | 15 | 13 | 535 | 9137 |
| Weymouth | 13 | 15 | 464 | 9316 |

HOLY NAME HELD THEIR ELECTION

A large number attended the annual election of the Holy Name Society of St. John's church, Sunday evening. The meeting was presided over by Rev. Fr. John J. Coan until the meeting chose Edward J. Lennon as president for another term.

By virtue of his being pastor at Quincy, Rev. Fr. Coan will continue as the spiritual director of the society. Plans were discussed for the coming year with a view of increasing the membership. The officers chosen were:

President—Edward J. Lennon.
Vice President—John E. Lynch.
Secretary—George D. Cahill.
Treasurer—James C. Grant.

One Way of Putting It.

"My dear boy," said Enpeck, who happened to be in a confidential mood, "you will never know what real happiness is until you get married."

"You don't mean it!" exclaimed Singleton, astonished at such a remark from such an unexpected source.

"It's a fact," rejoined Enpeck; "but then it will be too late for you to appreciate it."—London Answers.

—The New York World takes up a point raised in the Boston Evening Record, and urges abolition of the superfluous and aggravating requirement of a special stamp for parcel post service. "Why," the World asks, "add an absolutely unnecessary restriction to a service supposed to promote public convenience?" The parcel post stamp is an absurdity and must go. One style of stamp for all postal service is sensible and inevitable. The stamp is simply the visible receipt for payment of the postal rate. It need not vary with the class of postage.

MRS. SHAW WAXETH SARCASTIC ON EMOTIONS OF MEN AND WOMEN

Loss of Peach Bloom Cheek Could Be Restored Speedily and Without Trouble

Meeting Given Religious Standing By Taking Up Collection

A very large audience was present at New Colonial hall Monday evening to hear Rev. Anna H. Shaw, President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association. The audience was not wholly confined to women for there were a large number of men present. The speaker was exceedingly interesting. At times her wit was keen and then again coming to the seriousness of her subject she made it perfectly plain that she was not only a thorough master of her subject, but thoroughly in earnest. Nowhere during her talk was her keen sense of wit more apparent than in answer to a question as to the emotions of women, she gave a vivid word picture of the great Republican national convention in Chicago which nominated William H. Harrison for President. She told how men jumped on chairs and shouted and hooted, threw their hat in the air jambed hats down over their neighbors eyes, etc. Oh, no, men were not emotional. Had it been women they would probably have shown their great emotion by gently waving their handkerchiefs.

Rupert F. Claflin presided and in opening he said it had been a very long time since he had addressed a meeting of this kind. He then referred to a suffrage meeting held 30 years ago, held in the old Town Hall, after which they had adjourned to his house where a real meeting was held. He then spoke of some of the great movements of recent years and said that he would place the peace movement first and woman's suffrage second.

He then introduced the speaker of the evening who in opening said that she would reverse the order. There was not so much difference between suffrage and anti-suffrage. The real difference exists in the way we reason it out. We want our influence to be supported by the ballot. We have no power to express our influence without the ballot. Heretofore the ballot has not been used for the highest civilization. There are two methods of warfare the barbarian and civil process. The barbarians use the hatchet and the others the ballot. As long as men keep the weapon of civilization women must use the hatchet. If the men had been treated the way the women have in England instead of mail boxes being destroyed there would have seen a lot of male men destroyed. We however are not advocating that method. The present movement has been advocated for 60 years. Ours has been a campaign of education. The great difficulty is that men who seem to be ordinarily sensible absolutely fail when their argument is applied to women.

Speaking of the argument some men put up that it would remove the bloom of a peach from the womens cheek she said give a woman 15 minutes and she could put the bloom back again.

The suffragettes are making no pledges. They say certain things we want can be accomplished, if people interested have the power of the ballot and the people interested are the women. If we are given the power does anyone believe we will not break down the stone wall that stops what we want to accomplish.

What concerns the government concerns us. Then why should we not be able to meddle with it. Government exists not for man but to prevent war. The great questions of the day are the housing of people, water supply, sewers, pure milk, etc. Do not these things have to do with the family? Government exists for three things. First protection of personal property. Then the judiciary to settle disputes between man and man and the development of property. Men fail to recognize the fundamental principal that women are able to take care of themselves. We do not believe in tax paying suffrage for women, or exclusive groups. The trouble is we all draw the line about our own group.

The average American man is a tame man for 364 days a year but on

FINN PEOPLE STUDY ENGLISH

Classes to Be Formed to Perfect Themselves in the Language

The foundations for an English class among the Finnish people of this city, was laid at the Y. M. C. A. last week, at a conference of Rev. John E. Lillback, pastor of the Finnish Congregational church and A. F. Bromley of the Y. M. C. A. The teachers selected are H. J. Patterson and L. D. King and they will be succeeded by others as the work progresses. The course will run for 10 weeks and classes will be held two nights each week. There is much enthusiasm among those who cannot speak English, and all are eager to join the class and enter upon a thorough study of the English language, so that they will have no difficulty in conversing in that language when ever the occasion arises. The lessons wil start this week, the first one being held Friday night.

"Lights and Shadows of Prison Life" as seen by Maud Ballington Booth were related in an instructive and intensely interesting lecture by her at Music hall, Monday evening in the third of the Lyceum courses being conducted by the Quincy Y. M. C. A. The subject never before discussed in this city from the humanitarian side was well handled and the evil of a corrupt system held up to the piercing thought guided by the descriptions of Mrs. Booth was fully exposed.

She was introduced by Dr. Adelbert L. Hudson, pastor of the First Church. He said that the idea should not be alone to protect the public but to also redeem the individual, and mind, I say nothing for or against capital punishment but that it is not against the individual the punishment is hurled but the protection of the community must be considered.

Mrs. Booth received liberal applause as she stepped forward, and in a pathetic tone of voice said that she brought directly from the heart of those who had trusted her with the message straight from their soul, and the message is not a wail of woe, an outcry against society, not a long string of injustices, but the realization that those who are shut away within stone gray walls are still human and not only worth redeeming but redeemable.

There is hope, such a hope that we have a right to turn our back to all the wretched pessimistic theories of the past and look forward to a better day for those who though they have slipped and fallen can realize hope and will give everything toward a better life in the future, they that have known something of the degredation and evil of the laws hand.

Mrs. Booth, head of the Volunteer League of America, a society formed in prison and whose members are men who at one time or are now serving sentences for crime committed is known to inmates as the Little Mother of the Prisons. She told of the change for the better that has been made since her work first drew her attention 15 years ago and in comparing the old and new methods she waxed eloquent with touching stories of deferred hope in a prisoner's heart which was skindled by the kind word of one who realized that they were redeemable.

In connection with this change she spoke of the eye tests and medical departments now in every prison, of the abolition of the lock step, shaven head and stripes, and said that if a man committed crime he should be punished but that the day he entered upon his term, a new life should begin and he should be assisted in every way to assist himself.

According to Mrs. Booth the only thing that breeds crime is lack of will power and that a strengthening of will in the prisoner would do considerable for him upon his release. Their day of liberty is a gladsome one for they now go forth with the feeling that they have done wrong, atoned and are ready to commence life anew.

She said she did not approve of taking a man direct from the prison and placing him at work but that he should be allowed to stay at a community house where he would be accorded humane treatment, where his courage could be tried and then when he had passed the test, place him where he can advance along the path of righteousness.

She said there was no criminal class since they come from all divisions of society, and that they should be treated as a sick patient in a hospital.

"My message," Mrs. Booth said, "to the man within the walls has been If you are ever to be reformed you must understand your own responsibility, no lash, no improved education, no friends help, nothing will ever help you unless you realize your rights and help yourself.

"I am not a suffragette but if women did have the vote there are some things that have continued for years that would have been discontinued through the intelligent use of our ballot."

In closing Mrs. Booth said that the one idea she wished to convey to the man who once more came into the full free rays of the sun was that to do was to do that strength of will was strength of all and that the motto "Don't wear your wishbone where your backbone ought to be" is the best advice that can be given anyone in any walk of life and particularly those who are again to test the sweetest of all things, the freedom of the civilized world.

Mrs. Booth was most generously applauded when she completed her address.

GOODHUE HELPS DESERTED GIRL

Came to Boston on Promise of Marriage, But Man Left Her

FAILED TO FIND HIM HERE

Monday morning a young girl aged about 19 years was visiting several stores about Quincy trying to touch the proprietors for money to enable her to get back to Providence. She had not visited many stores before she was pointed out to Inspector Goodhue who took her in hand and took her over for an interview with the Probation Officer.

She said that she had come from Providence with a man who had agreed to marry her in Quincy. The man she said worked at the Fore River. They came as far as Boston Sunday and stayed in that city that night. Monday morning the man said that he was going out a minute to telephone his boss. He went out. After waiting an hour or more the girl came to the conclusion that the fellow did not intend to come back.

She then came to Quincy in hopes to find him but had been unable to do so and she was trying to raise money enough to get back to Providence. Inspector Goodhue learning that the case was for the Boston police took her to Boston and turned her over to the Boston police for investigation.

Inspector Goodhue noticing the apparent faint condition of the girl inquired what the trouble was and she said she was starved. She was his guest at dinner and thoroughly enjoyed the first meal for many hours she said.

Funds were furnished by Inspector Goodhue and she left for Providence. A rigid investigation will be made and an effort is afoot to apprehend the young man who lured her away. It is possible that serious charges will be proffered and that the case will be tried in Boston.

BRONZE TABLET FOR MEMBERS

Who Have Passed Away From the Wollaston Church

25TH ANNIVERSARY

At the annual parish meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian society, Monday evening, the following were elected:

President—Eugene H. Sprague.
Clerk—William H. Boynton.
Treasurer—Walter J. Wellington.
Parish Committee—Edward J. Cummings, Dr. Charles E. Monroe, John E. Simmons, Arthur W. Rohn and Albert R. Moulton.

The parish completed its 25th year and Dr. Charles S. Adams the retiring president reported it to be in good working condition.

Mention was made of Walter J. Wellington who served as treasurer over 24 years.

On June 27, 1912, the ashes of Rev. James H. Bagley, a former minister were placed in an iron vault under the tower of the church.

Walter J. Wellington submitted the treasurers report, Edward J. Cummings the repair fund, Frederick G. Thayer the Dial, Mrs. Chandler W. Smith the Social Service Committee, Miss Anna West the Earnest Workers Lend-a-hand, Fred M. Rollins the Sunday school, J. Harry Hooper the Young People's Religious Union, Mrs. Charles E. Barker the Church Helpers, Mrs. F. A. Page, Ladies Aid Alliance, John E. Simmons, Wolaston Unitarian club.

The Alliance will present at the 25th anniversary exercises a bronze tablet commemorating the loyal members of the parish who have died during its existence.

Rev. Carl G. Horst, the minister, read his fourth annual report. During the year the following have passed away: Mrs. Elizabeth Merrill, Mrs. Frances Dalrymple, Charles H. Brigham, Dr. Fred C. Merrill, Mrs. John Morgan, Mrs. C. A. Gifford and George H. York.

The slate of the nominating committee as read by Thomas Lacey was elected and the president and clerk sworn. The office of collector was added to the list and Charles E. Barker elected to the office. Fred M. Rollins was elected a member of the Sunday school committee.

Resolutions were adopted on the retirement of Dr. Charles S. Adams who has served the society as president for five years.

A vote of thanks was tendered Theophilus King for his endowment to the church.

Upon motion of Frank W. White it was voted to equip the church with cushions. Up to the present time those wishing them have supplied their own. William E. Rowe, Frank W. White and Clifton H. Baker were appointed a committee on cushions.

MINSTREL SHOW.

At a regular meeting of the John Adams Commandery, Knights of Malta, Monday evening at Electa hall, it was voted to put a minstrel show on Feb. 24. The cast will be chosen from the members.

$5,000 DAMAGES FOR DRAWLESS BRIDGE OVER SACHEM BROOK

Bills to Extend Retaining Walls and to Widen and Deepen Channel Advocated

Emery and Stewart Each Claim Their Business Has Been Crippled

(Special to the Ledger)

State House, Jan. 27, 1913. Victor J. Emery and John Stuart, business men carrying on separate businesses in Wollaston near the Quincy Shore Drive, have each entered petitions in the legislature asking that they be reimbursed by the State to the sums of $5000 each. These amounts, Messrs. Emery and Stuart claim, to be due them as compensation for the loss and damage sustained by them in their business by reason of the construction of the drawless bridge which the State built across Sachem brook as part of the boulevard.

In connection with these petitions are two others dealing with Sachem brook and its improvement. One asks that the Metropolitan park Commission be authorized and directed to spend $300 in extendnig the retaining walls of the bridge at the mouth of the brook, so that sand and other material will not drift into the channel of the brook and cause it to fill in and become too shallow for boats. Another asks that the Port Directors of Boston be authorized and directed to widen and deepen the channel, so that heavier boats may be floated to the mouth of the brook. The last mentioned petition is accompanied by a bill of Representative William J. Leslie and is entered by R. R. Freeman, of Quincy. All these petitions were refered to the committee on Metropalitan Affairs and will doubtless be given hearings on the same date.

LODGING HOUSES AGAIN RECEIVE ATTENTION OF BOARD OF HEALTH

Improvement in Some Places. Same Old Conditions Existing in Others Demanding Remedy

Some of the Beds Working Over Time. Occupied Night and Day

The Board of Health accompanied by Chief Burrell and Officers Dhooge and Thorne made a tour of the Syrian boarding houses on Cyril, Sumner and South Walnut streets and in the Fore River district about 10 o'clock Monday night to learn at first hand the true conditions of these places. Some time ago the Board of Health made a similar visit of inspection to these houses and found conditions anything but sanitary. They found on their last visit that dozens of men were housed for the night in small poorly ventilated rooms and that in some cases the beds were occupied continuously for the twenty four hours of the day. At nights by the men employed during the day and during the day time by men employed during the nights.

At that time they cleaned out several of these boarding houses burning up bedding, etc. The visit Monday night was to see if they were still living up to the rules of the Board. They found that in most of the cases the parties were all right but in others that the conditons were not at all what they should be. For illustration they found that in one place six men were sleeping in a room that should not have accommodated more than two men. In still another place, a bakery they found a man and his wife and

IT is a self-evident truth that the thoroughly well-dressed man is never conspicuous in his appearance. Your attention is attracted by the absence of jar—which on closer analysis, proves to be correctness of detail. The faultless style and perfect harmonizing of the minor accessories of dress contribute quite as much to the general effect as does the suit itself. They give the finishing touches. It is a great help to have such a fine Men's Furnishing Store as this to fall back upon with its carefully selected stocks of whatever a man needs from Shirts and Scarfs to Suspenders and Collars.

You owe it to yourself to investigate.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

When it comes to huge profits the bankers have nothing on their brothers of the wool trade.

It is distressing to see a gallant soldier like Gen. Sickles in the sunset of his life engulfed in such difficulties as beset him at this time.

That midnight train from Boston is somewhat of a false alarm until the returns are all in.

Kaiser William has disciplined one of his sons because he proved an idler. The Kaiser sets a good example for many indulgent parents.

The poor kiddies must feel like throwing bricks at the weather man when they look at those flooded playgrounds and Jack Frost still in a retiring mood.

While this agitation for woman suffrage is rampant, why not take a straw vote of the women of every community, if straw votes are to cut any figure in the decision.

More legislative ingenuity is wasted in considering a bread law and regulations for soda and candy on Sundays and yet the sale of liquor can be openly seen from any street where an innholders license is in operation on the Sabbath.

The St. Louis woman who trains servants to marry her sons may be said to be looking after their creature comforts at any rate.

Rev. Herbert S. Johnson is bound to be in the front pew in pronouncing the Shepard wedding an ideal one.

The suffragettes have not been invited, so there, they will not take part in the inaugural parade.

Some amateur athletes who have been paraded as in poor circumstances manage to travel around a good deal and continue their engagements. Is it all for glory and silver cups?

The man who could not speak English and drank oxalic acid by mistake should serve as a warning to others to get the hang of the language as quick as possible.

China is taking on the reforms of other nations in leaps and bounds. The cutting from the alphabet from 8000 to 42 characters is now under way.

Be sure you're right then go ahead in stepping from an electric car, but for anything near perfect safety from automobiles a person would need eyes on all four sides of their head.

As Dr. Eliot knows no more about the hereafter than the rest of mankind his critics have just as good a right to stand up and be counted as he has.

Wollaston is holding its end up well with crickets and winter rhubarb, to say nothing of the community house.

All this talk about freeing the Filipinos might be spared until they are really proven able to enter into the independent state. At present the evidence seems to be against the plaintiff.

PROGRESSIVE ALL RIGHT.

The residents of Wollaston seem dead in earnest in their program to have a community building. They show progressiveness tinged with ambition. The cost of the building is estimated at $40,000. The plans are liberal in their scope providing for many demands which the community will put upon such a structure. The need of such a structure was long felt. The carrying of the proposed scheme to a successful issue will mean much to that section of the city.

From a glance at the list of the men who are behind the movement it is quite evident that a right start has been made. Much, aye even all, may depend on the initial movement of any enterprise and the proper men, behind it. There seems to be nothing lacking in the elements which are working for this ornament to ward five.

The first meeting developed much latent enthusiasm and the promoters were highly elated at the interest shown and the generous response to the subscription fund. Still there is much to be done to carry the thing along to a finish. There is no chance for flagging enthusiasm. All must work in harmony and with one end in view, the common good of the community. Differences, jealousies, strife or even indifference on the part of some may spell failure. At the present time such a condition does not enter into the combination. Many of those interested will give freely of their time and energy. Their reward will be the success and the completion of the building which just at present appears to hold the centre of the stage of Wollaston activity. May they meet with that success which they merit and the fine building proposed soon raise its walls along the sky line, a monument to their public spirit and enterprise.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE QUESTION.

Straw votes in the main are far from rendering decisive indications of anything worth while. And the important question of woman suffrage is too momentous a measure to be straddled by any such means. If the legislature is opposed to women suffrage then let them come out in the open and make their position clear. No one can blame a senator or representative from having decided views upon this as well as any active problem which courts public consideration. The women of this state have presented their case, that is the leaders of the movement have been very much in evidence at all times. If the legislature favors giving the people a chance to decide the issue let them come out flatfooted in the open and give tangible evidence of their front.

But as to deciding the matter upon a straw vote it looks very much like a political way of dodging a responsibility.

If anything like a straw vote is considered it would be a good idea to give the women all over the state a chance to indulge in this recreation. The conspicuous leaders of women suffrage are fighting in the open. They are above board in their contest. If they by any chance forget themselves in their handling of people who honestly believe to the contrary they may be going a little too far, but this may be excused and laid to their enthusiasm rather than crediting them with unlady like behavior.

Now a great many women have expressed themselves in favor of woman suffrage. There are thousands of others who have not been heard upon the subject at all. If it comes to straw voting why not have a vote taken of all the women in the state. That will decide whether the majority of the women want the right to vote. And if they do,—well there are many of them who will vote more intelligently than many who now abuse the privilege they enjoy.

SAVING TIME LOST LIFE.

The unfortunate accident which snuffed out the life of the young Italian at the Quincy Adams crossing is only another of the many examples in which unnecessary haste breeds disaster. From the story of the accident it appears that the gates were in their proper position to keep people from crossing, a sure sign that danger existed, but the desire to save a minute or perhaps less time, resulted in the death of the young man. There is nothing to indicate that it was imperative that he should be at a certain point on the other side of that crossing within a given time. His companion took a chance and reached the other side in safety. The other poor young fellow likewise took a chance but the few seconds which intervened between the passage of his friend and his own attempt resulted in his death.

Of course there is always the danger from grade crossings. But in this case it does not appear to be so much the fault of the grade of the crossing as a desire to save an infinitely small period of time. It seems strange that people will not shun such risks in view of the many fatal results from such effort. It is to be hoped that this may serve as a warning to others who may have to pass this way, while the present grade crossing exists, to be sure that both tracks are free of moving trains before taking the chance. And above all none should venture a crossing when the gates are down.

MRS. SHAW'S LECTURE

the 365th day, the election day he is different.

Miss Shaw said that women did not object to the qualifications for voting such as being 21 years of age, being able to read and write and being a resident for a certain period. Every progressive movement we have borrowed from another country. We had to go to Australia, where they have woman's suffrage, to get a secret ballot, yet it was not applicable to the male citizens of the United States and we had to put symbols at the top so that men would know how to vote. Men do all they can to make it easy for men to vote and make every possible excuse why women should not vote. Their argument against us is always contradictory. They tell us we would not use it if we got a chance. If so why not give us the chance? Then they tell us that we will neglect the children. They do not realize we only want to bring about certain reforms.

The proposed referendum bill now being discussed by the Massachusetts legislature she declared as idiotic. Women should not be fooled with such an amendment as proposed. We will not accept such a subterfuge.

The speaker then referred to the penalty imposed by this government of disfranchising a voter and said that a disfranchised voter was on a par with the women today. You can never satisfy the women with a straw vote. We need the application of womanhood to these problems but woman can never do it without the ballot.

Mrs. Susan W. Fitzgerald secretary of the Massachusetts Political Equality Union spoke briefly on the need of funds to carry on the work. She extended a general invitation to all present to enroll and also to contribute.

At this point Mr. Claflin said that he had been given no infimation that a collection was to be taken and he wanted it understood that no one need feel obliged to contribute.

It was announced before the meeting closed that the pledges had amounted to $20 and the silver collection to $8.60 An opportunity was given to ask Miss Shaw questions but the only question asked was that about women's emotions.

Any who were unable to be present at the meeting and hear Miss Shaw may be interested to know that she is to speak tonight at Brockton which would not be too far to go to hear this brilliant lecturer.

"ON TO WASHINGTON"

Mr. Bowditch Makes the Largest Gain Today

WILLIAMS IS CONFIDENT

Mr. Bowditch and Miss Morrissett had it pretty much their own way in the Washington Inauguration contest today, but as they are close rivals both could not be satisfied, Mr. Bowditch made the larger gain, 185 to 60. At last Galen has five figures in his total which is now 10,070, but he will have to go some to overtake Mrs. Marnock, the W. R. C. candidate, who now has 21,520. Miss Morrissett has a total of 6,130 and expects soon to have 10,000.

Gains were also made today by Angus Kerr, L. D. Duncan, Jr. and Cornelius M. Duggan.

GAINS FOR THE WEEK.

The gains of yesterday in the contest were practically the gains for the week of Jan. 20—27, as most of the leaders do their heaviest voting on Mondays. The gains for the week however are some larger, and a summary will be of interest:

|---|---|
| Fred D. Williams | 17,245 |
| Sturgis H. Hunt | 11,400 |
| A. R. MacKay | 9,095 |
| Mrs. Marnock | 5,160 |
| Galen Bowditch | 1,760 |
| Miss Morrissett | 1,435 |

The total vote of these six candidates was 46,095, and the total vote of all candidates for the week was over 50,000, an average of over 8,000 per day. Although this average is high, it is probable that only one-half the coupons printed have been used as votes.

ANOTHER BIG PRIZE.

The prize for the largest gain in votes this week is a vote certificate good for 2,000 votes, twice as large as last week. This will probably be the last prize for weekly gain, as the contest is drawing to a close. This certificate for 2,000 votes will be credited next Monday at 9 A. M. to the candidate who makes the largest gain during the week of Jan. 27—Feb. 3. To be successful in the contest for the free Washington trips a candidate will almost need these 2,000 votes. It will make considerable difference whether they are awarded to him or to the other fellow.

ON TO WASHINGTON.

Contest Editor:

Enclosed 1000 votes for the popular and obliging drug clerk whom we hope is going to Washington through your liberal contest; also a few lines from our literary department:

Often and ever, our Editor schemes,
Nearer and nearer become his pet dreams,
Till a grand Washington trip has been planned so nifty,
Of the most popular person in our most popular city.
Williams, F. D., has been stung in his bonnet,
And declares he'll accept the bold defi and run it;
So he hustles for votes and gets them and more.
His friends rally round and up goes the score
In units and thousands, from coast to coast
Never a day without a good boost.
Get busy, Fred's friends don't tarry a day,
Till the vote is decided and he's on his way.
On this one sentiment, lets all now agree, the Nation's Capitol F. D. W. shall see.
A Friend.

Remember, the last coupon in the contest will be printed Saturday, Feb. 8, a week from next Saturday.

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

|---|---|
| Fred D. Williams, drug clerk | 59,459 |
| Sturgis Hunt, Y. M. C. A. | 40,415 |
| A. R. MacKay, Heptasophs | 32,650 |

BARS MIXED MARRIAGES

State Registrar of New Jersey to Present Bill to Legislature

Trenton, Jan. 28.—The large increase of marriages between whites and blacks has induced State Registrar South to draft a bill for introduction into the legislature making it unlawful for any registrar in the state to issue a marriage license for a negro and a white person and unlawful for any person to perform a marriage ceremony for such couples.

Registrar South says he expects the bill will pass.

CANDIDATES ALL PASSED

Class of 17 Finns Took Out Naturalization Papers

Saturday 17 candidates of the Finnish colony in this city visited Boston and took out their second naturalization papers which makes them full fledged citizens of the United States. Not a single one failed to pass. Rev. John E. Lillback, pastor of the Finnish Congregational church and Constance Tikkanen were the witnesses for the entire party. As fast as they can master the English language, other naturalization classes will be formed and instructed. Rev. Mr. Lillback takes a great interest in this work and much of the forward movement of the Finnish colony of this city is due to his activity in their behalf.

BRIEFS

Col. Henry L. Kincaide is in New York on a business trip.

Mrs. E. E. Whittle of Westerly, R. I., is the guest of Mrs. Joseph K. Barber of Elm avenue.

Junior Auxiliary of Christ church is to give a play this evening in the parish house, under the direction of Mrs. Chaplin.

The state examiner of persons receiving state aid is in town today making his biennial examination of persons receiving state and military aid.

Mrs. Daniel Monroe Wilson of Kennebunk, Maine who spoke at the meeting of Quincy Alliance this afternoon has been the guest of Quincy friends for a few days.

Rev. John E. Lillback, Rev. A. Raketti and John Laine attended as delegates a conference at the Pilgrim hall, Boston, Tuesday afternoon. Miss Hill also attended but not as a delegate.

Work has commenced on the cellar of the house to be erected for Mr. Loomis on Presidents hill at the corner of Dimmock street and Monroe road, opposite the Herbert Lawton estate.

T. L. Williams will attend on Wednesday the annual convention of the Massachusetts Optical Society at Springfield. An elaborate program has been prepared for the afternoon and evening.

One of the best concerts ever given by the Choral society is anticipated tonight at Music hall. A full rehearsal was held this afternoon. Remarkably good work has been done this season by the chorus.

G. W. C. CLUB DANCE.

A most succesful dancing party was conducted at Alpha hall Monday evening by the G. W. C. Club, composed of graduates of the Quincy High school. The grand march was led by Harry E. Glover and Miss Florence Barker. They were followed by 64 couple.

The matrons were Mrs. Walter F. Burke, Mrs. Henry L. Kincaide and Mrs. Frederick H. Breslyn. The hall was decorated with potted plants and refreshments were served.

The feature of the evening was the confetti dance during which the dancers were showered with multicolored confetti. The Paul Jones was led by Frederick Dunkerton Williams.

The committee consisted of Harry E. Glover, Albert G. Coffin, Jr., Howard C. Andrews, Rupert K. Ganzel, Charles Holmes, Edward Jenkins, David G. Melville, Matthew S. Nicoll, Harold Richards and Frederick D. Williams.

CHANGE IN TIMETABLE.

Chairman William H. Teasdale of the Transportation committee of the Board of Trade has received word from the railroad of another change in the Quincy train service that will be made when the new time table goes into effect. This new time table was to go into effect Feb. 3 but that date has been changed to some future date to be announced later.

The change of which notice was received affects the train now leaving Quincy at 1.20. This train is to be discontinued but in its place will be a train leaving Quincy at 12.54 which will make the Quincy Adams, Quincy and Wollaston stops. There will be no other inward train until 2.04 which means that there will be a wait of one hour and ten minutes for a train after 12.54. It will however give three trains between 12 and 1 o'clock, namely, 12.04, 12.19 and 12.54.

ANNUAL CHARITY BALL OF ELKS

All Arrangements Complete For Thursday Night's Event

The several committees having in charge the annual charity ball of Quincy lodge of Elks to be held in Music hall next Thursday evening met at the club house, Sunday afternoon. The reports of the sub-committees showed that practically all of the details of the affair are completed and that it will eclipse by far all previous efforts.

The acts of charity performed during the year by Quincy lodge of Elks are generally known although the recipients of their charity is as sacred as its ritual. The object of this ball is to replenish its charity fund that any call upon it may not go unheeded.

There are to be many novel features at this year's affair, not the least of which will be music by the Temple male quartette. They will furnish music during intermission and also during the exercises at 11 o'clock when the toast to absent brothers will be given.

The decorations of the hall will be most elaborate, even more so than last year and throughout the evening many novelties will be introduced. Then again the dance programs will be a feature in themselves. The grand march will also have several new features which will be executed under the direction of Leo J. McMaster.

Many of those standing high in Elkdom throughout the state have signified their intention of being present as well as the Exalted Rulers of many of the Massachusetts lodges.

Exalted Ruler Philip H. Sullivan will be the Chief Marshall and his aids will be Alfred H. Remick, Edward L. Bean, John H. Johnson, John Sweeney, Col. Henry L. Kincaide and William Cashman.

James W. Sweeney will be the floor director and the chief of aids is Clarence Quimby. James W. Sweeney is also chairman of the general committee of arrangements, John D. Smith, the secretary and Charles R. O'Connor, treasurer. Others on the general committee are Phillip H. Sullivan, E. R.; Robert J. Williams, Jr., P. E. R.; George A. Jordan, Leo J. McMaster, Rednor P. Coombs, Edward D. Larkin, John Hildebrand, Edward L. Bean, John W. Sweeney, Joseph A. Monahan, Frank B. Lowe, Morris Bloom, Joseph Neagle, Edward P. Cuffe, Clarence Pratt, Isadore Fritz, Joseph Bruse, Joseph D. Griffin, James J. Jeffrey, John J. Reardon, William H. Callahan, Timothy J. Collins, Maurice A. Cohen, Peter Branchieor, David A. Haley, John R. S. Ross, Archie F. Baira, Bertram Brown, Alphonse Le Clair, John R. Bartol, Edward J. Sandberg, Robert Kelley, Edward Desmond, Joseph Kelley, Ira Doble, Dr. James P. Murphy, Charles P. Gould, Dr. Michael T. Sweeney.

Franchise Reform Bill Is Withdrawn In House of Commons

MILITANTS ON THE WARPATH

Mrs. Pankhurst Calls on Volunteers to Assist Her In "Gallant Onslaught"—She Denounces Asquith For His "Betrayal" of the Cause—Wild Clamor Breaks Forth

London, Jan. 28.—A declaration of guerilla warfare by the suffragettes, including sorties and riots, to start from today, was made by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant leader, at a meeting last evening at which the action of the government on the question of woman suffrage was discussed.

Mrs. Pankhurst called for the names and addresses of those who were "prepared to take part in a gallant onslaught with me."

Miss Annie Kenney declared that the women would "make the lives of public men impossible," and in reply to an interrupter said: "If you are a shopkeeper, you had better look out."

Many shopkeepers have already begun to board up their windows.

Votes for women in Great Britain, as far as this parliament is concerned, "died abornin'" when Premier Asquith arose in the house of commons and announced that the government formally withdrew the franchise reform bill.

The premier repudiated the charge of trickery imputed to the government by some of the fiery advocates of equal suffrage, and explained that the cabinet exceedingly regretted its inability to carry out its pledge to the women to submit equal suffrage to a vote, because of the ruling of Speaker Lowther that the adoption of the Grey amendment necessarily would entail the re-introduction of the bill.

A hush pervaded the commons and the galleries when the premier made his momentous announcement, but at its conclusion a wild clamor broke forth that put to the blush the demonstration that greeted the passage of the Irish home rule bill.

Suffragettes in the galleries hissed Asquith and jeers and catcalls flew about the chamber. Conservatives cheered to the echo, and the speaker was powerless to restore order for several minutes.

The word was quickly passed to the masses of militants that thronged Parliament square and adjacent streets, and there was pandemonium. Groans, hisses and jeers rent the air, and some of the frenzied enthusiasts started to march on parliament house, but were forestalled by policemen and detectives.

The police authorities had decreed there should be no parades, and the order was rigidly enforced.

"The action of Premier Asquith is a scandalous betrayal of the women of England, and we shall resume our militancy forthwith unless the government consents to introduce in this parliament a bill specifically providing for equal suffrage," Mrs. Pankhurst declared.

When the news spread through London that the bill was withdrawn, thousands of militants thronged the streets and were bitter in their denunciation of the premier. Street speakers immediately began harangues and the police were kept busy dispersing them.

Some of the strenuous militants declared in street speeches that they were "willing to die" for the cause; but Scotland Yard was apprehensive that if they carried out their threats they would not be content to die alone. The police were fearful of an outbreak that really would eclipse the letter box, telephone and fire alarm campaigns of the suffragettes and make their window-smashing crusade look like child's play.

A crowd of 5000 people witnessed strenuous efforts of the police to prevent the suffragettes from holding demonstrations in Trafalgar square late last night. As soon as the suffragettes scattered from the first meetig, under a charge of the police, they reassembled in a distant part of the square and again attempted to address the crowd.

"Cleaning Up" Newport

Newport, R. I., Jan. 28.—The first steps in the campaign of Mayor McLeod to "clean up" Newport were taken in the raiding of two clubhouses. Nineteen were arrested. Nine pleaded guilty and were fined. The other were released on bail.

X-Ray Kills Scientist

Paris, Jan. 28.—Dr. Paulin Mery died from burns on the hand inflicted by Roentgen rays. Blood poisoning set in, necessitating an operation from which the scientist failed to rally.

Aviator Killed by Short Fall

Berlin, Jan. 28.—The German aviator Heull was instantly killed while making a flight at Aix-La-Chapelle. He elevated his planes suddenly to avoid telegraph wires and fell out of his seat from a height of about thirty feet. His skull was fractured.

WOLLASTON GOLF COURSE

In Excellent Shape and Enjoyed By Members

Pinehurst may have its winter golf season, but what took place at the Wollaston golf course Saturday would remind one of a little Pinehurst right here in Quincy. The course was in tip-top shape and altogether some fine scores were made in the sweepstakes match.

Upwards of 50 players availed themselves of the fine opportunity to go over the course. F. G. Thayer and D. E. Goodspeed were declared the winners. Their cards were much on the midseason playing form. Both are members of the Wollaston club.

FOURTEENTH ANNIVERSARY

Plans for celebration of the 14th anniversary of institution of Court John Adams F. of A. are practically completed, and it is expected that an an excellent entertainment and adnce will be in order at Music Hall on Friday, Jan. 31. Managers John Troup, Walter Ferguson and the cast taking part in the drama, namely, "The Irish Detective," have worked hard to meet the presentation of this excellent play and success, and there is no question but what their desire will be attained.

Large delegations will be present from the various courts in this city and Weymouth. The Weymouth delegations intend to come over by special car.

UNEARTHS A GIANT SKELETON IN YARD

Man Transplanting Peach Tree Meets With a Surprise

Kearny, N. J., Jan. 28.—The skeleton of a man 6 feet 7 inches tall was dug up yesterday afternoon by Samuel Aspinwall.

Aspinwall was digging in the garden at the back of his house at 80 Dukes street, intending to transplant a peach tree. He found the bones of a man's right arm as soon as he broke the ground. The entire skeleton was buried only a foot and a half below the surface. It was in good condition.

Aspinwall, who has lived on the premises for more than twenty-five years, said he was sure the body had not been buried in his garden during his occupancy of the premises. A horseshoe heel plate was found near the skeleton, indicating to the police that the body may have been buried fifty years ago, when horseshoe heel plates were worn.

FIVE TO SEVEN YEARS

Hosford Sentenced on Two Counts Embodying Thefts of $12,000

Boston, Jan. 28.—Edward H. Hosford, treasurer of the Donovan Slipper company of Everett, was sentenced to a term of not more than seven nor less than four years in state prison by Judge Brown.

Hosford was sentenced on two counts of an indictment containing in all thirty-one counts, embodying thefts of $12,090.91. He pleaded guilty to all the counts. Counts which charged forgery were placed on file.

While acting as treasurer for the shoe concern Hosford obtained large sums of money on forged bills of lading from Frank E. Paige and Frank E. Paige & Co. It is understood the actual losses to Paige and his firm are at least $55,000.

ROSS SENTENCE STANDS

Supreme Court Will Not Interfere In Case of Oregon Financier

Washington, Jan. 28.—The supreme court declined to interfere with the five-year penitentiary sentence imposed upon J. T. Ross, former president of the Trust, Guaranty and Title company of Portland, Ore., convicted of larceny of state educational funds in his bank during the panic of 1907.

The trial court, in addition to the five-year punishment, imposed a fine of $576,853, or an alternate confinement in the county jail amounting to 790 years. The supreme court of Oregon set aside the fine and alternative confinement as excessive.

Says Husband Has Nine Wives

OLD CLOTHES MADE OVER

Shoes Mended Under Direction of Martha Society

The Martha Society of the Finnish Congregational church have decided upon a practical and helpful plan to and those who require assitance. A meeting of the society will be held this evening, at which all the people, men, women or children who have clothes which they have outgrown or have no further use for, old shoes in fact anything which can be put to good use will bring them to the meeting. Then the women will hold a sewing bee. They will cut, make over, turn, change, and sew up such garments as may need changing to fit those to whom they have been assigned. Men who have any natural ability as shoe makers are also invited to attend and aid by mending shoes, which may be a little the worse for wear, yet out of which some few weeks service is yet possible.

It is a good plan, meeting with approval and encouragement on all sides.

FINNISH CHURCH.

THORPE A PROFESSIONAL

Hero of Olympics Must Return Trophies He Won at Stockholm

New York, Jan. 28.—James Thorpe, the Indian athlete and Olympic champion, admits that the charge of professionalism brought against him is true, and has formally retired from amateur athletics. Thorpe's confession was contained in a letter to the registration committee of the Amateur Athletic union, which met here to investigate his case.

The letter admitted Thorpe had played baseball for a salary on a professional team three years ago while he was a student of the Carlisle Indian school.

Thorpe's winning of the Pentathlon and Decathlon events at the Olympic games in Stockholm and his performances which won for him the all-round championship of the A. A. U. had stamped him the most marvellous all-around athlete of modern times.

All the prizes and the honors which Thorpe has gained since 1909—the date from which his standing as a professional begins—must be transferred to the men who finished second to the Indian in every event.

PLAN TO WIPE OUT JOLO HEADHUNTERS

Killing of Captain McNally and Six Scouts to Be Avenged

Washington, Jan. 28.—To avenge the killing of Captain Patrick McNally and six enlisted men of the Philippine scouts in a skirmish on Jan. 23, officials of the war department have begun plans to wipe out the last of the notorious headhunters of the island of Jolo. Brigadier General Pershing, commanding the Mindanao department, will be in command of the expedition.

Ever since the American occupation Jolo has been the most unruly of any of the insular possessions. More than 150 Americans have fallen victims to the wild headhunting Moros and Chinese pirates.

Satisfied With Poorhouse

London, Jan. 28.—David Scott spent nine years in the Chester poorhouse and liked it so well when he inherited $5000 he asked to remain there as a "paying trust."

☞ Any candidate in the Ledger trip to Washington to the inaugural, can take a look at the ticket by calling at the office. It looks good, as does also the companion ticket. The winner in the contest has the privilege of selecting a companion to go on the trip. It's a very complete trip costing $75 each ticket.

SECTION 1. For the purpose of protection from damage by fire the city is hereby divided into three districts.

SEC. 2. The Mayor shall annually, on or before the first Monday in February, appoint an Inspector of Buildings who shall hold his office one year from the first Monday in February of the current year, and until his successor is appointed.

SEC. 3. Fire district No. 1, shall include Hancock Street, from Squantum Street to School Street, Washington Street from Hancock to Elm Street, Quincy Avenue, north from Water Street, School Street from Hancock Street to intersection of west line of Franklin Street, Water Street, from Franklin to Pleasant Street, Franklin Street from School to Pearl Street, Copeland Street from intersection of Miller Street to Cross Street, Newport Avenue from Lincoln to Elmwood Avenue, Temple Street, Maple Street, Chestnut Street north from Cottage Avenue, Saville Street from Hancock Street to steam railroad line, Granite Street east of the railroad bridge, Beale Street from Hancock Street to Safford Street, Brook Street from Newport Avenue to Farrington Street, Sagamore Street from Hancock Street to Newbury Street, and shall extend one hundred (100) feet in all directions from any street or part of street herein named or described.

SEC. 4. District No. 2 shall include all remaining parts of the city, except such as are included in District No. 3.

SEC. 5. District No. 3 shall include that part of Quincy called Squantum bounded by Neponset river on the north, N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. on the west, and by Atlantic Street to the Metropolitan Boulevard on the south. Also that part of Quincy east of a line drawn from Quincy Bay five hundred (500) feet west of Shelton Road to the nearest waters of Town River Bay.

SEC. 6. No wooden or frame buildings, except dwelling-houses and private stables shall be hereafter built within the limits of District No. 1. No dwelling-house shall be hereafter built within the limits of District No. 2, without foundation walls. No person shall move, or cause to be moved any wooden building from without said limits into the same. No person shall move or cause to be moved any wooden building from one place to another within said limits, nor shall any person repair or rebuild any building within said limits, which has been partially destroyed by fire or otherwise, nor add to any such building, without the written permit of the Inspector of Buildings.

SEC. 7. Every person intending to erect any building or to raise, move or make any additions or alterations in any building or its foundation, already erected or hereafter to be built within the limits of the City of Quincy, except necessary repairs not affecting the foundations, external partition walls or party walls, chimneys or stairways, before proceeding to make or erect the same or to lay the foundations thereof, shall file an application for a permit with the Inspector of Buildings on forms furnished by him giving a description of the building or additions, alterations or repairs, number on and name of the street, or if unnumbered the precise location of said property and the name of owner or owners thereof, and shall submit plans of said work or buildings for examination and approval.

The Inspector of Buildings shall report to applicant on all applications for permits within seven days from the receipt thereof, but if the Inspector shall deem it necessary to establish grade lines other than those stated in the application, he shall have three days additional to make report.

No permit shall be in force for a longer time than one year from date thereof.

INSPECTOR TO EXAMINE BUILDINGS BEING ERECTED, REPAIRED, ETC.

SEC. 8. The Inspector of Buildings shall examine all buildings in the course of erection, alteration and repair, as often as practical, and for that purpose shall have the right of entry thereto, and shall make a record of all violations of this Ordinance, together with the location of the building where such violations are found, the name of the owner, lessee, occupant, architect and master mechanic, and all other matters relative thereto. Any owner, architect or builder notified of any violations of this Ordinance shall, if required by the Inspector, leave the work open until he shall again inspect the work and declare the same approved.

INSPECTOR TO EXAMINE ALL BUILDINGS REPORTED DANGEROUS, ETC.

SEC. 9. The Inspector of Buildings shall examine all buildings reported dangerous or unsafe from any cause, and make a record of such examination, including the nature and cause of such condition, with the location of the building, name of owner, lessee and occupant, and for what purpose occupied, and he shall report any building by him deemed dangerous or unsafe to the City Solicitor for his action.

NOTICE IN CASE OF UNSAFE CHIMNEYS, ETC.

SEC. 10.—If any chimney, flue or heating apparatus shall, in the opinion of the Inspector of Buildings, be unsafe by reason of endangering the premises by fire or otherwise, he shall at once notify in writing the owner, agent or other party having an interest in said premises, who upon receiving said notice shall make the same safe, in pursuance of the terms of said notice.

SEC. 11. The Inspector of Buildings shall examine all shops and other places where shavings or other combustible material may be deposited or collected, and at all times be vigilant in the removal of the same, whenever in his opinion the same may be dangerous to the security of the City from fires; and direct the owner, tenant or occupant of said shops, or other places, to remove the same; and in case such owner, tenant or occupant refuses so to do, shall cause the same to be removed at the expense of the owner.

SEC. 12. The following rules and regulations are hereby adopted.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

SECTION 1.—MEANING OF TERMS.

In the construction of this Ordinance if not inconsistent with the context, the following terms shall have the respective meanings assigned to them:

EXTERNAL WALL shall apply to every outer wall or vertical enclosure of a building, other than a party wall above the foundation wall.

PARTY WALL shall apply to every wall used or built, intended as a separation of any building from any other building.

FOUNDATION WALL shall mean that portion of external walls below the level of the street curb, and for walls not on any street, that portion of the wall below the level of the ground outside of the wall.

BRICK BUILDING means a building the walls of which are built of brick, stone, iron or other incombustible materials.

WOODEN BUILDINGS means a building one or more of the outside walls of which are of wood.

DWELLING HOUSES means a building used wholly for domestic purposes, occupied only by families or persons, in which no mechanical business is carried on.

SECTION 2.—BRICK BUILDING FOUNDATION, ETC.

Every brick building shall have foundations laid in mortar extending four feet below the surface exposed to frost, and shall rest upon solid ground, or suitably driven piles.

Excavations for such foundations shall be made six inches larger than the wall each side, and shall not be filled in until inspected. Whenever piles are required to be driven for a foundation they shall be of suitable stock driven to a firm and solid bearing, and the tops shall be cut off on a level to insure constant immersion there shall be not less than two rows under all external and party walls and they shall be spaced not over three feet on centres in the direction of the length of the wall.

All piles shall be capped with granite block levellers not less than sixteen inches thick, each stone to have a firm bearing on at least two piles in each row or concrete not less than two feet in thickness. Any wooden building erected on soft and marshy ground for use as workshop or other like purposes or as a temporary structure may, with the approval of the Inspector of Buildings be constructed on mud sills, concrete or piles.

SECTION 3.—THICKNESS OF FOUNDATION WALL FOR BRICK BUILDINGS.

OTHER THAN DWELLING HOUSES.

| HEIGHT OF WALLS ABOVE. | BLOCK STONE. | RUBBLE STONE. | BRICKS, OR SOLID CONCRETE |
|---|---|---|---|
| Two stories. | 24 inches. | 30 inches. | 24 in. at bottom to 16 in. at top. |
| More than two stories | 30 inches. | Not allowed | 28 in. at bottom to 20 in. at top. |

FOR DWELLING HOUSES.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Two stories. | 20 inches. | 24 inches. | 20 in. at bottom to 12 in. at top. |
| More than two stories | 24 inches. | 30 inches. | 24 in. at bottom to 16 in. at top. |

2. All brick buildings, exceeding 30 feet in height shall have under foundation wall, a footing course of stone or concrete not less than six inches wider than the bottom of said wall and not less than 12 inches thick.

SECTION 4.—THICKNESS OF WALLS FOR BRICK BUILDINGS.

DWELLING HOUSES.

| HEIGHT OF BUILDING. | EXTERNAL WALL. | PARTY WALL. |
|---|---|---|
| Two stories. | 12 inches | 12 inches. |
| More than two stories | 16 in. 1st and 2d story. | 12 inches. |

OTHER THAN DWELLING HOUSES.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Two stories. | 16 in. for 1st story.12 in. for 2d story. | 12 inches. |
| More than two stories | 20 in. for 1st and 2d.16 in. for 3d.12 in. above. | 16 in. for 1st and 2d story.12 in. above. |

2. If the height of any story exceed 16 feet between floors the external walls of that story shall be increased 4 inches. No external wall shall be lighter at any part than the wall above.

SECTION 4.—WALLS OF STABLES, ETC.

The external walls of brick buildings less than thirty feet high and not exceeding 2000 superficial feet to be used for stable or light mechanical purposes may be 12 inches thick.

SECTION 5.—WALLS OVER SIXTY FEET HIGH.

The thickness of walls and foundations in buildings over 60 feet high shall be determined by the Inspector.

SECTION 6.—SUPPORTS.

1. Supports of brick buildings other than their foundations shall be of iron, concrete, stone or brick piers, and shall rest on an iron plate not less than two inches thick.

2. For brick buildings used as dwellings exceeding 35 feet in height, there shall be under all columns or piers a footing of stone or concrete not less than 24 inches square and 12 inches thick; in brick buildings other than dwellings, all columns or piers shall have a footing of stone or concrete not less than one foot larger on all sides than the area of the pier and 12 inches thick.

3. No pier in any brick building shall be less than one foot square, and if of brick they shall be hard burned. All piers shall be built with, and all footings bedded in cement mortar.

4. Piers under lintels, girders or columns of brick buildings, other than dwellings, shall have a cap-iron at least two inches thick the full size of the pier.

SECTION 7.—FIRE WALLS.

1. No buildings erected for mercantile purposes shall be built more than 50 feet in width, measuring along the line of wall facing the street, without a brick partition wall at least 8 inches thick if less than 35 feet high, and 12 inches thick if over 35 feet high, and not exceeding 60 feet in height; said wall shall be built up at least 12 inches above the roof at its highest point, and the top of said wall shall be covered with a coping of stone, or iron or other metal; and where there is a mansard or pitched roof, the wall shall be built 24 inches above every part of the roof covering.

The provisions of this section shall not apply to single rooms, halls, workshops or manufactories requiring larger dimensions, the construction of which must be approved by the Inspector.

SECTION 8.—PARTY WALLS.

All party walls shall be built through and at least twenty-four inches above or distant from the roof boarding, at every part of the roof and shall be covered with a coping of stone, iron or other metal. But when the wall extends 36 inches above the adjoining building, parapet walls may be omitted.

SECTION 9.—PARTITION WALLS IN DWELLINGS.

All brick buildings to be used as dwellings, tenement or lodging houses, in excess of 40 feet in width, shall have brick partition walls, not less than 12 inches thick, on which the floor beams shall rest, and said walls shall not be more than 30 feet apart.

SECTION 10.—OPENINGS, ETC.

All openings in brick walls, not supported by stone or iron lintels, shall be properly arched with brick; no timber shall be used in brick walls, except in case of arched forms, arched their whole length. No side wall of a brick building shall be carried up in advance of the rear walls. No opening shall be made in any wall separating a store, either from a habitation or stairway leading to a habitation.

SECTION 11.—RECESSES IN WALLS, ETC.

No continuous vertical recess, chase or flue shall be made in any party wall so deep that it will leave the thickness at the back less than 8 inches at any point, and no recess of any kind shall be made in any 8-inch wall. No horizontal recess shall be made in any wall, except by a special permit from the Inspector. No continuous vertical recess other than flues, in stacks, shall be nearer than 7 feet to any other recess.

SECTION 12.—OPENING CUT IN PARTY WALLS, ETC.

No opening or doorway shall be cut through a brick party or partition wall of any building without a permit from the Inspector; and every such doorway shall have top, bottom and sides of stone, brick or iron; shall be closed by two sets of wrought-iron or metal covered doors (separated by the thickness of the wall) hung to rabbeted iron frames, or to wooden frames entirely covered with metal, or to iron hinges in brick or stone rabbets; shall not exceed 10 feet in height by 8 feet in width; and any opening other than a doorway shall be protected in a manner satisfactory to the Inspector.

SECTION 13.—ELEVATORS AND LIGHT SHAFTS.

Elevators and light shafts, if of wood, shall be lined with sheet-iron or tin, or plastered on metal lathing throughout.

SECTION 14.—HOT AIR PIPES, ETC.

No wood-work shall be placed at a less distance than 1 inch from any tin or metal flue or pipe, used or intended to be used to convey heated air, unless such flue or pipe be cased with metal or asbestos paper or other fire-proof material, wood-work tinned. Openings in breasts, partitions or floors, through which furnace pipes pass, shall have fire stops of sheet iron, tin or masonry.

SECTION 15.—STEAM PIPES.

Steam pipes shall not touch any wood-work and where they pass through floors or partitions shall be protected by an incombustible ring or tube, or rest on iron supports.

SECTION 16.—BONDING WALLS.

1. Every eighth course, at least, of a brick wall shall be a heading or bonding course, except when walls are faced with faced brick, in which case every eighth course, shall be bonded with Flemish headers, or by cutting the courses of the face brick, and putting in diagonal headers behind the same.

2. No soft brick shall be used in the construction of the outside walls of any brick building.

SECTION 17.—WALLS ANCHORED, ETC.

1. All brick walls in any building on which the ends of beams rest shall be anchored at each tier of beams at intervals of not more than 10 feet apart, with wrought iron anchors, at least ½ inch by 1 ½ inches, well built into the walls and well fastened to the tops of the beams; and where the beams are supported by girders or on partition plates, the ends of beams resting upon girders or partition plates shall be fastened together and strapped by wrought iron straps or tie irons, at the same distance apart, and in the same beams as the wall anchors.

2. The ends of all girders or partition plates, resting on or abutting any wall, shall be anchored to it.

3. Anchors shall not be run through partition walls.

4. If side or partition walls are carried up in advance of front walls, they shall be anchored to front walls by wrought-iron anchors, not less than ⅜ inch by 1 ½ inches, at a height of every ten feet, and built into partition or side walls not less than 36 inches, and into front walls, at least half its thickness.

5. Plates of all roofs shall be bolted to walls, not less than every 10 feet; bolts to be built into walls twenty-four inches.

All roofs hereafter to be constructed or renewed within the limits of District No. 1 shall be covered with slate or other incombustible material; also all gutters within the said district hereafter constructed shall be of metal or covered with metal.

SECTION 18.—CONSTRUCTION OF CHIMNEYS.

1. All chimneys hereafter shall be built of brick, stone or other incombustible material, and shall have a footing of masonry or iron supported by iron, or corbels of brick or stone. No chimney shall be hung to an eight-inch wall, or bear or rest upon wood. No chimney corbelled from a wall shall project more than the thickness of the wall.

2. All brick smoke flues less than 8 inches thick shall be lined with flue lining, from two feet below any wood-work in basement, to not less than one foot above roof, the balance of flue above this lining to be smoothly plastered inside. All brick vent flues shall be smoothly plastered or cement washed on the inside. All flues shall be topped out at least four feet above the highest part of the roof at the point through which they pass, with brick or stone, and the topping out shall not have more than two inches projection, unless covered by a cap of improved incombustible material, properly secured; and in no case shall a nail be driven into the masonry of any flue. All wood-work in brick buildings shall be placed distant one inch from the outside of every chimney flue, and the space around such wood-work and brick-work of chimney where it passes through floors shall be closed by a proper fire-stop of incombustible material. In chimneys with more than one flue, the withes shall be constructed of brick laid flatways and bonded every eighth course and plastered.

In no case shall a chimney be built more than 4 inches out of plumb, unless the same is attached to a brick wall, the outside of all chimneys to be plastered from the first floor to the roof boards.

The builder in charge of construction or the owner of the premises shall give notice to the Inspector of Buildings whenever any parts are ready for inspection. If those parts are to be covered in the further construction of the building, the Inspector shall respond promptly and in no case shall he delay more than twenty-four hours after such notice has been received.

SECTION 19.—FIREPLACES, HEARTHS, ETC.

1. All hearths shall be supported by trimmer arches of brick or stone; or be of single stones at least six inches thick, and supported entirely by iron beams, one end of which shall be securely built into masonry of chimney or adjoining wall. The brick jambs of every fireplace, range or grate opening must be at least 8 inches wide each, and the back of such openings must be at least 8 inches thick, for at least 2 feet above such openings.

2. All such hearths and supports shall be at least 12 inches longer than the width of such openings and at least 18 inches wide in front of the chimney breast. The brick-work over all fireplaces and grate openings shall be supported by proper iron bars or brick or stone arches.

SECTION 20.—SCUTTLES, BULKHEADS, ETC.

All brick buildings more than 25 feet in height shall have scuttle-frames not less than 2 x 3 feet in size, or bulkheads and doors, on the roof, made of or covered with some incombustible material; and every scuttle shall have a stationary step-ladder, and every bulkhead shall have stairs furnished with a sufficient guard or hand rail all ready for use at all times; and in a tenement house such a scuttle or bulkhead shall never be locked, but may be fastened by a hook on the inside.

SECTION 21.—FRAMING FLOOR, ETC.

The ends of all floor-beams and rafters of a brick building, entering a wall shall be cut on a splay of four inches in their width, and no roof or floor-beams resting upon the same wall on opposite sides, shall have less than 4 inches of brick work between the ends of such beams.

SECTION 22.—HEADERS, HOW HUNG.

Every header more than four feet long, used in any brick building, except a dwelling, shall be hung in stirrup-irons of suitable dimensions for the size of the timbers, and securely joint-bolted. All tail beams shall be properly framed or hung to headers.

SECTION 23.—FLOORS, ETC.

1. In all dwellings the sizes of floor joists shall be as follows:

| DISTANCE BETWEEN BEARINGS. CLEAR SPAN OF | SIZE OF JOIST. | DISTANCE ON CENTRES. |
|---|---|---|
| 10 feet. | 2 x 7 inches. | 16 inches. |
| 11 " | 2 x 7 " | 16 " |
| 12 " | 2 x 8 " | 16 " |
| 13 " | 2 x 8 " | 16 " |
| 14 " | 2 x 9 " | 16 " |
| 15 " | 2 x 9 " | 16 " |
| 16 " | 2 x 10 " | 16 " |
| 17 " | 2 x 11 " | 16 " |
| 18 " | 2 x 12 " | 16 " |

or of sizes giving their equivalent in strength of floor.

2. The attic floor joists in dwellings can be one inch less in depth than is given in the above table except lengths 12 feet and over may be 2 inches less, and any attic, whether finished or unfinished, to which there is access, that can be used for storage purposes, shall have the same strength.

SECTION 24.—ACCESS TO PIPES, ETC.

1. In the running pipes, no floor timber, header or trimmer shall be cut into more than 2 inches in depth nor more than 3 feet from its support, without a permit from the Inspector.

SECTION 25.—FIRE STOPS.

1. All furred brick walls shall have fire stops not less than 6 inches wide at top and bottom of each story.

2. All wooden partitions about the stairway shall be filled in between the studding and floor joist with brick and the spaces between stringers or carriages of all wooden staircases, unless said stringers or carriages are left exposed, shall be closed at intervals not exceeding three feet by a fire stop of two inch stock.

3. Spaces between floor joists resting on sills, girders and main partitions, shall be filled with brick.

4. Fire stops shall be cut in between studding on top of

CITY OF QUINCY

under floor in each story and under ledgers, of the same size as studding, and shall have fire stops of sheet iron, tin or masonry around chimneys on each floor.

5. Sills and caps of cross partitions shall be of the same size as studding, and all outside walls shall be plastered down to under floors.

SECTION 26.—WOODEN BUILDINGS, FOUNDATIONS, ETC.

Foundations of wooden buildings in districts No. 1 and No. 2 shall rest upon solid ground or suitably driven piles and shall be built below frost.

In District No. 3 wooden structures for dwellings, manufacturing or business purposes, not exceeding two stories in height, may be built on stone or brick foundation or on suitably driven piles as aforesaid in Section 2 of the ordinance, or on piers or posts each set on a hard bottom but to a depth of not less than four feet below the surface of the ground. Said piers, posts and piles to be spaced not more than eight feet on centers or said structures may be built on mud sills resting on cross pieces of plank three inches or more in thickness not less than four feet long and ten inches wide placed at intervals of not more than three feet on centers.

SECTION 27.—THICKNESS OF FOUNDATION WALLS OF WOODEN BUILDINGS.

DWELLING HOUSES.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Block stone | Rubble stone | Brick or solid concrete 12 inches. |
| 20 inches. | 24 in. at bottom to 18 in. at top. | Bracketed at bottom to 18 in. wide. |

2. For wooden buildings other than dwellings or for dwelling houses more than three stories in height the above wall shall be increased 4 inches in thickness.

3. Rubble stone walls shall be bonded by headers through the wall every two feet in each direction.

SECTION 28.—UNDERPINNINGS.

1. All brick underpinnings shall be at least 8 inches thick, and all brick underpinnings averaging over three feet high shall be not less than 12 inches thick, and under buildings three or more stories in height shall be not less than 12 inches thick their entire height.

2. All brick work exposed to frost shall be constructed with hard burned brick.

3. Any foundation for any dwelling built on other than gravelly or porous soil, shall be underlaid with suitable trench stone to the depth of 12 inches and 4 inches wider than the wall, with outlet that will drain the same unless said cellar shall be constructed water-tight.

SECTION 29.—BUILDINGS ON PIERS, ETC.

1. Buildings that do not rest on foundation walls of piling shall be supported on brick or concrete piers of hard burned brick, concrete or stone; piers shall not be less than 8 x 10 inches, with a footing not less than 6 inches larger than the area of the pier on all sides, of brick, stone or concrete, 12 inches thick; all footings of piers shall be started three feet below the surface of the ground, and all piers and footings, unless of stone, shall be solidly laid in one-third cement mortar.

2. Dwellings shall be supported in cellars and basements by iron columns on proper footings, stone, concrete or brick piers. When iron columns or stone are used they shall have footings of stone 16 x 16 inches and if brick or cement piers, footings of stone 4 inches larger all round.

3. Brick or concrete pier in cellar under girders shall not be less than 8 x 12, and over 8 feet high shall be 12 x 12.

4. Porches and piazzas shall be supported in a manner approved by the Inspector.

5. These dwellings may be supported in cellar by red cedar or chestnut posts when the same is approved by the Inspector.

SECTION 30.—PARTITION WALLS, ETC.

1. In the erection of wooden buildings in blocks of two houses, if more than two stories high, or in two-story houses if in blocks of more than two houses, to be occupied for dwelling purposes they shall be divided in the basement by a brick party wall not less than 8 inches thick to top of first floor, or by a 4-inch brick wall, built in between piers not less than 12 inches square, the piers not to be more than 8 feet apart. The division partitions above such walls shall be filled in with brick between the studding and floor joists up to the roof boards.

2. Lodging, tenement or apartment houses in excess of 35 feet in width, on the line of the street shall be divided in the basement as specified in paragraph 1 of this section, and shall have partition walls filled in with brick.

3. Said walls shall be located along one side of front and rear stairways, or, if double rear stairways are erected, it shall separate them; it shall separate the light shafts and extend entirely through the building from front to rear and up to roof boards.

4. All wooden partitions about the stairways shall be filled in between the studding and floor joists with brick.

5. Spaces between floor joists resting on sills, girders and main partitions, shall be filled with brick.

6. Fire stops shall be cut in between studding on top of under floor in each story and under ledgers, of the same size as studding, and shall have fire stops of sheet iron, tin or masonry around chimneys on each floor.

7. Sills and caps of cross partitions shall be of the same size as studding, and all outside walls shall be plastered down to under floors.

8. The openings at the floors, whether caused by ledgers or floor joists projecting above sills or girders, shall be stopped by pieces cut in tight; in dwellings where floor joists are supported on ledger planks that portion of the outside wall below the ledger forming a part of the basement walls, there shall be stops two inches thick cut in on top of floor between studding.

SECTION 31.—SILLS, POSTS, ETC.

Section 31. All wooden buildings and their projections having a floor area of or more than 300 square feet, or over one story in height, used as dwellings, stores, stables or for manufacturing purposes, shall have sills not less than 6 x 6 inches or 4 x 8 inches and if over one story and a half high, girts and posts not less than 4 x 6 inches and if three stories high posts 4 x 8 inches shall be used, posts, girts and sills mortised and tenoned and pinned together, and wherever ledges are used in dwelling there shall be fire stops cut in tight of the same size as wall studs.

SECTION 32.—RAFTERS AND PLATES.

1. All dwellings over one story in height shall have plates not less than 4 x 4 inches, or its equivalent, and if over 16 feet in width shall have rafters not less than 2 x 6 inches, set not more than 24 inches on centres.

2. No studding for any part of the outside walls of any building over one story in height shall be less than 2 x 4 inches.

SECTION 33.—GIRDERS, HEADERS, TRIMMERS, ETC.

1. There shall be girders not less than 6 x 8 inches under main partitions, and summers or floor joists doubled or their equivalent, under all cross partitions, in the first floor of all dwellings.

2. Headers and trimmers of all openings over 4 feet in length in first floor of dwellings shall be floor joist doubled or their equivalent, and in any other floor if deemed necessary by the Inspector.

3. TRUSSES, ETC. All self-supporting walls or partitions above the first floor in any building carrying floor, shall be trussed in a manner approved by the Inspector.

4. Beams carrying main partitions in first floor shall be supported on piers or posts not more than 8 feet apart. Trimmers in first floor over 12 feet in length shall be supported by a pier or post, or partition above shall be trussed.

5. All buildings shall be braced in each story, and in cross partitions if deemed necessary by the Inspector.

SECTION 34.—CHIMNEYS, ETC.

1. All chimneys shall be constructed of brick, or other fire proof non-conducting materials.

2. All brick chimneys shall be topped out with hard bricks and shall extend 4 feet above the roof at the highest point through which it passes, and where they pass through floors they shall be kept one inch from any wood-work.

3. All brick-work smoke flues, within the limit of fire district No. 1, less than 8 inches thick shall be lined with flue lining from 2 feet below any wood-work in basement, to not less than 1 foot above the roof, the balance of flue above this lining to be smoothly plastered.

4. All brick vent flues shall be smoothly plastered or cement washed on the inside.

Hot-air pipes same as Section 14.

Steam-pipes same as Section 15.

SECTION 35.—BUILDING SEPARATED BY BRICK WALLS, ETC.

1. A wooden building to be used as a dwelling, tenement, lodging house or hotel, shall not exceed a height of 45 feet. The external walls of any wooden building shall not be placed at a less distance than 2 feet 6 inches from the line of the lot upon which the building is to be located, unless a brick external wall is substituted for the wooden wall, and of a thickness prescribed for the erection of external walls in brick buildings. Such walls shall be built 24 inches above roof boarding at every part of the roof and shall be covered with metal; but where these walls extend 3 feet above adjoining buildings, parapet walls may be omitted.

2. There shall be a space of 3 feet 6 inches between wooden buildings already erected and those that shall be built upon adjoining lots, unless a brick external wall separates them as prescribed in Article 1 of this section.

3. There shall be a space of 3 feet 6 inches between wooden buildings already erected upon a lot and any wooden building over one story high that shall afterwards be built or moved upon the same lot. If there is to be a less space between them they shall be separated by a brick wall at least 8 inches thick. There shall be a space of 3 feet 6 inches between any wooden building or buildings, over one story high, already erected upon a lot, and any wooden building that shall afterward be erected upon or moved upon the same lot. If there is to be less space between they shall be separated by a brick wall at least 8 inches thick.

SECTION 36.—STAIRCASES AND SCUTTLES.

1. All buildings of over three stories in height or where the third floor in two story buildings is used for dwelling or tenement purposes, shall have a staircase from street level to top floor with a scuttle to roof for at least every three families occupying the building, or front and rear staircases not opening into the same corridor but connecting with all floors, or shall be provided with suitable fire escapes connecting each floor. The Inspector may require that proper fire stops shall be provided in floors, walls and partitions of such buildings and make such further requirements as may be necessary or proper to prevent the spread of fire therein or its communication from any steam boiler or shop or heating apparatus.

2. All buildings for factory purposes shall have a simple staircase and scuttle if more than ten operatives are employed above the second floor, and suitable fire-escapes shall be provided. Every building shall have, in reference to its height, condition, construction, surroundings, character of occupation and number of occupants, sufficient means of egress in case of fire, and such means of egress shall be satisfactory to the Inspector of Buildings.

SECTION 37.—BAY WINDOWS AND BALCONIES.

No bay window, balcony or other projection shall be built upon the front wall of any building so as to project over the line of the street. All roofs of buildings abutting on any street or sidewalk shall be so guarded as to prevent snow, ice or water from falling on said street or sidewalk.

In all buildings hereafter built or remodelled within the limits of the City of Quincy, all water-closet compartments must have a window opening upon the street or yard or upon a court or vent shaft.

SECTION 38.—BUILDINGS NOT SPECIFIED.

All buildings hereafter to be erected of a description not specified in this ordinance shall be constructed in a manner that shall be satisfactory to the Inspector.

SECTION 39.—ASH DEPOSITORIES.

1. Depositories for ashes in the interior of any building shall be constructed of incombustible materials, so as to entirely enclose their contents.

2. Ash shoots, if inside of a building shall be made of hard brick; if erected outside the building, they shall be constructed of galvanized iron, such pipe to be kept 2 inches away from all wood work.

SECTION 40.—RELIEF FROM ORDINANCE.

Any person applying for a building permit who desires to be relieved from the operation of any of the provisions of this Ordinance, may make application in writing to the Inspector of Buildings, specifying in detail what exceptions are desired and the reasons therefor. Said applications with the written explanations, specifications, maps, etc., relating thereto shall be submitted by the Inspector of Buildings, to the Mayor, Commissioner of Public Works and City Solicitor, and if unanimously approved by them said application shall be granted by the Inspector of Buildings. If disapproved by any one of the above named officials then the applications with the dissenting official's reasons shall be submitted to the City Council which body by vote of two-thirds of its members present and voting shall approve or disapprove the application.

SECTION 41.—PENALTY.

Whoever violates any of the provisions of this Ordinance shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars ($100.)

HAD LOADED REVOLVER

But Tavelli Did Not Make Any Attempt to Use It

WHEN ARRESTED

Bastisti Tavelli was arrested at his boarding house 40 Cross street, Sunday evening by Officers Curtin and Duane on a warrant for alleged assault on Henry Brogili. When the officers went to arrest the man they were informed to be on their guard as he had a revolver with him. They had no difficulty in placing him under arrest and although he had a five chamber revolver in his hip pocket, fully loaded he made no attempt to use it. It seems that earlier in the evening he got the idea that Brogili had been trying to get his boarding master to fire him out so that he, Brogili, could get the room.

Brogili came in during the early part of the evening and was eating his supper when Tavelli came up and struck him twice in the face. He then went up stairs and taking his revolver from his trunk placed it in his pocket. In court yesterday he was arraigned for assault and for carrying a loaded revolver. He was fined $25. for the assault and $50. for carrying the revolver which was confiscated.

BRIEFS

Marion Gurney of Walker street is confined to her home with illness.

Little Carolyn Cherrington of Clive street is suffering with a severe cold.

Donald G. Rogers of Worcester is visiting his cousin, Beatrice A. Rogers of Billings street.

Mrs. J. I. Spear of Conant road entertained Miss Kelley and Mr. Bangs of Braintree last week.

C. H. Grocott and family of Ocean street have been guests of Mrs. Grocott's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson of 9 Mascot street, Dorchester.

Miss Elise Wohl came from New Hampshire to spend the week end with her parents on Walker street. Miss Wohl is a supervisor of drawing and enjoys her work very much.

The Quincy Choral Society concert occurs this evening in Music hall. Carl Webster 'cellist who appeared yesterday at the Womens' club musicale and met with such favor, is to play again, this evening at the choral concert.

Monday evening the Town River Yacht club held its weekly whist party at the clubhouse, Edison park. An enjoyable evening was spent. The winners of souvenirs were Stewart Foster and Commodore Thompson B. Crane. Dancing followed the whist.

The annual visitation of District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler of Massachusetts Southeast, P. J. Barrett of New Bedford and suite to Quincy lodge of Elks will be held tonight at New Colonial hall. A banquet and entertainment will follow the visitation.

Rev. John E. Lillback, has moved from the house which was visited by fire some two weeks ago and has now taken the second and third floors of Deacon John Zugala's house, 48 Albertina street. His daughters, Edith, Ellen and Gertrude are still seriously ill and Ellen had a period of delirium last week, which was quite alarming.

A whist party was given last night by Mrs. M. O'Neil at her home on Franklin street. Souvenirs were awarded as follows: Mrs. Denton, 42 points; Mrs. Kennedy, 42 points; Mrs. Barnicoat, 38 points; Mrs. Louis Berman, 37 points; and Mrs. McIntosh, 30 points and consolations to Mrs. W. T. Lillie, 18 points and Mrs. Newcombe, 14 points.

MRS. MATSON DEAD.

Mrs. John A. Matson, 38 years old, died at her home, in Fitchburg, Sunday night. Her husband had come to Quincy to secure work, and while he was here, she was taken with pneumonia. Telephone communication was made with Rev. John E. Lillback early Sunday night and the latter was kept busy answering calls all night and trying to locate the husband. Finally word came that the wife was dead and a short time afterwards the husband was located and made all haste home to arrange for the funeral.

THE BOWLING TOURNAMENT

Will Go to Carruth Alleys in Boston. Effort to Locate It Here

The seventh annual tournament of the National Duck and Candlepin Bowling Congress will not be held in Quincy, although Manager Forbest made every effort to secure the match. The board of directors voted to award the match to Boston. The events will be rolled on the new Carruth alleys. It is expected that Poehler, Christopher and Hintze will be in the fore rank of contestants.

The forfeits have not been posted as yet for the proposed Poehler-Christopher 20 string match, although articles of agreement have been signed. Dpring the week the money will be placed. It is certain that ten strings will be rolled at the Coliseum alleys and Quincy fans are hoping to see the final ten awarded to this city.

LAST HOME GAME FOR QUINCY GYM

Sigma a Good Rated Team to Be Their Opponents

The last home game of the Quincy Gym girls will be played at St. Mary's hall tonight with the Sigma Girls of the Posse Gym as their opponents. The event means fast basket ball because the visiting team is composed of some of the best girl players in the Posse Gymnasium and also in the state. Miss Minerva Pray, a forward, ranks high in state athletic circles and has personally coached a number of the Quincy girls opponents.

When it comes to saying what the calibre of the Quincy Girls team is but little is needed since they have suffered but one defeat this season and that was by the Needham team which they have beaten twice. While the local team is light they are quick and expect to beat Miss Pray's team.

PUMPS TESTED AT BRAINTREE

New Machine Gave Excellent Satisfaction in the Trials

The official test of the new pumps recently installed at the Great Pond pumping station of the Braintree water works was held last Saturday afternoon. There was a large attendance including the members of the Randolph and Holbrook water boards and also representatives from the city of Waltham water commission.

The proceedings were under the watchful eyes of the Braintree water commissioners, Hon. James T. Stevens John Kelley and William H. Harrison and Superintendent of water works William E. Maybury, the latter having full charge of the test. Other town officials present were Dr. Herbert F. Gile, secretary of the Board of Health and Tax Collector Frank A. Smith.

The affair was a great success and the pump worked perfectly. They were built and installed by the Platt Iron Works of Dayton, Ohio and representatives of that firm were on hand to see that all worked smoothly.

The pumps have a capacity of 1,500,000 gallons every 24 hours and it is believed that the townspeople need fear no scarcity of water for years to come. After the test a dainty lunch was served under the direction of Mrs. W. E. Maybury, wife of the superintendent.

PERIODICAL APPEARANCE

Smith Breaks in with His Usual Expected Big Score

OTHER BOWLING MOVEMENTS

The Fore River league matches drew considerable attention at the Coliseum alleys Monday evening. The Machinists beat the Electricians 4 to 0, the Pipefitters beat the Patternmakers 3 to 1 and the Hull Draftsmen and the Foundry split even.

Stevenson of the Pipefitters was high man with 109 and made the best three string total of 287.

At the City Square alleys the Cranch beat the Melanchopees in the City League, 4 to 0. Skinner set a high record for these bowlers by reaching 114 for high single and 287 for total.

The Quincy A. A. and the Manets had an exciting match, the former winning by 41 pins. Smith was high man with two consecutive string of 104 and a total of 305. Smith is one of the bowlers who plays around the spotlight now and then and quietly disappears until the mood for a high score again hits him.

WINTER CLUB BOWLING.

The bowling stars of Chelsea were the guests of the Houghs Neck Winter club at the beach Monday evening. Among those who attended were Harvey Hintze, the candle pin wonder who was defeated by Paul Poehler in a special match at the Coliseum alleys. A two string exhibition match was rolled by Poehler and Harry O'Brien, amateur champion of New England, and Hintze. The amateur was high man, with Poehler second and Hintze third.

A team of the Winter club defeated the Chelsea boys, 2 to 1. Songs were rendered by Joseph Magnus and the Broadway quartet, consisting of Ralph Bond, James Greenway, Peter Goff and Arthur Sweeney. George Smith presided at the piano. It is planned to hold the meetings monthly.

3000 MILES BY AUTOMOBILE

Clarke G. Boynton of Wollaston recently completed one of the most notable automobile trips ever made in this country, covering 2600 miles in a four cylinder White car. With his mother, Mrs. L. W. Boynton and Miss Lucy M. Spear of Quincy, he left Boston on Nov. 20 and arrived at Palm Beach Jan. 10. He visited relaitves who have founded a small town called Boynton, six miles below Palm Beach, on Lake Worth, where a week was spent, and left Palm Beach for Jacksonville via Cocoa Ormond, Daytona and several other stops, which will round out an even 3000 miles before he ships his car back to Boston.

COMMUNITY HOUSE.

An important meeting of those interested in the movement for a new community house at Wollaston will be held Wednesday evening, when further plans towards this end will be discussed and considered.

WARMING UP PROCESS BAD

Anderson Had a Varied Experience Recovering From Hot Ones

Harvey Anderson, one of the drivers for Calvin Fletcher went to Beechwood Monday with one of his four horse teams on a job. While there, his team got stuck and he got cold and to warm up took aboard a considerable quantity of firey liquor. The result was that it was 3 o'clock this morning before the team showed up in Quincy. In the meantime Mr. Fletcher had become worried about his team and had been out all night looking for the outfit. It was in the vicinity of 3 o'clock when he found the horses and wagon on Centre street with Anderson roosting on a stone wall.

Mr. Fletcher took his horses home and Anderson started to follow on behind. He had not gone far however before he thought that he had reached home and going up to the house of Samuel Pierce mistook it for his own home. Mr. Pierce it happened is away and Mrs. Pierce became very much alarmed when a man crawled in through the window and taking off his shoes turned in on the sofa. Word was sent to the police station and Officer Cahill went up with the patrol wagon and gathered Anderson in. He was brought into court this morning and fined $5 on account of costs.

BOILER MAKERS HEARD DOWD

Speak on the Abolition of Contract System Now Operated

Local 214 of the Boiler Makers' Union of the Fore River yard held a meeting at the Johnson building Monday evening. John J. Dowd, sixth international vice president gave an address on organization. He also explained the movement afoot in all organizations which in time will mean the abolition of the contract system now in use in many yards. He claimed that it did not work to the advantage of the working man and was not even allowing a man to receive a fair showing.

A large number are planning to attend the monster meeting to be held in Hibernian Hall, East Boston, Feb. 1, under the auspices of the Contract Men and Ship Builders of Boston.

Mr. Dowd will be in Quincy Feb. 5, when he will meet different organization delegates.

OFFICERS INSTALLED.

The recently organized Loftsmen local of the Fore River yard installed their officers at the Johnson Building, Monday evening. Short speeches, an entertainment and refreshments were on the program. The membership numbers 50 and they were organized by Frank McCarthy of the Boston Central Labor Union. The officers installed were:

President—Parker Graham.

Vice President—William Alexander.

Financial Secretary—Norman Cadman.

Recording and Corresponding Secretary—Fred McClennan.

HULTMAN SECRETARY.

Hon. Eugene C. Hultman of Washington street was chosen secretary of the Republican Club of Massachusetts at the annual meeting Monday. Councilor Alexander McGregor was elected president and in a speech urged the members to clean house, meet the sting of defeat with the reinvigorated spirit of Mother Earth and rise from among the great submerged to the rightful place in state and national policy, that of the strongest of strong parties. He asked the members to again grasp the strong principles of the party and said that it was the members who were at fault.

WOMEN'S CLUB REQUEST TO USE HIGH SCHOOL HALL TURNED DOWN

Squantum Residents on That Dinner Hour Transportation For Children

Salary Request Referred. Industrial Schools Commended

A regular meeting of the School Committee was held Tuesday evening Messrs Miller and Bruce being absent. Arthur W. Newcomb was elected as chairman pro tem.

A delegation of ten members of the Squantum Improvement association was present and given a hearing on their petition that the children of Squantum be allowed car fares that they might go home to dinner. No action was taken on the petition as the transportation committee was not ready to make its report.

Councilman C. A. Ross was present with a delegation of the Italian drawing school from South Quincy, with a request for the use of a room in the basement of the Lincoln school. Their request was referred to the Superintendent for further investigation.

The committee on the use of school halls recommended that the Committee or Superintendent might rent for any public or civic meeting, halls in the school buildings, to be held on such days when the building was heated for school purposes and when it would not interfere with regular school work, but not for public dancing parties or for entertainments for which the halls were not licensed by the state. The rental to be fixed for each occasion at a sum sufficient to cover all expenses. The report was adopted.

The resignations of Robert J. Streeter and Miss Alice A Todd of the High school were received and accepted.

The request of the Women's club for the use of the High school hall two afternoons, one in February and one in March was refused as they were not to be open to the public.

The request of the elementary school teachers for an increase in salary was received and referred to the Finance Committee.

A letter was received from the State Board of Education approving the Quincy Industrial schools.

Owing to the absence of Chairman Miller the sub committees for the year were not appointed.

The financial statement to date was reported as follows:

YOUNG PEOPLE GAVE GOOD SHOW

Elsie in Squawland Pleased Large Audience

The two act play, Elsie in Squawland was presented to a large and appreciative audience at the Parish House of Christ Church, Tuesday evening. The young folks gave a most creditable performance. Bessie and Irene Langhorne played a duet before the show and between the acts. Mrs. Chaplin was presented with a bouquet of flowers. Candy was sold between the acts. The butterflies looked very dainty as they fluttered through the audience casting pinks about them.

The cast of characters included:

LATE TRAIN MUST MAKE GOOD IN THREE MONTHS TO HOLD JOB

Change Effected in Early Afternoon Train Owing to Dissatisfaction Expressed

Street Railway Company Will Be Requested to Co-operate

Despite the announcement earlier in the week, to the contrary the theatre train from Boston for Wollaston and Quincy will go into effect Monday, Feb. 3. The train will leave Boston at 12.04 o'clock, every night except Sunday night. This of course means that there will be a late train Saturday night.

William H. Teasdale, chairman of the transportation committee of the Board of Trade says that there has been so much kicking over the setting back of the 1.20 inward train to 12.54 that the committee has notified the railroad officials that it will not be satisfactory to the general public to have such a long time between trains at this hour. Word was received from the railroad officials this morning that the train would probably leave at 1.16 instead of 12.54 as previously arranged.

Chairman Teasdale said the midnight train from Boston would be put on for three months to try it out. Everyone is anxious that the street railway shall co-oporate to make the train a success and run a car from this train to West Quincy every night in the week. At the present time the street railway run a car from the outward train due in Quincy at 11.50 on Wednesday and Saturday nights. What the people want however is a car every night to run from the midnight train. A conference will be held with the street railway officials on the matter.

SNEAK THIEF SWIPED HAND BAG CONTAINING $50 IN MONEY

Investigation Led to Discovery of Hinchon Boy Taking $10 From His Mother

Mrs Williams Bag and Money Found on Temple Street

Mrs. Henry Williams of 18 Bigelow street supposed she was the victim of a clever sneak thief at the Quincy depot this morning. Mrs. Williams went to the depot to take the 10.03 train for Boston. She thought she had a small bag suspended from her right arm. She went to the ticket window to purchase a ticket and after taking what change she needed from her purse slipped it in her bag. The train was then pulling into the depot and she started for the door. Then it was that she was surprised to find that her bag was gone from her arm. As far as she can remember no one stood near her while she was making the purchase of her ticket and the only way that she can account for its disappearance was that some one slipped up beside her and seeing her put her purse in the bag, cut the handle and made way with it.

Shortly after 1 o'clock this noon it was learned that Mrs. Williams was mistaken when she thought that she had been robbed for the missing bag was picked up near the corner of Maple and Chestnut streets by Walter Carlberg one of the clerks at Johnson Bros., store a few minutes after Mrs. Williams had passed on her way to the depot. Mr. Carlberg took the bag into the store and left it in the office where it is waiting for the owner to call and identify it.

Nathan Ames of the Hardware Supply store reported to the police this morning that a 12 year old boy had visited his store this morning having more money in his possession than one of his age would likely have. The first time the boy appeared he had a $2 bill and he made several purchases principally of shot, and cartridges. A little later he again made his appearance. This time he had a $10 bill with him and wanted to purchase a rifle.

Mr. Ames took the bill and then turning to the boy said "young man you stole that money where did you get it." At this the boy turned and ran out of the store. Mr. Ames then called the police station and informed Lieut Hanson who in turn notified Chief Burrell.

DR. RYDER OPERATED

James Robbie of the Quincy Coal Co. had his right eye removed at the Quincy City Hospital Tuesday by Dr. Ryder. The eye was injured by the point of a screw driver which slipped off the head of a screw which he was setting in an electric light fixture in the garage. He is doing well today.

RAILROAD ASKS FOR NEW TRIAL

In the Cases Where Martin McConnell Was Awarded $4500

Judge Brown in the superior court at Dedham today, is hearing a motion for a new trial in the case of Martin H. McConnell against the Bay State Street Railway Company, in which the verdicts of $4000 for the death of his son and $500 for suffering were awarded at a previous trial. The company claims that the first verdict is excessive and that on the second there was evidence of due care on the part of the father.

CHORAL SOCIETY ANNUAL EVENT

Delightful and Pleasing Musical Program Presented

TO APPRECIATIVE AUDIENCE

The Quincy Choral Society gave its fifth season presentation at Music hall Tuesday evening to an appreciative but not too large an audience. The program was divided into two parts, the first being varied selections from popular high class compositions, and the second consisted of the Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise."

Osbourne McConathy conducted the concert and the orchestral accompaniament was by the Boston Festival orchestra of which John W. Crowley is principal.

Mrs. Marie Sandelius was the soprano, Benjamin E. Berry the tenor, and Carl Webster played the 'cello. All the artists came in for their share of praise.

The concert opened with the "Ruy Blas" overture by Mendelssohn by the orchestra. Gounod's "Unfold, Ye Portals," from the Redemption was so well rendered that the applause was deafening.

A group of songs by Mrs. Sundelius consisting of "Ich, Quaud je ors" by Liszt; "Go Not Happy Day" by Whelpley; "So Sweet is She" an Old English song of 1614; and Grigs "Solvej's Lied" and "Mor, min lill Mor" by Grondalk, the two latter were sung in Scandinavian, and well rendered.

Mrs. Sundelius showed wonderful expressive qualities in Grieg composition, it being the most pleasing of the group and as the last note of the last song faded to an echo all present united in tendering so appreciative an applause that she responded with a dainty encore.

The orchestra finely executed the meditation from "Thais" by Masseuet and the now familiar strains of this most popular orchestra were gladly welcomed.

As Mrs. Sundelius stepped forward and the chorus arose to give the "Ave Maria" of Gounod-Bach a hush of expectancy came over the audience. Adapted from the first prelude of both composers, the piece offers splendid opportunities for solo and chorus work. Effective in every way, Mrs. Sundelius and chorus succeeded in leaving a feeling of pleasure when the rendition was completed and another outburst of joy filled the house.

Carl Webster played the 'cello solo of Popper, the "Rhopsodie Hungroise" encore for which he received an ovation.

The final number of the first part was the "March of the Toreadors" from the Carmen of Bizet and aside from being the agency through which the society displayed its accomplishments was also one of the bset numbers of the evening.

The Hymn of Praise is a symphony-cantata which was produced in the Church of Saint Thomas in Leipsic, under the direction of Mendelssohn, on the four hundredth anniversary of the invention of printing, June 25, 1840. With four different movements and furnishing a theme for the development of thankfulness which gives great depth of feeling and wonderful opportunities for vocal rendition, it ranks high in the popular works of great composers.

Mrs. Sundelius and Mr. Berry not only did good work in their respective parts but successfully interpreted the idea of the theme. Both had solos recitative with chorus assistance and in the duet Mrs. Edith Cary Page assisted Mrs. Sundelius.

In the chorale, the perfect blend of voices made a distinct impression and the last chorus, ending with the words "All that has life and breath, sing to the Lord, Hallelujah!" was so finely given that a sigh or regret followed by loud applause was spontaneous.

The society is deserving of all that its members wish inasmuch as they have given well and often a program of an advanced musical nature which has not only been well received by

GRADUAL SHIFTING OF STATE PRISON TO CLASSIC PRECINCTS OF QUINCY

Charlestown Jail Said to Have Outlived Usefulness and to be Abandoned

Then It is Said This City will Be Gradually Favored

(Special to the Ledger)

State House, Jan. 27, "How would the people of Quincy like to have the State Prison located in their midst?" This question was propounded to the Ledger correspondent today at the State House by a prominent prison official and not feeling qualified to answer for the people of Quincy, he has passed it on to the Ledger. The State Prison at Charlestown has served its usefullness and will be abandoned by the State in a short while, it is claimed, because the State can get a big price for the land the present prison is situated on, can dispose of the material to advantage and, best of all, will be in a position to build the ideal prison that has been agitated for many years by prison reformers and social welfare workers.

A bill is now before the legislature the passage of which would make it possible for a new prison to be started at once and which also vests in the Governor and Council the power to select a site for a new prison. The plan is to establish a new institution first as a branch or auxiliary to the Charlestown prison and to gradually change the prisoners until finally all were confined in the new buildings and then the Charlestown State Prison would be demolished.

The chances for Quincy being selected as the site for the prison are not remote, if the word of the official above mentioned can be depended upon. It is agreed among the powers that be, that a new prison is needed, that it must be near Boston but must also be in a community where there will be enough acreage to establish a farm. This would of course be impossible in any of the thickly settled portions of Boston, or, in fact, almost anywhere to the North of the city for many miles. To the south or south-west, therefore, lies the territory most adaptable for the needs, and Quincy with its nearness to Boston, looks pretty good to some who are speculating on the decision that may be made.

QUINCY ELKS COMPLIMENTED

Upon Fine Lodge Showing and Degree Work

BY VISITING D. D. E. R.

The annual visitation of District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler P. J. Bartlett of New Bedford, Massachusetts Southeast and suite to Quincy lodge of Elks took place Tuesday evening. The meeting of the lodge was in New Colonial hall where the sessions will hereafter be held.

The district deputy was accompanied by the following suite:—

P. E. R., Robert J. Williams, Jr. of Quincy lodge as Grand Esquire; P. E. R., George Matthewson of New Bedford as Grand Leading night, P. E. R., Joseph E. C. Tuell of New Bedford as Grand Loyal night, Bro. Edward L. Bean of Quincy lodge as Grand Lecturing night, Bro. Leo J. McMaster of Quincy lodge as Grand Secretary, Bro. Alphonse LeClair of Quincy lodge as Grand Treasurer, P. E. R., Charles A. Higgins of Somerville and Bro. E. E. Bullock of Quincy lodge as Grand Trustees.

The grand officers were received with due honor by Exalted Ruler Philip J. Sullivan and officers and members of Quincy lodge and were escorted to the lodge room by a committee.

The degree work was exemplified upon three candidates by the officers of the Quincy lodge in a manner that called for many words of commendation from the grand officers.

After the work of the evening the District Deputy briefly addressed the lodge congratulating them upon their new quarters which were admirably adapted for lodge work. He also spoke of the exceptional work of the officers of the lodge and the almost letter perfect manner in which the ritual was rendered. He also referred to the grand work which Quincy lodge was doing in the charity line and wished them all success at the annual charity ball to be held Thursday evening and said that he hoped to be with them on that occasion.

Other brief remarks were also made by some of the other officers on his suite.

After the business of the evening an adjournment was made to the club rooms where Caterer Thompson served a most excellent banquet. There was also a short vaudeville entertainment at the club house.

One of the features of the evening came when Mayor Eugene R. Stone a member of Quincy lodge entered the lodge room. As he entered from the outer door the brothers stood and gave him a most hearty applause. He was also congratulated at having escaped being a victim of a black hand fiend.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Although considered practically on her "uppers," Turkey is still sharp enough to negotiate a big loan in Europe.

The Bull Moose lady is still obdurate to the advances of the Elephant gentleman of the G. O. P.

The Maine six footer who has a seven foot beard must take a crimp or two in it to keep from treading on his own Galways.

An apostle of the single tax claims the jobless man is a menace greater than any other. If some people had their way there would be nothing but perambulating menaces in every thoroughfare.

Lieut. Gov. Walsh is a pretty busy man now-a-days. He is bearing the fruit of his success to the second job in the state.

If all that is claimed against Jim Thorpe is true then we have been passing incense along to a false idol of amateurship.

The New York stock exchange defies the United States government but admits that the state can regulate its operations. That seems to be harking back to the period of much proclaimed state supremacy.

Boston is threatened with a longshoresman and garment workers strikes. Will labor peace ever be of long duration.

If, as according to Dr. Richardson, local health boards do not co-operate for the public good a sure and effective remedy should be applied immediately.

It looks as though the "old boy" desired to shatter all precedent and be fourth term candidate, which of course will hardly meet with the approval of some other aspirants.

Is it possible the great Brickley has been forgotten. Not a line about him for as much as two weeks.

President Mellen has been lucky in the jury end of his case thus far.

With the education of the Filipinos as printers it is to be hoped that they will not imitate some of their up to date liberators in the type of journals they will produce.

Stock exchange seats are going down but there has been no such great demand for them as the front row in the movies or the ballet.

Familiar commands which may be heard on Pennsylvania avenue, March 3, "pull down your skirt," "get your hat on straight," "tie up your back hair," "No flirting with the congressmen."

The law which puts a prohibitive tariff on a cure for cancer is too absurd to require argument for its immediate repeal. It certainly cannot be claimed that its free entrance will cripple any struggling industry.

What's England kicking about anyway? Don't her subjects own a big share of some of the alleged United States coastwise ships.

THE TIPPING.

The esteemed Boston Advertiser, touching upon the decree of Uncle Sam that he was not responsible for tips which an army officer distributed, while attending German war movements, seems to either forget, or lack knowledge. That Uncle Sam may be sound on the tipping subject on the particular instance noted, may be accepted but in other departments, the precaution is not so well defined. In certain departments, of the government, either the government allows it or the customs call for it, a certain amount is permitted for tips on trains or steamers. It is figured that the average tipping for an ordinary person, on Atlantic liner is $10 or more than the fare to New York and back by rail and boat and state room included. Rather a tidy little sum to give away inside of a week to insure service which you have already paid for. That Uncle Sam pays this for some people in one way or another is quite certain. In many cases the tipper many shave the limit price, but government gets the full amount in the totaled bill. Why government employees who get good salaries, and easy hours should get a tipping allowance and free favors in other directions which do not come to more deserving people will always remain a mystery and part of the system, where the everybody sovereign idea, is only an idea, and a dream and the so called sovereigns are hurdled around like a gang of sheep to do the bidding of the politician herder.

FICKLE FORTUNE.

The wheel of fortune in its regular revolutions marks some peculiar things upon the pages of history. Many of them are stranger than fiction. One remarkable illustration of this is the situation which greeted Gen. Daniel Sickles, in his old age, is gallantly met by one who was classed as former enemy. The widow of General Longstreet, a former adversary of Sickles comes forward and offers not only her good offices but substantial aid to the old Federal veteran in his darkest hour. She says that the southern men, men who fought in the Confederate army will aid in raising the fund which will keep Gen. Sickles from prison.

This is the right spirit and the scheme to relieve the general from his present dilemma will be successful and pleasant to people all over the country. Gen. Sickles has figured too much in the public print the past few months, and it is deplored on every hand, but possibly there was nothing which indicates that the general is not up to his former vigor and standards, when he permits himself to issue a commentary upon his action at Gettysburg as a bid for sympathy.

THORPE'S POSITION.

Thorpe has come out in the open and acknowledged that he is a professional as that term is understood. All this week kneed pleading that he was a poor Indian school boy, did not know any better and did not need the money and all that sort of milk sop, should be accepted for what it is worth. He knew those other fellows were hiding their name and identity for some purpose and he knew enough to hide the fact that he was not a Simon pure amateur athlete. He knew enough to keep his mouth shut and go to Stockholm, realizing that whenever his true standing was revealed he would place this country in the unenviable position of having a discredited man holding the blue ribbon of the world. If he had confined his efforts to this country alone and gulled his fellow countrymen as so many athletes are doing every day, it would not have been half as bad, but to go abroad, and compete with other nations in the grand derby of athletes, the gentleman's field, ah pshaw, it only goes to show how mean and small some people can be. If a person lacks personal honor what care have they for the honor of others with which they are intrusted.

Now that Thorpe has been exposed, on the face of a good many things, which have cropped out lately it would not be a bad thing for a complete investigation of methods, means and practices of other alleged amateur athletes who are getting by. Thorpe has held it justifiable for other nations to look with suspicion upon all contestants from the United States in future Olympic games.

JUDGE'S IRE AROUSED

Does Not Approve of High School Girls' Visit to Courtroom

Kansas City, Jan. 29.—A visit to the North Side police court by eleven high school girls, accompanied by instructors, drew a scathing reprimand from Judge Burney and caused the board of education to appoint an investigating committee to place responsibility for the presence of the girls in the court.

The class and instructors left the courtroom before Burney finished his denunciation of their presence.

—After the girls of the senior class of the Spokane, Washington high school had "packed" the meeting and voted that every boy in the class must escort one of the girls of the class to the annual banquet, 15 boys held an "insurgent" meeting and declared the "cards had been stacked." They decided first to bolt, but calmer political judgment prevailed, and it was determined to call another meeting of the class, in which it was agreed the boys should do the "packing." But the girls got information of the plan and they turned out in force. When some of the insurgent males tried to pass a motion forbidding the boys to escort the girls to the banquet, the girls mustered enough votes to defeat it. Evidently maidenly reserve was aroused, for when a motion was put giving the boys liberty to go as they please, it passed without a dissenting voice.

OPENS FUND FOR SICKLES

Sulzer Makes an Appeal to Save General From His Trouble

Albany, Jan. 29.—Governor Sulzer offered to contribute $100 to a fund to be raised to pay the $23,476 unaccounted for by General Daniel E. Sickles, as chairman of the New York monument commission. The state has begun an action to recover this money and secured an order for the general's arrest.

"No one regrets more than I do the sad predicament of the hero of Gettysburg," said the governor. "I believe that patriotic America will respond quickly and that in a week the amount necessary can be raised. It would be a fine testimonial in the name of gratitude for all the people owe to a great hero."

ANOTHER FIGHT NEAR JOLO

Cavalry and Constabulary Attacked by Force of Bolo Men

Manila, Jan. 29.—Further sharp fighting between the American troops and the Moros is reported, the result of an engagement near the city of Jolo, in which the American troops lost one man killed and six wounded.

A large force of bolo men made a sudden ouslaught and succeeded in rushing two troops of United States cavalry and a detachment of Philippine constabulary.

After a severe fight the Moros were beaten off, it is believed with heavy loss, but the number of their casualties has not been ascertained.

CUTTERS GIVEN A RAISE

Employers' First Break In Lynn Strike of Ten Weeks' Duration

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 29.—The first concession on the part of employers in the cut sole workers' strike at Lynn, which has been going on for ten weeks, was made when the Boston and Lynn Cut Sole company reinstated their employes with a $1 increase, a nine-hour day and half a day Saturday, together with a five-minute interval for washing.

The cutters now receive $21, solers $19 and stitchers $16. It is rumored that many other firms will agree to meet the demands of their employes in the near future.

Bank Defaulter Surrenders

New York, Jan. 29.—Abram L. Beavers, looter of the First National bank of Highbridge, N. J., of which he was cashier, surrendered to United States Marshal Beckman in Jersey City. Beavers has confessed his defalcation. He is staid to be short in his accounts $125,000.

CANDIDATES ARE HUSTLING

But Increase in Vote Today was Below Average

IN WASHINGTON CONTEST

The candidates in the Washington inauguration contest are too busy today collecting coupons and certificates to cast any votes. That prize certificate of 2,000 votes looks good to all the leading candidates, and they are hustling to win.

As usual, however, Mr. Bowditch was on hand to vote a straight Democratic ticket and his gain of 135 was the largest today. Then John T. Cain of the Knights of Columbus added 85, George L. Phillips of the Grand Army received 60, T. F. Flaherty of Currier's market 40, and William Erickson of the Forresters of America 25.

CITY OF WASHINGTON

In the early days of the United States after independence was declared, several cities put forth claims to become the capital city, viz: New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and others. Congress, however in 1790 empowered President Washington to select a location for a federal city on the Potomac river. The story goes that the site chosen by him which was later named in his honor, was one to which in his younger days as a surveyor he had been attracted.

The task of laying out the new city was intrusted to Major L'Enfant, one of the French officers who had served in the American army. He drew the plans on a scale which was commensurate with the importance of the city as the capital of the United States. These plans were modified some, but generally adopted. The area devoted to avenues, streets and parks exceeds in proportion that of any other city in the world.

ANOTHER BIG PRIZE.

The prize for the largest gain in votes this week is a vote certificate good for 2,000 votes, twice as large as last week. This will probably be the last prize for weekly gain, as the contest is drawing to a close. This certificate for 2,000 votes will be credited next Monday at 9 A. M. to the candidate who makes the largest gain during the week of Jan. 27—Feb. 3. To be successful in the contest for the free Washington trips a candidate will almost need these 2,000 votes. It will make considerable difference whether they are awarded to him or to the other fellow.

Remember, the last coupon in the contest will be printed Saturday, Feb. 8, a week from next Saturday.

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quin-

☞Any candidate in the Ledger trip to Washington to the inaugural, can take a look at the ticket by calling at the office. It looks good, as does also the companion ticket. The winner in the contest has the privilege of selecting a companion to go on the trip. It's a very complete trip costing $75 each ticket.

PROMOTER RUN DOWN AT BOSTON

Said to Have Defrauded People All Over the Country

ALLEGED MISUSE OF MAILS

Charged Against McNicholas, Who Is Captured Only After Long and Exciting Chase by Postoffice Authorities—Under Indictment at Cleveland For Alleged Mine Stock Frauds

Boston, Jan. 29.—A breezy-looking young man of the western type, his face bronzed by exposure to the open air, a wide sombrero tilted at a rakish angle on his head and his military coat buttoned up to his neck, was strolling jauntily through the lobby of Young's hotel when three federal sleuths closed in on him, hustled him into a waiting cab and rushed him off to the federal building.

On the way he readily admitted to them that he was James H. McNicholas and he wasn't surprised to find the predicament he was in. His arrest was followed by an immediate arraignment before Commissioner Hayes on a charge of using the mails in a scheme to defraud. He was held in $10,000 bail for a future hearing.

McNicholas was arrested on warrants based on indictments returned against him by the federal grand jury at Cleveland. Federal authorities say he has defrauded people all over the country out of thousands of dollars in the past half dozen years by selling worthless mining stocks.

The chase after McNicholas has been an exciting one for the postoffice authorities and has extended all over the eastern half of the country. The Boston authorities were set on his trail a few days ago and Postoffice Inspectors Gray, Carey and Hall were sent after him. They only had an old photograph and a very meagre description to work on.

They located him in Boston, but he jumped out before they could get him. They traced him to Portland, Me., then to Poland Springs and then back to Boston. He stopped a few days in each place, always in the most fashionable hotels, but always managed to jump out twenty-four hours before the detectives arrived. He seemed, the postoffice people say, to know intuitively that the detectives were after him.

Federal authorities are elated over the capture. They say he is one of the youngest mining promoters ever arrested. They also say his operations have been marked by unusual cleverness and that he has taken a lot of money from New England investors.

The indictment against him set forth that he organized and promoted the following mining companies: St. Joe Quartz Mining company, capitalized for $1,000,000; St. Joe Extension Mining company, capitalized for $2,000,000; St. Joe Mineral company, capitalization of $3,000,000; Old Channel Hydraulic Mining company, capitalization of $5,000,000.

The federal indictment charges that he never operated any mining properties connected with these companies, though he claimed to do so. It alleges that the dividends of 17½ cents a share he paid on the St. Joe Mining company stock was fraudulent and fictitious.

McNicholas represented, the indictment reads, that the Old Channel Hydraulic Mining company operated 1000 acres in southern Oregon, whereas, it says, as a matter of fact, it was not operated at all.

Federal authorities here know nothing of the man or his past history. He was without friends or even counsel when arraigned, and was was imprisoned for lack of bail.

BERRY RESIGNS OFFICE

Boston and Maine's Vice President Ends Fifty Years' Service

Boston, Jan. 29.—William F. Berry, head of the traffic department of the Boston and Maine railroad, has asked to be relieved from that position on June 1. Vice President Berry wished to retire last summer, but was persuaded not to do so. He is almost 70 years old, and his resignation will mark the end of nearly fifty years with the system, he having entered its service in March, 1864.

He was appointed second vice president more than seventeen years ago. His record in upbuilding Boston and Maine's freight and passenger business has been notable.

House Passes "Pork Barrel" Bill Without an Important Amendment

Washington, Jan. 29.—The house yesterday afternoon passed the annual rivers and harbors appropriation bill, the biggest of the so-called "pork barrel" measures, without an important amendment. It carried $40,800,000.

A motion by Representative Callaway to recommit the bill to the committee with instructions to limit the expenditures for the Atlantic intercoastal canal project was voted down, 82 to 160.

Your attention is attracted by the absence of jar—which on closer analysis, proves to be correctness of detail. The faultless style and perfect harmonizing of the minor accessories of dress contribute quite as much to the general effect as does the suit itself. They give the finishing touches. It is a great help to have such a fine Men's Furnishing Store as this to fall back upon with its carefully selected stocks of whatever a man needs from Shirts and Scarfs to Suspenders and Collars.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
Why Newspaper Advertising Pays:
1. The newspaper advertisement is not buried—it is accessible.
2. The newspaper advertisement of a commodity continually or daily needed is read by the very people whose continual or daily need the advertiser desires to supply.
3. The newspaper advertisement may be seen thirty times a month—it is not limited to one appearance.
Through the daily newspaper the advertiser can make a local and intimate appeal to his prospective customer in his own community and in his own vernacular.

—Banking by parcel post is the latest departure brought about by Uncle Sam's entrance into the express field. One bank in Spokane, Wash., has received by parcel post a score of small savings banks, each containing money for deposit. Local bankers say the new system is destined to prove an important adjunct of the savings department, as the parcel post provides an expeditious method of sending deposits.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

The January meeting of the Hospital Aid association is to be held tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. William B. Rice at the home of her son Fred B. Rice, Adams street. There will be an election of officers and yearly reports.

* * *

Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield is to entertain the Junior Friday club at her home 207 Arlington street, Wollaston, on Monday afternoon, and Miss Prescott will be in charge of the program, Ireland in 1641 being the main topic.

* * *

An interesting lecture-recital is to be given at the next meeting of the Philergians of Braintree on Feb. 4, in Cochato hall. Indian life, legends, music and dances with melodies on the harp, make up the program. Feb. 10, Edward Avis gives a lecture-recital of bird impersonations illustrated with the stereopticon and on Feb. 11, the postponed theatricals will be given.

* * *

For next week's meeting of the Friday club the hostess will be Mrs. James M. Nowland of Edgemere road with Mrs. Emery L. Crane the committee on program, subject: The Knights of Aristophanes.

* * *

Dr. Maria Drew of Atlantic is to address the Quincy Young Woman's club at their next meeting on Feb. 8, at the clubhouse. This will be the only meeting of the month.

* * *

For the Feb. 6 meeting of the Atlantic Shakespeare society act one of "The Tempest" from the entrance of Caliban to the entrance of Ariel in act two, scene one will be taken up under the chairmanship of Miss Mary Hinkley. The solo "Come unto these yellow sands" will be rendered by Mrs. William F. Cummings.

* * *

Because of the debate of the Quincy Women's club March 11, on "Resolved—that women be given the right of suffrage," more than usual interest has been taken by club members in the lectures given in our city under the auspices of the Massachusetts Political Equality union, and doubtless both sides are preparin some telling arguments pro and con. Rev. Anna Shaw's lecture Monday night was full of meat for those who attended.

* * *

The February meeting of the Quincy Day Nursery association will be held Tuesday afternoon at the Women's clubhouse, Presidents hill.

* * *

The meeting of the Milton Woman's club on Monday afternoon will be in charge of the Household Economics committee. Miss Blanche Thayer of Quincy will give a talk on "Home nursing and what to do in emergencies." There will be a social tea.

* * *

The full rehearsal of the Quincy Choral society Tuesday afternoon caused quite a change in the scheduled programs of the women's clubs. The Quincy Women's club had to hold their musicale Monday afternoon which necessitated a change for the Quincy Alliance from Monday to Tuesday afternoon, but as the meetings were well attended the change in no way marred the pleasures of club members.

* * *

Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution holds its February meeting on Monday, Feb. 3 with Mrs. Susan J. Wilde of 70 Tremont street, South Braintree. The hostesses will be Braintree members of the Chapter.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

The Alliance of First church met Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. George G. Saville the president being ill, Mrs. W. B. Nichols, presided; Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis secretary being in Canada and Mrs. Ralph L. Lovell, treasurer unable to be present the usual reports were omitted. Mrs. Charles H. Johnson, corresponding secretary read letters of invitation from the Medford and Randolph Alliances.

Miss Florence Austin of Cambridge, rendered two selections "Ah! Let me Dream," and "Lullaby." She possesses a remarkably sweet contralto voice, and her singing was much enjoyed. Mrs. Edward B. Marsh, accompanied at the piano.

The speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Daniel Monroe Wilson of Kennebunk, Maine, who did not need an introduction to those present as her husband was for many years pastor of First church. Mrs. Wilson took for her subject, "Twentieth Century Renaissance." She said in part:

"I might cite cases in history of men and women whose writings display refined sentiments, and a magnitude of events which would satisfy any ideal of what noble characters ought to be, but we will take up some of the leading topics of our own twentieth century. Every age has its spirit, proud, daring and courageous, and the word which expresses our attitude at the present time is dominant.

"We ask the question what is the ruling propensity of the times? One will answer commerce, another the amassing of wealth, education, politics, religion, the great movement of women, woman suffrage, and many other reforms and philanthropic works.

"We have poets, scholars, artists and writers of ability and prominence. Our colleges throughout our land are graduating bright and energetic men and women who are well equipped for the advancement and uplifting of humanity. We are as a nation proud of our attainments, but we are also compelled to admit that we make many mistakes.

"In our recent political presidential campaign, I often ask myself the question, what are the European nations thinking of us? It is said we are living in a vain, glorious age, but we are only preparing for it. The great controversy between labor and capital is unsettled, when it is settled then the millenium will be dominant on earth. The Hague conference amounted to nothing. Aviation is still in its infancy.

"The time is approaching when women will be given the ballot. We must look to ourselves to be decently prepared, no one is properly equipped. We have no power to express our influence without it. I might go on indefinitely."

During the social, informal hour old friendships were renewed and hearty and cordial greetings were exchanged.

Refreshments were served, Mrs. Jonh W. Sanborn and Mrs. Wilson Marsh, the hostesses presiding at the chocolate urns. Miss Miriam Marsh, Mrs. W. B. Nichols and Miss Hattie B. Pierce serving the guests.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

A change of days did not prevent a large gathering of club members and friends at Music hall, Monday afternoon, for the annual musicale, one of the features of the season's program.

The president Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard called the assemblage together at half past two for the usual business session of reports from the officers and chairmen of committees. Among the announcements were the following:

By courtesy of the New England Women's Club a legislative conference will be held in Chauncey Hall, Building, 585 Boylston street, Boston, Saturday, Feb. 8, at 2 P. M. The afternoon will be devoted to the consideration of the bills which have been approved by this department and indorsed by the executive board, and which are to be presented to the Federation at its midwinter meeting for further indorsement. Both sides of all such bills will be presented by able persons and a general discussion will follow. This method is adopted to enable all to fully understand the bills and thus be able to vote intelligently at the Federation meeting. Each person is requested to leave at the door a card bearing her own name and that of her club. All club women are earnestly requested to attend this conference. Mrs. Robert B. Park and Mrs. William E. Rowe will represent the Quincy club at this meeting.

By invitation of the Women's Charity Club of Boston the mid-winter meeting of the State Federation on Wednesday, Feb. 12, will be held in Arlington Street church, Boston. The morning session will open at ten o'clock. The legislative department will present the measures which have been recommended by the executive board for the indorsement of the Federation. Hon. Joseph Walker will speak on "The Making of a Law." The afternoon session will open at two o'clock. Professor Charles Zueblin will speak on "Saving and Spending." The white reserved seat and yellow tickets will be necessary for admission. Mrs. Percy H. Holman and Mrs. Thomas B. Pollard were appointed delegates to the meeting.

Mrs. Imogen B. Oakley, chairman of the general federation department of civil service asks for the indorsement of the following resolution: Whereas, The General Federation of Women's clubs through its members in all different states, has worked untiringly for better foods, better drinking water, better school facilities, better jails and almshouses, more parks and playgrounds, less smoke in the atmosphere and better civic conditions generally; and Whereas, All beneficial laws it has labored and is laboring to secure are liable to be set aside: Therefore, be it resolved, That the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's clubs indorse the principle of civil service reform and pledge its aid and influence to the advancement of the competitive system.

Mrs. Albert N. Murray, chairman of the Visiting Nurse committee announced that Rev. Allan Stockdale would be the speaker at the Feb. 11th meeting in place of Rev. W. H. Van Allen.

Mrs. Zenas S. Arnold said it was hoped to secure the hall at the High school for two of the large meetings of the club.

Out of town guests for the afternoon were: Mrs. Ella C. Richards, Weymouth; Moses R. Power, North Weymouth; Mrs. Ola A. York, Somerville; Mrs. Arthur Cobb, Braintree; Mrs. D. Gordan Thompson, Jr., Hyde Park; Mrs. John Meehan, Forest Hills; Mrs. A. M. Backman, Plymouth; Mrs. J. P. Sears, Roxbury; Mrs. Tucker, Brookline, N. H.; Miss A. Gove, Milton; Mrs. George Andrews, Braintree; Miss Ballou, Franklin; Mrs. B. B. Paterson, Boston; Miss G. Taylor, Braintree; Mrs. E. E. Whiffle, Westerly, R. I.; Mrs. E. D. Bither, Readville; Mrs. George O. McLean, Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. H. I. Everett, Norwood; Rev. Blanche Bagley, Canada; Mrs. E. Eastman, North Abington; Miss Barton, Braintree; Mrs. H. Rhodes, Braintree and Mrs. H. F. Bates, Hanover.

Before beginning the entertainment the president welcomed club members and guests and introduced Mrs. John B. Worster, chairman of the Music committee, who added a few words of greeting and announced the afternoon's program. The artists were the Fisher-Mason trio of Boston; Claude Fisher, violin; Carl Webster 'cello; Stuart Mason, piano, assisted by Miss Myra Louise Eekhoff, soloist. The following program was rendered:

|---|---|
| Trio in B Flat | Rubenstein |
| Moderato assai | |
| Scherzo | |
| Moderato | |
| Song—Air from Louise | Charpentier |
| Violin Solos | |
| Romanza Andaluza | Sarasate |
| Liebesfreud | Kreisler |
| Trios | |
| Serenade | Widor |
| Intermezzo | Macbeth |
| Bolero | Arbos |
| 'Cello Solo—Fantasia | Popper |
| Songs | |
| Yesterday and Today | Spross |
| How Sleeps the Crimson Petal | Quille |
| Una Voce poco fa | Rossini |
| Trio—Fantasie from | Samson and Delilah Saint-Saens |

It proved a most enjoyable concert the audience warming up to the skill of the artists as it progressed, becoming so enthusiastic over several numbers that there were frequent responses to encores.

The Trio was a harmonious blending of stringed instruments. The second group of three—the "Serenade," "Intermezzo" and "Bolero" was particularly pleasing not only for

SYMPHONY HALL CONCERT.

The grand success that Madame Clara Butt had at her concert in Symphony Hall a few weeks ago warranted a speedy return and Manager Mudgett made arrangements immediately for another concert by Madame Butt and her husband, Mr. Rumford, which will be given in Symphony Hall next Sunday afternoon, February 2nd, at 3.30. Everything considered, there has not been a concert given in Symphony Hall this winter that has given more real pleasure to the public than the Butt-Rumford one in the early part of this month. Madame Butt's wonderful voice and beautiful singing and Mr. Rumford's charming art are altogether exceptional. The programme Sunday with the exception of two songs will be entirely in English as follows:

|---|---|
| Songs: | |
| "Verborgenheit" | Hugo Wolf |
| "Der Gartner" | Hugo Wolf |
| "O Death" | Brahms |
| "The Two Grenadiers" | Schumann |
| Mr. Rumford | |
| Songs: | |
| "Clouds and Darkness" | |
| "Hear my Prayer" | |
| "God is my Shepherd" | |
| (Biblical Songs) | Dvorak |
| "Sabbath Morning at Sea" | |
| (Sea Pictures) | Elgar |
| Madame Butt | |
| Songs: | |
| "Silent Noon" | |
| "The Roadside Fire" | |
| Vaughan Williams | |
| "Eva Toole" (Old Irish Melody) | |
| Arr. by C. V. Stanford | |
| "The Little Red Fox" | |
| (Old Irish Melody) | |
| Arr. by A. Somervell | |
| "Land of the Almond Blossom" | |
| Old Sicilian Melody | |
| Mr. Rumford | |
| Duet: | |
| "Oh, that we two were Maying" | |
| Alicia Smith | |
| Madame Butt and Mr. Rumford | |
| Songs: | |
| "Softly awakes my Heart" | |
| (Samson et Dalila) | Saint-Saens |
| "The Fairy Pipers" | H. Brewer |
| "The Women of Inver" | |
| R. Loughborough | |
| "The City Child" | C. V. Stanford |
| "Oh, rest in the Lord" (Elijah) | |
| Mendelssohn | |
| Madame Butt | |

Harold Craxton, Accompanist.
John P. Marshall, Organist.

—People who are inclined to the belief that this year is to be a bad one because there is a thirteen in it, should forget it and get busy. A look backward will show that 1813 was not a bad one for the United States.

BRIEFS

Mayor Eugene R. Stone who has been in Connecticut for the past two days returned home Tuesday night.

Miss Edna Blanchard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Blanchard, is confined to her home with double pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Cunningham of Clinton were week end guests of her sister Mrs. Elmer E. Gray of Newton street.

The local ice men have about given up all hopes of getting an ice crop in Quincy this year and are looking about in Maine and New Hampshire for their supply.

According to the committee in charge of the Elks Charity ball, Thursday evening more tickets have been sold than in any previous year. This means that the success of the affair is assured.

Through a miscarriage and late arrival of the mail Monday much of the church news was not received in time for publication as usual, and has therefore been omitted this week owing to rush of other matter.

The Criterion whist club of Atlantic has postponed its meeting to have been held with Mrs. Lilly of Newbury avenue, on account of Mrs. Lilly's illness. The meeting on Feb. 5, will be with Mrs. Stanley Ferguson of Atlantic street.

Miss Jenny Purchase, secretary of the Associated Charities is to speak at the Thursday evening mid-week meeting of the Wollaston Congregational church, on the modern work of help to the unfortunate. The Ladies Benevolent society recently furnished the Associated Charities with a box of clothing valued at $40.

Miss Anna Mary Hyland of Standish avenue entertained friends Saturday afternoon in observance of her eighth birthday. Games were played followed by refreshments of cake, ice cream and candy. In the centre of the table was a birthday cake, ornamented with eight candles. Those at the party were Gladys McMillan, Ruth McMillan, Catherine Melaney, Frances Hill, Eleanor Hill, Marjorie Moles, Dorothy Stout, Catherine Doyle, Thomas Melaney and Wilbert Doyle.

THREE OF THEM CELEBRATED

The Fortnight Club Took Advantage of That Fact

Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Hall of 37 Faxon road, Atlantic entertained the Fortnightly club at their home Monday evening. Whist was enjoyed for two hours, after which the club gave Mrs. Chandler, Harvey Holt, and A. H. Hall, a birthday surprise, bringing in three birthday cakes, one for Mrs. Chandler with 25 lighted candles, another for Mr. Holt with 43 and still another for Mr. Hall with 29.

Each cut their cake, those present, receiving a generous portion. Refreshments consisting of punch, cookies, sandwiches, cheese, pickles, olives, crackers, ice cream and cake were served.

Dancing, singing and games were enjoyed until midnight, when all left for their homes, agreeing that it was the best meeting of the season.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Holt, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. David Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Hersey, Mr. and Mrs. Chandler and Mr. and Mrs. Hall. Mrs. Chandler invited the ladies to her home in Dorchester for luncheon Monday.

WOMAN'S GUILD FINE SUPPER

Enjoyed by Big Party at St. Chrysostom's Church

The supper given in the parish rooms of St. Chrysostom's Church Tuesday evening by the Woman's Guild was fully up to the usual high standard of excellence with Mrs. Daniel C. Miller chairman assisted by Mrs. Alice J. Bainbridge, Mrs. Howard D. Fowler, Mrs. George E. Allen, Mrs. Arthur Stanley, Mrs. George H. Bean, Mrs. Herbert H. Albee, Mrs. William J. Croucher, Mrs. Edwin Coleman, Mrs. John E. Walter, Mrs. Sydney J. Smith, Mrs. Frank Hearst, Miss Margaret Landress and Miss Compton.

The menu was cold sliced ham, hot scalloped fish, hot brown mashed potatoes, baked beans, frech salad with mayonnaise, relishes, rolls, apple, mince, squash and cream pie, cheese and ocffee.

The waitresses were: Mrs. Percy L. Davidson, Mrs. George M. Campbell, Mrs. Frederick L. Bent, Mrs. Frederick S. Waite, Mrs. George P. Parker, Mrs. William D. Sanford, Mrs. Henry J. Landry, Mrs. H. Kneeland Elliss, Jr., Mrs. George J. Poch, Mrs. Albert E. Neal, Miss Gertrude Allen and Miss Helen Croucher.

its auditors but talked of for days afterward.

At its first concert the gilded finish now so apparent was missing and enthusiasts who have followed the development of the society all unite in saying that its present state is close to perfection. Its members are all local residents. The tonal quality and harmonizing of the parts are wonderful when it is considered that they have been organized but a short time.

The one regretable and disturbing thought is the scant attendance simply showing that the majority of Quincy residents are not sufficiently appreciative of the efforts of this now perfected musical organization.

The officers of the socitey are Thos. B. Pollard, president; Wendell H. Luce, vice president; Louis B. Weston treasurer; Mrs. Edith Cary Page, secretary; Laurence Allen, Mrs. Edith Fitts, Frank Crane, Miss Sarah Thomas and T. C. Sherman, directors.

Miss Florence G. Olney was the pianist and of great assistance in the successful presentation. The ushers were George E. Adams, Walter Binnian, Emery L. Crane, Edward E. Miller, Victor E. Miller, Elmer E. Ricker, John F. Roche, Morton Smith, Lucien Thayer, Arthur L. Thomas and L. Brewster Walker.

HITS MOUNTAIN PEAK

Aeronaut Has Thrilling Experience Five Thousand Feet In Air

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 29.—Tom McLain, an aeronaut, escaped death miraculously when his balloon hit the pinnacle of Mount Wilson, 5000 feet up, and sent him sprawling on the rocks just below the crest of the mountain.

McLain was assisting in taking panoramic photographs from a captive balloon. The ropes slipped and the balloon leaped upward with McLain dangling in the web. The bag struck the side of Mount Wilson twenty feet below its crest, the impact extricating McLain from the ropes that entangled him. The balloon continued to soar, and finally disappeared.

WARNING GIVEN TO PUBLIC MEN

Suffragettes Threaten to Make Their Lives "Impossible"

MILITANT ACTION HAS BEGUN

Three Suffragettes Receive Jail Sentences After Smashing Windows In Dublin Castle—London Sisters Are Also Busy—Police Guard For Cabinet Ministers—Mrs. Despard In Jail

London, Jan. 29.—The suffragettes have lost no time in opening their militant campaign.

They made a concerted attack on the windows of Dublin castle at Dublin, a number of which were smashed. Three suffragettes were arrested. They were Mrs. Hopkins, Mrs. Cousins and Mrs. Connery. On the charge of breaking fifteen panes of glass in the windows of Dublin castle they were sentenced to a month's hard labor each.

In London, too, the suffragettes are displaying great vigor. General Mrs. Drummond sent an ultimatum to David Lloyd-George, chancellor of the exchequer, when he refused her request to receive a deputation of women on the ground that he had other engagements. She wrote:

"I and other members of the deputation intend to wait upon you in the house of commons at 8 o'clock this evening. We trust you will make the necessary arrangements to receive us."

All cabinet ministers are guarded by the police. Premier Asquith is the object of especial vigilance. The nervous were not encouraged by the utterances of Miss Annie Kenney:

"We will make the lives of public men impossible. If you are a shopkeeper, you would better look out. It is not just your windows that are going to be attacked. It is something else. We are going to get this question settled once and for all."

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst contributed this to the general warning:

"We are prepared to endanger our lives in a campaign of guerilla warfare, including sorties and riots, to begin immediately. We will consider human life sacred, but will do as much damage to property as possible."

Mrs. Despard, one of the most prominent leaders of the suffragettes, and two of her companions, were sentenced to fourteen days' imprisonment yesterday on the charge of resisting the police in the execution of their duty when the latter dispersed a meeting in Trafalgar square.

Mrs. Despard, who is a sister of the cavalry general, Sir John French, was offered the option of paying a fine of $10, but she refused to accept this and was sent to jail.

A fourth suffragette, who was among those arrested Monday night, was sent to prison for seven days.

While a deputation which Lloyd-George had refused to see until today was trying to force its way into parliament, against an overwhelming force of police, and its members were being placed under arrest for resisting the officers, other bands of women went through Whitehall, breaking the windows of the government offices, and through Cockspur street, ruthlessly smashing the great plate glass windows in the establishments of shipping companies.

The women also visited other streets in the shopping district, where like damage was done. Later, post boxes were attacked, quantities of liquid being poured into them.

In the outlying suburbs, too, the suffragettes took steps to bring the cause before the public by damaging property. Twenty-one women were arrested in the vicinity of the parliament building, but were allowed out on bail after the house arose.

Most of the police stations had one or more prisoners charged with destroying property.

TERMS NOT MADE PUBLIC

Boston Longshoremen and Steamship Agents Reach an Agreement

Boston, Jan. 29.—Representatives of the steamship agents and the various unions of the longshoremen held conferences yesterday afternoon, and the result was that the threatened strike of the 3000 longshoremen in this port was averted, for the present at least.

Just what transpired at the conferences was not made public, except that the union delegates reported the agents "have offered a few concessions" and that the agents' representatives said: "There will be no strike."

PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Boston Man Arraigned In Maine Court, Charged With Murder

Skowhegan, Me., Jan. 29.—Michael Shannon of Boston pleaded not guilty to a charge of murder when given a hearing in the municipal court here.

Shannon is charged with having shot and killed John Blackwell, a negro, in Shawmut. Judge Brazzell found probable cause and held Shannon for the grand jury.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

the variety of theme but for the artistic rendering. The finale on the program by the Trio was Fantasie from Saint-Saens opera, Samson and Delilah, which was finely played each instrument blending into the other in a harmonious whole, marked by a fine shading of the light and heavier moods.

In solo work members of the Trio won quick recognition of their ability, the fine rendering of Kreisler's "Liebesfreud" by Mr. Fisher being received with much enthusiasm and continued applause. The 'cello solo, Fantasia by Mr. Webster also received appreciative applause calling for a response. Last but by no means the least important member of the trio was Mr. Mason, pianist. He played with fine appreciation, both as pianist and accompanist for the soloists, adding much to the success of the concert.

Miss Eckhoff, who assisted the Trio is not unknown to many club members having sung at the clubhouse last spring in the series of May musicales. She has a fine voice of wide range, with operatic qualities, clear and well sustained in the higher registers. Her two groups of songs were effectively and artistically rendered and the appreciation of her listeners was manifested by frequent applause.

The 1913 musicale will go down in the club calendar as a great success and one of the best in the club's history.

Members of the Music Committee ushered, and members of the Woman's Exchange dispensed home made candy, all contributing to the pleasures of the afternoon.

PEACE MEETING OF FEDERATION

There is a strong and growing interest in the Federation Peace Meeting, which is to be held in Tremont Temple, Boston, on the evening of Feb. 11, under the auspices of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, of Massachusetts, of which Mrs. Henry C. Mulligan of Natick, is president. Arrangements are being made by the members of the committee to have the affair one of unusual interest and supreme importance, and 5000 tickets are to be printed for general distribution.

The principal speaker is to be Charles A. Brown, his topic being "The Present Outlook for World Wide Arbitration." Another notable speaker is Joseph Walker, former speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

The general public is invited and tickets may be procured at the Tremont Temple box office. Doors open to the public after 7.45 P. M.

SIMPLER WAYS.

Mrs. John Herbert, president of the Heptorian club of Somerville at the guest night of the club in welcoming the guests gave an address on "Lost Arts."

"Simple hospitality when the latchstring was always out and one had time and heart to call upon friends and neighbors, is becoming a thing of the past," said Mrs. Herbert. "Like spoiled children we now have too many things and too many amusements. The present mode of living is very much like automobile travel. There are people who go through the country in their autos carrying their souls with them, and who arrive at their destination with a keen sense of enlargement of vision and a finer appreciation of beauty; but there are others who fly over the roads so fast that their souls never catch up.

"We are living in an age of excitement, of care, of fads and reforms. Would not the cultivation of a healthy imagination, a sense of humor and an appreciation of beauty be a money-making, a money-saving and a health-giving fad? I am not so sure that many of the problems of the day would cease to be problems if there were a jester in each home—with a power to discern the essential from the nonessential, and the consistent from the inconsistent.

"The contact with nature is both soothing and steadying, and it is just possible, that this form of beauty stands waiting and appealing at the portals of our hearts with a new message and fresh healing for this age of care. It is claimed by competent authority that the power of music is magical. Without price the robin sings in our own dooryard, but we are often too dull or too busy to hear him, but we can go on a rush ticket to concerts where we can enjoy the works of the great masters.

"Let us never be guilty of economizing in love and friendship, and the little acts, courtesies and refinements, which are the outer expression of those qualities. If we are too weary, or too busy to enjoy our friends, something is wrong with our system of life. Any method of life which dulls the spirit of hospitality and makes us cold, mechanical and unresponsive is clipping the wings of progress."

PRESENT FUNERAL METHODS BARBARIC

Opinion of Minister Who Has Become an Undertaker

San Francisco, Jan. 29.—Rev. Dr. Bradford Leavitt has resigned his pastorate of the First Unitarian church of this city to become an undertaker.

Dr. Leavitt says he was compelled to abandon the ministry on account of weakness of the eyes, and that he is entering the undertaking business in the hope of "dispelling its atmosphere of superstition and gloom which we have inherited from the heartless and sometimes heathen methods and ideas of the past."

"There is something barbaric in our methods of dealing with death," said Leavitt in resigning his pastorate. "The Chinese are far more civilized in this. I am averse to the darkening of houses, the pulling down of blinds and the general morbid atmosphere that is affected in a house visited by death."

A Stirring Story of Military Adventure and of a Strange Wartime Wooing

Copyright, 1912, by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Thornton escapes, captures Lieutenant Bedloe and takes from him Mrs. Haverill's miniature.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

"If the head of Lee's army is at Marlborough and the tail of it on the plank road between Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville the animal must be very slim somewhere. Could you not break him?"

So President Lincoln wrote to General Hooker toward the middle of June. But the Army of the Potomac was kept busy watching the Army of Northern Virginia, and the movements of the latter set the pace of action at that time.

Lee had sent Ewell, Jackson's successor in command, to the valley to drive the Federal force under Milroy out of Winchester, thus clearing the route for another demonstration toward Washington. This accomplished, Ewell had entered Maryland, followed thither by Lee's other two corps under Longstreet and Hill.

Then, even as Lee had calculated, Hooker also marched northward on a line parallel to his own, but, of course, much nearer to Washington. The battle of Gettysburg was already planned in embryo, but the Federal side of it was not to be commanded by "Fighting Joe" Hooker. As soon as the Federal army was ready to cross the Potomac a new leader was put in the saddle in the person of Major General George Gordon Meade.

CHAPTER XI.

Whirling Through Winchester.

THE great, epical three days' battle of Gettysburg, the most stupendous artillery and infantry combat that ever took place on American soil, saw the high water mark of the rebellion. Shortly after Pickett's column had dashed itself to pieces against the iron bound, flame fringed Union lines on Cemetery ridge the tide began to ebb, slowly but steadily, back from the hills of Pennsylvania and Maryland, below the old trimly planted lines of the Potomac and the Rappahannock, finally to cease, twenty months later, by the remote banks of the Appomattox.

The Federal army, cautiously maneuvered by Meade, followed Lee into Virginia, but did not attack him, and the remainder of the summer season was one of welcome repose to both sides.

At the headquarters of the Federal Army of the Potomac, now encamped along the Rapidan, General Meade had a gorgeous Solferino silken flag with a golden eagle in a silver wreath emblazoned on it flying over his tent. One day in March a silent, bearded stranger paused in passing to gaze upon this splendiferous emblem as he exclaimed involuntarily:

"What's this? Is imperious Caesar anywhere about here?"

The bearded stranger was Lieutenant General Ulysses S. Grant, newly commissioned to command of all the armies of the United States. The Washington authorities had finally come to the decision that their immense plans of campaign should be put under one head for execution. Such head must necessarily be a hard and stubborn one. It rested, in the opinion of Mr. Lincoln and of others high in the Federal councils of war, upon the sturdy shoulders of the conqueror of Vicksburg. General Grant was not addicted to high military strategy, but for direct tactics and plain fighting he was undoubtedly a match for General Lee.

The first important vacancy now to be filled in the Army of the Potomac was that of commander of the cavalry corps.

When Grant asked for a chief of cavalry Halleck suggested General Philip Sheridan, who had served with distinction under his own command in the west and under Grant at Chattanooga. The suggestion therefore was one after Grant's own heart, and he promptly adopted it. The general belief indeed was that Grant himself had selected Sheridan, though such did not happen to be the case.

Personally Sheridan was not an imposing figure. Short and slight, he looked even younger than his age, which was just past thirty. He was reticent in speech and manner and to a casual observer seemed lacking in the essential qualities of a cavalry leader which had distinguished such officers in the Federal service as Sumner, Sedgwick, McClellan, Thomas, Stoneman and others.

"Does Sheridan say if he has a free hand he can beat the enemy's cavalry?" asked General Grant of General Meade a few days after crossing the Rapidan into the Wilderness, sixty miles from Richmond, to fight his way to the James. "Then let him go ahead and do it."

That settled the dispute between Meade and the new cavalry commander, and thereafter the three divisions of the reorganized Federal mounted force under Generals Torbert, Gregg and Wilson had comparatively loose rein. The cavalry gave a fairly good account of itself, but it found little or no opportunity for concentrated action in a region where even Grant's infantry hordes got in each other's way, even as Hooker's had in that same Wilderness around Chancellorsville.

"The bearded stranger was Lieutenant General Ulysses S. Grant."

The sanguinary horrors of the year before were renewed at Spottsylvania and the "bloody angle," but they could not stop Grant. He could keep up his "hammering" process all summer if necessary, because the resources of the Federal reservoir of human supply were so much greater than those of the Confederates that he could afford to lose three men to Lee's one and still ultimately beat him. At Cold Harbor, the old McClellan battleground, the Federal losses came near to wiping out even this liberal margin.

Meanwhile Sheridan found his long awaited opportunity in a grand raid toward Richmond with an overwhelming force, including the enterprising brigades of Custer and Merritt, the object being to tear up Lee's communication with his capital and to be in a position to dispatch the remainder of the Army of Northern Virginia—if Grant had defeated it in the Wilderness. This latter part of the program was never carried out, but in opposing it at Yellow Tavern, only a few miles from Richmond, the Confederates lost their gallant cavalry leader and beau sabreur, the incomparable Stuart.

Relentlessly the war went on. Lee a second time had checked the Federal forces at the gate of Richmond. Grant, in the middle of June, settled down in front of Petersburg, determined to "fight it out on that line if it took all summer." It did. In fact, the siege was destined to last ten long, weary months.

General Lee sent as large a force as he dared detach under Early, once more to march down the Shenandoah valley and threaten Washington.

Sheridan's orders from Grant were to press Early and cut Lee's communications by which he got supplies from the rich valley for his dwindling army. This was a large contract for the young commander of the Army of the Shenandoah. If he could fulfill it, Richmond was doomed and the days of the Confederacy were numbered. Moreover, this was the region where the prestige of the Federal arms most sorely needed rehabilitation.

Hence the desirability, as Grant said, of Sheridan's driving the enemy out of the valley and of leaving nothing there to invite their return. With some idea of the magnitude of the task before him, but confident in the strong backing and broad discretion given him by the lieutenant general, Sheridan made his plans to "sweep the valley so clean that a crow flying over it would have to carry its rations."

The defenders met this move with a relatively small force, but including as many troops as possible who had previously tramped the Winchester pike with "Stonewall" Jackson's "foot cavalry." Among these youthful veterans now led by Jubal Early was Colonel Robert Ellingham—still Bob to his Virginia comrades, as once again he faced homeward.

Homeward indeed he marched, yet with strange feelings of anxiety and depression. What if the ill turn fortune had taken of late pursued them now even beyond the Blue Ridge mountain walls? Far south, in Georgia, Sherman's army was marching victoriously to the sea. The Confederacy had been cut in twain by the fall of Vicksburg and again by the loss of Atlanta. Now Sheridan proposed to establish a line of communication with his base of supplies at Washington that would subdivide Virginia and isolate Richmond. The hardships as well as the horrors of war were now coming home to the people of the valley as never before.

PLAN TO ESTABLISH EDUCATIONAL CLUBS

New Scheme to Be Launched by National Progressive Party

Washington, Jan. 29.—A nation-wide chain of "Progressive Service clubs," the object of which will be to educate people along progressive lines, is shortly to be established under the auspices of the National Progressive party.

This fact became known after a conference between W. R. Mederis of Chicago, a co-worker with Medill McCormick, and Senator Dixon and other Progressive leaders in Washington. The plan is to establish a system of educational clubs which will make use of moving pictures, the lecture, etc.

These clubs are to be absolutely distinct from the political clubs and no officer of a political club will be allowed to hold office in one of the service clubs. The theory is that in this way the Progressive party will have two working forces in the field.

ERDMAN ACT DOESN'T SUIT

Eastern Railroads Object to Arbitration Under Its Provisions

New York, Jan. 29.—Objection to arbitration under the Erdman act is reiterated in a statement through Elisha Lee, chairman of the managers' committee, by the fifty-four eastern railroads whose firemen are taking a strike vote, because of a split over methods of arbitration of the firemen's wage and other demands.

The act was drafted, the roads declare, "to settle labor disputes on single railroads, not on all the railroads of a large territory." The firemen insist upon the Erdman law methods to settle the dispute.

NOT LOOKING FOR OFFICE

Boston's Mayor Seeks Neither Reelection Nor to Become Governor

Boston, Jan. 29.—Mayor Fitzgerald yesterday reiterated his former statements to the effect that he will not be a candidate next year for either the Democratic nominations for mayor or for governor.

His statements in this direction were more positive than he has as yet made them and there is a disposition at city hall, for the first time in months, to believe the mayor will not be in the mayoralty contest next winter.

PEACE ENVOYS READY TO QUIT

Allies' Delegates Consider Mission In London Is Ended

DIPLOMATS ARE STILL HOPEFUL

Many Believe Balkan Note Is Another Attempt to Exercise Pressure on Turkey—Policy of Delay Has Backing of Ambassadors—Ultimatum Is Drawn, but Not Yet Presented

London, Jan. 29.—With the presentation of their note to the Turkish delegation, the date for which, however, has not yet been fixed, some of the Balkan delegates consider that their mission in London will be ended. The Greek premier, Eleutherios Venizeles, announced last night that he would leave before the end of the week, and the others of the delegates within the next few days. The financial advisers and the military officers attached to the Bulgarian delegation will start for home today.

Despite this the diplomats have not given up hope, and many still believe the Balkan note is another attempt to exercise pressure on Turkey, and that the allies really intend to await the answer of the new Turkish cabinet to the joint note of Europe, a course which the powers have advised.

"Another day lost," exclaimed those who believe the only solution of the controversy is to be found in the resumption of hostilities, when the meeting of the delegates of the four allied nations adjourned yesterday afternoon.

"Another day gained," retorted those who believe peace is to be reached by opposing extreme measures.

The meeting of the allies lasted five hours, and the discussion was animated. The delegates reviewed the whole situation and debated both sides of the question—the resumption of the war and the policy of delay.

The head of each delegation reported the conversation he had had with Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign secretary, and reference again was made to the advice of the ambassadors to observe prudence and moderation.

This greatly strengthened the arguments of that section favoring procrastination, their view being that after the powers' note to Turkey, which was in line with the terms of the allies, if the allies continue to follow Europe's advice Europe would continue to give its support.

The note was left with Stojan Novakovitch, head of the Servian delegation, the delegates "entrusting him to choose an opportune moment for its presentation."

Some of the delegates believe he will present it today. Others, however, are of opinion that the particular form of the note was adopted with the object of avoiding an immediate rupture and to give Turkey time to reply to the powers.

TOTAL CASUALTIES $73,178

Seventy Percent of Sick and Wounded Bulgarian Soldiers Recovering

Sofia, Jan. 29.—The official list of those killed and wounded in the war will shortly be published. The figures are as follows:

Officers—Dead, 284; wounded and sick, 876. Total, 1160.

Men—Dead, 21,018; wounded and sick, 51,000. Total 72,018. In all, 73,178.

Of the sick and wounded 70 percent are stated to have recovered or to be on a fair way to recovery, and many of those included in the above figures have already rejoined the ranks. In his report on the Third Army corps, which reached Tchatalja but failed to press home its attack on Nov. 17-18-19, its commander, General Dimitreff, states that 35,000 became infected with cholera, but the mortality was very low, only amounting to about 3000.

TABERNACLE COLLAPSES

Hundred Volunteer Builders Buried, Fifteen Being Seriously Injured

Eldorado, Kan., Jan. 29.—One hundred men who had volunteered their services to build a tabernacle for a revival were buried in piles of broken timbers when the roof collapsed. Fifteen were injured, three probably fatally.

Expert carpenters had warned the volunteers that they were overloading the roof. Half an hour before the accident twenty-five women were at work, but when the accident occurred they had gone to a nearby church to prepare dinner for the workmen.

Prince Henry Seriously Ill

Amsterdam, Jan. 29.—Queen Wilhelmina is on her way to a resort in the Tounus mountains, where her husband, Prince Henry, is ill. The queen's sudden departure has been interpreted to mean that the condition of the prince is serious.

Tillman Elected For Fourth Term

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 29.—Without a dissenting vote, Benjamin R. Tillman was elected for the fourth consecutive term to the United States senate.

"HUMAN BOMB" SENTENCED

Smiles and Winks at Detectives as He Gets Twenty Years

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 29.—Carl Riedelbach, who terrorized the central police station Nov. 19 with an infernal machine, was sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary. The sentence was imposed after Riedelbach had declared he believed dynamite was a good means of righting some social wrongs.

Riedelbach's good humor withstood even this shock and he smiled and winked at the detectives who ended his short tenure as sole master of the police station by knocking him unconscious and demolishing his infernal machine after the fuse had been lighted.

The three officers were officially decorated with medals for their bravery and Riedelbach joked them about it as he was taken back to jail after a motion for a third trial had been denied.

RETAILERS MADE TARGETS

Blamed For Present Unreasonably High Prices of Meat

Chicago, Jan. 29.—Charges that retail meat dealers are maintaining unreasonably high prices in the face of a rapidly declining market are made by Everett C. Brown, a director in the Chicago live stock exchange. He says that though the price of top cattle on the hoof has dropped from $11.10, the high mark in December, to $8.90, the decline has not reached the retailers, who are still getting holiday prices for their goods.

"This rapid decline has concealed a near panic in the market," said Brown. "A reduction of $2 a hundred pounds means $500 a carload. Cattle are being rushed into Chicago in anticipation of still lower prices; the farmers are scared and are anxious to unload at once."

QUINCY LACKED SPLASH IN GAME

Tired Feeling Seemed to Prevail Against Melrose

VISITORS COPPED VICTORY

Melrose High school defeated the Quincy High school team in the local gym Tuesday, 26 to 19 and the Quincy High second beat the Melrose second 14 to 10.

Neither game was anything like the basket ball that the high school team has been playing. All the players acted logy, seemed unable to get away with the ball until it was too late, and otuside an occasional splash now and then none of them showed the least desire to rough it although the two preceding games showed them to be as scrappy a bunch of boys as any school could produce.

The same old style of passing the ball as soon as they received it, without making an attempt to look for a Quincy man, did not do any good. The blind passing, during which time the ball struck the netting, ceiling and extra players on the side lines, only served as a delay.

In the Wellesley game Quincy showed possible development, but a continuation of Tuesday's game does not augur well for much of this. The all gone feeling communicated to the second teams and seemed to affect them also.

Melrose played good ball sometimes and at other moments they had their down in the mouth feeling and they lost an opportunity of rolling up a tremendous score because of their inaccurate shooting. Holt made six baskets, some of them of the difficult order and Capt. Wentzell and Peabody worked a fine pass on the commencement of every play which kept the ball in their territory most of the time. Captain Wentzell made four baskets, all the result of the only team work Melrose displayed.

OLD COLONY ASSOCIATION

Of Universalists Held Interesting Session at Braintree

One of the best meetings of the Old Colony Association of Universalists was held Tuesday at Weymouth Landing in the Universalist church. In the absence of the president, Rev. O. Howard Perkins, the cofnerence was conducted by Rev. R. H. Dix,, vice president. The meeting opened at 10.30 a. m. with devotional exercises, followed by an address by the Rev. Mr. Richards of Stoughton. His subject was "The best methods in conducting the Sunday school. The address proved to be very interesting and the balance of the morning was devoted to discussion of the subject. A bountiful dinner was served by the Mission Circle of the entertaining parish. This was followed by a brief business meeting and two addresses by Rev. Charles Conklin, state superintendent of churches and Rev. Mr. McGlauflin, general superintendent of churches. There subjects were along the line of what the Universalist church stands for. Mrs. McGlauflin nee Miss Alice Coe of Atlantic rendered a rich contralto solo. There were about 150 people present representing the Wymouth, Quincy, Braintre, Hingham, Nowell Abington, Plymouth, New Bedford, Brockton, Stoughton and Boston.

WHEN A MAN'S SICK.

That's the Time a Woman Does the Boss Act to Perfection.

When a woman has charge of a sick man she feels as important as the marshal of the day at a country Fourth of July celebration, and however amiable she may be at other times she is very "bossy" when she has medicine to give a man or lotions to put on him. If he wants a drink of water she expresses the opinion that he is drinking too much and remembers that her Aunt Harriet's husband once drank a great deal when he was sick and had convulsions.

If the sick man becomes impatient and says the medicine is doing no good she reminds him curtly that "time" is necessary. She has even been known to dip into the classics and say that Rome was not built in a day. The air of wisdom with which she examines the doctor books convinces the sick man that, however intelligent his medical adviser may have been, after his recovery he will be informed that he would have been sick much longer had she not used her homemade lotions. Whatever she does at night the doctor will agree in the morning that it was very good.

The sleepiest woman in the world will stay up all night cheerfully if she can get a chance to doctor somebody, and if a man has medicine to take at an unusual hour he will get it if there is a woman around. — Ed Howe in American Magazine.

The Eagle.

According to Washington Irving, the Delaware Indian had a superstitious reverence for the eagle, believing that a guardian spirit in the form of this bird watched over them, hovering in the sky far out of sight. When pleased with their actions, he sent abundant crops and made them have great success in hunting, but when dipleased he would vent his rage in the thunder, which was his voice, and the lightning, which was the flashing of his eye, and strike dead the object of his displeasure. They also believed that the feathers of this bird would render the wearer invisible and invulnerable.

He Did Not Need It.

Buskin—I can't go on. I haven't any makeup. Manager—What are you playing tonight? Buskin—The fool in—Manager—Go right on. Never mind the makeup.

A good conscience is heaven; a bad one hell.—German Proverb.

The Gurgle In the Bottle.

Why does water gurgle when poured from a bottle? As water pours out air attempts to pour in. Occasionally the hand holding the bottle may move and give the air the opportunity. The quick rush of the water to fill the hole made by the air causes the gurgling sound.

SNEAK THIEF

It was but a short time before this that the report of the robbery of Mrs. William's bag and pocketbook at the Quincy depot was reported and the police are rather inclined to think that the surplus amount of money which the boy had in Ames' store may be accounted for in this manner.

From what Mr. Ames could learn from the boy it was believed that his name was Frazier and that he was a son of Thomas Frazier of Granite street. Chief Burrell sent Offiver Hinchon to the boy's house to look up the matter. Officer Hinchon found that the boy Mr. Frazier's 10 year old son and that he had stolen the money from his mother. He took 012 in all. Of this amount he spent $2 for shot and cartridges and intended to spend the balance for a gun. Asked what he wanted a gun for the boy said that he wanted to go shooting.

But for the forethought of Mr. Ames in retaining the money it would probably never have been recovered. Chief Burrell said this noon that there was no connection with the boy and Mrs. Williams who lost her hand bag at the Quincy depot.

A. O. U. W. INSTALLATION

Before a large audience of members and friends the following officers of Norfolk Lodge 178, A. O. U. W. were installed at Polan d hall, Monday evening:

P. M. W.—Cornelius O'Connell.
M. W.—James Cahill.
Foreman—J. Nelson.
Overseer—A. Stowers.
Recorder—J. C. Ward.
Treasurer—J. H. Flanagan.
Financier—C. Kolstad.
Guide—W. Purdy.
I. S. W.—R. F. Brice.
O. S. W.—Charles M. Flagg.
Pianist—J. P. Cahill.
Trustee (3 years)—T. N. Adams.

The ceremony was performed by District Deputy Grand Master Workman James J. Reedy of Boston, accompanied by his suite and the following ladies from Boston Lodge, Degree of Honor, A. O. U. W., Mrs. McCarthy, Mrs. Gillespie, Mrs. Frank Richards, Miss Froyang, Mrs. Lindburg and Mrs. Liverback.

The oration of the evening was delivered by D. D. G. M. W., James J. Reedy and was followed by remarks from Grand Foreman Jameson.

Piano solos by Miss Ruth Cahill and Miss Brown and a song by Master George Cahill were enjoyed.

Cornelius Duggan gave one of his characteristic speeches and sang a song of his own composition entitled "Quincy Side."

A presentation of an A. O. U. W. watch fob was made to P. M. W. Cornelius O'Connell for bringing in the largest number of candidates during the year.

Refreshments were served and the meeting adjourned with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

WOLLASTON CONG. CLUB.

President Frank E. Jenkins and Professor Henry C. Newell, both of Piedmont college were the speakers at the monthly meeting of the Wollaston Congregational club, Tuesday evening, taking for their subject "Piedmont College and the Southern mountaineers."

President Jenkins told of the antecedents of these people who were Scotch Presbyterians coming from the county of Ulster in Ireland to our southern mountains to escape religious persecution.

This class has been side tracked by ignorance and the lack of opportunity and Piedmont college is working to bring these white people to a higher standard of living and education.

The stereopticon lecture of Professor Newell was of great interest, showing the rugged life of the Southern mountaineers and the conditions that surround them. A typical moonshiners still in actual operation was shown as well as views of the mountain scenery and the town of Demoest where Piedmont college is located.

The evening marked the first appearance of "The Wollaston Mauler," a club publication under the efficient editorship of T. E. Perley. This contained many knocks and closed with a rambling nightmare entitled "The editor's dream" in which the names of many club members were cleverly interwoven.

The club has enjoyed a variety of menus and this evening a chicken pie supper was served during which popular airs were played by Walter C. Rogers.

—A concern which advertised to pay 100 per cent, on deposits, has been closed up by the Chicago authorities. Even this preposterous proposition served as a bait for a large number of people in various parts of the country who sent in their money, expecting to receive such impossible returns for its use—Banker and Tradesman.

TWO LEAGUES CONTESTED

Some Good Scores By Heptasophs and Fore River

ONE SPECIAL MATCH

Two league matches and a special challenge rolloff were the card at the Coliseum alleys, Tuesday evening.

In the Fore River league the Pipefitters beat the Patternmakers 3 to 1; the Hull Draftsmen and the Foundry split with two points each and the Machinist Gallery, beat the Electricians, 4 to 0.

Several good strings were rolled, Stevenson of the Pipefitters being high with 109. Ryan of the Hull Draftsmen with 295 secured the best total.

The Heptasophs rollers did not loosen out their arms, most of the scores being of the ordinary kind. Dackers rolled 114 for high single and Robertson made 275 for high total.

Capt. McKay and Capt. Brown split even; Capt. Irving beat Capt. Gibney 4 to 0; Capt. Dackers beat Capt. Mullen 3 to 1.

The Y. M. C. A. beat the Coliseum in a good match. Grant, after a period of low rolling, during which time he made a poor showing in a two team match, somehow or other made 122 for the high string of the evening.

ONE KILLED, MANY WOUNDED

Police and Strikers Engage In Battle In Borough Adjoining Pittsburg

Pittsburg, Jan. 29.—Deputy sheriffs and strikers from the Rankin plant of the American Steel and Wire company clashed last night and one man was killed and twelve other persons were injured, several of them fatally. All the wounded, except two deputy sheriffs and a policeman, were spectators. Not a striker was injured as far as can be learned.

The deputy sheriffs and the strikers collided on Hawkins avenue, one of the principal streets of Rankin borough, which adjoins this city. The county officers, armed with revolvers and rifles, and the strikers, armed with revolvers and stones, battled for one hour, within an area of two street squares. The rioting and shooting ended when the deputy sheriffs retreated within the fence of the mill.

The strike at the plant of the American Steel and Wire company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel corporation, started less than a week ago. The strikers mainly are foreigners. They are paid $1.90 a day of ten hours. They are demanding 30 cents an hour.

ALLEGED BABY FRAUD

Property Valued at $400,000 Depends Upon Identity of Youngster

San Francisco, Jan. 29.—Dr. W. W. Fraser of Weaver, Cal., was bound over to the superior court by Police Judge Shortall, charged with having falsified birth records and with turning the child of Lillian Anderson over to Mrs. Dorothy Slingsby, wife of an English naval lieutenant, after Mrs. Slingsby had advertised for an infant to replace her own child, which died at birth.

Property valued at $400,000 in England depends upon the identity of the baby which the Slingsbys claim as theirs.

CURFEW WILL RING IN THE WITCH CITY

Mayor Hurley Will Not Permit Children on Streets at Night

Salem, Mass., Jan. 29.—Curfew shall ring in this city at 8:45 every night hereafter, beginning tomorrow night," announced John F., as Mayor Hurley is best known here.

All children under the age of 16 must heed the curfew, according to the Hurley edict. When the fire whistles in the four different sections of the city and the bells on all the engine houses sound the curfew, as has been arranged, children must make themselves scarce on the public streets. If they do not head for home immediately, policemen will interrogate them and then escort them home to have a talk with their parents.

"The reason for this curfew," Hurley explains, "is the flood of complaints which have come to me about young boys and girls loitering on the streets and in darkened doorways in the business sections at night. I am aiming to get them home at a reasonable hour."

RAG FIRE DAMAGE ONLY $20 BUT PLENTY OF EXCITEMENT AT HAND

Christopher Oliver, Fireman, Plunged Foot Through Ceiling. Rescued By Fellow Firemen

Mrs. Wynot with Three Children Ran Screaming From House

The alarm from box 75 at 7.48 this morning was for a fire in the two tenement house at 89 and 91 Sumner street, owned by Eli Kurtis and occupied on the street floor by the owner and on the second floor by Benjamin Wynot. The fire started among a lot of old rags in a stairway leading to the attic. It made an immense amount of smoke but did but little fire damage.

Christopher Oliver one of the firemen while in the attic had a narrow escape from serious injury. He was walking about when one foot went down thuogh the flooring. He was rescued from his perilous position by fellow firemen.

When the fire broke out Mrs. Wynot grabbed her three children and ran shouting to the street. Her cries and the dense smoke drew an unusually large crowd. Chief Litchfield says the loss will not exceed $20.

The Central station apparatus was called out twice Wednesday on still alarms. The first was for a fire on the roof of the house of Robert Lyons on Quincy avenue near the station and was caused by sparks from the chimney. Loss $5.

At 10.30 Wednesday night the auto chemical went out to a house nearly adjoining the central station occupied by Herbert Griffin one of the firemen attached to the central station. This fire was caused by a barrel of hot ashes near the stable setting fire to the stable. Herb. was one of the first on hand and did valiant service in saving his own premises. He says that the next time he puts a barrel of hot ashes near a building he will soak them with water.

NEW INDUSTRY.

A joint meeting of the Board of Directors and Committees on new Industries of the Board of Trade was held Tuesday evening, at which a representative of the Unit Brick Co., was present. This is the concern that desires to locate at the old O. T. Rogers granite quarry and manufacture pressed brick from cement and stone dust. The company desired that a stock company should be formed in Quincy with a capital of $12,000 to establish the plant and put it on a working basis, the stock to be subscribed for it in Quincy.

No definite action was taken by the directors and committee but the matter will probably be brought up at the regular meeting of the Board next week. One well known financial gentleman who was present agreed to take some of the stock if a company was formed.

OVER 1200 AT THE REUNION

Six Quincy Born Priests Attended at St. Mary's

MAYOR STONE A SPEAKER

With six Quincy born priests as the guests of the evening and Mayor Eugene R. Stone present, nearly 1200 members of St. Mary's parish attended the annual reunion held Wednesday evening in the New St. Joseph's hall. The capacity of the hall was taxed and a large number attended from surrounding parishes.

The early part of the evening was devoted to speeches by the visiting clergymen. Those who spoke were Monsignor Ambrose F. Roche of Watertown, the former pastor; Rev. Fr. J. P. Cuffe of the Church of the Sacred Heart of Atlantic, Rev. Fr. Edward Fegan of Rockland, Rev. Fr. Francis Walsh of Reading, Rev. Fr. Francis Hart of Canton, Rev. Dr. Andrew J. O'Brien of St. John's Seminary of Brighton and Rev. Fr. Marcian Ballou of Omaha, Neb.

Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady who has recovered from an attack of the grip, opened the festivities by delivering a short speech of welcome in which he reviewed the accomplishments of Monsignor Roche while pastor here and in presenting the beloved former pastor he poured forth praise upon his personality which was echoed by a deafening outburst accorded Monsignor Roche as he arose to speak.

Monsignor Roche immediately launched into the beliefs expressed by him over 12 years ago when he advocated an extension of railway service over Granite avenue, the establishments of co-operative banks in ward four and a five cent fare to Boston.

He said that he believed now, as firmly as he did then, that West Quincy was equal to other places for residential purposes and advocated the erection of more homes, particularly by the younger people, so that the ward could be in the top place of the city's list. He mentioned a continuation of the temperance crusade which has been always active in the ward.

At the conclusion of his speech he was given thunderous applause.

Mayor Stone was also well received and following up the line of Monsignor Roche's argument said that the best and vital interest in a community was dwellings, owned and inhabited by honest, hard working people, whose sole endeavor was a bettering of civic conditions, and he congratulated those present on past accomplishments and extended them his sincere wishes for their continued prosperity.

Rev. Fr. Cuffe in relating stories of the early days of the parish caused much laughter by being reminiscent in a happy vein. Rev. Fr. Fegan of Natick aired a few humorous thoughts and Rev. Fr. Walsh did likewise. He also spoke on the sterling qualities of the late Father Francis Friguletti, who was pastor of St. Mary's parish before the division.

Father Hart entertained with stories of a most pleasing nature which recalled to the minds of many some of the now forgotten traditions of early days.

Dr. O'Brien, in a congratulatory speech covered many points of interest, said that he believed now as he did always that West Quincy was one of the finest places in the world and closed by extending his heartfelt appreciation of what has been accomplished, much of which he witnessed while an altar boy of the church.

Father Ballou who came especially from Omaha to attend the event made a pleasing and short address on the conditions as he found them in the west, said that the progressive spirit of its residents should be emulated by West Quincy people and asked all to thoughtfully consider the brilliant remarks of the preceding speakers.

Father Duffy, the assistant pastor made a short speech and came in for his share of applause, testifying to the appreciation of the parish members of his efforts.

Several selections were given during the evening by the choir, under the direction of Miss Frances Cronin, organist of the church. The exercises closed by all uniting in singing the "Star Spangled Banner."

The floor was then cleared for dancing and music was furnished by Joyce's orchestra. Refreshments were served in the lower hall.

A committee of 100 were in charge of the affair under the direction of Rev. Fr. Grady. The officers were Stephen B. Little, chairman; Michael Riley, secretary; Mrs. Annie E. White, in charge of the entertainment committee, and Daniel J. Duggan, floor marshal.

During the evening an award of a $20 gold piece was made to Miss Mary Farrell, 170 Willard street, a barrel of flour to Mrs. Hugh Gilden, 21 West street and a ton of coal to Miss Anna T. Hannon, Crescent street.

CAMPAIGN TO RAISE MONEY

For the Community House at Wollaston Planned

TEN TEAMS TO WORK

At an enthusiastic meeting held in the Wollaston Unitarian vestry on Wednesday evening, plans were made for a whirlwind campaign to raise the $25,000 necessary to start the Wollaston Community House.

With the foundation of nearly $5,000 secured at the mass meeting last week the committee has high hopes of realizing the amount in the time alloted.

A week's whirlwind campaign, beginning Monday Feb. 10, and continuing through Saturday Feb. 15, will be waged. The preceding 10 days will be devoted to a broad publicity and the selection of committees.

Ten teams were organized to secure the subscriptions, with the following men as captains:

Team One—Thomas Lacey.
Team Two—William M. Burrell.
Team Three—John L. Hamilton.
Team Four—A. L. Whittemore, Jr.
Team Five—Albert N. Murray.
Team Six—Arthur W. Rohn.
Team Seven—William J. Leslie.
Team Eight—Amos T. Leavitt.
Team Nine—William Murphy.
Team Ten—Felix Favorite.

Each team captain was empowered to select five other men to work with him. The teams will meet each night at supper during the campaign week to discuss plans and results.

A committee on publicity consisting of William A. Mann, Albert N. Murray was appointed and a committee composed of Eugene H. Sprague, H. T. Whitman and Arthur W. Rohn to complete negotiations for the land.

The building committee reported progress and that it would have details completed to report at a later meeting.

Eugene H. Sprague, B. H. Bain and William M. Chase were appointed a supper committee.

A meeting of the general committee will be held the latter part of next week to perfect plans for the campaign.

NO OPPOSITION TO MAYOR'S BILL

Regulating the Construction of New Streets

(Special to the Ledger.)

Mayor Stone and City Solicitor McAnarney appeared before the committee on cities at the State House, Wednesday to advocate the passage of the bill which allows the Mayor to approve of width of new street before the construction . The committee will act favorably on the bill and report it into the House in a short while.

TURKEY SUPPER DREW BIG CROWD

Memorial Church the Scene of Very Pleasing Event

The turkey supper held in the Memorial church, Wednesday evening, was a great success in every way. At half past six over 200 people filed to the tables, where turkey, riced potatoes, celery, cranberry sauce, beans pickles, rolls, coffee and pie were served.

The committee in charge were Mrs. Spencer Apollonio, chairman, Mrs. Harry Read, Mrs. Charles Letteny, Mrs. W. T. Davy, Mrs. W. C. Hersey, Mrs. Gorham Damon, Mrs. Annie Turner, Mrs. W. C. Cummings, Mrs. Walter Hill, Mrs. Henry Von Emden, Mrs. Charles Cherrington, Mrs. Sarah Butler and Mrs. James Geekie and they were assisted by several young ladies.

After supper a fine musical program was given. A quartet composed of Mrs. Harvey Holt, soprano, Miss Maud Read, alto, W. Norton Stetson, tenor, H. Heap, bass, sang several selections. The program was as follows:

Quartet, "The Yachtsman's Glee."
Solos, "The Brave Sentinel," "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep;" Mr. Heap.
Solos, "Good-Bye to Summer," "Cradle Song," Mrs. Holt.
Reading, Rizpah, "The Little Minister," Mrs. Bartlett.
Solos, "Dear Heart, I love you." "Slumber Song," Miss Read.
Quartet, "Doan Ye Cry Ma Honey." "Sleep Time Ma Honey."
Solos, "Oh Promise Me," "Night and Day." Mr. Stetson.
Quartet, ""Gavotte."

ANNUAL EVENT.

The annual supper, entertainment and dancing party of St. Margaret's Guild of Christ church will take place Friday evening. The members plan to give the best program since the guild was organized seven years ago.

A sketchlet, "The Masquerader" will be given by the following young ladies, Miss Mabel Dickie Miss Ruth Dahl, Miss Ruth Farmer, Miss Bertha Wallace, Miss Marion Bolster and Miss Maud Johnston.

Those in charge of the different committees are Miss Edith H. Fox. Miss Mabel Dickie, Miss Elizabeth Dickie, Miss Ruth Dahl and Miss Emily G. Moyle.

BOARD OF TRADE BANQUET.

Secretary Hall of the Board of Trade reports that the arrangements for the annual banquet of the Board on Feb. 13, are progressing favorably. The committee have been unable to get Senator Weeks as he has a previous engagement. It has however secured Lieut. Gov. Walsh and Mrs. Norton of Cambridge, President of the Women's Civic League. Secretary Hall has also communicated with Congressman Gilmore of Brockton and he is in hopes that he may be secured.

BELATED CEREMONY.

Although they filed their marriage intention last December, Miss Nellie Afnnolda Loddengaard, the 18 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nils Loddengaard, of 24 Deldorf street, and Albert, the 19 years old son of Mrs. Albert A. Whitney of Lynn, were not married until Wednesday. The ceremony was performed by City Clerk Emery L. Crane at City Hall. The consent of Mrs. Whitney to the marriage because of the son being a minor was easily obtained. The groom is a piano tuner by trade.

BURIED IN NEWARK.

Relatives of Joseph Dellese who was killed by the cars at the Water street railroad crossing Sunday night arrived in Quincy this morning from Newark, N. J. They came to arrange to take the body to Newark for burial. They first called upon Chief Burrell who took them to Medical Examiner Jones and then to Undertaker Halls. The body will probably leave tonight.

MANY CHANGES IN FIRE BOXES

All of the Twenties Within Radius of Square

LIST BEING REVISED

There have been a large number of changes in the fire alarm boxes of the city since the list published a year ago. In addition to the box numbers quite a few new boxes have been cut into the circuit.

As noted at the time all of the boxes in and about City Square have been changed so that all boxes in the twenties are within a radious of the territory about City Square. That is Box 24 at the corner of Hancock and Chestnut streets, Box 25 at the corner of Washington and Foster streets.

In South Quincy Box 32 has been changed to Kendrick avenue and Phipps street. Box 36 to the corner of Franklin and School streets.

38 to the corner of Penn and Liberty streets and 39 to the corner of Liberty and Plain streets. Box 36 has been changed to the corner of Pleasant and Quincy streets, 137 a new box at the corner of Brook road and Water street, 138 to the corner of Intervale street and Brooks avenue and 139 a new box on Vernon street.

Box 223 has been changed to Whitwell street near the City Hospital. Box 224 to the corner of Adams and Whitwell, 227 to the corner of Newcomb and Canal streets and 235 to the corner of Elm street and Miller Stile road.

Box 321 is now located on the corner of Brooks avenue and Centre street and 331 on the corner of Independence avenue and Franklin street. Box 447, a new box is located at the corner of Grove street and Forest avenue.

Box 68 at Squantum has been done away with as there are now five boxes in this section as follows:—

Box 8, Corner Squantum street and Huckings avenue.

Box 81, at Bellevue road and Ocean road.

Box 82, at Bellevue road and Huckings avenue.

Box 83, at the corner of Bellevue road and Standish avenue.

Box 84 corner of Dorchester and Pratt street.

The Ledger will publish in a few days the revised fire alarm list as it stands today.

DROHAN—POWERS.

John Joseph Drohan, a conductor employed by the Bay State Street Railway and Miss Annie Agnes Powers of Worcester were married at that city, Jan. 26 by Rev. William H. Goggin. The groom is the son of Mrs. John Drohan of 13 Common street, West Quincy, and is well and favorably known throughout the city.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Eliminate the T from name of the Pankhurst suffragette and put the s in the right place and that is just what should be done with some of the tribe.

Gov. Sulzer backed up public opinion has compelled the New York stock exchange to draw in its horns.

The Boston City club campaign was a hummer and a fine illustration of what can be accomplished backed by the proper spirit.

A good shake up all along the line in amateur athletic circles would have a good effect. The greed of gold has secured a clutch in this department which can only grow and grow until it eats out the verm germ of true sport and then everything will be chaos.

It must amuse Charles W. Murphy to read, if he ever bothers to look at it, the abuse which certain newspaper writers are hurling at him. In the meantime Murphy is going right along minding his own business, which is of making money and getting publicity, because publicity counts and the bangers have not yet learned that the most effective roasting is that of complete and absolute silence.

Mayor Hurley of Salem suggests the curfew bell for giris. And why not boys. If it had been exercised more rigorously in Charlestown three poor unfortunate boys would not now be behind prison bars.

If Rev. Cady has his way there will not be jails enough in the state to provide the club membership he would build up.

Public officials who recommend pardons should have something more substantial than pictures on which to base their opinions.

A Salem club has been ordered to close its doors. Its owner had quite a long period of uninterrupted monopoly of the liquor traffic in his section of that temperance city.

That gang of English suffragettes show conclusively that they are not competent to handle the ballot or anything else except some weapon against law and order.

All pardons like Gov. Sulzer's should have a string or provision attached to them.

Gen. Sickles does not present a very heroic figure in his declining years.

The Green river in Kentucky has driven many people out of their homes. Barrels of its namesake have been equally successful in breaking up homes.

And now they accuse Dr. Wiley of being too keen in the interests of public health. Another case of experts disagreeing.

Wesleyan has ousted one of its professors because of his open Sunday views. They were hardly Puritanical in their simplicity to tell the truth.

The snow made a desperate but half hearted effort for recognition Wednesday, but finally came forth strong at night.

A CLUB HOUSE.

The Rev. Mr. Cady, if he should run for office, would undoubtedly receive the united support of all the shiftless ones who never work, and never intend to work as long as they can be provided for by state or city. Mr. Cady recommends the removal of the Charlestown state prison. It is not a jail, a prison, a place of punishment or anything of that kind that he would advocate. It is a club house, a recreation resort, a moving picture house or some sort of a temperance palm garden which should be the abiding place of criminals. They should be classified. Well that latter suggestion is not half bad. No doubt some good could be accomplished if it was carried out logically. But that which adds to the criminal list today, and especially among the high class criminals, is the fact that jails are made such pleasant places for them and in a little while after eating a few mouthfuls of soap and giving a physician a large enough fee, a pardon is awaiting the offender after a short period spent at the state or national club house, where the delinquent has been served like a resident member at his favorite club. All this talk of so-called prison reform in view of the case with which people get out of jail for serious offences, gives rise to the supposition that this jailing business is only an initiation degree in one of the numerous secret societies in operation.

SCHOOL SAVINGS.

The idea of school children saving is a good one. The law which permits them to deposit money in savings bank, is within the bounds of reason. The boys and giris should be encouraged in this system of being thrifty. The Bank commissioner in his annual report devotes considerable space to a discussion of this subject. The number of schools and depositors is exceptionally large. The amounts to each depositor is creditable. There appears to be little disposition to withdraw once an account is established. The practice should be encouraged. This along with the Stamp Savings societies are doing a work which will bear good fruit and the results will be better realized and more satisfactory in the years to come.

WORRYING ABOUT CRIMINALS.

So many people worry about the terrible ordeals to which criminals are subjected that they carry their complaints beyond the bounds of reason. In every court, there is a probation officer, and in some courts women as well as men, who look up the records of offenders and recommend to the courts that they consider the best disposition to be made of individual cases. The reformer takes all cases, makes sweeping claims which are justified by facts and then shouts for reform. Have any of those people ever thought how much good they could do if they would devote some of this surplus talent to finding congenial employment for men ready and willing to work, or reached out a helping hand to the man who is rapidly driven to some desperate deed to sustain his body. There is where a great work could be accomplished but it would not get so much publicity.

1913 NOTHING TO CROW OVER

In the Way of Mild January Weather According to Records

Building Inspector Warren S. Parker has records kept by himself and his ancestors tending to show the present winter is not the mildest ever According to these records Ebenezer Green plowed 30 acres of the Mt. Wollaston Farm in February, 1815. Thomas Crane killed a rattlesnake in the woods, West Quincy, Jan. 1, 1818, and says in his diary that the weather was "unusually warm." January of 1864 was unusually mild and there was no frost in the ground in January, 1870. The mercury stood at 76 in the shade in January, 1876. The diaries show that remarkably cool summers followed these mild winters.

Man With Hand Cut Off Walks a Mile to Doctor's Office

Herndon, Pa., Jan. 30.—While working alone in a shingle mill near here Calvin Bobb had his hand sawed off. Picking up the hand he walked a mile to a doctor's office. There he pulled it out of his pocket and at the same time he stuck up his arm and told of the accident.

To stop the flow of blood he used a piece of his overshirt for a tourniquet. He was taken to a hospital at Sunbury.

—Elbert Hubbard, "Fra Elbertus," has been fined by a New York court for sending immoral matter through the mails. The matter was contained in a magazine Hubbard sends out, and he pleaded guilty. A good many people says the Banker and Tradesman have been thinking for a long time that much that Hubbard was printing in the magazine was, to say the least, unnecessary.

Might Have Led to Wrong Impression But Did Not

PEOPLE TOO WELL KNOWN

Through an inadvertant error, yesterday, an injustice might have been done some member of Officer Jeremiah Hinchon's family, were it not for the fact that their characters and reputations in this city are too well established to permit of any misunderstanding. Officer Hinchon with his usual activity on hearing the story by Nathan Ames of the boy wanting to buy a shot gun ferreted out the offender.

In writing the heading for the story just before going to press, in hurrying over the text the name Hinchon struck the eye, with the result that the name appeared in the heading.

The text of the story however was correct and told its own tale. There was no intention of giving any false impression about any one, as all concerned realized. The following explanation of the circumstance is gladly made although it is believed that it is not absolutely necessary when made, any member of the Hinchon family being considered.

DR. GAREY LED GRANITE CLUB

In the Regular Weekly Whist Tournament

There was a good attendance Wednesday evening at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club. The top score of the evening was secured by Dr. C. Wendell Garey. There was a tie for second place between Edward J. Murphy and William R. Dimmock. The former however won on a turn of the card. The monthly trophies for January went to Rollin H. Newcomb, William R. Dimmock and Henry F. Tilden.

HUMAN DIAL FOR THE TOAST

New Feature to Be Presented at Elks' Ball

The eleven o'clock feature tonight at the Elks Charity ball will be one of the most unique ever seen in this city. In this feature an illuminated clock dial with the hour hand pointing to 11 o'clock is usually shown. Tonight however the dial will be a living one formed by brothers of Quincy lodge. Joseph Schafer will give the Elks toast and the Temple quartette will render the musical portion of the ceremony.

Dwelling Among His Flowers in Midwinter Thinking

OF THE COMING OFFICE

Writing from Rose Lawn, under date of Jan. 25, Charles W. Guy says in an extract from his diary, "Jan. 1, picked out of my garden a bunch of roses. Several snow storms and January thaws during the month. On the 22d ploughed grass lot and today have planted a small lot of flower seeds Picked a small lot of dandelions also snowdrops and pansy in bloom. Twelve months of flowers in my garden. Do not use any glass to raise them. I must go in a few days to Florida to pull oranges as the United States is trying to find some hardy oranges and lemons. We may yet pull them in this city. There is no doubt but the country is freezing up gradually for there was a time when palm trees grew in Greenland. I am to be a candidate for Councillor."

SOME BABBLERS AMONG BESSES

New Club Has Queer Name, But It Is All Right

The "Babbling Besses" met Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. W. F. Perry, 42 Massachusetts avenue. A most enjoyable time was spent, sewing and singing, and later refreshments were served. Flashlight pictures were taken of the club.

The club has only been formed a short time and the members are already looking forward to many pleasant evenings, a theatre party being planned for next week. The club members include, Miss H. M. Lermond, Miss A. Keene, Mrs. Otis McDonald, Mrs. James Hennessey, Mrs. Winfred Lermond, Miss G. Pinel, Mrs. W. F. Perry and Mrs. Douglas Smeaton.

A SPURT BY MR. KESSLER

Makes Largest Gain Today in Washington Contest

THIRD AND FOURTH PRIZES

It has been decided by the Contest Editor to give third and fourth prizes in the Washington Inauguration contest, and possibly other prizes. The first four today are Fred D. Williams, Sturgis H. Hunt, A. R. MacKay and Mrs. Emma Marnock. Next in line is Galen Bowditch, who is still hopeful that "the committee" may send him to Washington.

The largest gain today was made by Fred J. Kessler, who has them all guessing. He did good work in the earlier days of the contest, being at one time the leader. It is possible that he may have a few reserved. He added 345 today.

Mr. Bowditch is second in gain today with 305. Miss Morrissett has added 135, Edmond Roach 90, Miss Ruth Cahill 55, and Hannah Sandberg 50.

PRESIDENTS SHOES.

A Boston paper reports today that the shoes which President Woodrow Wilson will wear on Inauguration day, March 4, are being made in Weymouth, Mass. The dispatch says:

It is going to be no easy job to upset Woodrow Wilson when he once gets a good foothold on Presidential prerogatives. He wears a No. 9 shoe or at least he will wear shoes of this generous size when he steps into the Presidency.

Work on the next-Presidential shoes was begun yesterday in the factory of Stetson & Heald on Main street, Weymouth. They will be made with great care from exact measurements of Gov. Wilson's feet and will be finished by Thursday or Friday.

The shoes will be No. 9, B. width, with vamps of French calf and tops of box kid. They will have single soles and welts of oak-tanned leather They will be as simple as possible in style. It is probable that the shoes will be sent to Mr. Wilson by special messenger.

ANOTHER BIG PRIZE.

The prize for the largest gain in votes this week is a vote certificate good for 2,000 votes, twice as large as last week. This will probably be the last prize for weekly gain, as the contest is drawing to a close. This certificate for 2,000 votes will be credited next Monday at 9 A. M. to the candidate who makes the largest gain during the week of Jan. 27—Feb. 3. To be successful in the contest for the free Washington trips a candidate will almost need these 2,000 votes. It will make considerable difference whether they are awarded to him or to the other fellow.

Remember, the last coupon in the contest will be printed Saturday, Feb. 8, a week from next Saturday.

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

Any candidate in the Ledger trip to Washington to the inaugural, can take a look at the ticket by calling at the office. It looks good, as does also the companion ticket. The winner in the contest has the privilege of selecting a companion to go on the trip. It's a very complete trip costing $75 each ticket.

HARRIS HEARD FROM.

Edwin E. Harris who occasionally has freaks of calling up the police by telephone and telling them a fairy tale about shooting up the town, went on the rampage again Tuesday night. Early in the evening the telephone at the police station rang and Edwin proved to be on the other end of the line although he said that he was a police officer. He stated that Edwin Harris had shot his wife in Boston and was under arrest. Then he hung up his receiver and no more was heard from him. Several other parties in the city were also called up during the evening and given the same fairy tale.

Some months ago Harris did the same thing only that time he said that he was coming to Quincy and was to do the Restelli stunt. He will be arrested as soon as he makes his appearance in Quincy.

THE FAME OF SICKLES

No Excuse For Shortage of State Funds, Says Attorney General

Albany, Jan. 30.—The fame of General Daniel E. Sickles as a soldier should not deter New York state in its efforts to have restored to its treasury the $23,476 unaccounted for by the general as chairman of the New York monument commission.

This is the view advanced by Attorney General Carmody in a letter to Mrs. Helen D. Longstreet of Gainesville, Ga., widow of the confederate general who was Sickles' foe at Gettysburg.

In a telegram to Carmody, Mrs. Longstreet offered to raise $23,476 from "the ragged and maimed followers of Lee."

NOT A DISSENTING VOTE

Massachusetts House Is Solid For a Telephone Inquiry

Boston, Jan. 30.—By a vote of 228 to 0 the house passed the Hays order for the investigation of rates and service of the telephone companies in Massachusetts. The vote was on the order offered by Representative Hays, with an amendment offered by Mr. White.

Washington, Jan. 30.—The interstate commerce commission issued the formal order for the inquiry into the affairs of the American Telephone and Telegraph company.

Rooster Attacks Baby

Bayonne, N. J., Jan. 30.—Ten dollars' damage was awarded in court here to Mrs. Otto Weckesser for injuries inflicted on her 18-months-old son by a rooster owned by Mrs. Helen Goldweber. Mrs. Weckesser said the rooster knocked the child down and pecked a hole in his head.

QUINCY SCHOOL.

The new hall in the Quincy school building is now practically completed and presents a very attractive appearance. The woodwork is finished in dark green to match the woodwork of the rest of the building while the walls have been very attractively tinted. The stage is particularly well adapted to the proportions of the hall and has dressing rooms on either side and a row of concealed foot lights in front. It is hoped that an appropriation will soon be made to provide seats, piano and other necessary furnishings and that the parents of the pupils in the school may have a chance to assemble these on the next public day.

The boys at the Quincy school are now anxiously awaiting the arrival of some tools that have been ordered so that they may carry on their manual training in the building. A part of the boys basement has been petitioned off with a picket fence, a log work bench and saw horses will be built and a great number of other things have been planned to be undertaken as soon as the tools arrive.

The entering classes varied very much in the different schools but a sufficient number entered to necessitate sending additional assistants to the Atherton Hough, John Hancock and Lincoln buildings. In the former school, two of the rooms now have an attendance of more than fifty pupils and the use of the corridor is necessary for recitation purposes. At the Gridley Bryant school. There was practically no entering class.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

The class of 1913 held a meeting Wednesday noon and decided to hold a candy sale to raise money to buy a picture for the school. Theodore Higgins is President.

Miss Gladys Goodnow, teacher in Grade V., who has been ill with diphtheria at the Mass. Homeopathic Hospital has so far recovered as to be allowed to go to her home in Fairhaven.

Sixteen children entered Grade I last Monday morning. The February classes are in charge of Miss Evelyn Farrington.

MASS. FIELDS SCHOOL.

The regular meeting of the Parents-Teachers' Association will be held in the school corridor on Thursday evening, February 6, at 7.45 o'clock.

Mr. Ernest L. Collins, Headmaster Quincy High school, will speak, subject "The Home and the school."

Music. All are welcome.

Fourteen children entered grade I on Monday afternoon. The February Classes are in charge of Miss Martha Jenkins.

WILLARD SCHOOL.

Thirty-five pupils were registered in the new first grade, Monday, January 27, and the half yearly promotion took place in the first three grades.

The banner for best attendance in the upper grades was won by Miss Mary White's sixth grade, while the one for the lower grades went to Miss Teresa McDonnell's third grade.

For some time the seventh grades have been in need of basketballs to use in playing dodgeball. To supply this need a pop corn sale was held recently a sufficient amount being realized to purchase two basketballs.

The pupils and teachers of the school were glad to see Dr. J. Gardner Smith Wednesday.

A CORN EXHIBIT.

The Corn Products Refining Co., of New York has very kindly presented to the Willard school a corn exhibit containing thirty five specimens illustrating the various products and by-products derived from corn.

The first sample of this exhibit is corn in its original state which as a product is more valuable to the United States than all our gold, silver and cotton combined. Although in itself it is worth but a few cents a pound, when however, it is fed to cattle or hogs and sold as beef or pork it is worth much more.

The most interesting sample illustrates the germ separation, showing how the starch rises to the top of water while the refuse sinks to the bottom.

From the starchy parts are made many different kinds of laundry and cooking starches all of which are shown in the exhibit and without which our mothers could not keep house. Also are to be seen the different kinds of sugar and syrup which we use on our griddle cakes or in making candies.

From the refuse of the corn after the starch has been removed oils are made and here again nothing is wasted, the part remaining, after the oil has been removed, is pressed into cake form and is exported to Europe where it is used as food for cattle.

Some of the other products are paragol, hydrol, breakfast foods and dextrine, a substance used as a substitute for gum.

So you see that this exhibit is very educational in that it has taught us many things about corn which we did not know.

Matthew Bryan,
Grade VIII.

MONTCLAIR SCHOOL.

The following children were admitted to Grade One of the Montclair school, Monday. Edward White, Clara Luella Saylor, Dorothy May Stetson, Verge Wagner, Charlotte Murphy, Raymond York Grace, Beatrice Martineau, Olive Dingwell, Mary Purdy, Frederick Pierce Cullen, Faxon Caleb Billings, Mary Louise Melanson, Lillian Emma Fratus, Harold Carl Olson, Florence Stella Fitzgerald.

HOLLIS SCHOOL DEDICATION

Teachers' Musical Event May Be Said to Be of That Character

A most enjoyable event was the musicale given in the assembly hall of the Hollis school Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Braintree Teachers' Association. There was a crowded house and the audience was thoroughly appreciative of the excellent program presented. The work of the quartet in ensemble work and the solos of the different members were all very fine.

The readings of Miss Lamoureux were applauded to the echo and the violin selections of Miss Keating stirred her listeners to enthusiasm. Praise is also due to Mrs. Hunt and Miss Keating who presided most acceptably as accompanists. The concert was the first entertainment to be held in the new Hollis school and may be considered as a sort of informal dedication.

The teachers deserve great credit for their success in providing such a pleasant entertainment.

The program and committees are here given:

Quartet—Carmena — Wilson
Contralto Solo—Hail, Heavenly Hosts — Rossini
Miss Teresa H. Keating.
Tenor Solo—The Earl King — Schuberi
Mr. Lawrence W. Emery
Reading—Selected
Miss Pauline Lamoureux
Violin Solo—Concerto—No. IX — Ch. DeBeriot
Miss Ruth Keating
Soprano Solo—Chanson Provencale — Del'Acqua
Miss Gladys Hayward
Bass Solo—Evening Star — Wagner
Mr. John E. Greene
Violin Solo—"Les Adieux" — Sarasate
Miss Keating
Reading—Selected
Miss Lamoureux
Quartet—Forget-me-not — Giese

The committee: Theresa H. Keating, chairman, Edith A. Lavalette, secretary and treasurer, Louise Emerson, Clara Holbrook, Irene Murphy, Ada McDonald, Claire Shay, Lela Smith, Leta Weston.

DRIVEN FROM OTHER CITIES

White Slavers Said to Be More Active In Boston Than Ever

Boston, Jan. 30.—That there is more "white slave" traffic going on now in Boston than ever before, was the assertion made by Senator Bazeley of Uxbridge, chairman of the committee on social welfare, at a hearing on a bill proposing a statewide investigation of the traffic by a special commission.

Stating that he believed the dealers in this traffic had been driven here because of investigations in other states, Bazeley said:

"Among unsophisticated people it has been supposed until quite recently that there wasn't any white slave traffic in Boston. Reports are coming in, however, that girls are being constantly approached, not in the usual way, but with offers to leave the city."

KATZ FOUND NOT GUILTY

Of Performing Labors on the Lord's Day

NEIGHBOR MADE COMPLAINT

The trouble that has been brewing in the district about Sumner and South Walnut streets came to a head this morning when Hyman Katz one of the junk collectors who resides in that neighborhood was summoned into court for performing labor on the Lord's day without a permit. The complainant in the case was an Italian neighbor who said that Katz had been getting up Sunday mornings in the vicinity of 3 o'clock and that he continued to work about his yard all day. In addition to that it was the complainant alleged that he piled his junk up in front of his house. Last Sunday he said that Katz started in at 3 o'clock in the morning and worked up to 10.30 bagging old bottles. He then told Katz that he should complain to the police and at this he stopped work for a time.

After hearing the evidence however the ocurt found Katz not guilty and ordered his discharge.

TWO GARMENTS RECOVERED

Officer Avery recovered two overcoats Wednesday in a pawn shop on Pleasant street, Boston that had been stolen from the High school, Monday. The coats recovered belonged to Thomas Thompson and Richard Ash. On the same day two raincoats owned by Edward Foy and Thomas Moran were also stolen at the High school. These have not been recovered. The description of the two men who pawned the overcoats answers the description of two men seen prowling about the school shortly before the school closed on Monday.

BRIEFS

The Quincy Beef Co. is building a cold storage plant at their refrigerators on Dimmock street.

Mr. and Mrs. Alva Beede, of Appleton street are at Billerica, to attend the wedding of Mr. Beede's cousin, Roy Spaulding.

Miss Cassie McDonnell of Willard street, returned Tuesday from a trip to Jamaica in fine health and spirit. Miss McDonnell is a trained nurse and well known in this city.

The many friends of Mr. J. A. Sutherland of the well known firm, the Quincy Oil Co., will be glad to know that he is much improved in health and will soon be able to resume business again.

The date for the play "Mr. Bob" to be given by the C. E. Society of the First Presbyterian church has been set for Wednesday evening, February 19 and promises a very enjoyable evening for all who attend.

Mrs. Joseph Gill, who has been staying with her sister, Mrs. Alva Beede of Appleton street for some time on account of illness has almost recovered and was able to go to her home in Dorchester this week.

Mrs. Arthur P. Ropes of Wollaston gave a very interesting talk on her trip to Venice and through Italy at a regular meeting of Current Events Club Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Joseph K. Barbour, Elm avenue.

Ex-Mayor John O. Hall of this city appeared before the legislative committee in Boston, Wednesday to bar the Red Flag in Massachusetts, said that "every public spirted citizen in Massachusetts would welcome the abolition of the Red flag."

John C. Smith of Stonington, Me., formerly of Quincy is in town on a few days vacation trip. Mr. Smith says that they have had but very little snow in Maine and that it has been but little colder than in Massachusetts and but little ice has been housed as yet.

A POSTAL EPISODE

It was a pretty sight, this Cell 29, as Katherine Gray called her parlor and alcove suite in the Norman, Cedar street, Blank City. There was a piano, there were books, easy chairs, pictures. Besides the furnishings that in these days are called necessary, there were the countless small things that make a room something more than mere shelter. In the open grate the gas-log burned with irritating regularity and precision, flaunting its beauty in the face of the useful but ornamental steam-coil. Behind a gay screen, slightly ajar, there was a tiny gas stove, and singing kettle; a half-open door of a cabinet revealed odd pieces of china and shining silver.

This is what the sun shone upon through the big east bay window on New Year's morning. This, and Katherine Gray at her breakfast-table. The postman had made his one round for the day. Some business house had sent her a calendar, and there was one letter. This she was reading. She made a pretty picture as she sat thus. The domestic signs and symbols were becoming to her; they gave her an air of homeliness that made one wish for a cup of the fragrant coffee, just for the sake of seeing her pour it out.

She had a wealth of brown hair, sincere hazel eyes, and a most expressive mouth. She was tall, slow of motion and of speech. No one would have spoken of her as a pretty woman yet, any observing person would have seen that she had not stopped at prettiness, but had passed on to something finer.

With all the rest of the world, she was having a holiday. So she had arrayed herself in a becoming housegown, and was enjoying it just as much as though she was not, every day in the year—Sundays and holidays excepted—engaged in the real estate and life insurance business.

"I wish," she said,—she had a fashion of thinking aloud when alone,—"I wish that this letter could have been delayed until to-morrow. I don't like being so disturbed on New Year's Day. There is a saying that as the first day goes, so goes the whole year." Then she laughed; and she looked very pretty when laughing. "I wonder if I'm to have a proposal of marriage every day in the year and feel as bad about every one as I do about this?"

Then she arose and walked to the mirror. The reflection was not unpleasant; she smiled as she looked at it. But she said: "There's no use in being flattered by the glass, Katherine the fact remains that this is your birthday and that you are thirty-four years old today, and from this time right along you are not going to grow any younger. Here in your hand is an offer of marriage from an eminently worthy and respectable man, who would take you away from Cell 29 and its 'kitcheny-parlor' air, and set you in a handsome home, where you wouldn't have to hide your bread in the bureau drawer, bake and boil in a single dish, or eat 'boughten pie'—who would make a lady of leisure of you, and who, best of all, or what ought to be best of all, would love you and be good to you. And yet," she continued, "you hesitate. With the little lines coming around your eyes and mouth, with work and worry and weariness stretching out indefinitely before you—you hesitate, I am surprised. You don't show your usual good business sense, your keen appreciation of a good bargain. You are ungrateful, also. You ought to fall on your knees and thank the Lord for such a piece of good fortune. That is, I suppose you ought, according to the world's way of looking at such things."

Then she sat down before the fire and fell into silence. Truly, she was not insensible to the material advantages that were offered to her in this letter from Mr. Browne, wholesale grocer and dealer in canned goods. She loved ease and beauty and luxury; she could use them to the adorning of any position that might be offered her. She was tired of work and the continuous struggle for bread. She had achieved some success in a business way, and that, too, in the face of every instinct of her being. She had made something approaching a home in this little suite of rooms. Her friends drifted in of a Sunday, or now and then of an evening, and, sipping tea from a dainty cup, would pronounce it all "so cozy and delightful." It certainly was a great improvement on the gregariousness of the boarding-house, but in Katherine's secret soul she felt it to be a narrow and lonely life. She despised the makeshifts of light housekeeping, and, being of a very social nature, she often found her solitary roll and coffee lacking in flavor.

As she sat thus, with her hands clasped above her head, she thought; "If it were not for that letter received and answered ten years ago today—the first of the year is a fateful day to me, surely—I know what my reply would be to this one. If I could only forget—but I may as well start my life anew to-day as any time."

Then she went to her desk and took down the old calendar. "You've had your day, and you may as well go with the rest. One nail drives out another. Your successor is here, with his ready-made wisdom.

"By the way, I'll see what sort this is," she said. "It's some advertising scheme, no doubt; but it may have a message for me, just the same."

She read: "Be more afraid of the companionship that enslaves than of the solitude that leaves you free. Use the Highflyer Bicycle. Best in the world."

She read the quotation twice, smiling as she did so, and hung the new calendar in its place. Then she proceeded to set her rooms in order. She cleared the little table, and cheerfully put the bread and butter in such places as the ordinary house-keeper knows not of. She sang as she washed the dainty plate and cup and saucer. She did not mind that there was only one.

After this she proceeded to do what nine out of ten business women do on their holidays. She took numberless stitches here and there; she "did up" a bit of lace too fine for the aggressive laundress' hands; she regulated sundry boxes and drawers, and set in fair array her store of feminine finery.

At three o'clock she made a careful street toilet and went out for her dinner. Determined not to dine alone she invited little Joe, the newsboy who brought her morning paper, and who did small errands for her and other occupants of the Norman, to go with her.

To be sure, when she asked him if he had been to dinner, he admitted that he had been "wid de gang to de mission. But dat," said he "don't cut any figer. I kin eat jes' as well fer all dat."

He verified his assertion. Katherine never had a more satisfactory guest.

"Yer bet it was bully," he said the next day to a properly envious crowd of boys. "None o' you fellers ever seed anything like it. 'Twas a way-up restrent, where dey have chany wid flowers onto it, an' silver an' glass things wot I don't know der names of. An' wite table cloths an' napkins wot I used jes' like a genlem does, an' a waiter stood behind my cheer an' waited on me jes like he did de rest. He didn't dast do no-think else wid Miss Grey's eyes lookin' right at him. An' dere was soup, an' turkey, an' inguns, an' jell, an' ice cream, an' pie, an' puddin—an' I was on'y sorry I'd filled up so at de mission."

II.

Katherine sat in the early winter twilight at her piano, singing some sweet old song of her early youth.

She loved music, and not even the demands of the real estate and insurance business had kept her from study and practice.

Then there came a vigorous ring at her door. It flashed across her mind that possibly Mr. Browne was going to forestall the postman and know his fate by word of mouth. Before going to the door, she lighted the gas and went to the mirror. Standing there she said, "Statistics show, Katherine that women over thirty"—

Then the bell rang again. As if wavering a little, she glanced at the calendar. Bravely the words shone before her eyes: "Be more afraid of the companionship that enslaves than of the solitude that leaves you free."

"Ah! that helps," she said.

Then she opened wide the door.

It certainly was not Mr. Browne who stood there. Mr. Browne was short and rotund; florid also. This man was tall; of fine proportions, with clear-cut features and a fine mustache.

"Miss Grey?" he said, interrogatively.

"Yes."

"My name is—but perhaps you remember my name;" and the tall man stepped uninvited into the room.

"Yes," she said, her eyes blazing; "I remember your name. It is the name of the only man who ever treated me with disrespect. Go back into the silence that has covered you for ten years!"

"Not yet," he said. "The morning mail brought me this letter that you wrote me ten years ago. You accepted me then; you said that you loved me. I've the proof in my hands,"—and he opened a letter yellow and stained. "You say:—

"Dear Everil—I'—"

"Oh, don't," she cried.

"Listen, dear," he said; "sit down beside me while I tell you. The post-office in the city where we both lived ten years ago has recently undergone repairs. A package of letters has been exhumed by the gasfitters or plumbers. This is one of them. I only hope the others have been forwarded to as happy a destination. For the words in that letter,—they are true now as then; are they not, Katherine?"

"Oh, I don't know!" she said.

"Find out, dear as quickly as you can. The years have been long and hard; but these last eight hours have been torture. I had no idea where to look for you.—"

"What do you think I must have endured?" she asked.

"I don't dare think of it." Then he added, as ninety-nine men out of a hundred would have done: "We won't talk about it or think of it. We will forget the sadness of the past, and plan for our future."

"How did you find me?" asked Katherine.

"I saw you at the restaurant where you were entertaining that little hoodlum, I knew you at once. There's no woman in the world like you. I too, had a guest with me, and could not follow you. But an hour later I caught the boy on the street, and by my silvery eloquence and a dollar learned your name, and where you lived."

"My name!"

"Yes. You might have changed it—and then—I should not be here."

Then Katherine told him of her father's death; of the reverses that drove her into earning her own livelihood; of the circumstances that set her in the business she was following; of her modest success; and then of Mr. Browne.

"That is all past," he said, emphatically, "especially Mr. Browne. You are going to retire from business, and let me set you in the dearest, sweetest spot on earth, a happy home. I don't fancy this spirit of independence that possesses the woman of the present day."

But Katherine said: "Don't talk of a subject you evidently do not fully understand. It's too large for our discussion to-night. It was this spirit of independence that made it possible for me to be true to my own heart so many years. Except for it, I might not have been able to obey the message the New Year brought to me. This has been New Year's Day, you know."

"This is New Year's Day," he said. "It shall be, God helping, the beginning of love, and hope, and happiness that shall last the years to come. It shall be the beginning of a companionship that means not enslavement, but the liberty wherewith love sets us free. And as for that blessed calendar, it shall never be deposed."

So they sealed their vows after the sweet manner of lover since the world was.

Then some friends dropped in, and after a while Katherine lighted the tiny gas stove behind the gay screen, and soon there was a singing kettle and a dainty little feast, which the friends pronounced "just lovely," but which Katherine and her lover alone knew was the feast of betrothal.

A month later, little Joe was dividing a box of wedding cake with a number of his friends.

"Dey looked as happy as kings and queens," he said, "when dey rode away. An' I don't s'pose 'twould ever have happened if it hadn't been for me."—Carlotta Perry.

Friedmann Is on His Way to America With Tuberculosis Cure

New York, Jan. 30.—Dr. Friedrich F. Friedmann of Berlin, who declares he has discovered an absolute cure for consumption, is now on his way to America, where he hopes to obtain the $1,000,000 recently offered by Charles E. Finley, president of a New York bank, for his discovery, provided the efficacy of the cure can be satisfactorily demonstrated.

When Friedmann announced he had discovered the long-sought cure for tuberculosis the demand for information regarding his method was world-wide. Medical institutes everywhere sent for cultures, and persons flocked to Berlin for treatment. Friedmann, however, refused to make public his secret.

The American medical authorities are, as a whole, sceptical regarding Friedmann's claims.

HAINES TAKES A HAND

Brings Bangor and Aroostock Strike Before the Legislature

Augusta, Me., Jan. 30.—A renewal of the request in his inaugural address that the legislature enact a public service commission or court to regulate the affairs of all public service corporations, including the railroads, was made by Governor Haines in a message to the legislature with which he submitted the report of the investigation by the state board of arbitration and conciliation of the strike of the engineers and firemen of the Bangor and Aroostook railroad.

The board feels that the situation now existing between the company and the striking brotherhoods threatens the public welfare and cites from the testimony of potato growers and lumbermen along the 625 miles of railroad lines operated by the Bangor and Aroostcok.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

A new set of engravings on "The southern coast of England" has just been received and is on exhibition at the Public Library. This set of engravings was made from drawings by Turner during the years 1814-1826, and, as shown by the map, represents very fully the ports and picturesque localities of the southern counties of England. They were published by W. B. Cooke, and Turner's disputes with him are among the most unpleasant episodes of the artist's life. His works are interpreted by a school of engravers whose individuality is so completely lost in his own that the plates might almost have been the work of a single engraver.

The Bulletin of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association may now be found upon the Reading Room tables as monthly copies are the gift of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress.

TURKEY FACING A NEW CRISIS

Grave Ferment Among Her Troops on Tchatalja Lines

ALLIES PRESENT ULTIMATUM

Coincident With Arising of Internal Complications In Ottoman Empire—Large Naval Forces Concentrated by European Powers.

London, Jan. 30.—The note drafted by the peace delegates of the Balkan allies was delivered by Soojan Novakovitch, head of the Servian delegation, to Rechad Pasha, the leader of the Turkish delegation, yesterday afternoon. The determining factor impelling the allies to this course of action was the receipt of reports of grave ferment among the Turkish troops stationed on the Tchatalja lines, a large portion of whom appear to be unwilling to follow the lead of the Young Turks. It is considered here that in view of the internal complications in Turkey Mahmud Shefket Pasha, the new grand vizier, may yield before the energetic act of the allies.

The gravity of the situation at Constantinople is shown by the large naval forces concentrated by the European powers, especially England, France and Italy, at the entrance to the Dardanelles. Even Austria-Hungary, which in the past, together with Germany, had refused to join the other European powers in naval coercive measures, has now ordered two warships at Pola to be kept in readiness to start for the east at any moment.

While the clouds are gathering in Constantinople those persons who make a study of the European political firmament consider the general peace of Europe is not in danger. As a proof of this they point to the fact that Italy has just disbanded 100,000 of her soldiers who served in the war in Tripoli.

Rechad Pasha expressed the hope that the European powers, realizing the unfair treatment which had been inflicted on Turkey and which had caused the aggravation of the situation, would help the porte to surmount its present difficulties, thus ensuring the co-operation of the Ottoman empire in the plans of the powers for the definite political and economic settlement of the whole eastern problem.

Several members of the Bulgarian peace mission are leaving London, including T. Theoduroff, the minister of finance, and Lieutenant Tsanoff, a graduate of Harvard, who has been acting as attache and who is returning to join his regiment.

TURKS' REPLY READY

Diplomats Think It Will Permit Resumption of Peace Negotiations

Constantinople, Jan. 30.—Turkey's reply to the note of the powers will be handed to the Austrian ambassador today.

The diplomats here are favorably impressed with the information they have received respecting the reply, and are sanguine that the Turkish counter proposals will serve as a basis for a settlement, or at least permit the resumption of negotiations.

The only foundation for the report that fighting has occurred at Tchatalja between the adherents of the late Nazim Pasha and the supporters of the Young Turks is the arrival in Constantinople from the front of several batches of invalid soldiers. Most of these are suffering from fever exhaustion and frost-bite."

Greeks Kill Many Turks

Athens, Jan. 30.—Anticipating the rupture of the armistice, the Greek army, under the personal command of Crown Prince Constantine, attacked the Bisani fortifications near Janina, blowing up a powder magazine and killing many Turkish soldiers. The fighting lasted from early morning until near midnight.

The Kitchen Cupboard

HOW TO MAKE TRIPE PALATABLE

MANY persons are prejudiced against tripe. This prejudice is foolish. Tripe is, of course, the stomach and intestinal tissue of the beef, but before being offered for sale it has been well cleaned and boiled. It is a food easy to digest, as much of it turns to gelatin in boiling. It is prescribed often in cases of stomach troubles and dyspepsia.

Palatable Foods.

Tripe Lyonnaise. — Take the tripe, wash it thoroughly and cut into small pieces, then place in a saucepan and cover with boiling water, cooking until tender. Drain off all the water, and put in with the tripe one tablespoonful of browned butter, in which has been fried one small onion, cut into thin slices; one tablespoonful of vinegar, one tablespoonful of mixed parsley and salt and pepper to taste. Cook for ten minutes and serve on slices of toasted bread.

Tripe Fried.—Take a pound of pickled tripe and soak it for about half an hour in salted water. Drain on a soft cloth and sprinkle with one-quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper. Dip in beaten egg and roll in finely powdered breadcrumbs. Fry in one teaspoonful of butter and two tablespoonfuls of lard until golden brown. Garnish with parsley.

Easily Digested Fare.

Stewed Tripe.—Take half a pound of tripe, an onion, half a pint of milk, one dessertspoonful of flour, pepper and salt. Blanch the tripe. Remove all fat and cut into square pieces. Put the tripe, the onion, finely chopped, and the milk into a saucepan. Season with pepper and salt. Simmer gently for a couple of hours. Mix the flour with a little cold milk and mix it in. Stir until it boils up. Serve hot.

Tripe Soup.—Take half a pound of tripe, three pints of water, a turnip, a carrot, three onions, seasoning herbs, parsley, half a pint of cold milk and two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch. First scald the tripe and cut it into very small pieces before setting on to boil with the cold water and herbs. Chop all the vegetables into small pieces, add to the tripe and boil slowly for one hour and a half. Then take the cornstarch, work it into a paste with a little cold milk. Add to the boiling soup and stir over the fire for ten minutes. Just before serving add the rest of the milk, the chopped parsley, with pepper and salt to taste. Serve the soup very hot with fried bread.

CONNECTICUT RIVER DAM BILL HELD UP

Republicans Make Fruitless Effort to Break Deadlock

Washington, Jan. 30.—The conflict in the senate over the Connecticut river dam bill has been postponed because of the deadlock over President Taft's nominations. It is still brewing, however, as was indicated when Senator Jones introduced an amendment to the effect that the secretary of war must have filed with him an agreement in which full authority is given to the state of Connecticut to contest and regulate rates. Senator Brandegee read a telegram from the Springfield board of trade urging the absolute necessity of the immediate passage of the bill.

By a tie vote, the Republicans of the senate lost in their effort to force another executive session to reconsider President Taft's appointments. Democratic leaders forced a rollcall, and with the aid of Senator Bristow and Senator La Follette, Republicans, and Senator Poindexter, Progressive, prevented the senate from resuming the conflict.

"MARTYRS FOR NOBLE CAUSE"

Cry of London Suffragettes When Sentenced to Jail

HUNGER STRIKE IS DECLARED

Mrs. Pankhurst Notifies Asquith That the Campaign of Violence Will Be Continued Until Women Get Right to Vote—Letter Box Outrages Continue—Shopkeepers Frightened

London, Jan. 30.—Thirty militant suffragettes, headed by Mrs. Drummond, their "general," who were sentenced to fourteen days jail terms for rioting, declared a hunger strike as soon as they were placed behind the bars yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Drummond was offered the alternative of a $10 fine, but scornfully refused to "pay tribute to a man-made government."

The women prisoners unanimously declared they were determined on a hunger strike unless they were classed as political prisoners. "This is only the beginning," said one. "Thousands will take up our work."

"We will die for votes," screamed Mrs. Drummond. "We will be martyrs for a noble cause."

Yesterday was the liveliest day the Bow street police court has seen for a long time. It echoed alternately with cheers and shrieks of frenzied rage from the throats of the suffragettes on trial and their companions who jammed the courtroom.

"It is war to the knife," shouted one woman when arraigned. "Chancellor David Lloyd-George and the police certainly have lots of trouble before them."

Friends of the arrested women, confident that they would choose prison rather than pay fines, brought them grips and suit cases filled with clothing and toilet accessories, boxes of books and papers, wraps and steamer rugs. The corridors of Bow street court looked like a railway platform on excursion day.

Mrs. Drummond, who is a woman of extraordinary big stature, led a flying wedge of athletic suffragettes against the policemen guarding the office. Although the women fought with might and main, literally hurling themselves against the officers, they were quickly overpowered. In court Mrs. Drummond boasted of being an Amazon.

"We will continue our campaign of violence until we get the right to vote." This ultimatum was sent to Premier Asquith by Mrs. Pankhurst, leader of the Women's Social and Political union, the militant wing of the suffragettes.

Although the first day of the women's guerilla war against the government, because the "franchise bill had been dropped," did not develop any new lines of militancy, it has caused a reign of panic among all classes of people who fear that the suffragettes will take it into their hands to destroy private property.

Should the leaders order the destruction of windows in private homes serious riots would follow. Already there is a deep resentment against the lawless women on the part of the small shopkeepers who have suffered financial loss from the raids of the suffragettes.

Throughout the day every police station was avalanched with continuous reports of letter box outrages in every quarter of London, and policemen made several arrests, but were unable to catch any raiders red-handed. Paint and acids were dropped into the letter boxes.

Oxford and Regent streets presented novel appearances, with their shop windows shuttered and boarded up. Following the wholesale window smashings of Tuesday night, nearly every shopkeeper had his windows protected.

It is understood that the government is planning further conspiracy charges against Mrs. Pankhurst, Mrs. Drummond and others for inciting their followers to violence.

Undismayed by the jail sentences handed out in the Bow street police court a number of suffragettes followed Premier Asquith to Leven last evening, and continued their militant tactics outside of a hall. The premier was addressing his constituents.

A strong cordon of constables was drawn around the hall and against this "the bashibazoukesses," as the militant suffragettes have come to be called, dashed wildly, but in vain. One of them was prepared against repulse. She had papers containing red pepper which she blew into the faces of the officers who resisted her. She was arrested.

The situation is so tense that the suffragettes are beginning to fall out with their friends. They broke up the annual meeting of the labor party held yesterday in London. This organization has been siding with the women, and a flood of interruptions occurred while George H. Roberts, member of parliament, was addressing the meeting. The women wanted to know what the party was going to do about votes for women and why the present ministry had not been turned out. Interrupters were ejected from the meeting.

POLICE MAY SAMPLE LIQUOR IN LOWELL

Judge Does Not Specify, However, How It Should Be Done

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 30.—This city will soon become a paradise for policemen who like just a little nip of "something strong" as they make their daily rounds, for Judge Enwright of the city police court has suggested that all policemen of the city call at the barrooms and hotels along their routes and sample the "booze" served at each place. He said nothing as to how said sample was to be taken.

The suggestion on the part of Enwright came as the result of the unusual number of drunks that have come before him the last three days, 100 men and women being up for sentence in that time.

In the court the judge said he did not see why there should be such a large number of drunks. He believed there must be something radically wrong with the liquor sold in Lowell.

SHORTER AND UGLIER WORD

Held by Court to Be Admissible In Alleged Mail Fraud Case

New York, Jan. 30.—Counsel for the government, cross-examining A. L. Wisner, on trial with John J. Meyers for alleged misuse of the mails in promoting stocks, forced the witness to admit he had made misstatements to the postoffice department concerning his enterprises. These the prosecutor characterized as lies. Counsel for the defense thereupon made stout objection. Here the court interrupted:

"The witness has admitted," said Julge Mack, "that he made these statements knowing them to be false, and they were, therefore, if I understand the English language, lies. The prosecutor may use the word "lies" as to such statements."

NAVAL MEN PUZZLED

Cannot Account For Battered Plates and Buckled Frame of Cruiser

Mare Island, Cal., Jan. 30.—The cruiser California lies in the drydock here with battered plates and buckled frame, injuries which are a mystery to Captain Halstead, officers and crew.

When the cruiser was examined it was found that plates covering a distance of 175 feet on the port side were crushed in and would have to be replaced.

The interior of the ship also looked as if a battering ram had struck it, and twenty-five frames were pulled out in a crushed condition.

A Stirring Story of Military Adventure and of a Strange Wartime Wooing

Copyright, 1912, by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Thornton escapes, captures Lieutenant Bedloe and takes from him Mrs. Haverill's miniature.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

But ripened summer was all around, and outward peace and plenty abounded that late August afternoon when Ellingham galloped up the sunlit linden avenue to Belle Bosquet. Gertrude rushed out from the veranda to meet him. She was re-enforced by a buxom and animated young person wearing a blue dress of military cut and a soldier's cap.

"Why, Miss Buckthorn!" exclaimed Bob, flinging himself from the saddle and throwing the bridle of his horse to Josephus Orangeblossom, the negro hostler, who grinned an effusive dental welcome. "It is a delightful surprise to see you here—makes me think the war is over."

"Thank you, Lieutenant—oh, pardon me! I mean Colonel Ellingham, of course," responded Jenny. "Heartsease has come over to the valley, and so has papa—with General Sheridan. I hope there won't be any serious misunderstanding. Meanwhile I am a prisoner of hospitality, and I'm in no hurry to be exchanged."

"And now, Robert," Gertrude went on eagerly, "prepare yourself for more news. Some one else whom you know is coming"—

"Madeline—but, no"—

"But yes! How did you think of it? She was in Washington visiting Mrs. Haverill, and I urged her to come over here and see us—that before I knew of General Sheridan's intentions; they keep their plans so secret, you know. But Madeline accepted the invitation and she's coming anyway."

"Hurrah!" cried Bob, flustered out of all self control. "Well, Sis, that's a big surprise you've sprung—and now, let's see what I can do in the same line. You have announced Madeline, maybe I can give you some information about her brother Kerchival."

Gertrude uttered a little cry and her hand trembled as she laid it impulsively upon her brother's shoulder.

"Yes," he continued, with sudden seriousness, "you know Sheridan is bringing over a lot of people. He has the whole Sixth corps of the Army of the Potomac, under Major General Wright, I understand, besides a division of the Nineteenth corps, and I don't know how much of the Army of Western Virginia, with General Crook. Besides, they say he is especially strong in cavalry, under Torbert, with such brigadier troopers as Wilson and Merritt and Custer. Our General Early has got some re-enforcement from Longstreet's corps and will try to make it interesting for Sheridan when he comes down Winchester way. Yes, girls, as I was saying, we expect to have rather a busy time."

Poor Bob said this in an offhand, flippant tone, but he was in an agony of apprehension lest he should be far away from Belle Bosquet when Madeline West arrived—if, indeed, she did safely reach that destination.

His fears in regard to the first part of the proposition were quickly realized. The very next day he was ordered to join his regiment at Shepherdstown, on the Potomac, where the Federal army was starting its vigorous offensive campaign.

Madeline West, as gentle and loving as she was loyal and courageous, came to the valley on the first day of September, with the first mellow mists of gold on the Massanutten mountains. Her welcome at Belle Bosquet made the place seem strangely dear to her from the first moment she crossed its threshold.

The next day Jenny was seated outdoors under a cottonwood when black Josephus came clattering up on a mule. In half a minute the whole household were listening breathlessly to him:

"It's de Lor's truth! De Yankees have done druv de army out from Winchester!"

While they were talking an old mountaineer had slouched up to the gate, unobserved, though plainly enough to be seen. He stood a moment gazing about in aimless fashion, then quickly raised the flat stone cap on one of the brick pillars of the gateway, deposited something beneath it and moved on.

CHAPTER XII.

Strange Fortunes of War.

GERTRUDE excused herself, ran down to the gate, raised the the stone and took a packet of letters from beneath it.

"My private postoffice," she whispered to Madeline. "Here is a line from Robert. You shall read it. Hello! and here is a dispatch for me to deliver—you know, dear, you are in Confederate country now, but that makes no difference between us, does it? And, what do you think? Here is a letter from Washington—from Mrs. Haverill and with a United States postmark. Fancy, Robert says it was in a mail bag which the Mosby guerillas captured when they stopped a train!"

"What does she say?" asked Madeline eagerly.

"You shall hear. She says: 'My dear Gertrude—When Kerchival West was in Washington last week on his way from Chattanooga to serve under Sheridan in the Shenandoah valley he called upon me.'—I should hope so! 'Darling, be still' "—

"Loves you!" interjected Madeline.

"Never mind that! 'I have kept your secret, Gertrude'—oh, indeed—'but I was sorely tempted to betray the confidence you placed in me at Charleston. If Kerchival West had heard you say, as I did, when your face was hidden in my bosom that night, that' "—

"That you loved him with your whole heart?" ventured Madeline.

"Nonsense! H'm—'I am certain that he still loves you as much as ever' "—

Here Jenny, who had been down the road making a reconnoissance, came galloping back on an imaginary charger.

"Do you hear that music?" she cried. "It's a military band playing 'John.' The boys are singing too. There's a Union regiment coming up the pike. And whose regiment do you suppose it is? Colonel Kerchival West's, that's what!"

Gertrude started violently, then said with assumed indifference:

"What does it matter whose regiment it is?"

"Oh, of course, you don't care. But I do. Heartsease is in it!"

Gertrude clutched at the paper she had thrust into the bosom of her riding jacket, turned away abruptly and hurried off toward the stables. In the excitement of the moment her withdrawal was not noticed. A moment later Josephus led out her gray horse, saddled and bridled. She mounted lightly and disappeared down a wooded path in the direction of the hills, opposite from that in which the troops were now plainly heard approaching.

"Cavalry!" Jenny exclaimed joyously. "That's the branch of the service I enlisted in as soon as I was born. I'll pass 'em in review. Draw saber!" executing the movement with her parasol. "Present! What! Trumpet signal 40. That means halt. Why, they are stopping here. No. 38—dismount! Ta-tara-la-ta-ta—No. 17—assembly of guard details. Well, what do you think of that? They are going into camp here. Say, girls, we'll have all the fun we want now! I wonder how I'll receive Captain Heartsease. He ought to be court martialed for stealing my handkerchief—unless he's still got it with him."

As if at the call of his name, that punctilious officer himself suddenly came into view. He was afoot, and by his side walked another in Confederate gray—none other, in fact, than Colonel Robert Ellingham.

"This way, colonel, if you'll permit me. Deucedly embarrassing, certainly, to— Ah, aw—Miss Buckthorn!" Here the captain adjusted his eyeglass and stood as stock still as the gatepost.

"Well, Captain Heartsease! I suppose the unexpected sight of me has paralyzed you."

"That expresses the situation accurately, Miss Buckthorn," replied the automaton with perfect composure.

"Why, Colonel Ellingham!" the young lady exclaimed, suddenly recognizing the other officer. "Tell me, quick, Heartsease, which of you two is prisoner to the other?"

"I am the prisoner, Miss Buckthorn," said Ellingham, saluting smilingly. "I didn't get out of Winchester quickly enough this time, so they gathered me in. But Major Williams has kindly accepted my parole, and I have been permitted to show Captain Heartsease the way to conduct me here, as"—

He peered anxiously in the direction of the veranda, whence a graceful figure now emerged and ran eagerly toward him.

"Madeline!"

"Robert!"

They clasped hands—both hands together—and stood gazing into each other's eyes in rapt silence, oblivious of all around.

WILL CONTROL BOTH BRANCHES

Democrats Now Assured of Safe Margin In Senate

CONTESTS IN THREE STATES

Victory In Any One of Them Would Materially Strengthen Dominant Party After March 4—Attitude of Progressives and Progressive Republicans Yet Unknown

Washington, Jan. 30.—With the election of Willard Saulsbury as United States senator from Delaware, the Democratic strength in the next senate swung from the precarious figure of forty-eight, or exactly one-half of the senate, to the safer total of forty-nine, a majority of two.

Saulsbury's election, added to the victory recently secured in Tennessee, assures the Democratic party absolute control of the senate after March 4.

The vote of Vice President Marshall could have been the deciding factor in any event, but the addition of another Democratic vote to the column gives the party leaders what they believe to be a safe margin for tariff and legislative action.

Contests still exist in the legislatures of New Hampshire, West Virginia and Illinois, with a total of four senators to be elected about whose political affiliations doubt now exists.

A victory in any one of these states would so materially strengthen the Democratic party that the senate would be completely removed from the element of uncertainty. The attitude of the Progressives and Progressive Republicans upon tariff matters is as yet unknown, but the margin of strength promised to the Democrats makes it unnecessary, it is believed, to count on any combinations with the Progressives.

Of the entire membership of ninety-six senators, sixty-three will hold over beyond March 4. Of these thirty-two are Republicans and thirty-one Democrats. The terms of thirty-two senators expire in March and there is, in addition, one vacancy in Illinois. Thus far seventeen Democratic senators have been elected and the election of Senator Bacon in Georgia is certain, making eighteen Democrats to take the oath of office March 4.

The opposition forces, including both the Republicans and the Progressives, have elected eleven new senators. The senate, after March 4, will stand as follows, if the deadlocks are not broken in Illinois, New Hampshire and West Virginia:

Democrats, 49; Republicans and Progressives, 43; vacancies, 4.

A COMMON ERROR

The Same Mistake Is Made By Many Quincy People.

It's a common error.
To plaster the aching back,
To rub with liniments, rheumatic joints.
If the trouble comes from the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for kidney ills,
And are endorsed by Quincy citizens.

Mrs. F. Curtis, 18 Quarry St., Quincy, Mass., says: "We used Doan's Kidney Pills in our family with good results and in 1908 publicly endorsed them. At the present time, I am pleased to confirm that statement. A member of my family was in bad shape from kidney complaint. He used plasters and several well-known remedies, but did not improve until he began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They effected a cure in two weeks and restored him to better health than he had enjoyed for years. I have also taken Doan's Kidney Pills myself and have found them excellent for strengthening the kidneys."

GOES BACK TO HUSBAND

Woman Deserted "Ugliest Man In the Country" For Handsomer One

Pittsburg, Jan. 30.—"Your honor, I lived with my husband, the ugliest man in the country, for twelve years. I ran off with George, who is one of the handsomest men in the state of Ohio," said Mrs. Mary Otopan, 27 years of age, of Barberton, O., when arraigned before Magistrate Kirby, charged with having run away with George Durak and also with having taken $200 of her husband's money with her.

When she faced her husband in court she pleaded with him to take her back, and on her promise to forget her handsome affinity the court allowed her husband to pay a fine of $25 for her and they left the courtroom together.

CURFEW PROVES A SUCCESS

Salem Youngsters Quickly "Beat It" When Fire Whistle Blows

Salem, Mass., Jan. 30.—Not a boy or girl under 16 was to be seen in the streets of Salem after 9 o'clock last night, as a result of Mayor Hurley's curfew order, which went into effect yesterday.

At 8:45 the fire whistle blew a sharp, short blast, and for the next fifteen minutes police officers were busy sending home any loiterer under 16 who had not recognized in the whistle the order to go home.

The mayor has received several letters from parents of children commending his curfew order.

AH! THERE, SIGMA YOU WON, BUT--

Wait Until Our Girls Get Their Basket Ball Growth

THEN, A DIFFERENT TALE

Even though most the fans expecter that the Quincy Gym Girls would be beaten by the Sigma Girls of the Posse Gym, they turned out in good numbers and expressed great satisfaction when the local quintette held them to 28 against their 14 points.

The Sigma team has had more experience than Quincy team, outweigh them by considerable, and a number of them act as coaches for girls' teams which gives them a fine opportunity to keep in the pink of the condition.

Miss Minerva Pray, the instructor at Stetson High which team was defeated twice by the Gym Girls, was easily the star of the evening. During the first period she did not seem to have the ability of placing the ball within the net limits but during the last period she succeeded in shooting four baskets which gained her fine applause. Elva Parker a former Posse Gym player also conspicuous, caging six baskets of a varied order.

The Sigma team was leading when the first period closed, 11 to 7. The spurt of the winners however was more than the Quincy Girls could overcome. They were not disappointed in any way by the Sigma victory. Isadora Beal, Edith Mullen and Mildred Smith excelled for the locals. The summary:

| SIGMA GIRLS | | QUINCY GYM |
|---|---|---|
| Minerva Pray rf | | lb Lena Clark |
| Elva Parker lf | rb | Ruth Hildebrand |
| | rb | Mary Beal |
| Katherine Brown c | c | Edith Mullen |
| Anna Mooney rb | lf | Mildred Smith |
| Mary Pyne lb | rf | Isadora Beal |

Score, Sigma Girls 28, Quincy Gym 13. Goals from floor, Minerva Pray, 4, Katherine Brown 3, Elva Parker 6, Mildred Smith, Isadora Beal, Edith Mullen. Goals from fouls, Minerva Pray, Elva Parker, Mildred Smith 7. Referee, Johnson. Scorer, Edwards. Timer, C. Muller. Time, 15m periods.

BRANCHES WELL PATRONIZED

West Quincy and Atlantic People Great Readers

Astonishing figures on the circulation of reading rooms of the Thomas Crane Public Library were secured by a Ledger reporter from Miss Alice G. White the librarian when interviewed on the development of the readings rooms.

At the West Quincy branch the circulation for the year 1912 was 23,354 volumes. Out of the 16 similar establishments maintained by the city of Boston, but six of them exceed that figure, and the sixth exceeded West Quincy by only 203.

This magnificent showing was made on a deposit of 700 volumes which was increased to 800 during the year and during the last month was increased to 900, its present deposit. These figures do not include the regular supply furnished from the central library upon request.

At the Atlantic reading room a similar capacity for extensive reading is evidenced by the way the Atlantic people patronize the branch. In the four months and two weeks the circulation has been 4961, an average of 85 volumes per day. This was accomplished on a deposit of 500 which was increased to 600.

—A test of the parcel post was made on the first day of the year by a Chicago newspaper, two bricks being shipped from New York to its home office, one by post, the other by express. They weighed the same and were shipped at the same time, but the parcel post package arrived first and cost 37 cents, as compared with 60 cents by express. But it is not likely that the parcel post will perceptibly reduce the price of bricks.—Milford Gazette.

MERRY TIME BY MEN'S CLUB

Promised Those Who Attend Minstrel Show Monday Night

The members of the Quincy Point church Men's Club have planned to give their friends a merry evening at their third annual entertainment, Monday evening, at Alpha Hall. The entertainment, which is to take the form of a "minstrel musicale," will be a black face affair, with the circle in full evening dress and the ends in fancy costume. Under the able direction of Henry W. French the show has been rounding out in excellent shape at the recent rehearsals and the committee in charge headed by the versatile Jack Johnston, who by the way is to purvey the local tidbits are looking forward to a bumper house. The program will be a continuous two hour affair with an opening chorus and finale largely composed of the most recent popular melodies and a few of the old timers, and including several effective tableaux. In between will be a number of up to date end songs, the latest hits from jokeland and several quartette selections.

In addition the program will include several songs by J. W. McLeod, whose fine baritone voice has recently been heard to advantage in local circles and a violin solo by B. Monk.

Taken altogether the program would appear to indicate that the Men's club at the Point are out to give their patrons a merry musical evening.

The tickets for the show are largely taken up but a few may still be had and are on sale at the drug stores of Clyde T. Cox, Adams biulding and L. A. Cook, Quincy Point and also at the store of G. W. Sargent, opposite Fore River Works.

AWAY WITH CLASS HATRED

Distinction of Condition Should Be Forgotten If the Ideal Ever Is to Be Attained.

Perhaps there is no feeling more subtle, more elusive, and more difficult to eradicate from human nature than the sense of "superiority."

In a hundred different ways it manifests itself, and no class of society seems free from it.

The professional man's wife "condescends" to the grocer's wife, the clerk's wife patronizes the mechanic's wife, the "charlady" looks down on the "stepslady," and so it goes on.

Is it any matter for wonder, then, that those who clothe themselves in purple and fine linen, who fare sumptuously every day, who are surrounded by all the culture, all the beauty, and all the luxury which modern civilization can provide find it hard to believe that a common humanity binds them to people who dwell in hovels, whose hands are begrimed and knotted with barren years of soulless labor, whose backs are bent beneath the terrific burden imposed upon them from their cradles, and who dwell continuously in the company of the grim specters of disease and poverty?

The gulf certainly seems almost impassible, but it must be bridged before any advance can be made in the direction of the abolition of class war and class hatred.—Chicago Tribune.

Rupert F. Claflin who was appointed member of the Board of Managers of the Adams Academy has declined to serve. Mayor Stone has not as yet filled the vacancy.

LIKE A DUTIFUL WIFE

FRANCES AGREED TO DRESS TO SUIT HER HUBBY.

But, as When Most Women Agree to Accede to Such a Request, There Was a String Attached to the Promise.

Frances glanced up from her morning orange to find Paul regarding her over his paper. It was not an uncommon experience, but this time there was something out of the usual, a critical, almost disapproving look in his eyes.

"What is the matter?" she asked.

"If you must know," said Paul, laying aside the morning paper, "I was wondering why women wear those sloppy clothes at the breakfast table!"

"Sloppy nothing! This is a perfectly clean kimono!"

"It may be clean, but it's sloppy all the same. It reminds me of the darkey's description of the fit of Dick's shirt—'touches no whar 'cep at de neck.'"

"But, Paul, all kimoons are made like that. It's their cut!"

"Then I wish they could be cut out. How any nice, trim, tidy woman can be contented to wear a—a—clothes bag like that with no line or shape to it passes me! I'd a good deal rather see you come to the table in a pretty nightgown! What's the special advantage of a kimono, anyway?"

"Well, it is so comfortable and easy to get into—"

"I've nothing to say against your being comfortable or easy, but I should think a clever woman like you could invent something which would be both those and yet look trig and neat and have some outline to it. Can't it be done?"

"I—suppose—so," said Frances. "Of course, if you don't like kimonos—"

"I don't!"

"—I'll stop wearing them. Only a shirtwaist is so fussy to put on and this is so comfy!"

"What's the matter with taking a tuck in your kimono or a gusset or a bias or a plait or one of those things women are always putting in clothes, and making even a kimono have some fit to it. Couldn't you do it?"

"Would you really like it a lot better, Paul?"

"I really would! Perhaps I'm an idiot, but I have an ideal of my wife's looks and that slimpsy kimono effect interferes with it. I don't like to remember you in it when I'm at business."

"Then the kimono must go!" said Frances, firmly. "Sooner than that my lord and master should have a painful picture of me in his mind all day I'd get up an hour earlier every morning and make a grand toilette! And, then, if I want you to put on your dress clothes for dinner at any time of course I shall have no hesitation in asking you to have it, for I know you are as anxious to please me as I am to please you."

Magic Italian Lakes.

Every one knows how beautiful the Italian lakes are and how luxuriant is the vegetation on their banks. This is due to a large extent to the heat absorbed in summer by the water, stored up and given out slowly in cold weather.

A calculation has been made by a scientist named Vercelli. He estimates that Lake Como has an area of 136 square kilometers and an average depth of about six hundred feet; in some places the depth is twice that.

During mid-summer this mass of water absorbs each bright day an amount of heat equal to that produced by burning 34,000 tons of coal. This storing up of heat goes on from the end of February until the water reaches its highest temperature in August.

From that time on the water gives out heat to the surrounding stones until spring comes again, so that it is no wonder that this region is a floral paradise.

Wouldn't Let Wife Eat With Him.

Mrs. Lida L. James of Peekskill seriously objected to eating at the "second table," even though so ordered to do by her husband, Herbert James, and so she went after a divorce. Furthermore, she got it. Supreme Court Justice Tompkins of White Plains had never heard of a marriage contract calling upon a wife to eat after her husband and children had devoured all the "white meat." That's why he was so generous with his divorce.

James owns a summer resort comprising a 50-acre park. After a good many years he grew tired of looking at his wife across the table and so ordered her to provide herself with material sustenance after the rest of them had pushed back the finger bowls.

Drops Dead at Wheel of Auto.

George A. Sumner, for 14 years postmaster of Hill, N. H., and a former representative in the state legislature, dropped dead of heart disease while at the wheel of his automobile and the machine crashed into a fence, throwing out the dead man, his daughter and a woman friend.

Fatal Shock In Firecracker.

The discharge of a firecracker near where he stood watching a parade caused the death of Mrs. Lillian Souters, aged thirty-four years, at York. The woman suffered from a weak heart, and when the firecracker exploded she fell over and could not be revived.

PAUL POEHLER PROTESTED

Norfolk Downs Left Alleys When He Rolled

WITH COLISEUM TEAM

An argument as to the eligibility of Paul Poehler to roll with the Coliseum team against the Norfolk Downs team in a Old Colony league match at the Coliseum alleys Wednesday evening resulted in the latter leaving the alleys and forfeiting the match to the Coliseum team.

A record score of 152 was made by Commolli.

Through the absence of Grant, a regular Coliseum bowler, they were shy a man and Manager Forbes substituted Poehler. He made a string of 145 and the argument followed.

It is said that it was verbally understood that a meeting of the managers of the Old Colony league that Poehler was not eligible. Manager Forbes of the Coliseum team states that he knows nothing of any agreement and that the reason he substituted Poehler was because he believed him eligible.

A meeting of the managers in the league will pass upon the case. A number are of the opinion that it is unfair to allow Poehler to roll because of his championship calibre. Nevertheless he has been rolling steadily with the Government Draftsmen of the Fore River league.

If the matter is not adjusted satisfactorily it may mean the disbanding of the league.

M'NICHOLAS' SCHEME NIPPED IN THE BUD

Had Planned to Make Quick Getaway to Newfoundland

Boston, Jan. 30.—Postoffice inspectors have discovered that James H. McNicholas, the mining promoter who was arrested here, had made elaborate plans for a quick get-away. In his room at the Copley-Plaza hotel was found a ticket to St. John's, where, it is said, he intended putting through a mining stock deal, then crossing the Atlantic to Europe.

McNicholas is in the Cambridge jail in default of $10,000 bonds. He will fight extradition to Cleveland and has sent for an attorney of Chicago to handle his case.

McNicholas is charged with the sale of nearly $1,000,000 worth of worthless mining stock and of having used the mails in his schemes.

KING PARDON POSTPONED

Governor's Council to Examine Further the Conditional Feature

Boston, Jan. 30.—The future of Cardenio F. King, the promoter serving sentence of from ten to fourteen years for larceny, will be made known in one week.

The decision is in the hands of the pardoning committee of the governor's council, who wish to examine further the question of conditional pardon by which King may be recommitted to prison upon recovery of health, suggested by Governor Foss.

King's plea is based almost wholly upon his serious physical condition. Medical experts have pronounced that a continued confinement may soon result in King's death.

MEMORIAL TO LINCOLN

North and South Unite In Voting For $2,000,000 Tribute

Washington, Jan. 30.—The house late yesterday adopted the joint resolution approving plans of the fine arts commission for a $2,000,000 memorial to the memory of Abraham Lincoln in this city. The resolution already had passed the senate, and now goes to the president for his signature.

It passed the house without amendment, after that body had debated the project for hours, during which several propositions were submitted as substitutes. All were ruled out on points of order.

In the debate on the measure sectional feeling was obliterated and representatives from the north and south joined in tribute to Lincoln.

Plans of the fine arts commission call for the erection of a monument in Potomac park, just south of the White House, to be housed by a Greek temple. An appropriation of $2,000,000 already has been made for its construction.

A Stringent Curfew Law

Geneva, Jan. 30.—A new curfew law in the canton of Valais provides for the arrest of children on the streets after 7 p. m. and a fine for the parents of children apprehended.

BOWLING

The Wollaston Tennis Club matches at the Coliseum alleys Wednesday evening were the main attraction. Some of the bowlers have started making better than 100. Evans rolled 111 for high single and Littlefield secured 285 for high string total.

Teams F and B. split even, team C beat E, 3 to 1 and team D beat A. 3 to 1.

The best rolling in one match of the Fore River league was by Poehler who helped the Draftsmen defeat the Shipfitters 4 to 0. His strings were 107, 121 and 102 for high total of 330. High single of 112 was made by Michaelmas.

In an Old Colony League match at Burrell's alley's Weymouth, the Weymouth team and the City team split 2 to 2. Cowbell and horns were used by the large band of royal rooters.

Bean of the City Squares made high single of 113 and Kiley of the Weymouths took high total of 296. Smith was second high man with a single of 110.

Smith and Connell of the winning team beat Grant and Bliss in a special match a few weeks ago. Followers of the sport desire a match between the Weymouth boys and Grant and Bliss. Both are good bowlers and should put up a winning combination against Smith and Connell. Kiley has ben mentioned in a three team match with Tirrell as the third Quincy man.

NOT A THIRD TERMER

Illinois Woman Justice of Peace Won't Run For Re-Election

Chicago, Jan. 30.—Not being a believer in third terms, Mrs. Catherine W. McCulloch, the first woman justice of the peace in Illinois, will not be a candidate for re-election to that office in Evanston.

"I think people are against third term candidates, and I am not going to be one," she said. "They showed that in the case of Roosevelt."

Miss Mary Carney is a candidate to succeed Mrs. McCulloch, who will resume law practice as her husband's partner.

Bishop Coadjutor Consecrated

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 30.—Rev. William F. Weeks of Shelburne was consecrated as bishop coadjutor of the Episcopal diocese of Vermont with impressive exercises held in St. Paul's church here.

Vol. 28 No. 27 QUINCY, MASS., FRIDAY EVENING, JANUARY 31, 1913 PRICE TWO CENTS

$1,000 WORTH BRASS AND COPPER CASTINGS STOLEN AT FORE RIVER

Light Snow Showed Numerous Tracks Leading From Storehouse to Fence

Where Team Was Backed Up in Sargent's Lane to Receive the Loot

Sometime Wednesday night thieves entered one of the store houses at the Fore River Shipbuilding plant and carried away a large quantity of brass and copper castings to the value of something like $1,000. The robbery was one of the boldest things that has taken place for sometime, morning it was not reported to the and although discovered Thursday police until late in the day.

From tracks seen about the place it appears that a team drove over Sargent's lane to Howard avenue and backed up to the fence near the lumber sheds. From this fence to the store house was a well beaten path in the light snow showing that the parties had made many trips between the store house and the fence with their loot which was evidently loaded into the team and carried away.

The Fore River Company has a number of night watchmen on duty but the parties were evidently well acquainted with the premises and knew when to do their work for they were not interrupted and none of the night officers knew of the robbery until morning. An effort was made to follow the tracks in the snow from Sargent's lane, but in the mean time so many other teams had been over Quincy avenue that they could not be traced very well. It was thought however that they led in the direction of Water street.

The Fore River Co., have offered a reward of $100 for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the parties.

MISS LENNON'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Miss Mary A. Lennon who died Tuesday took place this morning from her home 110 Brackett street. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. Fr. John J. Casey. Solos were sung by Mrs. Mary Burns King and Miss Eva Rice, under the direction of John Mahon, organist. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery. The deceased was 56 years of age and a sister of Former Superintendent John Lennon of the Quincy Gas Light Co.

GRASS FIRE.

Box 74 at 11.58 A. M., was for a grass fire on Baxter avenue. There was no property damage.

CHARITY BALL BIG SUCCESS

Brilliant Gathering at the Elks Annual Ball

ELEVEN O'CLOCK TOAST

The Elks Charity ball of 1913 has passed into history, but it will be remembered for many a day as one of the prettiest parties that ever graced Music hall. Not only was it an attractive affair but a very enjoyable one in every way for the many members and friends of Quincy lodge.

HON. EUGENE R. STONE
Chairman Reception Committee.

The ladies vied with each other in the elegance of their costumes and many handsome creations of the dressmaker's art was seen among the active participants.

The decorations of the hall were upon a scale never before attempted in Quincy. The walls on either side of the hall were hung with panel draperies of nile green and white bunting across the top of which were draperies of pink bunting. The lights on the side walls were covered with colored shades while at each light was an artificial bouquet of roses within which was a tiny colored electric light. Above each of these lights was a spray of ferns. On the floor of the sides was a row of square posts, at regular distances upon which were set large pots of greenery.

Across the front of the balcony there was also draped bunting which was relieved at intervals by paintings representing landscape scenes. Here also the same scheme of bouquets with colored lights was carried out. The platform looked particularly attractive. Across the front was a scheme of lattice work with four post each of which held a large bouquet of artificial roses and greenery in the centre of which were tiny lights. Across the front of this lattice work, and in the background the same scheme was carried out.

EDWARD L. BEAN
Floor Marshal.

The ceiling of the hall as well as the side walls came in for their decoration. On each of the four chandeliers, and the centre chandelier was suspended a basket of roses whose centre was a small electric colored light, and from the centre line of ceiling the national colors were carried to the side walls. Running from these chandeliers

SINGLE FARE TO MILTON LOWER MILLS FOR WEST QUINCY WORKERS

Persevering Effort of Two Years Finally Rewarded With Success It Deserved

Mayor Stone Took It to Railroad People, Who Granted Request

West Quincy people who are employed at Milton Lower Mills will be pleased to learn that after trying for a year or more to get the street railway company to issue a five cent fare ticket between West Quincy and Milton Lower Mills for workmen without success at last their request is granted. The matter first came up in the West Quincy Improvement association it being reported that there were a large number of West Quincy young men and girls who were employed in the chocolate mills who had to pay two fares each way to and from their work making 20 cents a day.

What they desired was for the company to run one car over in the morning and one back at night with a five cent fare from West Quincy to Milton Lower Mills. The Improvement association has never been able to get the car desired.

At the second meeting of the Council Councilman Little offered a resolution requesting the Mayor to petition the Railroad Commissioners for a five cent fare from Brewers corner to Milton Lower Mills on one trip going over in the morning and one trip returning at night.

Mayor Stone took the matter up with the officials of the Bay State Street Railway Co., and he with Overseer of the Poor Elcock have had several conferences with the railroad of-

SUGGESTIONS FOR YOUR SUNDAY DINNER

Economy stories are easily told if you trade at FOY'S. When you are buying, price counts, and when you prepare your food, quality counts. Both conditions are here with telling effect

Spring Lamb, leg, lb. 22c
Always in favor for a Sunday dinner. Nice and soft, just a little bit better than the ordinary.

Fresh Killed Fowl, lb. 22c
Make an excellent stew or very desirable for a fricassee or pie.

Sugar Cured Hams, lb. 18c
It has a flavor that will exactly suit your taste. Decidedly easy for dinner.

French Roasts, lb. 18c
Cut from our heavy beef. Extra good value that will make your mouth water.

Campbell Soups
Are different from ordinary varieties. They are always good and pure and easily prepared.
3 Cans 25c

Eastern Pork, lb. 16c
Fresh Pork for a Roast makes a delicious dinner. Sweet and tender. Couldn't be better if it wanted to be.

Northern Turkeys, lb. 30c
Fancy turkeys, fresh killed and weigh from 8 to 12 lbs each.

Smoked Shoulders, lb. 12 1-2c
It is an economy to buy smoked shoulder. These are particularly fine, nutty and sweet.

Rib Steak Roasts, lb. 20c
Beef cut free from the bone. Rich, juicy cuts with all its nutriment.

Grape Fruit
Good and juicy and a delicious appetizer. Try one for breakfast, Sunday.

Citizens' Gas Light Company

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO CONSUMERS

NEW SYSTEM OF METER READING AND BILLING

It is the aim of the Citizens' Gas Light Company to give to the Public a service as excellent in every detail as possible and to improve the service as opportunity offers.

To this end the Company will on March 1st, 1913, put into effect a new system of Meter Reading and Billing which has been adopted after careful study of the many systems in use in other cities.

REGULAR METER READERS

Instead of hiring a large number of special men to read all the meters on the last few days of the month (as will still be done up to February 28th, 1913) the Company will in March create a permanent force of regular meter readers, who will be easily identified by the Company's badge conspicuously worn.

CONSTANT SYSTEM

These men will on each working day throughout the month read all the meters in one of the sections into which the accounts have been grouped and, having covered the City, will periodically read the same meters once in about every thirty calendar days, all bills rendered covering gas used during the preceding thirty days.

BILLS PAYABLE WITHIN FIFTEEN DAYS OF DATE

Two days after the reading of the meters of any section, the corresponding bills will be delivered. Each bill must be paid within fifteen days of its date and should a bill become overdue by not being paid within fifteen days, the supply may be discontinued without further notice.

EXAMPLES

The following examples are given on typical cases:

| METER IN SECTION NO. 2 | | METER IN SECTION NO. 7 | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Meter read | Monday, Mar. 10 | Meter read | Wednesday, Mar. 19 |
| Bill delivered | Wednesday, Mar. 12 | Bill delivered | Friday, Mar. 21 |
| Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Tuesday Mar. 25 | Bill becomes overdue (if not paid on or before) | Thursday, Apr. 3 |

METHOD OF CHANGE FROM OLD TO NEW SYSTEM

As all meters will be read in the last days of February and as the new system will go into active operation about March 10th, it is evident that the first bills received after this latter date will cover periods ranging from two to six weeks. But in future the date of the last state of the meter and the date of the preceding state of the meter will appear on all bills; the period covered by each bill will therefore be evident in the bill and should be considered in connection with the amount of gas used.

For instance, bills rendered March 14th, will cover a period of about three weeks, while bills rendered April 2nd, will cover a period of about six weeks. After these first six weeks of change, customers will find that each month they will receive their bills on or about the same date, and that each bill will invariably cover the preceding thirty days.

LEARN TO READ METERS

We would again urge our customers to learn how to read meters; instruction as to this will be found on the back of the gas bills and will enable customers to check bills rendered.

REMITTANCES BY MAIL

Remittances sent through the mails should be addressed only in the name of the Company to its office, No. 11 Granite Street, Quincy.

We desire in conclusion, to assure our customers that the installation of the system outlined above is to secure uniformity and accuracy in handling their accounts.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Nearly two months of peace negotations without much sign of the white dove making a successful flight.

A Lowell judge has suggested that the police sample the brands of liquors served at barrooms to test the quality. In many cities the police have not waited for judicial orders to secure this information.

While we are up to date and all that 1815 gave the present season a lesson or two in winter weather conditions.

That senseless silly stuff about the Houn dawg is being revived again.

With ponderous wisdom, after exhausting all other kinds of dope, sport writers are now telling things which very beginners in athletics would be blushing to know they had not learned in the kindergarten work.

Some real snow was discovered Wednesday night, but it did not last very long. Remember the date for future reference when you come to be among the oldest inhabitant class.

And by the way what has become of our explosive friend Castro.

No doubt many amateur athletic cup holders are shivering for fear that they will be the next to turn over their ill gotten trophies.

Ettor has not been getting as big head lines as usual on his appearances, so he has hit upon the disappearing plan to keep himself more firmly in the big show with the big head lines in the newspapers.

Seattle lawyers objected to a man and wife on the jury, which forever does away with the possibility of any jury becoming a full fledged home like family affair.

The Memorial to Lincoln has been approved. Now let all the would be art critics get in their axes and have the hacking done at one time in an artistic manner.

Plays which dyspeptic critics have roasted have almost immediately jumped into public favor, and proved money makers. What cared the manager or the star what the critic said since the public made no objection.

Brockton has entered upon a campaign to raise $200,000 for a Y. M. C. A. building. This seems to be a favorite and successful one.

Gov. Sulzer is working 18 hours a day. That is two better than a mayoralty candidate said he would be on the job.

Another bomb exploded. Jake Riis is not going to give up his New York citizenship. He does not believe in young men for the farm.

It now looks as though the senate was surely democratic, with two plus.

The hat pin dimensions are still claiming considerable time and attention.

Again we might ask what has become of that coal price investigation promised by the governor and metooed by another modest politician.

PROFESSIONAL GAMES.

The suggestion has been offered that the domination of international sports, conducted under the provisions of the Olympic standards be extended to include professionals as well as amateurs. Without any effort at being facetious it might be remarked that professionals have already had a fling and a good many more than have been discovered. But the amendment to the games as at present conducted would mean that Simon-pure, out and out and vowed professionals be given a chance to compete and a special class in all events in accordance with their standing be provided.

That seems to be a good suggestion. There is no reason why the amateur should have all the glory and pickings. The straight professional who competes on his merits is better than many of the so called amateurs who gain fame and glory in this class only to have it revealed later that they have been in the professional class. By all means let the professionals have a chance.

PILING IT ON.

No one would like to see the fires of patriotism die out or even smoulder, but there is such a thing in forcing the sentiment, as to make it appear almost ridiculous and result in urging the process to extent of lessening the value. In New Jersey there is an effort to have a law passed to place American flags on the walls of each school room and have as part of the school exercise each day a salute to the flag. It is a splendid thing to have the proper degree of reverence and regard for the emblem in which we all take such pride.

Fostering and teaching respect and honor to it should never be permitted to lag, but there is such a thing as carrying the idea of honor to a mistaken idea which would border on commonness and then the effect would be all lost.

By all means teach respect to the flag and reverence to the institutions of this country, but do not mix them up with everything to the extent that they border on the ridiculous and young people fail to enter into a full appreciation of what is desired.

AN OPEN SUNDAY.

Wesleyan University has dispensed with the services of one of the professors who expressed too strenuous views upon the "open Sunday." He saw no religious inconsistency in a man having an uproarious good time on Sunday if there was no disturbance of the religious or other uses of the day.

Incidentally it might be mentioned that "uproarious good times," are prone to disturb people on days other than the Sabbath and at night as well. The professor was either unfortunate in the use of his language, did not mean what he is really credited with saying or else he saw a chance to jump into the lime light. And again if the men are to have "uproarious good times," why not permit the ladies the same indulgence. In this advanced age, they take a hand in whatever is going on. But to average minded person an "uproarious good time" signifies something out of the ordinary, out of the peaceful way of having a good time and in the common acceptance of the term would hardly be tolerated. "Uproarious good times" as understood were never intended for Sunday or any other day it is hardly becoming to offer them as a form of pastime for the Sabbath.

INVESTIGATION OF ACCOUNTS ASKED

Lowell Commissioner of Finance Is Under Fire

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 31.—An investigation of the accounts of Commissioner of Finance George H. Brown during his term as street commissioner has been asked by Mayor O'Donnell by the three other commissioners of the city.

The commissioners, Donnelly, Barrett and Cummings, say that out of an appropriation of $78,750 voted him last year for paving, Brown has not adequately accounted for $64,-150.

They also declare there is a total of $15,000 of unpaid bills for which there is not adequate explanation.

Mayor O'Donnell has taken the matter up, and was closeted with the commissioners for some time last night. Active investigation, it is said, will start today.

DARROW JURY COMPLETED

One Venireman Says He Never Heard of McNamara or Darrow

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 31.—the jury which is to hear the evidence in the second trial of Clarence S. Darrow, the Chicago labor lawyer, for alleged jury bribery in the McNamara case, was completed last evening.

A resident of this county who never heard of Clarence S. Darrow and to whom the name of McNamara was unfamiliar, was found yesterday. He is D. S. Dresbach, a dairyman, called as a venireman. He admitted a vague recollection of having heard of the destruction of the Los Angeles Times building by explosion.

The defense used a peremptory challenge to remove Dresbach from the jury box.

DEMOCRATIC CITY COMMITTEE

Stand Out For Continuous Party Designation

PARTIALLY ORGANIZED

A temporary organization of the Democratic city committee was effected at a meeting in the Johnson building Thursday evening. It was voted that those present were opposed to the abolition of party designations and that an effort should be made to form a solid opposition. Another meeting will be held on Feb. 18. William Kelly was chosen chairman and William J. Sullivan, secretary.

LADY MOOSE ORGANIZED

Membership of 32 Recorded with Charter Still Open

The Women's Loyal Moose Circle, Quincy Lodge, 62 was instituted Thursday evening by Dictator Albert J. Williams of the Quincy Lodge of Moose. The membership opened with 32 and it was voted to keep the charter open with the reduced initiation fee. Refreshments were served after the meeting. The installation of officers elected will be Feb. 3. A committee appointed to take charge of the installation consists of Miss Annie Berry, Mrs. Nellie Daley, Mrs. Mabel Perkins, Mrs. Alice Killin and Miss Ethel Metcalf.

The officers chosen at the meeting were:

Worthy Matron—Mrs. Hadaash Williams.

NO OPPOSITION TO LIBRARY BILL

Permitting Trustees to Hold $750,000 Worth of Property

NOW OVER LEGAL LIMIT

(Special to the Ledger)

Several trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library, together with Representatives Sullivan and Leslie appeared Thursday before the committee on Mercantile Affairs at the State House in favor of the bill which allows the library to hold more personal and real estate. The petitioners Morton Smith, George E. Adams, Geo. A. Sidelinger and Rev. Rufus B. Tobey were all recorded as being favorable to the bill. It was told to the committee that by its present charter the library is allowed to hold $200,000 worth of property. By the result of a recent inventory it was found that actually the library owns something over a quarter million dollars' worth, so that the permission for the right to hold more property must be forthcoming or the library will have to dispose of some of its holdings. To allow for future additions, which may come in the forms of gifts or bequests, the trustees ask that the right to hold $750,000 worth of real and personal estate be granted them. There was no opposition to the bill, and the committee, in executive session, voted to report favorably on the bill. It was entered for its first reading in the House today.

LADY THE BEST DRESSED GENT

At the Masquerade Party of the Norwegian Society

A sucessful masquerade party at Faxon Hall was held Thursday evening by the Norwegian Society of Quincy. There were about 150 in costume, many original and unique features being introduced. Mrs. Hilma O'Brien was judged the best dressed gent, Mrs. Rois Woodward as the best dressed lady, Paul Hanstvelt as the most comical in costume and Ted Gullickson as the most comical lady.

Refreshments were served in the lower hall. Music for the occasion was furnished by the Colonial orchestra. The committee in charge was Lawrence Jacobsen, Nils Loddengaard Andrew Olsen, Harold Hansen, Oscar Anderson and Joseph Nelson.

ficials. These conferences have borne fruit, for this morning Mayor Stone received word from the Railway Co., that is hoped to have the car desired put on next Monday.

Under he arrangement as now provided for there will be one car for Milton Lower Mills in the morning, and one car from Milton Lower Mills in the late afternoon. On Saturdays when the chocolate mills close, at noon the return trip will be made at noon.

The fare on these trips will be five cents from Brewers corner to Milton Lower Mills. A change of cars however will be necessary as heretofore at East Milton.

Mayor Stone is to be congratulated on the success he has attained in getting this most desirable improvement.

Mr. Bowditch Makes Largest Gain in Contest

OTHERS ARE MOVING UP

Mr. Bowditch says he intends to have one of those four prizes in the Washington Inauguration contest, and that he may yet surprise that Williams boy. Today he makes a gain of 470.

Harry Burr of Atlantic seems to be leaving Richard Larkin and Walter Mead of the High school behind. He added 115 to his total today and has moved up two more numbers.

Friends also forwarded 100 votes for Miss Katherine Walsh of the Telephone echange, 100 for R. M. Harmon of the Fore River shipyard, and 50 for Sam Prout of the High school, all of whom move up several numbers.

The first five candidates in the contest are strung out very mechanically just at present. Fred D. Williams, the leader, is the only one in the 50 thousands, Sturgis H. Hunt has a

NATURIZED RUBBER.

South Braintree is the home of the largest and best mill for renewing the life of rubber. Carloads of wornout automobile tires are piled high in the yard at the Monatiquot Rubber Works and represents, we are told "A Mountain of Curses," such as very often follow the bursting of a tire. Each tire cost the auto owner on an average of $30. Think of the millions of dollars expended for this pile and the employment given. Money well spent.

These tires and other wornout rubber goods are ground up and the rubber extracted. It is then "naturized" by secret processes and special machinery, and sold in four grades, named from "Four Good Indians," Monatiquot, Squantum, Massasoit and Samoset.

The members of the Monatiquot Rubber Works Co. are Robert C. Harlow, president, Plymouth; James H. Stedman, treasurer, Braintree; Merton A. Turner, sales manager, Quincy. Three years ago last fall they bought the property of the Hollingsworth paper mill at South Braintree and in a few months were doing a rushing business. Now they employ seventy-five hands, equal to over two hundred men with the labor saving machinery, and run the mill in two shifts, day and night.

We have yet to learn of an industry in this section that has developed so rapidly as the Monatiquot Rubber Works Co. The company are forced to increase the plant continually and in addition to the large building recently completed are excavating for another. The cellar is being made in a granite ledge and the tons of stone removed will be used later for another building.

This plant is practically fire proof, and even in case of fire the business will not be crippled long for there are three separate engines to furnish power in case one or two of the engines were crippled.

The estate of the late Nathaniel H Hunt, bounded by Plain street, the Monatiquot river and the Plymouth tracks of the N. Y., N. H., & H. R. R. consisting of several acres has been purchased by the above company and will later be used for another mill or two and the balance cut into house lots and streets.

WARM JANUARY.

Some idea of what a mild month January has been can be realized by the mercury reading. The lowest point the thermometer reached at noon, Jan. 13, was 23 above zero. The warmest day at noon during the month was on Jan. 12, when the temperature was 60 above. The average noon temperature for January was 43 plus.

ENTERTAINED GUESTS.

Miss Margery Glover of Common street, Braintree entertained about twenty-five of her friends at her home Thursday evening. During the evening refreshments were served and a most enjoyable evening was spent by all. Guests were present from Quincy Neponset, Brockton, Braintree and Holbrook.

ADDITION TO THE BUILDING FUND

Of the Squantum Woman's Club House By Whist Party

INTEREST IN NOON CAR FARE

A substantial addition to the building rund of the Squantum Woman's club was made Wednesday night when Mr. and Mrs. John R. Nelson entertained at whist at their handsome bungalow on Brunswick street. Six tables were in play. During the evening pleasing operatic selections were played on a victrola. Mrs. Charles Bostwick won first ladies' honor with the score of 64 while Joseph Uppling held the first men's honor with 44 points. Consolations went to Miss Verne I. Smith, Mrs. Louise Holt and James Hagan. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Uppling, Mr. and Mrs. James Hagan, Mrs. Helen McGowan, Perley Bostwick, Miss Thelma Holt, Mrs. James Foster, Mrs. William A. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Carlson, Edward Carlson, Mr. and Mrs. John Jepson, John Jepson, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bostwick, Miss Verne I. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson and Mr. Landgren, Mrs. Nelson's father. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson proved most delightful entertainers.

Squantum people are anxiously awaiting the decision of the Quincy school board regarding noon fares for school children who attend the Atlantic schools. There are 56 school children in Squantum and they are obliged to pay their own fares back and forth at noon or to carry lunches which they have to eat in the basement of the school building. Parents complain that the accommodations for serving lunches in the basement are inadequate and that they much prefer to have their children come home at noon. A delegation from the Squantum Improvement association which appeared before the school board at its last meeting and presented the protest of that section consisted of President C. E. Carlson, James Hagan, T. F. Callahan, John R. Nelson, Herbert A. Smith, John Holmes, Charles Watts, C. Olsen.

ONE OF FIVE HEIRS

Minnesota Carpenter to Share In $15,000,000 Estate of an Uncle

Duluth, Minn., Jan. 31.—To find one's self one of five heirs to a portion of $15,000,000 of an English legacy after spending the best years of one's life toiling as a carpenter, is the experience of John Jewell, 46.

Jewell received news of the death of an uncle, Richard Jewell, in England, and was informed that the estate would approximate $15,000,000.

The winner in the contest has the privilege of selecting a companion to go on the trip. It's a very complete trip costing $75 each ticket.

$4500 VERDICT IS SUSTAINED

Judge Brown Refuses a Reversion in McConnell Case

AGAINST STREET RAILWAY

The verdicts amounting to $4500 obtained last May by Martin H. MacConnell against the Old Colony Street Railway company for the death of his little boy must stand according to a ruling made by Judge Brown in the Superior court yesterday on the motions of the defendant for new trials. The accident occured on a Sunday afternoon in October 1909 on Sea Street opposite the Adams farm where Mr. MacConnell then lived. His wife could not bear to live near the scene of the accident which deprived her of her child and they moved to Maine where they have since bought a farm.

The child, which was about a year and a half old was left at the door of the barn while the father stepped into the stable to tie a horse which had got loose. The little fellow ran across the lawn and street and onto the reservation, where it was run over by a street car on which a new motorman was being "broken in" and handling the controller and brake. When Mr. MacConnell found the child it was under the wheels, pinned down and mangled. The passengers were vainly and frantically trying to lift the car. They finally backed the car off the child's body. Dr. Jones happened by in his auto and rushed the child to the city hospital where amputations were performed, but the life could not be saved and the little fellow died next morning.

The company denied liability and refused to pay anything. Mr. MacConnell brought suit alleging due care on his own part and carelessness on the part of the company. The company put in evidence several photographs and the plaintiff asked that the jury be allowed to come to Quincy and view the premises, which was done. The medical examiner's testimony showed that the shock to the child's nervous system was so great that he did not suffer much consciously. The jury awarded $500 for the suffering and $4000 for the death.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN

BOSTON AND VICINITY

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Surpassing the keenest expectation, the much talked of Scottish comedy, "Bunty Pulls the String," at the Majestic Theatre, has caught the favor of theatregoers, not only in Boston, but throughout all New England with the same fervor of appreciation that characterized its presentations in New York throughout all of its phenomenal run there of over one consecutive year at the Comedy Theatre. It is now in its second week at this popular playhouse in Boston, and the advance demand for seats in its third week, which begins Monday evening, is reported to be such as to indicate that the limited engagement allotted to this attraction will be all too short to accommodate the thousands of theatregoers in New England who are catching the "Bunty" habit.

This truly delightful picture of simple Scottish life carries with it an appeal that is irresistible, with the result that not only is the audience refreshed by something absolutely novel in the form of dramatic entertainment, but immensely pleased by sparkling comedy splendidly acted.

One need not be familiar with the Scotch dialect, nor possessed of Scottish sympathies to appreciate this most engaging performance. While much of the humor may properly be described as subtle, one need only to have a human heart and a human mind to appreciate this play thoroughly.

BILLIE BURKE.

Miss Billie Burke, who has generally played her annual engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, at Easter time, comes this year to enliven the early part of the Lenten period. She will begin a three weeks' run at the Hollis, Feb. 3, more than usual interest attaches to the coming of the popular actress this time because she brings with her Sir Arthur Pinero's newest—and many critics say, best—comedy, "The 'Mind the Paint' Girl." Miss Burke had remarkable success in this play in New York where she played it 150 times at the Lyceum Theatre. She repeated her triumph at Philadelphia and again at Baltimore, where she is playing this week. The critics of these three cities agree that in this piece, Miss Burke has really come into her own as an actress of unusual merit and power.

In the Pinero play, Miss Burke, of course, has the title role—a London musical comedy star who has achieved fame by singing a song entitled "Mind the Paint." Lily Parradoll—that is the heroine's name—is a typical girl of her kind. Born over a small grocer's shop, brought up in the streets, her pretty face and nimble wit and still nimbler heels have pushed her forward into the position of the principal girl at the Pandora Theatre. She is a curious mixture of generosity, mercenariness, undisciplined temper and daintiness. It is the story of the one real love affair in her life—an affair that narrowly escapes ending badly—that the master playwright tells in his very best and most interesting style. It is easy to believe that the role is one exactly suited to Miss Burke. During Miss Burke's engagement there will be matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

Robert B. Mantell will open the second week of his engagement at the Shubert Theatre, Boston, Monday with his first Boston performance of Louis XI from the French of Casimer Delavigne. Mr. Mantell is the first actor to play this part since the late Sir Henry Irving. Louis was considered by a number of Irving's admirers his masterpiece. Louis is a character in which the diabolical predominates overwhelmingly and is considered one of the strongest personages that has ever been sketched by a dramatist. The physical transformation of Mr. Mantell from an actor of heroic physique in such parts as Macbeth and Othello, to the shrivelled, deformed Louis is said to be very remarkable.

"Julius Caesar" is the only other play in Mr. Mantell's second week's repertoire that was not included in the first. It will be presented Tuesday and Friday evenings. Of the three roles worthy of steller interpretation Mr. Mantell has chosen to play Brutus, as the most sympathetic.

The other plays of the week are "Richelieu," Wednesday afternoon, "Macbeth," Wednesday evening, "Othello," Thursday evening, "The Merchant of Venice," Saturday afternoon, and "Macbeth" again Saturday evening.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Success means continued success. The end of the second week of "Believe Me, Xantippe" at the Castle Square brings with its enormous audiences to see Mr. Craig's third annual prize play production. As a comedy, this play is of exceptional merit, and there are few moments during its entire four acts when the audience is not laughing heartily at the situations, the incidents and the dialogue. Its plot is an ingenious one, it has the merit of holding the curiosity of the audience to the very end, and in every way it is the most thoroughly enjoyable play, from the standpoint of humor, that has been seen on the Castle Square stage in many a day.

The acting aids the success of "Believe Me, Xantippe" and with John Craig, Mary Young, Wilson Melrose, Donald Meek, and Walter Walker in the leading roles, it has a perfect cast. The third week begins at the Castle Square on Monday afternoon.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Miss Edna Goodrich, the celebrated legitimate star, and one of the handsomest women on the American stage, will make her debut as a vaudeville headliner at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week. For her tour over the B. F. Keith Circuit Miss Goodrich has elected to appear in a one-act playlet written especially for her by Claude Gillingwater, and entitled "The Awakening of Minerva." The story of the piece is that of a young artiste who has succeeded in solving the secret of making marble resemble human flesh. He makes a statue of Minerva, and dreams it comes to life. The subsequent adventures of the statue form the groundwork for a story of engaging interest, with a touch of comedy. Miss Goodrich appears in the role of Minerva, the Greek beauty who comes to life, and dons some stunning Parisian gowns, to the dismay of all the men she meets, who immediately fall in love with her. Miss Goodrich is surrounded by a splendid company of excellent players. Her engagement is for one week only. Surrounding this brilliant feature will be a great vaudeville bill including Elphye Snowden and Earl Benham in a cycle of songs and dances; the Sully Family in a lively farce, "After the Wedding;" and the Florence Trio of European entertainers.

MOTOR BOAT SHOW.

For ten years the New England Engine and Boat Association has held its annual Motor Boat and Engine Show in Boston, each year growing larger and better. More interest has been shown this year than ever before, with the result that when the doors are opened to the public Saturday evening, Mechanics buildings will contain the finest collection of motor boats, engines and accessories ever assembled under one roof.

Manager Chester I. Campbell has been fortunate this year in being able to obtain as added atractions two that will appeal to every boat lover. Everybody knows of the wonderful achievement of Capt. Thomas Fleming Day, editor of Rudder. Capt. Day with his two companions embarked on the "Detroit," the little 35 foot motor boat in Detroit, Michigan, and successfully crossed the Atlantic to Russia. This is one of the most remarkable feats in motor boat history, and the thrilling story will be told by Capt. Day in four illustrated lectures Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings.

Another attraction will be the fastest motor boat, hydroplane type, in the world The Baby Reliance II. This wonderful little 20 foot boat has won practically every championship the past season and she together with her great collection of trophies will be seen for the first time in the East. There will also be shown every conceivable type of boat from the 14 ft. dory with its 1 H. P. engine up to the big semi-cruisers with every comfort possible, electric lights, baths and staterooms, as well as all the well known engines and the comfort giving and safety devices of the accessory manufacturers.

As usual Manager Campbell has arranged for an appropriate setting for the boats in his decorative scheme and Edna Francis Simmons orchestra will render two concerts daily. The show opens Feb. 1 at 7 P. M. and continues all next week from 10 A. M. to 10.30 P. M.

FINE LECTURE COURSE PLANNED

By the Wollaston Methodist Church Commencing Next Week

An entertainment and lecture course of four evenings is to be given by the Wollaston Methodist church beginning Feb. 5, when Bishop John W. Hamilton will lecture on "Who's who in Boston." This deals largely with early Quincy history and its people.

Feb. 26 Miss Roselth Knapp, the woman humorist will entertain, together with Rupert E. Blatchford, tenor soloist at Church of the Messiah, Boston. March 19, B. Atwood Robinson, a prominent Boston business man will deliver a lecture on China, old and new.

April 9, Henry Turner Bailey, well known in Quincy, will give his lecture on "Refurnishing the best room."

In charge of the course is a committee consisting of E. H. Ewertz, A. N. Murray, J. A. Sedgwick, L. A. Merrill, A. B. Cassidy and F. A. Sutermeister.

England's Big Naval Budget

London, Jan. 31.—England is continuing her struggle for the supremacy of the seas. The naval budget shows an increase of $10,000,000 for construction of sea armaments.

Proposes Municipal Theatres

Concord, N. H., Jan. 31.—Representative Rogers of Newport has introduced in the legislature a bill providing for municipal theatres for towns.

EMBLEM OF THE ELKS.

ELKS' BALL

to the sides of the wall were streamers of greenery and roses. The same light scheme was also carried out here.

On the walls on either side of the platform was a canopy of green and white bunting over an American flag, while suspended from the centre chandelier was the five pointed illuminated star.

The real effect of these decorations however was not fully appreciated until the grand march was started. Then the other lights in the hall were shut off and the lights in the flowers turned on. This caused a softening effect and served to enhance the beautiful costumes worn by the ladies.

The active participants of the affair began to arrive soon after eight o'clock. Those who planned however to watch the merry scene from the balcony begun to arrive somewhat earlier in order that they might get the most advantageous seats. The officers of the ball however were among the first to arrive and they were most assiduous in their duties. The guests of the evening were particularly well looked after. Among the guests noticed were Senator John J. McDevitt, Representatives Michael T. Sullivan and William J. Leslie of Quincy and John F. Dwyer of Weymouth, Joseph N. Shafer of "The Elk" Mayor Eugene R. Stone and others. While the participants were arriving a promenade concert was given by Wilson's orchestra assisted by the Temple male quartet. The concert program being as follows:

March—"Free Lance" Sousa
Selection—"Mutt and Jeff" Webster
Concert Waltz—"Quaker Girl" Moncton
Overture, "Poet and Peasant" Suppe
Xylophone Solo, Selected
Eddie Sebell
Selection Temple Quartet
Finale "American Triumph" Meyer

The march was started a few minutes past 9 o'clock and was very prettily executed under the direction of Quincy lodge with clasped hands. A cathedral gong struck the hour of 11 and Joseph N. Shafer stepping to the front of the platform gave the Elk's toast as follows:

ELEVEN O'CLOCK TOAST.

"My brother Elks and friends:—It is now eleven o'clock, Elkdom's holy hour—the hour of remembrance. To you, my friends, who are not aware of the significance of this ceremony, just a word of explanation. At eleven nightly, wherever Elks congregate it is our custom to remember the absent ones, some of whom are in the land of the living while others have passed to the great beyond. Wherever the American flag floats, there this ceremony is being performed, so let us, my brothers think of those who are not with us tonight. May some taste of our joy and merriment come to those who could not join us. May those whom business has called meet with success in their endeavors. May those whom love has called be crowned with happiness. May those who are ill have the blessing of good health and that speedily. And to those who are in far off countries, may the subtle current of friendship carry to them our heart-born message of fellowship and good cheer, and to those who are in that far far country, whose voices we sometimes seem to hear like the murmuring of the breeze at twilight; like the laughter of the breeze at dawn; whose faces sometimes come to us as we sit through the long hours of the night and think of old times in the inglenook; whose hands we can almost touch as we sometimes reach to that dim veil which separates this world of ours from that world of theirs beyond the mountain peaks which stand between time and eternity; to them let us think with love and friendship, which because it is love and friendship is as eternal as the stars and as undying as the soul; let us send to them every gladness they gave while they were with us, for to them it is given to know that while we are happy here, they may be happier there. God bless, them, the absent ones who are always with us, our absent brothers."

As he completed the delivery of the toast the Temple quartet sang "The Vacant Chair." During this ceremony it was so quiet that a pin might have been heard to drop in any part of the hall. The tribute over, dancing was again resumed. At 11.30 there was a brief intermission during which the Temple quartet sang a number of selections. A buffet lunch was served from 9.30 in the annex, and as usual there was a crush and while there was plenty in the way of eatables the room is anything but suitable for serving a lunch.

At 2 o'clock when the party closed special cars were found in waiting for all parts of the city as well as a special car for Weymouth, Hingham and Nantasket.

The committee of arrangements who had general charge of the affair was as follows:

James W. Sweeney, Trustee, chairman, John D. Smith, Secretary, Charles R. O'Connor, Treasurer. Philip H. Sullivan, E. R., Leo J. McMaster, George A. Jordan, James Jeffrey, William H. Callahan, Timothy J. Collins, Edward D. Larkin, E. L. K., Peter W. Branchied, oJhn Hildebrand, E. L. K. John W. Sweeney, Trustee, Joseph J. Neagle, Morris Bloom, Bertram A. Brown, John R. # MELLEN IS REINDICTED

Chamberlin and Smithers Also Named by New Federal Grand Jury

New York, Jan. 31.—Charles S. Mellen, president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, and E. J. Chamberlin and Alfred W. Smithers, president and chairman, respectively, of the Grand Trunk railway of Canada, were reindicted by the federal grand jury for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, in connection with an alleged monopolistic agreement between the New Haven aand Grand Trunk roads.

The second jury hearing was ordered on a technicality, and before a new jury, it having been shown that one juror in the first panel was a non-resident.

MANHATTAN SOCIAL CLUB

A very largely attended dancing party was held in Long's hall, Braintree, Thursday evening by the Manhattan Social Club of North Weymouth. Music was furnished by Cuff's orchestra and dancing was from 8 to 12. There were fully 200 couples present.

The dancing was in charge of floor marshal T. F. Coleman, floor director Joseph Cady, assistant floor director Oliver K. Fisher.

The chief aid was Joseph A. Hackett assisted by aids John Cullivan, Michael Egan, James Scully, John Condon, John Tanguay, Arthur Hurley, Charles Cullivan, Francis Daly.

The committee of arrangements consisted of Oliver K. Fisher, Michael Egan, Arthur Hurley, Thomas Coleman, Joseph Cady, Joseph A. Hackett.

Delegations were present from various social clubs of the surrounding cities and towns.

BRIEFS

Miss Ada Bloomfield, of Dover N. H., is spending a few days with Miss Sadie Berman of Franklin street.

A delegation from Abigail Adams Circle, No. 11, I. C. of A. Wednesday night attended the installation of the officers of the Somerville Circle.

William Bogorod, of Franklin street left yesterday for New York city and an extended trip to Columbus O., where he will visit his brother.

Edward Berman, of Franklin street was best man at the wedding of his cousin, Miss R. Berger, to Morris Seventhal at the Brunswick Hall, Roxbury, Thursday night.

The many friends of Mr. Herbert Seldon will be glad to hear that he is improving rapidly from an operation which was performed at the Carney Hospital last week.

A delegation of members of the the Quincy Young Men's Hebrew Association attended the concert and ball given by the Taunton Y. M. H. A. on Wednesday night.

FOURTEENTH ANNIVERSARY.

Music Hall will be the "Mecca" for the members and friends of Court John Adams, No. 144, F. of A., tonight. The court will celebrate its "Fourteenth" Anniversary.

The drama "The Irish Detective" will be presented by a cast composed of young people from South and West Quincy, who have been under the supervision of Mr. John Troup, and coached by Miss Agnes Hyde of Weymouth during the past three months.

The members of the F. of A. are very loyal to their organization so that Music hall will be taxed to the limit inasfar as seating capacity is concerned.

METER READING SYSTEM CHANGE

Proposed One Result of Careful Study of Many Plans

IN OTHER CITIES

Subscribers of the Citizens Gas Co. will receive with their bills today a circular similar to that which appears on another page in todays Ledger. The circular gives notice of a change in the system of reading meters which will go into effect on March 1. The proposed change is the result of a careful study of the many systems in use in other cities, and has been adopted after a most careful consideration of local conditions.

Under the system in vogue at present, it is the custom to employ a large number of special men on one day near the end of each month who cover the entire city in that day, and the bills are sent out on the last day of the month.

Under the new system, the city will be divided into sections and the company will employ a permanent force of men who will read the meters in one section at a time; covering the entire city inside of a month; after the meters in one section have been read the bills will be sent out not later than two days thereafter but after the new system becomes established, which will take about six weeks, there will be a period of 30 days between the reading of the meters in each section.

To justify such a radical change there must be not only good reasons but impelling reasons; the principal reason in the company's opinion is Improved Service to its customers.

No public utility company today is successful that ignores the factor, Good Service; it is the foundation of every successful public utility undertaking. It must not only be the desire to render good service but the intention and endeavor to constantly strive to improve the service rendered.

It can be readily understood that a force of men permanently employed by the company can and will render better service to the company and its customers than a number of men employed temporarily.

In the first instance the men realize at once that they can only advance themselves by working for the best interest of the company and its customers; on the other hand a temporary force is interested only in the completion of the days work and therefore lacks the incentive to work for the best interests of all concerned.

Another important matter is the question of accuracy in reading meters and handling accounts; errors are of course liable to occur at any time, as the perfect employee has not yet been discovered, but it is possible to better supervise a smaller force and to more closely scrutinize the accounts when rendered in a comparatively small number at a time.

Still another important feature that will be to the advantage of customers of the company will be the fact that the men can be readily identified by the badge of the company worn conspicuously on the front of the cap; this badge is round, two inches in diameter, made of blue and white enamel, with the word GAS prominently displayed in the center and the name of the company in the other circle; the men will also carry a letter signed by the Manager of the Company, to the effect that they are duly authorized to read and collect the company's meters; the company believes that such a system of identification will most effectually protect its patrons from bogus inspectors. The company would in this connection request the co-operation of its customers in bringing immediately to its attention, preferably by telephone, any attempt on the part of any unauthorized person to obtain access to its meters or the attempt to gain access to any building under the pretence of examining the meters. If such information is obtained at the time of occurrence, it enables the company to trace and prosecute offenders, which will be additional protections to the community at large.

The company would also ask the co-operation of its customers in the proposed change of meter reading and billing, believing as it does that it will result in highly improved service conditions; such co-operation can be most readily given by reporting at once to the management any acts of omission or commission on the part of its employees; all its employees are instructed to be courteous and obliging at all times and have been brought up to the fact that the position the company holds in the minds of its customers is very largely formed from the attitude and bearing of the company's employees with whom the customers come in contact. Without such co-operation on the part of its customers, improvement in service makes slow progress.

VOTING CONTEST

monopoly of the 40 thousands. A. R. MacKay is alone in the 30 thousands, Mrs. Emma Marnock is the only one in the 20 thousands, and Galen Bowditch is alone between 10 and 20 thousand. The next five candidates are between one and ten thousand.

INAUGURAL PARADE.

The Daily Ledger prize winners who will go to Washington, will see novelties as well as splendor and a crowd. A Washington dispatch of Wednesday says:

Dogs of high degree are to participate in festivities attendant upon the induction into office of President-elect Woodrow Wilson and will march in the inaugural parade.

"Finely bred, splendidly trained, keen-nosed fox hounds are going to have a section of the parade all their own" says an announcement from the inaugural committee in heralding this menagerial feature of the coming pageant.

"The finest pack of hounds in all the world," is the description given of the canine group which Dr. Lester Jones of Culpepper, Va., is assembling to lope ahead of a mounted brass band that will escort hunt club riders from the President-elect's native state in the civic section of the parade.

Dr. Jones declares the hounds will be so well trained that they will "stick to the middle of the road" and not scatter all over the line of march. A competent master of hounds will serve as grand marshal to the canine corps.

It has been decided by the Contest Editor to give third and fourth prizes in the Washington Inauguration contest, and possibly other prizes. The first four today are Fred D. Williams, Sturgis H. Hunt, A. R. MacKay and Mrs. Emma Marnock. Next in line is Galen Bowditch, who is still hopeful that "the committee" may send him to Washington.

ANOTHER BIG PRIZE.

The prize for the largest gain in votes this week is a vote certificate good for 2,000 votes, twice as large as last week. This will probably be the last prize for weekly gain, as the contest is drawing to a close. This certificate for 2,000 votes will be credited next Monday at 9 A. M. to the candidate who makes the largest gain during the week of Jan. 27—Feb. 3. To be successful in the contest for the free Washington trips a candidate will almost need these 2,000 votes. It will make considerable difference whether they are awarded to him or to the other fellow.

Remember, the last coupon in the contest will be printed Saturday, Feb. 8, a week from next Saturday.

Of course you will need a few subscription certificates good for 1,000 votes each if you expect to win. These are issued both to old and new subscribers upon payment of subscriptions. Many who buy the Ledger daily could easily be induced to subscribe and help you win the prize. Vote early and often.

Coupons sent by mail should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass."

A certificate good for 1000 votes is given for each year's subscription to the Daily Ledger. Old or new subscribers may pay for one year, two years or five years and thus help their friends in the contest.

Coupons good for five votes are printed on page two of the Ledger every day, and every resident of Quincy can become a candidate for this popular trip. Washington is always an attractive city to visit, but it will be particularly so in March next during the Inauguration ceremonies.

The standing of the candidates today at 9 A. M. was as follows:

Y.M.C.A. LEADERS WILL BATTLE

Quincy will Try to Wrest Lead From Cambridge

LEAGUE STANDING

Cambridge Y. M. C. A. first and second teams will meet the local Association Saturday night in their second contest in the Y. M. C. A. League series. The Quincy teams took two games from Cambridge early in the season on the Cambridge floor and will endeavor to repeat in tomorrow nights games. Cambridge first team has been greatly strengthened by the addition of Carr, who played with Newton last year, and Greene who was the captain of Rindge Manual Training School in 1910-11. The Y. M. C. A. league standing is as follows:

| | Won | Lost | P. C. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Newton | 4 | 1 | 800 |
| Quincy | 4 | 2 | 666 |

HOLLISTON DEFI MET BY QUINCY

Quincy has accepted the defi of the Holliston High school basket ball team which is claiming the school bay championship and will play them in the Quincy gym this afternoon.

The school is represented by one of the best teams ever playing together for Holliston and they are out for the scalps of Winthrop, Frunklin, Milton and Oliver Ames.

Saturday the claimants defeated the Wellesley high team in their gym 27 to 20. The game was well played, full of spirit and was rated as one of the fastest games ever played in that town. The winners succeeded in winning only by clever passing and shooting which worked to their advantage in the last minutes of play. The losers beat Quincy here.

The Brown brothers are the centre of attraction for Holliston High. Both are 6 ft., 4 in. tall and play forward and centre. Robert Browne, Jr. reputed to be one of the best centres in interscholastic circles met his master in the Wellesley game in Capt. Fred Putnam. Brother Ed however came to the teams rescue by scoring six baskets.

Special preparation has been made for the game and while it is hardly expected that the local team will be the winners, all that is expected is an intelligent contest that will give the fans a chance of seeing clever basket ball by the Quincy team since all are doubly assured that the Holliston five will bring with them all that they have in the way of fine points.

WALTER L. FISHER

President-Elect Wants Him to Retain Cabinet Position

WANTS FISHER TO REMAIN

Wilson May Induce Secretary of Interior to Remain In Office

Washington, Jan. 31.—President-elect Wilson is bringing the strongest possible pressure to bear upon Secretary of the Interior Fisher to accept the same portfolio in the new cabinet as he now holds in that of President Taft.

Fisher is reluctant to accede to the request of Wilson, it is understood, on financial grounds. On the other hand, he does not like to refuse because he is thoroughly interested in his work. The president-elect has been urging Fisher by special messenger and by correspondence. Many of those who are acquainted with the situation believe that in the end Fisher will accept.

PRISON FOR THREE BROOKLYN BANKERS

All Recently Sentenced For Misappropriation of Funds

New York, Jan. 31.—Since New Year's day three Brooklyn bank presidents have been sentenced to jail by Supreme Court Justice Crane. The third man thus sentenced is William C. Damron, former president of the Home bank, who was given a term of one year in the penitentiary. Damron was recently found guilty of misapplying $2500 of its funds.

The two other bank presidents sentenced are David A. Sullivan, president of the Mechanics and Traders' bank, convicted of the larceny of $20,000, and Broc R. Shears, president of the Borough bank, found guilty of misappropriating $3000.

Sullivan is awaiting action on a certificate of reasonable doubt; Shears is out on $5000 bail. Damron's lawyer said that he would apply for such a writ.

REMARKS APPLAUDED

Congressman Would Tar Minister Who Performed Mixed Marriage

Washington, Jan. 31.—To "tar and feather" the white minister of Niles, Mich., who performed the marriage of George F. Thompson, a negro, to Helen A. Hanson, a 15-year-old feeble-minded white girl, both of Chicago, was the suggestion in the house by Representative Roddenberry of Georgia.

He made a violent attack, referring to the Jack Johnson case. Frequent applause marked his speech.

SOCIALIST UNSEATED

Found to Have Wrongfully Secured "Election" to Kansas Legislature

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 31.—The Kansas state senate unseated its only Socialist member, Fred Stanton of Crawford county, by a vote of 28 to 10, in favor of E. E. Porter, Republican.

Evidence presented to the elections committee tended to show that men crossed the line from Missouri to vote for Stanton; that there were errors in the count and that scores of aliens voted.

Rebels Marching on Juarez

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 31.—It is reported that a body of Mexican revolutionists are advancing on Juarez, and that another battle for the possession of the Mexican gateway to the north, across the river from here, is imminent.

Death Howls Stir Woman's Conscience

New Brunswick, N. J., Jan. 31.—Haunted by memory of a watch dog's death howls Julia Schloos confessed she had burned the barn in which the animal perished. The loss was $5000.

Von Holleben Very Ill

Berlin, Jan. 31.—Dr. von Holleben, formerly German ambassador at Washington, is seriously ill. He is 75 years old.

SYNOPSIS

Beauregard is ready to fire on Fort Sumter. Frank Haverill, General Haverill's scapegrace son, is hiding in Charleston. Edward Thornton annoys Mrs. Haverill.

Lieutenant Kerchival West protects her and wounds Thornton in a duel. Fort Sumter is fired upon.

Haverill unjustly suspects West. He sends Frank a miniature of Mrs. Haverill to help reform him. Frank enlists in the Union army.

Captain Robert Ellingham, Confederate, loves Madeline West. Lieutenant West, Union soldier, loves Gertrude Ellingham. The Union army is routed at Bull Run.

Ellingham is with "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Virginia. Gertrude decides to return to the Ellingham home at Belle Bosquet, in the valley.

She gets through the Union lines accompanied by Belle Boyd, a Confederate spy. They meet Thornton, who is a prisoner.

Thornton escapes, captures Lieutenant Bedloe and takes from him Mrs. Haverill's miniature.

Bedloe is Frank Haverill. He is taken to Libby prison. Marie Mason finds her lover, Captain Cox.

Six Union officers selected as hostages to protect Confederate prisoners threatened with death are returned to Libby unharmed.

Bedloe escapes from Libby prison. McClellan, Burnside, Halleck and Hooker are successively beaten by Lee and Jackson.

"Do you see that, Captain Heartsease?" demanded Jenny Buckthorn "By the way, is Major Williams in command of the regiment? I thought"—

"Colonel West is to join us at this point. He should arrive shortly. You see, another division of the Nineteenth corps, under General Haverill, has been sent on to re-enforce Sheridan. Pardon my mentioning such uninteresting details at a moment when—aw—the fact is, Miss Buckthorn, the excitement of this unexpected meeting has so completely upset me that"—

"Oh, bother! Come along out of this, and I'll show you how the land lies hereabouts."

They marched off to the seat under the big cottonwood tree, while Ellingham and Madeline West found their way back to the veranda.

A little later a Federal guard marched up the road, and a sentry was duly posted at the gate. The first person to receive this sentry's salute upon passing was Colonel Kerchival West. He came alone, carrying a letter or dispatch in his hand and looking about eagerly, as if he expected somebody to recognize him.

Captain Heartsease advanced briskly to meet him, having duly obtained leave of absence from Miss Buckthorn.

"Colonel West?" he said.

© by Review of Reviews company.

"A sentry was duly posted at the gate."

"Captain!" was the formal response.

"You have rejoined the regiment earlier than we expected!"

"Yes. General Haverill sends me word that he will meet me here at 7 o'clock. In the meantime, Major Williams tells me that some of your company captured Colonel Robert Ellingham at Winchester."

"He is here under parole. Lives here, by Jove, when he is at home! Odd circumstances."

"So, this is the old Ellingham homestead," mused Kerchival, walking aside a bit, in ill restrained restlessness.

Where was Gertrude? How would she receive him? How would Bob receive him under the circumstances?

"By the bye, Captain Heartsease," he said, in a sufficiently matter of fact tone, "a young lieutenant named Bedloe, I believe, has joined your troop. What do you know of him?"

"Very little, colonel, save that he seems an excellent young officer—has a record of conspicuous gallantry, I believe, or something of the sort. I should fancy Young's secret service corps would be the proper place for him—you know General Sheridan is organizing such a body, and I understand he wants it to be composed of soldiers exclusively, if he can get them. The valley, it would appear, is infested with—aw—Confederate spies and irregulars, don't you know—of both sexes, too, as we are informed."

"So I hear. Now, regarding this Lieutenant Bedloe. I sent for him as I came through the camp. You may be surprised to learn that he is the son of General Haverill."

"I am nonplused! Under an assumed name, then?"

"Evidently. He was supposed to have been killed in the southwest, either at Shiloh or when Farragut came up the Mississippi from the gulf. Instead, he was a prisoner, and he escaped from Libby."

"Here he comes now," said Captain Heartsease, looking down the driveway.

"What—that fellow with the beard? Why, his face was as smooth as a boy's when I last met him in Charleston."

The young stranger—for he was that by his manner and to all appearances—approached and saluted, saying:

"You wished me to report to you, colonel?"

"You have been assigned to the regiment during my absence?" asked Kerchival, scanning him closely.

"Yes, sir."

At this Kerchival started forward, grasped his hand and, looking straight into his eyes, said:

"Frank Haverill!"

"You—you know me, sir?"

"Yes, Frank, I know you now. You could not have arrived at a more opportune moment. When I passed through Washington I saw Mrs. Haverill, and she told me of your escape from prison in Richmond. But no one knew of your having re-entered the service or that you had been assigned to my regiment—not only that, but to General Haverill's brigade."

"My father!" gasped the lieutenant.

"Yes. Prepare yourself to meet him face to face at any moment. But he can't possibly recognize you with that beard and uniform. Now, only this morning I received a letter from Washington, all about you. Here it is"—Colonel West took the missive from his pocket and handed it over—"so they have learned more as to your whereabouts since I was there. Count upon me, my dear fellow, to do everything I can for you."

In another moment General Haverill, accompanied by a staff officer to whom he was issuing instructions, stood at the foot of the veranda steps. He had only time to return the salute of the three officers awaiting him there when another of his staff came hurrying up on horseback and handed him a dispatch.

"Good for Major Young!" muttered the general, scanning the paper. "So the men are ready?" Then, turning to Kerchival, he said: "Colonel, I have to instruct you regarding a highly important matter which has just come up, and there is not a minute to be lost. I will ask Captain Heartsease to remain also."

Here Lieutenant Bedloe thought to withdraw unnoticed, with a mere passing salute. But the general's keen eye had looked him over at a glance and with apparent interest, for he said quickly:

"One moment, lieutenant — your name?"

"Lieutenant Bedloe, general," put in Heartsease promptly, "one of our best young officers."

DEATH OF GEORGE PEPPER

Former President of Colby College Was Known as "Lincoln's Double"

Waterville, Me., Jan. 31.—Rev. George D. B. Pepper, former president of Colby college, and known as "Lincoln's double," died here, aged 80 years. Pepper bore a striking resemblance to the emancipator. He retained the characteristics up to the last.

He was born in Ware, Mass., and was a graduate of Amherst college and the Newton Theological institute. In 1882 he became president of Colby college, holding that position until 1890. A widow and three children survive.

BALKAN ALLIES END ARMISTICE

Hostilities Are to Be Resumed In Four Days

SITUATION IS MOST CHAOTIC

Revolt Among Turkish Troops on Tchatalja Lines Believed to Be of Grave Character—Turkey Clings to Adrianople and Islands In Her Response to Balkan Envoys

London, Jan. 31.—The Balkan allies have given notice at Constantinople of the termination of the armistice, the period of grace of four days starting at 7 o'clock last evening. The armistice, which has been in operation since Dec. 3, was signed on that day by Bulgaria, Servia and Montenegro on the one side and Turkey on the other. Greece never was a party to the cessation of hostilities. She has continued fighting both on land and sea. The Montenegrins also have come into conflict with the garrison of Scutari on several occasions in spite of the truce.

Events in the Balkan peninsula are being precipitated with such rapidity that the world may soon be confronted not with the question of peace or war, but with a catastrophe which will lead Turkey to civil war. Those who know the Ottoman empire believe the revolt among the Turkish troops on the Tchatalja lines was much more grave than could be gathered from the short dispatches allowed by the censor to trickle through. Close observers of events in Turkey expect similar revolts will occur in the Turkish Asiatic provinces, where the elements opposing the Young Turks are stronger than in European Turkey.

When the gist of the reply of the Turkish government was communicated to the Balkan delegates yesterday they declared that after their note handed to the Turkish plenipotentiaries Wednesday, in which they officially broke off the peace negotiations, they could not make a further move without instructions from their governments.

The Balkan delegates for the most part do not consider the Turkish answer to the powers a satisfactory one. "Emphatically the Turkish reply to the note of the European powers is not acceptable," was the comment made by Dr. Daneff, leader of the Bulgarian peace delegation here, when he was shown the terms of the Ottoman response. He continued:

"Speaking on behalf of all the peace missions of the allied Balkan nations, I state that the Turkish reply is not of a character to form the basis of fresh negotiations. We have said that the fortress of Adrianople and the Turkish islands in the Ægean sea must be ceded, and without this the negotiations will not be resumed. Moreover, this cession must be made before hostilities are resumed, as the first shot will change our conditions."

The Bulgarian minister of finance, T. Theodoroff, who is on his way to Sofia from the London peace conferences, authorized an interview in which he says he regards the resumption of war between the Balkan allies and Turkey as certain, adding the first engagement probably will open next Wednesday. At the expiration of the armistice, Theodoroff said, the allies will press the siege of the fortress of Adrianople until that place falls, simply holding the Turks in check at the Tchatalja line. After the fortress has been taken all the Bulgarian siege material will be transported south to the Tchatalja fortifications.

The financial minister said Bulgaria had lost 25,000 men killed since the war broke out and that half the domestic animals of the country were gone. The Bulgarian government was now maintaining 550,000 men in the military service.

The response of Turkey was presented at Constantinople by Mahmoud Sehket Pasha, the grand vizier, to Margrave Johann von Pallavicini, the dean of the diplomatic corps in the Turkish capital, yesterday.

The porte stipulates for the retention by Turkey of those quarters of the fortress of Adrianople in which the holy shrines are situated. It proposes to leave in the hands of the powers the disposal of the land on the right bank of the Maritza river, which runs through Adrianople.

In reference to the Turkish islands in the Ægean sea, the document insists on the maintenance of Turkish sovereignty there owing to the proximity of the islands to the Turkish mainland; but it intimates the readiness of the Ottoman government to leave the settlement of the insular regime to the powers.

The reply takes note of the promises made by the European powers in their recent joint communication respecting the giving of aid in the future development of the territory of the Turkish empire.

DOUBLE FUNERAL SERVICE

Brooklyn Woman Takes Poison at the Bier of Her Son

New York, Jan. 31.—As funeral services for her son, Herbert Johnston, Jr., were about to begin in the parlor of her Brooklyn home, Mrs. Mary Johnston drank poison. She died an hour later.

A clergyman was taking his place to begin the services when Mrs. Johnston left her seat and tottered from the room.

Today there was a double service for mother and son.

Superior Court. Norfolk, ss.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court next to be holden at Dedham within and for the county of Norfolk. Respectfully libels and represents Harriet R. Morgan of Quincy in said county that she was lawfully married to Ellsworth E. Morgan now of Jersey City in the state of New Jersey at Rutland, Vermont on the sixth day of October A. D. 1886, thereafterwards your libellant and the said Ellsworth E. Morgan lived together as husband and wife in this Commonwealth to wit, at Boston, Massachusetts and in Quincy, Mass. for twelve years in the latter place, that your libellant has always been faithful to her marriage vows and obligations but the said Ellsworth E. Morgan being wholly regardless of the same at said Quincy on or about the eighth day of June A. D. 1909, without just cause wilfully and utterly deserted your libellant which desertion has continued from such time to the date thereof, being more than three consecutive years next prior to the filing of this libel and that the said Ellsworth E. Morgan being of sufficient ability to do so, grossly, wantonly and cruelly refuses and neglects to provide suitable maintenance and support for your libellant.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Ellsworth E. Morgan and that the libellee may be decreed to pay such alimony to your libellant as to this Honorable Court may seem just and reasonable and that the real and personal estate of the said Ellsworth E. Morgan may be attached to the value of one thousand dollars in order to secure a suitable support and maintenance to your libellant.

Dated the fifteenth day of January A. D. 1913.

HARRIET R. MORGAN.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

LAND COURT.

To B. Elizabeth Reid, of Cambridge, in the County of Middlesex, and said Commonwealth; W. F. Macy, of Medford, in said County of Middlesex; Joseph Derocher, Jr., of Newton, in said County of Middlesex; Gertrude E. Phillips, of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Thomas B. McKeagney, of Boston, in the County of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth, to register and confirm his title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Quincy, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point two hundred and seventy-six (276) feet easterly from a stone bound near the cottage named "Mignonette," on the northerly side of Babcock street, thence running northerly at right angles to Babcock street along the boundary line of land now or formerly of Gertrude E. Phillips, two hundred (200) feet to Manet avenue; then continuing northerly across Manet avenue along the boundary line of land now or formerly of W. F. Macy, one hundred and seventy (170) feet more or less to low water mark in Quincy Bay, then running easterly along Quincy Bay fifty (50) feet more or less to land now or formerly of W. F. Macy; thence turning and running southerly along land of said W. F. Macy one hundred thirty (130) feet more or less to the southerly line of Manet avenue, then continuing and running southerly along the boundary line of land now or formerly of Charles E. Matthaers et al and land now or formerly of Charles E. Matthaers, two hundred (200) feet more to Babcock street, then turning at right angles and running westerly fifty (50) feet to the point of beginning.

Petitioner admits that the above described land is subject to the rights of the public to pass and repass over that portion of the above described land shown on plan filed with said petition as Manet avenue, and over that portion of said land between Manet Avenue and low water mark of Quincy Bay; and subject also to the further restrictions that no structure shall be placed on said land between Manet avenue and low water mark of Quincy Bay, which shall obstruct the view.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the tenth day of February A. D. 1913, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fifteenth day of January in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

CLARENCE C. SMITH,
Recorder.

QUINCY TEAM TOOK TWO GAMES

St. Alphonsus Outclassed at Every Point of Contest

SOME PRETTY SHOTS

Quincy A. A. teams won both games in the Greater Boston League at St. Mary's hall, Thursday evening. Duggan and Kelly were out of the game but their places were ably filled by Frank O'Rourke and Boyle. In the first game the St. Alphonsus was defeated 25 to 10 and the second team was defeated 23 to 7.

There were many exciting moments and one of the prettiest shots of the evening was made by "Cy" O'Rourke. Duggan and "Joe" O'Rourke excelled for the winners. Carlson played a good game at centre for the visitors and Kiley also played well.

The game increases the lead of the Quincy A. A. team over the others and the boys are commencing to display a fast aggressive spirit. They also show signs of again winning the championship. The summary:—

| QUINCY A A | | St. ALPHONSUS A A |
|---|---|---|
| J O'Rourke | rf | lb McDonald |
| F O'Rourke | lf | rb Connolly |
| Duggin | c | c Carlson |
| Boyle | rb | lf Loran |
| Hebert | lb | rf Kiley |

Score, Quincy A. A. 25, St. Alphonsus 10. Goals from floor, J. O'Rourke, F. O'Rourke 4, P. Duggin 5, Hebert 2, Connolly, Carlson 2, Kiley 2. Goal from foul, Hebert. Referee, Kelleher. Scorer, Comerford. Timer, McMackin. Time, 20 and 15m periods. Attendance 400.

TAKEN TO NEWARK.

The body of Joseph Dellase who was killed at the Quincy Adams crossing Sunday evening was taken to Newark, N. J. Friday evening by relatives. Dellase met death while attempting to cross before an approaching train passed the station. He was tossed over the gates and died at the Quincy City Hospital.

Pearl Runnells of Common street, one of West Quincy's best known residents, is in Florida.

A public whist party will be held in Protection hall Saturday evening under the auspices of Mrs. John Starr.

Miss Esther Chalmers MacDonald of 276 Water street was among those to be given a prize of $2 by the Boston paper for a short story.

The annual ball of the Galway Men's Club Association at Mechanics hall, Boston, Thursday evening was attended by 25 delegates from Quincy, including Vice President Thomas F. Flaherty.

At the third degree held under the auspices of East Weymouth Council, Knights of Columbus at East Weymouth Wednesday evening, 50 members of Quincy and Ave Maria Councils attended. The work was conducted by District Deputies O'Brien and Gately.

The entertainment committee of Mt. Wollaston lodge, No. 80, I. O. O. F. is busy making arrangements for their annual ball to be held in Music hall, February 27. There will be promenade concert followed by dancing till 2 A. M., when special cars will in waiting. The committee is Charles Baron, chairman; Frank L. Carlton, treasurer; A. H. Dunstan, secretary; W. A. Richards, C. H. Wood, M. Swanson, William S. Esau, C. S. Jones, A. S. Gomez and Edward McDonald.

DROPPING MEN AND TEAMS

Parcel Post Service Strikes Big Express Companies Hard Blow

New Haven, Jan. 31.—Indications are that the creation of the parcel post has compelled a curtailment of activity on the part of the express companies in this city.

The largest, the Adams, has radically retrenched its force, dropping twenty-eight men from its central and twelve from its largest branch quarters. There is also an evident dropping off of the team service.

In the local postoffice the installation of the parcel post service has been so successful that an extra large force of carriers and of wagons has been necessary to handle the business which has been created.

WOLLASTON ASSOCIATION

Organized By Citizens For Betterment Work

A movement for local improvement and civic betterment was started Thursday evening at the home of William Dean Sanford of Belmont street, Wollaston, when a committee was appointed to consider plans for organizing the Wollaston Citizens' Association.

The committee consisted of William E. Robinson, chairman, George B. Curran, secretary, H. H. Holmes, A. J. Scorer, R. D. V. Edwards, W. Y. Shermen and William Dean Sanford. This committee will meet at an early date when plans for organization will be decided upon. The lines of action have not been definitely decided but this association will probably cover that territory of Wollaston commonly known as the Hill and the Plain, although a broader scope may be decided upon.

DIED AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

Miss Annie Hayward, daughter of Mr. William V. Hayward died at her home 55 Chestnut street shortly after noon today aged about 55 years. Miss Hayward has been ill for a long time and during the past few days has been failing rapidly so much so that it was realized that she could not survive long. She died about 12.30. She leaves besides her father, two sisters, Miss Cora and Miss Laura Hayward.

DIACK GIVEN PUNCH BOWL

For His Splendid Work While Head of Clan McGregor

A cut glass punch bowl was presented to Past Chief Diack at Clan McGregor Hall, Wednesday evening by Past Chief Cowe in behalf of the members of Clan McGregor. The presentation was attended with all the jollification ever present at one of the Clan's evenings. The gift was in appreciation of the accomplishments of Past Chief Diack who as head of the clan brought it to a more firm and substantial basis than heretofore.

A supper followed, John C. Murray being the toastmaster. Songs were rendered and the celebration closed by all uniting in singing Auld Lang Syne. Chief Angus Martin was unable to be present because of illness. The committee consisted of Thomas Johnston, William Elrick, Norman Ross, Alex Maver, Charles Niccoll, David McIntosh and Angus Kerr.

RICHARDS HEAD OF COMMITTEE

Succeeds Langelier as Local Republican Leader

The unanimous election of Councilman John R. Richards as president and the instruction of the executive committee to appear in opposition to the bill calling for the elimination of party designations on the Municipal ballot which will be given a hearing at the State House in the near future were the principal points in the organization of the Republican City Committee Wednesday evening.

The officers elected were:

President—John R. Richards.
Vice President—Albert L. Whitman.
Secretary—Harry G. Studley.
Treasurer—Ira M. Whittemore.

Louis F. R. Langelier was given a hearty vote of thanks for his good work while president and it was the sense of the meeting that they regretted his not accepting re-election.

HOSPITAL AID ELECT OFFICERS

The annual meeting of the Hospital Aid Association was held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. William B. Rice, Adams street. The following were elected officers for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. Paul R. Blackmur.
First Vice President—Mrs. Frank S. Page.
Second Vice President—Mrs. George Macfarlane.
Secretary—Mrs. Albert G. Olney.
Treasurer—Miss Etta M. Prescott.

RECENT DEATHS.

Adolph Gustafson of 83 Cranch street died Wednesday in his 58th year. He was unmarried and was a quarryman by trade. The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon. Services will be held at the Swedish Congregational church.

Mrs. Caroline J. Littlefield of 129 West street, Braintree, died this morning. She was the widow of the late John F. Littlefield, and leaves two daughters.

Mrs. Nancy A. Bunker died Thursday at her home 144 Middle street, Braintree. She leaves a husband, Joshua Bunker.

BIG INCREASE IN BUILDING

Also in the Value of Structures Over January 1912

OUTLOOK PROSPEROUS

Inspector of Buildings Warren S. Parker reports that the total number of building permits issued in January was 37 involving an expenditure fo $59,927.65 as follows.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Dwellings | 15 | $48,080 |
| Cottages | 5 | 3,900 |
| Storage | 3 | 222.65 |
| Auto houses | 4 | 405 |
| Alterations | 9 | 7,320 |
| Removals | 1 | |
| | 37 | $59,927.65 |

If the above is to be taken as an indication for the coming year it will show a considerable increase over last year, for in January 1912 the total number of permits was but 21 and the value $50,850.

COLONIALS WIN.

Sweeney's Colts were defeated at the St. Mary's Alleys Friday night by the Colonials. The scores were low and close. The match was interesting throughout. McPherson was the high man for the winners while Fitzgerald did the best work for the Colts. Sweeney who aside from being the biggest man physically also holds the records for pinfall, did not come through with his usual score and his poor showing materially aided in his team defeat.

The summary:

LORDS REJECT HOME RULE

Result of Four Days' Discussion Was a Foregone Conclusion

London, Jan. 31.—After a four days' discussion the house of lords last night rejected the home rule bill, 326 to 69. The result was a foregone conclusion.

The speeches aroused little interest because, as the Earl of Halsbury pathetically observed, the position of the house was now that of an ordinary debating club—the peers could express their views and reject the bill, but they could not prevent it from becoming law.

Lord Lansdowne wound up the debate for the opposition; Lord Morley of Blackburn for the government.

The scene was altogether lacking in the dramatic excitement which accompanied the lords' rejection of Mr. Gladstone's bill in 1893 by a far larger majority, 378.

MINING PROMOTER CONFESSES GUILT

Friends Upon Whom McNicholas Relied Failed to Respond

Boston, Jan. 31.—James H. McNicholas, mining promoter and dealer in worthless stock, indicted last October by a federal grand jury at Cleveland for scheming to defraud by use of the United States mails, and arrested in Boston Monday, has confessed.

"I'll admit I did all that has been recited against me in the indictment," he said at the Cambrdge jail, where he was committed in default of $10,000 bail. "I'm sick and tired of being locked up in this coop. I'm ready to go back to Cleveland."

When McNicholas, who, it is charged, sold nearly $1,000,000 worth of worthless stock, was arrested in the lobby of Young's hotel, he told his captors he did not fear arrest, and said wealthy friends would soon get him but of his trouble. He has received no reply, however, to his call for aid from friends in the west.

The federal authorities after the confession got into communication with Cleveland officals, who said they would start for Boston immediately to take McNicholas back.

TWO BOYS JUMP RAINSFORD

Secured $50 and Put Off in a Boat for Mainland

OFFICERS ON WATCH

The Quincy police received word Thursday about five o'clock that two boys had escaped from Rainsford Island Reformatory. Before making the getaway they prepared a boat and broke into a room and stole $50. Both wore the uniform pants and no coats.

Thinking that they would head towards Quincy, Chief Burrell dispatched a squad of officers to the Squantum shores where they spent about an hour without locating any trace of the fugitives. All trains were watched and are being watched. It was thought that they reached Quincy or Weymouth and the department of the latter place has also been notified.

SICK AND DYING TURN OUT

Ninety-Nine Percent of Electorate Vote In Londonderry By-Election

Londonderry, Jan. 31.—Owing to the fact that a Nationalist victory would give the Irish party a majority of the seats in Ulster, the by-election for the seat in the house of commons to represent the city of Londonderry was contested in a most determined manner.

In spite of the drenching rain a record poll of 99 percent of the electorate, numbering slightly over 5000, was obtained. The Nationalists claim a victory for their candidate, David C. Hoggs, by a majority of 34 over the Unionist candidate, H. A. Pakenham.

Voters had been brought from the American continent and other places. The sick, the dying, the halt and the blind were taken to the polls. Attempts were made to impersonate the dead.

STRIKE VOTE ENDS TODAY

Railroads Concede Ninety Percent of Firemen Favor a Walkout

New York, Jan. 31.—The firemen employed on fifty-four eastern railroads will today finish taking a vote on the proposition of a strike for higher wages and better conditions. The railroads issued a statement conceding the result will show 90 percent of the 30,000 in favor of a strike. All the New England lines will be affected, should there be a strike.

The statement of the railroad managers says:

"This vote, possibly, to tie up every eastern railroad, and thereby subject more than half of the people of the United States to great suffering, was taken in the face of the railroads' offer to submit all matters in controvery to an unbiased arbitration commission of five, seven or nine men."

No Wireless Jobs For Women

San Francisco, Jan. 31.—More than fifty women have passed examinations here as wireless operators, but their appointment to responsible positions has been held up in the belief that men would be more dependable in a crisis.

Aged Maiden Weds Boy

Budapest, Jan. 31.—Miss Julia Santa, who lived a spinster for eighty-four years, married the 20-year-old grandson of her first suitor.

Killed by Headache Powder

Racine, Wis., Jan. 31.—Miss Bertha Breheim, 33, took four doses of a headache powder, containing a coal tar compound, and is dead.

INDIAN RELICS UNEARTHED

Old Tomb and Grist Mill Dug Up at South Weymouth

ON THE NEVIN ESTATE

Dark and dank, with the mould of centuries clinging to it, an Indian tomb of the days when Chief Massasoit and his braves roamed the South Shore was discovered Thursday at South Weymouth on the estate of Edward B. Nevin on Main street. Nearby an old Indian grist mill was found.

The relics were unearthed by John Ferbert, a laborer employed on the estate. He was cleaning away the underbrush when he chanced upon the tomb. At first it apeared like a huge stone.

Scraping away the growth of ages he discovered the markings across the slab and an inscription which seemed to read: "1462—P R T P 3 X Y—J 71."

The man's curiosity was thoroughly aroused and he began to dig about the edges of the stone. He found it to be 10 inches thick and it sounded hollow underneath. So heavy was it, though, it was impossible for him to raise it more than a fraction of an inch. That much showed him there was an excavation beneath and that the slab in all probabilty covered a tomb.

Believing there might be other objects near that would tend to clear the mystery of the tomb, he began a search of the brush. His efforts were soon rewarded by the discovery of the grist mill. It was one such as the Indians used to grind their corn and grain.

Ferbert told of his discoveries, and persons who viewed them were of the belief they were genuine relics of the Indians, perhaps having been built by the tribe known to have inhabited the territory about Weymouth in pre-colonial days. An antiquarian will view the relics and they will then be turned over to some museum.
